Burtchaell resigns fellowship

Burtchaell has been on sabatical leave at Princeton since August 1990, according to Jacquelyn Savani, university press office. The academic fellow under a Lilly Endowment grant doing research on universities that had been founded by religious organizations that had made a transition to nonreligious operations.

Since he is a visiting fellow, he has no "institutionally organized interaction with students," Burtchaell does not teach or counsel students at Princeton.

According to Justin Harmon, director of Communications, Burtchaell was invited to study see BURTCHAELlH page 3

Pangborn Hall chosen to house women

Pangborn Hall will emerge from a month as a women's residence hall next year to accommodate an anticipated increase in female students at the University, according to Patricia O'Hara, vice president for Student Affairs.

The Officers of the University made the decision Monday after analyzing information and possible choices at their November meeting. The decision was sent to Pangborn residents yesterday.

Pangborn residents reacting to the decision were "not exactly favorable," Pangborn Rector Father Wilfred Borden said. "There are gals that are upset, there are parents that are upset. You know, you can't please them all. They just don't know what the future holds for them."

The announcement came after a May 1991 decision by the Board of Trustees to lift a two-year moratorium on female enrollment that had been in place for the past seven years. At Monday's meeting of the Officers, a new Pangborn resident class of 44 percent female, 56 percent male was elected for the 1992-93 academic year.

The decision to increase the number of female students necessitated a residence hall conversion, according to William Kirk, assistant vice president of Residence Life. Existing female residence halls would not be able to accommodate the increase in students.

"We believe that this decision is in the long-term best interest of the University," O'Hara said in her letter. "We know, however, that it comes at a price to the existing residents of Pangborn Hall. We will do our best to try to minimize this disruption."

Kirk informed Borden of the decision Tuesday afternoon. Borden said, and he promptly called a hall meeting to tell students.

Borden said he did not know whether students would have any input into which hall they are placed in the next year. Nor did Borden know where he would live next year. "I'm in limbo," he commented.

O'Hara's letter indicated only that Pangborn residents would most likely receive alternative on-campus housing next year.

"Because of the reduction in the number of male Freshmen, we expect that we will be able to accommodate all existing residents of Pangborn Hall who wish to remain on campus in other male halls," she said.

O'Hara and Kirk will meet with Pangborn residents Thursday night to discuss the change and any student questions.

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Sununu, the combative White House chief of staff whose brash style earned him enmities in both parties, resigned Tuesday, telling President Bush he didn't want to be "a drag on your successes."

The resignation came after weeks of rumors that Sununu was on his way out. The 52-year-old former New Hampshire governor had come under increasing criticism from Republicans for his role in what they saw as inefficient White House action on the faltering economy.

Speculation immediately centered on Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner as a likely successor, although the White House said no decision had been made.

One of Bush's most influential political contributors called the decision to give Skinner the job "definite but not official."

Sununu handed Bush a five-page handwritten resignation note on Air Force One while Bush was on a trip to Florida and Mississippi.

Bush accepted the resignation, effective Dec. 15, and said in a statement that Sununu would remain as a counselor with Cabinet rank through March.

Later, standing beside Sununu on Air Force One, Bush told reporters, "He has taken a lot of hard shots that would have landed on my chin."

Sununu noted that Bush was heading into his reelection campaign and said, "He doesn't need an extra political target folks will be shooting at."

Administration and Republican sources said they expected Skinner, a close political ally of the president, to play an active role in his 1992 re-election effort, to get the top White House staff job.

However, White House spokeswoman Judy Smith said that as far as she knew, Bush had no plans to make Skinner his chief of staff. Skinner is well respected by other Cabinet members. GOP members of Congress are sympathetic to the president's campaign and administration and Republican sources said Tuesday.

In his letter, Sununu said that until recently he had been "strongly convinced he could be a strong contributor to Bush's efforts."

"In politics, especially during the seasons of a political campaign, perceptions that can be misread over a period of time can be — and will be — converted into real political negatives."

He said he would "do whatever must be done to return to my family life with a good conscience, even though it may be less of a drag on your success."

The controversy over what role Sununu would play next was probably easing, given the president's naming of a re-election campaign consultant.

Charles Black, a GOP consultant expected to play a key role in that campaign, said Sununu's resignation cleared the decks for Bush to move on that front.

McCarthy details duties facing American citizens

By CARRIE DWYER

The three most important duties facing American citizens today are participation in political elections, financial support of the government and service in the military, according to former Minnesota Senator Eugene McCarthy.

In a lecture titled "The Inalienable Duties of Citizenship" last night, McCarthy maintained that the growing trend in American elections is toward an institutionalized, nonparticipating populace that results in the loss of power to the voter and the rise of special interests.

McCarthy said he believed the government is "in a state of fiscal irresponsibility" that has resulted in a trillion dollar national debt that he further broke down to a figure of $40,000 of debt per individual taxpayer.

Addressing the nation's unemployment problem, McCarthy said that it has become "a question of distributed justice" and called for the "redistribution of employment" as a remedy to the current situation.

The dominant word in American society, according to McCarthy, and he said he feels that Americans must resist the urge to overwork and overconsume.

McCarthy noted that the last time the nation went into a depression was in 1938 with the introduction of the eight hour day and the fifty week year.

"Making people work longer for things we don't really need," McCarthy said, is a problem that continues to affect the status of American workers and unemployment levels.

McCarthy concluded his lecture with a comment of the different values of the current American political-military planning, stating that long-range decisions should be left to the academics, short-range judgments should be made by the President, and immediate decisions should be the sole responsibility of the political-military organization.

"This is reversed right now," said McCarthy, "as we now are making long-range decisions concerning the possibility of nuclear war.

