Israeli tanks are at border of Lebanon

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — Israel amassed tanks along its border with Lebanon on Tuesday while Israeli warplanes and artillery hit guerrilla positions to avenge attacks by Muslim guerrillas that killed six Israelis.

The fighting, which has left at least 13 people dead and 35 wounded in Israel and Lebanon this week, threatened to undermine the seventh round of Arab-Israeli peace talks under way in Washington.

Israel sent nine Merkava tanks into its buffer zone in south Lebanon Tuesday night, according to security sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

An Israeli army spokeswoman said "a lot" of tanks are being amassed at Israel's northern border, but refused to give numbers. She said reinforcements were being deployed in the zone but did not specify if that meant troops, tanks or both.

Hezbollah, the Shiite Muslim fundamentalist group that wants to derail the talks, claimed responsibility for a bombing Sunday in the Israeli buffer zone that touched off the latest round of violence. The blast killed five Israeli soldiers and wounded five.

"We must be ready and deployed to respond in the necessary manner if Hezbollah continues in its attempts to attack," Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said after the rocket attack.

Students debate over presidential candidates

By JOHN LUCAS

In a forum mirroring the Richmond presidential debate, where average citizens asked questions of the three presidential candidates, the Keenan and Pasquerilla East Political Forum held the second in a series of discussions Tuesday, allowing students to voice their opinions and concerns with advocates of Bill Clinton and George Bush.

"It's clear that people had things on their minds, and this gave them a chance to talk to supporters of other candidates," explained PE resident and Clinton advocate Emily Lehman.

Government major Ben Goring and program of liberal studies/PLS major Lehman represented Clinton while accounting major Brian Fought and PLS major Emily Husted represented Bush. The forum began with Keenan residents Goring and Fought making timed opening statements directed toward their respective candidates' plans for meeting the needs of the student body.

Backed by statistics, Fought stressed that America and the press have exaggerated the country's economic problems, while proposing Bush's plan of across the board tax cuts for the middle class.

Goring urged that Americans use morality as a guide in voting for Clinton.

"We need to choose a candidate that either serves our personal needs or the needs of all people... hopefully in this environment of learning and spirituality, we will choose the latter," Goring announced.

PE residents Lehman and Husted later opened the floor to questions from the crowd at the Keenan Commons.

Questions from the floor ran the gamut of topics, ranging from standardized testing to urban enterprise zones. One of the most hotly debated was that of school choice and educational vouchers proposed by Bush. Students also raised concerns about Clinton's economic and tax policy and his health care plan.

After several minutes of open discussion, the majority of questions asked were critical of Clinton, leaving Goring and Lehman the task of defending their candidate to a crowd of apparent conservatives. Much of the debate consisted of attacks on Clinton's positions on the issues and his record as Governor of Arkansas.

"I think it was the kind of exchange that would take place naturally in a place with Notre Dame's conservative views," moderator Brother Benavente said.

Keenan and PE will hold their final forum on November 1, hosting economics professor Clay Crosses, political science professor Herbert Sim. Fought promised, "The final forum will be 100 percent economy."
INSIDE COLUMN

What can we do ourselves anyway?

College is the dampening of the vivacity of life and the freeing of the understanding of consciousness—all wrapped up in the Zog of existence.

How odd it is that we take all our frivolities as integrals and our illusions as mere byproducts of our human existence when we try and understand what makes us tick.

In the darkness of the night, do we lay awake counting the levels of our souls or do we wonder about the fluctuations of interest rates and where tomorrow we get our daily bread?

Who is afraid of true success in this Harold and Miranda world we live in. Singing Dylan, but sounding like Petty, we work the seams of the system for all it's worth—but never challenging the system of growth challenged to us by our Creator.

It's fine to know where you want to go in life, but it is another thing all together to throw our lives into the wind—like dandelion seeds to be blown and scattered by the winds of fate.

Such randomness is the succulence of life, the variety and spontaneity forcing itself upon the screw-ed, structured world we live in.

When children grow up, stick ball renews itself like the spring crop. Government still grows like a tumbleweed on steriods. Death, taxes and disappointment—those three things so certain in the life of the new world order.

The only real certainty in life, though, is life itself. Sometimes we get so hung up on anxiety, morality and consciousness that we forget how to live.

The true morality though is to love to live and to do it as best as we can. Within this living, the soul graduates itself under the pedagogy of God until we reach a state greater that the great of this world.

As much as we live among people, we live alone—as separate as interconnected—confused and just plain mind screw ed.

Unfortunately, the man made it illegal, but can pour smoke into our lungs for us, through the great factories. Which smoke opens the mind more?

There isn't a whole lot that we can do today, except get through it—pray for peace and justice and work for equality.

Beating the dead horse with the rhetoric of champions may work for the politicians, but it doesn't do a whole lot for Jesus.

So talk to the cuddly dog and the old priest, Harold, and go and love some more. But remember going off the deep end is a new start toward wherever we head.

Blacks applaud fraternity suspension

ATHENS, Ga. — The University of Georgia has suspended a fraternity from participating in campus social events for using a racial slur against blacks. PI Kappa Phi fraternity was suspended for at least a year for including the slur in a pamphlet distributed to new members, the university announced Monday. The slur was included on a page listing actions the fraternity considered inappropriate. PI Kappa Phi chief executive officer Durward Owen declined to comment, saying he did not have enough information about the decision.

Bill Cosby negotiating to buy NBC

LOS ANGELES — Bill Cosby is the latest entrant in the "Who will buy NBC?" sweepstakes. Norman Brokaw, the entertainer's agent, was told by Cosby on Oct. 16 "to explore buying the network." The conversation is "ongoing." NBC spokesman Betty Hudson said the network had no comment. Cosby, who this month was added to Forbes magazine's list of the 400 richest Americans and was called the richest entertainer, has a net worth estimated at more than $300 million. The network, owned by General Electric, has fallen to third place in prime-time entertainment ratings and for months has been rumored to be on the selling block.

Canadian groups join - to reject reform accord

MONTREAL (AP) — Canadians discovered a new unity Tuesday. East and west, French and English came together — not over constitutional reforms but in rejecting the path chosen for them by the country's political elite.

The results of Monday's referendum was a sharp rebuff to Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, provincial premiers and aboriginal leaders. As expected, voters in French-speaking Quebec rejected the reform accord, but it also lost in five other provinces and one territory.

The constitutional changes would have divided Quebec as a "distinct society," reforming the Senate and the House of Commons to give western states more representation and recognized the rights of Indians and Inuit to govern themselves.

But while Canadians continued to vote the measure down 54.4 percent to 42.4 percent, they had widely varying reasons. Canada was left no closer to a consensus on dealing with the cultural and regional differences that have been straining the federation for years.

Separatists in Quebec were cheered, hoping the results would rejuvenate their independence campaign and give them a boost in provincial elections that must be held by 1994. However, the province's rejection did not translate into support for independence, because many opponents of secession also voted "no."

