Louisianians move back, assess harm

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — As Louisianaans made their way back to coastal neighborhoods Thursday, officials expressed relief that damage appeared limited and appealed for medical help at still-crowded shelters.

"We've been spared a major, major disaster," Gov. Edwin Edwards said during a helicopter tour. Storm Andrew, still drenching Florida, weakened to a tropical depression, was blamed for one final affront: a pipeline at an offshore natural gas rig apparently damaged by the hurricane's fire. No pollution was reported and the fire was expected to burn itself out, officials said.

Officials throughout southern Louisiana began compiling damage estimates, but said numbers would be available at least until Friday. Still, estimates likely will be measured in millions of dollars, rather than the billions of more densely populated Florida.

"All my things! All my things, my furniture," Linda Henson wept in Bayou Vista, west of Morgan City.

Under cloudless skies and steamy heat, a steady stream of cars, slowed by sightseers, reeled toward the Industrial Canal and Lake Pontchartrain for a look at the damage.

Under threat of legal action, by Friday, the New Orleans Salvation Army had announced plans to move its shelter to the Mid-City area, where it was housed temporarily.

U.S. establishes no-fly zones; Iraq vows to resist

Baghdad, Iraq (AP) — Iraq vowed Thursday to resist the U.S.-led allies as they clamped a "no-fly zone" on southern Iraq and diplomats feared the Shiites and Muslims were fighting against Saddam Hussein.

Beginning Thursday, Iraqi planes and helicopters were prohibited from flying below the 32nd parallel. The government said the aerial umbrella was an aggressive act intended to partition Iraq along sectarian and ethnic lines.

One official suggested Baghdad might respond by halting its compliance with U.N. resolutions that ended the Gulf War.

Other statements suggested Saddam might order his forces, still formidable despite last year's war, to take action against U.S. aircraft seeking to protect the outgunned and outnumbered Shiite rebels. Or he might unleash a ground army against the Shiites in the southern marshlands.

U.S. officials say Saddam has withdrawn his estimated 170 to 200 combat aircraft and some of his helicopter gunships from southern bases. But he continues to keep a sizeable army in the region — at least 50,000 troops backed by tanks and heavy artillery.

One senior Iraqi official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, suggested Iraq might retaliate against the ban by refusing to allow U.N. inspection teams into Iraq to oversee destruction of its weapons of mass destruction.

The "no-fly zone" was imposed in accordance with U.N. Security Council Resolution 688, which calls for protecting Iraq's population against Saddam's minority, Sunni, Muslim-dominated government.

The Shiites, who make up 55 percent of Iraq's population, staged an uprising after the Gulf War. Iraqi forces quickly crushed the rebellion, but Shiite resistance has simmered. The ruling Revolutionary Command Council labeled the ban "aggressive, illegal and unjust.

"We maintain our right to deal with this aggressive decision in due time and with the appropriate methods," said a statement by an unnamed spokesman read over state radio.

The statement appealed to Iraq's 17 million people to resist the "vicious Zionism-imperialist enemy.

Diplomats were alarmed by Iraq's threats and the Iraqis said they were preparing a military campaign in the south, where about 10 million people live.

"We will fight back with or without Saddam," said a statement from the Iraqi government.

The Tehran-based Supreme Assembly for the Islamic Revolution, a coalition of Shiite Muslim opposition factions, claimed Iraqi troops had already begun a military campaign in the south, where about 10 million people live.

It said in a statement from Iran that troops were rounding up dozens of anti-government suspects. The U.S. military said it could not be immediately verified.

The Saint Mary's Health Center was packed with students beginning this week.

Instead of the previous 24-hour service, the Health Center will now be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. Saturday. The building located in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart is under the direction of Dr. Gloria Chelminiski, director of Health Services, Saint Mary's. The building has been closed due to flood damage in response to a survey of health services at several other colleges.

"Very few schools remain open 24 hours a day," said Chelminiski.

"With our enrollment down, we see few students who need medical care after 5 p.m.

Saint Mary's President William Hickey said he feels the college will still adequately accommodate student health needs. He said, "Despite the reduction in Health Service hours, we have extended clinic hours to accommodate even more students at a reduced schedule."

Physicians will now be available by appointment only. Appointments may be made for Mondays and Tuesdays from 12 to 2 p.m., Wednesdays and Thursdays from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m., and Fridays from 2 to 4 p.m.

For those students who do need emergency medical care after hours, all security personnel, residence directors, and resident assistants have received CPR and first aid training so they can respond to an emergency situation.

Chelminiski has also provided each resident assistant with a book addressing the health needs of college students.

Notre Dame students are joining the relief effort to help the quarter of a million people left homeless by the severe destruction of Hurricane Andrew which ripped through southern Florida early last Monday.

The Cuban American Federation of Student Advocates (CAUSA), which is made up of mostly Cuban Americans from the Miami area, and Tyler Farmer, the student senator from district one, have arranged the effort to provide water, clothing, and financial aid for the Hurricane victims.

"This natural disaster is of great urgency to the entire country. Considering the Catholic nature of our University we do not have a choice, we are obligated as Catholics to help out," said CAUSA President Heriberto Lopez Alberola.

"The situation in Miami is an enormous disaster with 250,000 people out of homes. We are here on our cozy university where our peers and parents are on the frontline, so we are obligated to do something," said Farmer.

CAUSA has solicited the donation of 4,600 gallons of water from the Abo Pure company of Plymouth, Michigan and of a big rig that will be used to transport the water from Florida to the Genese Printing Company, said Farmer.

"We can easily collect the money if each student donates just one dollar, but we hope that people will give more than that," he said. We see the undergrads as the greatest force at Notre Dame," said Farmer.

Farmer and Alberola will drive the big rig and donations to the Miami area late this evening. The donations will be taken to the Archbishop of Miami and distributed to the needy from there.
"Everything meaningful in life is distinguished by a certain transcendence of human existence—beyond the limits of 'self-care'—toward other people, toward society, toward the world. Only by looking outward, by caring for things that, in terms of pure survival, you needn't bother with at all... and by throwing yourself over and over again into the tumult of the world, with the intention of making your voice count—only then will you really become a person."

More than likely, when Vaclav Havel made this statement, he was not speaking with Notre Dame students in mind. Yet, in as much as this statement can be applied to all of humanity, it seems most relevant to Notre Dame students. Not only do the majority of us come from stable, middle class backgrounds with financial security and an inherent selfishness that was probably inherited or learned from our ancestors who toiled entire lifetimes just to scratch out an existence (and subsequently became protective of their newly acquired wealth), but we also have the privilege of no longer concerning ourselves with mere survival—that has been provided for us. As a result, we struggle to make our lives meaningful.

For the Notre Dame student, beer drinking, party going and most of all, agonizing through classes that must be endured if one wants to earn six figures, are all concerns in some way related to "self-care," as Havel says, and to making life meaningful, as I refer to it.

In no way do any of these activities transcend human existence. In fact, they ground themselves in human existence. What, after all, could be a greater manifestation of human existence than the longing for worldly human experiences, i.e. drunkenness, more drunkenness and material possessions to fill the sober void between stints of drunkenness?

We need to make our lives meaningful by caring for the illiterate adult, the social conditions in Somalia and the hole in the ozone. Each of these cases is exactly that to which Havel is referring when he says we should care "for things that, in terms of pure survival, you needn't bother with at all." While standing up for the overlooked student, the exploited worker or the exploited land, we can throw ourselves "over and over again into the tumult of the world."

Once in a while we need to get go of ourselves, giving up all of the preconceptions we might have of life as we know it. We must give up what we hold to be true in order to actually live, stretching it to its furthest reaches and then just letting go to see if it will snap back, or bend and fall limp. Then we will have bestowed our lives with meaning.

And, in the end, if we ceaselessly toss ourselves into the tumult, transcending human experience, we will make our voices heard much more loudly than at any party, or on any board of directors. And most importantly, "only thus will you really become a person."

Doctor accused of patient's death

INDIANAPOLIS — A Michigan City doctor accused of professional and criminal misconduct gave a dose of morphine to a heart attack victim only after he had died, the doctor's attorney argued Thursday. That dosage didn't kill the man, but only stopped involuntary respiration that had begun after he had been declared dead, the attorney for Dr. Marilyn Dargis told the Indiana Medical Licensing Board.

Attorney Robert Hummerle of Indianapolis also said Dargis badly delayed an operation that might have saved a life, while the attorney for Dr. Marilyn Dargis flatly denies the allegations.

