Security hopes for clear field after game

By ROLANDO DE AGUIAR

Just as she had given up hope. "People started tripping over me, and my shoulders got pinned to the ground," she says today. "Then the dogpile started. I thought that my head was going to explode. There was no way for me to get oxygen into my system.

Burdo was almost crushed on a football field after the team she was rooting for had scored a big win. But that field was not in Wisconsin, and her team was not the Badgers.

She had just seen Notre Dame beat Penn State in Notre Dame Stadium. Burdo was fortunate a year ago this weekend. She was pulled from the pile by a police officer after the team she was rooting for had scored a big win in Notre Dame Stadium.

Those wounds were temporary. But though she May, suffered numerous injuries, including bruised ribs and broken capillaries in her eyes. Those wounds were temporary. But though she used to have no problem with crowds, she's now terribly claustrophobic.

And she couldn't bear coming back to Notre Dame for this weekend's matchup with Florida State.

"I had considered coming to the game, but after I heard what happened at Wisconsin, I decided to stay put," she says. "When the story comes on the TV news, I just can't watch."

Though the tape is difficult to sit through, what happened in Madison, Wis., has opened everyone's eyes to the dangers of the big win. Coverage of the incident, and the accompanying criticism leveled at the stadium security force after I heard what happened at Wisconsin, I've now terribly claustrophobic.

Seventy students were taken to the hospital. 13 injured critically, in the rush following Wisconsin's 13-10 victory over Michigan.

Many members of the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's communities immediately saw the possibility of a similar situation if Notre Dame beat Florida State this weekend. But Notre Dame has shown throughout its history that security has been making safety preparations since before the incident in Madison.

"It was ironic," said Director of Security Rex Rakow. "I had a preliminary meeting the Thursday before the Wisconsin game with everyone, from the Athletic Department to South Bend Police, to Student Affairs.

"From that meeting, we tried to coordinate our efforts. We reviewed what problems we'd had at this stadium before."

Those problems included similar rushes to the field, as well as last year's Penn State debacle, during which some Notre Dame students tried to tear down the goalpost in the north end zone.

Rakow’s band concert is keeping the Notre Dame student section from rushing the field if the Irish win the game. Announcements will be made throughout the game urging spectators to enjoy the post-game celebration from the bleachers.

CRITICISM LEVELLED AT THE STADIUM SECURITY FORCE AHEAD OF GAME

Rex Rakow, the Director of Notre Dame security, stands beneath the north goalpost in Notre Dame Stadium. Rakow hopes that fans will stay off the field and goalposts after Notre Dame wins Saturday's game against No. 1 Florida State.

Plans for a full-time service center on the Saint Mary's campus are stalled until student opinion can be measured and the logistics of funding the project can be determined.

The proposed center would be a collaborative effort between the College and the Congregation of the Sisters of the Holy Cross. With formal space and a staff of both sisters and students, the Saint Mary's Christian Service Center (SMSC) would bring continuity and effectiveness to campus service effort, according to Sister Miriam Cooper, a member of the planning group for the center.

"If you look at Notre Dame's center (Center for Social Concerns) it is very clear what we lack, a place and a staff," Cooper said.

Members of the planning group indicated that a service center at Saint Mary's is important, not just for the sake of having a center, but because it is consistent with the Catholic mission and the College's mission.

That leprechaun doing push-ups is an impostor.

He's just some senior who's grown a beard, because mum and dad always told him not to. For some reason, he's now wearing a freckly green and lining up in around ten zingers from Philadelphia to Pasadena. But he doesn't have a pot of gold.

Look down the sideline, about fifty yards. Now there's a real leprechaun.

He's the little guy down there. No, not Rudy Iliartinger. The other little guy, the freckly-looking blonde one wearing the baseball cap.

His name's Lou. And he's the luckiest leprechaun in the land from Limerick. Lou's a cynical coper, as leprechauns tend to be. He doesn't smile much, even when his team is 9-0 and second-ranked. He doesn't have much good to say about anyone at any time. except maybe the leprechaun-hunters. Lou kissed the leprechaun-hunters. Lou's using his pot of gold.

There's a reason: the bad guys are trying to get his pot of gold.

You'd know immediately that he was a little supernatural creature. Unfortunately for Lou, he's not quite as lucky as Lou.

Video outlines NCAA regulations

By JOHN LUCAS
Associate News Editor

In an effort to better educate Notre Dame student and alumni athletes on National Collegiate Athletic Association regulations, the Alumni Association, with the Athletic Department, has produced an 18-minute video giving an overview of these policies.

"The athletic director and administration decided that there had to be another way to promote the educating of student athletes and alumni about NCAA rules," said Mike Karwoski, the athletic department's NCAA compliance assistant.

The video, which is the first of its kind in the nation, outlines NCAA rules regarding eligibility, drug testing, financial aid, and contact with alumni.

Its primary purpose lies in informing student-athletes of applicable regulations before they sign the "Student-Athlete Statement," a document all athletes must sign as a pledge to abide by NCAA rules.

In addition, alumni watching the video will gain a better sense of what it is like to be an athlete at Notre Dame, as well as what they can and can not do, Karwoski said.

Although the Alumni Association already produces a pamphlet entitled "Contact Is Prohibited," the video was an effort to enhance alumni awareness about what kind of contacts with student-athletes are impermissible, said Alumni Association representative Peter Pranica.

Pranica said the video was one of its kind in the nation, outlines NCAA rules regarding eligibility, drug testing, financial aid, and contact with alumni.

The process was "boring" for many student-athletes, Karwoski said. "The video goes quicker, is more interesting, and sinks in better," he added.

In representing several different athletic programs, the film features past and present Notre Dame athletes Ed Hartwell, Matthew Ovieski, Ragen Coyne, and Tim Rudy, each emphasizing aspects of the life of a student-athlete.

In the past, Assistant Athletic Director Missy Conboy spent an hour with each varsity team, outlining and reviewing the procedures and regulations of the NCAA.

He was chosen from thousands of nameless dead, victims of machine-gun fire, artillery explosions and poison gas who littered the horrifying battlefields of the Somme in World War I.

In Australia he exhumed him from a cemetery in northern France, last week and buried him in his homeland on Thursday, the 75th anniversary of the armistice that ended four years of carnage that claimed 12 million lives.

"The unknown soldier... by his deeds, proved that real nobility and grandeur belongs not to empires and nations but to the people on whom they, in the last resort, always depend," Prime Minister Paul Keating, one of the pall-bearers, said in a televised eulogy watched by millions of his countrymen.

In ceremonies Thursday before a dwindling band of survivors, the victorious survivors, the victorious Allied victors and defeated Empires -- modern Turkey and the Soviet Union, Nazi Germany and its allies, the Austro-Hungarian Empire, comprising most of modern eastern Europe, and the Ottoman Empire -- modern Turkey and the Middle East.

Of the tens of millions of soldiers who fought in World War I, perhaps 10,000 are still alive.

In France, Prime Minister Edouard Balladur laid a wreath at Armeisie Clearing in a forest north of Paris, where the cease-fire was signed in a railroad car by the Allied victors and defeated Germany.

"Peace is never fully won," Balladur said. "It can only be the fruit of unceasing work."

Earlier, President Francois Mitterrand knelt at the Tomb of the Unknowns. "A grateful nation remembers," the president said at Arlington National Cemetery after placing a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns. He called attention to the presence of 17 Army Rangers who took part in the fire fight in Somalia in which 18 Americans were killed Oct. 3.

President Clinton, a college-age foe of the Vietnam War, saluted American veterans Tuesday and said the United States must never shrink from what's necessary "to keep our nation secure and our people prosperous."

Beginning with a breakfast for leaders of veterans' groups in the East Room and ending with a visit to a veterans' hospital in West Virginia, Clinton devoted the day to paying homage to those who served in the military.

"A grateful nation remembers," the president said at Arlington National Cemetery after placing a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns. He called attention to the presence of 17 Army Rangers who took part in the fire fight in Somalia in which 18 Americans were killed Oct. 3.

Praising their "great ability, success and unbelievable valor," Clinton said, "We are proud of them." The audience stood and applauded.

Clinton later visited the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Martinsburg, W. Va., and said America can pay part of its debt to veterans by assuring them comprehensive health care under his national plan.

"We know we have a moral obligation to protect their security," Clinton said. "I wanted to come here to this hospital today to drive that point home."

Clinton's relations with the military, strained by his avoidance of the draft as a young man, were aggravated by his efforts to lift the ban on homosexuals. He also said he had fulfilled his pledge to declassify virtually all documents related to Americans missing in action or held as prisoners in Vietnam.

"We are being asked to decide whether we will maintain the high state of readiness that stood behind our victory or shirk away the seed corn of our security," he said. He also said the nation is being "asked whether we will swell the global tide of freedom by promoting democracy and open world markets," a thinly veiled reference to the House nears a hard-fought vote on the North American Free Trade Agreement.

"To honor those who served in Europe and Korea and the Persian Gulf, in scores of posts at home and abroad, let us today resolve we will not shrink from the responsibilities necessary to keep our nation secure and our people prosperous," the president said.

Voices of Faith gospel choir presents annual winter concert

By KENYA JOHNSON

This Sunday a different form of praise will occur as Voices of Faith gospel choir presents their annual winter concert, "Why We Sing," at Washington Hall at 7 p.m.

The choir has spent the past semester preparing for the concert. With two-hour practices every Friday and engagements at a variety of churches on Sundays, choir members said they are ready to "deliver God's message in song," said junior Katara Walker, secretary of Voices of Faith.

The 45-member choir will perform ten songs in two acts, and a live band, including two keyboard players, a drummer, a konga player, a saxophonist and a bassist, will assist them.

"This concert is going to be very different," said co-director Thomas Steele. "We put a lot of energy, devotion and time into it and I believe everything will be successful. Anyone who comes out will truly enjoy themselves — by listening to our music and joining in our praise."

During intermission, the choir will conduct a raffle. The choir has been selling tickets for $2 each since the beginning of the year. Walker estimates that over 100 have been sold already, the majority of which were sold before home football games. Raffle tickets will also be sold at the door and winners will be announced towards the end of intermission.

Prizes include a VCR, Sega Genesis and movie passes. Winners do not have to be present to retrieve their prize. Also available for the first time are Voices of Faith t-shirts. These will be sold at the door of Washington Hall as well for $12 ($14 for XXL). The raffle and t-shirts are just a few of many additions Voices of Faith has made this year. This year marks the first for the choir's Faith and Unity retreat.

"I believe the retreat had really made a difference," said Walker. "We stressed cooperation and involvement, had intense prayer and emotional bonding. We really united as a choir and that made us strong in our overall singing."

With 40 participants this year, co-director Sharmen Swinton hopes it will become a tradition, attracting even more members.

"We were able to see each other in a different light and deal with each other on a different level," Swinton said. "We were able to solely focus on ourselves, as individuals and as a group."

