SMC quilt represents 150 years of tradition

By MARY GOOD, News Writer

The quilt that served as the backdrop for yesterday's liturgical celebration at Saint Mary's represents not only 500 hours of crafting by alumna Regina Lupo and over four miles of thread—it also symbolizes 150 years of tradition.

Lupo offered Feigl a jacket she had quilted as a sample of her work. Feigl was impressed and furthered correspondence with Lupo over the summer through Maureen Manier, a member of the Sesquicentennial committee. Lupo and Manier communicated via telephone and electronic mail and in August the committee gave Lupo the go ahead to begin work on a quilt to be used for the backdrop.

“It is hard to say no to your Alma Mater,” Lupo said, and so began four months of designing, sewing, sacrifice and satisfaction.

Lupo has been sewing since age eight, but it wasn’t until her youngest of four sons was born that she began quilting. She learned the rules of quilting from library books and from there she improved her skills through trial and error. Today Lupo’s collection includes around 80 different quilted items of various sizes and she makes quilts on commission.

Lupo developed the design of the quilt and drafted the templates herself. The design of the quilt is a 16-point diamond cut star in four shades of blue, violet, white and minimal traces of gold. This star represents the many facets of Saint Mary’s women’s lives. The college emblem is displayed in the four corners of the quilt showing that Saint Mary’s students and Alumnae come from the four corners of the world. The Fleur-de-Lys in the border are symbols of the school’s patron, Mary. The French Cross, which is the focal point of the quilt is a symbol of the Holy Cross Congregation who founded Saint Mary’s.

“...The appeal of quilting has mostly been women’s experience,” Feigl said. The advancement of women for women at the College are also a symbol of the pioneer women who came together as a community to capture family and women’s history in the squares that they quilted, according to Feigl.

Quilting was a community activity, Feigl said. “We view ourselves as a community. That is why we encourage students to stay on campus, because education is a lot more than what you learn in a classroom. The community idea is emphasized in quilting.”

Because the College has always placed a strong emphasis on education, Feigl said that quilting as an art form, also encapsulated the academic traditions of the College. We appreciated the education of each student both before and after in the country.

Quilting is a very high form of craftsmanship and is seen as a highly respected skill. It is a skill that has been appreciated, which is true of much with women and their history and identity.

Quilting, which traditionally has represented community along with women’s and familial history, will serve as the symbol of the 150th years of Saint Mary’s as a women’s college during the Sesquicentennial.

Throughout its 150-year tradition, Saint Mary’s has always placed an emphasis on community and the accomplishments of women, of which is symbolized in the art of quilting.

“Quilting in multiple ways encapsulates what Saint Mary’s is about,” said Dorothy Feigl, chairwoman of the Sesquicentennial Committee.

With Saint Mary’s always being a leader in the arts, the symbolic theme of the art of quilting “just fit wonderfully,” according to Feigl.

I have a dream

It was only one man’s dream, but it woked up the world.

Over 200,000 people were present when Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., made his famous March on Washington Speech in 1963. Yet his powerful words echoed to millions more around the globe. And still echoes in our ears today.

On January 17, the observance of Dr. King’s birthday, we remembered his dream and what it means to each of us. Now, a mere four days later, are we quickly forgetting the dream?

Gone are the parades, the commemorative speeches and the boycotts from classes. Gone are the television specials and commercials devoted to Dr. King. Gone are the “King- bor” actions which Dr. King once envisioned. Gone January 17th.

As we move forth into this new year, let’s remember how imperative it is to live out Dr. King’s dream everyday. Better to celebrate his birthday than by living his dream, forever.

From snup to sundown let’s all try to see ourselves as a brother or sister. Look for the ways in which we are similar, not different. Learn and help one another to become better.

“Government is for solving problems. It always has been. It will always be. It is the one agency that can, and has, been successful in solving problems. It is there to give us what we need instead of what we want, and to do that in the most efficient and effective manner possible.”

John F. Kennedy

King once described a hopeful vision that “my four children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character.”

To him it was a dream in which people of every color, creed and country could believe. He gave his life trying to make it true.

Yet sadly, we, as a world, are still struggling to fulfill Dr. King’s dream for which he died. King’s children most likely are still being judged by the color of their skin. We still are not all brothers and sisters.

They say “be a King for a day.” I say be a King everyday. The work, the hopes that King held and the things that he stood for — everybody. Make them a part of your everyday living. Commit ourselves to world peace.

Behind the white lace curtains of a tidy South Side graystone, police found three children alone with nothing but potato flakes, ketchup and salad dressing in the refrigerator.

Police said the parents had walked out of the apartment on Saturday. A clerk at the corner grocery caught the youngster ages 4, 5 and 6 — shopping doughnuts Tuesday but didn’t report them. It was not until Wednesday that police acting on a call from a neighbor, found them.

Sandra Brandon, 26, and Elvise Holmes, 27, were arrested when they returned home later that day. They were charged with child neglect and could get up to a year in prison. Derrell Brandon, 4, Kristen Brandon, 4, and Myshia Holmes, 5, were placed in state custody, dirty but happy, Capt. Ben Weyforth said.

The evolution of the institution has created a nice balance between the number of religious women and lay people, according to O'Brien, and even as the number of those entering into the religious order continues to steadily decline, the strong roots of the Congregation of the Holy Cross holds steadfastly.

"The theme of the Sesquicentennial celebration is 'Honoring Tradition, Pioneering Change,' the Student Traditional Dinner Committee and I hope that Sunday's dinner will honor the traditions started by the Sisters, who were the original faculty and administration of the College," Manier said.

"Two of the most significant aspects of this Sunday's dinner will be the seating arrangement with one faculty member, administrator member or Sister at each table and, second, the meal will be served family style in order to recreate the spirit of the traditional dinners," Manier said.

All Sisters of the Holy Cross from the South Bend area were invited to the dinner, as well as College President Hickey and his wife who will sit, as tradition holds, at the head table with noted Seniors. Some last minute seating is available for the dinner which will be served at 5:30 p.m. Although all Saint Mary's students welcome to participate, the Grill Bar will be open on Sunday evening.

Dinner honors SMC tradition

With music, song, dance and reflection on the history and direction of the College, Saint Mary's opened its sesquicentennial with a liturgy yesterday afternoon.

College offices were closed and afternoon classes canceled so that the entire community could share in the celebration. In order to include the students studying abroad in the celebration, students studying on the College's Rome Campus held a concurrent ceremony at 8 p.m. yesterday using the same gospel, readings and music that were part of the liturgy on the Indiana campus.

More than 500 students, faculty, administrators, staff and members of the Saint Mary's community attended the hour and a half long ceremony. The liturgy kicked-off the year-long festivities which include events that highlight the history and future of the College, as well as those that celebrate the accomplishments of Mary's.

Students on the Rome campus will hold a sesquicentennial celebration later in the spring in addition to yesterday's mass, according to Rome Program Director Portia Prebys.

Bobbit jury begins deliberations

By ANNE GEARAN

A jury began trying to decide Thursday whether Lorena Bobbitt cut off her husband's penis in "calculated and malicious" revenge or because she was emotionally battered by his sexual abuse.

The prosecutor conceded Mrs. Bobbitt was raped during her four-year marriage, but that she had plenty of options short of attacking her husband.