Gonzalez wins Engineering Award

NOTRE DAME—Jose Gonzalez, retired chief engineer and administrator of the Laredo-Webb County Health Department in Texas, has received a 1992 honor award from Notre Dame's College of Engineering. Gonzalez, a 1950 ND graduate, was selected for "his distinguished achievements in engineering, public health and service," said Anthony Michel, dean of the college.

Active on behalf of the migrant farmworkers in the Southwest, Gonzalez obtained the first migrant worker health care grant in the nation and the first Blue Cross/Blue Shield program for migrants. In 1962 he was responsible for a three-day program which prevented a polio outbreak by inoculating 93 percent of Laredo-Webb County's population and 10,000 residents of Nuevo Laredo, Texas. Castellino has conducted extensive research on the mechanism by which the human body forms and dissolves blood clots. His research major support from the NIH, which in 1974 gave him a research career development award. Castellino has also won a prestigious Dreuxfay Teacher Schelzker Grant to further his investigations into the basic enzyme chemistry of blood.

U.N. adds more troops in Bosnia

LONDON (AP) — The United Nations announced Thursday it was sending more troops to safeguard aid convoys in Bosnia, and European defense officials stepped up pressure on Serbia with calls for a blockade to enforce sanctions.

In response, a Serb leader attending a conference on the Bosnian crisis said he was prepared to open all prison camps and surrender one-fifth of the territory captured by his forces.

British Prime Minister John Major said all warring parties had agreed to attend further talks at a permanent conference beginning next week in Geneva, Switzerland. He said he was heartened by the Serb willingness to yield territory.

"We have agreed the essential steps needed to wind down the conflict," Major told reporters as the two-day conference ended. "All of them are fraught with pitfalls. All of them require the involvement and pressure of the international community."

Muslim leaders have agreed to return to negotiations with the Serbs, a Slovenian official said. The Muslim-led government of President Alija Izetbegovic had for months refused any contacts with the Serbs.

The warring parties agreed to a declaration that calls for an expanded role for U.N. forces in Bosnia and commits them to discourage violence and respect human rights.

But the statement will not be enforced by military intervention, other than an added number of troops safeguarding aid convoys.

Marrack Goulding, the U.N. undersecretary for peace missions, said Wednesday he wanted to the U.N. force in Bosnia to grow from 1,600 to 4,000. The reinforcement must be approved by the U.N. Security Council.

European mediation efforts have produced a growing record of broken promises during Bosnia's 5 1/2-month war, in which more than 8,000 people have died and 1.2 million have been forced from their homes.

On Thursday, despite a relative lull in fighting, shells that landed in a Sarajevo bread line killed three people and wounded 29.

"The parties in the conflict still have to demonstrate their determination to follow through with the actions that obviously will speak louder than any words coming out of here," said Barbara McDougall, Canada's secretary of state for external affairs.

Memorial scholarship is established at Saint Mary's

Special to The Observer

A scholarship fund has been established by Saint Mary's College in memory of Janice Faby Chlebeck, a 1973 Saint Mary's graduate who died of leukemia last January.

The Janice Faby Chlebeck Endowed Scholarship Fund, which was established by the Joseph Faby, Jr., family of Stamford, Conn., will assist qualified students from Trinity Catholic High School in Stamford in attending Saint Mary's. Secondary preference for the scholarships will be given to applicants from other schools in Stamford, and then to students from Greenwich, Darien or New Canaan, Conn.

The scholarship fund, valued at $50,000, will make its first award in 1993. Selection will be based on academic achievement, integrity, high moral character and qualities of leadership, as well as financial need.

The fund will help other women from Stamford to "enjoy the quality Christian education and warm personal relationships that Janice enjoyed so much during her college years," said Saint Mary's President William Hickey. "We are grateful for and honored by the Faby family's generosity and that of their friends."

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Andrew caused $6 billion worth of damage in Florida. Of this, $20 billion worth of damage — depending on who's talking — may be weeks before anyone really knows, but it appears that Andrew will be recorded as the most expensive natural disaster in U.S. history. And the damage in Louisiana hasn't even been added in yet.

Kate Hale, director of Dade County emergency operations, estimated the storm caused $15 billion to $20 billion in damages. The estimate was based on several factors.

The overall value of insured property in the county has been estimated at $350 billion, and 10 percent of that destroyed is "a conservative figure," considering that almost "half of the county" was ravaged by Andrew, Hale said.

Federal emergency officials earlier estimated the disaster caused $6 billion to $10 billion in damage, although they, like Hale, stressed that their estimate was preliminary.

The most expensive natural disaster before Andrew was Hurricane Hugo in 1989. It caused an estimated $5.9 billion damage in South Carolina, plus another $1 billion damage in North Carolina, for a U.S. total of $6.9 billion. The earthquake in San Francisco, also in 1989, was estimated to have caused $5.9 billion in damage.

The Hurricane Andrew figure also was based on reports from building inspectors, sewer inspectors, Florida Power & Light workers, fire rescue crews and police officers, said Jackie Mendez, a spokeswoman for emergency operations.

The figure accounts for $63,000 homes destroyed, as well as countless commercial buildings and much of Homestead Air Force Base, she said.

Although estimates from the Federal Emergency Management Agency had been lower than those by local officials, Grant Peterson, associate director of the agency, said Thursday that he would not dispute estimates from Dade County officials.

Bush sends federal troops to aid Florida

FINDLAY, Ohio (AP) — President Bush on Thursday ordered federal troops to provide "comprehensive assistance" to hurricane-ravaged southern Florida. "It will be a major effort," the president said.

Bush said federal troops were being mobilized immediately. He said new reports show that "the damage is far more widespread than even we had feared."

"We've directed the Department of Defense to provide comprehensive assistance to the affected area, including mobile tents, food, water, field kitchens and also directed them to supply whatever transportation is necessary," Bush said. He said the assistance would include air-traffic assistance and helicopters.

toed in the coastal towns where Andrew's eye and 160-mile wind gusts came ashore Wednesday.

The cleanup began with chain saws and portable generators ringing out. A tow truck righted a toppled trailer and National Guard troops with Humvees and M-16 rifles took up posts.

Store owners put up plastic sheets over shattered windows and swept up broken glass with shovels.

Everyone, it seemed, waited for insurance adjusters.

Communications were difficult. Local radio stations were out, and newspapers in Franklin and Morgan City haven't been able to publish since Monday.

Knee-deep water receded quickly, leaving only scattered pools lying about. Stores and restaurants tried to open; however, most still lacked electricity. A few resourceful Cajans cooked on barbecue grills and portable gas stoves and sipped instant coffee. The Salvation Army had 26 canteen trucks out delivering food and water.

"If we can keep their stomachs full, they'll be a little more contented," said Al Ritsen, a Salvation Army official in Morgan City.

There was further good news on the gastronomic front: the McIlhenny Co., makers of Tabasco Sauce, said its factory on Avery Island, just south of the town of New Iberia, was spared without loss. The factory served as a shelter for nearly 250 Tabasco workers during the storm.

The hurricane, which ravaged subdivisions south of Miami on Monday, then raked the Louisiana coast 48 hours later, has already been labeled the costliest natural disaster in U.S. history. In addition to preliminary estimates of up to $70 billion in Florida damage alone, Andrew has killed a total of 20 people in the two states and the Bahamas.

In addition, a woman was killed early Thursday in a collision at an intersection that lacked stoplights because of the storm.

Andrew's remnants crossed Mississippi on Thursday with winds of about 35 mph. Jackson recorded 4 inches of rain, the National Weather Service said, and about 29,000 Mississippi homes and businesses lost power.

Clinton in Texas: George Bush is a ‘roadblock to progress’

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Bill Clinton burst across central Texas Thursday pledging to revive the economy and assure health care for all Americans. He decried President Bush in his adopted home state as a roadblock to progress, lest ongoing in “his wealthy friends.”

Joining Democratic nominee Clinton for their fourth campaign bus caravan was running mate Al Gore, who like Clinton said a change at the White House would bring jobs and other help to struggling families.

“You could hold the outcome of this race in your hands,” Gore told an afternoon rally in Austin. Along for the ride and rallies were numerous prominent state Democrats, many of whom have shied away from liberal Democratic nominees in the past but were eager to embrace this year’s double-Southern ticket.

“You feel a sense of enthusiasm that I haven’t seen in a presidential campaign,” said Gov. Ann Richards. “It’s really fun.”

Thirty-two electoral votes are at stake in Texas, third-most behind California’s 54 and New York’s 33.