The reform package originally was designed to meet Quebec's complaints about threats to its cultural identity in a predominantly English-speaking nation. But it gradually was expanded to meet demands for giving more power to less populous provinces and aboriginal peoples.

Pollsters predicted Tuesday that Mulroney, the deal's chief salesman, would be the biggest loser and might soon be forced from office. With anemic economy that has 1.5 million Canadians out of work, Mulroney is Canada's most unpopular prime minister since polls began tracking such sentiments.

Discouraged envoy to Somalia may quit

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — The special U.N. envoy to Somalia, who has both criticized and spearheaded the United Nations' effort to save millions of starving people on the Horn of Africa, has refused to resign.

Mohamed Sahoun, a veteran Algerian diplomat, found the obstacles by Somalia's feuding warlords to feed the hungry masses "unbearable," his office in Mogadishu said.

But U.N. sources in the Somali capital said the envoy's resignation offer Monday to Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali had more to do with problems with United Nations headquarters in New York than with warlords.

In New York, chief U.N. spokesman Joe Sims said the resignation letter was "received by the secretary-general and it is under consideration." He declined further comment.

U.N. diplomats in New York said they understood Sahoun offered to resign after being reprimanded by Boutros-Ghali for criticizing U.N. efforts in Somalia. Security Council diplomats said they urged that he be retained.

Sahoun was often unhappy with what he saw as a slow response by the United Nations to the Somali crisis, saying quicker intervention would have saved lives.

He repeated that charge on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" on Oct. 18, echoing statements made to The Associated Press and others as far back as August.

Sahoun also criticized some U.N. personnel sent to Somalia, describing them as inexperienced and inept. And he frequently wondered aloud why some U.N. agencies weren't in Somalia.

Sahoun once noted that while only about a dozen hospitals were still operating in the chaos and anarchy that has enveloped the country, the World Health Organization was nowhere to be found.

Sahoun was in Mogadishu on Tuesday, but was not available for comment.

Security Council diplomats in New York, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the five permanent council members on Monday urged Boutros-Ghali to retain Sahoun.

A diplomat who was briefed on the meeting said the appeal came mainly from the United States, Britain and France but that China and Russia did not contradict them.

He quoted the Western nations as saying they did not want to contradict the U.N. chief on Sahoun's behavior, but emphasized that Sahoun has the confidence of donors and various armed factions in Somalia.

Cease-fire called near Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Muslim and Croat leaders on Tuesday agreed to a cease-fire in a town near Sarajevo, but their anti-Serb coalition in the western part of the Herzegovina region agreed to a three-day cease-fire and an exchange of prisoners.

Croatian militants overran the Muslim-held town of Procej four days after fighting, according to Muharem Savic, commander of the Muslim-led Bosnian government forces there. He said his 3,000 inhabitants had been forced to flee. No casualty count was released.

But Croatian officials denied taking the town 30 miles west of Sarajevo. The situation could not be independently checked.

Both sides met on Tuesday and agreed to a cease-fire from the town, according to a Bosnian army spokesman and Croatian television reports.

In Belgrade, Tanjug said the Serb-Croat agreement, reached Monday, included commitments to set up hotlines to prevent clashes during the truce.

The news agency gave no details on the extent of territory covered by the truce or on how many prisoners would be freed. It said prisoners would be exchanged Nov. 1.

Bosnian officials in Sarajevo said they had no knowledge of the cease-fire.

Sarajevo's war began when Serbs rebelled against the majority Muslims and Croats, who voted for secession from Yugoslavia on Feb. 29.

Muslims and Croats had been nominally allied, but Croats have increasingly joined Serbs in demanding the partitioning of Bosnia along ethnic lines. Serbs and Croats have said that control of virtually all of Bosnia during fighting that has killed more than 14,000 people.

Muslim and Croat troops have fought battles in several towns within a 35-mile radius of Sarajevo during the past week.
either hinder or aid economic growth," McIntosh said. "There is $440 billion worth of federal regulation each year and we ask the question of what are the benefits of these regulations," he said.

McIntosh said there have been a few "stupid regulations" which the council has addressed, including a proposal to make drive-through teller machines accessible to the blind. "If you have a narrow focus, you don't get the true picture, and you get regulations which undermine health and the economy," McIntosh said.

According to McIntosh, the Council on Competitiveness usually gets involved in regulation when there is a difference between two federal agencies, such as the Environmental Protection Agency and the Energy Department, on a particular law. Each federal agency has the authority to write the law, and the council reviews the proposals and recommends appropriate action, he said.

McIntosh expressed his support for Bush, and said people were supporting Bush because "they are still fairly skeptical about the government and too much regulation."

McIntosh said he sees Bush as an "authority figure, a moral and spiritual leader," qualities people want in their president, he said.

In January 1992, Vice President Dan Quayle appointed McIntosh as executive director of the Council on Competitiveness. McIntosh also aids Quayle as assistant to the vice president for domestic policy. McIntosh served under President Ronald Reagan as assistant to the attorney general and special assistant to the president for domestic affairs.

McIntosh also is the co-chair of the Federalist Society, a group of conservative and libertarian lawyers, professors, judges, and students committed to judicial restraint and legislative responsibility. McIntosh was the co-founder of this organization while studying at the University of Chicago in 1982.

A gunman in Australia kills six and injures one

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A man went on a shotgun rampage through three coastal towns Tuesday night, killing his former girlfriend, her father and pregnant sister and three others before surrendering, police said.

Another man was badly wounded in the hour-long assault.

The stocky, 45-year-old gunman, whose name was not released, was charged with murder and scheduled to appear in court Wednesday.

Neighbors said they heard shouting, then shots shortly after 9 p.m., as a house in Terigal, a surfing resort 40 miles north of Sydney.

Inside, ambulance workers found the gunman’s former girlfriend, Kerry Gannon, 23, dead in a living-room chair. Her 18-year-old sister, Lisa Gannon, had been killed in a bedroom.

Neighbor Burt Clarke said the sister, married to a policeman, was five months pregnant.

The dead body of their 43-year-old father, Thomas Gannon, was outside in the road, along with a 22-year-old man, Christopher Gall, who was shot in the face. Gall was hospitalized in serious but stable condition.

Clarke first thought the shotgun blasts were someone kicking his front door.

“When I got out the front, this character fired a shot and I heard a lot of screaming,” Clarke said.

“When I came outside it sounded like the girls were pleading, and then there were more shots.”

EC, U.S. agree they will negotiate to resolve farm subsidies dispute

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — The European Community and the United States today agreed to new negotiations to resolve a trade dispute before next week’s presidential elections.

“We must continue negotiating. It’s important to the world economy,” said EC Agriculture Commissioner Ray MacSharry after receiving a phone call today from U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ed Madigan.

No date or venue for the meeting was set yet, but an EC official who spoke on condition of anonymity said it would be in the next few days, probably in the United States.

MacSharry said he and Madigan discussed the situation overnight, and this afternoon Washington came through with the offer to continue negotiations.