A native of Watkins, Minnesota and a graduate of St. John's University, McCarthy also holds a master of arts degree from Columbia University. See TUESFhE page 3

The Observer/Andrew McCloskey

Former Senator Eugene McCarthy shared anecdotes from his past and some personal predictions for Washington's future with students at a lecture last night.
Residents of the state of Indiana believe that their state is the cradle of basketball.

Hoops was born one hundred years ago in Sylvania, Mass., but most Hoosiers think that the game soon relocated to the verdant corn fields of Bloomington.

Through much of the greatest players of what has become America’s most popular game have since come from urban centers such as New York and Chicago. Indiana sees itself as the most important basketball arena on earth.

Through the biggest part of this myth is found in high school hoops, the most visible salesmen of basketball as Indiana’s game are the Indiana Hoosiers themselves.

One of the most controversial figures in sports, Bobby Knight, is the perfect example of the arrogant IU supporter. A vulgar disciplinarian who wears the ugliest sweaters west of Lou Carnesecca, Knight is a demigod to nearly everyone in this state.

Granted, Knight is a great coach. But he is not a great man. He has said, "I could interview Connie Chung that victims of rape should lie back and enjoy the experience. Though he seems to have outgrown chair-throwing, Knight still enjoys spilling strings of four-letter words at suitably puerile kinds of officious.

Knight’s ego is so big that he drove future NBA greats (and legendary egomaniacs) guard Isiah Thomas and LaMichael Blair out of Bloomington rather than letting them play their own games.

Indiana has won three national championships during Knight’s tenure in Bloomington. How many more would he have won with Larry and Isiah playing all four years? How much better would the Hoosiers be with Indianapolis high school sensation Eric Montross? Though he probably fights it, I’ll be awake nights dreaming of what could have been.

Indiana fans hate to remember those ones that slipped away. This year, they again have a contender for the national championship. But the team has many weaknesses, as the fans saw against UCLA, and will probably not win the championship.

After the Hoosiers get knocked off by Richmond (or some other automatic bid) in the 1993 NCAA tournament, IU fans will quickly put this season out of their minds and will wait until November. They will hope for the complete blossoming of the much-awaited class of ’93, and will revel in the glorious Baton Bowl.

Hoosier fans love Bailey. He’s a lot like them.

He is an average-sized middle-class white person from a small town. So was Alford, the last IU player-deity. Indiana fans don’t seem to revel in the talents of Calbert Cheaney or Isaiah Thomas nearly as much, despite their greater successes. They aren’t typical Hoosiers.

Indiana fans need to learn who their real stars are. They need to realize that Bobby Knight is nothing more than an aging boor, whose failures in life are as great as his successes on the court. And they need to realize that basketball is not Indiana’s game, but America’s game.

The views are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Bush says he cares about economy.

President Bush insisted today he understands the plight of economically hard-pressed Americans and said “we can’t sit back and hope for the best” with the nation’s floundering economy. Bush offered no new economic measures, but told workers at the Tropicana juice plant here that there was good news from Japan, thanks to trade and agricultural contacts by the administration. “Japan will stop its prohibitive quota system on orange juice and throw its market wide open to American orange juice, effective next April. And we will be able to compete in that market,” meaning more jobs for the Tropicana plant, he said. Bush, under attack from Democrats who say he is out of touch with the needs of the recession-plagued workers of the nation, outlined no formula for stimulating economic growth. But he said, “much more needs to be done.”

Parents give wish list to Santa Claus

- NEW YORK — Letters to Santa both heartwrenching and hopeful have been pouring into New York City’s general post office by the thousands this troubled holiday season. "I am a very poor woman and I have three kids," wrote one New York mother. "If you will please send us something to eat, clothes to put on and toys to play with." In a tradition begun 60 years ago, postal workers in New York set aside letters addressed to Santa and let the public rummage through them and choose letters from needy families or children they can help. John Kelly, general manager of the New York postal division, said the recession could push the number of letters most of which are actually written by adults — above last year’s record of 26,000. "It’s just a guess, but based on the way things look now it’s going to be a tough holiday season for a lot of people," Kelly said at a new conference Monday to kick off the annual Letters to Santa campaign.

Watson gives insight into teaching
By JEANNE DE VITA
News Writer

Karlie Watson, acting chair and assistant professor of education, discussed the pieces and patterns that make up the life of the mind of a teacher at last night's Life of the Mind Lecture at Saint Mary's.

"The life of the mind of a teacher involves making sense out of thinking," said Watson. Watson traced in her lecture the influences in her life that led her to think about the teaching profession and set it within a pattern. Watson noted the 'lone voyagers' who served as pieces in "the pattern that made the profession" of teaching, noting such pioneers in teaching as Maria Montessori.

Watson also discussed personal experiences with her mother and grandmother that contributed to her interest in the teaching profession. Because of the pattern she saw in her mother's and her grandmother's lives, Watson said she chose to become a teacher. "Living as part of these women's lives" exposed Watson to thinking about the learning experience. Coloring, cutting, pasting, as well as decorating turkeys and fish for a classroom are externals Watson noted that stereotype the teacher, but convey one of the primary obligations a teacher has to "first think of the teaching space," said Watson. Thinking about the learning experience focuses toward new learning and triggers understanding, Watson said. "The thinking of a teacher begins when she enters the teaching site," said Watson. Watson then discussed that it was the job of a teacher to evaluate every student and every piece of material that she teaches begins with the basic evaluation of the learning environment.

Watson's mother, a teacher, told stories of the experience of teaching that to Watson "are the same as my stories of teaching." "They learned well or they learned badly depending on my ability to put the right piece in the pattern," said Watson.

In conclusion, she encouraged teachers to continue cutting, pasting, coloring, and thinking about all the complex pieces that make the pattern of learning the teacher's responsibility.