Swinton said she can sense a difference in the choir since the retreat but that things have been so hectic for the concert, that the success may not be immediately apparent.

"Although we are really busy and anxious right now, I know the effects of the retreat have made things go smoothly," she said.

The members of the choir will be working harder for their tour in the spring of 1994. With the help of alumni associations in various areas of the south, Voices of Faith will perform at churches and colleges in places such as Baton Rouge and New Orleans, Louisiana, Jackson, Mississippi and Memphis, Tennessee.

"Why We Sing" is an appropriate theme song for this year according to Steele. "This year we are stressing the fact that we are not here solely to entertain, but to deliver God's words through singing. Many people don't understand gospel singing is another form of praise. We invite everyone to the Notre Dame community to enjoy and participate in the concert."

Tickets will be sold at the doors $3 for students and $5 for general admission.

Martzke predicts ND victory

By NANCY DUNN

Notre Dame will win a close one over Florida State, according to Rudy Martzke, USA Today's premiere sports columnist and one of The Sporting News' 100 Most Powerful People in sports.

FSU does not understand that as much as they are favored, they have never been in this setting here," said Martzke. "It will not be a high scoring game, he said. Notre Dame will have a 21-14 lead in the fourth quarter, predicted Martzke. FSU will drive and score, and then go for a two point conversion to win the game, but "Jeff Burris is gonna knock it down."

"We have all seen this happen. When it counts Notre Dame has won the big game. Lou Holtz is 7-1 in big games after an off week during the regular season, he said.

Martzke discussed the history of Notre Dame football and the importance of it to the success of today's program. Under Gerry Faust, Notre Dame became an embarrassment, repeatedly losing to teams it should have beaten.

Notre Dame also learned a lesson from Frank Leahy. "Notre Dame was actually too good", said Martzke, and moved "too far over on the hate side of the meter."

Lou Holtz brought Notre Dame back in the right way, said Martzke. He has managed to not win too many, and thus too successful, joked Martzke.

Notre Dame brings a national flavor to the game. It will always have its name, a good coach, and one of the top two or three recruiting classes, said Martzke. It does not need to go of its traditional football rivalries and join a conference.
Sperber: Management lifts ND sports

By SARAH DORAN
Assistant News Editor

Notre Dame is an exception in the realm of college sports mainly because of the management of its athletic department, according to Murray Sperber, author of the recently released book "Shake Down the Thunder," which chronicles University athletics during the Knute Rockne era.

"Because of the strong power of Notre Dame’s vice president, the position of athletic director does not reflect the degree of autonomy often seen at other colleges," he said. Athletic departments of colleges in the Big 10 conference usually run separate departments, he said. "Rockne was an entrepreneur."

"The Rockne of the legends is about 150 degrees from the Rockne we hear of everyday," he said. "Sperber expanded about numerous pieces of evidence he found in the University’s library’s keeping that substantiated Rockne’s betting habits, which included betting on his own football team.

"Rockne had the autonomy his opponents not on the field, but off the field as well," he said. But, Sperber said, Rockne's genius was like that of no other coach.

"He was obsessed with winning games, promoting his team, and promoting himself," he said. "Rockne was an entrepreneurial genius."

Sperber also said that the University was extremely cooperative in helping him locate the information used in his book.

"They were nothing but helpful in pointing me in the right direction, even when they became aware that I was finding information that was overturning legends," he said. "There is much publicized he was an honest man, because the information used in his book."

"Our intention is to turn as much of this over to the students as possible, but it's not like we can blow a whistle and ask the students to get their opinion," said Joe Incandela, a member of the planning group. "We think the idea is a good one and one that should work at Saint Mary's."

"This center, we really hope, is for students and by students," he added.

Proposals were presented to Cardinal President William Hickey and Congregation President Sister Catherine O'Brien in late October. No official response has been received from either president yet.

The planning group also presented the proposal to the Board of Governance (BOG), asking for the members of student government to sign a petition supporting the center. While BOG members supported the idea of the center and said there was a need for it, they didn't sign the petition citing that they felt that the funding portions of the proposal were not researched enough, according to Student President MaryBeth Wilkinson.

"I think that it (the SMSC) will come about," Wilkinson said, "but planning about the financial aspects needs to be more precise.

BOG is concerned that the figures in the budget portion of the proposal are even rounded numbers and that it seemed that a large financial burden of the funding would fall on the College, according to Wilkinson.

While the College is asked in the proposal to provide space, equipment, and personnel from its budget and fundraising resources, Incandela said that it was never the group's intention to burden the College with financial responsibilities for the project.

"We always had plans to go through the development office for the funding," Incandela said. "There are also lots of donors out there and lots of foundation grants that we would like to apply for."

Incandela also said that there was a hope in the group that the center would be eligible for grants given yearly by the Congregation to charities, organizations and centers around the world.

Planners of the proposal say that they have made mistakes in their approach to determining student support and defining the means of funding, the most important thing now is for them to work out the problem and the project and their intentions.

In addition to providing service to thousands on a national and an international basis, the CSC has spent the past decade working closer to home around the communities of South Bend.

An estimated 2,500 students participate annually in the "Christmas in April" program, which helps South Bend residents through various community projects, said Hesburgh.

"Many people have been impacted by the things done here, and Christmas in April is just one CSC program that has shown Notre Dame to be a caring community," Hesburgh said.

"What has happened is a little bit of the momentum has been lost, petitions are just laying there," Incandela said. "There are certain procedures that govern things like what channels you need to go through, that we weren't following and people stopped things."

The group now wants to move on and hopes that the students will express their concerns and opinions about the SMSC at Monday's Student Government Open Forum, according to Incandela.

BOG hopes that discussion of the center will occur at the forum, where they plan to make the petitions of support available for student support as well, according to Wilkinson.

Two sites for the center were also included in the proposal. The group indicated the space in the lower levels of the Dining Hall and Holy Cross Hall as possible options.

Holy Cross is the preferred location, according to Conroy, because it would require the least amount of renovation, and it also has a historic connection to the center.

The SMSC hopes to distinguish itself from the CSC in two ways: concentrating on a focus of women and family consistent with the mission of Saint Mary's and providing an integral role for students to play in the center, according to Conroy.

M.J. Murray Vachon, class of '82 said that a separate center said.

"The only thing you have in your hands when you meet God is what you have given away," said Hesburgh.

The original proposal for the center was heard and eventually approved by University of fiders and Hesburgh in 1982.

The Center was strongly supported by Hesburgh, a veteran of service, who worked closely with John F. Kennedy and his staff to develop a pilot project which began the Peace Corps in 1960.

Over 25 million people every day, in 68 countries, walk into a McDonald's and are greeted with a smile and the question, "How may I help you?"

Because McDonald's restaurant locations are all over the world, it is considered a global corporation according to Dick Stammann, the senior vice president of the McDonald's corporation.

Last night, at a round table discussion sponsored by the Notre Dame Council for International Business, Stammann spoke about the restaurant's metamorphosis.

"We're going through a change...becoming a bigger company, becoming more international," Stammann said.

Stammann said that last year alone the company poured $1 billion over eight and a half million dollars in sales, with forty percent of the revenue coming from restaurants outside of the US. Through the duration of the speech, he explained that most of the company's success comes from its ideology to keep the management of the foreign businesses up to local entrepreneurs.

"We want it to be a local business, so we want local people as partners so we can have their insight," Stammann said.

Part of the problem about expanding McDonald's into a global business is overcoming cultural differences. Stammann said that training the employees that work in the Moscow McDonald's was a cultural hurdle because the local workers had to adapt to the restaurant's image. He added that the hardest thing to teach the employees was proper etiquette when dealing with customers.

"We even had to have some classes to teach them how to smile," Stammann said.

With McDonald's help, Stammann said, the UAW strike ended in April and the company plans to open in Saudi Arabia with a smile and the question, "How may I help you?"

A Caterpillar Inc. memo says its largest engine customer is worried about a recent increase in defects and, as a result, Caterpillar could lose its standing as a preferred supplier.

But Caterpillar officials say quality is higher than ever and the problems are not related to an ongoing contract dispute with the United Auto Workers.

The company has a plant in Lafayette, Ind.

Caterpillar vice president Rich Thompson on Wednesday pointed to an internal memo that said problems with its new engines are jeopardizing its sales and hurting its reputation.

"We want it to be a local business, so we want local people as partners so we can have their insight," Stammann said.

Disney to unveil new theme park

HAYMARKET, Va.

Undaunted by staggering losses from its European venture, the Walt Disney Company pressed forward Thursday with plans for a "Disney America" theme park near a Civil War battlefield in Virginia.

Disney selected a 3,000-acre site in the rolling, heavily wooded northern Virginia countryside after an exhaustive search, said Peter Rummell, president of Disney Design and Development Company.

The opening date target is 1998.

Rummell said Disney would invest "hundreds of millions of dollars" in the project, a 100-acre park surrounded by a residential and commercial development.

"We're here because we think we can succeed. We don't plan on quitting," he said.

The goal, he said, is to build a theme park that will complement numerous historical attractions in the nation's capital, some 30 miles to the east, as well as Civil War battlefield sites in Manassas and Fredericksburg.

Thomas Jefferson's Monticello home near Charlottesville, Va., has plans include a Civil War-era village and fort, an American Indian village, and a "thriving Latin American auto market"

Interest rates on 10-year, fixed-rate mortgages rose slightly to 7.12 percent this week, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said Thursday. This week's average was up from 7.11 percent a week ago. It was the third consecutive increase since the average hit a 25-year low of 6.74 percent last month. It marked the second week in a row the story of immigrants and their history.

Trucks on Indiana's interstate highways were moving right along Thursday without any strike-related activity, the Indiana State Police official said. Center for service needed at SMC Ideas about a proposal for the Saint Mary's Christian Service Group (SMSCG) have floated around the campus since the early fall. It is time to mobilize the efforts and make the talk a reality.

As a Catholic institution the mission of service is an integral one to the College.Contained within both the mission statement and the vision statement, a call to service has always been part of Saint Mary's. A formal center would provide the campus with a place to carry out this mission.

At the present time many students find it difficult to locate service opportunities. With a center and a full-time staff, that would provide the continuity and consistency that many student-led groups lack, the center would provide a long-lasting institution for service on the campus.

Such a center also come the opportunities to coordinate a means for integrating service into the curriculum by providing students a place to turn the concepts learned within the classroom into a reality.

While many may see overlap between this center and the Notre Dame Center for Social Concerns (CSC), the proposal has included clear goals for the center, including a focus on issues concerning women and families that would distinguish it from the CSC and be consistent with the mission of the College.

However, the planning group which composed the proposal was not as careful about the budgeting of the project.

Research needs to be done to spell out specific costs for each item contained within the proposal. Round figures and estimates will do little to have in the passage of the proposal by both the College and the Congregation of the Sisters of the Holy Cross who are being asked to jointly sponsor the project.

