Scapegoats found for American woes

Thank goodness for Japan. Our little buddies on the Pacific have certainly proved to be good for America in unexpected ways. They certainly make good political scapegoats for a faltering United States economy.

"Mr. & Kar" Lee Iacocca, a group of other "poor, mistreated" American business leaders and our beloved president were hand-in-hand on a journey to the Orient, blasting the Japanese for unfair trade practices.

"They are not taking advantage of the American market," Iacocca said, with his swashbuckling commentary on the trip.

Suddenly, everything has become the Japanese's fault. The economy, unemployment, the loss of industrialization, why Johnny Carson isn't funny, and why little Joey didn't do his homework can all be blamed on Japan.

I have to admit, they are really a lot smarter than they were.

Somewhere the Japanese were able to infiltrate the upper levels of government and big business, and destroy the fabric of American society.

In the biggest secret attack since Pearl Harbor, the Japanese switched General Motors and Ford's plans for hi-tech cars in the '70s with plans for Pinto, Gremlins, and Volares. What a cheap shot!

Fortunately, they didn't ruin our automobiles, those bastardly villains got a agent into the U.S. Education Department and wrecked our school systems. Consequently, thanks to our sushi-eating friends, our education system has become one of the worst in the world.

And after Bush put the final exclamation point on that, by hurling the prime minister, back to America they came.

Bush came back with a sweet promise from the Japanese that they would let more Matchbox cars in, and the U.S. promised to pay for the prime minister's dry cleaning.

Since their return, Japan bashing has become en vogue. In Seattle, the Mariners are for sale and the Japanese owners of Nintendo, have made the best offer. In Los Angeles, the Japanese switched General Motors and Ford's plans for hi-tech cars in the '70s with plans for Pinto, Gremlins, and Volares. What a cheap shot!

IRA bomb does not deter Quayle

London—A bomb apparently planted by the I.R.A. was found by police Tuesday near government buildings where Vice President Dan Quayle was scheduled to meet with British officials, the home secretary said.

The device was discovered after several bomb warnings reportedly prompted authorities to evacuate the building. Home Secretary Kenneth Baker said the bomb was found in a telephone booth near the Foreign Office.

He said quick action by police could have "saved a great deal of destruction, damage, possibly even death."

Sky Television said telephoned bomb warnings were made in the name of the Irish Republican Army by callers using a recognized code. The U.S. Embassy said Quayle had not changed his schedule.

Health plan ignores mental illness

Washington—President Bush's health care proposal ignores the needs of millions of Americans who suffer from mental illness, the American Psychiatric Association said Monday. "The president is sending the clear message to all Americans who suffer from mental illness: 'We do not need care if you get the treatment you need,'" said Dr. Melvin Sabshin, medical director of the group. Bush's plan would allow states to set basic health coverage standards and provide tax credits and deductions to help American buy insurance. But no state would be required to cover treatment for mental illness or addictive disorders. "The president wants his administration to be a thousand points of light, but his health care plan leaves 23 million American in total darkness," Sabshin said.

Some financial aid may be too good

Notre Dame, IN—It appears to be the time of year when college students are most vulnerable to financial aid organizations of questionable validity, according to Joseph Russo, director of Financial Aid. At least one student has received a letter notifying him that he is eligible to receive an allegedly customized scholarship based on the individual's academic and financial status, he said. The letter, from an organization called the National Scholarship Foundation, asks the student to call a certain number within 72 hours, then the student must call a 900 number — at a cost of $3 per minute — to get more information. "Buyer beware," said Russo. "When something appears too good to be true, it probably is in the financial aid business.

New program brings first aid to dorms

By MOLLIE MUDD
News Writer

The Notre Dame/Saint Mary's First Aid Services Team has added another medical assistance program to their volunteer organization which will soon benefit the ND/SMC community.

This new program is called First Aid Services Team Member Dorm Registration (FAST MDR).

The MBR program consists of FAST members, who on a strictly individual basis, elect to be registered with their respective dormitory as a trained emergency responder. The volunteer agrees to be on-call 24 hours a day, should an emergency arise, and they are given access to the dorm's first aid kit.

Fernando Gutierrez, Student Coordinator of the ND/SMC First Aid Services Team, said, "the program should begin next week. We will be choosing dorm leaders, who will be responsible for making the first aid kit available and posting the names, phone numbers and addresses of the FAST MDR members within their dorm."

