Foreign policy and economic security were the focus of a “Listening to America” public policy meeting chaired by U.S. Senator Richard Lugar (Ind.) at Indiana Farm Bureau's Women's Committee, stressed the importance of agriculture in Indiana as the largest industry in the state, and the amount agricultural products exported each year. A supporter of NAFTA, she told how the free trade laws benefited Indiana's agriculture industry.

Peter Fischer, director of sales and marketing, Wood-Mizer Products, Inc., Indiana, stressed how existing trade laws pose barriers to small companies who wish to expand into international markets by adding to the “non-value added” costs such as duties and tariffs. After introduction, the panel was then opened to a variety of questions from the public on the status of the United States’ economic security and foreign policy.

Citizens were especially concerned about the United States' involvement in the world’s current conflicts. “We can afford to be involved in the world in a targeted way,” said Pickett. We can have domestic and international interests, he said, “Why do we have to have either or?”

Korea was listed as one of the most important areas for U.S. intervention. "Today North Korea walked out of talks concerning routine inspections of nuclear plants," Lugar said. He said that new economic penalties and sanctions for non-compliance, for which the North Korea has already threatened violence.

"Americans should realize that we could be involved in a second Korean War," Lugar said.

Lugar eased some fear on the Bosnian situation, saying he had just witnessed the signing of a preliminary treaty between Bosnian Muslims and Croats at the White House. "Serbia may have decided the situation is as good as its going to get," Lugar said.

He also reminded those present of the U.N.'s resolve to uphold any reasonable settlement. Equal concern was expressed about trade and economic security, although surprisingly, through a show of hands, most of those present seemed to be in favor of free trade.

Police also confiscated 57 kegs of beer and 12 taps from the site, Feirrell said. Notre Dame senior Darren Wallace, 22, of 424 N. Francin St., was charged with selling alcohol without a permit. The charge is a Class A misdemeanor that carries a maximum $10,000 fine and 1 year prison sentence. Wallace was freed on $100 bond with a Court appearance set for March 31.

Four Notre Dame students were arrested on charges of public intoxication and disorderly conduct. They are: junior Dennis Cancio, 21, of Grace Hall, senior Greg Larson, 22, of Fisher Hall, junior John Garmen, 21, of Morrissey Hall and Graduate student Jonathan North of 424 N. Frances St.

Notre Dame junior Christopher Decker, 21, of 46556 Irish Way, was charged with public intoxication, senior.

Ah, spring! That time of year when birds chirp, flowers blossom, and young love is fresh in the air; not yet the time to abandon them, but certainly not of lethargy in his heart or hers either. Granted we live in South Bend and all these visions of loneliness are simply visions, but maybe on this second day of spring we can just pretend — especially when every clothing catalogue shows tan blouses strewn in purple lines and flower prints running down the beach.

First stop in our imaginative journey: opening day at Wrigley Field. Can there be anything more relaxing than sitting in the out seats and watching the freshly cut grass, getting into the mood a day at Wrigley Field. Can there be anything better? Granted we live in spring where, be it Wrigley Field or our own Frank Eck Stadium. Just like the first football Saturday at Notre Dame, spring has its own charisma and character that just cannot be replaced. It’s that fresh feeling of hope that can even the most cynical of personalities that a twenty page paper due on Tuesday isn’t the end of the world nor is the national debt or an overloaded check.

Speaking of nature’s reminder that a rebirth of spirit is possible. It’s when we can take our karma to the laundromat just by walking in and out of the door. Sifting through the sheets and watching a bird gather materials to make its nest.

Of course this rejuvenation of spirit could come at any time of the year, but spring just feels different. It has that fresh feeling of hope that can even the most cynical of personalities that a twenty page paper due on Tuesday isn’t the end of the world nor is the national debt or an overloaded check.

Speaking of nature’s reminder that a rebirth of spirit is possible. It’s when we can take our karma to the laundromat just by walking in and out of the door. Sifting through the sheets and watching a bird gather materials to make its nest.

In celebration of the sesqui-centennial year, an art exhibit will be shot on Saint Mary's grounds, with the collaboration of students, faculty and administration, standing in the formation of the number 150.

"It didn't take too long to get this idea off the ground, and it sounds like a lot of fun," said Tricia Wallace, president of the Resident Hall Association (RHA).

The picture is sponsored by the RHA and the idea was brought up in a committee by two freshmen students, Julie Hackett and Jayshree Janyee. The photo shoot will be taken on Tuesday at 4:10, and anyone who is planning to participate should be at the LeMans courtyard at 3:45 p.m.

There are flyers posted with information around Saint Mary's campus.

Worthy discusses U.S. justice system

By W. HUDSON GILES
Staff Writer

Despite its flaws, the American justice system can work fairly, according to Detroit prosecutor Kym Worthy, who helped bring several white police officers to trial in a beating of an African American motorist.

The criminal justice system is something I believe in," she said. "I've worked there for ten years and I really believe it works."