Faculty hopes for more reps on Colloquy
By STEVE ZAVESTOSKI
News Writer

A concern for the lack of faculty representation on the Colloquy for the Year 2000 was the main issue discussed at last night's Faculty Senate meeting.

According to the Faculty Senate, if members of the faculty want to be involved in what happens at Notre Dame over the next ten years, then greater representation is necessary in the Colloquy for the Year 2000.

Members of the Senate also expressed concern that the colloquy is not focusing enough on academics. The last committee to address the concerns of the University predicted most of what occurred in the next decade, according Chairman of the Faculty Senate Paul Conway. Consequently, members of the Senate agree that there are not only underrepresented, but also that the concerns of the university may not be met.

The Senate also discussed proposing a revision to the process of updating du Lac. Under the current format, du Lac is revised over the summer when students cannot offer any input.

The Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate suggested offering students a chance to express their concerns in the academic year prior to the summer of revision. In addition, the committee suggested that students be informed of the most effective means of offering input is through the Campus Life Council.

Lastly, the Senate discussed a potential proposal to alter the format for selecting faculty members to represent the university at bowl games. Currently, members of the Faculty Board in Control of Athletics are invited to spend the week at the site of the bowl game, attending functions in an official capacity, as representatives of Notre Dame.

Senate members agreed that such a structure is incomplete. The Senate suggested that faculty members chosen to go to the bowl games are selected in another manner, teachers honored with awards was one proposal.

Students Speak Out
For this poll, we randomly asked students what their reactions were to Father Burkhael's resignation after allegations of sexual misconduct?

All information was compiled and photos taken by Andrew McCloskey.

"When I first saw it on the news I was shocked. I don't think his resignation from the University could have been avoided after such allegations. I think it is real unfortunate."
-Mike Holley (senior)

"I was surprised because I hadn't heard the rumors that were referred to in the stories. I felt taken aback by the possibility that something like this would have taken place at the University. I would like to hear his side of it, because part of me wants to believe it is not true."
-Colleen Greenthal (senior)

"I guess my reaction is sadness in the first place for him and the University because I know him as an excellent human being, a great scholar, and a very effective teacher. My respect and love for him are completely undiminished and, if anything, heightened by the sadness in part because I know I am a sinner but in less publicly perceptible ways."
-Michael Waldstein (professor, Program of Liberal Studies)

"I think it is unfortunate that a professor at the University of Notre Dame would have charges brought up against him. I think is more unfortunate if these charges are true. The best thing for the University to do is to weight the facts and act accordingly. The student body should reserve its judgement of Father Burkhael until they know all the facts and then draw a conclusion."

Dame: President Holy Cross Father Edward Malloy and Burtchaell are known. However, sources with knowledge of the agreement said the university “whitewashed” Burtchaell to extend last year’s contract for a third year, provided that he send a letter of resignation by December 1. O’Meara has repeatedly declined interview requests.

University president Holy Cross Father Edward Malloy also declined comment, except to say, "I have nothing to add." The president’s letter responding to the request for an interview, which he wrote, was reprinted with the page 4 The Observer Wednesday, December 4, 1991.

Father Burtchaell turned to the University as a post-baccalaureate student in 1965 and became theology department chairman in 1969.

An NCR profile of Burtchaell, said the source, released the University’s refusal to recognize the faculty’s independent counseling. "Burtchaell suggested that the University might 'compromise' the confessional relationship between a religious and a religious superior," he said.

The order, meanwhile, issued an "interim policy" on sexual abuse, which went into effect in an Oct. 29 letter to Holy Cross provincial Ebeay of New York. The letter describes a policy "based upon the procedures I have been following, as a possibility, which many of you have asked about.

The document makes no specific reference to Burtchaell, but appears to apply to all of the order’s 117 provinces. Ebeay said the policy, in addition to Burtchaell’s case, has not affected anyone and has no effect on the "lives of any person." He said this is his letter to the province for handling sexual abuse cases is based largely on policies in place at Holy Cross University.

University controversy regarding gay students. About 175 gay students at Holy Cross have signed a letter published in the campus newspaper, The Observer, demanding that the University unequivocally support gay students' relationships and sexual orientation.

The letter pointed out that the University must "take a tougher public position, including putting aside its public writing and speaking." In recent months, Burtchaell has published articles in several Catholic publications, including the National Catholic Reporter.

Additionally, Burtchaell is scheduled to give a speech in June before the Jesuits' New York province conference on the books "The Congregation" and "The Congregation's Crisis," and is due to address the subject of "Ministry in the Church." Sources said some form of counseling is routine in protest against such a speech, which was not confirmed what steps-if any-Holy Cross Fathers of the University had taken to assist Burtchaell, to respond to allegations or to assure people of possibly further victimization.

One source supportive of the order said he has "great respect and admiration for our Holy Cross Fathers. But, he continued, 'What's more important for me is that we stand beside those people who have faith that the more we speak to those who are likeable, likeable issues with respect for all concerned, the better.'"

Sources said that the letter states that the University has no plans to discuss any further legal action against Burtchaell.

For years, he said, diocesan and religious orders routinely swept up such efforts out of concern for continuing to be the "right people." However, he said, "I think that the more we speak to those with respect for all concerned, the better." The letter states that the University of Notre Dame has had some problems in the past with sex abuse cases. It states, in an Oct. 29 letter to Holy Cross provincial Ebeay of New York, that the letter was "among the first time he has a streak of arrogance." Himes relates faith and nature

By GERRALDINE HAMILTON

The relationship between the Catholic faith and environmental issues is an important aspect of ecological ethics, according to Father Michael Himes, associate professor of Theology.