The jury deliberated less than 30 minutes before breaking for the day. The panel was scheduled to resume deliberations Friday.

The jury, which heard seven days of testimony, was asked to decide whether Mrs. Bobbitt acted in willful, malicious anger or because she had plenty of options short of attacking her husband.

"I can think of no greater provocation than the act of rape," he said. "To rape a woman is not only a violation of the body ... it is a direct attack on the emotional structure that holds a woman together."

Prince William County Commonwealth's Attorney Paul B. Ebert said Bobbitt had raped his wife during their marriage, but that, "Two wrongs don't make a right."

"Sometimes I'm sure she didn't want to have sex. And she had the right to refuse him. But it wasn't every day and it wasn't every week ... that John Bobbitt raped her," he said.

"You can't take the law in your own hands," he said.

Mrs. Bobbitt contended that years of physical and sexual abuse drove her into mental illness and an "irresistible impulse" to harm Bobbitt. She said she acted after Bobbitt returned home from a night of drinking and raped her. Her lawyers are trying to prove that she's innocent because of temporary insanity.

Prosecutor Mary Grace O'Brien countered that Mrs. Bobbitt suffered violence in her marriage but there was no "reign of terror," as her lawyers characterized it.

Faculty Senate examines salaries

By MAUREEN BRODERICK

Faculty salary, the rights of the University's gay and lesbian community and the University's nontraditional housing are among the issues addressed at last night's Faculty Senate meeting.

A salary questionnaire has been issued to faculty members by the Academic Council, according to Richard Sheehan, President of the Faculty Senate. The questionnaire is designed to evaluate faculty salary fairness and should be available to faculty members.

Sheehan said he would look into the group's petition.

Provost Timothy O'Meara also addressed the senate meeting. Various members of the Senate's Faculty Senate were present inquired regarding outside involvement in Notre Dame's decision on campus apartment complexes.

Several senators believe Notre Dame to act more independently as a Catholic and university and not bring faculty decisions directly to high officials at the Catholic Church.

O'Meara stated that the concern of the Senate will be given consideration.

French lead for N. Ireland peace

By SHAWN POGATCHIK
Associated Press

LONDON

Britain's chief official to Northern Ireland pleaded for Irish Republican Army suspects on Thursday to "get off their treadmill of violence" and enter the community of democrats. Sir Patrick Mayhew, secretary of state for Northern Ireland, told a London audience the Dec. 15 Anglo-Irish peace declaration should have made it clear to the IRA its 23-year violent campaign to end British rule in Northern Ireland is "futile and unnecessary."

Irish Prime Minister Brian Ferris, meanwhile, said in Dublin that the declaration be "utterly condemned."

In non-violent negotiation.

He made a similar appeal earlier in the day in the first radio interview legally allowed in Ireland with the pro-IRA party in 22 years. Ireland last week ended its ban on broadcast interviews with Sinn Fein, the IRA's political wing.

On Thursday, IRA members lobbed a makeshift bomb at passing British soldiers. It exploded, but injured no one seriously. The IRA has made clear that it expects to continue its violent campaign to end British rule in Northern Ireland while deciding its response to the Dec. 15 declaration.

Still, Ireland and Britain governments hope to persuade IRA to accept the idea of non-violent negotiation.

British Prime Minister John Major is in non-violent negotiation. His government is trying to decide "self-determination" to the Irish people. Reassuring Northern Ireland's Protestant majority they can remain British.

President Clinton and his wife should be questioned under oath as part of a "thorough and impartial investigation" of their Arkansas land deals, Robert B. Fiske Jr. said Thursday as he was named special counsel to examine the case.

The president said he would cooperate, suggesting he would be willing to undergo questioning by Fiske.

"Whatever he wants to do ... I didn't do anything wrong," Clinton said of Fiske's plans during an appearance by the president on CNN's "Larry King Live." "I would certainly expect that before this investigation is over that I would question both the president and the first lady and that it would be under oath," Fiske said.

Fiske comes aboard amid a pending Justice Department investigation of the land deals that touch on Clinton. As part of the probe, Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker received a federal grand jury subpoena requesting he turn over business records and other materials relating to Whitewater Development Corp., the company that the Clintons co-owned. Tucker released the subpoena.

To establish his independence, Fiske said he would not use any of the Justice Department prosecutors now investigating the failed Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan and his links to the Clintons' investment in Whitewater Development Corp.

"In order to conduct a truly independent investigation, I should have people working for me who are not also reporting to the attorney general," Fiske told a news conference.

The selection of Fiske, now a Wall Street lawyer, fits suggestions that the special counsel be a veteran attorney and, to demonstrate independence, a Republican. However, while Fiske was appointed by Republican President Ford to be U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York in Manhattan, he served mainly under Democratic President Carter, from 1976 to 1980.

As a private attorney, Fiske defended the manufacturer of the nuclear reactor at Three Mile Island in a $4 billion damage suit and recently represented key defendants in the Bank of Credit and Commerce International fraud case.

Republican leader Dale told reporters he doesn't know Fiske, but "people who know him think he is extremely well-qualified, is independent." On the other hand, Dale said, "Some of the conservative Republi cans have not been happy with him." They were angered by his involvement in the American Bar Association's screening of potential judges. Fiske's Republican credentials won't end a GOP push for a congressional investigation.

Clinton made an appearance on CNN's "Larry King Live." Clinton said he was working to overcome frustrations of the presidency and dealt with subjects ranging from the death of his mother to the qualities of his attorney general, Janet Reno. He said she had come onto the Washington scene "hot as a firecracker."

He pledged to work with Robert Fiske, the special counsel appointed earlier in the day as his nominee for secretary of Commerce.

"Whatever he wants to do," Clinton said. "I just want to do my job, I don't want to be distracted by this any more ... I didn't do anything wrong."

Calling retired Adm. Bobby Inman's decision to withdraw as his nominee for secretary of defense, Clinton said he was concerned about the whole nomination process. "These standards are always being raised and heightened," he said.

The president made an anniversary appearance two days after Inman, who would have succeeded Les Aspin in the Cabinet, pulled out unexpectedly and leveled a blast at his critics.

"The process takes too long now," Clinton said. "I think maybe it's time to have a bipartisan look at this appointments process ... I think it's excessive."

Clinton grunted that political criticism such as that being leveled in the White House affair "apparently is part of the price of being in public life in the late 20th century in the United States."

"I can deal with it. The only thing that really steams me is what it does to my wife, my daughter, my family," he said. "I would not have had this last time Clinton had appeared on his show was the same night that White House lawyer Vincent Foster committed suicide, exactly six months ago."

Clinton said that he knows no more now about what led to the suicide than he did earlier. Foster "left a note, he was profoundly depressed ... It broke my heart."

Summing up his first year, Clinton said in the hour-long appearance: "The bad days are part of it. It's humbling and its educational. It keeps you in your place."
China agrees to labor inspections

By KATHY WILHELM

BEIJING
China has agreed to let U.S. officials check five prison factories for evidence that they produce goods for illegal export to the United States. U.S. Treasury
Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said
Thursday that the agreement comes at a ti-time when the annual political battle is heating up over whether Washington should raise tariffs on Chinese goods to punish Beijing for its poor human rights record.