Worthy spoke as part of the Black Law Students Association's (BLSA) 21st Annual Alumni Reunion this past weekend.

A Detroit motorist, Malice Green was driving his car to the store on Nov. 5, 1992, accompanied by a friend when he was stopped by undercover policemen. The officers referred to as "Starsky and Hutch" by local residents, had reason to believe the car was stolen due to a prior report that described a car very similar to Green's.

After verbal exchanges between the officers and Green, they instructed him to open his hand, believing him to be in possession of a track. Green then refused, at which point the interrogating officer began to beat him over the head with his police-issued flashlight.

At one time, they pulled Green from the car, now unconscious, and began kicking him in the head and body. Afterwards, EMS crews were summoned and transported Green to a local hospital where he was declared dead due to 14 blows to the head.

Originally, seven Detroit officers were charged with the murder of Malice Green, but only three went to trial. Worthy was one of five prosecutors assigned to the case, of which she was one of the two black attorneys, and the only woman involved.

"I have had many problems in my career with racism where the system discriminated against me because of my race, meaning black problems," Worthy said. "I have had many, many problems with sexism, however. Women litigates are still an anomaly."

Worthy stated that because she was an agent of the criminal justice system, that it was difficult to prosecute co-workers, meaning the police officers. She said that the issue was not so much race, although that was a large factor, but rather "accountability for the death of another citizen."

Despite the immense public outcry, Worthy did not waver in her determination to achieve justice.

"When you look at this case, there is a difference between a police officer making a split-second decision in dealing with somebody who has a gun or who might be a anyone who can use a firearm for somebody for a period of time causing their death," she said.

The trial began on June 2, 1993 only 4 months after the Rodney King acquittal and was handed down. Worthy noted that extreme care was required to deal with the issues of this case."We had a very volatile community and a very volatile nation, and we wanted to make sure that we handled this case with excessive caution," she said.

Worthy said that the issue was created difficult in that they were distrustworthy and that by talking to the media during the trial was unethical.

Two of the three officers were found guilty of second degree murder and the third was acquitted.

Worthy said that her success was due to the witnesses and the fact that the issues and life experience helped to understand the facts.

A nationwide grassroots effort has been established to obtain the opinion of governmental policy issues through a series of open forums on a variety of subjects.

The National Policy Forum: A Regional Council for Every Day lives is a new program which seeks to find out how average Americans feel about policy issues and to bring those opinions to government leaders.

"Instead of focusing on what a few national 'experts' have to say, we want to listen to the ideas of average Americans who deal directly with our nation’s key challenges in their everyday lives," said National Policy Forum Chairman Haley Barbour in a recent press release.

Matthew Hagenow, 22, of 424 N. Frances Street, was charged with public intoxication, resist­ ing law enforcement, and minor in possession of alcohol.

Policeman in Lyons Hall, was charged with public intoxication and minor in possession of alcohol.

Each student was released on $100 bond and will appear in Court March 31. Resisting law enforcement, disorderly conduct and public intoxication are classified as Class A misdemeanors carrying a maximum punishment of a $100 fine and one year prison sentence, said Feirrell.

Six ND students were cited as minors in possession of alcohol.

They are: junior Margaret Garzelloi, 20, of Lyons Hall; sophomore Kit Hoffman, 20, of Zahm Hall; junior Sarah Klinges, 20, of Walsh Hall; freshman Mark Loring, 19, of Fisher Hall; junior John McGuire, 20, of St. Edward’s Hall, and sophomore Charles Schaffler, 20, of Alumni Hall.

Five Saint Mary’s students were also cited for the offense. They are: Christine Camargo, 19, of McCandless Hall; Tricia Fomer, 19, also of McCandless Hall; Maxwell Murphy, 20, of 54633 Irish Way; Gina Olivieri, 19, of LeMars Hall; and Jodie Stein, 20, of Holy Cross Hall.

Feirrell said that police were tipped off about the party weeks ago and that the five agencies had been constructing a plan to approach it. The forty officers involved in the Stop Underage Drinking and Sales (S.U.D.S.) raid were from the Indiana State police, Excise police, Mishawaka Police, Saint Joseph County Police and Notre Dame Police.

The party was to begin at 9:30 a.m. and go until around 2 a.m., said Feirrell. Students had been sold cups for $10 each and could tap beer from kegs in each of the 30 apartments, he said.

"Police had been told that it was a private party, but when officers entered apartments they were served alcohol without question," said Feirrell.

Police began the raid around 2 p.m. because "things started to get out of hand as people were running in the street and causing problems," he said.

Feirrell said that dogs were used in the raid in order to control the crowd of over 1,500 students.

After this series of meetings, the Policy Councils will report their findings to the Forum’s Coordinating Council, which is composed of elected officials, former office-holders, civic, community and business leaders, and other prominent Americans.

The Coordinating Council will draw conclusions from the information and decide whether or not to recommend government actions.