Burkholder talks about communism's recent unraveling

By GERARDINE HAMILTON
News Writer

"Communism has virtually disappeared as something that commands the respect of people," stated J. Lawrence Burkholder, president emeritus of Goshen College during a lecture Tuesday.

Burkholder spoke on the topic of "China in Light of the Russian Revolution," which was held at the Hesburgh Library Faculty Lounge.

Burkholder was present during the Chinese cultural revolution in 1975, during the Tiannamen Square protest in 1989 and also the aborted coup in Moscow this past year.

Despite all that Burkholder knows about both the second Russian revolution and China, in his opening comments he stated that it was very difficult for him to know for certain what relation the two had, so he could do was surmise what the Chinese were thinking and saying in reaction to the events in the former Soviet Union.

There is a generation problem in China. Burkholder said. The young people are no longer interested in the philosophy of Marx; the young are caught up in washing and watching to see what happens," he said.

They are accomplishing their goals well, everyone is eating, has a place to live, and a large majority of people have jobs.

Burkholder said that the Chinese government is "getting along fairly well, but they are doing it by repressive means. As they feel more insecure they tighten controls."

While the Chinese government is working to maintain order and there is evident striving for more freedom from some of the people, according to Burkholder, in the former Soviet Union there was a revolution in which communism was beheaded by democracy, but only three lives were lost, and two of those deaths were unintentional.

Burkholder stated that while watching the revolt from the Observer or posters in the stairwells ... we are another avenue," he said to explain the use of ND Info as a means of publicity in campus events. Members of HPC responded favorably to his presentation.

parliament building he was "amazed that there can be so much chaos without people losing their lives."

"I just can't understand how a nation, an empire, can make the transition from one form of government to the other with so much chaos and so little loss of life. I'm sure people in Beijing are watching and waiting to see what happens," he said.

Burkholder went on to state that if Boris Yeltsin, the president of Russia, can hold on to democracy in Russia for one or two years and outlaw the chaos, democracy may be able to survive.

The Russian people have been under communist rule for so long that they lack initiative, are used to taking orders and are very dependent, yet they are very able to endure suffering, which may be the key to the success of democracy in Russia stated Burkholder.

"The people in Beijing are wondering what is going to happen," said Burkholder.

There are starting to be some divisions in the different regions of China, Burkholder said. The western and eastern parts of China have always been rivals, he said; the people of the east feel that they are looked down upon by the people of the east.

In the Soviet Union the union broke up, could something like that happen in China? Probably not, but there are regional spirits," Burkholder said.

"There is a fear that China may go the way of the Soviet Union. It is possible that China is going along normally," Burkholder said.

Tiannamen square democracy forces will emerge again, but it will take time, according to Burkholder. "There is a fear that China may go the way of the Soviet Union. It is possible that China is going along normally," Burkholder said.

"The young people are having second thoughts and are not going to push too strongly." As for the future of both the former Soviet Union and China Burkholder states, "I'm not sure, I have a lot more faith in the stability of China then I do in the former Soviet Union."

Yet, Burkholder also makes it clear that he is very concerned with the human rights abuses presently taking place in China.

The United States relations to China, Burkholder believes, should be one of conversation." He stated, "I would hope that the United States continues to express its concerns, yet remain in contact with China." This lecture was part of a series sponsored by the "Friends of the Library" program, which would be impossible for library and the local community.

O'Meara: New Czechoslovakia rebuilding its religious traditions

By ALICIA REALE

The Church in modern day Czechoslovakia is trying to make a 40-year bridge to modernize religion in their country where religious life had been forbidden since 1948, according to Professor Thomas O'Meara of the theology department.

He travelled in Czechoslovakia in January by invitation, speaking in this liberated nation on the Church today. At a lecture Tuesday titled "Beyond Communism, The Church in Czechoslovakia," he explained that the three major topics he was asked to address were the fundamentalist Catholic perspective, the role of Thomas Aquinas today, and Dominican spirituality.

He explained, "It was like a Vatican II 30 years later." He travelled to many different cities in Czechoslovakia speaking before many people on these topics.

"They are beginning to see the big picture." It would be beneficial to the Czechoslovakian Church to offer scholarships within the country to come to the United States and study our Church, said O'Meara.

The Church is no longer practicing the Baroque style of Catholicism, because there are now lay people in the ministry, O'Meara said. Prague University already has a theology class for lay people.

