Clinton campaign targets young vote

By MONICA YANT
Editor-in-Chief

For political strategists like Kate Fischer, campaign stops go beyond the usual opportunities to reach an important, historically "overlooked" youth vote.

"It's time to give American young people the opportunity to get involved in the political process. Their energies, their ideas, and their experiences need to be addressed," said Fischer, coordinator of campus visits in the Clinton/Gore headquarters in Little Rock, Ark.

Fischer's role is typical of Clinton staffers working to get the saxophone-playing, MTV-friendly, youthful, generation Fucher believes has been "oversold" and is ready to be addressed, "as the generation Fucher believes will see some of Truman in Bush."

"Bill Clinton, on the other hand, is working as he can to stress his youth — and the youthful presidency of John Kennedy," he added.

But targeting the youth vote could be a gamble for Clinton. Fucher believes Bush knows older Americans vote. Clinton can't be sure about younger ones.

Historically, voter turnout among 18 to 24 year-olds is among the lowest. Since 1972, the number of young voters has dropped by more than one-fourth — to the point where only 39 percent turned out for the 1988 election.

ND graduate teaching program awarded grant

By THERESA ALEMAN
News Writer

The Notre Dame graduate teaching program has been awarded a $50,000 grant by Burlington Resources Foundation, according to Nathan Hatch, dean of the Notre Dame graduate school.

Over the next four years, five students will receive $4,000 each year. Recipients of the grant money are senior graduate students currently working on their dissertations, according to Hatch.

Grant recipients were selected for their academic excellence as well as past teaching experience, he said.

All grant recipients will teach sections of Freshman Seminar. Hatch said.

Though graduate students are currently teaching sections of freshman seminar, Hatch believes that "the freshman program should be greatly enhanced through this program" by attracting the best and brightest students for the most teaching experience.

Hatch was on the board to select grant recipients last year. "Some of that $50,000 grant money was awarded to ND" for extra section instructors. Only highly motivated students could "learn to teach well."

MIAMI (AP) — Andrew Guanche was laid to rest Wednesday in the calm after the hurricane for which he was named.

He was born into poverty and took with him little: a pacifier and a hairbrush, placed alongside him in a tiny casket, 10 inches wide and 24 inches long. They were the first gifts he received in his short life.

"Andrew! Andrew! Andrew!" his mother, Natalia, cried hysterically as she bent over his lifeless body.

"Why, God, why? You gave me this child only a few days. Why did you take him?"

Natalia and Andrew's father, Fito, stepped forward to hold his child in their arms at a family farm. Hunger in America's breadbasket.

In 1985, Brown led a national task force that warned that 20 million Americans suffered from hunger, defined as a condition where health is threatened because a person repeatedly doesn't consume enough nutrients.

Brown said he has confidence in the updated figures because different methods were used to calculate them, and each resulted in a total around 30 million.

Brown said the profile of hunger has changed as the problem has grown.

"The stereotype is that this is largely an inner city, minority problem," he said.

"These stereotypes no longer hold. It's very dramatic to go into the Midwest and hold a baby whose mother and child is in your arms at a family farm. Hunger is in America's breadbasket."

Hatch, who was on the board to select grant recipients last year, singled himself out as a candidate to design and teach a new course in the school.

He said the $50,000 could not have any money to pay for his funeral or cemetery plot. The funeral home donated both.

Even in the finality of their son's death, the Andrade family did not have any money to pay for his funeral or cemetery plot. Their medical costs were covered by a FEMA grant.

"I can overcome that memory," he said.

The funeral drew scant attention, a dozen relatives and friends.

But to his father and mother and six brothers, baby Andrew was more of a father than a husband, and Natalia, life as being more of a father than a mother.

"I lost part of my life," said his father, a 44-year-old unemployed handyman. "It's a hard strike for us. We have lost all our happiness and strength. I am emotionally destroyed."

He was the one who picked up the casket and felt the coldness of his body and stared into a face that had turned blue.

"I can overcome that memory," he said.

I had this interesting conversation with this grumpy old man at the local watering hole the other day.

"Can ya believe what the University has done now?" he asked me.

"Anything in particular?"

"Inviting that pro-choice fruitcake to speak at Clinton to come here! This shows how little value ND places on unborn human life."

"Hold on, there. Notre Dame invited both Bush and Clinton to come here. Bush simply hasn't said whether or not he'll come."

"Yeh, but they probably told Bush he couldn't give a political speech or some garbage like that. Anyway, I'd like to see Bush. He's just like Harry 'Give em Hell' Truman, ya know."

He tries to paint himself in Truman-esque colors, but frankly I don't see the resemblance.

First of all, Bush voted against Truman. Secondly, Truman was a man of rigid principle. Bush hasn't met an issue he didn't reverse himself on. Remember 'the no new taxes' thing?