China agreed to such visits in 1992 and allowed three, but strenuously more U.S. applications for months while demanding that Washington make a public statement clearing places already visited.

Bentsen announced the new agreement, a verbal one, in a speech to economists and scholars at the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences.

"China has agreed to permit inspections of five prisons alleged to be producing goods for export. I trust that this patter of cooperation will contin-u," Bentsen said.

The American ambassador to Beijing, Stapleton Roy, told reporters that U.S. customs agents inspected documents
Thursday at a prison-run tea-farm in southern China to clarify whether it was exporting to the United States.

There has been acrimonious debate over whether the use of "slave labor" has been underwriting cheap Chinese exports.
Ten million people are imprisioned in China, and many work in prison factories making items such as rubber boots, hard tools, diesel engines and clothing, according to Laogai Research Foundation, a human rights group based in Milpitas, Calif., that monitors Chinese prison labor.

Bentsen, halfway into a four-day China visit, said he urged Chinese leaders to open their markets, allow more access for foreign banks, enforce copyright and remove barriers to currency transactions.

Those barriers, he believes, stand in the way of our exports and investments in China," he said in the academy speech.

Foreign banks currently are barred from doing business in Chinese currency, and foreign insurance companies and brokerages also are tightly restricted.

Bentsen met later with China's president and Communist Party chief, Jiang Zemin. He handed Jiang a letter from President
Clinton, which he said "emphasizes that our interests lie in the development of a strong, stable and prosperous China."

Jiang said he November meet-ning with Clinton in Seattle "created a new start for the devel-ogment of bilateral relations," the official Xinhua News Agency reported.

"Both China and the United States should seize the opportunity, create more contacts and exchanges, build up mutual trust and make joint efforts to push Chinese-U.S. relations gradually on to the normal track of development. "Xinhua

Threat of violence cancels

Criticism is being leveled at the decision to call off a soccer match between England and Germany because of fears that right-wing hooligans would stir

Representatives of the two

The match was called off be-

Citadel opens doors to woman student

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press

CHARLESTON

Shannon Faulkner walked into a biology class at The Citadel on Thursday and made history. She became the first woman in the school's 151-year history to take a class with the corps of cadets.

"It wasn't like walking into any other class, when there are 30 guys in the class and you're the only woman," said Faulkner, who also celebrated her 19th birthday Thursday.

"My first day of class went well," she said. "The cadets have spoken to me. I don't think I'll be having any problems."

Well, she did have some. She got a $10 ticket for parking in the faculty lot. Faulkner said she thought school officials would challenge her right to attend.

Faulkner, who had all gender references removed from her high school transcript, first was accepted by the school, then rejected when Citadel officials found out she is a woman. So she sued the state-supported military college last year, saying its all-male policy was unconstitutional.

A federal judge ruled she could attend class days, although not as a cadet, while her lawsuit proceeded. The Citadel went to the Supreme Court to try to keep her out, but Chief Justice William Rehnquist last Tuesday said she could attend classes.

The Citadel and Virginia Military Institute are the nation's only state-supported, all-male military colleges, VMI's admissions policy is also being challenged in federal court.

Nunn refuses top defense job

By RON FOURNIER

WASHINGTON

The Clinton administration approved求婚同Sam Nunn about the defense secretary job, but the Georgia Democrat said he was not interested in the Pentagon post. White House officials said today. The Senate Armed Services Committee chairman discussed the job with top administration officials last week, said the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

President Clinton's choice to replace Defense Secretary Les Aspin — retired Adm. Bobby Inman — withdrew Tuesday, citing attacks on his character and reputation. Inman wrote to Clinton in a letter dated Jan. 8 that he did not want his nomination to proceed.

White House Chief of Staff Mack McLarty subsequently spoke to Nunn about the vacancy this week, seeking advice on potential nominees from the senator considered one of Congress' top military experts, the White House official said.

The New York Times reported in today's editions that Nunn, who has been at odds with Clinton on defense issues, was offered the job last week and turned the administration down in recent days.

Vice President Al Gore declined to comment on the newspaper's report, which cited unidentified administration officials as its source.

"We're moving expeditiously and deliberately to fill that position," said Gore in an interview on CBS this morning, adding, "I'm not going to comment on a personnel matter."

Faulkner walked alone through 25-degree temperatures and a horde of reporters who hounded her through the day. Aspin, who headed the House Armed Services Committee at the time of his appointment, originally had planned to leave today but has told the White House he will remain in office as long as he is needed. That could be several weeks.

Officials indicated Wednesday the naming of a new nominee was not imminent.

As the White House considers an Aspin successor, many in the Pentagon were favoring industry Defense Secretary William Perry for the top job.

Japanese on brink of reforms

BY PETER LANDERS

TOKYO

After more than five years of debate over cleaning up Japanese politics, it all comes down to this: a showdown in Parliament that is too close to call.

If Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa wins, the corruption-riddled political system will undergo its greatest transformation in 45 years. If he loses, it's back to square one on reform — and Hosokawa could be out a job.

The vote, in Parliament's upper house, is over Hosokawa's package of political reforms, which would ban corporate contributions to individual politicians and change the system for electing the lower house of Parliament.

The bills are designed to end repeated bribery and influence-peddling scandals that have led to the demise of several Japanese governments during the 38-year reign of the Liberal Democratic Party. The bills passed the lower house in November and cleared their next-to-last hurdle in an upper house committee Thursday.

But the outcome of the final vote, scheduled for Friday afternoon, was far from certain. Several Socialists, the largest party in Hosokawa's ruling coalition, have said they will vote against the bills, and about a dozen other legislators have not announced their decision.

The coalition has 131 seats in the 252-seat upper house, just five more than a majority, so it will need support from legislators in the main opposition Liberal Democrats. One LDP legislator, Tomomi Hosokawa, voted for the bills in the committee Thursday and said he planned to quit his party.

Hosokawa, who has hinted that he will either resign or call new elections if he fails to pass the bills, is worried about overconfidence in the show-down vote.

"I fear that we will be in danger unless we fight resolutely to the very end as if it were truly a struggle to the death," he told a meeting of coalition legislators Thursday.

Hosokawa's most important reform would overturn the system under which each district elects several legislators to Parliament's more powerful lower house.

The United Nations has largely failed in its relief effort in war-torn Bosnia and should either get tough by bringing in more troops or get out, a senior aid official said Thursday.

"How much of the population are we keeping alive if we are only providing 20 percent of the minimum amount of food needed each month per person," said Larry Hollingsworth, head of mission for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Sarajevo.

Apparently frustrated by delays and harassment of relief convoys by the warring parties in Bosnia, Hollingsworth suggested the United Nations should either "get more troops and get tough one day or get out."

He was the latest U.N. official on the front lines to criticize the U.N. strategy.

The outgoing head of U.N. troops in Bosnia-Herzegovina, Lt. Gen. Francis Brignemost, recently faulted the Security Council for being too lofty in its goals and too sparing in sending troops. He said he needed at least 10,000 more troops to carry out U.N. resolutions.

In Brussels, Belgium, Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic called on NATO to follow through on its threats to launch air strikes against Bosnian Serbs and said the alliance did not need U.N. approval to do so.