The conflict has stymied efforts to create a new, 108-nation version of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, which would reform the world trading system.

President Bush has demanded that the EC further reduce subsidies to farmers, contending such support fosters unfair competition for food exported from the United States and elsewhere.

The EC countries — especially France — say the subsidies are crucial to the survival of Europe’s small farms.

The EC wants to reach an agreement before the Nov. 3 election out of concern that if Bush loses, several years of negotiations may have to be jettisoned and new talks held.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Banking Committee accused the Bush administration Tuesday of "putting out false information" on U.S. export of advanced technology to Iraq before the Gulf War.

At a rare hearing during the congressional recess, Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., also criticized the Justice Department for what he called a delay in investigating possible criminal wrongdoing by administration officials.

"It appears on the face of it that laws were broken; the people that did it have to be identified," said Riegle, who was the only committee member present. "The delay cannot go on indefinitely here ... If this Justice Department and attorney general don't do it, then another one will."

Before they were submitted to Congress, documents pertaining to export licenses for Iraq were improperly altered by Commerce Department officials.

Hurricane, riot victims call government aid inadequate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Victims of hurricanes in Florida and Hawaii and riots in Los Angeles charged the government's emergency relief agency on Tuesday of failing to deliver "full and fair" assistance when disaster struck.

In a petition to the Federal Emergency Management Agency, legal aid lawyers in the three states said they were acting "to dispel any illusions the public might have about FEMA's ability to deliver basic disaster relief."

A spokesman said a lawsuit might be filed if the groups are not satisfied with FEMA's response to the accusation that it has failed to provide "full, fair and equitable disaster relief."

The petition does not seek any financial compensation for the disaster victims.

But FEMA spokespersons said the lawyers have delivered a fog of "half-truths," outright inaccuracies and unfair criticism that disregards the thousands of disaster victims who have received millions of dollars in needed assistance.

The petition complains that thousands of disaster relief applicants have yet to receive help months after Hurricane Andrew in Florida, Hurricane Iniki in Hawaii and the Los Angeles riots that followed the acquittal of police officers seen on videotape beating Rodney King.

It was filed by legal Services of Greater Miami Inc., the Legal Aid Society of Hawaii and Urban Recovery Legal Assistance in Los Angeles.

The allegations include:

In Florida, fewer than half of the 154,000 people seeking aid have received it, and a shortage of mobile homes for people leaving now-closed tent cities has left thousands with inadequate housing.

In Hawaii, only 20 percent of those seeking disaster assistance had received temporary housing aid four weeks after Hurricane Iniki hit on Sept. 11 and under 5 percent had received individual and family grants.

Workers' pay recovers smallest gain in five years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' wages, salaries and benefits posted the smallest gain in five years in the 12 months ended Sept. 30, the government said Tuesday in one of two reports showing the weak economy was keeping a brake on inflation.

"The back of inflation has been broken," asserted Allan Sinai, an economist with the Boston Co.

Economist Robert G. Dederick of the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago concurred.

"There's still a residue," he said, "but basically we're talking about an economy in which inflation essentially is absent in goods-producing areas and is only in limited-producing areas in service-producing areas."

The Labor Department said its Employment Cost Index, considered one of the best gauges of wage inflation pressures, slowed to a 3.5 percent annual rate in the year ended in September.

That was down from 4.3 percent a year earlier and the smallest increase since costs edged up 3.4 percent in the year ended in September 1987. The index had risen 3.6 percent in the year ended last June.

At the same time, the Commerce Department reported an inflation measure tied to the gross domestic product edged up at a 2.1 percent annual rate, the slowest advance since the department began calculating it in 1982.

As measured by the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index, inflation rose 3.1 percent in 1991, down from 6.1 percent a year earlier. It has risen at a 2.9 percent annual rate during the first nine months of this year, compared to a recent high of 13.3 percent in 1979.

Dederick said there is no likelihood of any imminent inflationary rebound, given the weak economic environment.

"The question is, is it going to drop farther?" he said.

Both the wage and salary and the benefit components helped brake the overall increase in the Employment Cost Index.

Wages and salaries rose just 3.3 percent in the year ended Sept. 30, down from 3.8 percent in the prior year and the smallest advance since the department began tracking labor costs in 1982.

With a relatively high unemployment rate, workers often have little leverage in bargaining for higher wages.
Bush slips in some states

WASHINGTON — Americans' economic worries and desire for change are proving stiff obstacles to a comeback for President Bush, who is making late progress in some traditional Republican states, but in others has stalled or even slipped. In two states, Washington and New York, the president even slipped below 20 percent in some recent oversight tracking polls, according to pollsters in both parties not involved in the presidential campaign. Bush has since rebounded a bit, but the numbers underscore his troubles in the campaign's final days. Several pollsters interviewed Tuesday said Bush's standing is remarkably stagnant in national surveys because so many voters are convinced he is not the best choice to run the economy.

Arkansas faces crisis

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — While Bill Clinton wraps up his presidential campaign this week, Arkansas' lieutenant governor will meet privately with legislators to discuss Bush's standing in the state. Democratic Party, boosted by a four-year effort to improve its image, won substantial inroads into Republicans' traditional fund-raising edge this election, the government reported Tuesday.

Bush seizes on positive economic news

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush seized on news of stronger-than-expected economic growth Tuesday as a welcome tonic for his ailing campaign. Bill Clinton sped through the South, telling supporters who seemed ready to begin celebrating, "One more week."

The third man in the race, independent candidate Ross Perot, stayed out of sight after two days of appearances in which he accused the Republicans of plotting "dirty tricks" against him and his family. "It's crazy," Bush said of Perot's allegation that Republicans were planning to disrupt his daughter's wedding. "A little bizarre," the president said of Perot's spending tens of millions of dollars on campaign ads.

Democrats cut GOP edge, increase funds 25%

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic Party, boosted by a four-year effort to improve its money-raising apparatus, made substantial inroads into Republicans' traditional fund-raising edge this election, the government reported Tuesday.

The Democratic National Committee and its Senate and House fund-raising arms took in $85 million in the 1992 election cycle through Oct. 14, up 25.5 percent from four years ago, a Federal Election Commission analysis showed.

And while the Republican Party still out-raised Democrats by $71 million through mid-October, its overall receipts of $164 million were down 3.7 percent compared to 1988 and its overall fund-raising edge has shrunk considerably since the summer, the FEC said.

"This is the result of a 3 1/2-year effort to improve our fund-raising. We'll never match the GOP but at least this year we're competitive," said Melissa Moss, the DNC's finance director.

The DNC helped increase its take this year by tapping new donors outside the party's core of supporters, particularly business executives who had leaned toward the GOP over the last decade.

In addition, the shift in fund-raising by the two parties mirrored the fortunes of their respective presidential tickets.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic Party, boosted by a four-year effort to improve its money-raising apparatus, made substantial inroads into Republicans' traditional fund-raising edge this election, the government reported Tuesday.

