JPW is special occasion for juniors, parents

Somewhere in Dillon Hall, they’re vacuuming for the first time all year.

Posters of scantily-clad beach beauties and empty bottles of Jim Beam find new homes under the banks. The confirmation gift, Bible is dust-free and displayed prominently.

In places like Knot Hall, they’re practicing “the speech.” For some it’s “I’m changing my major from accounting to anthropology and I’m going to join the Peace Corps after graduation.” For others it’s the unavoidable, “Mom and Dad, this is Mike. . .my fiancé.”

And within the walls of Zahn Hall, there’s a Class of ’93 gathering over who sits where for which dinner and which brunch and why and so-and-so’s girlfriend is a part of the gravy train.

For the over 1,800 members of the Class of 1993, it’s time for good behavior and last impressions. Junior Parents’ Weekend (JPW) is upon us.

For years, the weekend was viewed with disdain. Freshmen and sophomores planned the perfect roasttrip, knowing fully that social activity on campus is all a standstill during JPW.

But we’re older now. Some of us are even withering away. There are a few of us who call ourselves adults. JPW has come to mean something all together different.

At the least, JPW presents us all with a challenge: to spend 72 hours with our parental units and leave on speaking terms. It will bring to the test of the maturity we’ve done nothing but brag about for the last two years, a test that we can either pass or fail.

For most, though, JPW promises more. Many parents will be visiting for the first time all year. They may be eager to place faces with names and to renew old impressions. Junior Parents’ Weekend (JPW) is upon us.

For most, though, JPW promises more.

JPW holds an extra-special meaning for alumni parents, who may find the weekend a mini-reunion. And for students whose parents visit often, the weekend should be pressure-free.

The idea of a activity-packed weekend with our parents has now been ludicrous to some who view JPW as pretentious and trying on the most basic function, the weekend affords opportunity for the opportunity to come to Notre Dame. From a son’s conversation with his mother over dinner to a father-daughter dance, JPW has an entire weekend to applaud their parents for a job well done.

As we approach graduation and moving away from home, many of us realize that the chance to spend quality time as a family is becoming more rare. Not that we will no longer appreciate our parents, but rather that we will soon be beyond the age when the appreciation can be expressed so appropriately.

JPW, for all its pomp and circumstance, offers us this chance.

The views are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Rushdie wants lift of death threat

CONDOM — On the eve of entering his fourth year in hiding, author Salman Rushdie on Thursday renewed his call for the British government to pressure Iran to lift the death sentence that drove him underground. Iran’s spiritual leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini called on Feb. 14, 1989, for devout Muslims to kill Rushdie for allegedly blaspheming Islam in his book “The Satanic Verses.” Although Khomeini died less than four months later, threat of assassination has kept Rushdie in hiding except for occasional public appearances. Rushdie, an Indian-born naturalized Briton, was raised a Muslim, then fell away from the religion. He declared a renewal of his faith on Dec. 24, 1990.

Gotti’s lawyers attack star witness

NEW YORK — Defense lawyers at John Gotti’s mob trial opened their case Thursday with a combative attack against the government’s star witness, labeling Salvatore “Sammy Bull” Gravano a “snake turned into a butterfly.” Gravano, a former friend and co-defendant of the reputed Mob boss, “is a little man full of evil, connivance, manipulation, vanity, who has tried to clear his slate by admitting to 19 murders,” said defense attorney Albert Krieger.

Important art works to be displayed at Snite

Special to The Observer

One hundred art works on paper, including medieval manuscript pages and renaissance drawings from the nationally recognized collection of Notre Dame’s Snite Museum of Art, will go on display Sunday, Feb. 16, and continue through Sunday, March 29, in the museum’s O’Shaughnessy Gallery West.

The exhibition, “Master Drawings from the Permanent Collection,” marks the first time many of the 100 works will be on public view. Chief curator Stephen Spiro and assistant Mary Fisk capitalized on the comprehensive nature of the museum’s collection by including works of various periods, styles, and nationalities.

Among the earlier works are fourteenth-century manuscript pages and drawings by sixteenth- and seventeenth-century masters Romano, Carracci and Cypel. Recently acquired drawings include works by the notable eighteenth-century English artists Flaxman and Romney.

Two rare nineteenth-century sketchbooks will be on view with studies by Degas and Delacroix. Artistic innovations of the early twentieth century including cubism and abstract expressionism, are represented in works by Dali, Matiška, Kline, and Smith.

Frisk will present a “Noontalk” on “Master Drawings from the Permanent Collection” Tuesday, March 3, from 12:10 to 12:55 p.m. in the O’Shaughnessy Gallery West. The lecture is free and open to the public.

The Snite Museum is open Tuesday to Friday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Sunday 1 to 4 p.m. and Thursday 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. It is closed on Mondays. Admission is free.

S.B. police: Don’t park in the snow

Special to The Observer

The South Bend Police Department would go to make students aware of the possibility of having their vehicles ticketed or towed while parked on City streets during heavy snow conditions, and during spring break.

The City of South Bend has established two snow removal plans for efficient removal of snow from City streets during periods of heavy snow. The first plan, the “snow Route Clearance Condition,” prohibits vehicles from parking on a street designated by signs as a "snow emergency route," unless the street has been properly cleared of snow.

The second plan, the "Residential Snow Clearance Condition," will allow parking on streets declared "snow emergency routes," but shall ban parking from 8 a.m. until 8 a.m. the following day on all streets not designated as snow routes in accord with the following schedule:

- Even numbered days — No parking on eastwest streets; and
- Odd numbered days — No parking on northsouth streets.

In addition a vehicle may also be ticketed or towed under Indiana State law if not moved for three days, parked illegally, or creating a hazard.

The South Bend Police Department recommends that students listen to local radio and television stations during inclement weather for announcements regarding the implementation of snow removal plans and that during spring break they find proper off street parking or make arrangements to comply with state law and local parking ordinances.

For additional information contact the South Bend Police Traffic Division at 284-9306.

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Democratic candidates battled into the predicted Thursday a Vietnam draft controversy would doom the president's bid for Bill Clinton. The Arkansas governor denied the charges. Several manuscripts jumble of scraps found, "...the concordance that was recently published by computer," said Ulrich. Of the project," said Ulrich. Of the Democratic candidates were set to meet in a nationally televised debate Sunday night. Polls show Tsongas atop the field, followed by Clinton, Harkin and Kerrey, with former California Gov. Jerry Brown trailing. A day after releasing a 22-year-old letter in which he agonized about Vietnam and thanked an ROTC commander for "saving me from the draft," Clinton tried to stick to economic issues. Bush: "I don't think it makes him a bigger man."

Clinton's campaign bought 30-minute slots on New Hampshire television Thursday and Friday nights to answer questions from voters.

Harkin characterized Tsongas as a "cheerleader" for nuclear power and New Hampshire's controversial Seabrook reactor. Tsongas supports nuclear power but noted that he opposed the beach-side siting of Seabrook. He added: "Tom Harkin never said boo. There are nuclear plants in Iowa and no record of Tom Harkin saying boo."

"Here we are five days before the primary and he discovers Seabrook," Tsongas said. "What you have here is a candidate not doing well."

Tsongas took delight in calling Harkin's vow to win New Hampshire and his early campaign promise not to attack fellow Democrat, "Just like any cynical politician, the commitments made before don't count when it's in your best interest to change it," Tsongas said. Harkin launched a fresh television ad claiming Tsongas, Clinton and Kerrey all favor "more tax cuts for the rich and big business." All three campaigns accused Harkin of distortion.

Tsongas said that Clinton's draft status was "part of the discussion" in the campaign.

Brother of late Charles Stuart testifies in murder case

BOSTON (AP) — The brother of the late Charles Stuart testified publicly Thursday for the first time since he implicated his brother in a bizarre plot to murder Stuart's pregnant wife.