When attention is given to financial details only one other obstacle stands between the proposal becoming a reality—student support.

The proposal will go no where without indication of student opinion or concerns regarding the center.

With student support being an integral part of whether or not any further consideration will be given to the project now is the time for the women of Saint Mary's to speak their minds about whether or not they feel there is a need for this center.

The idea for a full-time center set aside for service at Saint Mary's is long overdue. Long after the current student body leaves Saint Mary's, the mission of the College will remain the same, the SMSCG would help that mission to flourish and grow for years to come.

Let me be the first to wish the Aaron Taylor the happiest birthday. My friend, Aaron Taylor, will celebrate on Thursday, November 11. He is not only my friend but his basketball and football teams, with the talent, drive and desire to beat Florida State. We also have a very spirited student body that was about to pop their heads to celebrate a victory with a mad rush for the field and the goal posts. None of the incidents, the tea and the Notre Dame team in general, have we avoided this seemingly inevitable response to a victory. Over the weekend, I went to Madison to see the game take on Michigan at home. I was fairly fired up for the day—a 49-17 win over the Badgers finally edged the Wolverines 13-10, it seemed staying upright in an accelerating clock and the longest nightmare began to move forward before the crowd around me when the time. I don’t know how many miles left when the clock was stopped, but, when AE NTs never pays his share of meals, transportation, or tickets! On top of that, he invites students to join us, on us of course, while always forgetting his bank card or checkbook. He has few friends outside ND because of his fanaticatish Irish babbling, and he had few friends outside ND because of his mannerly ways! Let’s take a look at the coach and his plan. Of course, we expect to see some my way of defining reminiscent of the one Alabama used to dominate Miami last New Year’s Day. I hope to see difference between my play to constantly confuse the Seminoles. Then when they keep an extra block in block, ND can blitz two or more. Most importantly, disguise the defensive look and do not go into any big pass-protection zones.

The “Aaron eligible” (better known as the “tackle eligible”) plan is ready for tomorrow. Maybe it could be combined with a fake field goal attempt. Who would ever cover a tackle in that situation? What better way to demonstrate the birth day boy’s All-American abilities than a pass to him? (And you better catch it, big guy!)

Finally, the Fumblerooski is one of my favorites. It is a great weapon when the opposing team thinks you are going to pass the ball. Florida State is birthing. Me, the Irish are down by four with two seconds to go...you know the rest.

Have you heard that every ND fan wants ten inches of snow on game day? Of course, everyone Florida State fans do. The last time Alabama came in South Bend in November, ND fans wanted snow. The weather was 70 degrees and the day went with a score of 30-14 (I refuse to remember stats.). Just goes to show you that it’s the teams and not the weather that counts. Of course I am preparing for and hoping for snow! We’ll have a snow bowl game, pure and simple. I have no doubts in my mind that that winner will be the National Champion at the end of this season. This win will remain undefeated and our game’s win will be show in the Orange Bowl. You gotta love it! Sorry if I sound like my usual self this week.

I hope that everyone keeps their perspective, too. While the news is being blown and dramatized, let’s make sure to quote you exact scores for every game and win you by 10 per game statistics. I will be grateful for knowing Aaron Taylor these past four years and appreciative of the many good games in which I watched him play. Most importantly, I will continue to pay my share at ND coffee, etc. I hope all of my ND statistician and friends and authors like to gain the game into a similar perspective. I hate when our fans brag after a win.

Dear Editor:

This article was written in response to Joe Cannon's editorial from Monday, Nov. 8. I would like to take the opportunity here to clarify several of the misconceptions generated by last Thursday's article regarding the review of the band, XYZ Affair, in which I am a member.

The quote, "The other bands on campus are worms," is truly not a heartfelt feeling of mine, nor of any of the other members of XYZ Affair. This statement was made to the interviewer in a purely ironical or even joking context, and was not intended to establish the false priority which seems to have been interpreted by you, and perhaps many others.

In fact, that entire article is saturated with, which one might call, passages exhibiting an almost very sense of humor. From the opening lines, "...not ten feet from Pearl Jam...and slightly fewer copies sold (referring to our band's current lack of comparable worldwide popularity and album sales), to Flumme's comparison to a 'spinal tap drummer,' the jocularity of these statements seems evident. Contrary to your belief, the XYZ Affair respects all efforts by other campus bands and encourages them in their pursuits (yes, even you, Joe). Next, I want to elucidate the statement, "We are not professional musicians, we don't know how to read music, we are not adequately explained in the XYZ Affair article," as it was written, the comment could be construed in two different ways: first, as a reference to our cover music, or to our original material. I regret to inform you, Joe, that your interpretation of this matter was quite wrong.

In reviewing the article, I, the author of the article asked me to describe the sound of our original music, to which I began my answer with the description, "...not grunge." If you, Joe, have bothered to listen to our album for the one we made freshman year, or even our high school records, you will find this description accurate. By implying that we are a band with few originals and one that you feel lacks the talent and creativity of other campus bands, you, Mr. Cannon, must indeed be a victim of the same close-mindedness that you so hastily thrust upon us.

Before finishing, I'd just like to express my personal thoughts and feelings on the performance of cover tunes, which you seem obviously opposed to, First, performing any desired piece of music, whether learned or created, should be an exercise in self-expression and experience. As a true musician, I really believe that your primary job is to entertain others. By performing music that you enjoy listening to, either as a reference to our cover music and the audiences enjoy, you are able to gain people's attention and fulfill your job as a musician.

Also, playing a cover tune doesn't entirely restrict the individual musician's creative approach. For instance, the beginnings and endings of songs, the length and approach to the sections, the amount of improvisation in the way of fills by the various instruments, and the syncopation of the basic rhythm are all aspects of the cover's music that can creatively alter to satisfy him/herself (and which our band frequently does).

I'm sure that there are a fair number of people who do not resemble yourselves, that would tend to agree with these concepts. Even professional bands, such as the Beathles, U2, Jimi Hendrix, E.M. Metallica, Rush, and countless others have played songs which were even re-recorded on their respective albums.

Although many musical compositions are definitely more involved and creative, the performance of cover songs still provides a medium through which individual creativity can work on a smaller scale (if the musician feels creative enough to alter the music as he/she sees fit). "Recycling the trash" seems to be your general opinion over on play by play, and overplay the song covered. With that thought, I guess that there is something to be said for the music world making decent use of other bands and would really appreciate your thoughtful description of their music?

It is time to end the fear of feminism

Dear Editor:

I would like to comment on the Nov. 9 debate, "The Changing Roles of Men and Women in the 90's." While the title of the debate indicated a variety of issues, the issue on which the majority of the audience focused was: singular abortion.

Pro-life and Pro-choice deb­ates may volley back and forth until the end of time. While this debate continues to rage in the front, other critical issues are placed in the back burner. As the abortion issue cannot be ignored, nor can other essential issues facing women.

During the debate, Schlaffy did not address the core of issues, only her views on issues other than abortion, such as her opposition to sexual harassment claims. In the case of the Clarence Thomas / Anita Hill debate, Schlaffy commented on what a shame it was that Hill tried to destroy the career of such an accomplished man.

At the reception, a pre­Schlaffy supporter expressed how relieved she was to hear Schlaffy's view on sexual harassment. The supporter stated that she had been sexually harassed on the job and that harassment was a fact of life that women had to accept in the workforce. She said that we all must learn to "take it like a woman." How can these attitudes be accepted in a society where women constitute over half the workforce. She said that many men are not interested in taking the time to raise their children, placing the responsibility solely on the woman. In response, Schlaffy stated that this static attitude, in fact, acceptable, and that it is human nature. While it is a biological fact that a woman gives birth to a child, nature does not dictate that a woman must not be valued by the at­tributes assigned to her, or that many men do not desire to be the primary caregiver to the child.

It is time that we ended the fear of feminism. Feminism is a term that encompasses a set of beliefs and ideologies which are beneficial to everyone, not only women. Feminism ex­presses the idea that a woman must not be valued by the at­tributes assigned by others, but by those which she chooses for herself. We need to start chal­lenging the ideas of people such as Schlaffy who discourage those attempting to advance in a society which has oppressed females for so long.

Social man must pay allegiance to the Universal

Dear Editor:

I am writing to clarify some points made by my good friend, Peter Helland, relative to my book, Behind the Lodge Door: Church, State and Freemasonry in America.

First, the book is not "new." It was initially published in 1989. Mr. Helland is aware of this and availing himself of the Hesburgh Library. A revised edition will soon become the fifth printing of this exegesis of the religion clauses of the First Amendment.

Second, the present First Amendment was not crafted alone by Congressman Fisher of Massachusetts, but also by Senator Oliver Ellsworth of Connecticut, a man who subsequently became the third Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

The problem with jurists who are committed to the philoso­phy of Freemasonry is that the Craft endeavors in philosophy as "Cabalistic Gnosticism," a pagan naturalism and ratio­nality. (1870; Davis vs. Beason, 133 U.S. 333, at 342, 1890; United States v. Macintosh, 283 U.S. 605, at 633 (1931). Can the Court's repeated protection of First Amendment "rights" for those who do not believe in "our Creator," and recognize no "duty" owed Him raises a question as to the true Constitutional validity of those "rights." Finally, Peter Helland is right in stating that James Madison had little to do with shaping the religion clauses (all his propos­als concerning religion were defeated by him on the House floor, or his colleagues rejected them).

However, in his "Memorial to the Senate of the United States on Religious Assessments" (in Virginia), a document fre­quently cited in Supreme Court religion clauses cases, Madison pointed out that the "true religion" can be considered as a member of Civil Society, he must be con­sidered as a subject of the Governor of the Universe: (and every man who believes in a particular civil religion, must do it with a "right to approach Holy Communion.

PAUL A. FISHER
Notre Dame Class of 1943

The third, hard reality, is that this nation was established as a "Christian nation." This fact was acknowledged by the Supreme Court in four (not five) separate cases: (1) Hodel v. Girard's Executors (1844); (2) Mormon Church v. United States (1889); (3) Church of the Holy Trinity vs. U.S. (1912); and (4) United States vs. Macintosh (1931).

Moreover, the word "religion" in the religion clauses has been defined by the Supreme Court as meaning "the duty which we owe to our Creator and the mandates of moral law." (S. Reynolds, 98 U.S. 145 at 164 (1880); Davis vs. Beason, 133 U.S. 333, at 342, 1890; United States v. Macintosh, 283 U.S. 605, at 633 (1931). Vanover has been extremely dangerous this season. Through nine games he is second on the team with 497 receiving yards on 32 catches. He led the Seminole offense line is one his strongest features.

Vanover's season best was a six catch, 129 yard, one touchdown performance versus Virginia. He has also been used regularly this season on the touchdown. He has a combination of ability to rush over tacklers and open up on the rare occurrences when they are actually well covered.

Vanover's receiving yardage was third in the nation by averaging slightly over 245 yards per game.

Sean Jackson leads FSU in rushing, averaging seven yards per carry.