The Democratic National Committee and its Senate and House fund-raising arms took in $85 million in the 1992 election cycle through Oct. 14, up 25.5 percent from four years ago, a Federal Election Commission analysis showed.

And while the Republican Party still out-raised Democrats by $71 million through mid-October, its overall receipts of $164 million were down 3.7 percent compared to 1988 and its overall fund-raising edge has shrunk considerably since the summer, the FEC said.

"This is the result of a 3 1/2-year effort to improve our fund-raising. We'll never match the GOP but at least this year we're competitive," said Melissa Moss, the DNC's finance director.

The DNC helped increase its take this year by tapping new donors outside the party's core of supporters, particularly business executives who had leaned toward the GOP over the last decade.

In addition, the shift in fund-raising by the two parties mirrored the fortunes of their respective presidential tickets.

Clinton Bush: Bush, Perot: Candidates on the environment

By BECKY BARNES
Assistant News Editor

Despite George Bush's 1988 claim to be the environmental president and Bill Clinton's appointment of Environment and Energy adviser on his campaign staff, environmental issues have played a relatively small role in this year's presidential campaign, according to two presidential assistant professors and a professor of geological sciences.

The state of the economy, the differing personalities of each candidate and the high levels of public anxiety over the environment have all raised character about the environment, and the globallization of environmental issues have all combined to push environmental issues to the harsher background, said Kimberly Gray, professor of Geological Sciences.

"For the first time ever in the history of this country, environmental issues put on back burner.

By BECKY BARNES
Assistant News Editor

The decision to protect the environment does not have to come at the expense of jobs, but can actually improve them, said Ron Hellenthal, professor of Biological Sciences, on Wednesday afternoon.

"It's a ridiculous notion" that environmental protection causes not a net loss of jobs, "but exactly the opposite," he said. "In fact, we're creating more jobs."

Green technology is a "great marketing tool," he said. "You can't sell it unless you can make it, and if you can't make it, it's..." (continue)

Environmental protection causes not a net loss of jobs, but a shift in jobs towards technology, said DePaul.

"We certainly can't afford to create solutions to problems that may not exist. We need to get the facts straight."
Letters to the Editor

Administration's Zero-Sum

Dear Editor:

I feel it necessary to write to the Observer in response to several letters printed in the October 13, 1992 "Viewpoint" section. Why the authors of these letters (David Leeg, John Roos and Ed Manier) felt they could not respond directly to Dialogue, I do not know. Dialogue at Notre Dame has always welcomed written letters in response to signed and unsigned articles published in the magazine.

However, because they have brought this all important debate into this forum, I am obliged to respond within it. The letters printed in the Observer (and several others to be printed in this month's edition of Dialogue at Notre Dame) indicate that the implications of the University's movement toward a research-based university are much deeper than they may originally have appeared.

The immediate and emphatic tone of these letters make clear the tremendous amount of pressure being placed on junior faculty members by the administration. Furthermore, the letters resound with a shared sentiment of distress, perhaps a feeling of entrapment.

The current administration seems to feel that an increased emphasis on research is not incompatible with excellence in undergraduate education. This is simply not true.

The letters printed in the Observer and this month's Dialogue, as well as the general sentiment of the undergraduate student body, indicate that the coexisting pressures of research and personalized teaching are overbearing for many faculty members.

In the end, these professors are forced to choose between their students and their research deadlines. Because tenure decisions are based on endowment money earned and works published, junior professors are forced to forsake their students and concentrate on research. These professors are trapped by the system which Father Malloy, Timothy O'Meara and other administrators have created.

Assistant and associate professors, like Suzanne Marline, are not deliberately forsaking their students. At least, I hope not. They are only conveying to the undergraduates what has been imposed on them by the Administration. Personal research agendas take precedence over classroom responsibilities, publications over education.

Unfortunately, it seems that Father Malloy and the other powers-that-be continue to foolishly believe the research/teaching dilemma is not a zero-sum game. Hopefully, these administrators will sense the distress of the faculty members who have taken the time to write to the Observer and Dialogue.

Perhaps they will realize the unhappiness of undergraduates being cheated of the personalized education they were promised.

Perhaps, the Administration will realize the selfish gamble they have taken in making Notre Dame a research university in a zero-sum game; a game in which students and professors are the victims.

What if the debate were on Notre Dame football?

Capitol Comments

With all the recent debating, I thought it might be interesting to throw out a new topic, "Notre Dame Football," for the various issues discussed in this year's presidential campaign.

Below the three candidates regrettably differed in their constituencies, define the topic on their own terms. Here is what they have in the three televised debates.

ND Football

Reporter: Mr. President, you claim three states as your residency - Connecticut, Maine and Texas. I know we have several great football programs. But you can't possibly mean Notre Dame, can we? We do not try to be best because we do not try to be best. I cannot talk to too much own style of football, but it have it both ways like Governor of his leather. It just cannot be one state, see, Texas. And I

That's why the Little Rock was a mistake for me, but I take, I admit it. That tax thing foottball aspire to rank with Arkansas first, that they are and I can tell you that the Texas Aggies do not like them. It's like trying to put two bobcats together in the back seat of a Pinto.

Now that Dodge did not have as high standards, why would Notre Dame hire Lou Holtz? It is ludicrous to say that since I did not mention Arkansas, that they are one of the least.

Perot: Now, see, I grew up five blocks from a GM product as a Pontiac and so on and so forth. I know, I owned a part of GM. All that I know is that you don't put me on the ballot, not the Chrysler Corporation.

The Trust Issue

Bush: How can you trust Bill Clinton? Governor Clinton is a personal friend of Lou Holtz who gave money to players at Minnesota and excused his team for steroids? That is just not being in a family way.

It comes down to do you trust? Those fringe steroid using groups with no values who support Clinton, who says everything to everybody to get votes, or people who are support of American families?

Clinton: I'd like to respond to that. You know, Mr. Bush was very grateful when Arkansas football ended his last time. But nobody gave the president a proxy for this election. And Lou Holtz is an honest, noble person. The facts are being distorted. I'm in the middle of the story. I'm as bummed as anybody. Mr. Bush says it's a bad deal except for his middle guard.

I have the realistic approach to football that's why coaches in Maine, Connecticut, and Texas

endorsed my candidacy because they know that I'll have a fair, hard-realistic policy. Anybody else run on that, it's down the road. We'll run the NCAA into a ditch.

Bush: I think I made my case. On the one hand, it's a good deal - but the other one, I'm not going to do that. You know, it's going to be difficult, better. You have the realistic approach as president.

We can't do it on Notre Dame's final ranking against Miami. You see, well, I was with the minority (ND) but I guess I would have voted with the majoriy (Miami) if I was a sane person.

This is my point tonight. We're talking about a few days that could determine who will be president. And there is a pattern that has plagued him during whole state of his baseball from us. Canada on the other hand couldn't play baseball, so they created their own football league with larger people, they haven't, and I haven't taken a penny from them, and I never will.