The Church is very focused on externals because of the recent liberation. These externals are very precious because religious life had been forbidden and thus the Church is very traditional, said O'Meara. "So much is being fixed up so fast," he said.

They are working at explaining Christianity to the young people who know nothing about it, according to O'Meara. During the liberation of 1988-89, 70 people joined the clergy and 40 or 50 have entered since.

Campaigning intensifies in N. Hampshire

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Democratic presidential candidates today opened an intense drive to court the big bloc of undecided voters in next week's New Hampshire primary. 'Things are fluid,' said Sen. Tom Harkin following his favorite-son victory in the Iowa caucuses.

With the first trophy of the 1992 campaign in hand, Harkin was returning today for the finishing burst in New Hampshire, where his campaign has yet to command the kind of attention he received at home Monday night.

Harkin received almost 80 percent of the vote, a result he deemed "far better than I ever imagined." He dismissed his trailing position in the polls in this state and said in an interview on NBC's "Today" he could win here next Tuesday because "the people are a lot like the people of New Hampshire."

"All I can say is stay tuned, because things are happening in New Hampshire, things are fluid, almost 50 percent are undecided, they're making up their minds ..." he said.

'I am in this to the end and I believe you're going to be very, very surprised at what happens in New Hampshire." His rivals skipped Iowa, forfeiting to Harkin and trying to deny him any claim to campaign momentum — even as they jockeyed for some of their own during Harkin's absence from New Hampshire.

IU fraternity suspended following hazing incident

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) - The Indiana University fraternity where a pledge almost died recently from drinking too much alcohol was temporarily suspended Monday by its national organization.

Alpha Tau Omega national headquarters, in Champaign, Ill., took no action following an informal investigation at the end of January, immediately after the incident.

"Initial evidence suggested that it was an isolated incident and the choice of the individuals involved," ATO Executive Director Mark Thorsby said in a Monday news release. "However, new allegations have surfaced that require further investigation."

ATO Director of Communications Wynn Smiley of the national office said the decision to investigate further was made after seeing news reports Sunday and Monday that the incident may not have been isolated, but part of pledge "dads" night at the fraternity.

The decision also was based on reports from the national office investigator who has been in Bloomington, and on information from other people in Bloomington—including some fraternity alumni advisors.

In the initial incident, ATO members brought pledge Dennis Jay, 20, an IU sophomore from South Bend, to Bloomington Hospital just after midnight on Jan. 29.

He was in a coma, and his blood alcohol level was measured at 0.48, a level that is often fatal. He was released from the hospital Jan. 30, apparently without long-term physical damage.

"The Cold War is over, and now it is time for all to join in building a new peace," Secretary of State James Baker, III, said Monday.

Baker hinted Washington may be willing to discuss a multibillion dollar fund to stabilize the ruble and allow a fixed-rain currency exchange.

Carters
Carter received a honorary doctor of laws degree and was the University's commencement speaker. In his speech, one of the major foreign policy addresses of his presidency, Carter talked of a diminishing threat from the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Carter received her honorary degree in 1987, but her association with the University dates to 1979, when she joined with Father Theodore Hesburgh, then Notre Dame's president, on the Catholic Cambodian Crisis Committee. The group raised millions of dollars to battle mass starvation in that country and to assist refugees.

Since then, the former first lady has become a familiar figure on campus. She currently serves on the advisory council of the Kellogg Institute for International Studies and last fall delivered a speech at the dedication of Notre Dame's Hesburgh Center for International Studies.

While grieving, we should not just turn away from God

Dear Editor:

Thursday Jan. 23, 1992, in a day that will remain for many in the Notre Dame community a realization of some of our worst nightmares, in the tragic loss of two dear friends, coupled with the 33 others who were injured, we find ourselves to some of our deepest questions.

The first and probably biggest question is “Why?” Why them: two young, healthy, energetic, talented people? Many people take this as a sign of God: “If He calls us, is this right?” Just for the young to die?

These are difficult questions to answer. Perhaps in the Scriptures, however, we can learn much about life and the significance of death.

We must realize that God is not just a killer; God is love. His Son had to die, for without this death our eternal life would not be possible. Many of Jesus’ disciples were martyrs, and one might ask, “Why would God allow His followers to die?” It is all a part of His ultimate plan, one that we as humans cannot always see. In the same token, Mégan and Colleen were called up to God for a purpose we are unable to see at the present.