After meeting Thursday with NATO officials, Izetbegovic, the leader of Bosnia's Muslims, said he believed the best way to end the war was "the combination of negotiations and some military action against Serbian positions."

At a summit last week, President Clinton and the leaders of the 15 other North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries warned the Serbs of a new determination to order air strikes if needed to relieve embattled Muslim enclaves in Bosnia.

However, NATO officials say U.N. Secretary General Boutros-Ghali must authorize the first strike.

A senior aide to Boutros-Ghali in New York, Alvaro DeSoto, said the secretary-general would not consider authorizing such a strike "if the need arises."

Official: UN needs tougher Bosnia stance

The Muslim-led government is refusing Serb and Croat offers of one-third of the country in the current peace deal.

In neighboring Croatia, opposition parties expressed skepticism Thursday that a Croatian-Serbian agreement toward normalizing relations would lessen tensions in Bosnia.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman and Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic signed an agreement Wednesday to improve relations as a step toward ending their cold war over the one-third of Croatian land captured by Serbs in 1991.

Tudjman called the deal a diplomatic victory, while his political opponents criticized it for not guaranteeing the return of the Serb-held territories.

The United Nations has largely failed in its relief effort in war-torn Bosnia and should either get tough by bringing in more troops or get out, a senior aid official said Thursday.

However, NATO officials say U.N. Secretary General Boutros-Ghali must authorize the first strike.

A senior aide to Boutros-Ghali in New York, Alvaro DeSoto, said the secretary-general would not consider authorizing such a strike "if the need arises."

U.N. aid officials have repeatedly accused all three warring factions — Serbs, Croats and Muslims — of blocking aid convoys for an estimated 2.7 million Bosnians dependent on outside help to survive this winter.

In Sarajevo, a U.N. spokesman said the airlift to that city, suspended for a day after shots were fired at an American relief plane, would resume Friday. Relief flights were suspended "to give thinking time and to protest to all the parties," said Krits Janowski, Sarajevo spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

But overall, Hollingsworth told reporters the U.N. effort to get a minimum 42 pounds of food per person a month to civilians "is not proving itself to be successful."

However, Hollingsworth warned "there would be a lot of suffering" if U.N. peacekeepers indeed left the war-torn republic.

Another round of peace talks failed in Geneva on Wednesday, raising fears of a new round of slaughter and starvation in a war that has killed more than 200,000 people since it erupted in April 1992.

Bosnian Serbs rebelled against the decision by Muslims and Croats to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia, and now hold about 70 percent of Bosnia.

percent last year to 1.29 million new single-family homes in four years, and analysts have continued improvement this year. The Cabinet changes, worked out by Yeltsin and Chernomyrdin in two days of talks at the Kremlin, could endanger $1.5 billion in loans to Russia not yet released by the IMF. Chernomyrdin told reporters that "the period of market reform is ended" and that the reforms must be moderated to "make people's lives easier.

The Cabinet minister insisted, however, that the transition to a free market would continue. "The course that was pursued by the government in 1993 remains unchanged," he said. Uncertainty over the new government and its attitude toward fiscal policy and free-market reforms has caused near-panic selling of the ruble. The Russian currency hit record lows each day this week until today, when it recovered slightly to 1,553 to the U.S. dollar. On Wednesday, it traded officially for 1,607, but near 2,000 at some street kiosks.

Chernomyrdin, once written off as a political weakling, has changed his mind. He has emerged in recent weeks as an assertive prime minister willing to challenge Yeltsin over the course of reforms, many analysts say.

Single-family housing starts jumped in '93

By JOHN MCLAIN

WASHINGTON

 Builders broke ground in 1993 on the largest number of homes in four years, and analysts see continued improvement this year. "Low mortgage rates, better employment gains and improved consumer confidence has served to boost single-family housing starts in the second half of 1993," said economist John E. Silvia of Kemper Financial Services in Chicago. "These same factors should sustain housing starts in the first half of 1994.

Housing starts jumped 7.1 percent last year to 1.29 million, up from 1.20 million in 1992, the Commerce Department said Thursday. It was the second straight advance and lifted construction to the highest level since 1.38 million new single-family homes and apartments were built in 1989.

Activity improved in every region but the Northeast, where it slipped slightly.

MARKET ROUNDUP

PORTAGE, Ind.

BETHLEHEM Steel Corp., which reported its first-quarter profit in three years last fall, had the best year ever for finished steel at its Burns Harbor Division. The nation's largest steel maker shipped 4.8 million tons of plate and sheet products from the Portage facility in 1993. That surpassed its previous standard, set in 1988, by nearly 500,000 tons.

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich.

The president of Italian sports carmaker Lamborghini will oversee Chrysler Corp.'s involvement in the big Three - Clinton Administration venture to develop a "Super Car." Timothy Adams will continue to purchase the Hercules Inc. Film Technologies, and let them make the film in an internal tug-of-war for control.

NIPSCO has not raised gas prices since 1987, and its last electric increase was in 1990. "We should be selling customers on the different technologies, and let them make the choice," Neale said. "And that's really what deregulation is all about — giving the customer choices that they didn't have before."

In theory, that means lower prices. Cheryl Bickel, a spokeswoman for the Indiana Utility Regulatory Commission, said it remains to be seen whether that will be true. "If you believe at all that competition is supposed to be good for the customer, that's what this is about," Bickel said. "We have to see how it all plays out."
The weather was so bad, in fact... well as many inches of snow. The institution in the country on that day, with the.cancellation of classes more important than risking pneumonia and frostbite. Food Services at Notre Dame also pales in comparison to other schools. At many other institutions, both public and private, students have many options for their meals. Their meals may be eaten at dining halls, or at other snack bars and restaurants on campus, and it is all put on the meal plan.

Here in South Bend, our options are to eat at North or South Dining Halls, unless you feel like shelling out ten bucks for a pizza (or a burger at the Huddle). There really is no reason for Notre Dame to ignore this topic. Although ideas such as the Card have been proposed, they have been repeatedly denied by the Administration. Such a point system for a meal plan would only serve the student body better, while taking nothing away from the University, perhaps even contributing to it, rather than having so many students calling Papa John’s every time that the Dinning Halls serve nothing but Shepherd’s Pie.

Housing is another issue in which the University does not make the grade. Especially this past week, with the extreme weather, it has become painfully obvious to many how inadequate the residential facilities on this campus are. Hot water has been in somewhat short supply in many of the dorms. Of greater importance though is the poor heating equipment in many of the dorms, especially the older ones.

My bedroom in Flanner had no heat for a long time, and it was fixed only after many calls to maintenance. However, I have heard many complaints of poor heating in dorms such as BP, Farley, Zahm, and Morissey. One would think that for 20,000 dollars a year, we could get a little heat in our rooms. Especially in this town. The whole co-ed dorm and parietals thing has been beaten to death, and although I am in favor of the revision of these policies, I will not say much. Only that if there is enough fluctuation in the gender ratio to warrant the conversion of two dorms within three years, couldn’t one co-residential dorm provide enough of a cushion to eliminate the need to randomly convert every few years?