"Now, don't ya start blaming Bush for somethin' Congress did! Bush's whole 'Clean House' deal is about stuff like Congress raising taxes. Don't you remember anything from civics class?"

Wait a second. Bush's promise was to fight Congress, with vetoes if necessary, on stuff like tax hikes. Also, about 90 Republican members of Congress voted against Bush's last budget. Don't you read the papers, sir?"

"Nah. Then I run the danger of seeing one of your columns."

Then he didn't read my last one about Bush and his 'family values' campaign.

"Noope. But it was probably some trash about letting single women and gays run households. No wonder Dan Quayle is so upset at ya 'media elite'!

You're not fond of my writings, I take it.

"Not one bit. Yer one of those flag-burning, draft-dodging liberal Democrats who've abandoned family values. I can tell from yer columns."

Purdon me, sir, but I'm not a Democrat. I'm an independent (it cuts down on my junk mail). Heck, I'd vote Republican, if they nominated someone like Theodore Roosevelt, someone who really wants to change this country.

"Hey, kid, ain't ya been paying attention? Bush is the real candidate for change. He says so all the time!!"

I'm not sure I agree with the characterization of Bush as a change candidate. He says so all the time.

Calm down, sir. This is a 'kinder, gentler nation.' Remember? Anyway, I've finished my beer now, so I'll leave. Anything else you want to say, Mr. Bush-lover?"

"Yeah! Okay Beulah!!!"

The grumpy old man really likes Bush.

Judge removed from tobacco case

PHILADELPHIA — A federal judge who has presided over cigarette-hazards lawsuits for the past decade has been removed from one case by an appeals court that said he had a possible bias.

The 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals also overturned a February ruling by U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin of Newark, N.J., who ordered confidential tobacco industry documents turned over to the plaintiff, a woman whose father died of lung cancer.

The tobacco industry appealed, saying Sarokin was so prejudiced against it that a fair trial was impossible. The appeals court, in a unanimous opinion released Friday, said Sarokin may be capable of presiding over the case without bias, but "the appearance of impartiality will be served only if an impartial judge is made."

SMC Professor dies

NOTRE DAME - St. Mary's College Professor Mark Bambenek passed away early Wednesday morning. Bambenek was a professor of Chemistry and Physics and past chairman of the Chemistry Department. He had suffered a stroke earlier in the summer. The funeral will take place later this week at St. Mary's. There will not be a visitation.
Yeltsin's trip postponed to resolve dispute

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin called off a trip to Japan on Wednesday in the face of growing pressure at home over four disputed Kuril islands seized by the Soviet Union in 1945.

Many Russians had expressed fear that Yeltsin would surrender two of the four islands during his three-day trip in exchange for major economic assistance from Japan.

Japan has insisted that the dispute over the Kurils — known in Tokyo as the Northern Territories — be settled before it contributes large-scale aid to Russia.

The dispute has been the major stumbling block in their relations and prevented the Soviet Union and Japan from signing a treaty formally ending World War II.

Yeltsin's press office blamed "a number of circumstances" for the indefinite postponement of the visit, which had been scheduled to begin Sunday. It did not elaborate, but said Russia's foreign minister continued talks with Japan.

"The president's decision does not affect good neighborly relations with both these states," the statement said.

In Tokyo, Japanese officials expressed regret at Yeltsin's announcement. But Foreign Minister Michio Watanabe said: "We are taking this calmly."

Justice Department clears some in check scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department on Wednesday began clearing an unspecified number of House members under review for possible criminal wrongdoing in an investigation of the scandal-plagued House bank.

But the preliminary inquiry of thousands of overdrafts will leave some members under a legal cloud through Election Day.

"On the evidence we have reviewed, I have concluded that there is no basis for pursuing a further inquiry regarding possible criminal violations concerning your account," special counsel Malcolm Wilkey told individual House members in hand-delivered letters Wednesday.

Within hours, 58 members said they had received the letter.

Among those cleared were Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., who had two overdrafts, and Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., who had 22.

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., said no overdrafts.

The Justice Department would not say how many House members were being cleared in the initial batch of letters, expected to be delivered over the next few days, or how many will face a continuing review.

But a department statement said it was Wilkey's "firm expectation that the vast majority of members and former members under review will receive clearance letters."

Wilkey's letter to members said future notification letters will be sent "as soon as we have satisfied ourselves that the records do not disclose any conduct which would warrant further inquiry."

He wrote that the notifications received now "should not imply that members not yet notified will not in the future receive a letter similar to this."

Rep. William Thomas, R-Calif., who had 119 bad checks and did not receive a letter, said, "I assume they're going through the stack and doing the easy things first. Some will take longer. I imagine it will go on all fall. It's not politically bad so long as the media report it correctly."

Foley, in a statement on behalf of the House Democratic leadership, said it "has always been evident to us" that "no member has violated any law in this matter."

