The Student Senate unani­ mously approved resolutions Monday urging the University to change its policies regarding sexual offenses and establish a more active role in off-campus crime prevention.

A resolution submitted by Knott Hall President Maureen Connolly and Student Senate Co­ president Greg Butrus recommends that the Notre Dame Security Police and the Office of Student Affairs:
• publish Indiana statute defi­ nitions of rape and sexual assault in the student handbook;
• outline Notre Dame Security Police and Administrative pro­ cedures regarding rape and sexual assault;
• release information on al­ leged rape and sexual assault attempts for publication in The Observer; without names, dates, places or times, "to retain pri­ vacy for parties involved yet in­ crease awareness;"
• outline victims' rights ac­ cording to the United States Senate Bill 363 and recom­ mended rights specified by counseling counselors such as the Women's Care Center and Sex Offense Services;
• distribute stickers for all telephones listing emergency numbers, and
• designate the first week of September "National Campus Crime and Security Awareness Week."

Butrus said he hopes Notre Dame Security and the adminis­ tration will "give a range" of University punishments for sexual offenses.

A ten-point resolution sub­ mitted by David Certo, District One student senator, for the Off­ Campus Crime Subcommittee, includes a request that Student Affairs fund Weekend Watches. This service, which provides bus rides from local bars to campus, exists for 10-15 years. The current committee was about a year and a half ago, with members representing the sisters, the liturgical staff, and members of the congregation. Vaughn outlined the deci­ sion-making process behind the final plans, including the many times the committee reviewed its progress in order to make sure the plans were adequately responding to the many needs of the church community. While the committee is very pleased with the plans, Vaughn allowed that "no one church construction will satisfy everyone." Those that seem to be the least satisfied are the students. After the various members of the committee spoke, students from both Saint Mary's and Notre Dame expressed concern over the changes.

One student wondered about the future of the painted glass windows that currently deco­ rate the church. The windows, which are remnants of the original church built in 1885, will be replaced with clear glass. What will happen to the windows has not yet been de­ cided.

Other students wondered about the sense of tradition that will be lost if the renovations go ahead as planned. Many objected to the reasoning behind the decision to renovate. But the most wide­spread con­ cern was the fact that the stu­ dents were never consulted about the decision to renovate. It was only after the decision was final that the Saint Mary's community as a whole learned of the intention to renovate. By this time it was too late, ac­ cording to Sister Mary Turgi, the committee chairperson, as the decision had been made and the plans were underway.

"We didn't think that the stu­ dents would care (about the renovation plans)" Turgi said.

Several committee members acknowledged that a mistake had been made in not consult­ ing the college community, but this error will not have any ef­ fect on the renovation, they said.

Senate resolutions urge administration to change its policy on sexual offenses

The Student Senate unani­ mously approved resolutions Monday urging the University to change its policies regarding sexual offenses and establish a more active role in off-campus crime prevention.

A resolution submitted by Knott Hall President Maureen Connolly and Student Senate Co-president Greg Butrus recommends that the Notre Dame Security Police and the Office of Student Affairs:
• publish Indiana statute defi­ nitions of rape and sexual assault in the student handbook;
• outline Notre Dame Security Police and Administrative pro­ cedures regarding rape and sexual assault;

Butrus said he hopes Notre Dame Security and the adminis­ tration will "give a range" of University punishments for sexual offenses.

A ten-point resolution sub­ mitted by David Certo, District One student senator, for the Off­ Campus Crime Subcommittee, includes a request that Student Affairs fund Weekend Watches. This service, which provides bus rides from local bars to campus, demands about $10,000 per year, according to Charlie James, Hall Presidents Council co­ chair.

The resolution also com­ mends the University and stu­ dents organizations for "implementing programs such as Christmas in April, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, and after­ school tutoring," and requests that Student Government:
• seek ways, with the Univer­ sity, to "improve the local neighborhood;"
• compile and distribute to off-campus students advice and information for their security,
• encourage neighborhood watch groups,
• hold annual forums with police and off-campus students to discuss "suggestions for safe, responsible social gatherings and personal conduct;" and
• compile and release infor­ mation about off-campus
Although it hasn't been proven yet, you never can be too sure, can you? Or what if I meet someone who went to that hot dog stand, BOOM! instant AIDS.

I thought I might be safe for a while, just as long as I didn't high-five any basketball All-Stars. But then I realized there were so many other threats to me from the evil AIDS virus.