In July of 1994, the Forum plans to have a report prepared detailing the information discovered by the individual Policy Councils and describing ideas and plans that have worked.

The National Policy Forum meetings are free and open to the public, and all are invited and encouraged to attend and to share any ideas and questions.

world market. "If we’re not looking at the world market, coordinating policies is going to come and look at our market," he said.

The best way to avoid foreign entanglement is to get involved more in the world economy, said Michael Baroody, National Policy Forum President and Notre Dame graduate. "Commercial and economic ties are vital to change," he said. "They promote trust and personal relationships."

Concern about media influence on public opinion and, consequently, government action was expressed, although any significant impact of this relationship on government was denied by panel members.

"Those in government" have to have guiding principles," said Lugar. "You are not oblivious but you believe you are right. Otherwise you lack decisive leadership policies."

Pickert agreed, saying the media influence is overrated. "There was public pressure for intervention in Somalia, but not for Bosnia," he said. People are capable of making judgments, but leaders must continue if they believe they are right and are acting in their best interests, said.

The results of this and similar meetings will be published by the National Policy Forum in July of this year.

Serbian government resigns, future unsure

After Croatia declared independence in 1991, the Serb-led Yugoslav army occupied a third of the country and set up the so-called Serb Republic of Krahina.

At the time, ethnic Serbs accounted for 12 percent of Croatia’s 4.5 million inhabitants.

Slobodan Milosevic, the powerful leader of Serbia, bankrolled the Croatian Serb separatists.

But a recent rapprochement between Serbia and Croatia has given rise to fears that Milosevic might return Krajina to Croatia in exchange for territorial concessions in neighboring Bosnia, where Bosnian Serbs hold about 70 percent of the land.

Elections were held in Krajina in December and January, but the formation of the new government was delayed due to a split between Milosevic’s supporters and opponents.

In the meantime,ight support for Bosnia, said Lugar.

This Monday marks the beginning of the celebration of Women's History Month at Saint Mary's College. In recognition of the achievements of women, the college is hosting a series of lectures, discussions, and events reflecting the accomplishments they have made.

The first of the events begins Monday at 12:15 p.m. in the Stapleton Lounge at LeMans Hall. Drew University theologian Ada Maria Isasi Diaz will speak on the subject of "Women, Diversity and the Church."

The lecture will focus on the role of women in the religious community and the role that diversity plays in their involvement.

Saint Mary's Associate Dean of Faculty Patrick White is scheduled to speak on the role of minority women in the media. Titled "But I am here, Women of Color in Contemporary Film," the lecture will take place on Tuesday, March 22.

There will be a reception for author Denise Chavez on Tuesday at 5 p.m. in the O'Laughlin Auditorium Lobby. Chavez is the first Multicultural Scholar/Artist-in-Residence for the Saint Mary's community. "Women in the State of Grace" is billed as "An Afternoon of Poetry, Theatre and Fiction" and will take place on Thursday, March 24 at 4 p.m. in the Haggar Parlor.

Series examines Christian sexuality
By EDWARD IMBUS
News Writer

Sexuality encompasses far more than physical love, creating a complicated, complex dilemma for Christians today, such as the vast majority of Notre Dame students, according to University President Father Edward Malloy and Maura Ryan, professor of theology.

The presentation, entitled "Monk and Maura Speak: What Do They Know?" was the first in the annual Campus Ministry "Keeping the Faith" series of presentations. Sexuality and the Notre Dame student is the focus of this year's series.

Malloy began by questioning how a person could become an expert on sexuality. Though celebrities like Dr. Ruth and Hugh Hefner may offer their views on sexuality, he wondered whether or not sexuality was a concept varying between individuals through their "own personal window."

Sexuality is seen mainly in its anatomical and physiological aspects, such as physical intimacy or a person's attractions to others, he said. Most conversations about sexuality usually conform themselves to that.

"Maybe that isn't sufficient," he said. "Sexuality deals more with the person, not physical relations."

Many people have problems speaking with their families about sexuality, Malloy said. Father, they gain their knowledge through what they read or hear, through "trial and error or tutoring."

The subject of sexuality raises several other issues, he said. Fertility is one such issue, in turn making people think about STD's and contraception. Rape is another, raising sub-issues of "consent and the use of sexuality as a weapon to attack the dignity of another."

Christians believe that "Our creation as people is fundamentally good," Ryan said. Though society tends to devalue the body, people should remember a delighted God created us as sexual beings, she said.

Also, she noted that Jesus became flesh, both physical and spiritual, reflecting God's divine reality.

Humans are always in need of feeling, she said. Love makes us feel both exposed and cherished at the same time. However, people will deny their experience, deny its importance, or hold something back in relationships in order to protect themselves. She gave the examples of how students feel differently about people after "hooking up" with them, or the difficulty of being "only friends" after a relationship including sex.

"All is sacrament. Nothing is unimportant for the Kingdom," including sexuality. Our love of God is revealed through our love of our neighbor, she said.