God has given a promise to those who have accepted Him and His Son. “For we know that if the earthy tent which is our house is torn down, we have a building from God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens” (II Corinthians 5:1). He has promised to take care of our followers and give them life everlasting, a life without pain, a life filled with His ultimate protection and glory.

Original death was a result of human’s sinfulness. Adam and Eve sinned and were told by God that they would eventually die. It was that original sin that allowed death to enter this world. God has allotted each of us seventy years according to His will. Life is filled with Him’s ultimate protection and glory.

To every thing there is a season, a time to every purpose under the heaven: A time to be born, and a time to die...” are the words by the writer of Ecclesiastes. In this passage we see a fundamental truth to life: that is, everything happens for a reason. Our earthly lives are but a small portion of what our lives will be after death, and thus it is important to make sure of our future after this life.

To answer the question “Is it just for the young to die?” I must answer, no. For those who love Christ and die at an early age go to spend more time with Him in eternity. So while we continue to grieve the losses we have experienced, let us not forget the gains they are experiencing right now.

SUB holding forum on academics

The panel discussion will feature four university professors from various fields and various perspectives: Prof. Morton Fuchs, chairman, Biological Sciences; Prof. David O’Connor, philosophy department; Rev. Timothy Scully, government department; and Prof. William Nichols, accountancy department.

Each professor brings valuable insight on the pressures of a faculty member in this era, and how these pressures will affect their interaction with students.

The evening will begin with some background given by the chairperson of the Student Government Report to the Board of Trustees on this issue, Karen Stiebe. This report provides valuable information and recommendations from a student’s perspective, such as an increased hiring of faculty, teaching workshops for faculty, review of the tenure process, etc. There will be a question and answer session to follow.

Please join us for the forum this evening in the Hesburgh Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. difficult times. However, the one-dimensional aspect of the Notre Dame campus somehow allows even the longest, most outré of students to eventually fit in, to belong. It is definitely not the atmosphere one would expect, say, like Yale or Stanford where the academic standards are similar.

My Sugar Bowl article was a diary of what transpired, not an attempt to repudiate Notre Dame virtues. Yes, we were sophisticated and poised in New Orleans, a city we had not visited for ten years. Other schools have pulsed and supplemented asphalt and fans, but state schools are not overwhelmed by the kind of students that enroll in private schools. Can anyone deny that our students are a better quality person from our National Championship on the Fiesta Bowl or our loss at Penn State?

Karen Chirico, who owns a café in New Orleans (Observer Letters to the Editor, Jan. 31, 1992) is one of the many visitors who have visited in New Orleans, this year’s Sugar Bowl crowd, thanks to Notre Dame. She reported, “The fans displayed a wonderful sense of spirit, sportsmanship, and refreshing propriety for fun!”

Lastly, I feel that it is apparent to everyone that is scheduled to be a pork barrel project. Why must the Cubans people be held in those conditions; that the peasants must overcome. First, I am a Cuban refugee from my account of my experiences. I am, and will always feel proud of the United States who gave me, and so many others like me, an opportunity to become a sovereign country and accomplish any goals we set for ourselves and the troops who fought.

regardless of whether we speak of the illusion of Congress or Notre Dame, this is one thing that is unique and strong because we are the United States, and the rest of the world is not. Notre Dame, with its unique football television contract and Catholic Character, thrives because we are ND, and other schools are not. Those students who have grown up in a hyperactive egoist, they are fewer. Can anyone really argue with that?

Gary J. Caruso is a graduate of the University of Notre Dame and now works in Washington, D.C. as a desktop publishing specialist. His column appears every other Wednesday.
Chastity walked to the steps outside of Sacred Heart Church, stopped in front of a computerized machine bearing a striking resemblance to a Cash Station, made a sign of the cross, and slowly knelt down on the kneeler in front of it. Chastity has sinned, and gone to make peace with herself and with God.

While Chastity was at an off-campus party over the weekend, she accidentally fell asleep on a couch (she was watching a movie, of course) and woke up at 9 a.m. the next morning. She found boys sleeping in the same room as she, and woke up at 9 a.m. the next morning. She committed: press 'V' for venial, 'M' for mortal, and 'I' for indescribable.

"Please enter the type of sin you have committed; press 'V' for venial, 'M' for mortal, and 'I' for indescribable.

Chastity enters "a" for she has violated the most serious of the law books.