With regard to parietals, which are established in the interest of privacy, according to the University. How can my privacy be so well protected through parietals when there is a 60-year-old woman in my bathroom every time I get out of the shower each morning? And there is much more to be covered. Issues in race relations, relations between the student body and the administration, as well as the teacher-student relations at Notre Dame are all sub-par. Notre Dame is an institution almost as stagnant as a swamp. In the history of the universe, species which have been unable to adapt to changing environments have eventually become extinct. Sooner or later, Notre Dame will become an institution which will not be able to compete with other colleges. The fate of the University is in its own soft and manicured hands. Time to put them to work.

Will Notre Dame rise above its antiquated policies?

The Rock offers exhilarating rock climbing experience

By MATT CARBONE

To these ominous and recherche monoliths, another title must now be added: The Wall at the Rock.

Beginning this Summer, a new option will be available to campus athletes - a 20-foot indoor rock climbing wall.

The wall is a product of more than two years of intensive work on the part of Sally Derengoski, assistant director of RecSports. Brother Lewis Hurick, director of the Rock Recreation Center, and Brian Foy, Dillon Hall senior and president of the Climbing Club.

Almost three years ago, Ramsey approached Derengoski and RecSports about the possibility of having a climbing wall on campus, a recreational activity that has cropped up on many campuses across the country.

Derengoski was very receptive.

"It's a new idea," said Derengoski. "Part of (RecSports') responsibility is to be on the lookout for recreation opportunities.

For the past two years, Derengoski has worked closely with Ramsey and Hurick to bring the idea of the wall to fruition.

"Bill Ramsey has had an awful lot to do with the success of this program," said Derengoski. "Father Lewis (Hurick) has been very helpful."

After going through an involved and demanding bureaucratic process, including a visit from the university's risk management and safety department, the wall was constructed last month by a local construction company.

The university has been very supportive throughout," commented Derengoski.

The climbing wall was built in three weeks at a cost of $8,000, which was split between RecSports and the Rock.

Foy, a veteran rock climber who has been climbing for seven years, is excited that the wall will finally be open for business.

"A lot of people have been working very hard on the wall for a long time," said Foy. "It's great exercise and a lot of fun."

Foy said he got the idea from the response on Activities Night last semester to the Climbing Club booth (almost 200 signatures) and the 50 people who have regularly attended the club's meetings.

Foy is not alone in his enthusiasm for the wall.

Anton Rivera, treasurer of the club, is an avid rock climber who was once obsessed with ambition for the wall's opening.

"I can't get enough of rock climbing," said Rivera. "I can not describe the sensation again when you're up there. It's like I get into this zone, where it's just me and the rock.

If Foy is correct, Rivera and others will be able to enter this zone as the wall, which stands 20 feet high and is located in one of the Rock's racquetball courts.

The wall is composed of a decline, an incline, a roof and a plateau, according to Foy.

The Rock's climbing routes are designed by U.S. Climbing Association-certified instructors, and range in difficulty from beginner to advanced.

RecSports and the Rock will host an orientation for the wall be Sundays 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. with Jan. 24 as the grand opening.

Two experienced climbers will be on hand at all times as monitors and spotters for climbers of the wall.

Those interested in climbing the wall can (and must) sign up for an orientation session at RecSports. Orientation sessions will take place on Jan. 23, 230 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. and 4 p.m. to 5 p.m.; Jan. 25, 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. and Jan. 27, 6 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Any questions can be directed to Derengoski at 631-6690.
Two years ago, a serious-minded group of young Christians were wandering around this campus in a funk of indecision on whether God was calling them to be priests. I tried to tell them that it was probably six of one, half-dozen of another with Him, whether they became priests or not.

The burden of being gifted with free will is that He's in the habit of letting us take charge of our lives. I can see signs of His will in this: He evidently doesn't want me to be a brain surgeon; I cut myself when I take a knife in my hand to slice bread. He doesn't want me to be a pro football player, but I don't have to prove this to you, do I? Then why would I want to?

At Oxford or Cambridge, such a cluster of lads aspiring to be holy as lambs or clergy would be labelled "apostles." At Notre Dame, they were more plainly "the God squad." In number, they would be a baker's dozen, I think. Since I saw more of their shadows than I did of them, I found it hard to take a head count.

What do I mean when I say I saw their shadows? I mean, I saw them trying to shadow-box with God. I kept expecting them to leave all things and follow Jesus, how would you handle an iced water enema from a pagan wanting to make a Christian cry?

According to the Gospel story, it didn't take Andrew and Simon Peter two years to decide on leaving their nets and boats, or the old gaffer, their father. They just told him "Pappa, the time has come for us to make something of ourselves, if we can. Jesus just made an offer we can't refuse. He says it's time for us to come with thorn and start hanging out."

"We shook hands on the deal papa, and now we're saying so long for while, but we want you to know we're leaving home with aching hearts. We've fixed it up so that you can have three choices. You can stay single and go it alone; you can marry a woman to keep house and be company. Or you can take a hike down the road to the sailors' Snug Harbor, to retire with your mates for life."

"Boys," said the old gaffer, "I got a call to serve God that I'm mulling over. Now that I have you fella's off my hands, I'm thinking of becoming a rabbi."

"Fine," they said, "if that's what makes you happy. Don't take any wooden dumbard, and don't forget we're expecting you home for the Jewish High Holidays."

So Simon Peter's and Andrew's old gaffer headed toward Jerusalem, and told the Pharisee on duty that he thought he had a vocation. The next day, after passing the written and physical tests, he joined the Pharisee. As it turned out, he was present for the Crucifixion. After it was over, for the sake of his boy, he helped take the body down from the Cross, and lay it in the burial who were friends of Jesus place.

The Jews who were friends of Jesus, were surprised to see them near the Lord's mother. All the prayerful fellows. I mean, it's the same principle you'd use if you went raccoon hunting with a bound dog.

Picking up the trail, the dog starts its pursuit of the game through woodland and swamp, restless until it can tree the raccoon, now exhausted and unhappy.

I've got news for the prayerful fellows: God does not leave a trail. Why would He need to? He's all around us. Since He's the Found of Heaven, it seems appropriate to let Him trail us.

When I want His attention, I choose a corner where I will be very visible, then wait to see what He has in mind. Travelling blind, I can always tell from the payoff if I'm where He wants me.

I'm no authority on prayer, squaddies. But what should I know that I don't know? What is to be known about prayer that's as objective as the facts of life? Most of us must pray without knowing it. That could mean that the thing we do when we go through the routines of prayer are perceived by Him as our ways of distracting Him when He's doing something important, like planting tulip bulbs, or listening to Beethoven.

Good luck with your discernments, squaddies. For God's sake do get on with it, so that I can shorten my prayer list. How do I decide who to keep on, and who to drop. Can't God understand what a lot of work there would be if this damned religion turned out to be substantially true?

NFL title game is deja vu for Cowboys and 49ers

By DAVE GOLDBERG

Back in January, '82, the Cowboys and 49ers beat the Dallas Cowboys in the NFC title game, sweeping them out of the NFC's elite. A year ago, the Cowboys returned the favor, jumping back over the 49ers to inherit the mantle of the mantle of the 1990s.

So it is only history repeating itself in Sunday's Cowboys-Cowboys game at Texas Stadium for yet another NFC title.

San Francisco has played in seven title games during the Super Bowl era, including five times in the last six years.

Dallas has been in 11 title games, and between them the 49ers and Cowboys have represented the NFC titles 11 times in 27 Super Bowls, winning seven.