Clinton not only mocked Bush’s new tax-cut promise but also his appeal to voters to make trust the defining campaign issue. He ratted off a litany of Bush promises Clinton said the president has failed to keep, including the 1988 campaign pledge not to raise taxes and to create 30 million new jobs in eight years.

And the Arkansas governor said Bush was keeping America from giving basic health care to all and time off from work to parents with newborn or sick children.

“This administration’s sole obsession is keeping taxes low on the wealthiest Americans,” Clinton told a rowdy sendoff rally along San Antonio’s riverfront before heading to rallies in Austin and Waco, with several roadside stops in between.

Clinton also talked tough on crime as he picked up the endorsement of a statewide Texas law enforcement organization. He emphasized his support for capital punishment and his plan to add 100,000 police officers nationwide.

“You ought to have someone who gives you more than hot air and rhetoric,” he told the Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas.

Clinton focused on the economy as he appealed to Hispanics and blue-collar workers in San Antonio, students and professionals in Austin, and a mix of Texans gathered along the road in New Braunfels and San Marcos.

He said Bush had steadfastly defended the interests of the rich while ignoring working-class families who need jobs, health care, fair taxes, early leave and other help in tough times.

Bush renews voters act

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush has signed a 15-year extension of the Voting Rights Act expanding access to voting booths for non-English-speaking citizens.

The original 1965 act required help if 5 percent of a locality’s citizens spoke a foreign language and did not know enough English to participate in the political process.

Now, help will be mandated and a jurisdiction has 10,000 or more citizens who speak the same foreign language and are limited in their English proficiency.

Another section requires voting assistance where more than 5 percent of the population are American Indians or Alaska natives living on a reservation and speaking their own language.

Bush, Clinton play on fear of foreigners

CINCINNATI (AP) — President Bush campaigned across the nation’s heartland Thursday, saying Democratic rival Bill Clinton was trying to “exploit the darker impulses of this uncertain age” by seeking to collect more taxes on foreign investment profits in the United States.

Bush said Clinton was playing on “fear of the future, fear of the unknown, fear of foreigners.” He said such a tax would invite retaliation by other countries and unleash “an economic war.”

“I know his reputation for opportunism, the kind of guy who will say anything, do anything for political gain,” Bush said.

“But he should understand what’s at stake here. … Those are American jobs he’s playing politics with, those are American workers he’s putting at risk.”

Clinton, campaigning in Texas, called Bush’s statements “ridiculous.”

Campaigning across the Midwest, Bush opened the day with an address to factory workers in Davenport, Iowa, and then flew to Ohio for political rallies in Cincinnati and Findlay.

Bush narrowly won both states in 1988, with a 52 percent margin in Missouri and 55 percent in Ohio. His goal was to win back swing voters who supported him four years ago but appear now to have drifted to Bush.

At a downtown rally in Cincinnati’s Fountain Square, Bush denounced Clinton’s recent comments that Clinton was shifting position on various issues. He said that Clinton had advocated higher fuel efficiency standards for cars but last week “sang a different tune” … He said and I quote, “I never said that I didn’t think there was more than one way to do it or that we shouldn’t be flexible in the way we approach it.”

“Now, you talk about backpedaling,” Bush said. “This is crazy. And so I ask the American people, Is there a pattern going on here? Will Gov. Clinton say anything to anybody? America cannot afford in a president double-speak, double-talk, double-time.”

In Findlay, Bush linked Clinton with the American Trial Lawyers Association and its opposition to proposals to restrict civil lawsuits.

“Doctors are afraid to practice medicine, lawyers are afraid of defendants in court, mothers and dads won’t coach Little League, and my opponent and the Trial Lawyers of America eye each other with goo-goo eyes like Boris and Natasha from the old Bullwinkle cartoon,” Bush charged.

Bill Clinton

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Bill Clinton burst across central Texas Thursday pledging to revive the economy and assure health care for all Americans. He decried President Bush in his adopted home state as a roadblock to progress, lest ongoing in “his wealthy friends.”

Joining Democratic nominee Clinton for their fourth campaign bus caravan was running mate Al Gore, who like Clinton said a change at the White House would bring jobs and other help to struggling families.

“You could hold the outcome of this race in your hands,” Gore told an afternoon rally in Austin. Along for the ride and rallies were numerous prominent state Democrats, many of whom have shied away from liberal Democratic nominees in the past but were eager to embrace this year’s double-Southern ticket.

Arabs say Rabin's words are good, but words are not enough

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arab diplomats on Thursday applauded the cordial, “businesslike” tone set in a new round of peace talks by the government of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, the first time they see no sign Israel is ready to match words with action on key issues.

“We have seen some very positive language standing out from the Rabin government,” said Hanan Ashrawi, spokeswoman for the Palestinian delegation. “We have not seen any translation of these words into action.”

She harshly criticized Israel for putting new spin on the old policy of “day-to-day administration” and said there is “no real commitment” to end the occupation.

Iran cited for human rights violations

GENEVA (AP) — A U.N. human rights panel on Thursday condemned Iran for human rights abuses, including torture, disappearances and unfair detention.

The panel denounced an increase in summary executions following recent anti-government demonstrations and said it was “disturbed by many aspects of the official treatment of Iranian women.”

Winding up a month-long session, the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities also voiced concern at human rights abuses in Peru, Haiti and Guatemala.

It appealed for action to improve the supply of food and medicines to civilians in Iraq, but did not condemn Baghdad for its repression of Kurds and Shiites.

The 26-member panel, part of the U.N. Human Rights Commission, found the country guilty of violating international human rights laws.

The resolution, in a resolution adopted by 18-5 votes, saved its toughest words for Saudi Arabia, saying the kingdom was “profiting” from its occupation.

The body said it was “deeply concerned at the continuing violations of human rights in Manama where torture, arbitrary executions, torture and other cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment, arbitrary arrests and detention, enforced or voluntary disappearances, lack of due process of law and fair trial and freedom of religion and expression.”

In an effort to develop a program that will allow students to move from one campus to another without fear of losing academic credit, a student can still receive medical attention at the infirmary.

“Health Services will provide the students with a list of alternative health care facilities, such as the South Bend Clinic, where they can receive medical attention,” said Dr. Peter W. Chelminski, director of Student Health Services.

“These services will be available to all students, regardless of whether they have health insurance,” Chelminski said.

He added that the infirmary is open 24 hours a day.

“We have the necessary equipment to treat any emergency,” Chelminski said.

However, the infirmary is not equipped to treat serious medical conditions.

“Students should seek medical attention at a hospital for serious medical conditions,” Chelminski said.

ATTORNEY: Fair trial in U.S. impossible for LA police

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The memory of the Los Angeles riots will make a jury anywhere in the United States afraid to acquit the four policemen charged in the beating of Rodney King, one of the officer's lawyers suggested Thursday.

The officers were indicted earlier this month on federal charges of violating King's civil rights. U.S. District Judge John Davies set their trial for Feb. 2 to give lawyers time to file extensive pretrial motions.

Davies scheduled a pre-trial hearing for Nov. 12. He agreed to preside over the case even though he had been assigned to handle King's lawsuit for damages against the city of Los Angeles. He said he saw no conflict since the lawsuit is on hold.

Harland Braun, who recently stopped in as Officer Theodore Briese's lawyer, said he will argue for dismissal of the case.

Braun said the publicity surrounding the officers' state trial in Simi Valley and the riot in Los Angeles after their acquit-tahls tainted prospective jurors throughout the United States.

"We feel the extraordinary publicity in this case means that any juror anywhere in the country would hesitate to vote not guilty," Braun told the judge.

"Anywhere in the country?" the judge asked in astonishment. "Do you have the evidence that there are not 12 people anywhere?"

Braun responded that if there were 12 unbiased jurors, they would be impossible to find. He said he would present surveys and demographic studies to support his unprecedented motion to dismiss.

Detroit police chief sentenced to 10 years

DETROIT (AP) — Former Police Chief William Hart was sentenced Thursday to a maximum 10 years in federal prison for embezzling $2.6 million from a police fund and for income tax evasion.

Hart, 68, was sentenced before U.S. District Judge Paul Gadola.

The 40-year police veteran was convicted in May of two counts of embezzlement and two counts of tax evasion. Prosecutors said Hart stole $2.6 million from the fund, established to pay for drug buys and undercover operations.

Gadola sentenced Hart to 10 years — the maximum allowed — on each of the two embezzlement charges and three years each on the tax charges. He said the sentences would be served concurrently.