But Matthew Stuart's testimony, in a pretrial hearing on his attorneys' request that the case against him be dropped, focused more on his dealings with authorities than the slaying.

Stuart, who is charged with conspiring to obstruct justice, said he wouldn't have come forward if he knew he would be indicted.

He said he gave investigators evidence about the crime with the understanding that he wouldn't be prosecuted. He wouldn't say whether he feared he would be charged as an accomplice to the murder.

"I was concerned about my legal entanglements," Stuart said. "What I had been sucked into, for want of a better term."

Authorities believe Charles Stuart killed his wife, Carol, the night of Oct. 23, 1989, after a birth-child class. Charles Stuart, who also was shot, told police he and his wife were attacked in their car by a mugger. His description of the attack in a 911 call from his car phone was played across the country.

But the case developed into a twisted tale of a man's alleged plot to kill his wife, and Stuart died in an apparent suicide as authorities closed in on him.

A grand jury in September 1990 indicted Matthew Stuart on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice and compounding a forgery. A friend, John McMahen, was indicted as an accessory to murder after the plot.

Prosecutors say Matthew Stuart met his brother at the crime scene and retrieved a revolver and personal belongings of Stuart's wife, Ibele. McMahen was accused of hiding that evidence that would have exposed the plot.

Attorneys for Matthew Stuart say the indictments should be dropped because he was improperly advised by attorney John Perenyi to come forward, and that prosecutors never informed him of his right against self-incrimination.

Authorities only discovered Charles Stuart's hoax when Matthew Stuart told prosecutors Jan. 3, 1990, that he helped stage what he thought was an insurance scam.

The next day, Charles Stuart plunged to his death from a bridge.

Testifying in Suffolk Superior Court, Matthew Stuart recounted how he met with Perenyi before telling prosecutors his story. Stuart said Perenyi assured him several times that he wouldn't be prosecuted.

"I thought he was capable of it, sure," Stuart said.

Washington unveils homeless exhibit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Smithsonian Institution, seeking to break the mold of museums as "idealized mansions," is opening an exhibit on homelessness that lets visitors lie in a crate, hear off an attacker and listen to a prostitute having sex.

The "Etiquette of the Under­caste," which opens Friday at the Smithsonian's Experimental Gallery, forces visitors to become "performers" and use the voices of real homeless people to narrate the adventure.

The journey takes visitors from the crib of a drug-addicted baby through dark alleys to jail, a park bench and the locked doors of the upper and middle classes.

Yes, says Smithsonian Secretary Robert McAdams says he expects some visitors to be taken aback by the exhibit's "rather harsh" language and avant-garde por­trayal of street life.

"Museums were thought to be showrooms of idealized mansions," but now are struggling to define a new relationship to the contemporary world, he said. "There are no guidelines as to how far you can go."

In one section of the tour, the visitor is asked to recline in a bed and listen to tape recording of a prostitute having sex with a john and being pressured to accept $200.

"Who is smarter, the girl who gets paid for it or the one who gives it away for free?" a woman's voice asks.

The project, which was funded by about $15,000 in private donations, combines the voices of homeless people in California as well as social workers, police, priests and bartenders into the soundtrack.

Democratic offer tax cuts
WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee began lining up Thursday behind a soak-the-rich tax cut for the middle class that also includes part of the capital-gains tax reduction demanded by President Bush.

"It's clear to us we have a document we'd be able to come together on," Rep. Jim Moody, D-Wis., told reporters after Democrats on the tax-writing panel ended a day of closed-door deliberations. "This is going to be a tax reduction for most Americans," especially those at middle income levels, he said.

"You can bet your life we'll be in the 92nd percentile of approval when we come out with this tax package," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the full committee. At the White House, reporters told Bush as he left the Oval Office that the Democrats had come up with a soak-the-rich plan. The president cringed in mock alarm, but made no comment.

His spokesman, Marlin Fitzwatter, said, "It's the same old tax and spend Democrats."

A committee recently determined the Church of Loretto will be renovated. The renovation, which has caused controversy in the Saint Mary's community, will include moving the pews and replacing stained glass windows with clear glass.

Ready for renovation

It can help you organize your notes, design your party flyer, and finish your class project before spring break.

The new Apple Macintosh Classic II computer makes it easy for you to juggle classes, activities, projects, and term papers—and still find time for what makes college life real life.

It's a complete and affordable Macintosh Classic system that's ready to help you get your work finished fast. It's a snap to set up and use. It has a powerful 68030 microprocessor which means you can run even the most sophisticated applications with ease. Among its many built-in capabilities is the internal Apple SuperDrive™ disk drive that reads from and writes to Macintosh and MS-DOS formatted disks—allowing you to exchange information easily with almost any other kind of computer.

If you already own a Macintosh Classic, and want the speed and flexibility of a Macintosh Classic II, ask us about an upgrade—it can be installed in a matter of minutes and it's affordable. To make more time for your personal life, get a Macintosh Classic II for your personal space. See us for a demonstration today, and while you're in, be sure to ask us for details about the Apple Computer Loan. It'll be time well spent.

Dear Editor:

It's a crowded world. That's a point that was driven home to me recently, when WVFI's quest for FM came to a grinding halt. It was not the Administration that put the plug in, nor was it the small but noisy public faction that opposed the idea. It was time. That's the bottom line. It was time, period. Put simply, there is no room for us on the dial.

The area between 87.5 and 91.1 is reserved for educational or "non-commercial" stations like WVFI, stations that provide a service public in the eyes of the Federal Communications Commission and cannot therefore accept any paid advertising. Only commercial stations are allowed to operate on frequencies above this range.

Even if we were to embark on the arduous and costly task of becoming a commercial station, we would not be legally allowed to broadcast, as the University currently possesses its limit of commercial licenses (television stations are considered in the count). Thus, we may apply for a frequency on the low end only, and an engineering study revealed that only one is currently open. Sadly enough, two stations are already vying for the privilege, and the cutoff date for new applications has passed.

The most logical question at this point is "What about all of the places on the dial where there's just static?" The fact is that there may already be stations operating on those frequencies, whose signals do not reach our campus... but they are there. For example, if an FM station can be tuned in just out of the eastern bounds of campus, that means that putting an ND/SMC station on that frequency would interfere with their signal. There is currently no place for a new FM station on this campus.

As I indicated previously, it is easy to misplace blame in the face of failure. I would like to address three fallacies that I have heard throughout the course of our endeavor. Firstly, we did not set our sights too high in trying to secure an FM license. The conversion to an AM broadcast station (widely regarded as "real AM," as opposed to the slightly more faulty carrier current system which characterizes WVFI at the present time) is not worth the investment. It did not take a meeting with the powers-that-be to determine that such a conversion would constitute "too much money for too little gain." That was a WVFI decision. The truth is that the cost would run almost as high as that for FM, and the reception would not be significantly improved.

Secondly, to correct a misconception that came to my attention during our student feedback program with the FREDline, WVFI does not run on tuition money. We receive our funding from the "general fund," and therefore should not be subject to attack by students who feel cheated because they do not appreciate the music we play. If you don't like it, feel free to turn it off. Just don't ask for your money back.

Finally, the Administration is not at fault here. To the surprise of many students (and even to the dismay of a few), they are guilt-free. If anything, Father Rocca and Joe Cassidy have been helpful to us because they encouraged us to pursue all of the possibilities for improvement, and showed their interest in the project. They demanded excellence and thorough research from us, and it is partially because of these demands that we were able to unlock so many doors in so short a time. We may not have won, but we left no stone unturned.

I will always be proud of the fact that WVFI tried so very hard to improve its standing in the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community. I have been told that we took our dream further than it had ever gone before.

I have several wonderful people to thank for dreaming with us. Our advisor, Adelle Lanan, and WNDU engineer George Molnar offered their time, expertise and encouragement. The WVFI executive board did a great deal of grunt work and brainstorming throughout the project, and they have been optimistic (as much as they could be, anyway) since April of 1991, when we took our first steps.