Reporter: But do you explain

the success of the Blue

Jays and Expo this year?

Perot: Any brain dead person can tell you. They play indoors.

Football Draft Status

Bush: See, goes to show you.

Build those stadiums and don't make them into those damn owls. That's good. But Governor Clinton won't come clean on his Canadian Football League draft status. I played ball at Yale, got spilled and everything, but I did it. I may be old fashioned, American coach who jump to Canada.

Report: Notre Dame coach

Tom Clements did it with great success. The Rocket is doing it now.

Bush: Yes, but that's different.

They didn't do it personally, they used agents.

Perot: Now, let's go back a moment. They tried to play a game in Iraq. That's a fact. But nobody got to see the agreement. That's a fact. I read it, and they agreed to have Notre Dame play in Iraq on a Canadian-length field. Not just the north and center enlarged, but the whole field. I'll say it all tomorrow on MTV at 10 p.m.

Bush: Wait, I have to defend the honor of football. That is not true. I don't know what thinking, and that was not one of them.

Playing on Foreign Soil

Clinton: Let's take Mr. Bush at his word. But look at where I think the real mistake was made. We should have stopped coddling Saddam Hussein and gone to war in Saudi Arabia and Italy Germany. Take a good idea and make it better. I'd be personally responsible for such decisions.

Bush: That's what worries me, that he'd do for football what he did for the Razorbacks.

We do not want to be the lowest of the low. We are not in safety. We are a rising sport.

Clinton: Mr. Perot enabled Mr.

Bush to break the rules to defend football. What about the honor of the United States Congress? We strive to meet high standards, but not check.

That's going in the right direction.

Perot: The key here, see, we all come up with images, Image doesn't mean that is true,

That's just, just tell me. I'm grown up, I can deal with it.

But in a nutshell, football doesn't work. It's supposed to entertain, but people adore it, crave it, cheat for it. We've got to turn this thing around.

Closing Statements

Reporter: Gentlemen, it's time for the closing statements. Governor Clinton is first, then President Bush, and Mr. Perot.

Clinton: I thank our sponsors, and I think the real winners are the American sports fans. They want issues discussed, and they want to reclaim the sport. I disagree with Mr. Perot's program, but I respect him for bringing the national pride

like Notre Dame up as an issue.

To Mr. Bush, even though we have profound differences, I honor his ball playing days - spiked and all, and I wish him well. I just believe it's time for a change. I offer a new approach, it's not trickle-down football, it's blocking and passing and running as usual. But it's also studying and learning and graduating as well. We can do better.

That is my commitment to you, a change that opens a world of opportunities for small as well as large programs. I agree that football is not working and coaches who work hard and play by the rules, they are over- rewarded, not punished. I want a sport where teams and fans compete on a complete basis of region and size. I know that can be done.

It won't take miracles and it won't happen overnight, but we can do much, much better if we have the courage to change. Thank you, ma'am.

Bush: A few days from now we will have a chance to lead the football recovery. On fairness - that's the top priority, and I have a brand-new approach to choosing number one, strengthening the football families and yes, overseas competition, is the way to go.

I don't believe in trickle-down

NCAA bureaucracy, more rules, more Fuji stickers to cheaters.

Football is doing well, some think it's irrelevant. I believe it's not. We're doing better than a year ago, and we're doing better. I ask who has the most to lose, the students, and yes, the character to make the right decisions.

And the question is, who will safeguard football, who will save our children, the future participants? I need your support. I ask you to support the great God bless the NCAA.

It's not full of fine, decent people who did the unthinkable and took their football as a business. They did it to the hands and put me on the ballot, I pledge right here, I'll do the same.

These next few days will give full steam ahead with your voice on football so you get your programs back.

We can come down in the trenches under the hood working on filth the old car to gain momentum.

Can we win? Absolutely, because I'm not sitting down in the White House. You have to use your own head. Governor "The "we" is you and me. You bet your hat we can govern under the same together and we will figure out what to do, and you won't tolerate gridlock.

You won't tolerate fumbles and broken plays, and you won't tolerate nonperformance. Together we can get this done. Number one every year.

The president said you need the best, the "we," say third and forty-three. Well, I face we have a crisis. I suggest you pick someone who owned GM and can deal with finances. Who will you support to be the trustee of your estate?"n

God bless you, I'm doing this for you. I want you to have the best, produce people that fans, I'm doing this because I love you. I'm doing it for you. Thank you very much.

Reporter: Thank you gentleman, you have a good day said.

ELOF FOR VISITORS ONLY

Jeanne Blasi
From the Playpen

"Dear Mr. Lou Holtz,"
The football team will no longer be able to use Loftus Center. Last week, some of your players kicked in walls and mud tracks in the men's locker room.

"... Compared to what the athletes are being shown in the film, it's a terrible mistake. The injured traveler must be kept absolutely spotless for the important visiting teams who may want to use it. Find somewhere else to practice." Lou would do more than demonstrate a head lock on the person who dared write this letter.

"Yet this is the situation many students and professors face with the new DeBartolo building. As members of the campus theater group, we have been delighted to make use of the first-rate technology for us to show off to passing 'visitors.'

"But, the building is literally barred to us unexpected?

"Members of this school are faced with the question: Is DeBartolo nothing more than a shrine to MacLeod?

"Most of us spend outside time rehearsing with ox and jeans. We.were 'exiled' from the new high-tech shrine while utilizing the facility for the needs of our class. This class offers the best opportunity to learn Shakespeare—through blocking and acting Shakespeare's scenes, stage and learning the meaning behind the words.

"We have all given 100% to make this class an intense but fun learning experience with trips to Chicago and Stratford to see live performances. And all of us spend outside time reworking with each other, and with our 'acting coach,' Mrs. MacLeod.

"It is amazing to see Shakespeare's scenes come to life. One student brought in a bush for Romeo to hide behind. Others brought in cauldrons (of dry ice) and beat drums during their eerie scenes from Macbeth.

"Last week, the intimate DeBartolo auditorium was the perfect place for us to perform the Portia scene. It took us outside of class time, at night, to use it, the benefits of DeBartolo were well worth it.

"It is, until the building administrators became obsessed with saving the building for "important" visitors.

"Building maintainers complained we were 'too messy.' While spilling a few leaves, dirt was everywhere, a warning, exiting our immediate building. We did not intentionally spill anything, though we were treated as if we defaced the building itself (in the form of Professor Rathburn) pleased our cause were we so grossly granted a second chance. And we were thrown out again.

"This drastic measure is a grave insult to our class as a whole. Most of us have found a second chance. And we were thrown out again.

"Are we expecting the Pope to drop in unexpectedly?

"Tell me, dear University Administrators, who is 'important'?

"Is DeBartolo nothing more than a shrine to modern technology for us to show off to passing visitors?

"And to your left is the new super-state-of-the-art DeBartolo classroom building. Please take your shoes off before entering.