If what I pick up a dollar bill that Magic touched? Or what if I meet someone who went to the game and they breathe on me? Or what if a mosquito bites someone who was at the game and then bit me? I mean, although it hasn't been proven yet, you never can be too sure, can you?

But I'm really worried players who get hurt during games. What if their blood comes in touch with little cuts on the other guy's hands and BOOM! instant AIDS. As we all know, Magic did play in this game and, although it hasn't been proven yet, he might have infected dozens, if not even thousands with the evil AIDS virus! AHHHH!

Just think, Magic went around giving high-fives, slapping hands and even kissing (KISSING! IF THAT'S NOT AN AIDS-SPREADING TACTIC, WHAT IS?) What if Magic slapped, say, Clyde Drexler on the cheek before the game and bought a hot dog? BOOM! instant AIDS.

Clyde Drexler on the behind. All that AIDS virus from the ball into the little cuts in his hands and BOOM! instant AIDS.

As we all know, Magic might have little cuts on his hands and those might come into contact with little cuts on the other guy's hands and BOOM! instant AIDS.

Election loss hurts Miyazawa's future

TOKYO — An embarrasing loss in a parliamentary election has increased the possibility that Kiichi Miyazawa could become the third Japanese prime minister since 1989 to step down amid scandal. The campaign that ended Sunday with an overwhelming defeat for the ruling Liberal Democratic Party focused on the latest in a series of money-for-favors scandals that have blackened the conservative party’s image. "The administration of Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa appears doomed unless it takes a resolute step to bring to light the entire picture" of the current scandal, The Japan Times said. The fate of the party itself is rosser, however. Scandal after scandal, the Liberal Democrats have controlled Parliament’s law-making Lower House for 37 years. The winner, Yukihisa Yoshida’s, anti-corruption platform was backed by the Rengo labor federation and the Socialist and Democratic Socialist parties. Miyazawa called the results “truly regrettable.” The prime minister already was in trouble prior to the election.

Expert says Dahmer had self-control

MILWAUKEE — The horrors of Jeffrey Dahmer’s killing spree are traumatizing some people with nightmares and may tempt others to act out fantasies of their own, doctors say. A psychiatric patient recently ran through the lobby of a Milwaukee hospital screaming, “Dahmer should have killed more! Dahmer should have killed more people!” a psychiatrist said. Dahmer’s insanity trial went into its third week Monday. Dr. Frederick Foundl, a prosecution witness, testified that Dahmer suffered a class of mental disease called paraphilias, which includes a wide range of sexual disorders. He said that despite Dahmer’s mental illness, he knew right from wrong and could have controlled himself. Psychologists around the country say publicity of the grisly details of Dahmer’s case may cause a very small minority of troubled people to act out their fantasies. But other psychiatrists said the publicity has prompted some to seek help and others to seek information about paraphilias.
Police arrest 14 students in Saturday motel raid

By ANDREW RUNKLE

Seven Notre Dame students and seven Goshen College students were cited for alcohol violations by the Stop Underage Drinking and Sales (SUDS) task force Saturday night, according to Sgt. James Moon of the South Bend Police.

At 11:55 p.m., SUDS officers conducted a raid at the Days Inn Motel, 52757 U.S. 33 North. Officers discovered the party in rooms 215 and 217 and set up surveillance, according to Moon.

All individuals in the party were found in violation of Indiana liquor laws, according to Moon. The Notre Dame students were all male and charged as minors consuming alcohol, along with six Goshen College females. One Goshen college male, 22, was charged with inducing minors to consume alcohol, according to Moon.

All individuals were cited for the misdemeanor violations and released at the scene, according to Moon.

The SUDS task force is comprised of officers from the Indiana State Police, Indiana Executive Police, St. Joseph County Police and the South Bend Police Department.

RHA talks on election dates

By MARA DIVIS
News Writer

Saint Mary’s Residence Hall Association (RHA) discussed the dates for the elections of next year’s executive board members and Hall officers at Monday’s meeting.

“The elections are upcoming,” said RHA president Ellen McQuillan. “The elections for executive board members will be before spring break and those for the officers of the halls will be after spring break.”

However, the executive board has not yet decided on the exact dates, she said. Also on the meeting’s agenda was an upcoming leadership conference for RHAs at Indiana colleges. According to the executive board, the conference, to be held April 3-4 at Ball State University, will be available to two representatives from each residence hall.