Student discussion afterwards focused on several topics, such as the differences between the physical and emotional sides of sexuality and frustrations in finding the ideal relationship. Also discussed was how students could work with Catholic teaching and practice in reality, such as student's inability to buy condoms on campus to protect themselves against venereal disease.

The Keeping the Faith series will continue throughout this week. On March 23 a panel of rectors and students will explore the experiences of Notre Dame students, and on March 27 students can discuss their experiences with their peers.

LOS ANGELES
A strong aftershock to the deadly January earthquake rocked Southern California on Sunday, opening up new cracks in a recently repaired freeway and tossing boulders onto a road through Malibu Canyon.

No injuries were reported from the magnitude 5.3 quake. One car was apparently struck by a boulder falling onto Malibu Canyon Road in Malibu.

The quake also triggered rockslides in the Angeles National Forest.

The quake was centered one mile west-northwest of Panorama City in the San Fernando Valley, about six miles east of the epicenter of the magnitude-6.7 Northridge earthquake. It struck around 1:20 p.m. and lasted about 30 seconds.

Max Benavidez, a seismologist at the California Institute of Technology, said it was another in the thousands of aftershocks to the Jan. 17 earthquake, which caused 61 deaths and about $20 billion in damage.

New cracks were reported on at least two overpasses on state Highway 118, the Simi Valley Freeway, which was heavily damaged in the January quake.

The aftershock was centered near the freeway. It was felt widely in Los Angeles County as well as Orange, Riverside, Ventura and Santa Barbara counties.

The quake startled people attending a rehearsal for Monday's Academy Awards at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion downtown.

Moments after actor Elijah Wood practiced his introduction for the visual effects Oscar, the auditorium's chandeliers swayed, the seats rocked and huge pieces of scenery rattled over the stage.

"Everybody, stay in your seats!" Oscar director Jeff Margolies said over a public address system.

The rehearsal quickly resumed. There was no visible damage to the pavilion.

The U.S. Forest Service reported quake-triggered rockslides on Angeles Forest Highway in the Angeles National Forest.

A strip mall in suburban Van Noy was ablaze at 2:10 p.m., but it was unclear if that was earthquake-related.

Police were put on tactical alert, meaning the day shift was held over to assist the night watch. "All reports are good so far and there's no problem," said Officer Arthur Holmes, a department spokesman.

Randy Workman, whose Simi Valley home 35 miles north of Los Angeles was badly damaged by the January quake, said it escaped damage this time.

"It was pretty strong, but it was more the old fashioned rocking kind so it wasn't so bad," he said. "I just wish the damn things would stop."

U.S. to seek sanctions against North Korea

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON
The United States is preparing to seek U.N. trade sanctions against North Korea because of that country's recalcitrance on nuclear weapons inspections, Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Sunday.

But President Clinton said there was still "some hope" that North Korea would allow inspections of its nuclear sites and avoid international sanctions.

"There appear to be people within North Korea that want to proceed to normalize the relations of their country with the international community and people who don't. We'll just have to see what they do now — where we go from here," Clinton said upon arriving in Miami for a health care forum.

"To some extent, the ball is still clearly in their court. But we are proceeding to consider all our options," the president said.

Christopher predicted China would not block sanctions against North Korea despite its recent quarrel with the United States over human rights because it is in China's national interest that North Korea not become a nuclear power.

Christopher, speaking on CBS' "Face the Nation" also said the government would be talking to South Korea about basing Patriot missiles there, and revising large joint military exercises that were to have been postponed as a gesture of goodwill to North Korea.

He said there were no immediate plans to increase the 37,000 American troops in South Korea, but "we'll be looking at that situation day in and day out."

"We hear some fairly strong rhetoric coming out of North Korea, but we have to do what's in our interest. We have to protect our troops," Christopher said on CNN's "Late Edition." "We won't be unnecessarily provocative. We don't seek a confrontation. But we want to be ready for one."

Clinton was asked if the situation was in danger of escalating into a military conflict. "I'm not trying to ratchet up the tensions," the president told reporters. "I'm just trying to work through this in a very deliberate but very firm and disciplined way."

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., told NBC's "Meet the Press" that "we may also want to beef up our own forces there" in response to what he said was "probably the most serious thing on the radar screen now."

Majority Leader Dick Gephardt of Missouri, appearing on the same show, said, "We might ultimately send more troops to beef up the South Korean side."

The International Atomic Energy Agency was to meet Monday to announce findings on its recent nuclear inspection tour of North Korea, during which the Koreans barred its agents from looking at facilities suspected of housing a nuclear weapons program.