In his lecture last night, "The Sacrament of Creation," Himes focused on the traditions of North America to discuss the inter-relatedness of Catholicism and environmental ethics. He argued that the American people have resolved the majority of their problems by dealing with space rather than time.

An example that Himes used was that in 1636 when the Puritans in New England disagreed on how to interpret the covenant with God, Roger Williams took his followers and created a new colony in Rhode Island. Himes stated, "In American life space overcame time."

The American people chopped up the space they had as a way to avoid conflict. When cultures clashed, such as the conflict between the Indians and the White people, each culture used the vast amount of space to separate themselves from each other. Himes stated that America had the mentality that instead of confronting problems, "you go away to start fresh."

Himes related the theory that people have the tendency to look at things as possessions. Everything is compartmentalized and fit into the personal realm of the individual, Himes said. Things that have their own identity become "it," he said. Yet, Himes stated that there is also a flip side one can also make non-human reality into something that has independent realities with their own purpose, need and value.

The sacramentality of the environment, said Himes, is that of a concrete expression of the Grace of God that underlies everything that exists. God is intimately involved in Creation of everything that exists because of his pure and perfect love. If God loves it, then everything is in fact sacramental, stated Himes.

Thus, if everything is designed purposefully by God, the duty of the Catholic is to behold the beauty of it, said Himes. Appreciation comes from the reverence for what God has created, he said.

Himes warned that if world is approached as non-sacramental, as a place full of personal possessions, the world will always be viewed as something that must be controlled.

"Catholics have the foundations of how to be concerned about transforming the world into an immense sacrament," Himes said. The sacramentality of nature demands respect of the environment, he added.

Father Himes based the title of his lecture on an article he wrote along with his brother, Kenneth Himes, on the theological base for environmental ethics. The article argues that the universe has become too desacralized and that God is no longer really identified with the natural world.

The lecture was sponsored by Students for Environmental Action and is the first of a continuing series of events focusing on environmental issues this week.

Purcell, Fischer elected to Board of Trustees
Special to The Observer

Two University of Notre Dame graduates, Philip Purcell and Charles Fischer Sr., have been elected to the University's Board of Trustees.

Purcell, a 1964 graduate with a degree in business administration, is chairman and chief executive officer of Dean Witter Financial Services Group of Sears, Roebuck and Co. and a member of the Sears board of directors. Since joining Sears in 1974 he has served as vice president for corporate planning, senior vice president for corporate administration and planning, and president and chief operating officer of Dean Witter.

Before his election to the Notre Dame Board of Trustees, Purcell was a member of the advisory council of the University's College of Business Administration. He currently serves on the council of the University of Chicago's Graduate School of Business. He holds a master's degree in business administration from the University of Chicago and a graduate degree in science from the London School of Economics. Fischer, a 1949 Notre Dame graduate with a degree in science, is president, chief executive officer and chairman of the board of Harshbarger-Fischer Manufacturing Co. of Fort Worth, Texas, the world's largest manufacturer of sub-surface oil well pumps.

In addition, he is director and treasurer of Harshbarger-Fischer Canada Ltd. He is a director of Texas American Bank West Side and is chairman of the board of Challenger Tank and Manufacturing Co., Inc., and Abco Acquisitions Co.

A member of the College of Engineering advisory council at Notre Dame before his election as a trustee, he also serves as a director of the Fort Worth Opera Association. He received an MBA from Stanford University in 1952. The new Charles A. Fischer Graduate Residence Complex at Notre Dame was underwritten by a gift from Fischer and named for his father.

The board was formed in 1967 when lay governance of the University was instituted.

Maguire to discuss technology
Special to The Observer

William May Maguire, university professor of ethics at Southern Methodist University, will discuss contrasting views of the role of technology tomorrow at the University of Notre Dame.

His lecture, "Staying the Dragon: The American Nature Myth," is the keynote address of a seminar, Ethics and the Educated Person.

Before joining the SMU faculty, Maguire served as the Joseph P. Kennedy, Sr., professor of Christian ethics at the Kennedy Institute of Ethics at Georgetown University. A 1948 graduate of Princeton University, he received his bachelor's degree and doctorate from Yale University.

After the 1963 Supreme Court decision the University was instituted. It made clear that religion could be taught at public institutions, Maguire founded and chaired the religious studies department at Indiana University. Earlier he served as chair of the religion department at Smith College in Northampton, Mass.

He is a former president of the American Academy of Religion and a founding fellow of the Hastings Center, where he co-chaired its research group on death and dying.

He is the author of "A Catalogue of Sins" and "The Physician's Covenant" Images of the Healer in Medical Ethics."

The lecture is free and open to the public in Room 206 of the Architecture Building on campus.

Dear Editor:

This is my third year of enduring South Bend weather, and during this time I have managed to survive through temperatures ranging from 43 degrees below zero to 110 above. To be quite honest, I can name such "harsh" conditions. However, the one situation at Notre Dame that becomes most treacherous and least desired is the sight of snow.

I am talking about the Notre Dame “Ice Factor.” It can be defined as these enormously long sheets of ice which I have viewed strips beginning with Walsh Hall and leading to Notre Dame pavements. This latest snowfall, on November 23 (Saturday evening), made me wonder again to why none of the pavements were “salted” or even attempted to be cleared until about 10 o’clock the following Monday morning. I was aware that the grounds crew had the weekend off, and that is perfectly justifiable by law to have days off.

However, the weather does not have a time clock or a contract to meet work schedules. The fact of the matter is that most of us were walking on “thin ice” for nearly 48 hours before any efforts were made to aid our progress. Believe me, I am a die-hard hockey fan, but I do not want to continue practicing for a New York Rangers tryout session in the midst of a residential area intended for walking.