"Arts and Letters walked 15 years for a new building. But, the building is literally barred to us. Arts and Letters are condemned to the area behind the iron curtain of the computer lab.

"If it was a matter of where the football team could practice, they'd be running practice drills in the sacred halls of DeBartolo. And when the Pope makes his summer stay, he will walk in awe at Jerome Bettis' cleat scuffs on the beautifully polished auditorium floor.

"Once again, we, as students and faculty members of this school are faced with the question of who DeBartolo is for. Is it for important visitors?

"Will we continue to stand by and let these nonexistent 'visitors' dictate our life in the arts?

"After all, it is we who are ND; not those barren buildings.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rick Sutcliffe, who has filed for free agency, hopes to return to the Baltimore Orioles, his agent says.

Sutcliffe was one of the first players in this year's free-agent field to notify the Major League Baseball Players Association of his intention to test the market. He may begin talking with other clubs at any time, but cannot discuss money and cannot sign a contract until the 15-day free-agent filing period ends Nov. 9.

Sutcliffe filed Monday because the Orioles told him they would renego the contract until after Nov. 17. National League expansion draft, agent Barry Axelrod says.

Any free agent signed before Nov. 17 would be eligible for the draft if he is not on a club's 15-man protected list, or it would be just a matter of going through the procedure.

Sutcliffe, a 1984 Young award winner, would have two seasons of shoulder problems and six victories for the Chicago Cubs in 1990-91 before a September non-compensation free agent a year ago. He was signed by the Orioles to do post-season free agency. Sutcliffe, 36, signed a one-year contract worth $1.2 million plus incentives that pushed his income over $2 million.

He went 16-15 with a 4.47 ERA in leading the majors with 36 starts this past season. Axelrod said that an orthopedist gave Sutcliffe’s arm and shoulder a clean bill of health during a recent examination.

Sutcliffe is one of those 1992 Orioles eligible for free agency. Outfielder Joe Orsulak and rel­ tief pitcher Pat Clemens also qualify.

To the Editor of the Observer:

As the major filming of the movie "Rudy" gets underway, I pray that the Notre Dame community that some minor inconveniences will come with it.

Members of the production company and others involved in the filming are very appreciative of the hospitality that has thus far been extended to them, and they hope to see their own small contribution to the educational endeavors here, principally through liaison with the Department of Art, History and Design of the Department of Communication and Theater.

Please understand, however, that some minor disruption of campus routine is inevitable. For example, not be able to use a customary sidewalk on a given afternoon, or find regular roadways closed or a campus location temporarily off-limits. The producers are committed to keeping them to a minimum, but they ask your forbearance and patience in advance.

Richard W. Conlin
DENVER (AP) — Don Baylor, long considered a top candidate to run a team but bypassed twice last year, became the fourth minority manager in the major leagues when he was hired Tuesday by the expansion Colorado Rockies.

Baylor, 43, played for six American League teams in a 19-year career as an outfielder, first baseman and designated hitter, playing in three World Series and seven AL playoffs. He had a .260 career average, 1,276 RBIs and was hit by pitches a record 255 times. He was the American League’s Most Valuable Player in 1979, when he hit .363.

Baylor is the fourth minority manager in the major leagues, joining Joe Gaston of Toronto, Hal McRae of Kansas City and Felipe Alou of Montreal.

General manager Bob Gebhard said Baylor, signed to a three-year contract, agrees with his philosophy that expansion teams don’t necessarily have to be losers.

"Even though this is an expansion team, we must teach these young kids how to win," Baylor said. "I tell our young guys in spring training, ‘We’re going to lose 100 games, just stick with me,’ that doesn’t work. You need enthusiasm to carry you through September."

"I don’t know who wrote that rule that you have to lose 100 games if you’re an expansion team. We’re going to change the thinking of being an expansion team.

"We’re not setting goals; what we want to set is a new altitude. Every man we pick for the 25-man roster should be enthused to go out there every night, or he shouldn’t be in baseball."

"I looked for a patient man to deal with our young players and he is a teacher," Gebhard said. "But I also wanted someone who still had a burning desire to win baseball games, which is the reason we’re all here. I think we’re getting a manager and a teacher for our young club."

Considered a "manager on the field" because of his leadership qualities, Baylor played in three World Series and seven AL playoffs. In the latter stages of his career, he was acquired by Boston, Minnesota and Oakland to help those teams win pennants. Baylor, who will wear uniform No. 25, said he was intrigued by the opportunity to lead an expansion team.

"It was new, this was a chance to set my own benchmark, to see what I could create," he said. "Other organizations already had their traditions. Now we can set our own mark here in the Rockies."

He said he never desired of finally getting a managerial position, and said his race had nothing to do with either failing to win other jobs or winning this one.

"I never got into the race part," Baylor said. "I tried to be honest with people and was hopeful I’d get one of those jobs. The Colorado Rockies job is more than I could have bargained for."

He said he hoped his selection "might increase the opportunity level for other minorities in baseball."

Baylor said former Baltimore Orioles manager Earl Weaver and former California Angels manager Gene Mauch are his managing idols. "I’m taking the good with the bad, and trying to blend in my own personality," he said. "One thing I know a manager has to do is keep the lines of communication open with his players."

But the roller coaster ride continued Monday at Loyola. The Irish traveled to Chicago to complete the final 20 minutes of the game that was suspended on October 14 due to heavy rains and lightning.

Pendergast and Bryden each scored for the Irish, but the Ramsblers offense was rolling also, and the game was tied at 2-2 when play resumed Monday night. Vince Vasseman provided the back-breaker for the Irish at the 74:03 mark, giving Loyola a 3-2 win and their second consecutive Midwestern Collegiate Conference win over Notre Dame. The loss drops Notre Dame to 9-6-1 overall and 4-2 in the MCC, with only one conference game remaining in the regular season, Thursday night at Butler.

Rice approaching Largent's mark

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — They way he's going, Jerry Rice could cut at any time surpass former Seattle receiver Steve Largent's NFL career record of 100 touchdown receptions.

The San Francisco 49ers' Pro Bowl wide receiver is three TDs short of the mark in his eighth season. That puts him six seas­ons ahead of Largent's pace.

Yet, the last few legs of Rice's journey have not been without some frustrations. He talked about some of them as he sat by his locker, occasionally tugging at the beard he grew recently because he was tired of his baby face.

Rice, who caught 55 of his 97 touchdown receptions from Joe Montana, admitted his alliance with Steve Young has been uneasy at times. He said he's still adjusting to the differing style of Young, a longtime backup who has bloomed into a top-rated passer during the past season and a half while chronic elbow problems keep Montana sidelined.

"Steve and I, we'll have to grow and just work at it. It's not going to happen overnight," said Rice, who privately favored the more disciplined Steve Bono over the scrambling Young during a mini quarterback controversy in training camp.

But Rice has hit his stride through the 49ers' 6-1 start, while Young has been on the big part of, with his Montana-like passing precision and, yes, some frustration as well.