In addition, the RHA encouraged all students to attend the Friday fiction readings from English professors. These readings will continue this semester in the Coffeehouse, said McQuillan.

Also, the junior class will sponsor a ski trip in February, said McQuillan.

CLC discusses Judicial Boards
By EMILY HAGE
News Writer
The Campus Life Council discussed an HPC/Senate Joint Resolution involving which disciplinary issues should be resolved by a private meeting with the hall rector, called "pastoral concerns," and which should be brought before the hall's judicial board, which is composed of students. The council did not vote on the resolution which would have asked the Office of Student Affairs to encourage the use of Judicial Boards by issuing "a definition of 'truly serious and sensitive matters and pastoral concerns,' which are currently reserved for the hall rectors. One rector pointed out that many disciplinary issues in his dorm do not go to the Judicial Board simply because "it's easier." "The intention of the Judicial Board is to give students responsibility," and this is not possible in the interest of convenience, said a student member.

A faculty member of the council suggested that all disciplinary dorm issues be taken to the Judicial Board in order to encourage students' sense of citizenship as they develop into responsible individuals. "Why not adopt the idea of a jury duty?" he said. This suggestion was rejected by a rector who said that it simply is not appropriate to send every resident who plays loud music to the Judicial Board.

A student said that many feel it is unfair to place the responsibility of assigning punishment on a member of the Judicial Board of each dorm, especially when punishment is serious. She said that students are unable to distance themselves enough from their peers to judge. Pulling from his experience as rector, one member of the council said, "You might get a bad Judicial Board. One year my chief pothead was the chairman of the Judicial Board."

This year a two-part training session is starting to be used, in which members of the Judicial Board learn the basics, how to run a session and how to ask questions.

A rector reminded the group that if a student is unhappy with the punishment given by the Judicial Board, the student may choose to meet with the rector, and if he or she is disappointed with the rector, the student may appeal to Student Affairs.

"It is very difficult to get Judicial Board members," said a rector in the group, "especially in female dorms." A student member of the council clarified that this resolution is simply "to give options" to rectors. Violations of the rule are dealt with differently in different dorms, and this discrepancy merits consideration when the Office of Student Affairs meets to revise the rule.

The council adjourned with a plan to find out if this issue is dorm-wide by gathering statistics telling the frequency with which Judicial Boards are used.

Forum focuses on harassment policy

By Heather Tremblay

The University must remedy the "clearly inadequate advertisement" of its sexual harassment policy, Associate Provost Sister Kathleen Cannon said at a forum Monday.

One important issue for the forum, as expressed by Eileen Kolman, dean of Freshman Year of Studies, was simply an explanation of a survey on sexual harassment that was published in The Observer.

The survey, according to Cannon, was similar to one that was given at Harvard University and was modified to address situations faced here at Notre Dame. The purpose of the survey, said Cannon, was to get more information about the general feelings held by faculty, graduate, and undergraduate students about sexual harassment.

There were three main areas of concern that were assessed in the survey, Cannon explained. The first area was the definition of sexual harassment. Secondly, the survey attempted to measure the prevalence of harassment at Notre Dame. Lastly, it addressed the issue of how the University should be involved in remedying the problem.

The largest area of concern expressed by the audience was the fact that, according to the survey, many students and faculty are not aware of what is contained in the University's harassment policy, or that it exists at all.

There were many suggestions as to how this problem could be solved. The idea of distributing pamphlets was introduced, but concern was expressed that they would not be read. One idea that was well received was that of including the harassment policy in freshman orientation, much like the alcohol policy. Other ideas included more training for RA's and taking out ads in The Observer outlining the policy.

There were also many suggestions on how to fight the harassment itself. Some of the ideas included special centers or hotlines here on campus where students can get help on a personal basis. A main concern was how to make students comfortable enough to follow up on complaints and take further action against their aggressors.

The forum was sponsored by the Faculty/Student Committee on Women.

Dow Corning releases documents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dow Corning knew more than 20 years ago that its silicone gel breast implants could leak and that the fluid could cause medical problems, according to company documents released today.

The breast implants, which have been voluntarily withdrawn from the market while the government determines whether they are safe, have been the subject of lawsuits and allegations that the company knew they were unsafe.

At the request of the Food and Drug Administration, Dow Corning today released a phone-book-thick stack of internal documents outlining what and when the company knew about problems with the implants.

The company, in an explanation that accompanied the documents, acknowledged that silicone gel in the body causes problems.