This entire scenario concerns the “Ice Issue” perplexes me because this is unlike anything I have encountered relating to this issue. In my hometown of New York City, certain people go through the “snowfall ritual” just before significant, or insignificant, snowfall comes down from the heavens. It involves the plowing of salt, or other chemical substances, onto the pavement in order to prevent most of the snow from settling long enough to freeze, and become extremely hazardous to pedestrians and vehicles in the form of ice.

In addition, trucks are anxiously awaiting in the wings available to pick up additional snow in the process. Unfortunately at Notre Dame, there appears to be only three options. One, place the chemical substance onto the ground several hours after the snow has fallen. Two, have tractors or trucks brush or pick up the upper echelons of the snowfall and allow the rest to melt on its own.

The question then remains, what ought to be done? First, administration should focus on making sure that the pavements are safer for the numerous students, faculty, and workers walking on them.

It should involve either of two methods. One, call in the grounds crew to come in on a weekend if snow is in the immediate forecast of local meteorologists. Two, create a task force of students to have access to the grounds crew equipment. Their work can be paid or voluntary. Money is not the issue.

Instead, the safety of the people living, working, and visiting this campus is top priority.

Our boots can provide but so much traction, therefore additional manual support is needed. The last thing people need to worry about is a serious injury, and a wrong slip on this ice can lead to such an occurrence. Even though I have been fortunate to avoid such instances, I have witnessed some less fortunate. Will it take, a loved one of yours visiting campus, a guest speaker, or a top administrator for action to be done?

I hope something is done soon because the longer this problem continues, the risk of a serious injury occurring is intensified.

Reader responds to Phelps’ idea to give stipends to student athletes

Dear Editor:

I am writing today to comment on an issue raised by Digger Phelps in a recent lecture which he gave on Wednesday, November 20, in Morrissey Hall. The issue to which I am referring is that of giving Division I athletes an annual stipend in addition to their scholarships.

I am opposed to this for several reasons. The first is simply that I feel that athletes are, in essence, paid already. I am, of course, referring to their full scholarships. When you factor in books, tuition, room and board, and free tutoring if desired, this adds up to approximately an $18,000 a year value at Notre Dame.

Secondly, our athletes need only to achieve a composite score of 700 on their SAT for entrance to Notre Dame as well as NCAA eligibility. Meanwhile, the majority of the student body averages a composite score of 1200 or better, yet we do not receive scholarships, much less an annual stipend.

Thirdly, athletes enjoy many privileges not shared by the student populace at large. These include free stickers for choice lots as well as being allowed to drive on campus when they desire to do so. Many times, I have seen football players allowed to drive to the bookstore, etc. where I have always been denied this privilege by the guards at the entrance gates.

Please don’t misunderstand me, the purpose of this article is not to bash our athletes, I realize that they are legitimate students. In addition, I believe that they make many sacrifices not made by the average student. They spent a great deal of time practicing and away from school for games which would make keeping up with their studies difficult. Also, they have to keep fit by not going out every weekend to parties whereas the average student may.

To summarize, I feel that full scholarships and the other privileges enjoyed by athletes at a collegiate level is payment enough for the sacrifices they make in order to play what are still amateur sports. Therefore, an annual stipend would be a grave error. Athletes should acquire summer jobs, just like the rest of us, to earn the spending money they need to sustain them during the school year.

The University placed a freeze on the largest college in the University which puts a stop to all plans for maintenance and expansion of the departments. That kind of university would threaten its students' education over a misallocation of funds.

And while the University so generously lifted its "hiring freeze," they neglected to inform the students that while the departments are free to fill present positions, they may not create new positions. (English majors, don't put that campaign gear away yet!)

Many departments' plans of a gradual addition of faculty to alleviate problems of class size and class offerings have been halted as a result.

The College of Arts and Letters clearly does not have enough funds to adjust to the increase in numbers of students enrolled in it. Most of the departments have agreed that under-budgeting is a major obstruction in meeting the student needs.

The College of Arts and Letters needs more funds to increase its staff and the quality of education. Just ask any economics major.

What does the University plan to do about this problem?

Obviously, nothing so far.

How many students were closed out of the majority of their classes or are stuck with classes they don't need? Students wait anxiously by the phones and dial madly when the bells ring at 7 a.m. to fight for classes.

In a U.S. News and World Report article, Notre Dame was listed as one of the Universities spending the most money per student in the United States. That's ironic in light of our ever-increasing tuition hikes and the rather large sums in donations ND hauls in. The Pope is probably envious.

My point is, Notre Dame is not only for its future as a place of higher education and as a University composed of its students and faculty. It is "we" who make this University—not the wealthy donors and NBC. The Administration seems to have forgotten this fact.

The professors are not the ones at fault. It is difficult to get a "well-rounded" education when one has to choose courses from the most non-English majors will never get into a 400-level French class. English majors rarely get into them.

If students don't start investigating and questioning about this issue, this school will soon more appropriately be called "Melane" and our education will be as mediocre as a BigMac.

Mitchell's rape arrest scours other teams away

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The arrest and possibility of formal charges against Giants pitcher Kevin Mitchell has the San Francisco Giants stymied in their search to trade for quality pitching at the winter meetings.

Manager Joe Altobelli and GM John Schuerholz have targeted 38 arms and 95 RPIs the last three seasons, was the player the Giants planned to offer in hopes of improving the last four years’ place in the NL West.

That was until Mitchell was arrested and booked on six felony charges after he was accused of rape by a female acquaintance, who alleged the incident took place at Mitchell’s home in Chula Vista, Calif., early Saturday morning.

"It’s very obvious that Kevin Mitchell was sought out by other teams," Giants general manager Al Rosen said Tuesday. "Kevin was the only player who was singled out by our scouts and interest in the kind of pitching we need."