Young has downplayed his running this season and said he, too, would like to get the ball as much as possible to Rice, who shares the team lead in receptions (30) with Ricky Watters.

"What made (the Montana­Rice connection) special was it was very productive. So yeah, I very much want to keep that going ... and I think we have been," said Young, who has thrown 26 touchdown passes to Rice, including four this season.

Rice also has caught touch­down passes from Jeff Kemp (8) and Bono (5), as well as one each from Matt Cavanaugh, Mike Moroski and fullback Harry Sydney.

But Rice said he's had to be­come accustomed to a diminished role as first-year coordinator Mike Shanahan introduced subtle scheme changes and placed an increased emphasis on offen­sive diversity.

"We don't have the same scheme," Rice said. "It has changed in that we're not de­pending on two or three guys to win the football game anymore. We're working together as a group. That's about it.

"It's just not the same old deal. Like when Bill Walsh was here and Joe, when he was the quarterback. I know they would get it together when I'm doubled.

"Right now, if the guys are trying to double me, then Steve is not going to force the ball in to me. Mike Shanahan isn't going to feel desperate to get me the ball.

Young, who has thrown two of his four interceptions on passes intended for Rice, insists only the personalities have changed, not the 49ers' basic offensive plan.

He cited other factors in Rice's slow start, including increased double coverage in the absence of receiver John Taylor, out with a broken leg. Rice also missed most of training camp because of a lengthy contract holdout.

"Honestly, I think a lot of it is Jerry believing that even if he's triple covered, he's open," Young said. "I think that's what makes him special. ... That's why he's going for 100 touchdowns. I really believe that if there's a way for us to get the ball to Jerry, we're go­ing to get the ball to him.

"I do think there was frustra­tion building because we don't like people being able to dictate to us how we're going to get the ball out to people. But our feeling is, 'Hey, we can fight through this.'

"Before breaking through for three touchdowns — two on pass receptions and one on a reverse — in San Francisco's 56-17 drubbing of Atlanta on Oct. 18, Rice had just two scor­ing receptions in the previous six games.

The three scores against At­lanta gave him 102 career touch­downs, including five on runs, as Rice became just the eighth player in NFL history to hit the century mark. He has played in 115 games, including 102 consecutive starts for an average of nearly one touch­down a game.

On top of that, he has caught at least one pass in 102 straight games.

Defense is a key to Michigan's success

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Third-ranked Michigan is churning out 42 points per game through its first seven games. Must be some offensive machine. Right?

Sure. And the defense isn't bad, either. Only 61 points have been scored against Michigan, an average of 11.6 per game.

In their last two games, against Minnesota and Indiana, the Wolverines gave up 37 and 25, in a row, that's im­pressive. For the season, Michigan's opponents are 21-for-93 on third downs.

"I don't know if there's anything any statistics can point on third down," Michigan coach Gary Moeller said. "But that's unbe­lievable. Statistics can sometimes be misleading. But 3-for­37, and 25 in a row, that's im­pressive.

"For the season, Michigan's opponents are 21-for-93 on third downs. "The key is the rush," Moeller said. "We try to get past the blocker and get better pressure on the quarterback. Saturday, against Minnesota, Chris Hutchinson never got to the quarterback. But he made his presence felt.

Indeed, Minnesota quarterback Marquel Fleetwood was leading the nation with 1,834 yards of total offense. He was averaging 305.7 yards per game, before he arrived in Ann Arbor.

The Wolverines held Fleet­wood to 170 yards, 150 passing and 20 scrambling.

Part of the reason for this success is coaching, of course. But the biggest part comes from within, from the seniors. Call it leadership.

"Some young guys were kind of saying, 'Aw, we're only play­ing Minnesota.' We took care of that," said Hutchinson, the defensive captain. "We told ev­eryone to cut out the extracur­ricular activities and stay home at night. Midterms are coming up, guys are getting hung up, it's that time of year.

"But we told em, 'This is our team. You can do what you want when you're a senior. But this is what we're doing."'

It seemed to work. Minnesota had the ball only 18 minutes, 54 seconds. The Gophers got off 53 snaps, compared with 99 for Michigan. Hutchinson and his pals held the Gophers to just 32 rushing yards on 20 attempts.

But that was nothing new. Michigan's defense has held each of its last six opponents to less than 100 yards rushing. For the season, the Wolverines are allowing only 79.2 yards per game on the ground.

The only blemish came at Notre Dame in the opener.

La Russa named AL's top manager

NEW YORK (AP) — Tony La Russa, who led Oakland to its fourth AL West title in five years, won his third American League Manager of the Year award on Tuesday.

La Russa, who kept the team in contention during the first half of the year despite injuries to key players, received 25 of 28 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. He got two second-place votes and one third for 132 points in the balloting, which is done on a 5-3-1 basis.

"I'm definitely thrilled," La Russa said during a telephone conference call from Scottsdale, Ariz., where he was involved in the A's instructional league.

"It's not something you expect when the season starts. I think I understand the significance of the award. You don't take it personal. It's an award that the team generates and the organization is responsible for and if ever that was true, it was true in 1992."

Phil Garner, who kept the Milwaukee Brewers in contention in the AL East until the final weekend of the season, was second with 76 points. He received two first-place votes, 21 seconds and three thirds.

"I'm happy for him. I'm glad he won it," Garner said. "I've been asked, 'Were you disappointed? Were you shooting for it? Did you have hopes?' But really not. We had a great year.

My gratification comes from the way the players responded to the type baseball we wanted to play.

"This award, although it would have been nice to have it, is certainly not something I longed for. The gratification I have is from the way we played this summer. We did everything we could to win, even though we came up a little short."

Johnny Oates of the Baltimore Orioles finished third with 27 points on four second-place votes and 15 thirds. Cito Gaston, who led the Toronto Blue Jays to Canada's first World Series title, was fourth with 13 points from one first-place vote, one second and five thirds.

Mike Hargrove of the Cleveland Indians got four points from one third-place vote.

La Russa, 48, won the initial AL manager's award from the writers in 1983 for leading the Chicago White Sox to the AL West title. He won it again in 1989 for leading the A's to the first of three straight AL pennants.

He spread the credit around for his latest award to his players and the coaching staff but singled out the work of pitching coach Dave Duncan.

"In the summer prior to my senior year I had it in the back of my mind that I might try out with the intent of playing my fifth year."

So while Pendergast may adapt to the new sport like a chameleon, he'll still don the same colors-blue and gold.

The one guy I think it would be a crime not to acknowledge is Dave Duncan," La Russa said. "I don't think it's any coincidence that the first time I won the award in '83 is the first year we were together. When we won three straight AL pennants from 1988 to 1990, pitching was our hallmark and Duncan orchestrated it.

"This year our bullpen was restructured and we had problems keeping our starting rotation intact but somehow we ended up with a pitching staff with a 3.70 ERA and 96 wins.