WASHINGTON (AP) — A package of U.S. loan guarantees for Israel seems headed for approval by Congress, ending a dispute that badly soured relations between the two countries.

The Senate Appropriations foreign aid subcommittee is expected to act on the five-year, $10 billion package next week as part of its 1993 foreign aid bill. Agreement in the House and final passage are expected before Congress adjourns for the year in October.

President Bush, in a speech to a Jewish service organization on Tuesday, renewed his promise to Congress for up to $5 billion in aid and said Israel wants to use the money to build housing and provide jobs for an influx of Jewish students arriving on campus.

Baker, proposed the building of new settlements in occupied Arab territories. New Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin promised loan guarantees for Israeli from President Bush last month.

Dear Members of the Notre Dame Community,

During the past academic year a small subcommittee of the working group on Missions, Opportunity, and Challenges (MOC) of the Colloquy for the Year 2000 drafted a mission statement for the University. We discussed this draft with the members of the MOC group of which we are a part and with the Committee for the Whole of the Colloquy. We now feel ready to share that draft with the larger Notre Dame community for your comments, suggestions and emendations.

To the left of the mission statement we have added a "Prenote" which sets out the theological understanding that undergirds the mission statement itself. That "Prenote" intends to express our understanding of the word Catholic which is part of our self-understanding of Notre Dame as a national Catholic university. It is not the mission statement but the context out of which the mission statement arises.

Our purpose in publishing this draft in the Observer is simple: we invite students, staff and faculty to help us produce a final statement of mission and purpose that will be part of the final document produced by the colloquy. We would invite you to communicate any reactions you may have to any member of the subcommittee whose name is listed below. We would like such responses before the end of September.

Gregory Butrus (Student Body President)
Lawrence Cunningham (Professor: Theology)
Carol Ann Mooney (Professor: Law School)
Thomas F. O'Meara, O.P. (Warren Professor: Theology)
Mark Poorman, C.S.C. (Assistant Professor: Theology)
Kathleen Maas Weigert (Academic Coordinator: Center for Social Concerns)

Prenote: The context of the Mission

The following statement of purpose and definition will speak of the University of Notre Dame as a place of teaching and research, of scholarship and publication, of service and community. These components follow quite naturally from certain distinctive characteristics of Catholicism. The first is sacramentality. The Catholic vision encounters God in all things — people, events, the world at large, the whole cosmos. It is in and through the visible world and our endeavors within it that we come to know and experience the invisible God. The second is mediation. The Catholic vision perceives God to be not only present in, but also working through persons, events and material things. The Catholic believes there is an

The University of Notre Dame is a Catholic academic community of higher learning, animated in a special way from its origins by the Congregation of Holy Cross and dedicated to the communal pursuit and sharing of truth. This University exists that through free inquiry and open discussion the variant lines of Catholic thought might intersect with all the forms of knowledge found in the arts, sciences and professions. This University is Catholic in its deliberate determination to render to the Church and to the world this unique service in Christian wisdom.

This purpose is concretely realized in the intellectual interchange that constitutes the life of the University, the development of its students and faculty, and the advancement of knowledge through distinguished teaching, research, scholarship, publication and service.

Therefore, the University of Notre Dame essentially includes within itself the presence, the voices, and the contributions of diverse scholars and students, both those who represent the Catholic intellectual heritage and those from other traditions. The diversity of Notre Dame is further enhanced by the presence of different races and ages, nationalities and genders. This pluralism enables and enriches the exchange that forms the University community. The continuing presence of a predominant number of Catholic intellectuals is crucial for the Catholic identity of the University. What is asked of all scholars and students, however, is not a particular creedal affiliation, but a respect for the objectives of Notre Dame and a willingness to enter into the conversation that gives it life and character. The University, consequently, insists upon that academic freedom which makes this open discussion and inquiry possible.

The University fosters the development in its undergraduate students of those disciplined habits of mind which are inculcated by the liberal arts and which characterize educated, free human beings. Such skills are: to read with critical understanding; to think and express oneself with clarity and coherence in speech and writing; to frame problems of theoretical inquiry or practical action with a sense of the relevant evidence, historical context, and procedures appropriate... intelligibility or coherence to all reality, discoverable through the mind and the imagination, and through the sciences which give shape and discipline to both. The Catholic further believes that all human activity is called into collaboration by God to bring this world to its completion. The third is communion. The Catholic vision sees the way to God and God's way to us as communal, not individualistic, and that the consummation of the world lies in a communion of persons. That is why the Church as a community has had such a significant role in Catholicism, and why Notre Dame has always conceived of itself as a family and has fostered familial bonds at every level of its institutional life.

These three characteristics find their source and reality in Jesus Christ, the incarnation of the divine in the human. He is the sacrament of divine presence among us. He is the mediator who manifests God's love to humanity and who teaches the way to salvation. He is the Lord who formed a new kind of community to preach the coming of the Kingdom. A Catholic university, then, draws its basic inspiration from Jesus Christ as the source of wisdom and its mission from the conviction that all things can be brought into their completion in Christ.