"Testing completed to date shows that the primary observed effect of silicone in the body is that of the classic foreign body reaction," Dow Corning said.

"The tests do not indicate any association between these silicone materials and cancer, or diseases of the immune system."

However, the company's literature to surgeons did not mention this among the "adverse reactions" to the implants. That included only "occasional complaints of excessive breast firmness and-or discomfort."

Elsewhere in that same pamphlet, Dow Corning described what a surgeon should do if an implant breaks while being installed. After pulling out the implant and as much gel as the surgeon can grab with his fingers, "any residual macroscopic gel remaining in the pocket can be removed by blotting the walls of the pocket with a series of 4x4 sponges."

If any of the gel gets on surgical instruments, the pamphlet recommends cleaning them with benzene.

The documents made public today originally were to have been released on Jan. 27, but Dow Corning delayed the release, saying it wanted to add background.

Elections

Tuesday, February 11, 1992

Greg Butrus and Molly O’Neill won yesterday’s student body presidential election when their ticket received a majority (50.8%) of the votes cast in the four-ticket race.

Code

The Student Senate included the referendum on ballots as a “casual gauge to get a feel for the students’ opinion,” according to Reindl. “It’s the most efficient way to do so,” he said. According to student government tabulations, 3,737 students responded to the first part of the referendum, while 3,752 to the second. Due to technical difficulties, Carroll Hall residents were unable to be included in the official referendum count.

When asked specifically about Notre Dame’s honor code, 282 said they “Strongly Agree,” 1410 said they “Agree,” 860 said they “Strongly Disagree,” 368 said they “Disagree,” and 817 said they were “Not Sure.” Concerning the ideals of an honor code, 1069 said they “Strongly Agree,” 1860 said they “Agree,” 202 said they “Strongly Disagree,” 139 said they “Disagree,” and 482 said they were “Not Sure.”

Student Senate developed this year’s referendum in response to the Academic Council’s decision to review the University’s Academic Code of Honor, according to outgoing Student Body Vice President Dave Florenzo.

While the referendum was not designed solely to be used at the Council’s February meeting, it will give the Council something to work with,” said Florenzo. “It gives the (students’) initial spontaneous reaction,” he added.

Such information is important as a “data base” when preparing statements for planning organizations such as the Board of Trustees or the Alumni Association, said Reindl. Such results “may give them (those who analyze the information) the basis to say that it (Notre Dame’s honor code) is okay the way it is,” said Reindl.

Condoning risky behavior is not compassionate

Dear Editor:

In Fr. Griffin's article, "The Learned Art of Compassion," he rightly discussed the importance of showing compassion to AIDS sufferers. He pointed out that we should not withdraw our compassion from them because someone has done wrong. We could not agree more with Fr. Griffin. Because someone has done wrong does not mean we should not discuss the important topic of AIDS. We should not withdraw our compassion from them because they have committed a sin.

Secondly, although it is very important that we show compassion to anyone who is in trouble, we do not act compassionately when we condone risky behavior.

Confusing compounding with compassion.

First of all, people should at least treat AIDS sufferers with respect because they have done wrong. Secondly, if people are going to condone risky behavior, they should at least make sure that they are doing it because they care, and not because they want to make people feel better about themselves. If people are going to condone risky behavior, they should at least make sure that they are doing it because they care, and not because they want to make people feel better about themselves.

Disproportionate amount of our resources are being used to deal with the problem of drugs and smoking.

As long as we continue to ignore the truth concerning AIDS, the problem will probably reach epidemic levels as it is predicted.

In short, we should take Fr. Griffin's advice on how to relate to AIDS sufferers, but that is not enough...we also need to do something about the spread of the disease, and that involves using the methods that have been successful in dealing with drugs and smoking.

College is for academics, not partying

Dear Editor:

We are active members of the Notre Dame family, we would like to express our disapproval in regard to the lackadaisical attitude and general disdain for academics that has become obvious to us that many students here are far more concerned with their social lives or athletic events and have forgotten the importance that we place on those things.

Such attitudes are painfully apparent when one cannot even find a quiet place to study in the library. We do not know how the second floor of the Hesburgh Memorial Library (or the "brave") became as conducive to studying as one of those rock and roll concerts, but we do know that this is simply unacceptable.

After three frustrating years of living on-campus, we finally came to the conclusion that if we wanted the perfect study environment we would have to create it ourselves. We would like to applaud the efforts of the Grace residents to better their atmosphere by eliminating all chemicals on certain floors.