Dallas has been in 11 title games, and between them the 49ers and Cowboys have represented the NFC titles 11 times in 27 Super Bowls, winning seven.

But if nothing else, these are the NFL title games. The teams are the enemy, the true Axis powers of 1994. We're not talking about who's in the NFC title game, who's in the AFC title game. We're talking Cowbys-Cowboys. And, as Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson says, it's the best way to sell tickets.

It's a little bit like the NBA'sPartial title game.

Irish are winning and the stoic is happy

By GEORGE DOHMANN
Sports Editor

Some days Muffet McGraw could pass for a stoic. In recent years the Notre Dame women’s basketball coach would follow a loss with a stern expression and few words. In games the Irish should have won, she would give new meaning to the phrase “cold shoulder.”

But much to the enjoyment of the media and fans, McGraw has been as talkative as a Southern hairdresser this season. With her team coating at 11-4, its best start since 1990-91, there is much to talk about. And for now, the stoic is left in the locker room.

“We have good chemistry, good leadership, and the attitude of the team is great,” said McGraw, in her seventh year with the Irish. “We have great senior leadership, a lot more talent this year, great depth, we have good chemistry, and the attitude of the team is great.”

“We came as close as we have all year to playing a full 40 minutes,” said senior Kara Leary. “We have played nearly complete games, but not perfect yet.”

It would send a scream through the MCC if the Irish were to play flawless and send a ripple wavering in the direction of the pollsters, who have neglected to vote the Irish in the Top 25.

“The seniors really took us under their wings and taught us the ropes,” said Morgan. “I personally wanted to come in and contribute right away, and I think all of the freshmen have done that.

“Right now we are only looking at Butler,” said McGraw. “There is so much we can do with different lineups that we couldn’t do last year.”

The freshmen are not the only reason this season has been a smoother run for McGraw and the Irish. Although it is not openly said, the transfer of a pair of players the past two years has benefited the team. There are no longer any attitudes just competitors.

“We have played nearly complete games, but not perfect yet.”

“Every one has accepted a role,” said McGraw. “It is not something you coach. A player has to find their spot and then work for the team. This year’s group has done that extremely well.”

“No one has done it better than Leary. She is the consummate point guard, averaging a silent eight points per game coupled with five assists, both career-bigs. The former walk-on had 61 assists last year but already has 68 in 1993.

This team does have a point guard, averaging a silent eight points per game coupled with five assists, both career-bigs. The former walk-on had 61 assists last year but already has 68 in 1993.

This team does have a Michael Jordan, or more fitting, a Larry Bird. Freshman Beth Morgan looks and plays like the former Celtic star. She is the team’s leading scorer, averaging 16.2 points per game, and had a team-high 14 against Evansville.

“With her team coasting at 9-1, there is much to talk about. And for now, the stoic is left in the locker room.

“Everyone has accepted a role,” said McGraw. “It is not something you coach. A player has to find their spot and then work for the team. This year’s group has done that extremely well.”

“The seniors really took us under their wings and taught us the ropes,” said Morgan. “I personally wanted to come in and contribute right away, and I think all of the freshmen have done that.

“Against LaSalle earlier this year, McGraw went with Leary and four freshmen with the Irish clinging to a slim lead. The result was a 19-point win and high praise.

“We have played nearly complete games, but not perfect yet.”
Problems

tive," MacLeod said.
"We have been consistent in one sense.  Turnovers were a problem last year and they are still a problem this season.
Coughing up the ball is bad enough.  Notre Dame is hacking up vital organs.
A season-high 34 turnovers crippled the Irish against Kentucky and 30 more let a very winnable game at LaSalle slip away.
Freshman point guard Admore White earned the starting job after just three practices.
"That's Admore, as in add more points and add more assists," MacLeod said before the season began.
And add more... you know.
White's adjustment to the college game took a little longer than expected, so MacLeod gave the starting job to senior Brooks Boyer, whose adjustment is also taking a little longer than expected.
So, junior Lamar Justice started at point guard Wednesday against St. Bonaventure with similar results.
"We had hoped to have the problem rectified by now," MacLeod said.  "But it's not something where we can just snap our fingers and fix it.  I wish it was that easy."
Even with all the ball handling problems, the Irish have been within striking distance of some of the nation's top teams.
Against Arizona in the first-round of the Maui Classic, Notre Dame was within six points with less than four minutes remaining.  But the one-dimensional offense could carry the weight down the stretch.
It has been a two-dimensional offense at times, with Monty Williams and Ryan Hoover often sharing the burden.
Rarely has another player stepped up to fill the cavernous offensive void.
"We'd like to see more balance in our offense, Monty and Ryan can't do it all alone," MacLeod said.  "The forwards need to begin to open things up."
Sophomore guard Keith Kurowski opened things up for the first time as a college player and it will take him a while to regain his conditioning."
Notre Dame's schedule hasn't done the team any favors.
Perennial powers Indiana, Kentucky, Arizona have already done their damage, all on the road.
The Irish return to the Joyce Center this Saturday, where they are a perfect 4-0 this season.
"We're playing 10 of our first 14 games on the road," MacLeod said.  "It's never easy to play a team on their home floor, and hopefully our floor will be as good to us."

Distractions aside, Belles are prepared

By ANNE NAPIERKOWSKI
Sports Writer

While the events of St. Mary's sesquicentennial may have kept the Belles' out of the comfort of their own gym, the team feels well prepared for Saturday's game at Anderson University.

Spending the week at the Joyce Center has been a new and unusual experience for the Belles', but the workouts have continued to stay intense and focused.

"It has been a tough week for us," said coach Marvin Wood. "We haven't been in our own gym, but we're making the best of it.

The Belles' have continued practicing their 2-3 zone play to which they attribute last weekend's loss to Calvin College.

"I am president of the CSC," said president Andrew's position.

The Belles' have continued practicing their 2-3 zone play to which they attribute last weekend's loss to Calvin College. Similar to Beloit's team, Anderson's strength is their height.

"Their scoring comes from the post like Beloit," said fresh­men coach Greg Janson, after last week­end's loss to Calvin College.

Janson explained that last weekend, the Belles were just coming off a hard week at camp and were swimming tired and sore. Janson is looking for that to change this weekend as "they face Hillsdale in their fourth dual meet of the season."

"This week, we are more rested and have more energy," said Janson. "I'm looking for us to swim a lot fresher."

Senior co-captain Ellen Kramer, who swims freestyle and breaststroke, agreed. "The training trip really broke us down, but we are feeling much better this week."

Janson also said that he is looking for strong performances from sophomore Jill Cooper who will be swimming the butterfly, junior Tara Krull in the freestyle and butterfly, and sophomore Katie Gibbs. "Katie mainly swims freestyle, but can also swim relay positions and perform well in them," said Janson.

Janson also expects that this weekend's meet will prepare the Belles for next week's dual meets against Kalamazoo and the University of Chicago.

"No matter how we finish against Hillsdale, I think it will be a good preparation for our next two meets," noted Janson. Janson will be looking to see if the speed workouts that the team did in practice this week will pay off in Saturday's meet and the meets to come.

Megan Hurley, a senior co-cap­tain who will be swimming the freestyle and butterfly, commented that the speed work­outs were helpful.