Imagination leads to progress

By PAT STONELAKE
News Writer

The Center for Continuing Education was the forum for a lecture on Friday by Father Ernan McMullin, John Cardinal O’Connor Professor of Philosophy at Notre Dame, entitled "Enlarging the Imagination". McMullin was recently selected as the 1993-94 Romanelli-Phi Beta Kappa Professor by the Phi Beta Kappa Society of America. A native of Donegal, Ireland and a prominent international figure in the philosophy of science. McMullin chaired Notre Dame’s philosophy department from 1965-72. He now directs the history and philosophy of science program and the Reilly Center for Science, Technology, and Human Values.

McMullin asserted that imagination has consistently enlarged its role in the world of science since the times of the Greek philosophers and the Scientific Revolution. He pointed out that Francis Bacon assigned learning to three categories: Memory, Reason, and Imagination. Bacon limited the imagination to the realm of "poetry", which he felt had no relevance in the scientific world. As time went on, the value of a sharp and constructive imagination became clear.

According to McMullin, the Scientific Revolution "required a form of inventiveness that could best be described as imagination". In describing the contribution of imagination, McMullin divided it into three categories of development. The "First Imagination" is an effort to deal with distances in space, scale, and time. According to McMullin, Newton’s theories and the set rules which described the behavior of the physical world were "not answers but questions". This first type of imagination is a reaction to "a limit on the evidence-gathering abilities of the observer".

The "Second Imagination" comes into play when scientists are forced to explain events which they cannot understand in terms of substances and events which they cannot fathom. The solution of this second imagination is to devise new substances or events to explain the behavior being witnessed.

As science progresses into the age of quantum mechanics and theoretical duality like the dual particle/wave nature of radiation need to be resolved by still another division of the imagination. The key to this "Third Imagination" lies in ontology.

McMullin will continue with the problem of imagination in the two remaining lectures in the series, the second of which will be held today in room 131 of the DeBartolo Quadrangle.

Gore visits village during tour of Bolivia

By PETER McFARREN
Associated Press

HUATAJATA, Bolivia

Vice President Al Gore on Sunday visited his Bolivian counterpart's hometown, an Aymara Indian village on Lake Titicaca, more than two miles above sea level.

Dancers wearing brightly colored feather headdresses performed ancient Aymara Indian dances in a ceremony to welcome Gore and his wife, Tipper.

The couple didn't appear to suffer an ill-effects from the 12,500-foot altitude.

They attended a Baptist Church service and toured the local school where Bolivian Vice President Victor Hugo Cardenas, an Aymara Indian intellectual and educator, was taught by Baptists.

Speaking to several thousand Aymara Indian farmers, Gore praised Cardenas for his ability to rise from his humble origins to the vice presidency. He spoke in English, and his comments were translated into Aymara and Spanish.

Youth crime linked to economy

By W. HUDSON GILES
News Writer

The rising crime rate among youths is an immense cost to the economy as well as to the African American community, said Yvonne Scruggs-Leftwich, director of the Urban Policy Institute at the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, at a lecture Saturday night.

Scruggs-Leftwich spoke as part of the twenty-first annual alumni reunion of the Black Law Students Association (BLSA) this weekend.

"It is generally agreed and most recently documented in various journalistic profiles that rampant crime is costing America $425 billion dollars a year," she said.

She went on to say that it costs $9.75 billion to incarcerate America's convicts at $30,000 per person annually.

"There is a strong linkage between juvenile violence and the changing patterns of job availability, school enrollment, parental accountability, and neighborhood stability," she said, citing statistics.

122,000 juveniles were charged with violent crimes in 1993 including assault, rape and murder.

Of those juveniles, 1,500 were between the age of nine and 18 years old. Twenty-five percent were between ten and twelve years old. Twenty-five percent were between ten and twelve years old. Twenty-five percent were between ten and twelve years old. Twenty-five percent were between ten and twelve years old.

Of all these youths, 49% were African American, according to Scruggs-Leftwich.

"Angry young men armed with automatic weapons have turned traditional centers of black sociability [such as] street corners, storefronts, stoops, and even the steps of churches, into dangerous and forbidding places," she said.

Scruggs-Leftwich said that not only the direct and opportunity costs were debilitating to the African American community, but the gang activity and loss of life were equally detrimental to the prosperity of African Americans nationwide.

"To many Americans, images of gang violence while tragic, remain just—and Images," she said, declaring that action must be taken soon.

Scruggs-Leftwich was formerly the Deputy Mayor of Philadelphia and produced the movie "Us Against the那儿" as an aide to President Jimmy Carter.

Many Americans believe that thinner is better.

People with eating disorders believe it so deeply that their weight and dieting success become the measure of their self-esteem.

Thinking that eating is the cause and result of many of their problems, they become trapped in a vicious cycle of repeated, ritualistic, and rigid behavior focused on food.

How To Help a Friend With an Eating Concern

African economies draw new attention

The ANC and National Party want to forge a southern Africa trading bloc capable of competing with those in Europe, the Far East and America.

"If we do not produce the success story here, I can only see darkness. The whole region will just go one pooper and drift into chaos."

After decades of isolation for which the United Nations, called crimes against humanity, South Africa finally has the opportunity to realize its potential.