If individuals feel the need to indulge in tobacco and alcoholic products, let them visit one of the local drinking establishments where that sort of behavior is not only tolerated, but encouraged. It should be noted that when our peers "do engage" in this behavior, it is only in mindless over consumption and abuse of their bodies, we do not interpret or interfere with this by bringing our groups into such bars.

We are aware that there are many that can empathize with our plight, we decided to take the initiative to ensure that the situation deteriorates no further.

Before we are labeled or stereotyped as so-called "dweebes" or "squares" we would just like to say that we would not like to spoil anybody's fun, but there is a time and a place for such frivolity and now is neither the time nor the place.

ND students need freedom to search for answers

Guy Loranger
Guest Columnist

"Freedom's just another word for nothing left to lose, ain't worth nothing, but it's free. Problems are good for me, good enough for me and my Bobby McFerrins," sang a young woman at a party my roommate and I attended recently.

A group of young men stumbled through the snowy quad one blustery Friday evening. They had been drinking. Their heads were slumped over, their eyes darted all around the hardened earth, slid across the icy sidewalk, knocked each other's hats off from their heads with snowballs, and repeated this vicious cycle of their destination, a party at one of the dormitories on campus, bowling manically into the winds, the truth in their voices trailing off somewhere across campus.

The reason? They simply had nothing to do. They had driven home from the college town the night before they had been taken over by the campus, bowling manically into the winds, the truth in their voices trailing off somewhere across campus.

They probably couldn't have told you why, because they honestly had no idea. Maybe the night out was a search for the source of this fire. Perhaps the evening of revelry was meant to evade the truth, yet, at best, maybe going out was simply "to feel good.

What would make their liquor-induced moods needed now to remember was the room number. The room number of the room with somewhat of a study made them find the door, open it, and filled with discount beer, and to maybe, just maybe, strike up a conversation with a co-in whose eyes were the revellers on the wall of an undefined affection.

This is what college life is all about. Young adults enter into the hallowed halls of an institution of higher learning, come to unleash their inner sages and discovered the jewels. The title "belles lettristes" was used to name a group of women writers who were active in the French Enlightenment. It is now used to refer to any group of highly educated women who write and publish.

Dear Editor:

For many of us far from your community, the staff were not content to be pleased with our university, the recent tragedy has brought to light the fact that some members of your university community are out of the loop.

I am not the only person who has noticed that the friends and family of the victims are still trying to sort out what happened. It's not only the time, when the shock and numbness start to wear off, many people will be looking for an appropriate way to memorialize their lost friends and relatives. I would like to add my small voice to the national mourning this matter.

If you will look around the buildings of your university, the meals that you will find in the corridors and become hallmarks of what I think of "belles lettristes," those emergency lights that turn on automatically in the event of a fire. It is now just about 50 years since the emergency lights were installed at the Night Club in Boston claimed 499 lives.

One of the main reasons for the high mortality in this fire was the fact that power was interrupted to the lighting system, plunging large numbers of people into total darkness at a time when efficient evacuation of the premises was critical.

The tragic fire was one of the events that helped to work for laws and regulations to require emergency lights to be installed in all public buildings.

Looking at the newspaper and television pictures of the overturned bus, it appeared that the bus was not only empty, but also intact. The bus did not appear to be ripped open or grossly deformed. As a container for "packaging people" the bus should have provided excellent protection for those inside. In the absence of major impact with outside objects, the passengers who were not restrained by their seat belts. It was indeed an unfortunate accident.

Within a few days I had obtained a set of seats from another vehicle and had them installed in my car by a local mechanic, after we had arranged to find out where we could anchor these contraptions in a vehicle that God obviously never intended to be fitted with seat belts. In 1960 I added shoulder harness to the lap belts. This was like putting on a pair of concrete suspenders. The days of inertia rear in cars are still with us.

I live about 20 miles west of New York City, I periodically will take an intercity bus from my office to Mahanoy when attending meetings in the midtown area. The anticipation of possible attack or mugging is not as great as the apprehension of barreling along on an interstate without a seatbelt.

I believe that the time is right for a federal "Notre Dame law" to require seatbelts on interstate buses. Since the interstate runs, one federal law would be the ticket. You have a large university community, a large law school, and a law school. I hope that some of you will be moved by the recent tragic events to work for measures which may spare others from the needless and unnecessary.

May you all be comforted, and may the memory of your friends live on in your good works.