W hile the linebackers and front six have been mentioned as the key to winning a national championship, the offensive line is one his strongest features.

The Irish will certainly present a formidable opponent, and thewayne players have been able to refine five backs to successfully carry the load.

Senior tailback Sean Jackson has led the Irish in rushing the ball 94 times for 646 yards and five touchdowns. He is averaging 74 yards per game this season.

The ground attack has consistently been penalized by its potent team. While the running game can tear apart opposing defenses just as Vanover's season best was a six catch, 129 yard, one touchdown performance versus Virginia. He has also been used regularly this season on the touchdown. He has a combination of ability to rush over tacklers and open up on the rare occurrences when they are actually well covered.

Vanover's receiving yardage was third in the nation by averaging slightly over 245 yards per game.

Sean Jackson leads FSU in rushing, averaging seven yards per carry.

W hile the linebackers and front six have been mentioned as the key to winning a national championship, the offensive line is one his strongest features.

The Irish will certainly present a formidable opponent, and thewayne players have been able to refine five backs to successfully carry the load.

Senior tailback Sean Jackson has led the Irish in rushing the ball 94 times for 646 yards and five touchdowns. He is averaging 74 yards per game this season.

The ground attack has consistently been penalized by its potent team. While the running game can tear apart opposing defenses just as dangerously after they have been given the ball 96 times for 669 yards and tops.

The battle of the lines could come out on top.

Linebackers key to big play
Seminole defense

By MIKE NORBUT
Sports Writer

Once thought to be the weak link of the defense and flashing Redshirt freshman Barry Bowden his first national championship, the Florida State Seminoles have turned the tables that some scoffed at last season, and is now ranked in the top five by the AP in every category. They have won only five games in a row, thanks to the hard work of the Seminole line.

The Irish have offense, on the other hand, ranks in the top ten in the nation in yards gained per game. Without the lack-luster 230 yard performance against Purdue, however, the Irish could have continued to improve, culminating in 604 total yards of offense two weeks ago against Navy, a team led by the Irish 24-17 at halftime.

Here’s a look at how the Notre Dame offense stacks up against the Seminole defense:

NOTRE DAME RUNNING OFFENSE VS. FLORIDA STATE AGAINST THE RUN

The University of Southern California head coach John Robinson called tomorrow’s game between the Florida State and No. 2 Notre Dame a classic matchup of "speed vs. power." Reporters and fans from around the country will expect to see the Seminoles’ lightning quick linemen and linebackers try to counter the explosive strength of the Irish ground game.

Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz, however, does not see Florida State as merely a speedy team.

"I think we’ve played well on offense, but we’re one dimensional," Holtz said. "I think the Seminoles defense is the type that could key on our running attack. They have an ability to perform."

In his first year starting for the Florida State defense, the junior leads the team in tackles, and has shut down the Irish ground game, he may surprise his critics by becoming two-dimensional.

If so, quarterback Kevin McDougal may be tomorrow’s unsung hero.

"(McDougal) reminds me a lot of Charlie Ward," Brooks said. "He can run that offense really well. I’m impressed by him."

Though his passing yardage is about half that of his counterpart, Ward, McDougal has completed 62.8% of his 113 passes this year and has come through with the big play.

His three favorite targets, Lake Dawson, junior Mike Miller, and sophomore Derrick Mayes, have combined for 29 completions, 426 yards, and have shut down the Irish offensive line to give McDougal time to complete his passes.

Versatile QB
a triple threat

Charlie Ward, despite being a running threat, has received Heisman Trophy, may be the most electrifying player to visit Notre Dame Stadium this decade. Ward has all the tools of a Heisman winner, and possesses the leadership skills to lead his team to the national championship. The final hurdle: tomorrow's "Game of the Century" against the Irish.

"I do not remember there being ever a year where the Heisman race was over," said Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz. "There's never been anyone else in the race from day one."
What does Ward bring to the table for the showdown? Just about everything.
Number one, Ward's most impressive skills may be his intangibles. His ability to improvise cannot be ignored.
Many a tackler have thought they had a clear shot at Ward, only to see him slip away for a long gain or a long pass play.
Ward's unparalled speed at the quarterback position makes him a constant running threat. Florida State coach Bobby Bowden well aware, Ward cut on pass plays to give him the option of running the ball, and he is not afraid of tucked in to gain some yards. He also has four rushing touchdowns this year.
Furthermore, Ward's ability to elude would-be tacklers within the pocket is also exceptional. Much like Irish quarterback Kevin McDougall, Ward is adept at side-stepping defensive lineman and finding his receivers downfield.
"He can avoid the rush until the receivers can get open," said Holtz. "And you aren't gonna sack him very often. He has such good peripheral vision."
Speaking of finding receivers, Ward has improved by leaps and bounds in that area. Last season, Ward was benched for a number of snaps after throwing nine interceptions in his first three games. He had difficulty reading receivers in his first few games as a starter, and was forcing balls into areas filled with defensive backs.
However, Ward rebounded in his fourth game with a 20-35 performance for 256 yards and no interceptions in a 35-7 win over Wake Forest, and he has n't looked back since. Ward ended the year 204-365 for 2,647 yards and 22 touchdowns.
Pressure and containment keys to stopping Ward

One of the biggest questions heading into The Game is also a critical one: What will the Irish do in their attempt to slow down the multidimensional Ward?
Inert, the Irish secondary, which may be the most impressive unit on the team and one of the greatest ever at Notre Dame, must come to play. Seniors Jeff Burris, Greg Lane, and John Covington, and sophomore Bobby Taylor will most surely have their hands full.

The Irish deep four will most likely play an aggressive man defense against the talented Seminole receivers, to keep from Ward picking away at the holes that would inevitably appear in a loose zone defense. The Irish may let Ward get away with passes under seven yards, but will provide tight coverage on any deep play.
Taylor and Lane should not have that many problems by themselves, with Taylor isolating against sophomore flanker Tamarick Vanover and Lane bracketing on senior split end Matt Frier. The two match-up favorably.
However, the Seminoles will also encounter senior Kee McCorvey and junior Kevin Knox. McCorvey and Knox are the two most talented tight receivers in the country, and they will challenge the Irish.
Burris will undoubtedly also take on man-on-man coverage responsibilities, and Covington must play his role as an enforcer in the defensive backfield.
If he can get a shot in on one of the Seminole receivers, it may make them think twice the next time they run the post and crossing patterns that Ward loves to complete.

This brings us to the play of the Irish linebackers. The key to the game may be the ability of the line backers to quickly settle into their pass drops against the Seminole shotgun offense.
This formation gives Ward a clear view of the field the moment the ball is snapped, and he will hit the 5-15 yard passes across the middle to tight end Lonnie Johnson and Co. all day if the line backers fail to do their job.

Consequently, the Irish may look to play a unit that includes quick freshman Bert Barry, and defensive backs Kimon Tatum and Brian Magge. Both Tatum and Magge are excellent against the run, and their extra speed may prove to be what the Irish need at the linebacker spots.
If middle linebacker Pete Berich expects to be a factor against Ward's passing ability, he must concentrate on his drops. If he is unable to get to the spot, we may see Berry, junior Jeremy Sample, or fellow freshman Melvin Dansby inserted to help against the pass.
A huge challenge will be when the Seminoles come out in their designated passing offense on third downs, with one back in the backfield and Knox, McCorvey, and Vanover split out. This formation should spread the Irish defense out and it will take great individual efforts from Taylor, Lane, and Burris to prevent sure catches and long gains.

The Irish may also have fits with Ward's ability to run with the football. This is where the defensive line comes in.

Ends Thomas Knight and Brian Hamilton's main responsibility, besides putting pressure on Ward, will be playing under control and ensuring contain on the outside of the defense. If Ward gets around the ends, he may break some big plays.
As far as putting pressure on Ward, this is an area where the Irish can be most successful.

The Seminole offensive line may be their biggest weakness, and the Irish have had great success with their blitzes most of the year.

The Irish should look to blitz Taylor and Covington, hoping that a blind-side shot on Ward may aggravate his rib injury and put him on the sideline.

That may be the best strategy on how to defense Charlie Ward, keep him on the bench.
Derrick Brooks replaced last year's Butkus Award winner Marvin Jones, and is the leading candidate for the award in 1993.
The History of the Series

The Last Time:
Florida State 19, Notre Dame 13

Florida State quarterback Rick Stockstill threw touchdown passes of 17 and five yards to Mike Whiting, and Ricky Williams ran for 135 yards on 15 carries, in what Bowden ranks as his fourth-highest win at Florida State.

After the Irish tied the game up at 13 in the fourth quarter on a one-yard run by Greg Bell, the Seminoles picked off a Blair Kiel pass at the Irish 31 and drove for the winning score with 4:7 left.

The one bright spot for the Irish was a 120-yard performance by Bell, as the Irish managed just 41 yards passing against the Seminole defense.

Notes

Notre Dame Stadium

Built in 1930
Capacity: 59,675
Largest Crowd: 61,296 (1962)
Surface: Grass
ND's Record There: 238-67-5

One of the most feared and respected landmarks in football history. Notre Dame Stadium has been home to more national championships than any other stadium in college football.
Duel

They don't play anymore," said McCorvey. "You have to wonder if the boys of Rockne's day could handle modern football, or more specifically this one game. George Gipp may be a little perturbed by the media circus and a layer of pregame hype so thick that even Irish fans couldn't wish for a thicker snow storm.

"I think right now it is the game of the century," said Irish State head coach Bobby Bowden. "I think that the hype and everything else is on the outside, not on the inside," said Irish coach Lou Holtz. "I think on the outside, what I have been able to witness, people are really talking about this game.

Oh, really coach. Actually the media and fans are choking themselves with pregame hype. It is coming from all angles and in all degrees.

The alumni and student body at both schools are swelling. In one letter to The Observer a Notre Dame graduate student suggested that the school fly the Vatican Flag from the stadium for good luck.

That letter was countered by mail from an FSU alumna who stated, "To tell you the truth I am tired of your 'holler than thou' attitudes. It will be a pleasure to see FSU run over sloths like Pig-Reyes and Bryant Young, and more of a pleasure to irreverently bury a piece of 'God's Country' with all the rest of the less talented.'

The media has done their share too. The Chicago Tribune seems to monitor Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz's forecasts like election returns. "Holtz will settle for a tie if the opportunity comes," said McDougal mid-week that the Florida State defensive line called Irish quarterback Kevin McDougal and nicely (or not so nicely) told McDougal what they were going to do to him on Saturday.

It turned out that one of McDougal's close friends from high school, Tyrant Martin, was at defensive end for the Seminoles. McDougal assured us that the talk was not one-sided.

Game of the Century, Game of the Millennium, the media and fans have thought of it all. They have almost ignored the game itself, which is just football, like Gipp played and Rockne coached, only faster and of more importance.