The government said Hart allowed about half the money to be diverted through fake companies set up by former Deputy Chief Kenneth Weiner. It said Hart took the rest through checks for cash and other improper withdrawals from the fund.

Weiner is serving a 30-month prison term for his role in the theft.

But defense attorney Thomas Cranmer earlier this month asked for probation and a lengthy term of community service, although he acknowledged that federal sentencing guidelines all but rule that out.

Hart resigned for the force May 8, the day after his conviction. A pension board ruled he is entitled to a $53,000 annual pension despite the convictions.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Barbara Bush wrapped up a campaign tour of California on Thursday with praise for her husband's re-election, and a partisan rhetoric of her political life, attacking congressional Democrats and warning of economic doom under Bill Clinton.

"We have good programs, but the Congress is so wrapped up in their own scandals and their own funny doings that they're not willing to back good programs," she said in a telephone interview with radio station KABC-AM. "(It's) politically motivated.

The first lady said the only reason former President Reagan "got things done" in the 1980s was because he had a Republican-run Senate for six years.

"Ever since the Democrats took over the Senate, it's just been an enormous fight," she said. "And what we're hoping is going to happen is they're going to stop ... clean the House and clean the Senate and give us a Republican president with a Republican Congress."

In Idaho, fire crews drew close to containing the most prominent line around the 127-mile perimeter of the 257,000-acre Fishburn Fire, the nation's largest wildfire.

Crews had less than 20 miles of fire line to go before they would surround the eight-day-old fire 30 miles east of Boise. There were indications the fire's not advancing, the job is finished.

For the first time, the Fishburn Fire, which has destroyed 507 homes in Northern California towns along Highway 299 northeast of Redding, was 75 percent contained Thursday, said California Department of Forestry spokeswoman Kay McQuade.

"We're starting to scale down our operation," spokesman Jack DeCola said. "Because the fire's not advancing, the job now is patrol to keep the fire within established lines."

California's largest wildfire this season, which has destroyed 507 homes in Northern California towns along Highway 299 northeast of Redding, was 75 percent contained Thursday. CA Department of Forestry spokeswoman Kay McQuade said that a motorist may have set the fire, then driven away.

In Southern California, firefighters hoped to encircle a 3,800-acre wildfire in the southern San Joaquin Valley by Saturday night.

No structures were burned or threatened in the remote area at the base of Tejon Pass, about 10 miles from the community of Arvin.

"The cause of the fire, which started Saturday, has not been determined."

In Northern California, winds were expected to remain light with temperatures in the mid-80s to low 90s through Friday, and officials said that wasn't helping 3,400 firefighters keep the blaze in check. At least four hot spots remained, however.

All but a few of the 7,500 people forced to flee during the course of the 7-day-old fire had been allowed to return.

Industry claims of reduced wastes a farce, group charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industry claims of reducing toxic chemical releases are largely false, officials in the Environmental Protection Agency say — a citizen group charged Thursday.

The Environmental Protection Agency said in May that industrial plants reported releasing 11 percent less toxic chemicals than in 1987, but actual pollution levels still reflect loopholes in reporting or revised recordkeeping — not actual pollution levels, a citizen group charged Thursday.

The Environmental Protection Agency said in May that industrial plants reported releasing 11 percent less toxic chemicals than in 1987, but actual pollution levels still reflect loopholes in reporting or revised recordkeeping — not actual pollution levels, a citizen group charged Thursday.

Citizen Action, a Washington-based watchdog group, said its analysis of the EPA-provided figures and interviews with officials at dozens of companies suggest most of the reductions stemmed from recordkeeping changes and loopholes that allowed some chemicals to be released without being counted.

"there is little evidence to suggest that a large number of (industrial) facilities have cut their pollution substantially or that the reductions that have occurred will be permanent,‖ maintained Citizen Action.

The most frequent reasons given for the reported reductions were changes in what chemicals the EPA required to be reported, changes in how wastes were being estimated, lower production levels or other factors not related to new pollution controls, the group said.

The report's authors based their findings largely on responses from representatives of the 50 companies that reported the largest reductions in chemical releases between 1989 and 1990.

"While most of the facilities reported some real reductions, some companies made up for that by means of changing the way they report their waste," said the study.

Among companies credited by the group with achieving actual waste reductions: the 3M Chemical Center in Cottage Grove, Minn., cut releases by 8 million pounds by eliminating the use of certain solvents; the GMC Central Foundry Division in Defiance, Ohio, reduced emissions by using less foam and fewer casting blocks in its production process.

Citizen Action said the manufacturers could not account for all the reductions they claimed to be making, admitting that "there's a lot of smoke without fire" in those reductions.

Washington (AP) — The Bush-Quayle campaign to use Mrs. Bush's high popularity to turn around the president's standing in California. A poll taken before last week's Republican national convention found him trailing Clinton by 34 percentage points.

Instead of speaking about her usual favorite subjects, including literacy, Mrs. Bush included sharp partisan attacks in her remarks. Her favorite target remained congressional Democrats and the press.

In the radio interview, she remarked of the news media: "I would never say they were pro George." In an interview in San Francisco she went a step further, saying the press was made up of liberals and Democrats who are "for Bill Clinton."

"We have good programs, but the Congress is so wrapped up in their own scandals and their own funny doings that they're not willing to back good programs," she said in a telephone interview with radio station KABC-AM. "(It's) politically motivated.

Watch how things grow."
"Gregorian chants sung by Deelite," I said, by way of greeting my friend Ellen.

"Hey, how was your summer?" Ellen asked.

I tried valiantly to mask my disappointment. I'd already tried this Gregorian chant by Deelite bastardly on two other colleagues who just flashed me a well-intentioned pitying smile.

"Aren't you going to ask me what in the world I'm talking about, Ellen?"

"No, I've learned better," she politely replied. "But OK, it's the beginning of the semester, so I'll bite. Is this an album on your wish list?"

"Totally not," I cheerfully retorted. "I'm trying to figure out what would be the stupidest thing to try to market. How do you like this one: Masturbator?"

"I've got a better one," Ellen said.

Incredible. Ellen was not only humoring me, she actually wanted to play this game. I made a mental note to look into the laws about parodying stupid games. Maybe I could farm it out to Parker Brothers.

"OK, what's your better one?" I said in a challenging tone, reminding myself that I had high-quality bubblegum with chicken fat up my sleeve.

"The Republican party's Presidential ticket."

Maybe I hadn't explained the rules of the game clearly enough. "Ellen, you're saying that the 1992 Republican ticket is the stupidest thing anyone could think of marketing?"

"You bet. And I'm talking even if Quayle weren't on it. Did you see that ludicrous spectacle the Republicans put on in Houston last week?"

"Uh, I think I was busy that night."

"Well you didn't miss much of substance. But you did miss some of what I took to be the stupidest political oratory of all time."

Damn. I thought. Being something of a connoisseur of the stupid, I hate to miss outstanding specimens. Like when I forget to watch Gerald. Maybe I'd better do something catching up.

"So what made the Republican convention so stupid?" I asked.

"For starters, there was Patric Buchanan. Of course, what he had to say was so evil, so full of hatred, bigotry, and deceit that you couldn't even enjoy the stupidity factor. I just hope that the vast majority of Americans realize how evil were the things that man said."

"That sounds worse than the merely stupid," I offered.

"It was," Ellen agreed. "But with Bush and Quayle, you could kind of shrug and say some quality stupidity, since their line about what's wrong with this country was just incredibly stupid."

"They might have been stupid, Ellen," I said by way of clarifying the rules of the game, "but the question is whether it's stupid for the Republicans to get their stupidity on us. I mean, pet rocks may have been stupid, but they obviously weren't a stupid thing to market."

Ellen looked depressed.

"You're right. That's the part I'm trying to block out. And it's really scary when you consider the awful things that could come from another victory by those rightwingers. Just the thought of four more years of Lynne Cheney is enough to make me think seriously about defecting to Canada."

"I was feeling depressed. I tried to cheer her up by out-stupidifying the Republican ticket, "Veves: bumping-jumping gear!" I said hopefully.

Ellen smiled. "Sorry, the Republican party is just stupid. I mean, how can anyone take them seriously? Look at the pithecologically lame argument Bush is using on the campaign trail about why he should be re-elected."

"You mean how he's trying to blame Congress alone for things like high unemployment?"

"Sure, and how if only the rich could be given another tax break, everything would be de-de-da. Stuff like that. Four years ago, Americans were still buying that cynical product. Now it just sounds like a pitch for easy-junk bonds on the Edsel line."