EPMD stick with their style on "It's Going Down," sounding like they are stuck in a metal pipe as rhythm and voice tracks echo to toward the listener, giving an analysis of Juice's plot. Cypress Hill Crew's "Shoot 'Em Up" features a backing guitar, whose muted screams produce a frightening background to the song's chorus, and the grunts and groans of several different voices. Declarations of masculinity seem dominate the Juice soundtrack, but one group of women penetrates the soundtrack. Salt 'n Peppa's production of "He's Gamin' on Ya" provides another bright spot. With the lowest bass found on the disc, Salt 'n Peppa warn of the ulterior motives of men looking to earn their juice. While Salt 'n Peppa proclaim women's power, two Oakland rappers survey life from a decidedly male perspective. Too Short, a boyhood friend of Juice star Tupac Shakur (of Digital Underground) was also supposed to make an appearance in the movie. However, his schedule limited him to a soundtrack contribution. Too Short sticks to his chosen path and warns of the dangers and evils of the college student center, and designing a t-shirt with another St. Patrick's student to prepare for the race. The 26.4 mile marathon was run relay-style with miles divided equally among the women. Notre Dame junior Colleen Knight shared her experiences in the 1990 marathon. "It was just the newest feeling, running in an international marathon," said Knight. "All of us were really motivated...we realized we could make a difference. " "At the beginning," said Knight, "we thought, 'there's no way we can do this.' We felt like we were taking a chance...It turned out so much bigger than we thought it could be." She described giving the check to the head of fundraising for Childline as "It meant a lot," she said, for the charity to receive a 1,000 pound check "from five girls from America who just happened to be studying in Ireland." Knight expressed her excitement that students studying in Ireland this year continued the tradition. This year, there were six Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students participating in the marathon and raising money for Childline. Maureen O'Shea, Molly O'Connell, Aimee Barnes, Sean Ryan, Jenny Collins, and Jenny Breidenbach are currently studying at St. Patrick's College through the Saint Mary's Ireland program.

Juice 'alive with sounds of the street

The latest in a line of African-American movies to be released since the emergence of Spike Lee, Juice has been described as "Harlem's Boyz n the Hood."
But while the film has received mixed reviews from audiences, its soundtrack brings the sound of the street into the theater. Juice's score was composed by Hank Shocklee's Bomb Squad, who has made its mark as the production engine that drives the Public Enemy machine. Shocklee makes his influence felt throughout the film's soundtrack, assembling several of hip-hop's biggest stars.
The disc kicks off with "Uptown Anthem," a catchy rap from future RN specials, Naughty By Nature. Driven by a powerful drum line and simple organ and piano keystrokes, Trench and his crew earn their juice with this declaration of uptown control.
Eric B. and Rakim produce a rap masterpiece in "Juice (Know the Ledge)," the soundtrack's first single. Rapper Rakim describes his efforts to earn juice (or respect), while each episode brings him nearer to the ledge which will kill him. The vocals delivered in classic Rakim fashion over Eric B.'s scratching, give the best interpretation of the film's story.

For two years now, members of the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's communities have pushed their hearts and legs to the limit in a marathon comparable to that of Boston or New York City.

One weekend each year thousands of international runners make the trek to Dublin, Ireland for the annual Dublin City Marathon. Recently, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students have joined them—but not just for exercise. The students ran in an effort to raise money for Childline, a 24-hour hotline for abused children, which is part of the Irish Society for the Prevention of Cruelty for Children.

Tyson down for count as jury delivers guilty verdict

Tyson made it clear he was out for sex. He said, "You want to go out on a date?" She says, "Sure." — a knee-jerk response," she said. But Tyson was nothing but "a wolf in sheep's clothes" when he later wore a button that read "Together in Christ" and appeared to pray briefly with Jesse Jackson at the pagant's opening ceremonies, she said. "What is this 18-year-old girl to think?" she said. "That he would take her up to his hotel room and rape her didn't even enter her mind," she said.

Canada looms as a possibility for Howard

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Desmond Howard of Michigan isn’t ruling out following fellow Heisman Trophy winner Rocket Ismail of Notre Dame into the Canadian Football League.

"Canada is an option," the former Michigan star said last weekend at the NFL scouting combine. "How much of an option I can’t say because I don’t think they have expressed the amount of interest in me they’ll have to in order to get out of the NFL."

Toronto owner Bruce McNall guaranteed $18 million over four years to lure Ismail last year.