"Rivalries like Penn State and Michigan are built up over years," said Holtz. "As far as playing Florida State, the only thing that makes it important right now is the magnitude of the game."

The winner has one hand on the national championship, and a likely date with Miami in the Fiesta Bowl on New Year's Day.

But first things first, these two teams boast different styles but similar results. Winning is commonplace in South Bend and Tallahassee, and everyone is looking for a reason why their team will come out on top.

For Irish fans it is Holtz and the two weeks he has had to prepare for a team deemed as unbeatable.

"The open date has been to our advantage," I think we made good use of the open date particularly that our players got a couple days off and got a chance to get away," said Holtz.

"There isn't anything I do as a coach (that gives Notre Dame an edge). If we do have an advantage it certainly doesn't have to do with the fact of coaching or that we're going to come up with some great schemes. We've never won a football game because we made up some decisions as coaches to outsmart somebody.

"Maybe, maybe not, but Holtz thrives on the underdog. I like being the underdog. I just don't like the reasons why. What I am really surprised at is how big an underdog we are," said Holtz. "Playing at home, we're undefeated, but we're probably as big an underdog as we have been playing at home since I've been here."

Even Bowden concedes the fact this is Holtz's type of game.

"This is his element. For one, he is an underdog. He eats that up. And for two, he has had two weeks to prepare. He eats that up also."

Holtz's mojo set aside, Bowden and the Seminoles are brimming with confidence, an arrogance which comes from being the top team in the country and surely the most talented.

"We're just treating this as another bail game," said All-American linebacker Derrick Brooks. "We're used to playing in big games, so this is just another one we have to win."

"This game is just another hurdle," said Bowden, "but it's a rather big one."

Some say a close game would demand a rematch. That would make the next Game of the Century only a little over a month away. But that is a notion which Notre Dame's coach quickly dismisses.

"I don't think Notre Dame has a chance (at the national title) unless it wins this football game," said Holtz. "It's been my experience that Notre Dame drops substantially when we lose.

Irish fans are hoping for poor weather conditions, and the forecast is obliging slightly. Fifty-degrees with a good chance of rain is what most weather services are predicting, which to some means an Irish advantage.

"This is for the national title," said Bowden. "You can't use weather as an excuse."

Holtz has said he wants clear skies, as a game of this magnitude should be played under ideal weather conditions.

"I've never seen him so confident as he was the Michigan week," said McDougal at a press conference Wednesday.

"And about this week?"

"Even more confident.

"Weather forecasts, a national title, the talk of the town and a postmark, this game is lucky very little, awaiting only a climactic finish.

"If I wasn't in coaching I would count the hours till I could see this game on TV," said Holtz. That count started long ago.

Kevin McDougal has quietly waited for his day to shine

The attention is already here.

The Irish to a 27-23 thrashing of Michigan that thrust the Irish back into the title picture.

"Kevin has had good days and bad days just like everybody else, but he has done everything you could possibly expect him to do," Holtz said. "He has patience and perseverance and the way he believes in himself is outstanding." • • •

That self-confidence is what kept McDougal at Notre Dame. It's what kept him ahead in the spring quarterback battle with Paul Faldia. It's what kept him calm when he struggled early in the season.

"Every quarterback has to have confidence that he has the ability to lead the team," McDougal said. "I've struggled a little at times, but I always believed that if I kept my composure things would start to go my way."
The game of the century. This is a phrase that would intimidate most college football fans, but seems almost mundane and routine at Notre Dame, where the Irish have been involved in more games of this magnitude than any team in the country.

The Irish have staked their reputation on perennially taking on the best teams in the country, and seem to be always involved in the race for the national championship, either as a contender or a dangerous underdog. Since the inception of Associated Press rankings in 1936, Notre Dame has finished No. 1 record when it played the top-ranked team in the country, and since 1970 that record is 6-5-1. When playing against the favorite, the Irish are usually in the game until the end.

The Irish have also had their share of success at the top of the rankings. In the first game of the season, the No. 2-ranked team, and owning a 62-11-3 record in that span. Many of these wins have come against top-flight competition, as Notre Dame has "The Irish" against the "Best"

By Timothy Seymour

The Lou Holtz era has been the most successful in games of this magnitude than any team

"The Rocket" silenced the 106,000 in Michigan Stadium with two second half kickoff returns for touchdowns, lifting an otherwise unimpressive Irish attack.

"It was a typical Notre Dame-Michigan football game, a very physical football game, hard fought, hard played. Any time we come up here to Ann Arbor and walk out with a win, we're happy," stated Holtz.

The coaching staff had to be especially happy that its conservative game plan was successful, as the Irish threw just two passes all game. However, the Irish were able to contend with the huge lines of Michigan, controlling the Midwest attack while grinding out a successful running game of their own.

This effort would have all been for naught, of course, if not for the speed of Ismail. Ned Bolcar summed it up best, combining the two factors in Notre Dame's victory, "Thank God for Rocket Ismail."

"Great players are at their best in big games, and this early-season contest was important, as one powerhouse would be knocked out of national championship contention. The difference was that Raghib Ismail was wearing blue and gold, not maize and blue."

"We competed hard, but turned the ball over and you can't win football games doing that," explained a disappointed Holtz following the loss. "Someone come into your stadium when you're so close and take it from you, it hurts."

The Lou Holtz era has been the most successful in big games, and this one may be the biggest of all to Irish fans. Miami came to South Bend with a 36-game winning streak, but the contention had been that Notre Dame Stadium might be the one place that streak would end. That contention proved to be correct.

In a game of this importance, it is rare that one moment is remembered as being so monumental, but Pat Terrell's deflection of Steve Walsh's two-point conversion pass with no time remaining will forever be ingrained in the memories of Irish fans.

What is forgotten is that Miami moved the ball at will on the Irish, with Walsh throwing for a record 424 yards, but that the Notre Dame defense, led by Frank Stams and Chris Zurch, turned the game by forcing seven Hurricane turnovers.

Also forgotten is the consistency of the Irish offense, as Tony Rice engineered two long touchdown drives, as Notre Dame established that it could score with Miami. After the victory, and ebullient Holtz commented, "This was a win by the Notre Dame spirit. It was a great game of two great teams who just competed as hard as anything I've ever seen."

The Notre Dame spirit proclaimed by Holtz is more than important in victory, and it was this precept that caused him to send home tailback Tony Brooks and Walters, the leading Irish threats in the backfield, the night before the biggest game of the season, because they had shown up late for a meeting.

On Saturday, however, Notre Dame acted as if Brooks and Walters had never played a down, as Tony Rice carried the Irish offense, gaining 86 yards on 13 carries, including a 63-yard run on the option during the first Irish possession. Notre Dame also got a pair of touchdown passes from Mark Green, Brooks' backup. "We were so close to the national championship," lamented Trojan quarterback Rodney Peete, whose Heisman hopes were dashed by the loss. "To have someone come into your stadium when you're so close and take it from you, it hurts."

Peete was valiant in defeat, completing 23-44 for 225 yards, but the Irish defense forced four turnovers and was finally when it counted, stopping USC at first and goal from the Irish four.

The one blemish in Holtz's big-game record comes with an asterisk, as a controversial call deprived the Irish of an upset in the Orange Bowl.

With the Buffaloes forced to punt in the last minute of the game, Ismail caught the ball at his own nine and raced 91 yards down the sidelines for the go-ahead score, but a questionable clipping call on senior Greg Davis took the points off the board.

The Irish were without their usual luck last game, as five turnovers and a blocked extra point propelled Colorado to a national title. An untimely interception thrown by Rick Mirer at the Colorado 38 sealed the loss, especially painful because the Irish had driven downfield following the clipping penalty.

"We competed hard, but turned the ball over and you can't do that. Three turnovers in four plays is disastrous, you can't win football games doing that," explained a disappointed Holtz following the loss.
Big games business as usual at Notre Dame

"This is not going to solve Bosnia or Somalia, I don't know why this is that big of a deal," Irish coach Lou Holtz said.

"Why is it a big game? Are they going to award a national championship trophy to the winners? If they aren't, it isn't that big a game."

The winners won't be awarded a national championship trophy Saturday, but the losers won't be awarded one in January.

The team whose name is carved on that trophy will likely be invited to the White House, so maybe this game will help solve Bosnia or Somalia.

It's a very big game. It has been building since Notre Dame beat Michigan two months ago. Eight weeks of speculation ends Saturday afternoon.

"People are really talking about this game because it's No. 1 vs. No. 2 late in the season and Notre Dame is involved and Notre Dame is the underdog, a variety of different things make this game exciting on the outside," Holtz said. "But from our point of view it's business as usual."

No 1 vs. No. 2 is business as usual at Notre Dame.

Eight times since the inception of the Associated Press poll in 1936, Notre Dame has been involved in a game between the nation's top two teams, more than any other school.

Most recently was a 27-10 win over ranked Purdue 37-22 in 1968.

Famous names like Bertelli, Lujack and Ismail are absent from Notre Dame's roster this season.

Names like McDougall, Becton and Burris may one day join those men as the legends of Notre Dame football.

But they must first be a part of something special Saturday is their opportunity.

Holtz likes to tell his team that they have 60 minutes to play a game and life-time to remember it.

Memories of Saturday's game will last a lifetime.

Famous Notre Dame is 4-2-2 overall in No. 1 vs. No. 2 games, although it is 0-2-1 when ranked No. 2.

Quarterback Angelo Bertelli led top-ranked Notre Dame to a 35-12 win over No. 2 Michigan in Ann Arbor on October 9, 1943.

"The hype for the game was great. It was Michigan against Notre Dame, which is a great rivalry to begin with and the rankings just made it a huge game," Bertelli said. "Frank Leahy was very formal and a perfectionist to begin with, but he was even more so that week. The coaches left no stone unturned, they scouted Michigan perfectly.

"Both teams were loaded. Fortunately for us, Crockett Miller played the game of a lifetime and we thumped them."

Notre Dame went on to win the national title and Bertelli captured Notre Dame's first-ever Heisman Trophy.

The most famous No. 1 vs. No. 2 games in Notre Dame history ended in a tie.

Johnny Lujack made a touchdown-saving tackle to preserve a 0-0 tie with Army in 1946 and Ara Parseghian's conservative play-calling in the fourth quarter kept Notre Dame and Michigan State deadlocked at 10 in 1966.

Both seasons Notre Dame eventually won the national title.

"We'd fought hard to come back and tie it," Parseghian said. "They got reck­less and it could cost them the game. I wasn't going to do a jackass thing like that at that point."

Some of the Notre Dame players might have liked a jaxkass thing like that to have a chance to win.

"It was devastating," Irish quarterback Coley O'Brien said of the 10-10 tie in 1966.

"We felt like we had lost the game and any chance we had at the national championship. But Ara reminded us that we played a great team under tough conditions and we didn't lose."

Twice in the last five years, Holtz has taken a top-ranked Irish team on the road to face the No. 2 team.

Both times the Irish were victorious.