"Please enter the letter of the sins that most closely matches yours." Another screen appears that lists, alphabetically, all of the possible du Lac offenses, from possession of a souvenir cup (du Luc), b) to sexual intercourse. Chastity enters "P" for parietal violation.

A booming voice announces: "YOU HAVE SINNED, CHILD!"

Then a softer, voice asks, "Are you sorry for your sins? Please make a selection: a) yes, I am heartily sorry for my offense. b) no, I am not sorry, and really, I could keep me out of law school, or c) no, I am a rebel and a mindless lawbreaker desiring expulsion.

Chastity chooses a) for it was merely an accident, an extremely serious one for which she is heartily sorry.

"Please wait while your penance is being processed."

She hears her penance slip being typed up. It states, "A detention center. The four plays star a student's thing," she said. Martin said, adding that she plans to major in Communication and Theater at Notre Dame. Because freshmen can't declare a major in Communication and Theater, it is often hard for them to be cast for roles for which they try out.

Martin said, "I wanted to start a tradition where freshmen can get experience and meet others with like interests," Martin said.

and the judge said that it was a total misprint in word order...the whole thing was screwed up. So when they did the records check it appears as a felony. So they (the University) accused me of falsifying my application.

I was never, ever charged with robbery," Anderson said.

Anderson said Cincinnati officials told him that there was another man with the same name in the city, and that probably was a mistake made on Anderson's record. He claims he was advised to have an expungement bearing in front of a judge, which he said he scheduled for April 26, 1991.

"I investigated it, I had a lawyer investigate it. I have since then had the whole thing expunged,"

Regardless of the confusion surrounding his application, Anderson was still dismissed from his coaching position.

He was in a volunteer position, it was not paid, and he was treated differently than any salaried coach," O'Leary said.

"I have no comment on that," said Rosenthal. "He did not work for the athletic department. Club teams report to NVA, which is now RecSports. He was not dismissed as an employee."

Kelly, whose jurisdiction includes club sports, refused to comment on the specific reason for Anderson's dismissal.

"I don't really have a comment," said Kelly. "We looked into his application last year and there seemed to be some confusion. It was mentioned to Bill until those things were taken care of we would have to hold off. We got another coach, Steve Anderson, and there were some disagreements between him and the players. But we have no comment on that."

"There were no complaints about Bill by the players to my knowledge," Kelly added.

"I played under Bill Anderson for a whole year, and he got along really well with everyone on the team," stated one senior's volleyball player who spoke under condition of anonymity.

"There were never any conflicts with him. All the players agreed on him and there were never any words behind his back."

He added, "To be honest, we're realizing now that he was doing a good job. He was coaching the St. Joseph's High School girls team at the time. The biggest thing was that he put forth the effort and dedication. He seemed to get along really well with the coaches of the teams we played, and we never questioned about it because we really haven't been informed about what really went on."

Oddly enough, Anderson had led the Irish in the NCAA national tournament in 1989—the first Notre Dame appearance in nine years. Under his tutelage the Notre Dame men's club was Northern conference champion from 1986-89, with Anderson being named Midwest Intercollegiate Volleyball Association coach of the year in 1988.

Anderson said he also served as ND/SMC sailing team captain from 1986-89, and Anderson being named Midwest Intercollegiate Volleyball Association coach of the year in 1988.

Mosley named Irish running backs coach

Special to The Observer

Earle Mosley has joined Lou Holtz's Notre Dame football staff as running backs coach following tenures as an assistant coach at Temple, Northwestern and Rutgers. Mosley replaces Tom Beck, who coached the Irish running backs for a single season in 1991 before resigning last month to become offensive coordinator at Illinois.

Mosley spent the last four seasons (1988-91) at Temple under head coach Jerry Berndt. The Lansdowne, Pa., native served the previous four seasons (1984-87) as an assistant at Northwestern—the first two under Dennis Green, now the NFL Minnesota Vikings head coach, and the last two under Francis Peay, a former Irish assistant himself. He coached four seasons as an assistant at Rutgers from 1980-83.

Mosley has coached six players who have gone on to the National Football League—Clayton Cherry (five-time all-pro with Kansas City Chiefs) and Kenny Smith (Detroit Lions) in 1980 at Rutgers, Carl Howard (Dallas Cowboys and New York Jets) in 1984 at Rutgers, Kevin Brown (Los Angeles Rams) in 1985 at Northwesterns, and Mike Constantatos (Philadelphia Eagles) and Kenyatta Rush (Phoenix Cardinals) in 1990 at Temple.