Student Government and HPC both passed resolutions in favor of the conversion, and several members of HPC took their interest in the project one step further by posting petitions in their dorms. The support that these signatures indicated was remarkable. But perhaps the most heart-warming evidence of a student body that proved itself anything but apathetic was the way in which I was constantly being approached by total strangers, who posed the one question, "So when is WVFI going FM?" I always tried to explain our most recent advances, but I apologize for the times when I was forced to respond with a factual "I don't know— we're working on it."

You were the stars of this project. When I hear that ND/SMC students just don't care, I remember the calls, the letters and the meetings I had with a devoted public, some of whom don't even care when we play, so long as we can be heard. So I encourage you to stay interested, and tune in as well as you can. One day we might get there, even if it means nailing a tarp down to the St. Joe's, with a microphone, a stack of records and a banner that reads "WVFI private radio." As a good friend once told me, "Kev, everyone needs a lost cause..."

"We never had a lot of money growing up. But my parents always said that if we were going to have a college education, we were going to pay for it. That奠定了我进入Notre Dame的基础, like that was the biggest thing in their lives."

With faces alive with love and admiration, this was just one of the many stories that Andrew Cutoфello had introduced me to the Notre Dame parent; someone I have come to realize was truly at the center of Notre Dame's greatness.

After seven years of coming out each semester to lecture and teach, I was now the one, I was still searching for words to respond to student questions about how the Notre Dame imprint was going to affect the rest of their lives. At first I thought, what a strange question. Wasn't it obvious? Look around. What a fantastic campus! What an outstanding faculty and administration. What a history to a history of greatness...Fr. Sorin, Fr. Resburch, Rockne, Fr. Biever, the O'Malley's! Wasn't it all quite obvious?

But the more I thought, what became obvious was that while these current and historic gifts served, they would never be the stage for this generation's Notre Dame, they could only partially be used for the next.

The next insight came in class. I posed the question this way: "Suppose you get up tomorrow morning and discover all the buildings and facilties are gone, somehow disappeared. The air in front of you, that held your classes, the church where you prayed; even the very air. What do you do?"

I asked, biting into a corn muffin.

"People are basically smart," George reasoned. "And so they tend to question things. Now the college and corporate people, the high-salary people don't want a lot of questions asked. So they invented and kind of people to send people off on a wild-goose chase."

Jocelyn had just come back from asking the guitar player of all people, Bob Dylan, the question, "What if Phil Ochs is alive while wondering why there are homeless people when you've got these other people buying yachts with their interest money?

"Exactly," George said. "That's the very haunting conspiracy theory. I offered, breaking an important rule of etiquette by talking with my mouth full of food, 'It's the exact opposite of what George is saying. Most of your major corporations don't want to show how people with power are the ones ruling this country. That's why they used the Olympic surprise theory. A handful of power brokers reigning over the Congress and the authorities don't want us to know about it,' I concluded, shrugging. "So what do you think? Could it be the implications of Dex's theory."

Jocelyn asked, "George, what do you think?"

"Well," George mused, "I agree that most conspiracy theories are nothing but derelicts of our supposedly democratic way of life. I just don't think we've sunk as low."

"What may be true," Dex admitted, applauding the guitar player, who had just finished a potable version of the Dead Kennedy's "Stars and Stripes of Corruption."

"I'll tell you what I think," Jocelyn said. "I think that Americans believe in conspiracy theories because they're the legitimating narratives of our postmodern culture.

"What do you mean?" George asked.

Jocelyn gulped down the remnants of his espresso. "Conspiracy theories are like bedtime stories. They comfort us, and we want to hear them over and over again."

"But most people don't really believe in them," George put in. "Maybe they just feel it's important that people really believe what Oliver Stone is telling them for that matter."

"I think," Jocelyn said, "they're fascinated by grizzly murder trials," George suggested.

"Could be," Jocelyn agreed. "But Dex is right—we have to take conspiracy theories seriously. When the psychic role might be in our collective unconscious, they do invite us to challenge the ideology of American democratic politics. And that's important. On the other hand, it's like, okay, the George—conspiracy theories can simply distract us. They don't have to be really involved politically when we're not."

The guitar player was starting her second set. Dex and George got up to get us some coffee. When we were alone, I gave Jocelyn a conspiratorial look.

"Tell me what you think," Jocelyn said, "I guess I think Elvis is alive too."

By ANNA MARIE TABOR
Saint Mary’s Accent Editor

Jessica was warned.

When she arrived at Notre Dame, upperclasswomen told her to stay away from football players. “I’d never contemplated dating someone of a different race,” she says. Jessica met Chris in the beginning of August, but it wasn’t until the graffiti dance that they had a conversation.

“We were friends for a couple months,” Jessica explains. “I never thought about it (a romantic relationship). I was in a relationship with someone at home.” They took walks together, talked in the 24-hour lounge, and wished each other luck before their respective sporting events. They ran into each other at the bars when they were with their friends.

After the Purdue game, Chris asked Jessica to go out with him. After their date, Chris had to make sure Jessica knew what she was getting into. In the parading of black boyfriend, Cyrus, who is white, has a memory of him saying, “I have to ask you a question. Do you realize I’m half black?”

Interracial relationships are not a principal issue on campus, according to Iris Outlaw, director of the Office of Minority Affairs. College information books tend to focus on activities and clubs available to students, not on the relationships.

Outlaw recognizes that interracial dating is a controversial subject in our society and says that it “leads to weakening between male/female relations within races.” With the limited number of minorities on campus, it is inevitable that dating outside of one’s race is going to occur, Outlaw says. She says “to be with whoever is going to treat you right.”

Jessica “consider[s] herself lucky.” She decided the best way to let her parents know about her relationship with Chris was to introduce him to them. Her mother met Chris first and “fell in love with him.” Although her father was initially against his daughter dating any football player, after spending time with Chris, he “complemented him (Chris) and said he had a good head on his shoulders,” Jessica recalls.

Not all couples are readily accepted. Since his sophomore year in high school, Jose could not pick up his girlfriend, Monica, from her house. “She was forbidden to see me,” Jose says. “As far as her parents knew, we were never going out.” They had been seeing each other off and on during vacations, and only recently broke up before his senior year at Notre Dame.

Jose is Hispanic and his ex-girlfriend is white. Their mutual friends “weren’t affected by the relationship,” but Jose has yet to speak to Monica’s parents. Jose says, “It’s okay to be friends, but it’s different when it’s coming close to home,” when describing how Monica’s parents accepted her Hispanic male friends.

Tina’s parents ignore her partner as well. They know Chris and like him very much, but when it comes to her own black boyfriend, Cyrus, it is a weak spot in their family relationship, to say the least.

“They threatened to take me out of school,” she relates. Her parents knew about their friendship and warned Tina not to let it evolve into romance when she brought up the idea.

Cyrus and Tina have been dating for a year, and when Chris ever came down to it, I couldn’t have both (family and Cyrus),” she says. She prefers not to look that far ahead and states simply, “We’re going to keep going out until we stop liking each other.”

Acceptance from both family and friends has to do with how the individuals involved are raised. Outlaw says. Friendships are usually okay until they turn serious, the automatic question is “What about the children?” If forced to make a generalization, Outlaw says “acceptance is easier for people of color. It might be due to how we’re raised, to judge based on qualities.” The tendency for people to date outside their race is weakened between male/female relationships within races.”

For Willie, dating someone of another race is not novel. He says the first woman of color he went out with was in kindergarten or the first grade, so he has never had reservations about dating them. “It’s hard enough to find someone you like without putting restrictions on who you can like,” he says.

The very term “interracial dating” sounds unusual to Willie and he prefers to consider his dates in terms of individuality, not race. At home in Fort Wayne, Ind., he didn’t encounter any problems with his family, friends, or girlfriends. In college, it’s been a different story.