There was the 1988 win over Southern Cal that propelled Notre Dame to another national title, and a 1989 win over Michigan when "The Rocket" was launched.

Sophomore Raghib Ismail ran back two kickoffs for touchdowns to lead the Irish to a 24-19 win.
Over the past two weeks, I have been asked many questions, and time and time again about tomorrow's big game. "Do you think the Seminoles can win?" is the one that has been the most frequently-asked question.

My answer, time and time again, has been a resounding, "Yes!"

Not that I am the world's foremost authority on college football, but I think I have a handle on the game plan that can lead the Irish over the Seminoles into a national championship game.

In case you haven't noticed, the strength of this year's team is in ability to run the football.

The irish, the most balanced of every great Notre Dame team has been its penchant for grind-it-out football.

A weakness of No. 1 Florida State (There are few that have been diagnosed is its possible susceptibility to a running team that can control the line of scrimmage and the time of possession with a strong rushing game.

It all fits together. The Irish will be able to play defense by featuring its physical, diversified passing attack, and keeping the ball out of Charlie Ward's hands by establishing long, grueling scoring drives.

As the Seminoles have faced a myriad of rushing teams this season, the pass happy ACC, the Irish defense has come up against two, the same two that best pass- ing offenses in Stanford and BYU. The only team that Florida State has faced with a credible running game is No. 3 Miami.

The key to winning the game was found that they could run the ball against an undersized FSU front and linebacking crew, and they were successful in their attempts to mount long drives by featuring the ground game.

The Irish boast the nation's most diversified rushing attack, one of the nation's best offensive lines, and a coach that loves to run the football.

The result?

The Irish will show the ball down the Seminoles' throats and win the game on the strength of a superior, more physical front.

Tim Ruddy, Todd Norman and Lombardi Award finalist Aaron Taylor will manhandle the Seminole front, opening a gaping hole for a group of shifty tailbacks, including Lee Becton, Randy Kinder and Robert Farmer.

Hirshing fullbacks Ray Zellers, Marcus Edwards, and Dean Liyle will be through, block through, and literally over Seminole defenders like defensive end Derrick Alexander and linebacker Ken Alexander and Derrick Brooks.

The Seminoles have not faced a team with such an array of physical players across the board as the Irish, and they will be worn down by this punishing style of play.

Some have said that the Seminoles boast one of the best offenses college football has ever seen. They have four top receivers and four former running backs, plus a Heisman Trophy-caliber quarterback.

However, all their awards and statistics won't mean diddly when they line up against an Irish defense featuring the likes of physical specimens like Bryant Young and Brian Hamilton and NFL-caliber defensive backs by the names of Bobby Taylor, Jeff Burriss, and Greg Lawson.

The only possible stumbling block for the Irish is a problem that has plagued Notre Dame in nearly all of its losses during the Lou Holtz tenure: turnover.

The Irish can ill afford to turn the ball over, giving Ward and the FSU offense extra chances or good field position.

However, the Florida State offense doesn't stand a snowball's chance in hell of stopping the vaunted Irish rushing attack, so if the Irish limit their turnovers to one or less, it will be a long day for the Seminoles: a long day of down-and-dirty, grind-it-out Notre Dame football.

So who has the advantage? No matter what the weather is, or how much tradition is shown in our backyard, the Seminoles are clearly the better team. They have the best offense in the game. They also have the best defense. Offensively, they could be the best ever.

Charlie Ward runs the show, and should show no signs of rust after sitting out a week against lowly Maryland. The only way to stop Ward is to keep him off the field.

The problem is it doesn't take long for him to hurt you when he's on the field. A scoring drive of over three minutes is a rarity with Florida State's "fast break style of play.

What makes Ward even more unstoppable is his supporting cast.

The Seminoles receiver are incredible and very deep. Matt McCorry, Kevin Knox, Tamarcik Davis and the four receiver set are some of the nation's best. Notre Dame has not seen a passing attack as spread out or as deep. Matt Frier, Kez McCorvey, Kevin Knox, Tamarcik Davis and the four receiver set are some of the nation's best. Notre Dame has not seen a passing attack as spread out or as deep.

"Game of the Century" of 1993. However, all their awards and statistics won't mean diddly when they line up against an Irish defense featuring the likes of physical specimens like Bryant Young and Brian Hamilton and NFL-caliber defensive backs by the names of Bobby Taylor, Jeff Burriss, and Greg Lawson.

The weather.

Touchdown Jesus. Number one against number two. Poor showings in their last few games. Killings and Rockne. Holtz vs. Bowden. All of these are great stories leading into Florida State's second "Game of the Century" of 1993.

But when the ball is kicked off just after 1:30 Saturday afternoon, none of this will matter. It's the same game, the same, the best of college football.

Irish, but FSU may have the better backs. Sean Jackson and Warrick Dunn are both averaging over five yards a carry. They are excellent receivers and have both had big games in the rain.

William Floyd, the best fullback in college football, creates enormous holes for the tailbacks to run through. He is also a great runner and receiver.

Irish.

Taking this into account, it will be almost impossible for the Irish to hold the Seminoles to 30 points.

With that being said, our attention shifts to the defense. FSU's defense has already blocked four teams this year. It starts with the quick and deep defensive line, similar to the one the Cowboys use.

With Derrick Brooks' return (he had 13 tackles last week in his first game back), the Seminole linebackers are fast and tough.

Notre Dame's success running the ball may come up the middle. The Seminoles are too fast to give up success to the outside, on an option, for example.

The secondary may be asked to play lots of man to man coverage to help the run defense, but that's where they are at home.

With their speed and coverage ability, they will be able to take away the strike. The Irish may be able to turn in a big play on special teams, but the Seminoles are just too fast for Notre Dame.

Lou Holtz's team will not be able to hold FSU's offense, and the Irish cannot win a scoring contest.

Holtz said he'd go for a tie if it came down to it. Scott Bentley would love to kick a game winning field goal. Neither will happen.

Notre Dame's best hope is to keep it close so they don't drop too far in the polls.

Special postmark and postal cards commemorate big game

In cooperation with the U.S. Postal Service, Notre Dame and Florida State will mark Saturday's game with a special postmark featuring the colors and mascots of both universities.

The project developed out of a conversation at freshman orientation in August about doing a special cancellation for orientation, and it evolved into doing something special for a home football game, Lennon said.

The latest project is just one of several benefiting Notre Dame.

"To our knowledge, no other university has done a special cancellation around a football game," Lennon said.

In addition, the Notre Dame Alumni Association produced a commemorative postal card that includes a 22-cent Knute Rockne stamp that can be cancelled with the postmark. Trimmed in blue and gold, the card includes a welcome to Florida State fans on campus for the game.

The cost of the card is $1, with proceeds going to the Alumni Association Community Service Programs.

The card is more valuable to stamp collectors because it is hand-cancelled, Lennon said.

The Irish green or Seminole red postmark will be available Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Alumni Association office in room 201 Main Building.

The postmarked envelope will be sold from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Notre Dame post office, and 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. at mobile units on the mall near the Clarke Memorial Fountain and inside Gate 3 of the J.A.C.C.

The envelope will also be sold from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the mobile units and at a booth near the Varsity Shop in the J.A.C.C.; and from 9:30 a.m. to noon at the post office.

The postal service will use the postmark to cancel stamps only; however, Fighting Irish and Seminole fans can create their own souvenirs of the game by putting a stamp on surfaces such as footballs, magazines, programs or T-shirts, according to Lennon.

BCAF offers post-game entertainment

After all the excitement over the "game of the century" dwindles, Saturday evening the Black Cultural Arts Festival (BCAF) will present "Face Images," the 8th Annual Talent Show, featuring comedy, dance, and music.

The doors of Washington Hall open at 7:30 p.m. and the show will begin at 8 p.m., and the event costs $3. The event is comprised of a variety of activities featuring: stand-up comedy, songs and rap, dance routines, poetry recitations and a live band.

A comedy troupe comprised of students will also perform skits and commercials during the show, involving the audience in some of the acts.

Following the Talent Show, guests may join the festivities at the upper deck of Coughlin Stadium, costing $4 at the door. (Directions to the stadium will be given after the show.)

A special preview of the 7th Annual BCAF Fashion Show, "Expressions," will also be unveiled during the Talent Show. The audience will get a taste of the models and fashions to come in the March 26, 1994 show.

"This is just the BCAF's version of the Sorin Talent Show and the Keenan Review," said Tom Steele, president BCAF. The show is for everyone, not just Afro-Americans, according to Steele.

Proceeds from the show will be donated to the BCAF Thurgood Marshall Scholarship Fund.

"This year's show will run more smoothly because we have eliminated the intervals between acts. The audience will not sit as long or be as restless," Steele said.

During the Talent Show and the Voices of Faith Choir Concert on Sunday, the BCAF will collect donations for a toy drive to benefit the Center for the Homeless, coordinated jointly by BCAF and the NAACP.

The donations will purchase gifts for the children in the community. "This is a nice gesture, especially with the Christmas season coming up. Some children will receive nothing for Christmas, and this is a good way to brighten their holidays," Steele said.

"FIGHT SONG CELEBRATES 85TH ANNIVERSARY"

Special to the Observer

For almost a century, Irish fans have been cheer cheering for old Notre Dame.

It was in 1908 when Father Michael Sheehan and his brother, John, collaborated to compose the "Notre Dame Victory March," and this year marks its 85th anniversary.

Up until the creation of the song, the cheers done at Notre Dame football games were very sporadic and home-made, with no musical accompaniment, and it was obvious to the Shea brothers that something had to be done.

John was an excellent writer and scribe, who felt the "fight song" should be inspirational, so he recruited Michael to work on the melody.

On Easter Sunday in 1909, in the rotunda of the Administration building, the song was played for the first time, and now it has risen to become perhaps the most parodied, copied and arranged fight songs ever written. It has several different arrangements for band, orchestra and vocal groups, and is still remains one of the most popular melodies adapted and adapted by high schools in America.

Notre Dame Victory March

Rally song of Notre Dame:

Sing her song, and around her name.

Rally song of Notre Dame:

Raise her Green and Blue.

And cheer with voices true.

Rally song of Notre Dame.

Rally song of Notre Dame:

Voice of her name.

Rally song of Notre Dame:

Loyal to Notre Dame.

Cheer, cheer for old Notre Dame.

Wake up the echoes cheering her name.

Send a volley cheer on high.

Shake down the thunder from the sky.

What though the odds be great or small.

Rally song of Notre Dame:

While her loyal sons are marching

Onward to victory.
Seize the day, but don't forget to put trust in tomorrow

“Carpe diem,” I would begin, if I were giving the annual address to the Dead Poets' Society. "Quam minimum credula Postero." "Seize the day, put no trust in tomorrow." If I were the honored guest this year at the Society's black-tie dinner, seated at the right hand of the founder, Robin Williams, whom I would remember to address as "Captain My Captain." I would offer the members a verbal mosaic sparkling with bonjox from the dead poets, with Andrew Marvell's "Carpe diem" piece, soliciting my coy mistress, as the centerpiece.