As the University draws its inspiration from Jesus Christ, it understands the imperative for higher education to be heightened by critical developments that have made of this planet one world. Religious and cultural, technological and environmental, economic and political challenges make up that world. Free women and men and the communities they form will direct this world into its next millennium. The shape it takes will reflect their knowledge, their skills and their commitments — in a word, their education.

for a reasonable resolution; to possess an understanding of quantitative thinking and scientific method; to comprehend something of the great discoveries of science and technology as well of their contemporary promise; to think in a manner that is both insightful and creative and to recognize this in others; to analyze issues philosophically back to their fundamental presuppositions; to grasp the significance of God's self-revelation in Jesus Christ and to apprehend the theological implications of knowledge gained in other disciplines as these relate to the great questions of human existence.

Together with these liberal capacities of mind, the University cultivates in all its students a humane sensitivity both to human accomplishment and to human misery: appreciation of such great achievements of human beings as are found in art and literature, history and sociology, mathematics, technology and science; a disciplined sensibility to the poverty, injustice and oppression that burden the lives of so many of their fellow human beings. Such a sense of human solidarity and a developed concern for the common good reaches its fulfillment as learning becomes service to justice.

As a research university, Notre Dame takes the responsibility not only for the diffusion of knowledge through the academic formation of its undergraduates, but also for the advancement of knowledge in a search for truth through original inquiry and publication. This objective particularly engages the faculty and the various divisions of the graduate program, but also its professional schools and special institutes. As a university committed to public service, Notre Dame sponsors professional schools that equip their students for a particular career with the skills and disciplines proper to each. The University also sponsors special institutes whose focus is research and science on pressing contemporary social issues. The graduate programs, the professional schools and these special institutes, aided by the general ethos of the university, also foster in their students those intellectual habits and humane sensibilities that the University expects from all its graduates.

The Catholic character of Notre Dame as an academic community depends upon the seriousness with which the religious dimensions of all human learning are recognized, given priority, and explored throughout the University. The University embodies its deep concern for the religious and moral education of the students not only in the academic reflection brought to bear upon ethical and social issues but also in its encouragement of a manner of life consonant with a Christian community. Residential life contributes significantly to develop in the students that sense of community and of responsibility which prepares them for subsequent leadership in building a society that is at once more human and more divine. As a Catholic community, liturgy and retreats, spiritual direction, volunteer work and the continual promotion of service, permeate the life of the University and contribute to the complete education of the human person.

In all of these dimensions of the University, Notre Dame pursues its objectives through the formation of an authentic human community graced by the Spirit of Christ.
Controversy surrounding Kaplan's sculpture contributes to its purpose

Dear Editor,

I was pleased to read in The Observer (Sept. 7) that Marta Kaplan's sculpture, previously displayed in front of LeMans Hall at Saint Mary's, has sparked controversy and debate concerning both the piece as well as the role of art today.

In their letter, Tabor and her friend concluded that the sculpture "must be some kind of revolting joke," and they insist that it "didn't give us anything to ponder about our bodies that we haven't been forced to before."

Perhaps they didn't ponder further about their anatomy, but it is obvious that the sculpture prompted a strong reaction, an intelligent conversation, and subsequent thought which Kaplan felt strongly enough about to share with all students and faculty.

These are precisely some of the goals many artists strive toward with their work. And many women artists today, such as Cindy Sherman and Laurie Simmons, choose to work with the exact same issues of the exploitation and subjugation of women that Kaplan apparently addresses.

Their art, and perhaps Kaplan's art, does not endorse traditional ways of viewing women, as Tabor suggests. Rather, through their work, they attack society's way of thinking, with the hope of prompting debate and instigating changes.

Less specifically, a function of modern art is to open the senses and the mind to new and different ways of experiencing and thinking, not only about art, but about the world around us. Tabor wished for a warning and an explanation of the work before she experienced it.

However, I must agree with Kaplan, who has hesitantly spelt out her intentions. The viewer must interpret the work for himself or herself, and then use the experience and the knowledge gained for his or her own purposes. What use do we have for a work which has been explained and untangled for us?

The manner in which the piece was abruptly presented allowed each person to approach the sculpture without previously formed expectations, and thus they were free to react in their own individual way.

In the article, Tabor agrees with Prof. Schlesinger's definition of art as "a beautiful creation." But I have to agree with the recently deceased American avant-garde composer John Cage, who said, "If I tell it to myself, art would be to something very simple—it would be sufficient for it to be beautiful. But when it's useful it should spill out of just being beautiful and move over to other aspects of life so that when we're not with the art it has nevertheless influenced our actions or our responses to the environment."