“ND is the kind of place where they won’t say things to your face, they’ll say them behind your back,” Willie says, recalling a particular incident. During his

World War II invades daily life at Notre Dame

By LISA EATON
Managing Editor

"In other words, the purpose of Notre Dame is to teach men not only how to make a living, but also how to live... Complementing this philosophical background is a tradition of patriotism of which we are equally proud... In one last peace, Notre Dame has always contributed without reserve to causes best suited to furthering American democracy... When the United States entered World War I, Notre Dame was celebrating her Diamond Jubilee, and World War II joined us on the very eve of our Centenary Year. In each instance, Notre Dame set aside its student body and faculty members to devote all her facilities to her patriotic duty."

-U. S. President Fr. J. Hugh O'Donnell in an address marking this philosophical Diamond Jubilee, and World Dame was celebrating her surprise to faculty and order to devote all her equally jealous. In war, as in background is a tradition of instance, Notre Dame set aside of our Centenary Year. In each entered World War I, Notre Dame set aside W orld War I, Notre Dame set aside Notre Dame facilities to the military 1943. By the fall of 1942, military students at Notre Dame outnumbered civilian students.

would involve Notre Dame and its students in the war effort over the next six years. Prior to the attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941, the Notre Dame campus consisted of 3,300 undergraduate, graduate and law students who received instruction from 313 lay and religious faculty members. The general attitude at Notre Dame, in respect to the war, was one of detached interest. John Gilligan, '43, said in "Reflections in the Dome," "The week that I came to Notre Dame as a freshman in September of 1939, France and England declared war on Germany. And no one at that time, neither my friends, nor my parents, nor my teachers, appeared to grasp the significance of what had happened and what was about to happen."

"Colonel McCormick and the Chicago Tribune reassured us daily that the war in Europe was no concern of ours, and that we should steadfastly keep America First. My memory of those first months at Notre Dame is not that we were far removed from the real world and the war... but rather that the war was simply unreal..." said Gilligan.

In November, 1940, Father J. Hugh O'Donnell (acting as president for O'I'lla until 1941 when he officially was named to the office) offered Notre Dame's facilities to the military because American involvement in the European war seemed to be only a matter of time. The Army turned down the offer due in large part to a shortage of officers in the Navy, however, jumped to the offer.

The first units of Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps (NROTC) was installed at Notre Dame in September, 1941. The 165 NROTC students at Notre Dame in the fall of 1941 comprised less than 10 percent of the total student body, but that would not last long. It was often said by visitors to the University that, "The set-up at Notre Dame is the nearest approach to the Naval Academy at Annapolis."

O'Donnell agreed to grant the Navy access to the University's housing, dining, recreational, laundry and administrative facilities. It was also agreed that Notre Dame would help in the financing and construction of the Naval Drill Hall and a classroom and office building for the use of NROTC and V-7 units.

When the attack on Pearl Harbor occurred on Dec. 7, 1941, the entire attitude of the University changed. Suddenly, the war was taken very seriously by everyone. "Our lives could hardly have been changed more abruptly if the bombs which dismembered the Arizona and her sister ships had hit our own Administration Building and smashed the Golden Dome to 500 WAR / page 2.
The mosaic for the Hesburgh Library was revealed to members of the Notre Dame Administration before being placed on the south side of the building on May 7, 1964. The blessing Mass was celebrated by Father Theodore Hesburgh, President of Notre Dame University, with the presence of the board of trustees and other Notre Dame dignitaries. The mosaic was designed by Claude Bissell, an American artist known for his work in religious and educational contexts. It features the Blessed Mother blessing us as "with her wonderful Child." The mosaic was dedicated on May 7, 1964, approximately 5,000 people were in attendance.

Notre Dame's commitment to education and research has been a hallmark of its 150-year history, and this dedication ceremony is a fitting celebration of the university's achievements and future promise.

In the annals of Notre Dame sports history, Jan. 31, 1954 will be remembered as the end of one of the most successful eras in all of sports, for it was on that day that Frank Leahy announced his resignation as head football coach of the Fighting Irish.

In a time in which the world was at odds, Notre Dame football experienced some of its greatest seasons under the guidance and leadership of Leahy. Leahy, a 1931 graduate of Notre Dame and a tackle on Knute Rockne's last three Irish squads, returned to his alma mater to coach in 1941.

After two seasons as head coach of Boston College he compiled a 20-2 record, capping his tenure off with a victory in the 1941 Sugar Bowl. His accomplishments at Notre Dame were to be far more illustrious.

It was Rockne who played the prominent role in starting Leahy's career in coaching. Following a knee operation performed at Rockne's suggestion at the Mayo Clinic, Leahy spent time rehabilitating with Rockne, who was at the Clinic for treatment on his leg, rehabilitating with Rockne, who was at the Mayo Clinic, Leahy spent time rehabilitating with Rockne, who was at the Clinic for treatment on his leg, rehabilitating with Rockne, who was at the Mayo Clinic, Leahy spent time rehabilitating with Rockne, who was at the Mayo Clinic, Leahy spent time rehabilitating with Rockne, who was at the Mayo Clinic.

During this time, Leahy spent countless hours talking football with Rockne, gaining immeasurable knowledge from one of the greatest coaches in history and deciding on coaching as a career.

Upon returning to Notre Dame, Rockne managed to secure a job for Leahy at Georgetown. From there Leahy went to Michigan State and Fordham before gaining a head coaching position at B.C. His return to Notre Dame brought Leahy full circle, back to fill the shoes of the man who taught him all the finer aspects of coaching.

From the opening day of his first spring practice in March, 1941, success seemed destined to walk hand-in-hand with Leahy. A swarm of reporters was on hand to cover the early warm-ups, the beginning of a spotlight that would follow Leahy's career at Notre Dame, improving in intensity with each passing year.

In his rookie season Leahy guided the Irish to an 8-0-1 mark. A 0-0 tie with Army being the only flaw to the season. The Irish finished that season ranked third in the country by the Associated Press, and Leahy was named the American Football Coaches Association Coach of the Year. It would be the first in a long list of accomplishments for the coach and his team.

Amid the disruption of World War II, Leahy's 1942 squad slipped to 7-2-2, a respectable season for most schools, but given the legacy of Notre Dame, it was a setback from the previous year. However, it was good enough for a sixth-place final ranking upon which Leahy would improve the following season.

With remarkable efficiency, the Irish obliterated their first eight opponents during the 1943 campaign, ousting their adversaries by a 312-37 margin and recording four shutouts. Ranked number one, the Irish faced their first real test in the ninth week, facing Iowa Pre-Flight, the number one team in the country.

Playing at home, the Irish struggled in a hard-fought contest, but hung on to escape with a 14-13 victory and their ranking intact. In the season's final contest, the Irish claimed a 14-13 lead against Great Lakes with 60 seconds remaining, but a long pass play for a score doomed the team to the losing end of a 19-14 score. Even with the loss, the 9-1 Irish captured Leahy's first national championship.

In 1944, Leahy was commissioned in the Navy, a post to which he devoted two years. He was stationed at the Pacific Submarine Command as a rehabilitation officer, where he remained for ten months during the World War II. From there, he returned to the United States, this time assuming the position of battalion officer at the St. Mary's navy pre-flight school.

In November, 1945, one of the greatest coaches in the country was discharged from the Navy with the rank of lieutenant, and returned to the university he had departed from over a year earlier. During Leahy's absence, the Irish recorded 8-2 and 7-2-1 seasons, respectively, each time finishing the season ranked ninth.

From 1946-49, Leahy's squads would compile one of the greatest five-year records in the history of college football, sporting a 39-game unbeaten streak that would stretch into the first game of the 1950 season.

To start things off, the Irish went 8-0-1 in 1945, with a 0-0 tie again coming against Army. Army was coming off consecutive national championship seasons, but the tandem of Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis, both of whom would win Heisman trophies, could not punch the ball into the endzone before a capacity crowd at Yankee Stadium in New York.