The Dead Poets Society has always heard from the dead poets, with carpe diem" aids,' says Romeo. He speaks of their journey to God. That's why my address to the Society may have echoes of a sermon. And time, "This coyness, lady, from the dead poets, with mosaic sparkling with bijoux of their dilemma, Flewdurr, the saviour asked. "Because I was meek and mild. "Because I was sorrow has brought you to this sad state?" the Lord wanted to know. The man answered: "When I was dead, you stood at the door of the grave and commanded me to come forth." In the Gospel according to Wilde, what could have happened to Bartimaeus, the man born blind, to the paralytic cured on the Sabbath, and to Lazarus, returned from the dead to make them unhappy with the place in the world to which Jesus brought them with his miracles.

"Here, here will I remain/With them of R eading Gaol: "Som ething of R eading Gaol: "S omething of the summer's heat become windows open to the sunset and evening star with which our day ends, the Church tells us to pay attention to those who have departed from this life, needing our prayers to help them on their journey to God. That's why my address to the Society may have echoes of a sermon I could give on All Souls' Day. The Dead Poets' Society doesn't need me to tell them that the mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation. It wouldn't hurt them to hear the unfinished story that Oscar Wilde left behind him when he died as an outcast in Paris.

It's about what happened when Jesus, in His own time, made a visit to the old neighborhood. First, He met one of the street people so drunk that he wobbled like a run down top. "Why did you let yourself get into this condition?" the saviour asked. "Because I was blind, and you gave me back my sight," was the answer. Later, Jesus met a bully who wanted to trade punches.

"Why are you so quarrelsome?" asked gentle Jesus, meek and mild. "Because I was a cripple, and You told me to take up my bed and walk." Finally, the Lord smote over a wretched creature who lay crawling on the gutter. "What sorrow has brought you to this state?" the Lord wanted to know. The man answered: "When I was dead, you stood at the door of the grave and commanded me to come forth." In the Gospel according to Wilde, what could have happened to Bartimaeus, the man born blind, to the paralytic cured on the Sabbath, and to Lazarus, returned from the dead to make them unhappy with the place in the world to which Jesus brought them with his miracles.

The lads who dote on dead poets should be able to recall "The Ballad of Reading Gaol," which Wilde was writing at this time. "It is sweet to dance to violins/When Love and Life are fair./To dance to lutes/Is delicate and rare:/But it is not sweet to dance to nilbeseFeelTo dance upon the air!" In Wilde's unfinished story, he projected onto his character the mood of the prisoners of Reading Gaol: "Something was dead in each of us/And what was dead was Hope." By the time he finished struggling with the disgrace of his downfall, he must have figured out that although Christ gave the blind, the cripple, and the corpeses their miracle, He let them discover for themselves that He never promised them a rose garden on this side of Paradise. Wilde could have finished the story as he finished the poem: "How else but through a broken heart/May Lord Christ enter into?"

Lads having the right stuff in their heads, who might enjoy hearing about Flewdurr's harp, though it is a children's story. It seems that the High King with his entourage was making an overnight journey through open country. As the darkness descended, it started to snow. Soon, the storm was blinding them, and they realized that if they wanted to survive the night, they would have to break their journey, and encamp where they were. The danger then was that they might freeze to death, since they had no wood for a fire. As they were taking stock of their dilemma, Flewdurr, the court musician, offered them his lovely old harp as fuel they could burn. The High King himself objected that they would need more than a dull harp to save them from the cold, and watched in sorrow as the harp smashed against the instruments into kindling wood. Soon it was burning with a generous blaze which continued as the blizzard worsened. At eight o'clock, the King's company heard music coming from the heart of the fire, in the heart of darkness. It continued all night, and so did the music, as the harp played back all the melodies struck on it in its life. Only at daybreak, when the storm was over, and the fire went out, did the music stop. Looking through the ashes, Flewdurr found a harp string made of purest gold.

Would I leave the Poets' Society too far behind if I used Flewdurr's harp string as a metaphor for the soul? After the body becomes dust, something will continue to survive and is more precious than pure gold, since it is spiritual and immortal. The soul will sing to God a new song which He knows by heart.

Ash Wednesday reminds Catholics that man is made from dust, and will return to dust. Does the Dead Poets Society ever look at what happens at the body's decay? The American way of death keeps us from guessing at the horror.

That's why it was surprising to find in the New Yorker an account of what happens when a corpse decomposes, giving off an odor that no perfume can hide. Our theology tells us that death is a punishment; that's why the doctrine of the resurrection of the body is so important. That's why the text from Job, set to music in Handel's Messiah, is so powerful.

"I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth, and though all my bones are made of dust, yet in my flesh shall I see God." But this assurance is 85 years away from "Carpe diem."

"Pale Death," Horace says, "with imperious tread beats at the poor man's cottage door and at the palace of kings." Christian and pagan alike respect death as the equalizer.

Have a great Birthday Killer!
Love,
Shannon
He has been called "the most unappreciated man on the Notre Dame Campus" as he goes about the daily performance of his ministries in quiet dedication. In the summer of his seventieth year, he added two new religious ministries to an already busy schedule. One of these is the National Legion of SERV, an extension of SERV (Students Encouraging Religious Vocations), which he founded at Notre Dame four years ago. The other, the Saint Peregrine Prayer Society, is aimed at those who suffer from cancer and other life-threatening diseases.

Both of these new ministries are "seriously supported" by him out of his small, modest apartment in a former convent at Holy Cross Parish where he resides. At age 70, he is as busy or busier than at any time in his life. Seeing to it that SERV remains viable at Notre Dame is just the beginning. Although the Saint Peregrine Prayer Society is just getting off the ground, his National Legion of SERV is beginning to attract students from all over the United States and Canada who are trying to discern a vocation to the priesthood or religious life. Father Richard Drabik of the Marians of the Immaculate Conception, has referred to SERV as "a vital movement in our times."

Other comments have been equally encouraging. Father Brian Langan, the Campus Ministry director, calls SERV "a creative and original approach to promoting religious vocations" and Father Gregory Strah, Oblates of the Virgin Mary, another vocational director, calls it "fantastic, responding to a genuine need in the Church today."

These accolades notwithstanding, he was denied permission to distribute SERV literature during the World Youth Day activities in Denver last August, which he "deeply disapproved." "I may be disappointed," he said, "but I am not discouraged. I will continue to do my best to develop the organization by whatever means at my disposal."

To date, all of his ministries have been supported almost entirely by himself. About Notre Dame, he says, "I am fortunate, indeed, that I have taken the plunge deep into the realm of spirited and spiritual Notre Dame life. I could never repay this University of the heart and the people who work, study and minister here for all that they have given me, a reason for living, a meaningful life, a sense of accomplishment, a unique opportunity to contribute to so many lives, and for this life and for the life hereafter."

Who is the man? His name is Herb Juliano and, if you would care to ask the street person who can be found just about any evening of the year at 6:45 at the Notre Dame grocery store, he can help to lead the singing and praying of the Rosary.

On any given home football Saturday, weather permitting, you will find him at his tables behind the Sacred Heart Basilica, selling football photos from his private collection to visiting fans. He calls these photos his "Gallery of Legends" and for seven years all proceeds have gone to help his SERV organization and the Sacred Heart Parish.

And, on any given first Friday of the month, regardless of the weather, he leads a few faithful students along the shore of St. Joseph's Lake on an increase of holy vocations. Currently, he is working on producing a rosary booklet and hymnal to be used by visitors to the groto, including a history of the groto and a history of the rosary.

If he has a few spare moments, he can be found in the Crypt beneath the Basilica practicing hymns on the electronic organ, which he often plays (with a minimal number of fingers) for masses there. "What I know about music I didn't rate a footnote," he says.

Nevertheless, he has received many compliments for his organ playing and often, while practicing in the solitude of the Crypt, he places on the music rack photos of Notre Dame students who have died in recent years and to whom he addresses his music.

Not only has he neglected the orphans and the widows, he has been a frequent "sitter" at a foster home in the area and often an encouraging visitor to the elderly in a local nursing home, where his rendition of Maurice Chevalier's "Thank Heaven For Little Girls" is legendary.

Herb Juliano is an active member of two Catholic parishes, Sacred Heart on the campus and Holy Cross, where he resides as manager of the Smith Center, which provides housing for Notre Dame graduate students.

Until recently, an important part of his spiritual life and a way of expressing his faith was to read Holy Scripture for masses in the Basilica. Father James McGrath, one of many Holy Cross priests for whose masses he has read, has gratefully referred to him as "quite simply, the best reader on campus."

Lately, however, he has found it impossible to sign up for readings in the Basilica on a regular basis, although he is saddened by this privatization of a community church, he is learning to live with it.

Prior to his coming to Notre Dame, he had begun to build a life in sports, as baseball coach at a small Catholic high school in New Jersey, as a pioneer developer of the Little League Baseball program and as arock-enjoying a brief fling with the Philadelphia A's. His only claim to fame, he quips, is that he has a candy bar named after him: BUTTERFINGERS! "Let's just say the A's retired my uniform while I was still wearing it," he adds.

Though he would probably scoff at them, here are some quotes from sources appreciative of Herb and his contributions.

"You write very well..." (Father Ted Hesburgh) "He is known to everyone from SPORTS ILLUSTRATED editors to sports trivia buff's." (Notre Dame OBSERVER) "Notre Dame could not have a finer representative than Herb Juliano. He is my ideal of a true Notre Dame man." (Mike Shields, author, "Greatest Moments in Notre Dame Football History") "Juliano is sport's leading 'bookworm' (SPORTS ILLUSTRATED, referring to his knowledge of sports books and literature)."

"A capable man who has brought attention and commitment to the University." (Chairman, United States Olympic Committee)

"Juliano has a home in annals of sports. He is the Answer Man of Sports." (National Italian-American Sports News)

Like Archie Graham in "Field of Dreams," he never had an official time-at-bat in the major leagues, but his baseball card shows him standing on the turf of Connie Mack Stadium in 1946 and tells you that he has dedicated his life to sports, as a means to proclaim the Gospel in the cause of world peace. It includes a capsule version of his life in sports, including his proposal for World Brotherhood Games, or "Christian Olympics," patented after the ancient Olympic Games which were part religious festival and part sporting festival.

He may be the most unappreciated man on the Notre Dame campus, but he has a treasure trove of memories that few can match. Moreover, he is too busy to worry about whether or not he is appreciated.

Charity has been an important part of his life. Several years ago he donated a perfect Pontiac station wagon to the Women's Care Center, "to aid in the fight against abortions."

Also, he has been known to help more than one student to meet the challenge of a costly Notre Dame education.

"After all," he says, "it is through good stewardship of time, talents and possessions that we all help to carry out Christ's work in the world."