Howard, who is completing his classroom work and plans to run track for Michigan this spring, didn’t work out at the combine, but took a physical. He also met with representatives of the Indianapolis Colts who hold the top two selections in the April 26-27 draft.

It’s too early to tell."

Howard, who could have elected to remain at Michigan for another year, decided to enter the NFL draft this year, and will likely be one of the top picks.

German wins luge as USA falters

LA PLAGNE, France (AP) — Georg Hackl of Germany, the 1988 silver medalist, won gold this time in the men’s singles luge Monday at the Winter Olympics today in a close race with two Austrians.

American medal hopes fizzled: Duncan Kennedy of Lake Placid, N.Y., second in the World Cup this season, finished 10th.

Hackl widened his first-day lead, leaving Markus Prock of Austria with the silver medal. Markus Schmidt, another Austrian, won the bronze.

Hackl, a 25-year-old soldier who competed for East Germany before unification, clocked a four-time heat of 3 minutes, 2.363 seconds in the two-day event. .306 faster than Prock. Schmidt was .579 off the pace.

Hackl, a two-time world champion, pumped his fists in the air after his final run.

"I tried to take it like in prac­tice," he said.

Hackl took the lead with a track record in Sunday’s first run and never let go.

He posted the fastest times in three heats, including both on Monday, when fresh snow slowed the course.

Prock, who failed to meet medal expectations at the 1988 Calgary Winter Games, was third going into the final day. He overtook Schmidt when his compatriot faltered in the third run.

It was the first Olympic medal for Prock, 26, this season’s World Cup champion. Defending Olympic champion Jens Muller of Germany finished fifth, behind Italy’s Norbert Huber.

Kennedy finished 1.489 seconds behind the winner. Although he missed an expected medal, his 10th place was the best finish ever for an American luger in the Winter Olympics.

Kennedy buried hopes for the first U.S. luge medal with a rough second run Sunday. He held his ground Monday, posting the eighth and 12th fastest times in the wrapup runs.

"He had a perfect setup after the first run, just close behind (the leaders)," U.S. coach Wolfgang Schadler said of Sunday’s runs.

Hackl, who finished third in the World Cup, improved the course record of Austria’s Robert Manzerreiter, which stood at 45.725. The 1988 Olympic runner-up and a two­time world champion set a track record of 45.190 seconds in Sunday’s first heat.

His first-day total of 1:30.541 was .118 ahead of Schmidt and 145 faster than Prock.

"There are two Austrians behind Hackl," Prock said. "We hope one will beat him."

They never did.

droughts where we are going four or five minutes with only one field goal or one foul shot.

"We need Billy Taylor to start chipping in with eight to ten points per game, and Keith Tower has to add six or eight points."

The Irish must do these things and control Adam Keefe. If they do not, it could be a long night for Notre Dame.
Campus Ministry...

About a week ago, I returned to the office to look for my daily planner. I didn't find it, so I gathered my things and made a note to call around to see if I had left it at any of my meetings earlier that day, and I headed out to my car.

Freezing rain came down as I approached the front of Siegfried Hall where my car was parked. SSSssssshhhhwuuu! Poom! Before I new it, my hands were in the air and I was staring at the sky. I had slipped and fallen directly on my back.

Four students saw me fall and rushed over to see if they could help. One of the young ladies went into the dorm, got a blanket and a note to call around to see if I had left it at any of my meetings. SSSssssshhhhwuuu! Room! Before I new it, my hands were in the air and I was staring at the sky. I had slipped and fallen directly on my back.

While I waited for the pain to subside I began thinking about how race is to have the students helping me, with no thought of the fact that we were of different races of people. I thought to myself, "hmm...now this is the kind of thing that Dr. King fought so hard for."

- One day the South will know that when these disinherited children of God sat down at lunch counters, they were in reality standing up for what is best in the American dream and for the most sacred values in our Judeo-Christian heritage, thereby bringing our nation back to those great wells of democracy which were dug deep by the founding fathers in their formulation of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence.

Letter From Birmingham Jail

When I fell, I got a sampling of what that day, Dr. King describes in his letter, will be like. We Americans, and most of us as Christians, have evolved somewhat into a brother and sisterhood of sorts. Unlike the 1890’s, early 1920’s, or late 1950’s, there are more of us who show compassion towards each other, regardless of race or religion.