In outscoring its opponents by an astonishing 271-24 and recording five shutouts, the Irish claimed their second national title of the decade for Leahy. 1947 produced more of the same results, with an unbeaten season (9-0) and a second-consecutive national championship for Notre Dame.

Riding a 17-game unbeaten streak, the Irish were not about to rest on their laurels. Leahy guided the 1948 squad to a 9-0-1 record, suffering a season-ending tie at USC, 14-14.

The team finished second to Michi gan that year, but reclaimed the top spot in the poll the following season going 10-0 and winning the national title for the third time in four years. It was the fourth AP title for Leahy and the Irish in the 1940s, marking the end of a decade of Irish dominance.

The 1950s started out slowly for Leahy, with the Irish struggling to a 4-4-1 record in 1950 and following it with consecutive 7-2-1 seasons. The 1952 mark was good enough for a third-place AP finish.

In 1953, which would be Leahy's final season as head coach, the resurgent Irish pounded their way to a 9-0-1 mark, finishing second in the AP and UPI polls, but first in all others, giving Leahy five national titles for his career.

The lone tie came in another classic Irish contest, this time against Iowa, as the Irish staged a remarkable comeback, scoring with six seconds left in the game to force the 14-14 deadlock.

Leahy retired as one of the most successful coaches in college football history. He finished his career win 87 wins, 11 losses, and nine ties, good for an 88.5 winning percentage. His teams finished atop various polls five times, and compiled a 29-2-1 record in games in which they were ranked number one.

Leahy was selected to the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame in 1970. Memoirs of the successors of his teams can be found in Heritage Hall of the JACC, just a few reminders of the tremendous legacy that Frank Leahy left at Notre Dame.
Students raise questions about interracial relationships

We've got Jungle Fever. We're in love. She's got black boy crazy. He's got white girl crazy. There's no saying maybe. We're in love.

—Stevie Wonder, "Jungle Fever"

ike Lee's movie "Jungle Fever," brought to light the problems that modern society has with the issue of interracial dating. Despite attempts at public integration. Even on a day like today, a holiday celebrating love—some ND students are resistant to interracial relationships. According to senior Stacey Jackson, "If two people are mature and really care about one another, then I don't have a problem with" interracial relationships. In general, however, "I don't see that happening on campus." I see them approaching one another out of a curiosity which is based on stereotypes. That's not good, "she says.

Senior Holly heard also does not see a problem with interracial romantic relationships, but she does feel that different races coming together places a burden on the relationship. As an African-American who has dated a white man, Holly felt that her relationship did not work because she wouldn't deal with the pressure (from her family). "I was just on my list, and I didn't want that," says Heard. Because of her unfavorable experiences with interracial relationships, "I'm more wary of it," she remarks.

Jackson felt that she would find it hard to date interracially. "I would resist [such a marriage] because the different male role models in my life are black males," she says. "I don't think I would look anywhere in my search for a mate." According to Heard, from a society view, she can see problems that the African-American community would have with interracial dating on campus. The shortage of available African-American marriageable males makes it understandable why African-American women would view interracial relationships as intimidating. "I'm more open to it," says Heard.

When the Reverend William Sloane Coffin, formerly at Yale as the University Chaplain and presently a peace activist, was.here, a few liberal rabbis in the Mayor's office would be building and put on trial God, the father of the Jews. This was the first time in history that God was put on trial.

Tina considers children a social phenomenon. "When they are weaned on liberal values, they will make rational decisions that save them from using his free will, or saving him from the consequences of his folly? Maybe God was the first one to feel anger over the senseless waste of a human life.

Christians would be less docile in their acceptance of hate, if they were reared in love and kindness, tinia says. "I'm not a parent so I don't know what I'd do if I were you. SMC hoops tips Grace, 64-63

By CHRIS BACON
SMC Sports Writer

Cutting it close has become a habit for the Saint Mary's basketball (6-8) team. Stretching their win streak to three last night, the Belles narrowly fend off Grace College (14-8) in the last minute to win 63-62.

The win against Grace College is the third in a row for Saint Mary's. The Belles escaped Grace two years ago in Warsaw 61-59. Last season, the Belles trounced their visitors 82-64. The win also marks the third consecutive victory for the Belles. The Belles came off of big last minute wins against Saint Francis College and Bethel College. Although three may not sound like much, for the struggling Belles squad, this marks the beginning of a turnaround, and hopes for post season play.

Senior Janet Libbing led the game with 16 points and 13 rebounds. Senior forward Catherine Restovich, who is one of her best overall performers, with 12 points and 10 rebounds. "Catherine played a solid game," commented Belles assistant coach JoAnne Nester. "It really was one of her best all around games."

Julie Snyder, center, added 11 points and eight rebounds. One key element in last night's win was the efforts of freshman Kathleen Gerigk. Gerigk adding four points and five rebounds to the Belles totals, shut down Grace's lead point-guard Janice Harp. Harp stacked up 22 points against Grace rivals Believeth Ball. But last night, Gerigk pressured the Grace ball handler, limiting her just to one basket from the field.

"She shows a lot of promise," added Nester. "They put a lot of pressure on her. She played a heads up smart, aggressive game."

With Harp shut down, Grace turned to Cheryl Myers for offensive contributions. Myers tallied 22 points and 15 rebounds. Nicole Ryman added another 10 points in the team's efforts. But the efforts of these two players was not enough to give Grace the last minute steal.

Grace showed strength early in the game, jumping to a 6-0 lead. But the Belles regained their fast breaking run and gun offense and stole the lead. The Belles maintained their lead for the remainder of the game. At the half, the Belles led 31-26.

"We really put the run and gun in action. They got tired, so we ran all the more. We took it to them and won," explained Snyder.

Outrunning their hosts, the Belles maintained their lead. Saint Mary’s defensive pressure forced Grace to shoot about 30 percent from the field. Saint Mary's seemed to have sealed the victory in the last few minutes. Costly fouls, however, brought Grace to the line four times in the last minute. But the Belles were better rested and held on for their third victory against Grace.

"It was really nice that when it came to a tense moment, we got good contributions from all the player," added Nester.

Wimbledon and three U.S. Open doubles titles during his career, also likely play at number two, with Mayer at three and Dibley at four.

One of the more interesting matches of the day could come at number one doubles. Notre Dame's team of DiLucia and Chuck Coleman may face off against 1979 French Open titleist Pfister and Mayer.

DiLucia is anxious to see how the Irish fare against the Legends. "They've been out there. They've match-tough, they're experienced and they're good players," said DiLucia. "I think this is just a fun event. We're supposed to go out and have a good time."

According to Bower, the Legends still play the game of the wooden racquet, using finesse, which relies more on skill than on power.

"I am sure that they (Legends) will play a more percentage-oriented game," said Bower. "And I am sure that they are also capable of doing some things that we don't see at the college level."

One of the things that Bower's team has not seen against any college competition is the frightening speed of Dibley's serve. Dibley holds the world record with a 148 mph serve. In comparison, Boris Becker's serve tops out at under 130 mph.

This event will give the Notre Dame and South Bend communities an opportunity to see some outstanding tennis players play some of the biggest names in the game.

"The nice thing about it is that you have the camera crews out from different television stations, showing an interest in Notre Dame tennis," said Bower. "Growing up in South Bend, you never had that before."

Baylor likes the event to attending a concert by a musical maestro or a play with an internationally renowned actor.

"This is a tremendous opportunity as a spectator," said Baylor. "You're going to see some of the people who are absolutely very well-known professionally around the world, who could sell you five dollars to see Pavarotti? You spend six bucks to see a movie."