Obviously other teams are going to have concerns now about Kevin. They have to be on edge.

Mitchell, 29, was arrested Saturday and is free after posting a $61,000 bond.

Rosen expressed support of Mitchell, pointing out that no charges have been formally filed yet and that many allegations of this type are made against athletes only to be proved un-founded. But, still, Rosen was clearly unsettled by the episode.

"We've always been three steps to the right of Genghis Khan when it comes to behavior," Rosen said. "It’s very difficult for me to sit here and talk about this. I’m very upset and disappointed."

Mitchell, who was dropped off at Candlestick Park last night by a bail bondsman, was later arrested on suspicion of being an accomplice in a murder of a San Diego police officer. grew up in southeastern San Diego, the same area that has been plagued by gang violence.

"I suppose a great deal of his problems stem from the environment he was brought up in," Rosen said. "He was brought up in an environment we only read about and abhor. It’s difficult for him to extricate himself from that environment and carve out a life for himself from the people."

Especially since Mitchell is a memorable athlete.

"He’s famous and he has a lot of money," Rosen said. "People are always hanging around. The beeches are always going to be there.

Mitchell was named NL MVP in 1989 after leading the league with 47 home runs and 125 RBIs. But only 27 home runs and 82 RBIs during an injury-riddled 1991 season.

Mitchell started only 99 games last season and his 113 appearances were the lowest of his six-year career. He underwent arthroscopic knee surgery in June and some sour limit him to just four starts in the Giants’ final 26 games.

Despite that, Rosen said, there was considerable interest in Mitchell among teams, but his arrest and arraignment last Friday, will be viewed differently.

"There will always be a stigma regardless," Rosen said. "Kevin is one of those people who remind me of the saying, ‘if trouble were looking for an heir, he’d be it.’"

NEW YORK (AP) — Magic Johnson will not attend a news conference Wednesday to announce a pay-for-view television special to benefit AIDS research, but his agent says it's not because of his health.

The New York Post reported today that Johnson will not appear at the event scheduled for 1 p.m. EST, said a source. The report also said the retired Los Angeles Lakers star "does not feel up to" making the appearance in person.

Johnson's agent, Len Rosen, said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles that the report was a "publicity stunt" by Trump officials.

"There was never a time when Magic Johnson was supposed to go to a press conference in New York or the Taj Mahal," Rosen said. "Magic's health has been fine. He's been seen shooting baskets, running three miles a day."

Howard Klein, senior vice president of marketing for Trump's Taj Mahal in Atlantic City, N.J., which will be hosting the event for the Feb. 28 show, blamed a scheduling conflict.

"There was definitely a positive attitude about his participation at some point," Klein said. "It was still in the works, but it had been discussed in a very positive way.

"We set up the press conference on two assumptions, one — that he would be there; two — that he would not be there," Klein said.

"How the thing got spun out of control that it was health related, I don't know," Klein said. "It was not a health related case. It was a scheduling thing."

He said he did not know what Johnson would do to do Wednesday.

"Anytime you're dealing with a celebrity who is front-page news, there's going to be scheduling difficulties," Klein said. "It was still up in the air."

But Rosen said "That's not true. There was never an assumption that he was going to be there."

Klein said alternatives, including having Johnson appear via satellite at the news conference, were looked at but could not be worked out.

Earlier, a spokeswoman at Taj Mahal casino said, "We can't comment on Magic's health."

"I don't really know the state of Magic's health," Sharon Pearce said.

"He may be busy with treatment or something. But you have to ask his people about that."

A source at the Taj Mahal said the pay-per-view television special, a one-on-one competition between retired basketball players Julius Erving and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, was planned before Johnson's announcement that he had the virus that causes AIDS.

Once that announcement was made, the casino began planning to find some way to turn the event into an AIDS benefit, the source said.

Syracuse's McRae to appeal ruling

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse center Conrad McRae will appeal his suspension to the NCAA Eligibility Committee on Wednesday, but an NCAA official was not sure how quickly a decision would be made.

"There's no time frame. I feel certain they'll discuss it before deadline," NCAA spokesman Jim Marchiony said.

Syracuse submitted an appeal letter to the NCAA on Nov. 19th that evidence brought to its attention by the university as part of the school's ongoing investigation into alleged wrongdoing with the Orangemen basketball program constituted an unfair recruiting advantage for Syracuse.

The violations that made McRae ineligible involved "street agent" Bob Johnson of New York City, NCAA officials have said. Johnson's involvement with former Orangeman Tony Scott led to NCAA sanctions against Texas A&M, where Scott transferred after playing at Syracuse.

Syracuse immediately appealed McRae's suspension to the NCAA's eligibility staff, but was rejected.

The committee is a four-member panel of faculty representatives and athletic directors from NCAA member schools. Should the committee turn down McRae's appeal, he would have one more step in the appeals process, that being the subcommittee of Division I members of the NCAA Council.

If none of the appeals succeed, McRae would be able to play at any other school for at least a year and a half by transferring before next season, Marchiony said.

McRae averaged 5 points and 3.5 rebounds a game as a sophomore. He was projected as Syracuse's starting center before his suspension.

"Once Magic came forward and made the announcement that he had contracted the virus, we thought somehow this could be a benefit for AIDS," the source said. "It's still kind of in the planning stages."

Originally, a news conference for Nov. 20. was announced by the NCAA in a press release on Nov. 15. Under a headline which read, "Donald Trump Brings 'Magic' to the Big Apple," the release said Trump and Johnson would have a "big announcement in the hotel's R europian Room."

It said Johnson would be making his first New York appearance since his announcement about being HIV-positive.