"Wooah! Now that's a classic stupid, Ellen," I said admirably. "Hmmm. That'll be tough to beat."

Ellen gave me a "Buck up, kid" punch on the arm. "I'll tell you something, though," she said. "I hope I'm right."

"You mean about how stupid the Republican line is?"

"No, I'm sure of that. But I hope I'm not overestimating the intelligence level of the electorate this year. Especially since you never know what dirty tricks lie ahead. Come October, you can bet that George Bush is going to be itching to get this country involved in a war somewhere. God knows there are enough opportunities for that."

Depressed at the thought, I asked in a hopeful tone, "Surely that would be the stupidest thing of all, wouldn't it? I mean, wouldn't it be obvious to all Americans that Bush was bombing somebody just to help him get re-elected?"

Ellen shrugged. "Hope so. But you never know. Hey, look at the time. I'll catch you later, OK?"

"Yeah, I'll see you, Ellen."

I don't think I want to play this stupid game again.

Beach party provides final taste of summer

By JENNIFER GUERIN

un-worshippers will be elated to know that this year, coming to South Bend does not mean forsaking the traditional comforts of summer.

Campus organizations will be praying for sunshine to grace Stepan field this weekend for the beach party being sponsored by Student Activities, SUB, WVFI radio and the student government. Six tons of sand will be dumped on Stepan for the event, which will run from 1 o’clock to 5 o’clock on Saturday.

The party is intended to welcome Notre Dame and saint Mary’s students officially and give them a final taste of summer before gloomy Indiana weather and more serious academic commitments become unavoidable.

“This is designed to be your last fling on the beach... before being caught under the ‘permacloud’,” said Adele Lanan, assistant director of Student Activities. Lanan, who said SUB had sponsored similar beach parties in the past, hopes this weekend’s scaled-down version will renew interest in the event and keep spirits high on campus. She insisted that students should be encouraged to take advantage of the simulated beach scene by wearing bathing suits and bringing towels and suntan lotion.

Transporting the ocean proved slightly more difficult than shipping in the sand, but to compensate for the lack of waves and keep students refreshed, SUB will provide a one-ton sundae on the scene.

As a break from sun-bathing, a casual volleyball tournament will run throughout the day. Avid players may pre-register teams of six outside the WVFI office on the second floor of Lafortune throughout the afternoon on Friday.

Less intense sports fans should not abandon hope, however, because all players will be welcomed on Saturday. Prizes for every volleyball matches will be awarded.

Dan Langrill, an ND senior and this year’s WVFI station manager, is eager to broadcast live from the welcome back beach party for more than one reason.

“First and foremost,” said Langrill, “we want people to have fun.” The party also provides a rare but excellent opportunity for campus organizations like SUB and WVFI to work together. Langrill commented that the student-run radio station could profit from the exposure, making students more aware of the variety of music WVFI plays.

The station will be roaming the campus throughout the day, broadcasting from dorm rooms and encouraging all students to head for "the beach."

As part of Welcome Weekend '93, Rockfest! will take place from 4 p.m.-12 a.m. today at Fieldhouse Mall. In case of bad weather, the rain location is Stepan Center.

Welcome Weekend '93 is being jointly sponsored by Student Activities, Student Union Board, WVFI, and the Classes of 1993, 1994, and 1995. Representatives from all groups met in the spring to generate ideas, and most of the legwork was done this summer by Gayle Spencer, Assistant Director of Student Activities, and Matt Bomberger, Director of Programming for the Student Union Board, according to Spencer.

The concept of Welcome Weekend '92 developed from previous freshmen week activities that members of Student Activities wanted to extend to all students. According to Spencer, the first weekend of the semester was chosen because it takes a while for the class governments to get organized, and Student Activities wanted to relieve them by having something already planned.

Several campus bands including The Pork Choppers, XYZ Affair, Access Denied, Katharsis, Victoria's Real Secret, and Dysfunction are scheduled to appear tonight. In addition to the bands, students can get free snow cones and spin art from 4 p.m.-7 p.m., and free soda and popcorn from 7 p.m.-12 a.m.

According to Marty Mennes, drummer for Victoria's Real Secret, the band is excited to be playing today. He said that their music sounds "like the stuff people like" and described the band as "an alternative, industrial, funk-punk trash band with a mellow appeal." He also said, "our music is 95 percent original." Victoria's is scheduled to appear tonight tentatively around 9 p.m.

Dysfunction, who won the Naz competition, will appear last on the agenda around 10:30 p.m. Dysfunction plays mostly funk and rhythm and blues, according to member Harrison Keller. He said that their music "is like something you'd see in The Blues Brothers." He said people can find the band throughout the year at places like Club 23 and Bridger's.

Between bands, a deejay from WVFI will play, so "there will never be a full in music," according to Spencer.

"Bring blankets. It's a great way to relax on a Friday night," she said.

Top campus bands to appear at Rockfest

The Pork Choppers should be playing in the first slot around 4 p.m. according to guitar player Joe Huston. He said, "we play a wide variety of rock songs from REM to Metallica. We basically do covers, but we're working on some originals to incorporate."

XYZ Affair should appear between 6 p.m. and 7 p.m., according to Scott Gruzyński, one of the band's original members. He said, "we play a lot of covers like Van Halen and Red Hot Chili Peppers - mostly classic rock with a little funk." He said that the band frequently plays at Bridget's during the year.

Access Denied will play around 8 p.m. according to lead guitar player and singer Dave Curran. "We play generally classic rock - not necessarily oldies, but great songs from the 60's, 70's, and 80's," he said. Access Denied is playing at Bridget's on Saturday night, and the Alumni-Senior Club on Wednesday.

Jason Thomas, lead vocals for Katharsis, said that their band is tentatively scheduled to play sometime after 8 p.m. He said that Katharsis plays "mostly classic rock-n-roll like The Doors, Led Zeppelin, and Pink Floyd, and we also do a few originals."

Dysfunction, winner of the Naz competition, will appear last on the agenda around 10:30 p.m. Dysfunction plays mostly funk and rhythm and blues, according to member Harrison Keller. He said that their music "is like something you'd see in The Blues Brothers." He said people can find the band throughout the year at places like Club 23 and Bridger's.

Carrot Top's national tour comes to Notre Dame

From Florida, on the 27th Top comedy market... Florida site: a local amateur contest, he decided to pursue comedy because he was "driven by the laughter of others," according to his agent Kathy Kern. Easily recognized by his attire-orange, purple, blue, green, plaid, stripes, and bowing shoes, Carrot Top transforms observations of everyday life into inventions and creative props. Carrot Top comes to Notre Dame as part of a collegiate tour that covers schools in all 50 states. He brings to campus experience that includes performances at over 200 eastern colleges, and numerous clubs such as New York's famous Catch a Rising Star. Among his many television credits are "Saturday Night Live," "The Comedy Central Star Search," "Jonathan Winters' Showtime Special," "Comic Strip Live," and "America's Super Showcase." He arrives in South Bend directly from Los Angeles where he was filming a comedy special with Shelley Long, and another with Disney/MGM Studios. Carrot Top is a favorite among college campuses and became the "most booked college act of the year" after his talents were showcased at the National Association of Campus Activities, according to Kern.

Such popularity with college students led to his nomination as the Campus Entertainer of the Year which will be announced in November. As part of Student Union Board's "Welcome Week," students can catch the unique and zany observations of Carrot Top Friday and Saturday, August 28, 29 at Washington Hall.

To a homier dying young: Patrick, we hardly knew ye

Patrick Devlin, ’90, former Glee Clubber and Stanford resident, died this summer after years of recurring bouts with cancer.

Jim McKay from "Wide World of Sports" recently explained how he dealt with the news after the terrorists attacked the Olympic Village in Munich in 1972, killing eleven young Israelis. McKay phoned his wife back home in the States, asking her to dictate the words of Housman’s poem, “To an Athlete Dying Young.” One stanza particularly moved him, said McKay, and he was able to recite it from memory: “Now you will not swell the rout/Of lads that wore their hideous busts/Runners whom renown outran/And the name died before the man.”

I hope it played well in Munich, but it’s not what I want to say about Patrick. The sadness we feel when we hear of people dying young could be wasted, if we sidestepped our chance of looking God in the eye.

Armchair theologians on a wavelength with grief have told us that their religious faith has been wiped out by the same indiscriminate indifference that permits the death of our young children, or the young parents of children.