Tabor also suggests that the sculpture be placed in Moreau Gallery, "where most art appears." This, she claims, would have to lead to a better reception of the piece. Its placement in a gallery, I'm afraid, would have lead to a reception with little or no debate, and the fullest potential of the work would not have been served.

The "Sculptures and veins to the communal" actions which Tabor speaks of are no longer limited to galleries and museums. Many modern artists, from Duchamp in the early part of the century to Christo in the present, have worked to shorten the gap between art and life by bringing art into the everyday environment.

To quote Cage again, "The changes that have taken place in this century are such that art is not an escape from life, but rather an introduction to it."

The hushed observation of art is not an escape from life, but rather an introduction to it. The hushed observation of art is a museum, entered by a patron full of expectations and pre-conceived ideas, no longer allows art to fulfill its complex new roles in an equally complex modern society.

Although the entire situation surrounding Kaplan's sculpture seems to Tabor to be a disaster, my understanding of modern art brings me to see the initial installation as a phenomenal success. I am happy to read that Ms. Kaplan seems to be of a similar opinion, even in light of the physical damage.

Controversy surrounding Kaplan's sculpture contributes to its purpose

Dear Editor,

I was pleased to read in The Observer (Sept. 7) that Marta Kaplan's sculpture, previously displayed in front of LeMans Hall at Saint Mary's, has sparked controversy and debate concerning both the piece as well as the role of art today.

In their letter, Tabor and her friend concluded that the sculpture "must be some kind of revolting joke," and they insist that it "didn't give us anything to ponder about our bodies that we haven't been forced to before."

Perhaps they didn't ponder further about their anatomy, but it is obvious that the sculpture prompted a strong reaction, an intelligent conversation, and subsequent thought which Kaplan felt strongly enough about to share with all students and faculty.

These are precisely some of the goals many artists strive toward with their work. And many women artists today, such as Cindy Sherman and Laurie Simmons, choose to work with the exact same issues of the exploitation and subjugation of women that Kaplan apparently addresses.

Their art, and perhaps Kaplan's art, does not endorse traditional ways of viewing women, as Tabor suggests. Rather, through their work, they attack society's way of thinking, with the hope of prompting debate and instigating changes.

Less specifically, a function of modern art is to open the senses and the mind to new and different ways of experiencing and thinking, not only about art, but about the world around us. Tabor wished for a warning and an explanation of the work before she experienced it.

However, I must agree with Kaplan, who has hesitantly spelt out her intentions. The viewer must interpret the work for himself or herself, and then use the experience and the knowledge gained for his or her own purposes. What use do we have for a work which has been explained and untangled for us?

The manner in which the piece was abruptly presented allowed each person to approach the sculpture without previously formed expectations, and thus they were free to react in their own individual way.

In the article, Tabor agrees with Prof. Schlesinger's definition of art as "a beautiful creation." But I have to agree with the recently deceased American avant-garde composer John Cage, who said, "If I tell it to myself, art would be to something very simple—it would be sufficient for it to be beautiful. But when it's useful it should spill out of just being beautiful and move over to other aspects of life so that when we're not with the art it has nevertheless influenced our actions or our responses to the environment."

Tabor also suggests that the sculpture be placed in Moreau Gallery, "where most art appears." This, she claims, would have to lead to a better reception of the piece. Its placement in a gallery, I'm afraid, would have lead to a reception with little or no debate, and the fullest potential of the work would not have been served.

The "Sculptures and veins to the communal" actions which Tabor speaks of are no longer limited to galleries and museums. Many modern artists, from Duchamp in the early part of the century to Christo in the present, have worked to shorten the gap between art and life by bringing art into the everyday environment.

CAMPUS MINISTRY...

An Invitation to Fourth Day

As a Rector in a residence hall, as well as a Campus Minister, I have had desperately trying to observe students and to listen to their needs. I am particularly intrigued by reaching former first year students who are desperately trying to find their niche at this university. As I recall my own college years, I remember how important it was to "fit in" somewhere; to find a community with whom I could relate, socialize, and share my life. The alternative to "fitting in" was, unhappily, being alone. Obviously, there are times when all of us want to be alone, but there should be times of our own choosing. None of us wants to be alone because we haven't quite found a way to belong.

In their eagerness to fit in, individuals may often fall in with groups with which they are uncomfortable. Ideally, we would all like to share time with those who hold the same values and beliefs, which allow you to investigate further your own spirituality. You will most probably meet a few individuals whom you can begin to call friends. Most importantly though, you will most likely meet a few individuals whom you can begin to call friends.

The community invites all who are interested in this type of activity to attend. Many students are involved for the sheer enjoyment of meeting weekly with a large group of people who hold some of their same beliefs. Others come to talk about their daily struggles or to discuss questions with which they are concerned. It is a fun time for people to gather in a community of faith. It is a time to NOT be alone.