A powerful military, advanced technology, the best infrastructure in Africa, and the strongest economy in the region give it unique advantages within Africa.

Internationally, South Africa needs to develop a reputation as a permanent member of an expanded Security Council. The ANC, special representative of Lakhdar Brahimi said recently.

Under white rule, South Africa could not fully exploit its resources. It became a flyb Formula, held back by the years when neighboring states at each other and the isolation caused by sanctions against its racial policies.

Even as the world's leading producer of gold and platinum, with the best infrastructure in Africa, it could not achieve economic growth in the past five years.

The ANC and National Party are working to revive the economy, forge links to their neighbours, and attempt to keep France's conservative leaders as the party's foreign policy official. "Our future, as well as the region's future, is very much dependent on our future," he told the American press.

"The left has again found its dynamism," he said. "There is an upswing in support for the ANC, which has caused trouble for the apartheid guerillas in neighboring countries.

"It is as if the whole world wishes Africa to produce a successful story," said Rooolf "Pik" Botha, foreign minister in the white-minority government for nearly 17 years. "If we do not produce the success story here, I can only see darkness. The whole region will just go one pooper and drift into chaos."

When you think of music scenes, places like Chapel Hill, Olympia, Athens, and Washington D.C. come more readily to mind than Notre Dame. Does that mean that Notre Dame students in search of old records should pack their bags and head for the Tatebeast, the nation's capital?

"Being the music director at WVFI, I hear a lot of major and independent label music and the stuff that bands here, like Jody, Comeuppance, Emily and Spotted Spook, is as good if not better than a large portion of it. It is just that many students can't hear all the things that are different, like much of the current original music on campus, and therefore do not support those bands that play original music."

He does think, however, that the interest and acceptance level for the original music bands is on the rise. "With the interest in original music on campus sparked a few years ago by bands like Brian Coln & Vince and Chiels coupled with the fact that the current 'alternative' music it seems that more people are willing to listen to the music that is going on here."

Brian Muller, formerly of Brian, Coln & Vince and currently in Krype Street, has a very interesting take on the Notre Dame music scene. He also echoes the sentiment that there are quality bands at Notre Dame. He feels that the bands, Emily, Victoria's Real Secret, and July are as good as any that he experienced in the Boston music scene during his semester at Boston U.

He is of a different mind, however, on the supposed lack of musical diversity on the Notre Dame campus music. "It is often said that Domers just like cover bands, but if a band plays original music and is really excited about what they are doing then eventually people will like them and listen to them."

"The lack of a really strong music scene extends beyond the Notre Dame music scene. There are a lot of bars on that little piece of land. It is hard for bands to play original music. They can't get any exposure because of the lack of places bands are supposed to perform."

"With most of the already small number of bars in South Bend leaching towards the safer and more monetarily lucrative cover bands, the only places for bands to play original music to get out there and play like they need to is in order to progress.无不加更多 places more places like Dalloway's and the Loft where bands can play."

He also agrees with Brian Muller that the stratification of the scene fluctuates with the quality of the current bands. "On a good day, the scene is great. The mantle left by Chiels and Brian, Coln & Vince has been picked up by Emily and July with just as much gusto and talent. But next year we might all lose the last of the Chiels and then it will be up to bands like True North and the BeatClaques to fill the void, whether they will be able to or not remains to be seen."
Catechisms are for kids. Right? Why should any university student want to learn his religion from a catechism? Permission to dissent against a religion. In the February 28th Observer, this is the first time the Catechism was mentioned. In the March 14th Observer, this is the second time the Catechism was mentioned. In the March 28th Observer, this is the third time the Catechism was mentioned.

This is the first official catechism of the Catholic Church since the catechism of the Council of Trent was promulgated in 1566. The English translation of the new Catechism will be published in the spring of this year.

Veritatis and the Catechism complement each other. “Both documents,” said Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, in presenting Veritatis, “are... distinct and each... has its proper task whereby one supports the other.

The Catechism does not engage in argument, it testifies. It does not have any statements of faith positively, the faith which has its own inner reasonableness. The Encyclical also bears witness, but it has, at the same time, a dimension of argument. It takes up questions and shows in discursive argument what the way of faith is and how it comes to be that there even is a way for man.”

Veritatis and the Catechism have an overlapping role as ticket of liberation for students at Catholic and other universities who seek a coherent understanding of what the Catholic Church is all about.

For more than three decades of law school teaching, I have taught graduates of Catholic colleges, including more from Notre Dame than from anywhere else. In my opinion, students in those institutions, through no fault of their own, tend to be shorn of the treatment by those colleges of the teachings of the Catholic Church. In general, an orthodoxy of dissent prevails. What the students learn about the Church is often filtered through the lens of a professor who has a distorted idea of the nature of the Church and its teachings. The curricula tend to offer the student no predictable opportunity to study the rich Catholic tradition in its undistorted totality.