I argued to the question of God’s existence—human beings themselves—half ape, half angel—are all the proof I need, so often at death, one sees them angel-side up. I don’t need metaphysics or syllogisms to prove from reason that humankind, ascending or descending Jacob’s ladder, serving as a highway between heaven and hell, is God’s piece of work, just as Manhattan’s skyscrapers and bridges, as well as the burnt-out buildings of Fort Apache the Bronx, are humanly’s doing.

Elie Wiesel tells of a day in the death camps when a fifteen year old was being hanged. A voice cried: Where is God? He answered: ‘He’s there at the end of the rope with the lad.’ I decided to try that approach with Michael.

Where was God at the crime?

Michael answered: Where He always is: not to lunch.

I said, ‘What if He there on the Cross with nails in His hands?’

And Charlie wanted to know: How can you tell?

I answered, ‘I can tell by the way He responded to suffering that He must have been in a state of grace. Mere flesh and blood doesn’t have answers like, Father, forgive them. They don’t know what they’re doing,’ on the tip of its tongue. You don’t need religion to explain how He might have walked on water, or turned water into wine. But the divine graciousness He showed to His murderers encourages us to trust in Him as one on whom God’s favor rests.

I believe in Him as God’s son because He rose from the dead, proving that love He showed us on the Cross was stronger than death.

Michael’s alleged atheism wasn’t even destined. Where was God at the Holocaust?

Obviously, in the cries of the dying.

Excuse me, please,” Lawrence Kushner, a contemporary rabbi, might tell you. The question is not where was God, but why do human beings do such things?

The Jewish artist Marc Chagall depicts Jesus sharing in Jewish suffering. In the painting “The White Crucifixion,” Jesus is surrounded by scenes from the passion, “for He was killed, hunted down, and driven away, unsayable burning; Torah scrolls desecrated.”

What Chagall couldn’t show is how eventually Jesus was when He clung to Yahveh in His hour of trial. Eye witnesses of the Holocaust report that as the layers liquidating the victims were beginning to gas chambers of those death camps, voices could be heard raised loudly in Israel’s great love poem: “Shema Yisrael Adonoi... Hear, 0 Israel, the Lord is our God.” So very often this summer the scenes of suffering carried on television could have been reproduced on holy cards as stations of the Cross.

I wasn’t in touch with Pat Devlin after he left Notre Dame, so it would be presumptuous of me to write him a eulogy, even though I loved him. But I’ve seen him several times as he was starting home because his cancer had returned, and he needed to go back to the hospital.

From seeing Patrick, starting all, and from seeing other students with cancer when they were terminal, I know where God is — in the sick room of the young.

As much as I could see of him, I would be able to see in Pat’s face. Pat’s pain was His pain. The kindness and peace heard in Pat’s voice must have been of God. No one more thoughtful than Pat was, in his days as a student, struggling to keep his pain private, and his complaints under wraps.

“Nothing is his life because of the lessening of pain before him proving his noblesse oblige, before the letting go. The tribute to Hamlet’s father can be extended to a host of great souls, leaving us the memory of their graciousness as a legacy.

Part of the heartbeat of the Devaney’s, going home, is their great sweetness in the face of adversity. How beautiful they are, in their valuations forbidding mourning.

Hemingway wrote: ‘If people brought so much courage to this world, the world has to kill them to break them, so of course it kills them. The world breaks everyone and afterward many are strong at the broken places. But those that will not break it kills. It kills the very good and the very gentle and the very brave impartially.’

God takes no pleasure in the suffering and battering and killing of the athletes dying young, and so He sent His Son to be our hero, and a contender Who, by his show of guts, could turn His life into a moveable feast for us all. In Him, grace under pressure achieved its masterpiece. Though they thought they had His back to the canvas, they couldn’t keep Him down for the count. It is because of men like that whom the world breaks can be strong at the broken places.

It is because of men like that, Patrick, enduring the loneliness of the long-distance runner and then some, became an Olympian who won the gold.

“Smart lad, to slip betimes away/From fields where glory does not dwell/And the laurel grows/it withers quicker than the rose.” When Jim McKay read that, did he believe it? I don’t believe it, and I don’t think it. I have nothing but regrets that Pat slipped betimes away, for the truth is: Patrick, we hardly knew ye.

To a homier dying young: Patrick, we hardly knew ye.
Faulkner sentenced in fraud case

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona State junior forward Jamal Faulkner was sentenced to 36 days in jail Thursday for failing to report for jury duty. The 19-year-old Faulkner was convicted of fraud in a separate case. It is not clear how the second conviction impacted his first.

Faulkner, 21, who led a sect of New York Yankees legend Gary Carter's toughness to star in this team's march to the World Series, was ordered to begin the jail term that will end Sept. 1.

The sentence apparently ended the 6-foot-7 forward's opportunity to attend school this fall and remain eligible for the 1993-94 season. Faulkner's last chance may be a sentence review scheduled for Thursday, when Judge Stephen Sheldon of Maricopa County Superior Court.

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona State basketball team somewhat, but it would help him in the eyes of the NBA. Faulkner's girlfriend, Donna Watson, Steven Smith and Lynn Collins each had pleaded guilty to a felony charge involving $13,474 worth of long-distance calls. A judge billed to McQuaran's credit card from August 1990 to September 1991. The charge was left undesignated and may be reduced to a misdemeanor after completion of the two-year probation Shapiro ordered on April 6. The judge also ordered the players to make restitution to and perform 100 hours of community service work.

None of Faulkner's teammates have had problems with the requirements.

O'Brian shines in Jets' win over Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ken O'Brien didn't make Bruce Coslet's job any easier Thursday night at the Spectrum, where the New York Jets quarterback wasn't all that hungry for fame on the Philadelphia Eagles, either.

The 10-year-veteran, who missed three games with a buldow while with second-year man Browning Napoleon; coach Boomer; two touchdown passes as a freshman in a perfect preseason with a 12-13 victory over the Eagles.

"My real gut feeling is they will lose me in a couple of days," O'Brien said. "I'm ready to go. I have no regrets about the preseason."

Coslet said he would decide next week on who will start the opener, although few people other than O'Brien think it be anyone but Nagle.

"Both played well," Coslet said.

O'Brien said he thought Nagle "did a good job" that he thought it was "predetermined" that Nagle would start.

"I felt that way coming into camp," he said.

Chris Berkett caught one of O'Brien's TD passes and blocked a punt for a safety as the Jets closed at 5-0 with their second exhibition victory over Philadelphia (2-3).
SAN DIEGO (AP) — New San Diego Chargers coach Bobby Ross made the right call on his kicker. "Now he's got to pick a quarterback."

John Carney kicked three field goals, including a go-ahead 50-yarder, and Stan Humphries threw two second-half touchdown passes as the Chargers beat the Los Angeles Rams 30-19 Thursday night. San Diego finished the exhibition season 2-2 and the Rams 3-1.

Carney missed field goal tries of 38 and 47 yards in a 20-14 loss to the San Francisco 49ers a week ago. But it was 12th-round draft pick Carlos Huerta who got the boot on Tuesday as the roster was reduced to 60 players.

The Chargers were forced to punt from the Rams' 37 with the game tied 13-13 in the third quarter. The Rams were caught with 12 men on the field, giving the Chargers a fourth-and-11 on the 32. The ball was spotted just inside the turf, but Carney had no trouble kicking it through the uprights.

Tennessee's Majors recovers from surgery

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee football coach Johnny Majors' condition was upgraded again Thursday, two days after quintuple heart bypass surgery.

Majors, 57, is "continuing to make normal progress," according to a statement from the University of Tennessee Medical Center.

He had recovered enough to move from his open-heart unit to a private room, hospital spokeswoman Lisa McNeal said.

The coach's condition was upgraded from "serious but stable" to simply "stable," the hospital's highest patient condition category, McNeal said.

No decision had been made on when Majors can leave the hospital. Doctors said initially the hospital stay could last seven to 10 days.

Preparations were under way for a giant get-well card to the coach. Fans can sign the billboard-sized card at East Towne Mall on Saturday. It will be erected on the Tennessee campus Monday.

McNeal said Majors hasn't been allowed to have flowers, calls or visitors.

"There have been a great number of calls about him," she said. "People say they don't know him personally but are thinking about him and wish him well."

This season marks Majors' 25th as a head coach and 15th at his alma mater.

Assistant coach Phillip Fulmer has taken over in Majors' absence. Fulmer is keeping the team on its regular schedule leading to the season opener Sept. 5 against Southwestern Louisiana.