I would like to invite you to explore various communities on campus which allow you to investigate further your own spirituality. You will certainly meet others who share your concerns and questions. You will find a group in which you can "fit in." Most importantly, you will most probably meet a few individuals whom you can begin to call friends.

Lake Forest, Ill. (AP) — The Chicago Bears will activate William Perry this week and the All-Pro offensive tackle will join a team that has played very well," Ditka said.

He won the national Series. It was at this level that Buffomante started to attract attention. He was a good team for the mid-American Conference.

Despite the odds, Buffomante has logged hundreds of hours behind the wheel of karts and cars since becoming competitive in the sport of racing, but in an ironic twist of fate he ran into some trouble during his driver's test.

"It was two days before Homecoming and I wanted to get my license so my sister could drive me to the dance. The test was on old roads and I was cutting corners like a race car driver would and I failed," said Buffomante.

Right now, Buffomante knows where he wants to go in racing, but he also knows that he has a long way to go. Currently, Buffomante is sponsored only by his family. "We've got a great football player and he adds to an already tough Bears' defense." he said. "You don't want to make cuts, but we've got to do what is best for the 47 people who are going to play, and try to make the team to a fifth place overall finish in the three week event.

The coach said Perry will see a lot of playing time and may eventually be the starter. But in any case, he added, the three players will continue to alternate.

"This should make us stronger," Ditka said. "We did the same thing when we had Steve and Dan (Hampton) and William." Ditka said he is not looking forward to making player cuts on Friday.

"There's a chance we'll keep eight defensive linemen, but at this point it's very hard to make cuts," he said. "You don't want to make cuts. But we've got to do what is best for the 47 people who are going to play, and try to make the team as strong as it can be."

Ditka said he is not planning to do too much differently against New Orleans in the Superdome than he did last year, other than to help out his offensive tackles. Rookie Troy Auzenne is starting on the left side and right offensive tackle Keith Van Horne is questionable because of sore back.

The news about Perry will not sit well with New Orleans' coach, Jim Mora.

"It means we'll have to double team him," Mora said in an earlier conference call from New Orleans. "That's the only way you can stop him. Perry is a great football player and he adds to an already tough Bears' defense."

"He's my idol because he was so young when he got into it (racing). He's got a real flamboyant driving style and he makes big moves. It's always exciting to watch," added Buf-fomante.

Buffomante also got an early introduction to the racing life. Buffomante's father, Anthony Sr., raced karts as his son was growing up and Buffomante used to take the crew for his dad. The elder Buffomante won the first race he ever ran in 1967 at the JACC parking lot.

At that time, there was a Sports Car Club at Notre Dame and Buffomante was the vice president. Despite his racing success, Buffomante Sr. never pressured his son to go into racing. At age 12, Buffomante decided that he wanted to try his hand at racing. He ran his first race that year in a go-kart with a five-horsepower engine and a maximum speed of 50 miles per hour and following in the Buffomante family tradition won his first race.

After four races, Buffomante showed enough promise to move up to a more powerful Sprint Kart and ran in the World Karting Association National Series. It was at this level that Buffomante started to attract attention. He won the WKA National point series three years in a row from 1987-1989 and in 1989 got the opportunity to represent the United States in races half way across the world.

Buffomante was chosen to captain Team USA in the Karting World Championships in New Zealand and helped the team to a fifth place overall finish in the three week event. Yount gets no. 3000

MILWAUKEE (AP) — He broke in as an 18-year-old shortstop in 1974 and now, 19 seasons later, Robin Yount has become a player for the ages with the Milwaukee Brewers.

Unassuming, consistent and durable, the Brewers’ Rickie Roberts has reached 3,000 hits, joining only 16 other major league players on one of baseball’s most elite lists. All but Pete Rose, barred from playing.

Tuesday night, a line single but Pete Rose, barred from playing. Yount got No. 3,000 in the sixth inning. The key has been consistency and health,” said Yount, who’s been on the disabled list only twice in his career.

A week shy of his 37th birthday, Yount is the third-youngest player to hit the 3,000-hit milestone. Only Ty Cobb, who was 34, and Hank Aaron, who was 36 years and four months, were younger when they got their 3,000th.

Yount, never one to like the spotlight, has played his entire career with the same small-market Brewers, joining them after only one short minor league season.

He is one of three major leaguers to win two Most Valuable Player Awards at different positions. He won as a shortstop in 1982 when the Brewers went to their one World Series.

"I’ve been fairly consistent and not fortunate to stay away from a major injury that kept me out of an extended period of time. The key has been consistency and health," said Yount, who’s been on the disabled list only twice in his career.

Wednesday night, a line single but Pete Rose, barred from playing.

One team president Bud Selig has had a personal hand in negotiating contracts with Yount, including a three-year, after the 1989 season.

"It was my fault I wasn’t an All-American last year,” said the 6-foot-2, 270-pound senior, “I believe I should have been an All-American last year, but I didn’t play up to my ability.”