The matches will begin at 1:30 p.m. Saturday. Student tickets are $5. General admission costs $7, and court side seats sell for $25.
SUMMER SESSION 1992 COURSE LIST

The 1992 summer session will begin on Tuesday, June 23 (enrollment) and end on Wednesday, August 5 (final exams). Some courses — primarily in science, mathematics and languages — will begin and end before or after these dates. The summer session Bulletin will contain complete schedule information. The Bulletin will be available at the Summer Session Office (212 Main Building) beginning on Friday, February 14.

Notre Dame continuing students — undergraduate and graduate students in residence during the spring semester of 1992 who are eligible to return in the fall — must register for summer courses and pay tuition by Friday, June 26. Instructions for use of DART to register for summer and PIN (personal identification number) will be sent to all continuing students in mid-February. Course call numbers, along with all other course information, will be published in the summer session Bulletin.

DART will be available for summer registration from March 2 to 27 and from April 27 to June 26. Students may register or make schedule changes whenever they choose during these periods; no appointment times are necessary. Students may register for summer session courses at any time up to the first day of the course. Students who decide to register after DART closes on Friday, June 26 must complete the standard summer session application/course selection form.

Suited conditions and non-air conditioned housing and (optional) summer meal plans will be available. Forms for these services may be obtained at the Summer Session Office at any time during the spring semester.

Tuition for the summer session of 1992 will be $122 per credit hour plus a $25 general fee.

security had no file of any kind on a Mr. Bill Anderson Jr.

"We do a records check when they call, but nobody would talk to me," said Rakow concerning the records check ordered by BeSports which allegedly turned up Anderson's 1981 felony in Cincinnati.

Rakow indicated, however, that the file was composed of files belonging to the Mixshaw police department and the Cincinnati police department concerning Anderson. Because the file was not in a folder, Rakow was not at liberty to release them.

The Mixshaw police department was then contacted, and Assistant Chief for Records Barnett Berriff authorized Notre Dame assistant director of Security Chuck Hurley to release the file. The report states that Bill Doyle Anderson was hired in 1991 by the Mixshaw, which is actually J. Riggs, in the University Park Mall. Anderson was later promoted within the store, according to the report.

The report states that the store began losing money through "shirks on returns," at the time of the incident. The district manager was contacted, and an interview was scheduled for March 5, 1990. Anderson was later accused by management of accepting items for return without receipts.

Anderson "gave the management of Riggs's a written confession when they called him in on the incident. He is claiming that it was his responsibility for only $1,400 missing. He also told them that other people were stealing the merchandise (sic)."...the report said.

Anderson said the incident was partially motivated by racist attitudes by store management.

"At that time, I was authorized to handle returns of merchandise, with or without receipt," said Anderson. "I let black people return items without receipts because the white managers would do that for white people but not for black people. At the time, I did not think what I was doing was wrong.

"The whole store had to sign that statement—that was the district manager told me," said Anderson, "so I signed it. It was after Christmastime and we had done a lot of returns, so when they asked me how much money I was responsible for, I just said $3,400 off the top of my head."

Anderson supported the statement in the report noting that the Mixshaw police had contacted the University.

He went on, however, to alleviate that he and Rich O'Leary (assistant director of BeSports) were aware of the Mixshaw incident in March of 1990, and that he was never mentioned in connection with his dismissal.

"Tom Kelly and I talked to the Mixshaw police department together," said Anderson. "Because in March 1990, Riggs had called Tom and told him that I had been arrested for embezzlement. Tom told me not to worry because of this, and I said 'Well, our investigation is still ongoing.'"

"I finished coaching that whole year. Tom knew about this. I even told my team about this. I quit the job at Riggs—I was not fine—for, I did not like being told to keep an eye on everyone who came in the door."

When called for comment on the Riggs incident, Kelly refused to comment.

Dave Bose, vice-president and captain of the men's volleyball club, stated that Anderson did inform him and Mike Flecker of the Riggs incident.

"Bill was getting mad at some of the workers at Riggs," said Bose. "He said that he couldn't understand the accusations. He said that he was a scapegoat for lazy workers."

Despite the fact that there was not an attorney present when Anderson signed the confession in question, he alleges that the public defender assigned to his case told him that he had signed it and must live with the fact.

Anderson further stated that he plead guilty because he did not have enough money to fight the case, and that he was extremely displeased with the performance of his public defender.

Hurley further stated that Anderson was dismissed by O'Leary.

"When I was dismissed in January of 1991, O'Leary said that there was a discrepancy with my application concerning a robbery in Cincinnati in 1981," said Anderson. "And I told him that it was not a robbery. He knew about the Riggs incident, but he never mentioned it to me when dismissed by O'Leary."

"Bill was getting mad at some of the workers at Riggs," said Bose. "He said that he couldn't understand the accusations. He said that he was a scapegoat for lazy workers."

"I want everyone to know that my name is not beyond reproach," said Anderson. "They act like these hollow-things on a pedestal, but they are just like every other individual in this country. I'm not talking about the University as a whole, but there are certain individuals here. I just feel that I was wronged and I haven't been given a direct explanation why."

behind Neal Purdon’ s hat trick. Kent State, however, The second game saw the Notre Dame offense awake from its slumber. The Irish power play was the key, as they converted on four of five attempts in a 7-5 Irish victory. The scoring was led by Sterling Black’s two goals, while five other players added a goal.

The Flashes are currently on a six game winning streak, including a sweep of leading independent Alaska-Fairbanks. The Irish and Kent State are two of the four teams that are still competing for a spot in the season-ending independent tournament in Alaska.

The Flashes, (12-12-2), are led in scoring by Claude Martin’s 31 points. Between the pipes for the Flashes are Mario Lacaze and Scott Shaw. The duo combined for 59 saves and a victory in an 8-7 overtime win against Alaska-Fairbanks. Notre Dame leads the overall series 11-4-3, with eight wins behind Neal Purdon’ s hat trick.

The first 11 years of her life on spring boards and balance beams learning flips and front walk-overs while other kids her age were still trying to master the somersault. Being a gymnast was evidently not to be her calling in life, though, because Golksi broke her arm at age 12. Dissatisfied and bored, Golksi attended one of her best friend’s swim meets and immediately took an interest in the sport.

Some 20 years later Golksi is one of the most hailed Saint Mary’s swim team members. Golksi swam competitively throughout her high school years. Knowing she wanted to continue swimming, Golksi searched for a school with a competing swim team led by a coach who gives equal attention to all swimmers, good or not so good. Lucky for Golksi, she found Saint Mary’s College.

or, should we say lucky for Saint Mary’s?

- Golksi arrived in the fall of ’86 as one of three first-ever Saint Mary’s swim team recruits. Her debut was met by an “unrehearsed” team headed by a very qualified, yet first time coach at Saint Mary’s.

- The Belles have come a long way since 1968 and this is due in large part to Golksi’s contributions to the team. The team needed some help. And being excited freshmen, we were able to provide that needed leadership and drive,” said Golksi.

“Our leadership and motivational skills as freshman were so appreciated that as sophomores we were promoted to captains.”

But being at the top is not always what it’s cracked up to be. There is the pressure of having to lead without ever being led. And there is also the pressure of knowing that there are juniors and seniors on the team who should have been nominated captain just because of seniority. “It’s like having to be a sophomore R.A. in a senior section,” as Golksi puts it.

In addition to these strains, being involved in any extracurricular activity demands much time and “keeping it all together” adds to the stress.

“I’m very caught up in my major right now. As a nursing major my day starts before 5:00 a.m. when I have to be at clinicals. I have a full day of classes straight through dinner and then to have to motivate myself as well as the rest of the team for practice can be very trying,” said Golksi.

Golksi also commented on how she couldn’t have made it through these last four years without the support of co-captain, Carrie Cannizzaro.

“Shes the one who kept me going when I didn’t think I could keep going,” said Golksi. “We had to keep telling ourselves ‘We’re going for this watch’ and that point was given to fourth year Saint Mary’s athlete.”