"Everyone is more rested, and we know what we have to do," she said. "Now, we are trying to do it faster."

Coach Janson and his team are optimistic about the meet at Hillsdale and are looking for it to be a stepping stone to greater success in future meets. "Last week, our times were slower and that was very dis­couraging," noted Hurley. "We're feeling a lot better this week, and we're thinking more about what we're doing in the water."

Saint Mary's swimmers rested and ready to face Hillsdale

This Saturday, the Saint Mary's swimmers hope to up their dual meet record to 2-2 with a victory at Hillsdale.

"This week, we are more rested and have more energy," said Janson. "I'm looking for us to swim a lot fresher."

Senior co-captain Ellen Kramer, who swims freestyle and breaststroke, agreed. "The training trip really broke us down, but we are feeling much better this week."

Janson also said that he is looking for strong performances from sophomore Jill Cooper who will be swimming the butterfly, junior Tara Krull in the freestyle and butterfly, and sophomore Katie Gibbs. "Katie mainly swims freestyle, but can also swim relay positions and perform well in them," said Janson.

Janson also expects that this weekend's meet will prepare the Belles for next week's dual meets against Kalamazoo and the University of Chicago.

"No matter how we finish against Hillsdale, I think it will be a good preparation for our next two meets," noted Janson. Janson will be looking to see if the speed workouts that the team did in practice this week will pay off in Saturday's meet and the meets to come.

Megan Hurley, a senior co-cap­tain who will be swimming the freestyle and butterfly, commented that the speed work­outs were helpful.

"Everyone is more rested, and we know what we have to do," she said. "Now, we are trying to do it faster."

Coach Janson and his team are optimistic about the meet at Hillsdale and are looking for it to be a stepping stone to greater success in future meets. "Last week, our times were slower and that was very dis­couraging," noted Hurley. "We're feeling a lot better this week, and we're thinking more about what we're doing in the water."

Vin Scully’s son killed patrolling earthquake damage

FORT TEJON, Calif.
The son of prominent sports broadcaster Vin Scully was among two men killed in a helicopter crash Thursday as they patrolled an oil pipeline checking for earthquake damage.

Michael Scully, 33, of Bakersfield, was an engineering supervisor for Four Corners Pipe Line Inc., a subsidiary of Arco Oil Co., said Arco spokesman Al Greenstein.

Greenstein said the helicopter apparently was trying to land at an Arco pumping facility about 50 miles north of Los Angeles. Scully’s father is baseball’s longest-tenured broadcaster.

Robert Preston, who lives near the crash site, said the helicopter didn’t sound right as it came over his house and slammed into a hillside near the pumping plant.

“Something tipped me off that something was wrong was it didn’t have a normal helicopter sound,” Preston said. “It had sort of a whining sound like an engine revving and unrevving.”

The crash, reported about 9 a.m. PST, caused several spot grass and brush fires, the largest of which was about one acre, said Kern County Fire Capt. Mike Cody.

“It appears the helicopter clipped some power lines, impacted with a small ridge about 200 feet tall and hit three quarters of the way up, then crashed down to the base of the ridge,” Cody said.

He said the fire burned the helicopter so badly its identification numbers were obliterated.

The helicopter was owned by J.L. Denio Excavating, Trucking and Pipeline of Bakersfield and was flying under contract for Four Corners Pipe Line.

The 1994 summer session will begin on Monday, June 20 (enrollment) and end on Wednesday, August 3 (final exams). Some courses — primarily in science, mathematics and languages — will begin and end before or after these dates. The summer session Bulletin will contain complete schedule information. The Bulletin will be available at the Summer Session Office (O'Steen Main Bldg) beginning on Friday, February 11. Notre Dame continuing students — undergraduate and graduate students in residence during the spring semester of 1994 who are eligible to return in the fall — must use DART (1) to register for summer courses and 2) to add or drop courses through Friday, June 24. The DART PIN (personal identification number) for summer will be sent to all continuing students in early March. Course call numbers, along with all other course information, will be published in the summer session Bulletin.

DART will be available for summer registration from March 14 to 31 and from May 2 to June 24 (film exams). Some courses — primarily in science, mathematics and languages — will begin and end before or after these dates. The summer session Bulletin will contain complete schedule information. The Bulletin will be available at the Summer Session Office (O'Steen Main Bldg) beginning on Friday, February 11.

Irish men's tennis favored to win spring season openers
By PHIL LANGER
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's tennis team enters the weekend as a favorite to win both of its matches against Miami (OH) and Northern Illinois.

Notre Dame will face Miami (OH) at 2:00 and Northern Illinois at 7:00 on Saturday in the Eck Pavilion.

Miami (OH), led by seniors David Fagen, David Zinn, John Baxter and Eric Seltenrich, finished last season as one of the top six or seven teams in the Midwest and consequently promises to keep a talented Irish team busy.

"I am genuinely concerned about Saturday," stated Notre Dame head coach Bob Bayliss, "I expect a challenge from Miami and Northern Illinois, led by Mike Mathers. We'll have to fight off Miami and Northern Illinois."

"I have enough left to face a challenge," commented Coach Bayliss, "I'm looking at this as an opportunity to overcome a feat that a lot of people don't think I'm capable of doing."

"I'm not saying I'm walking into this to be Reggie Jackson or Barry Bonds," Jackson said. "I'm looking at this as an opportunity to overcome a feat that a lot of people don't think I'm capable of doing."

"I don't think Michael is concerned about embarrassing himself and I don't think he's concerned about what someone thinks," Jackson said. "He has a treaty, a bond, a letter to answer, a promise to fulfill and he is going to do it whatever the consequences are."

"Whether I think he can hit a breaking ball or what he's going to look like to see a 95 mph Roger Clemens fast ball under his chin, he's going to get through that."

After the 7-run loss, Jackson said he had nothing left to prove and was tired of the constant spotlight and intrusions. Now his yearning to play baseball has made him the center of attention — and in some instances ridicule — again.

"I'm not saying I'm walking into this to be Reggie Jackson or Barry Bonds," Jackson said. "I'm looking at this as an opportunity to overcome a feat that a lot of people don't think I'm capable of doing."

"I don't think he's trying to be a novelty act and he would "do other things or take it elsewhere" if he thought he was interfering.

REMAINING MEN'S TENNIS SCHEDULE

| Jan. 22 | MIAMI (OHIO) | Jan. 29 | NORTHWESTERN |
| Feb. 3 | at Miami (OHIO) | Feb. 10 | vs. Ball State |
| Feb. 14 | at Miami (OHIO) | Feb. 17 | vs. Appalachian State |
| Mar. 7 | at Towson | Mar. 14 | vs. Oral Roberts |
| Mar. 19 | vs. UConn | Mar. 26 | vs. Northern Illinois |
| Apr. 2 | at West Virginia | Apr. 9 | at Rutgers |
| Apr. 16 | vs. Miami (FL) | Apr. 13 | vs. Minnesota |
| Apr. 23 | at Indiana | Apr. 19 | at Michigan |
| Apr. 30 | at Louisville | Apr. 16-17 | at Michigan State |
| May 7 | at Northwestern | May 13-14 | at Indiana State |
| May 17-20 | at West Virginia State | May 25 | vs. Illinois State |
| May 28 | at Northern Illinois | May 30 | at Northern Illinois |

The Irish will unfortunately have to fight off Miami and Northern Illinois without team mates senior Alan Lopez and freshman Mike Mathers.