Catherine Saxton, a spokeswoman for the Plaza Hotel, who had announced the news conference originally, said today it was put off from the November date "because the hotel was so booked, there was absolutely no place to hold it at that date."

Johnson made his announcement and announced his retirement Nov. 7.

He began taking AZT, the standard treatment for infection with the AIDS virus, on Nov. 17. The drug can cause anemia, nausea and muscle pain.

"The word was he's too sick to come to New York for the press conference," an unidentified staffer at the Taj Mahal told the Post.

"That's part of the reason it's taken so long to get this going."

Syracuse's 6-foot-10 junior forward to the NCAA last season averages 5 points and 3.5 rebounds a game as a sophomore. He was projected as Syracuse's starting center before his suspension.

Dallas (AP) — Kevin Willis continued his dominating rebounding with a career-high 31, and he also scored 29 points in Atlanta's victory over Portland.

Willis, leading the NBA in rebounding with a 17.5 rebounds per game, continued his dominating rebounding total since the end of the 1987-88 season when Charles Oakley and Michael Cage both had more than 30, now has 20 or more rebounds in seven of his last nine games.

Dallas, trailing by 10 with less than two minutes left, had the ball with a 101-99 deficit, but Herb Williams missed from 10 feet with 9.8 seconds left, and Willis hit a pair of free throws to seal the 103-99 victory.

Bucks 126, Lakers 94

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jeff Grayer scored 21 points and Milwaukee opened a 20-point lead in the first half before beating road-weary Los Angeles.

The Lakers, playing their fifth game in eight days on a seven-stop trip, got 24 points from A.C. Green and 20 from James Worthy. The loss, their second in 12 games, was the most lopsided this season for Los Angeles.

When the Bucks outscored the Lakers 12-5 to start the second half, the Bucks had a 74-50 lead with seven minutes to go in the third quarter.

Nuggets 110, Rockets 100

HOUSTON (AP) — Chris Jackson scored 16 of his 22 points in the pivotal fourth quarter as Denver snapped a 25-game road losing by defeating Houston.

The Nuggets, whose last road victory was 126-122 at Milwaukee on Jan. 29, also handed the Rockets their first loss at home in eight games this season. Denver is now 1-5 on the road and 8-8 overall after going 20-62 in 1990-91.

Houston, playing without centers Hakeem Olajuwon and Larry Smith because of illness and injury, was led by Kenny Smith and Vernon Maxwell with 20 points each. Otis Thorpe had 17 points and 15 rebounds.

Reggie Williams led the Nuggets with 26 points.

Houston led the score 92-92 with 5:04 remaining after scoring six straight points. But Denver responded with an 8-0 run, six by Jackson, to lead 100-92 at the 3:08 mark.

Anderson, Butler to sit on Sunday

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) —
Beware the wounded Beatles.
That was Mike Ditka's cry on Monday after his Chicago Bears lost to Detroit. Michigan State's coach figures they shouldn't have.

"There are certain games you can lose and people expect you to lose and you get beat by a better team," Ditka said. "I don't believe that was the case the last two weeks. We beat ourselves."

Ditka was up in arms over Thursday's 16-6 loss at Detroit and he really hadn't settled down.

He said he wouldn't "celebrate Thanksgiving again and I'll never eat turkey again." Four days earlier, Chicago blew a 10-point lead in the fourth quarter and lost to Miami 16-13 in overtime.

Ditka promised to make some changes, most particularly a return of the running game to the attack.

Running back Neal Anderson and kicker Kevin Butler will sit out Sunday's game against the Green Bay Packers. Anderson has been hampereered by a hamstring pull and Butler has a hip injury.

Mark Green and Johnny Bailey will share Anderson's running chores and Chris Gardocki will do the kicking. He also hopes fullback Brad Muster will be ready to play. Muster also has a hamstring pull and was unable to play against Detroit.

"If Brad can't play, I'll use Darren Lewis," Ditka said. "We're going to run the ball. It might not be as glamorous as throwing the ball but there is less risk."

Quarterback Jim Harbaugh was guilty of six turnovers against Detroit, including four interceptions.

"My pride is hurt tremendously," Ditka said of the successive losses that dropped the Bears to 9-4 and tied with Detroit for first in the NFC Central.

"If I didn't have any pride and didn't care about this football season, I wouldn't say a word," Ditka said. "The moment I don't say a word is the moment I'll do something else. This is a good team. Not great, but good. Their pride is hurt and they're wounded."

Ditka said the films showed Anderson was not running well and "not using his tools. He's too great a player not to use his tools."

But he wasn't blaming Anderson or Butler, who missed a field goal, for the loss to Detroit.

"We hurt ourselves with mistakes," said Ditka. "That was evident. Even with all the turnovers, we still had opportunities to win."

Anderson, who has been playing injured, agreed he needs rest.

"It's sore; I can't run," Anderson said. "I'm not going to play. We all made the decision. I continue to aggravate it. I won't be ready for the playoffs. Right now we're shooting for me to be ready for the stretch and the playoffs. I don't want to do anything foolish. Whether it heals or not, I don't know."

Anderson said it would be a week-to-week situation and he might have to sit out two weeks. But coach McDole said possibly he could possibly also miss the Tampa Bay game Dec. 14.

"We want to get the leg as good as possible. We've looked at the films and the hurt of speed isn't there."

Anderson, who has rushed for at least 1,000 yards in each of the last three seasons, doesn't figure to reach that number this year. He has gained 734 yards in 202 carries. He also has also gained 100 yards in any game. The closest he came was 91 yards at Minnesota. Nov. 11.

Butler said he would try kicking again in Friday's practice.

McCallum stripped of WBA title

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) —
The World Boxing Association vacated the lightweight title held by Mike McCallum of Jamaica because the fighter had violated association rules, the organization said Tuesday.