Carney, who kicked a team-record 54-yarder last season, had field goals of 27 and 38 yards in the second quarter as San Diego built a 13-3 lead.

Ross must decide between Humphries and Bob Gagliano as his starting quarterback.

Humphries was acquired from the Washington Redskins on Aug. 13, five days after starter John Friesz suffered a season-ending knee injury in the exhibition opener.

Humphries relieved Gagliano for the second straight week and threw a 23-yard touchdown pass to Ronnie Harmon with 1:44 left in the third quarter.

Darrin Carrington recovered Todd Kinchen's fumble on the ensuing kickoff, and Humphries threw a 4-yard scoring pass to Walter Stanley.

Humphries completed 11 of 16 passes for 118 yards. Gagliano, making his third start, was 6 for 8 for 90 yards in his three drives.

Gagliano moved the Chargers 80 yards in nine plays on the opening drive, including passes of 21 yards to Ronnie Harmon and 28 and 14 to Anthony Miller on successive plays. Rod Bernstine capped it with a 1-yard TD run.

Carney kicked his 27-yarder on the third drive, and Humphries came on late in the second quarter and led the Chargers on a 72-yard drive capped by Carney's 38-yard field goal for a 13-3 lead.

Backup quarterback Mike Pagel led the Rams to two quick scores for a 13-13 tie.

The Rams closed to 13-10 on a 41-yard pass from Pagel to Kinchen as time expired in the first half. Pagel was 4 for 4 for 75 yards on the drive.

The Rams took the second-half kickoff and Pagel moved them 66 yards, with free agent Steve Domingos kicking a 31-yard field goal.

Pagel completed 13 of 22 passes for 174 yards. He also threw a 12-yard scoring pass to Kinchen with 41 seconds left in the game.

Rams starter Jim Everett was 7 for 13 for 62 yards.

Reds are in a race for the NL West title

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds have caught their second wind at the right time. The season started as a marathon, then it became a distance race. Now we're getting close to the sprint, manager Lou Pinella said. They've closed in on the Atlanta Braves as they get close to the stretch run. Cincinnati has won four straight to reduce the Braves' NL West lead from seven games to 3½.

The Reds have managed to turn a runaway back into a race with some of their best baseball in weeks. But there's one big question: can they keep it up?

To use Pinella's analogy, everyone's wondering whether they've got a kick left. "We're the ones doing the chasing," Pinella said. "We've got to continue to play good baseball. We're not going to win every night, but we've got to get hot and stay hot.

It won't be easy. Their starting rotation is in disarray, the lineup still lacks a run producer, and there's little depth to the bullpen. And it's not going to get much better the rest of the way.

"We're so beat up right now," reliever Bob Dibble said. "I don't think guys are going to let that stop them. Right now my pitching is a reflection of them — they're not giving up, so I'm not giving up.

The Reds are going to need some pitching help, a few hot hitters, more sensational relief pitching and a lot of luck to over run the Braves.

The starting rotation — the focus of their off-season overhaul — is a mess. Tom Browning is out for the season with a knee injury, Jose Rijo's elbow is unębiable. Tim Belcher has been generally ineffective since the All-Star break, and Greg Swindell's bad back has forced him to miss starts twice.

For now, the Reds are forced to depend upon Tom Bolton, Chris Hammond and Steve Piner to keep the momentum going. Wonder Pinella is restraining his enthusiasm for the race.

"By the end of next week, we'll have a pretty good idea," he said.

The starting lineup also has to hold. Third baseman Bobby Cox is still hobbled by a bad ankle, first baseman Hal Morris isn't all the way back from a hamstring injury, and catcher Scott O'Neill has wrist injury that diminishes his power.

But the bullpen's been terrific. Hengy has enough healthy bodies to produce runs. The offense's main problem so far has been clutch hitting.
Blue Jays acquire Cone from Mets for season ending run

TORONTO (AP) — The first-place Toronto Blue Jays are trying something that worked for them last year and hope it will work again.

That's when they acquired pitcher Tom Candiotti for the 1991 pennant run. The Blue Jays hope David Cone will help them win the East title and even more this year.

Neither the Baltimore Orioles nor the Milwaukee Brewers were giving up their pennant drives after learning Toronto had acquired Cone, one of baseball's premier pitchers, from the New York Mets on Thursday.

"I congratulate them on making a trade," Orioles general manager Roland Hemond said from his Baltimore office. "It's a good move on their part. David Cone is a good pitcher."
The Blue Jays, two games up on Baltimore and 4 1/2 in front of Milwaukee heading into Thursday's game with the Brewers, made the trade because their starters have been struggling.

"I'm somewhat disappointed simply because we're trying to catch those guys," said Sal Bando, senior vice-president of baseball operations for the Brewers.

"I totally understand. I'd have done the same thing if I was in (Toronto GM) Pat Gillick's position."
The Blue Jays, two games up on Baltimore and 4 1/2 in front of Milwaukee heading into Thursday's game with the Brewers, made the trade because their starters have been struggling.

"I think if you ask people in New York or Los Angeles, they know that what you have on paper and the money you spend doesn't guarantee a winner," said Bando.

"It does shore up their pitching. I'd rather be in Toronto's position than in ours."

Hemond conceded nothing.

"This game has to be played between the white lines," said Hemond. "Only time will tell. Things don't always work out like you expect.

"We've held our own. Our being in the race all year likely forced them to make that trade."

Toronto has made a habit of trading for pitchers late in the season, with varying degrees of success. In 1987, the Jays were dealing for the East. Toronto got knuckleballer Phil Niekro from Cleveland, but he didn't work out. Then they got Mike Flanagan from the Orioles.

But Detroit acquired Doyle Alexander from Atlanta and he went 11-1 as the Tigers overtook the Blue Jays in the final week. In return, the Tigers sent John Smoltz, then a minor-league prospect, to the Braves.

"Doyle Alexander helped Detroit win in '87," said Hemond. "But John Smoltz helped Atlanta last year and they'll probably win their division again this year."

In 1989, Toronto got lefty Bud Black from Cleveland. The Jays won the East but lost in the playoffs to Oakland. Black subsequently signed with San Francisco as a free agent.

Feggins won't return to Wolfpack squad until January

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State forward Bryant Feggins, who sustained nerve damage after being shot this spring, won't return to the Wolfpack team before January.

Feggins, who missed last season recovering his left knee, isn't enrolled this semester.

Robinson said the 6-foot-6, 238-pound Feggins fell behind in four courses because of the April shooting incident in Greensboro. Feggins, a junior, will spend the next few months completing 12 credit hours he needs to become eligible for the second semester.

Feggins was shot in the right shoulder on the North Carolina A&T campus after he and friends went to Greensboro to buy concert tickets. Feggins told police he accidentally bumped into someone, who asked for an apology. When Feggins refused and kept walking, the person shot him.

Police have yet to change anyone in the shooting.

Feggins, who averaged 13.3 points and 5.2 rebounds during his sophomore season two years ago, was in good academic standing before the injury, Robinson said.

Toronto has the current four-game home series remaining with Milwaukee and a three-game set against the Orioles in Baltimore late next month. Cone will pitch Saturday against the Brewers.

"I think if you ask people in New York or Los Angeles, they knew that what you have on paper and the money you spend doesn't guarantee a winner," said Bando.

Aggies think big after opening win

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — When Texas A&M beat Stanford in the Pigskin Classic, the victory was overshadowed by Bill Walsh's return to college coaching.

Soon, however, the No. 7 Aggies could be stepping out of the shadows and into the spotlight of a national championship race.

With a favorable schedule, a potentially dominating defense and a desire to quiet critics of the much-maligned Southwest Conference, Texas A&M appears poised to make a run for No. 1.

Although the Aggies' offense sputtered Wednesday night in their 10-7 victory over No. 17 Stanford, their "Wrecking Crew" defense demolished Walsh's intricate Cardinal attack.

Tackle guard Eric England said Walsh gave him extra motivation by stating in a pregame news conference that his players were generally smarter than their opponents.

"When he said that, it really made me want to play hard against them," said England, who led the Aggies with five tackles and three assists. "I think we're smart enough to play with anybody."

And, possibly good enough to slice through a schedule that includes only one more team (No. 25 Texas) ranked in the preseason poll.

Texas A&M returns 16 starters, including four all-SWC performers, from a team that went 10-2 last year and won the conference title. But the Aggies' chances of winning a national title may hinge on sophomore quarterback Jeff Granger, a major-league pitching prospect who gave up football after last season but rejoined the Aggies after failing to make the U.S. Olympic baseball team.