Most avid Saint Mary’s swim team followers know Golksi as a great long distance free-styler. At this point, she is “very close” to breaking school records in the 500, 1000 and the 1650 free, the latter being a 66 lap swim. Some may even remember her as one of last year’s great sprinters. But swimming is not her forte. No, Golksi has also gotten her proverbial feet wet as a diver.

“Yes, it’s true, I tried diving my junior year. It was important to me to be versatile for the team; I could swim or dive if needed,” she said.

Golksi had some background in diving; she was in a summer league but without a coach. Curious as to how she could do with the aid of a diving coach, being a diver for the Belles had a certain appeal.

“Also,” Golksi shyly conceded, “my times were getting worse and I was struggling and frustrated. Diving was a good excuse to help out the team while still pleasing everyone.”

Half way through the season, Golksi decided to switch back to just swimming. Besides the fact that she is afraid of heights, Golksi realized she had only one year left to accomplish her remaining swimming goals and in which to “go out in

Hockey travels to Kent St.

The Notre Dame men’s hockey team travels to Kent State for a two game series this weekend.

The Irish, (8-14-1), will try to halt a four game losing streak when they face off with the Golden Flashes on Friday.

The journey to Kent, Ohio, will complete the four game series between the two squads. The Irish split with the Golden Flashes on Friday.

The Notre Dame offense did not show up for the first game, scoring only one goal for the game. Kent State, however, still competing for a spot in the season-ending independent tournament in Alaska.

The Notre Dame offense did not show up for the first game, scoring only one goal for the game. Kent State, however, still competing for a spot in the season-ending independent tournament in Alaska.
The indoor track season continues this weekend as the men’s and women’s teams travel to different meets. The men are headed to Iowa City, IA for the Central Collegiate Championships, while the women take their running shoes to West Lafayette for the Purdue Invitational.

The men hope to improve on last year’s fourth place finish in the 66th running of the Central meet. Michigan teams dominated the top spots with Eastern taking top honors, University of Michigan in second, and Western in fifth. Also finishing in the top ten were Purdue (finished second), University of Iowa, and Wisconsin.

This year, in addition to traditional track powerhouse, Eastern Michigan, Iowa, and Purdue, Michigan State, which is having an outstanding year, will be represented at the meet. Notre Dame is looking to improve on last year’s performance despite missing some notables from last year’s event. Gone are Raghib “Rocket” Ismail, who won the 55-meter dash, and Ryan Cahill, who placed second in the 5,000-meters, to name two.

“Our goal is to do better (than last year),” said Notre Dame coach Joe Piane. “Last year, we had a luxury in Rocket because we knew before we even got on the bus that he could win the 55. But there are some areas where we can actually score some points.”

Rocket may be gone, but several runners remain who could do well for the Irish in the 55. Sophomore Willie Clark finished second to Rocket in the event last year and freshman sprite Mike Miller has also been running well this year. Also in the sprinters, senior Rod Smith will try to defend his victory in the 200-meter dash.

The returning distance core should be a big asset to Notre Dame. Returning for the Irish are junior John Coyle and sophomore Mike McWilliams, both of whom will compete in the 5,000. Senior Pat Kearns and junior Nick Radkewich will represent Notre Dame in the 3,000, while senior co-captain Brian Peppard will try to improve on his finish in the 1,000. The Irish should also score some points in the field events with the help of sophomore Jim Flanagan, senior co-captain Ryan Mihalko, and freshman Dan Grenough. Flanagan and Mihalko finished third and tenth respectively in the shot put, while Grenough has been impressive in the 55. Sophomore Willie Clark could do well for the Irish in the 55-meter dash.

Leading the way will be a handful of returning upperclassmen including junior hurler Karen Harris, sophomore sprinters Latrice Waters and Kristin Stovall, and sophomore middle distance Laura Gayer. Harris finished third in the shot put, Waters finished fifth in the 55-meter dash, Stovall finished sixth in the 400-meter run, and Gayer finished tenth in the 600.

Part of Piane’s “quantum leap” will be the contributions of several freshmen. Already proven they can perform in big meets, the freshmen are expected to continue improving.

Sprinter Monica Cox, middle distance Becky Allieri, and distance runners Kala Boulware, Eva Flood, Stephanie Jensen, and Kristi Kramer have scored points for the Irish in the Meyo Invitational and the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Championships. In the field events, Lisa Junck and Susan Maher should also be assets for Notre Dame.
Baguer fences for perfection

By JONATHAN JENSEN

For most collegiate fencers, an undefeated season and a national championship would be the ultimate achievement.

But for Notre Dame senior Ed Baguer, his 30-0 record is only a start, and even though he is such a rarity in the NCAA, he finds great satisfaction in his performance.

You see, fencing for the team and keeping a team-oriented attitude is of the utmost importance to Baguer.

"Winning for yourself is great," says Baguer, "but it's even better to win and make everyone else on the team feel great, especially the guys who don't compete but work in practice every day to make you better."

Irish head coach Mike DeCicco has coached hundreds of athletes during his 30-year tenure at Notre Dame, and even he gets the feeling that fencers like Ed Baguer just don't come along too often.

"He has given me far more of himself to his teammates," notes DeCicco, "than next year they're really going to wish he was still on the team."

Baguer has had an especially important influence on the younger fencers on the team. "In my opinion, it's like having another sabre coach," says DeCicco.

In addition to the leadership and emotional support he has provided, Baguer has also placed himself within the elite ranks of Notre Dame fencers with his individual achievements.

In four years he has compiled an astounding 100-0 (1.000) record, good enough for third place on the all-time Notre Dame career winning percentage list. Also, this season's 30-0 record is the best Irish sabre record since two-time national champion Mike Sullivan's 41-0 slate in 1978.

Earlier this season, Baguer was chosen to compete for the U.S. Olympic team in Portland. Although he didn't make the team, he says he has a good shot to represent the U.S. in the 1996 games in Atlanta.

Right now Baguer is shooting for the NCAA Championships, in the hope that he can place and capture his first medal. "Ed is ready to make a move at the NCAA level," says Coach DeCicco, "and I think he is All-American material right now."

However, in the early on, all didn't come easy for Baguer. He came to Notre Dame as the U.S. Junior National Sabre Champion, and despite two consecutive 20-win seasons in his first two campaigns, Baguer felt he was not fencing as well as he could and was not completely comfortable.

So he took three months off, and was able to clear his head and reduce the pressure he was putting on himself.

When he returned, he compiled a 29-1 record his junior year and finished fifth among top American fencers in the U.S. Nationals. It seemed he was finally breaking out of the shadows of four-time Irish sabre champion Lazar Nowoselski, who graduated last year with a 97-2 career record, and his older brother, current ND senior and three-time sabre captain, Chris Baguer.

Nowoselski and the older Baguer, who took up fencing three weeks after his brother, have always given him a considerable amount of competition and inspired Baguer to work harder.

"I always used Leszek as a benchmark," says Baguer, "And Chris and I, we've always tried to out-do each other."

Women's hoops breaks out!

After Notre Dame had finished polishing off its 78-62 victory over Evansville in women's basketball last night, everyone had one word on their lips: relaxed.

"We were loose, relaxed, and confident tonight," said Irish coach Muffet McGraw. "It was a team effort for the first time since the Detroit game (two weeks ago).

"Everybody just calmed down and relaxed," said forward Sherri Oslosky, who chipped in eight points and three assists in 32 minutes of action. "We knew what had to be done, and we did it."

It was a balanced attack for Notre Dame (7-14, 4-4), which had six players who scored eight or more points—including four in double figures, led by senior Margaret Nowlin's 17 points. More importantly, Nowlin helped stymie Evansville's top Ace, Christy Greis. The Irish held Greis to just half her season average, as she struggled to seven points on three-of-nine shooting.

"Margaret did a super job keeping her off the boards," said McGraw, "and when she got the ball, to work her to run the floor and not block her to roam.