The WBA called on the top challengers, Steve Collins of Great Britain and American Regis Prograis to fight for the title. The two have 30 days to arrange a bout.

"We felt obligated to take this measure because of McCallum's violations of organization rules," Elias Cordova, president of the WBA's World Championship told a news conference.

Cordova said McCallum had been told he must fight Collins this month for the title before he fought any other match. However, Cordova said McCallum has agreed to fight American James Toney, the IBF middleweight champion on Dec. 13, which Cordova called "a clear violation of the rules."

He said McCallum was told Monday of the decision and had no immediate reply.

BLOOMINGTON—When Coach John MacLeod started practice this season, he wanted to make two major changes. The first was an up-tempo offense. The second was a switch from a zone to a man-to-man defense.

Last night, against the Indiana Hoosiers, the Irishers had a hard lesson from the masters of the man-to-man defense.

Coach Bob Knight's trademark defense gave Notre Dame fits. Every ballhandler was pressured, every pass was contested, and it paid off for it. The Irish committed 22 turnovers.

"We've got some quickness, and we use it to pressure," Knight said.

This quickness showed in the final statistics. Indiana guards Greg Graham and Chris Knight said.

HONOLULU—Despite its un­

spectacular performance against No. 18 Hawaii last Saturday, Notre Dame managed to set several records on the road.

For starters, the 42 points which the Irish surrendered to the Rainbow's were the most ever allowed by a Notre Dame team in a winning effort.

But the Irish, who victimized the Hawaii defense for seven touchdowns, also smashed two team scoring records. On the season, Notre Dame's high­powered offense has scored 59 touchdowns, surpassing the all­time record of 55 (1912) and the modern-era record of 53 (1949). Jerome Bettis broke the Notre Dame all-time record for touchdowns in a season. With two rushing scores against Hawaii, Bettis has 16 touchdowns on the ground and four in the air, for a total of 20. The record of 18 touchdowns in a season, which Bettis tied Nov. 16 against Penn State, was previously held by Allen Pinkett, who accomplished the feat in 1983 and '84.

After receiving his bachelor's degree from Notre Dame in 1967, Page went on to a 15-year career with the NFL's Minnesota Vikings and Chicago Bears, earning the league's most valuable player award in 1971. He was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1986.

HONOLULU—Despite its un­

spectacular performance against No. 18 Hawaii last Saturday, Notre Dame managed to set several records on the road.

For starters, the 42 points which the Irish surrendered to the Rainbow's were the most ever allowed by a Notre Dame team in a winning effort.

Special to the Observer

Two University of Notre Dame alumni are among six finalists chosen as recipients of the National Collegiate Athletic Association as 1992 Silver Anniversary Award winners.

Alan Page and Jim Lynch, teammates at Notre Dame from 1964-66 and All­Americans on the 1966 national championship football team, will be honored on January 8 at the NCAA convention in Anaheim, Calif., along with football players Floyd Lyttle of Syracuse University and Bob Grime of Purdue University, basketball player Mal Graham of New York University, and track and field athlete Ricardo Urbina of Georgetown University.

The Silver Anniversary Award recognizes former student athletes who have distinguished themselves since completing their college and professional careers.

Page, a three-year starter during his Notre Dame career, is the assistant attorney general of Minnesota. He has established the Page Educational Foundation to assist minority and disadvantaged youths with post-secondary opportunities and is active in numerous civic and charitable organizations.

Lynch's performance against Hawaii was his role as the sixth man.

BLOOMINGTON—Indiana's intense man-to-man defense forced Notre Dame into 22 turnovers last night as Bobby Knight's ninth-ranked Hoosiers kept Notre Dame's John MacLeod winless in two tries.

Notre Dame's woes began early on game day. When senior center Keith Towber and freshman forward Billy Taylor were late for the scheduled departure of the team bus, and MacLeod opted for Malik Russell and Joe Ross to start in the contest.

The two combined for five rebounds and were held scoreless.

But they weren't the only two to suffer from poor shooting for the Irish. Notre Dame, unable to overcome Indiana's pesky defense, shot 36.7% (19 for 52). "I pick Indiana to win the NCAA Championship this year," said MacLeod. "They took us out of most of the things we tried to do.

Indiana took advantage of 2-12 shooting by the Irish to open the first half and opened up a 19-lead.

Following a 19-2 run by Elkins (15 points, 13 rebounds) the Irish cut the lead to 27-19 with 3:49 in the first half.

Then Indiana's defense took control, which allowed its offense to eliminate any chance of an Irish comeback with a 13-2 run to end the first half.

"We were a little shaky early on offense," said Knight, who coached the Hoosiers to their eighth straight win at Assembly Hall over Notre Dame. "But we had a good burst toward the end of the half.

Elmer Bennett (11-7 from the floor) scored 12 of his 14 points in the second half.

Indiana used its dominance to take a 76-39 lead at the 7:05 mark of the second half.

Forward Calbert Cheaney led the Hoosiers with 19 points, but the play of the Indiana guards was equally threatening. Greg Graham hit 4-7 from the field for 8 of his 14 points.

Damon Bailey poured in 11 in his role as the sixth man.

Eric Anderson, who has started the previous 37 games, eased his way out of Knight's doghouse with 14 points on 7-10 shooting off the bench.

"We still have a long way to go," said MacLeod. "We had some defensive stretches where we played well, but we didn't support it with any offense.

Notre Dame out-rebounded Indiana 39-35, but for the second straight game failed to convert on many open shots.

We need to stop the Indiana guard defense and we have to start knocking down the wide open shots that we've been missing."

The Irish will try to bounce back when they host Louisville on Thursday at the Joyce Center at 8 p.m.