Granger, a backup last year to team leader Bucky Richardson, got off to a rough start Wednesday night but after being benched for several series in the third quarter, Granger came back in the final period, tied the game with a 21-yard TD pass and set up the winning field goal with a spectacular 33-yard run.

"Jeff Granger is a baseball player and just like in baseball, if a batter is not doing well, you pull him out," A&M coach R.C. Slocum said. "In football, we can put him back in the game. I thought he was more focused when he got back in there."

The damage to Stanford may be more psychological than physical.

Instead of confusing the opposition with its sophisticated system, the Cardinal created its own confusion in the second half. Stanford didn't make a first down in the third quarter and gained only 78 yards after intermission.

"It doesn't take a genius to see that we weren't moving the ball," said quarterback Steve Steinstrom, sacked five times and intercepted twice in the game. "We need to be more sound in our execution."

One "genius" who recognizes the problem is Walsh, the former San Francisco 49ers coach still readjusting to the college game after a 14-year hiatus.

"We have to learn more about our players," he said. "We have to develop a bigger running back who can run inside more effectively and we have to get our receivers down the field a little better."

Stanford must improve in order to post a second straight winning season for the first time since Walsh coached there in 1977-78. The Cardinal has road games at No. 2 Washington, No. 3 Notre Dame, No. 18 UCLA and No. 20 California plus a home date with Southern Cal, which has lost to Stanford only once since 1976.

next Thursday to determine the fate of Vincent.

Although it is unlikely the owners will vote to remove Vincent, the incident has further tarnished baseball's image.

Most of us can't remember when baseball wasn't a slave to financial concerns. It has been and always will be a business, but the only event of true importance happens between the lines, and the owners are blurring the view with selfish concerns.

Fay Vincent has and—if given the chance—will continue to do what is best for the game of baseball.

But the owners may hand him his walking papers. Where do I apply?

Bama's Palmer battling off-field difficulties

COLUMBIANA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama wide receiver David Palmer turned his focus to football after a judge granted him youthful offender status in his drunken driving case.

The decision, made on Wednesday by Shelby County District Court Judge Ron Jackson, all but closed the book on Palmer's June 6 arrest after a two-car wreck. Records in youthful offender cases are sealed under state law.

Palmer was scheduled to go to court Monday, but his attorney asked for an expedited hearing, which moved his case up to Wednesday.

The ninth-ranked Crimson Tide opens the season Sept. 5 against Vanderbilt. Palmer's attorney, Rodger Smitherman of Birmingham, said Palmer can now begin "focusing on the classroom and his football." "I'm glad the situation is coming to a head," Smitherman said.

"Sometimes you never know what can come up in the courtroom but right now I don't see anything else that should keep David from getting out of this and back to football," he said.

Palmer, 19, faced drunken driving and possession of marijuana with intent to sell charges in the crash. He is expected to be treated like any first-time offender but as a youthful offender, any fines, court costs or other punishment will not be revealed.

"The youthful offender status allows the individual to have a record that is not a part of a part of our criminal justice system," said District Attorney Doug Axe. "That's a benefit to the defendant, advantageously, the defendant, the community, and the state."

Alabama coach Gene Stallings has refused to speculate on any possible disciplinary action that Palmer might face. Palmer has been practicing with the Tide since the varsity returned Aug. 11, but he did not participate in a scrimmage on Wednesday.

Beck shoots bogey-free round on way to two stroke advantage

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Chip Beck withdrew from a tournament to practice for the World Series of Golf. And it paid off.

"I wanted to be prepared," he explained. "I wanted to learn the course and the greens. I'm glad I spent the two extra days here."

The two additional practice sessions helped produce a bogey-free, 5-under-par 65 that gave him a two-stroke lead Thursday in the weather-interrupted first round of this $1.4 million event.

Included in those 65 strokes were 11 one-putts, including par-savers on four of the last five holes at the Firestone Country Club.

Obviously benefitting from those added practice sessions, as well as an early tee time that got him off before the greens spiked up, Beck used only 11 puts on the back nine.

Beck arrived in Akron Sunday night, a full two days early, in order to prepare for the tournament that brings together 45 title-winners from around the world.

To do that, he had to withdraw from a commitment to play in an unofficial, two-day tournament in Oregon early this week.

"I wanted to have a little better shot at it here," said Beck, who secured his place in the elite field with a victory in New Orleans earlier this year.

"Half my game is preparation," said Beck, who last year became only the second man in PGA Tour history to record a 59. "It's different for every individual, but for me it's preparation: that's what it takes for me."

Today, however, it may take some help from the weatherman. The forecast calls for 90 percent chance of rain, possibly heavy, and thunderstorms from the remnants of Hurricane Andrew.

The international field got a little preview of the possible problems with a one-hour, 35-minute thunderstorm delay late Thursday afternoon.

Masters champion Fred Couples, playing in the final twosome with U.S. Open titleholder Tom Kite, was among those held up and wrapped up his 67 only moments before darkness fell.

Despite his second-place standing in a tournament that offers $252,000 to the winner, Couples said he was still well short of the form that produced three victories early this year.

"This is just one round. I'm far from getting it back," Couples said. "I have a lot of work ahead of me."

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons expressed little hope Thursday night of having Pro Bowl cornerback Deion Sanders on the field when the team opens the regular season on Sept. 6.

"The probability of him being here in the next few days is not high," Jim Hay, the Falcons chief financial officer, said after negotiating with Sanders' agent, Eugene Parker, for the second day.

Parker also met with Atlanta Braves general manager John Schuerholz earlier in the day and was meeting with him again Thursday night shortly before the start of the Montreal-Atlanta baseball game.

"We've probably had a short recess for a little while until someone else comes out with a better idea," Hay said.

The Falcons had offered Sanders, an outfielder with the Braves, a $1 million bonus to forgo baseball and report to the football team at the start of training camp last month.

Asked if that bonus offer was still on the table, Hay said, "It was reported in the paper that we had not taken it down and I couldn't dispute that, but there were some pretty substantial reductions if he elected to miss the two games because of the World Series and playoff games."

Parker had been trying to work out a deal that would have had Sanders play both sports at the same time — appearing with the Falcons on Sundays and with the Braves the rest of the week.

They wanted a deal that would have allowed Sanders to go back to baseball full-time if the Falcons made the playoffs and World Series. Atlanta had a 3 1/2-game lead over Cincinnati in the NL West after Wednesday's action. The Falcons have two games and an off day on the schedule during the period of the baseball postseason.

Asked if it now appeared Sanders wouldn't be in a Falcons uniform until after the baseball season ends, Hay said, "I don't know if you can draw that conclusion."

He said the Falcons thought it was the appropriate time to try to work out a deal.

Asked how he felt after his talk with Parker ended, Hay said, "Disappointed? Yes. Discouraged? No. If another window opened, we would probably pursue it."

Hoosiers to test Irish in exhibition

BY JASON KELLY
Sports Writer

It has all the ingredients to be one of the best college soccer games of the season.

Except for one.

Neither team really cares who wins.

When the 30th-ranked Notre Dame men’s soccer team travels to Indianapolis tomorrow for an exhibition game against number five Indiana, in the Golden Boot Classic, both teams will be more concerned with themselves than with their opponent.

“It’s different than a regular season game,” said Irish coach Mike Berticelli. “I could care less about scouting Indiana and I’m sure they feel the same way.”

What Berticelli does care about is filling some holes in his lineup before the regular season gets underway next weekend.

The starting unit has already undergone a major face lift during the preseason. Senior forward Kevin Pendergast and junior midfielder Mike Palmier are both being considered for a shift to defense. Sophomore Tim Oates and freshmen Bill Lanza, both expected to be major offensive contributors, are nursing injuries, allowing other players to see preseason action.

“As we won’t be the same team against Indiana that we will be later in the season,” explained. “But the game will give us the opportunity to look at some other players and see how they can contribute.”

Although the teams are not losing sleep over the importance of tomorrow’s game, the Classic will provide a taste of the regular season.

“There will be thousands of people at the game, so there will be undertones of a regular season game,” Berticelli added. “We need to downplay that and remember it’s just a practice game.”

There’s no better way for an improving soccer team to practice than to battle one of the nation’s best teams.

Regardless of all the hype, however, Berticelli will not allow his team to lose its focus.

“This is nothing more than an opportunity to practice and try out some different combinations,” he explained, “but quickly added, “when we play them in the regular season it will be a different story.”

For now, it’s just practice.