Many people ask the question, "What would Dr. King say if he lived in America today?" Well... truthfully I can’t say. I like everyone else I only conjecture about the answer to that question. He might be proud that minority groups are represented in business, in predominantly white colleges, and in suburban neighborhoods across the nation. On the other hand, he might be disappointed with the covert and sometimes overt prejudices and ignorance that prevails, despite the quest for the rights of all people.

He might be proud that people of white, black, Native American, Asian or Hispanic descent have a choice as to who their friends will be, but disappointed that some refuse to use the opportunity out of fear, peer pressure, or distrust.

As for those four students, he would definitely be proud of the compassion they displayed, regardless of race. To many people that didn’t go on campus, I look like a normal student. No one would look at me and say ‘She must be a part of the administrative staff at Campus Ministry’ so I know that they were sincere. I thank them for that.

You may have noticed, thus far, I have not mentioned what my race is, nor what race the students are. Those of you who know me would know, but for those of you who don’t (and to some extent those who do)...does it matter?...does it matter?

In keeping with Dr. King’s dream for America, I would venture to say that it does matter only to the extent that we maintain respect for racial differences. Ultimately, we are all part of one race – the human race.

"With this faith we will be able to transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood." Dr. King’s March on Washington Speech

Men’s volleyball team spikes Toledo

By DAN PIER
Sports Writer

Led by a powerful corps of middle hitters, the Notre Dame men’s volleyball team unleashed a deadly offensive assault at the University of Toledo last night. The result was a 15-6, 15-1, 15-8 sweep by the Irish.

Middle hitters Brian Gepstein, P.J. Steetin, and Chris Murdy accounted for 15 of Notre Dame’s 30 kills. Those three were astonishingly efficient, making only one error among them and combining for a 61 percent kill efficiency.

Toledo took its only leads of the match in game one at 1-0 and 2-1. Notre Dame quickly took control, though, scoring seven unanswered points to pull ahead 11-4. Mike Flecker and Dave Bose each tallied three kills in the game.

If there was any doubt about Irish dominance in game one, it was quickly dispelled when Notre Dame reeled off the first 13 points of the second game. Sean Tucker and Won Sul set up waves of Irish hitters, as seven different members of Notre Dame’s balanced attack recorded kills.

Non-starters saw much of the action for both teams in game two. Toledo was also good. We ran a lot of different plays.

Head coach Kim Reefer agreed that the hitting was good and added that things were improved in just her second game at the helm.

"We were more comfortable tonight because it was our second match,” Reefer said. "We played a lot better than as far as that goes.

Reefer took over the team before last Friday’s victory against Ball State. While the Irish have already made strides since then, Reefer is quick to point out that she is not satisfied.

“I think we have a lot of work to do,” she stated, “but it’s going to be fun. The guys are pretty far along, but I think they can go further.”

Reefer plans to concentrate her efforts on improving the team’s blocking and passing.

“In the men’s game blocking is a huge factor, because most of the defense is played at the net,” she explained. “We also need to make sure that our passes are there so that we can run the offense we need to.”

With the victory, Notre Dame improved its match record to 4-0. The Irish will host Western Michigan at 7:30 Wednesday night in the JACC pit.

The Notre Dame men's basketball team will look to snap a three-game losing streak tonight when it takes on the Stanford Cardinal tonight at the Joyce MAC at 8 p.m.

The Cardinal, the defending NIT champions, enter tonight's game with a 4-3 record. The Irish are 4-4 and in fourth place in the tough Pac-10 Conference.

"Stanford is a very good team," DePaul head coach Bob Knight commented. "We are going to try to make the ball out of his hands as much as possible. We want to keep him out further than he is used to playing. If we do that he will have to put the ball on the floor, and then we can double team him."

However, Knight is not the only man the Irish are going to have to stop. Junior guard Peter Dukas and sophomore forward Brent Williams are the other tonight's contest averaging 11.4 and 11.2 points per game. Dukas is particularly dangerous from behind the three-point line; he is shooting 47.5 percent from downtown this year.

The Irish offense is nothing to be trifled with. The Cardinal leads the series 9-6, but will try for two of its five starters. Point guard Elliot Bennett suffered a broken nose in Sunday's 74-65 loss to Michigan, and Tower is still feeling the effects of the elbow fracture against DePaul. However, both are expected to be in the starting lineup tonight.

"The Cardinal is the key to the game," Tower commented. "We are going to have to react to the double team and move the ball to the open people," MacLeod added. "We are at the point where we have to find some consistency. We have been going through scoring slumps.