So, I'm proud of what the staff and coaches can do. This was the most demanding year for any club I've ever been a part of and still been successful, and the players also deserve a majority of the credit for that."

Oakland had significant injuries this year, disabling 16 players a club-record 22 times. Among them were outfielders Henderson, Rickey Henderson and Jose Canseco; pitchers Dave Stewart and Bob Welch, catcher Terry Steinbach and first baseman Mark McGwire.

In addition, pitchers Kirk Duncan and Sam Lilkis missed the entire season.

Despite all that, the A's moved into first place for good on Aug. 4 during an eight-game winning streak, then used a 10-game winning streak to extend the Oregon stuns men's cross country

The Notre Dame men's cross country team was defeated Sunday, October 18 by the University of Oregon. The Ducks beat the Irish by 21 points in the Jeff Drenth Invitational held in Eugene, Oregon. The Irish were undefeated and ranked 3rd in the nation going into this meet, but after the meet Notre Dame dropped to No. 12.

"The top 3 (Irish runners) ran very well," said Irish head coach Joe Piane. Mike McWilliams, John Coyle and Nate Ruden have been the top three respectively in every race this season.

All American Mike McWilliams was the lead Irish runner with a time of 24:41.7 over the 8K course. Fellow All American and Irish team captain John Coyle was the second runner for the Irish with a time of 24:57.5. And sophomore standout Nate Ruden was the number-three man for Notre Dame with a time of 25:04.2.

"Four, five, six and seven didn't run well as a group at all," said Coyle. "They ran individually and they need to run as a team." On the other hand, Oregon was able to group early. The Ducks laid off the pace a little at the beginning and gradually sped up in the middle miles.

"They ran a smarter race," said Coyle. "Their two through seven stayed pretty much grouped through the first half of the race."

Miami's rejuvenated offense does not impress West Virginia's James Wright

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Miami's rejuvenated offense doesn't impress West Virginia linebacker James Wright.

"I say if our offense gets us 17 points, we'll win the game," Wright said. "The defense will hold them under 17."

After struggling on offense earlier this season, top-ranked Miami has averaged 44 points in its last two games. But Wright is confident that the unranked Mountaineers can beat the Hurricanes at the Orange Bowl on Saturday.

"I think it's like a national championship game for us," said Wright, a Miami native. "We go in there with nothing to lose. They're the ones with something to lose."

Miami will be West Virginia's fourth consecutive nationally ranked opponent. The Mountaineers have come up just short in each of those games, losing to Boston College 24-24, losing to Syracuse 20-17 and falling to Penn State 40-26 when the Nittany Lions scored two touchdowns in the final minute.

West Virginia center Mike Compton says the Mountaineers are going to take out their frustrations on Miami.

"This is probably the most frustrating year for me," Compton said after the Penn State game. "It really makes you sick. We need a win, and we're going to get one in Miami."

That would be quite an accomplishment, considering that the Hurricanes have won 25 straight overall and 49 in a row at the Orange Bowl.

West Virginia (3-2-2) needs to win three of its last four games to get the six victories required for bowl consideration. After Miami, the Mountaineers play East Carolina, Rutgers and Louisiana Tech.

"We have four more games left and they're all tough," coach Don Nehlen said. "We'll just see what kind of character this team has. It would think with the schedule we play, 6-3-2 would get us in a bowl."

Receiver Jay Kearney says the Mountaineers aren't intimidated by Miami.

Oregon handed John Coyle and the rest of the Notre Dame men's cross country team their first loss of the season during fall break.

All indications look toward the Irish improving over the next few weeks. They ran well in practice over fall break and are looking forward to the meets on the horizon.

Pendergast adapts quickly to new roles

By JIM VOGL
Assistant Sports Editor

Kevin Pendergast, a reserve kicker for the football team in addition to his soccer duties, is used to adapting to new roles.

Like a chameleon, Notre Dame senior soccer player Kevin Pendergast knows how to adjust quickly to new environments.

When football kicker Craig Heinrich injured his knee late last season, Pendergast and several other soccer team members answered Lou Holtz's call and tried out as placekickers. Pendergast's right foot stood among several other candidates, and Holtz gave him the job.

But here's the real kicker: "I kicked a football before just going around, but never for any organized team," he admitted.

Pendergast responded in key games against Penn State and Florida in the Orange Bowl, both after Heinrich was supposed to be ready.

Pendergast assumed kickoff duties in Happy Valley with just two days notice. Unlike many of his new teammates, Pendergast performed admirably against the Nittany Lions, as PSU returned three kickoffs a total of 24 yards.

He got pressed into duty again in the Orange Bowl as Heinrich re-injured his leg in the first half. Pendergast accounted for six points in Notre Dame's surprising 39-28 victory, booting a 23-yard field goal and three extra-point conversions.

The Simsbury, Ct. native started out at Notre Dame in a role a bit more familiar to him, as a star of the soccer team. In his first two seasons, he started all 38 games, leading the squad in scoring both years (29 as a freshman, 18 as a sophomore).

"Part of the way through my junior year, I was slumping a bit in scoring," he recalled. With the luxury of two high scoring freshmen (Jean Joseph and Tim Oates), Irish coach Mike Bertielli decided to find Pendergast a new role.

"I guess it was more of a leadership role than anything else," explained Pendergast, who started just seven of 19 games that year but gained maturity in the process.

"That was tough for me at first. But when you're not satisfied with the way you're playing, the most important thing to do is to be a positive leader for the younger guys." Pendergast began a new phase this season, as a starter on defense. "I like it a lot. I'm still adjusting, still learning."

He's still learning in football, too, making practice about see KICKER/page 17

Men's soccer rides a roller coaster during fall break

By JASON KELLY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's soccer team went on a roller coaster ride during fall break.

The Irish carried a three-game winning streak into a stretch that featured games against Kentucky, Vanderbilt, Brigham Young and Loyola.

Against Kentucky, the Irish continued their winning ways, with a 2-0 victory over the Wildcats.

Bill Laura got the Irish on the board less than six minutes into the game on an assist from goalkeeper Berti Badre. Keith Carlson scored next, converting a pass from freshman Shawn Bryden at the 26:46 mark. That was all the Irish would need, as the defense held the Wildcats to just seven shots on goal to register the shutout.

"(The Kentucky game) was one of the best games we've played all year," senior Kevin Pendergast said. "It wasn't a blowout, but it was a solid effort all-around."

Three days later, the winning streak came to an abrupt halt against Vanderbilt. Sophomore Tim Oates scored the lone Irish goal seven minutes into the game, but it wasn't enough, as Vanderbilt added two in the first half and another in the second half to drop Notre Dame 3-1.

"We came into the last half of the season fully expecting to win every game," Pendergast explained. "The Vanderbilt game was a big letdown."

They didn't stay down for long. Back at home Friday night against Brigham Young, the Irish bombed the overmatched Cougars. Pendergast, Mike Palmer, Bryden and Lanza each scored for the Irish as they improved to 9-5-1 for the year.