Instead, the prevailing political correctness is that the Church ought to be a democracy and that it is rigid and oppressive especially in its treatment of women and its teachings on sex. Unless they select exceptional courses or have unusual access to other sources, students in Catholic colleges frequently avoid a caricature of the Church and they emerge from college without a coherent decision as to whether or not to reject the teachings of the Church.

Now John Paul II has changed that all. In conjunction with Veritatis Splendor, the Catechism offers college students a key to knowledge—and to liberation. They no longer have to depend on professors to tell them what those professors think the Church teaches or ought to teach. Until now, the students had no single concise and authoritative source for understanding the Church teachings. Now, in Veritatis and the Catechism, students have a direct line, to measure their own understanding and that of their professors.

The Catechism is composed of four parts, or "pillars" of faith: 1) the baptismal profession of faith (or Creed); 2) the sacraments of the faith; 3) the life of faith (the Commandments); and 4) the prayer of the believer (the Our Father). (No. 13) The Catechism "is conceived as an organic presentation of the whole to the whole in its teaching. As such, it should be read as a structured whole. This catechism stresses the presentation of doctrine. Its aim, in fact, is to aid in deepening the knowledge of the faith. In this way it is meant to foster a growing maturity of the faith, a rooting of the faith in life, and its radiance through personal witness. (Nos. 18, 23)

The Catechism is countercultural. John Cardinal O'Connor, Archbishop of New York, long ago, in his final address to the St. John Paul II Latin American bishops, said: "There are still some people who will say, 'I accept Christ as my teacher but not the institutional Church. Don't give me all that nonsense about popes and bishops and what not.'" The Catechism reminds us that the apostles established the institution in accordance with the mandate of Christ to Peter: "You are Peter and on you I will build My Church." He said also that it must perdue until the end of time. Hence, there had to be appointed those who, after Christ had ascended into heaven and the apostles would have died, would still carry on to the end of time.

This Catechism, despite advance criticism of those who haven't yet seen it, is not a list of condemnations. Cardinal O'Connor who, after Christ had ascended into heaven and the apostles would have died, would still carry on to the end of time. The Catechism he offered to students, a chance to find out for themselves what the Church is and teaches, so that they can make an informed judgment for themselves. Some professors and trendy clerics and nuns will advise you, as students, that those documents were not intended to be read by mere people. They say, "Don't let them, the experts, tell you what the documents mean, or what they mean if the experts had their way."

But don't let them kid you. Take it as a summer project to read both Veritatis Splendor and the Catechism for yourself. Pray about what you have read. And make up your own mind as to where you stand.

Dear Editor:

I'm writing in regard to this week's basketball tournament game, which as most of you know, was a part of the NCAA Tournament. We appreciate the spirit of Notre Dame fans.

I was extremely disappointed to see very little support at the game last weekend. As the crowd it gave me the impression that the University of Minnesota had more fans than we had students in the crowd. Being a senior I've heard many a time about the spirit of Notre Dame, yet the student body did not demonstrate that spirit on Wednesday.

I wonder: does the so-called spirit of Notre Dame only exist in the football games and occasional men's basketball games (which often seem to be students wanting to see a national powerhouse and not our team).

Before this game, I really thought the spirit of Notre Dame existed beyond the football season, yet today I really doubt that notion. How many of you students had something so pressing that you could not take a couple hours off to support our team?

To conclude, I'd like to congratulate the women's basketball team. You are a group which Notre Dame can be proud of. Thank you for your hard work and effort through the season and good luck next year.

However, to the student body, shame on you! Those fellow students worked so hard to get to this point, and you showed little support. I hope next year, when the women make the journey once again, the visiting school will truly experience the spirit of Notre Dame as I believe existed.

Police raid: Obscenity of authority

Dear Editor:

The raid on Lafayette Square on St. Patrick's Day was an obscene abuse of authority. I am not writing to plea the innocence of the students that minors had alcohol, which was served without a license. The law was simply a means to an end, and the policy intervention I have no problem with that. But the events at Thursday afternoon illustrated how the system of law enforcement is currently functioning in South Bend, and it's not a pretty picture.

I was confused at first by what was happening. It started out as a few cops patrolling the area, and finished up as police from South Bend, Mishawaka, Public works trucks, and St. Joseph's County State Troopers, including the K-9 units of the South Bend force. I saw students pushed back by officers, and then restrained by three other officers as he tried to get the dog off of him. Many were arrested for no other reason than being in the wrong place at the wrong time. The police do not have their priorities right. Let's look at how the police and the students interact.