Then he adds: "Perhaps someday Christ will say well done. Not because I gave a lot. Because I gave a little, but it was all I had."
NCAA bids cross country's only concern

Men hope depth can separate them from tough field

By DYLAN BARMMER
Sports Writer

While most people will be utterly absorbed with this weekend's colossal gridiron clash with Florida State, the members of the Notre Dame men's cross country team will be worrying about more pressing matters.

The Irish cross country team will be competing in Bloomington, Ind., at the NCAA District IV meet. The Irish are hoping to finish among the top two teams at the meet, thus assuring them of a berth in the upcoming NCAA Championships. The team is expected to face stiff competition, however, and any finish in the top three spots will not come easily.

The seventh-ranked Irish throw off hard work, and are hungry for a trip to the Championships. The team is coming off an impressive victory at the Midwestern Collegiate Championships, a meet which will be led by McWilliams.

McWilliams is a three time All American and is coming off a first place finish at the MCCs. McWilliams is supported by an all-star cast. Teammates John Cowan and Derek Selling finished seventh and third, respectively, at the MCCs, and Nate Rude, Matt Althoff, and John Cowan have been superb all year. Senior Nate Knuth ran a season personal record of 25:47.1 at the MCCs.

As far as the depth of the competition at Saturday's meet is concerned, the Irish must fight to keep the likes of ninth-ranked Michigan and ninth-ranked Wisconsin at bay.

"Looking at the teams in our district, the level of quality is very high," said Irish coach Joe Piane. "Michigan won the Big Ten this season, and we have run against them already this year. Wisconsin is another team that has been strong, as well as Miami of Ohio and Ohio University. Indiana and Iowa cannot be discounted, and no one should forget about Loyola. This meet is going to be interesting to see how things turn out. Our team is looking forward to the challenge, and I am looking forward to seeing how they respond."

How the Irish respond will depend largely on how McWilliams responds. The quiet confident team leader is feeling up for the race, and realizes what the team must accomplish on Saturday.

"We have to finish in the top three, preferably win the meet," said McWilliams. "We will need to run as a group to be successful. A key component is Cowan, Seiling, and Ruder running together, with Joe Dunlop, Matt Althoff, and J.R. Meleror not far behind."

The great amount of depth possessed by the Irish may be what separates them from the rest of the field. Junior runner John Cowan sees this as the Irish's greatest strength, and he is likely not alone in thinking so.

"This is the strongest team I've ever seen go into the meet," said Cowan. "This is the strongest team I've ever seen go into the meet, and we have the potential to win it," said Cowan. "With a potential All American performance, we have a real strong seven guys, and a real strong seven guys, we have more depth than any other team in the district. We are expecting great things out of Derek Seiling and Nate Rudor this Saturday, and we're looking to finish strong." Should the Irish claim their first, second, or third place finish at the meet this Saturday, they will be assured of a spot at the NAACs on November 22.

Improved teamwork key to women's success

By AMY GRIFFIN

The Notre Dame women's cross country team is trying to establish itself in the NCAA's. The team has a young but talented group of runners, and will be led by McWilliams.

The Irish swim team faces Florida State at 4 p.m. today at Rolfs Aquatic Center.

Irish confident about defeating the Seminoles

By KELLY CORNELIS

Like most students on the Notre Dame campus, the Irish swimmers are gearing up for the Florida State weekend. But they are concentrating on beating the Seminole swimmers, not the football team.

Starting at 4 p.m. tonight at the Rolfs Aquatic Center, the Notre Dame men’s and women’s swimming team will host Florida State, in their first-ever meeting. The meet also marks the first Irish match-up against an Atlantic Coast Conference team in several years.

Florida State is coming off a loss against rival University of Florida, so they will be looking to redeem themselves. According to Irish swim coach Tim Welsh, the Seminoles have a strong, fast team, and he is expecting an exciting meet.

“This is not a meet that can be decided on paper,” stated Welsh. “We are anticipating an outstanding swimming meet in which all the races will be close.”

The women hope to continue their winning ways, and the men would like to rebound from their defeat at Bowling Green last weekend. Although a national championship is not on the line, the meet is an important one for both teams.

“This is our biggest dual meet of the fall semester, but we’re psyched up and gunning for them,” said men’s captain Kevin Flanagan. “It will probably be toe-to-toe the whole meet, but we’re just as fast as they are.”

“Florida State has some very fast swimmers, but I really think our depth is going to carry us,” women’s captain Kristin Health added.

Both teams feel confident that they will kick-off the weekend with the first win over Florida State.

Dame's and women's second and final fall meet before the season kicks into high gear in January.

The Irish will be competing in a new format for the meet. This Chicago Invitational consists of cumulative point scoring that focuses more on the team than on the individual. Rather than awarding a point for an individual win, all points will be carried down to the next bout. The first competitor to score five points wins the bout, but the scoring carries over to the next weapon until a team has reached twenty-five points.

"This format has been used in international competition before and may be adapted to in internal competition as well," said assistant Ed Baguer.

The five types of bouts that will be used at the Invitational include men's and women's foil, men's and women's epee and saber. In order to compete in these different areas, the Irish will be taking four teams ranging from A-D.

Fighting on the men's foil team will be Jeremy Siek, Stan Brunnner, Conor Power and Paul Capobianco respectively. The women's foil team will be comprised of Corinne Dougherty, Didi Garcia, Kimberly Arndt, and Monica Wagen.

The women's full team will consist of Corinne Dougherty, Didi Garcia, Kimberly Arndt, and Monica Wagen. Greg Wozniak, Rian Fischer, Ashley Shannon, and Liz Caruso. Rotating out the weapons will be Bill Lester, Chris Hajnak, Bernard Barz, and Greg Shannon on the sabre.

"The team had a chance to scrimmage this week in order to get ready for the new format," said assistant Ed Baguer. Twenty-one teams will be fighting for the championship Saturday including Detroit, Wayne State, Chicago, Northwestern, and Michigan. The last three already having lost to the Irish once last week in the Notre Dame Fall Fencing Festival.

Northwestern proved to be the men's toughest opponent as the Irish edged the Wildcats 14-13 with the foil and epee teams each winning their respective weapons 6-3. While the men had trouble with Northwestern, the women's foil team won 10-6 and dominated both Chicago, 16-0, and Michigan, 15-1.

The Irish will be competing this weekend the Notre Dame men's and women's fencing teams travel to the University of Chicago for their second and final fall meet before the season kicks into high gear in January.

Volleyball’s east coast trip a warmup for postseason play

BY TIMOTHY SEYMOUR
Assistant Sports Editor

Hoping to increase their chances at a home match in the second round in the NCAA tournament, the Notre Dame volleyball team heads east this weekend to take on rivals LaSalle and Pittsburgh. Although they dropped to No. 18 in both the Volleyball Monthly and AVCA Top 25, the Irish still hold the No. 1 ranking in the Midwest region, which gives them the inside track to hosting tournament games. The Irish have yet to lose to a regional team this season.

"This week and next, when we play teams in the region, it's very important that we play well and hold on to that No. 1 spot," stated Irish head coach Debbie Brown. "The only negative is that we will have one less body on the bench for stats and other things, but I have tremendous faith and confidence with Brown for six years, will take over the head coaching responsibilities. I have trem endous faith and confidence in Brown, both on and off the court." The Explorers enter the game with an 8-21 overall record and 0-4 MCC standing, which should allow the Irish to experiment with numerous combinations, gaining experience for players at different positions. The Explorers have yet to challenge in an MCC contest, losing each match 3-0. However, junior outside hitter is having a solid season for LaSalle, leading the team with 179 kills. The Irish will then have a day to rest before taking on the best of the Big East, traveling to Pittsburgh to take on the 19-8 Panthers. Pitt has won the Big East regular season title with an unblemished 7-0 conference mark, and look to challenge the Irish as a regional contender.

Senior outside hitter Ann Marie Lunacek is the best all-around player for the Irish, helping them in the starting lineup. Senior middle blocker Mollie Stark, who injured her ankle in last Friday’s win over Xavier, is still day to day.

The Irish will also be without the services of standout senior middle blocker Mollie Stark, who injured her ankle in last Friday’s win over Xavier, and is still day to day. Freshman Jen Briggs will likely start in her place, while classmate Laura Heckenmeyer should also see her minutes increase at the middle blocker position.

"We've had to make some adjustments because of Molly's absence," explained Brown. "Obviously we'd love to have her in the starting lineup, but we expect the freshmen to come in and play well."

The entire Notre Dame squad can expect to see extended action as the Irish open their roadtrip Friday night at LaSalle. Improved defense building confidence for Irish hockey Confidence. That is one thing that the Notre Dame hockey team has been lacking in recent years. The Irish play two key conference games this weekend. On Friday night, they travel to Columbus to skate against Ohio State. The next night, the Irish face off against Miami of Ohio. But there is something different about this weekend's games. Notre Dame is confident it will win.

Senior captain Matt Osiecki, on the overall attitude of the team, "We're real positive right now going into these games. The team is expecting to play well. We definitely expect to win one or two (games) this weekend."

Why the new-found confidence? The main reason is the recent play of the defense. The Irish are ready to do offensively the take some of the pressure of the defense. The Irish are ready to do just that, "We have picked it up offensively. Now, we just need to score with our chances." Friday night's game with the Buckeyes should provide such a chance. The Irish swept last year's three-game series. Ohio State is tied for fifth with the Irish with a 1-2-1 conference record. Goalie Tom Askey is the key for the Buckeyes. He owns the second best save percentage in the CCHA.

On the other end of the ice, the Irish must be wary of sophomore winger Joe Seliar's, who was this past week's CCHA player of the week. He leads the Buckeyes with seven points.

After tackling Ohio State on Friday night, the team will then face the Miami (Ohio), who took all three games from the Irish last season. While both teams will pose a challenge for the Irish, Notre Dame is definitely capable of taking both games. Osiecki feels, "We're ready to step it up now and win some games."

Irish, Badgers a perfect match

The second season has begun for the Notre Dame men's soccer team. After months of training, a grueling ten week season, and its second Midwestern Collegiate Conference Tournament title, the Irish will compete in their second NCAA tournament when they play a first round game Sunday afternoon at the University of Wisconsin.

"The juniors have been waiting three years and the seniors four to get to this game," said Irish head coach Mike Berticelli, who will be making his first trip to the NCAA tournament since his coaching days at Old Dominion in 1989.

Notre Dame, sporting a 15-5 record and a No. 15 national ranking, received a bid Monday afternoon after capturing the MCC title last weekend. The Irish downed Detroit Mercy in the final 2-0 behind goals by sophomore Bill Lanza and freshman Chris Mathis.

"Obviously, we're pretty excited," said Notre Dame head coach Chris Petrucelli, "and I cited, said Notre Dame head coach Chris Petrucelli, "and I cited," said Irish tri-captain Ali Lester, "and if we play well we're going to win." Petrucelli said. "But we're playing good teams, so I don't fear overconfidence at all."