"I want to be mentioned in the same sentence as Dave Butz, who went on to star with the Washington Redskins.”

"I want to be mentioned in the same sentence as Dave Butz, who went on to star with the Washington Redskins.”

Colletto agreed post-season honors are within Zgonina’s reach.

"I don’t think he’s even reached his potential as a college football player. I don’t feel he’s really turned loose,” Colletto said. "I think he can really become a bigger force.”

Zgonina has created problems for his fullback teammates in practice.

"He controls everything. We try to keep him out of a lot of things and we don’t get much done,” Colletto said. "If he does, he can do the same thing to Cal’s offensive line.”

California defeated San Jose State 46-16 in coach Keith Gilbertson’s debut with the Golden Bears on Saturday.

"We have a lot of respect for him,” Gilbertson said. "I think he’s certainly an Outland Trophy candidate. He’s a guy when you turn the film on or every time you go to the line of scrimmage, you better know where he is.”

Zgonina predicts great year

Zgonina has been moved from nose guard to tackle this year to make it more difficult for offensive linemen to thwart his charges into opposing backfields. He doesn’t care where coach Jim Colletto plays him, however, when the Boilermakers open the season against No. 17 California.

"To me it doesn’t make a difference, as long as I’m making the plays,” Zgonina said. "I’ve been here five years now, and I believe leadership. The best way is to show leadership on the field, making big plays and lining up the team so it goes back to the huddle pumped up.”

"No matter what position I’m at, I will be an All-American this year,” he said. "If I don’t, it will be my fault. But I’ll leave me name in there as someone who has turned this program around.”

Zgonina last year had 53 solo tackles despite constant double- and triple-teaming by opponents. He has 195 after starting 33 consecutive games for Purdue.

"I wasn’t focused enough last year,” Zgonina said. "I want to be an All-American, win the Outland or Lombardi award,” he added.

"I want to be mentioned in the same sentence as Dave Butz, who went on to star with the Washington Redskins.”

"I want to win. I want to go to a bowl game. I want to be an All-American,” he said.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indiana Pacers' first trade in three years was for stability, not scoring.

They already had enough points. The problem was finding a way to distribute them that kept everyone happy.

We have Deliel Schrempf, Reggie Miller and Chuck Person on the floor all the time, there's not enough balls to go around," said Pacers president Dick DeVos, who engineered a four-player swap with Minnesota.

As crunching Tuesday night were Person, a 6-foot-4 forward who was the 1987 NBA rookie of the year, and Michael Williams, a 6-2 guard who found a home — and a starting role — with the Pacers after a two-year Odyssey through the NBA.

In return, Indiana got Pooh Richardson, a 6-1 guard who was Miller's backup mate for two years at UCLA and averaged more than 8 assists a game for his 3-year NBA career, and Sam Mitchell, a 6-8 forward who was the Timberwolves' all-time leading rebounder.

"We felt we had an overabundance of offensive players and not enough players who could perform roles," Walsh said.

That designation as a role player suits both Richardson and Mitchell.

"I'm not Chuck: I'm not going to try to be Chuck," said Mitchell, who averaged 10.1 points a game last season.

"I see myself as a role player, to play defense, get some rebounds. I'm not going to change my game," he said.

He said the trade to Indiana from a team that won only 15 games last season is a "pleasant surprise."

"It's going to be a different feeling knowing from the jump ball you have a chance to win.

With an expansion team you are just hoping you can win," Mitchell said at a news conference late Wednesday afternoon.

Richardson said the Pacers' search for a winning team chemistry means "doing whatever they have to do to win."

"Sometimes everybody has to take a back seat. Whatever it takes — that's what we're going to do," Richardson, who was second in scoring for the Timberwolves last season at 16.5 points a game, said he can bring direction and leadership to the Pacers, and that being reunited with Miller "helps a great deal.

"It will take some pressure off knowing there is someone there who can get him the ball."

Richardson would not speculate whether he would start for the Pacers.

Oilers' Jones returns

HOUSTON (AP) — Defensive end Sean Jones, a major factor in the Houston Oilers' pass rush last season, "untimely and also the Toddler producer," announced his retirement Tuesday at a news conference late Wednesday afternoon.

"It was just time," Jones said after arriving near the end of practice and emerging from his first team meeting. "The reasons I retired may have been a little bit premature. It's something I can always do at another time.

Jones played last year following bitter contract negotiations and has said he remained angry the entire season. He asked to be traded in the off-season and then announced his retirement and missed preseason and Sunday's season opening loss to Pittsburgh.

Jones' arrival left the Oilers with defensive end William Fuller and corner back Cris Dishman in contract negotiations. Dishman and his agent met Wednesday with Oilers officials.

Jones said a talk with coach Jack Pardee helped bring him in.