Alan Lopez is currently in warm Central America representing the El Salvador Davis Cup team. Mike Mathers, on the other hand, is sidelined by a strained nerve in his neck.

Jordan admits he's not ready for majors
By RICK GANO
Associated Press

CHICAGO

Michael Jordan, acknowledging that his improbable attempt to join the Chicago White Sox is viewed "as off the wall," said Thursday his skills are improving but not yet ready for the major leagues.

"I'm trying. I'm not good enough right now but I still got a couple of more days," Jordan said at a news conference where he and Hall of Famer Reggie Jackson were promoting a line of baseball cards.

"A lot of people may think this is off the wall and maybe it is, but I'm doing something I choose to do. That is following one of the dreams I had when I was a kid."

The White Sox said earlier they will determine in a couple of weeks whether to invite Jordan to spring training. He's been working on his hitting and fielding five days a week at an indoor facility, and manager Gene Lamont watched earlier this week.

If the White Sox thought he showed enough promise, Jordan said he would be willing to go to the minors for seasoning and work. Jordan, who hasn't played baseball since high school, reiterated that he and his father always wanted him to play professional baseball.

"My father and I talked about it two years ago," he said. "He thought I was still young enough to give it a try. You never know. He always wanted me to play professional baseball. He always thought I would. In retrospect I did, too."

"But my basketball skills excelled and I never pursued it in college even though I had the opportunity to play baseball in college."

Jordan's father was murdered last summer and a couple of months later Michael announced his retirement from the Chicago Bulls after leading them to three straight NBA titles.

Jackson said the odds were against Jordan playing major league baseball. He added it's the effort and the memory of his father's wishes that are making the venture worthwhile.

"He always wanted me to play baseball since high school, reiterated that he and his father always wanted him to play professional baseball."

"Whether I think he can hit a breaking ball or what he's going to look like to see a 95 mph Roger Clemens fast ball under his chin, he's going to get through that."

After the 7-run loss, Jackson said he had nothing left to prove and was tired of the constant spotlight and intrusions. Now his yearning to play baseball has made him the center of attention — and in some instances ridicule — again.

"I'm not saying I'm walking into this to be Reggie Jackson or Barry Bonds," Jackson said. "I'm looking at this as an opportunity to overcome a feat that a lot of people don't think I'm capable of doing."

"He said he's not trying to be a novelty act and he would "do other things or take it elsewhere" if he thought he was interfering.

Irish face key CCHA matchups

The Notre Dame hockey team resumes play in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association with two road games this weekend in Ohio at Kent State on Friday, and at Ohio State on Saturday.

The Irish, (8-14-2; 6-10-2 in CCHA) in 7th place in the CCHA, are coming off a weekend in which they upset 20th ranked Bowling Green 2-1 and then fell to number one ranked Michigan 6-1.

"We played five really good defensive periods of hockey," said Notre Dame coach Rick Schafer. "We're looking forward to winning two games this weekend."

To increase the Irish's incentive for this weekend, a win would give Schafer 100 in his six plus seasons at Notre Dame. Kent comes into Friday's contest with a 5-10-1 in the CCHA and in 9th place in the conference. They defeated the Irish on the road in two close games January 2 and 3. Junior Dean Ward to winning two games this weekend."

Schafer. "We're looking for..." "We're both newcomers to the league," commented Schafer. "We don't have much experience in Ohio at Kent State on Saturday."

Sophomores Matt Bliek, Jeremy Coe bolster the defense in front of the Irish's goaltender. Speaking of goalies, sophomore Wade Salzman had the best performance of his career last Friday against Bowling Green, but lost the next night against Michigan. Senior Greg Louder will get the starting nod on Friday, while Saturday's goalie is undecided.

"Our goalies have all had their shining moments," commented Schafer. "But they've had their bad ones too."

Notre Dame's offensive production comes from sophomores Jaime Ling (10G, 17A) and senior forward Ron Brown.

"We need every single one of our players to play well," continued Schafer. "We don't have a dominant player that can carry us if we don't play well."

These games carry important CCHA playoff implications for the Irish. A sixth place finish in the conference means home ice advantage in the playoffs.

"We need two wins so we can try and gain home ice advantage, and then we'll go from there," concluded Osiecki.

Hello, Mr. Starr

What's not to like?

Hello,

Mr. Starr

What's not to like?

To: Mr. Starr

From: Prepp Starr

Prepp Starr, the most coveted high school basketball player in the nation.

He finds the phone beneath a clutter of drool-stained recruiting letters. The call is from Notre Dame, trying to lure the superstar to South Bend.

"Mr. Starr, it's time for you to make an important decision about your future.

"Where you decide to continue your education and your basketball career will chart the course for the rest of your life.

"What's that? You want to know what possible reason you would have for coming to Notre Dame.

"Most of our recruits have that reaction. That's why we want to take this opportunity to point out the positive side of the Notre Dame basketball experience.

"Number one, our season is usually over before spring break. Most schools that covet your services can't make that claim because they will probably be involved in post-season play.

"Oh, you want the challenge of playing in the NCAA Tournament?

"Well, with your talent you could be the person to return the Notre Dame basketball team to the promised land.

"That is, if you can talk three or four of your friends from the Nike Camp into coming here also.

"Cold weather? That's not a problem because we don't spend much of the winter in South Bend.

"Instead, we play in warm places like California or North Carolina. This year, we even went to Hawaii.

"Sure, we play home games once in a while, but nobody seems to notice.

Analysis leads to frustration not solution. If there was a solution, you can bet they would have tried it by now. But there certainly is frustration.

The Notre Dame men's basketball team limps to the halfway point of the season mired in the same old problems. Turnovers. Poor shooting. Inconsistency.

"I don't have the answer," Irish coach John MacLeod said.

It's not for a lack of looking. MacLeod has tried different lineups, different defenses and different offenses. Only the result has stayed the same.

The 5-9 midseason mark could have been at least .500 with a few breaks. Losses to Duquesne and St. Bonaventure numbed the excitement of last week's upset of No. 25 Missouri.

Hope whisked away with the winter wind.

"The Missouri game was not a fluke, we had a solid effort throughout," MacLeod said. "But the only way we'll be a good team is if we get a full blown effort every game."

It was two months ago that the Irish—swelled with preseason (and premature) belief—made public its goal of making the NCAA Tournament.

That goal is proving to be as elusive as a field goal.

"We still have scoring droughts where we don't score for four or five minutes and then we'll have a stretch when we're really productive."

"A conference? We play in what you could call 'America's Conference.'

"Most people call us an 'independent,' but actually we're quite dependent. Dependent on other teams to decide when and where they want to play us. Otherwise we wouldn't have much of a schedule.

"Television? Well, let's just say you won't have to worry about the bright lights getting in your eyes.

"We signed a deal with NBC to televise a few of our home games every year, but mostly we're on SportsChannel. Their lights aren't quite as bright.

"All of our games are on the radio."

"Need I even mention Notre Dame's academic reputation? I'm sure you've heard us talk about it many times over."