A 1973 graduate of West Chester State College with a degree in health and physical education, Mosley spent the 1979 campaign on the staff of his alma mater. He previously spent six years on the staff at Chester High School in Chester, Pa., the last four as head football coach while also assisting in track and wrestling, he coached Chester to the 1978 Delawor Valley Class A title, its first in 42 seasons.

Mosley is close to finishing requirements for his master's degree in education at West Chester State—and he took classes in Temple's graduate sports administration program.

A graduate of Lansdowne-Aldan High School in Lansdowne, Pa., Mosley earned three letters as a defensive back at West Chester State, captaining the team as a senior in 1972.

Keeffe still managed to score 17 points and grab nine rebounds. However, these numbers are well below his season stats, 24.9 ppg and 12.9 rpg. "There were a couple times when I couldn't stop him from getting the ball because I got into some foul trouble. When that happened, I wanted to play tough defense after he got the ball," Ellis said.

Even when he got the ball in the half-court set, the baskets did not come easily. Keeffe had to beat the double team all night.

"We wanted to do him tonight what other teams do to me every night," Ellis commented after the game.

Though the Irish defense did a good job on Keeffe, Mack said the Irish was still impressed by his ability.

"He moves like a lot of good post men. He moves so quickly and is so mobile. He's got great speed, and he got great ability with the ball. I put it on the floor," he said. "We wanted to double team him, but there were times when he was gone before we could get our defenders out."
Tyson returns to courthouse

Convicted of rape, fighter could face 60 years in prison

Tyson remained free on $30,000 bail. "We've seen so many times recently that it doesn't matter what a superstar does—it's OK," prosecutor Greg Garrison said after Monday night's verdict. "He can brag about it in his books, he can demonstrate it in the public eye, and as long as it suits him, it's all right.

"And I think tonight, one anyway, this kind of behavior's not been tolerated."

Tyson stared straight ahead. He showed little emotion as the verdict was read. Giddy on one count and two counts of criminal conduct, he appeared shaken when he left the courtroom.

"As the heavy weight champ, I think the public would want something better than this."

Tyson's accuser testified that he raped her and laughed while she cried in pain and begged to be let go. "She's a young person with a lot of courage.

"She's a very convincing case. We looked at not only a moment in the bedroom but a chain of events that evening," said the jury's foreman, a 37-year-old IBM marketing representative and ex-Marine.

"It was an accumulation of evidence," said the foreman, who refused to give his name.

"That he wanted sex, and that he refused to give her name."

"The accusing witness made a courageous effort to take her sightseeing but instead went to his hotel on the pretext of photographing, pinned her to his bed, stripped her, jumped on her and lied while she cried in pain and begged him to stop."

"Mrs. Jones included testimony from an emergency room doctor who said the woman suffered injuries consistent with rape, and a chauffeur who said the woman appeared shaken when she emerged from Tyson's hotel July 19.

Taylor follows his father’s lead
Irish freshman is second-generation basketball player

By JIM VOGEL
Sports Writer

Although a little shorter and slimmer, Notre Dame freshman Billy Taylor seems to be filling his father Dennis’ shoes just fine.

Dennis Taylor was a 6-foot-7 forward/center for Northern Illinois in 1969-70 and 1970-71. He averaged 8.4 points and 8.9 rebounds as a junior, 6.9 points and 8.4 rebounds as a senior.

Billy Taylor is a 6-5 small forward who averages 6.1 points and 3 boards per game as a freshman starter for the 7-11 Fighting Irish.

"If he's having a good game, he gets very good, very high," said MacLeod. "He knows what to do with the ball. He knows how to play with his back to the rim.

"As he gets a better feel for who he's playing and makes adjustments to the college game, he'll be even more aggressive," said MacLeod. "And next year he'll be even stronger.

Taylor's maturity shows on and off the court. His 27 turnovers are easily lowest among starters. "He understands how to play team basketball," said MacLeod.

While still a junior at Aurora High School (averaging 16.6 points and 9 rebounds), Taylor committed to Notre Dame. As a 16-year-old being recruited by the likes of Northwestern, Wisconsin, Michigan and Stanford, Taylor showed foresight in his decision.

"When I first was recruited by Notre Dame and Digger Phelps, the first thing they really emphasized was academics," explained Taylor. "I was really impressed by that.

"Other schools mention it, but they really sold the basketball part. Notre Dame was talking life after basketball."