"I have a lot of respect for him and it was a lot of the things he told me and the feeling he has for this organization," Jones said. "I maintained if I did come back I would put everything behind me and move forward.

Jones played in all 16 games last season and started 11 at right end. He was tied for sixth in the AFC and led the team with 10 sacks. He was second on the team in total tackles with 60.

Jones said he is ready to play this week against the Indianapolis Colts.

"I've kept myself in pretty good condition so I know I can come off the ball and get after the quarterback," he said.

"In terms of how much more coach Pardee wants me to be part of the game plan, that's up to them."

"Every player feels he can roll out of bed and play, just I have to convince the guys in Indianapolis to be as cooperative."

Pardee said he'd have to see Jones in practice before deciding how much to use against the Colts.

SMC volleyball opens year in Kalamazoo

BY EILEEN MCGUIRE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary’s volleyball team will begin the 1992 season at the Kalamazoo College Tournament this Saturday.

Coach Julie Schroeder-Biek, currently in her second season, is apprehensive about beginning the season with a tournament, but has confidence that the Belles will come out on top.

“We’ve only had two weeks together including tryouts. However, we have more talent and depth which would make for a successful season,” said Schroeder-Biek.

The Belles possess six returners, two of whom are seniors - a recipe for great success. The ultimate goal for the volleyball team is simple: to acquire more national attention and obtain a bid in the NCAA tournament.

Last season, the Belles placed first in the nation in blocking percentage. Producing individual records in hitting percentage and setting achieved were senior co-captain Karen Lorton and junior Michelle Martinez, respectively.

Beginning Saturday, Schroeder-Biek would like to see the start of many more individual records.

The team will have to defeat four of the eight teams in Saturday’s confrontation in order to place in the tournament. The Belles will be facing the University of Wisconsin Stout, last year, was ranked third nationally.

“We played them well last year,” praised Coach Schroeder-Biek. “This season, Kalamazoo lost many key players so we know what to expect.

“We’re trying out a new defense this year. Hopefully, this tournament will allow us to work on it. I’m confident we’ll do well.”

Guerrero starts college career off right

BY MATT BOWER
Sports Writer

After flirting with disaster throughout the preseason, the Notre Dame women’s soccer team has returned, with a new star for the future.

Freshman Rosella Guerrero has stormed into the women’s soccer scene, scoring 5 goals in Notre Dame’s first two regular season games.

A grim season was shaping up as four Notre Dame starters fell victim to injury. In addition to losing the three team captains: Margaret Jare, Michelle Lodgyna, and Denise Chabot, the Irish also had to play without their leading scorer, Stephanie Porter. Even Guerrero had to endure early season injuries.

Though many critics might have written off this injury-riddled team, head coach Chris Petrucelli knew his younger players would rise to the challenge. Petrucelli decided to start Eve freshman Rosella Guerrero and four sophomores. “I am totally confident in their ability. It doesn’t matter what year they are, they are just great players,” noted Petrucelli.

Guerrero immediately took advantage of the situation to prove herself as an Irish star of the future. She scored all three Irish goals in a heartbreakingly loss to fifth-ranked North Carolina State.

Coach Petrucelli commented after the game, “I didn’t know if the team could even get three goals. No one could have guessed that she would do this.”

Guerrero’s stellar performance continued into Tuesday’s game with Butler University. She had a hand in all three Irish goals, scoring two and assisting junior Allison Lester on the third. Guerrero commented, “I have really filled the hole created by Stephanie Porter’s injury.”

Perhaps Guerrero’s most valuable attribute is her great attitude.

“I love my teammates. If it wasn’t for them I wouldn’t be here. They are so supportive and they are always pushing you. They all have such a positive attitude,” she remarked.

Buffomante speeding to the top of pack

Weir’s return could mean big things for Irish

It’s official now. After rumors too numerous to count spread this past summer about the availability of Monty Williams to rejoin the Notre Dame basketball team, the University has cleared him to play.

Anyone who remembers watching Monty play for the Irish during his freshman season, or has played against him in the Rock since then, knows what his return will mean to a Notre Dame team thin in talent.

At six-foot-seven, Williams is tough inside and outside, and his ball-handling skills are remarkable. And despite not playing on the team the past two seasons, he will be looked to for the senior leadership this year’s squad will be in need of.

The inevitable wondering will occur. Imagine how much better last season’s team could have been with Williams in there. A few of those close losses would probably have gone the other way, and the Irish may have been wreaking havoc in the NCAA Tournament instead of Ohio State.

Though the Irish received bits of inspiration from junior center Jon Ross and senior forward Carl Cozen, they were not able to spell a tired LaPhonso Ellis and junior forw ard Carl Cozen, they had a front line that was not as strong as it could have been.

The Irish may have been weak in inside and outside, and his ball-handling skills are remarkable. And despite not playing on the team the past two seasons, he will be looked to for the senior leadership this year’s squad will be in need of.