"I think Coquese and Kara (Leary) play well together," added McGraw. "Kara allows her to run the floor and not worry about running the offense, and I think that helps her game."

However, after the Irish were comfortably ahead, their relaxed attitude allowed the Aces to come back and make it interesting down the stretch. Evansville (10-11, 4-4) hit five three-pointers in the last 12 minutes, rallying to within eight points, 70-62, with 1:40 left on Krista Blunk's third three of the night.

But after an ND timeout, the Irish were able to break the Aces' press easily, putting the game out of reach for good by scoring the last eight points of the game on layups.

"This game was very similar to two or three other performances we've had this year where we bury ourselves and don't play good basketball until the game is beyond salvage," said Aces' coach Bill Barnett. "The amazing thing was that this was still a winnable game for us near the end, and if we make a couple of plays, the game all of a sudden is real tight.

"But instead, we make the same type of mental errors that led us to our 26-point deficit. Winners make plays; obviously, tonight we didn't."

Recently, Notre Dame hadn't been making those types of plays either. But after tonight, the Irish look for better, more relaxed days ahead.

"Everyone was looking for each other," said Nowlin. "I hope this is an indication of what's going to happen for the rest of the year."

US Hockey pummels Finland, 4-1

MERIBEL, France (AP) — The undefeated U.S. hockey team is headed for the Olympic medal round for the first time in 12 years after this afternoon's 4-1 victory over Finland.

Tim Sweeney's breakaway goal at 13:55 of the second period snapped a 1-1 tie, Scott Young scored twice and Ray LeBlanc made 29 saves as the United States (3-0) continued erasing memories of seventh-place finishes in the 1984 and 1988 Games.

"It's a completely different feeling," said Young, who was also on the '88 team, that got off to a 1-2 start. "We had a good team in '88. We should have been so much better. It was a major disappointment. This is tremendous."

The victory gave America the inside track for one of the top two seeds in its group. Sweden, which played Germany tonight, is 2-0 and meets the United States on Monday in the preliminary round. Finland (2-1) also is expected to qualify.

The top four teams in each group make the medal round. The last time the United States made the medal round was 1980, when the "Miracle on Ice" team won the gold medal in Lake Placid, N.Y.

"Not taking anything away from Italy and Germany (the U.S. team's first two victims), but we feel Finland is one of the better teams in the tournament," Young said.

"I was trying to frost her, and when she got the ball, to get a hand in her face as much as I could," explained Nowlin.

And with Notre Dame containing Evansville's top threat, the Irish blew open a close game late in the first half. After Greis picked up her second foul with 5:20 remaining in the half, Notre Dame scored the last 13 points of the half to take a 44-30 lead into halftime.

The Irish kept the momentum up after intermission as well, going on a 16-4 run to start the half to build the lead to 26 points, 60-34, with 12:31 remaining.

"I've been struggling a little bit lately, so when I hit my first couple of shots, it was a big boost for me and for the team," said Oslosky.

"It was a balanced attack for Finland, 4-1

Eck to host “Legends of Tennis”

By ROLANDO DE AGUIAR
Sports Writer

Notre Dame’s junior-division men’s tennis team will have an extra item on their Junior Parents’ Weekend agenda as the Legends of Tennis roll into the Eck Pavilion for a dual match with the Irish.

The Legends lineup will include Hank Pfister, Peter Fleming, Jimmy Connors, and Collin Dibbey. John Lloyd was forced to pull out of the event after tearing a hamstring on Wednesday night. Brian Kalbas, who played at Notre Dame’s number-one spot in 1989, will join Irish women’s coach Jay Louderback to fill out the six-man Legends lineup.

The idea for the event was presented to Notre Dame coach Bob Bially by Peter Bower, a South Bend native who, with Legend Collin Dibbey, represents over forty former tennis stars. Bially is eager to see how his team will perform against the group. “I’m excited about it and I really don’t know what to expect,” said Bially. “We don’t really know if they’re better than we are.”

Bially’s uncertainty is understandable. According to Bially and Bower, the event marks the first time that a college team has ever faced off against a professional team. In fact, no professional tennis star has played in South Bend since John MacEnroe played Vitas Gerulaitis at the Joyce ACC in 1984.

“Over the past few years we’ve done a lot of things to bring quality tennis to the South Bend area, but this might top all of them,” said Bially.

Indeed, both the Legends of Tennis and the Irish will bring impressive credentials to the Eck tomorrow afternoon. The group of four former professionals competing for the Legends has won a total of nineteen Grand Slam titles, while Notre Dame’s team boasts three players ranked in the collegiate tennis top 50.

“They (the Legends) are very intelligent players,” said Bially. “They’re more seasoned than the college players we play. Hopefully, we’ll learn something. Similarly, we’re younger, more fit and right in the middle of our dual match season.”

MacLeod, Irish visit troubled Sy

Early in the season Notre Dame coach John MacLeod said that this would be a year of ups and downs for his team. Thus far, his prediction has been right on the money, as the Irish have looked like a team with ups and downs for his team. MacLeod recently told the Carrier Dome as their 88-76 win over North Carolina and the Irish have looked like a team with ups and downs for his team.

Contradictory comments from Notre Dame officials and silent no-shows by Bill Anderson Jr., former volunteer coach of the men’s volleyball club, shrouded in mystery.

Anderson was dismissed from his unpaid, volunteer coaching position in January 1991 after the University accused him of falsifying information on an information form submitted to the NCAA during his tenure as an Indiana state or federal law. I do not know if it is a federal or state law. I do not know if it is a federal or state law. I do not know if it is a federal or state law. I do not know if it is a federal or state law.

Mullins indicated Wednesday that his office could release all materials in Anderson’s file if Anderson were to issue a release to Human Resources. Mullins also maintained that Human Resources had a copy of a memo on Mr. Bill Anderson Jr., and that the submission of a release would produce nothing.

Adding to the confusion, Anderson alleged that Mullins told him Thursday morning that all files regarding his case had been given to Kelly and Rex Rakow, director of Security.

On the court, the Orangemen are led by senior forward Dave Johnson and freshman forward Lawrence Moten.

As with the human resources, much is left to interpretation. Mullins, who said that the presence of a felony on a record was not necessarily grounds for dismissal from the University or for the University to not hire someone.

“I’m not familiar with it,” said Mullins. “But RecSports says it’s the law.”

Furtherm ore, the statements Mullins made to Anderson to cease serving as volunteer coach were to issue a release to Human Resources.

Mullins further refused to comment on allegations made by Anderson that his file had been given to Kelly and Rakow, however, stated that the University records check under Human Resources could answer that question, said O’Leary.

Police charges and University charges are being considered.

“Contra dictory statemen ts from Mullins would be the authority to the University to not hire a person, depending on the position involved, he de­ clined further comment on the matter.

“I have nothing to say,” said Mullins.

Muslin’s indication that his office could release all materials in Anderson’s file if Anderson were to issue a release to Human Resources was not necessarily grounds for his dismissal. Mullins also maintained that Human Resources had a copy of a memo on Mr. Bill Anderson Jr., and that the submission of a release would produce nothing.

Though none of the coaches were involved, Syracuse still faces NCAA sanctions.

On the court, the Orangemen are led by senior forward Dave Johnson and freshman forward Lawrence Moten.

Johnson, who might be remembered by Irish fans because of his band gestures at the conclusion of last season’s 76-69 Syracuse win at the Joyce ACC, leads Syracuse in both scoring and rebounding. He comes into the game averaging 21.1 points and 7.1 assists per game.

Mullins, a 6-foot-4, 6-8 rpg, is the leading candidate for Big East Rookie of the Year and is the fastest rising young talent in the Big East. The Orangemen have surprised so many with their 16-4 record. Talked by most as a fifth round pick in the National Basketball Association Draft, Mullins is currently leading the conference, a half-game ahead of Georgetown and Pittsburgh, who are both 7-4 in Big East play.