In the beginning of recent school years, thousands of dollars worth of valuable property that was stolen from Lafayette Square. A small number of offenders came by over the course of that week or two to stop the thefts. One afternoon out of the year, students let the hair down and threw a party. Since the block is surrounded by police cars and utility trucks from all surrounding areas, it's good to know that it is easier to pump the fence at Lafayette Square with a stereo under your arm than it is to jump it with beer on your breath. Face it, the cops around here do not like unorganized Dame brazi one bit. Apparently, the beer at Lafayette and Campus View is more of a problem than the gangs and drugs which flourish in this town. It's ridiculous, and it's not the way it should be. I have written to Mayor Joseph Kerman, asking why this is so. I encourage you students to do the same. Maybe we could wind up changing things around here for once. But still all that time comes, be careful about messing with the cops. It seems that they really don't care what happens to you anyway. By the way, you want to write to Mayor Kerman, his address is: Mayor Joseph Kerman/County City Bldg./South Bend, IN 46601. Drop him a line.

Lack of support for women's basketball

Where was the ND family at the NCAA's?

Dear Editor:

I'm writing to express our disappointment in the Notre Dame students.

We, the Student Body at Lafayette Square, hosted a basketball tournament. There were 2296 in attendance. Yet, not one Notre Dame student or athlete appeared to be from South Bend. The students that were there did a good job of cheering. However, a small but very vocal group of Minnesota fans did an excellent job of cheering on their team.

Students address Police Chief

The following is a copy of a letter from the University of Notre Dame's Student Government to the South Bend Chief of Police, Ron Marciniak, regarding the recent student misconduct on Lafayette Square.

Chief Ron Marciniak,

We are writing to you as elected representatives of Notre Dame students and faculty regarding the events that took place at Lafayette Square on March 17th. The recent series of events have been a major source of concern and frustration to Notre Dame students and the Notre Dame community.

Unfortunately, not all members of the Notre Dame community have been actively involved. Police dogs were used to intimidate the students, while needlessly risking injury to all those present. Most students, some intoxicated, were forced from the premises and ordered to return to their homes.

This rash action deprived them of access to safe transportation from Weekend web site. This action also caused many people to lose their sobriety. Students were verbally and physically harassed by the police, in some cases even arrest officers from the police department who were not involved.

We believe that the police officers who were present at Lafayette Square were charged with the responsibility of preventing and discouraging undergraduate drinking. However, we believe that their actions were in violation of the students' rights and caused significant harm to the community.

We urge the police department to take appropriate action to address the concerns of the community and to ensure that the students' rights are protected.

Sincerely,

Linda Riley
Student Body President-Elect

Children aging between ten and sixteen were given the opportunity to join their sophomore siblings at Notre Dame for a weekend full of activities, including a tour of Notre Dame Stadium and a dinner/dance featuring speakers Patty O’Hara, Vice President of Student Affairs, and Oscar McBride, Notre Dame football player. Underlying all of these events was the opportunity to develop a closer relationship with their older siblings and to get a peek at life at Notre Dame, or any university.

The Sils Weekend was organized by Sara Ford, a sophomore who also entertained a brother for the weekend. Ford felt that the goals of the weekend were to “provide fun activities and give sophomores a chance to give their siblings a taste of Notre Dame.” Events were specifically selected by Ford and her assistants to appeal to younger siblings aging between ten and sixteen. The events were designed to convey the message that being a sibling is to become closer to their older brothers and sisters in an enjoyable environment, without parents or other family members. Ford added that the sophomore year was the perfect time to hold such an activity because freshmen are still adjusting to university life, while many juniors are studying abroad.

On the Sils weekend, the dinner/dance was one of the favorites of both the sophomores and their siblings. Sophomore Chris Collins described the experience as a family reunion, “It made the siblings feel as if they really counted.” Collins also felt that O’Hara and McBride gave effective, entertaining speeches offering informative advice to the sophomores and their siblings.

While most of the sophomores enjoyed the dinner, many participants also enjoyed the tour of Notre Dame Stadium. The tour gave sophomores and their siblings a chance to see the locker room, run out of the tunnel, step onto the field and toss a football around, and walk around the press box. The tour had special meaning for the large number of Irish football fans among the siblings, many of whom had never seen the field on which their favorite team played, according to Collins.

Although most of the sophomores were joined by just one sibling, some had several siblings joining them. Danielle Fressch’s three siblings, aged eight, twelve and fifteen, traveled to Notre Dame for the weekend. Fressch described the weekend as, “Chaotic but interesting.”

Due to the variety of age groups there evolved different perspectives of Notre Dame, the oldest siblings was actively seeking out the university as a place she would like to attend, while the younger siblings were primarily curious to see where their sister lived, far from most of the year. Fressch also noted an unusual fringe benefit of having three siblings attend the weekend, “It gives my parents a weekend off to go to Ireland.”

While the activities presented during the weekend gave the siblings a strong sense of what daily life at Notre Dame is like, Ford stressed that this was not a recruiting weekend. Instead, the weekend was designed to strengthen the bond between the sophomores and their siblings while providing insight into what college life is all about.

According to Collins, Sophomore Sils weekend was successful because it presented her brother with an opportunity to make new friends, and the weekend allowed his siblings to, “know what my life is like at Notre Dame.”

Association shares African culture

By ANDREW HORN

The African Students Association shares African culture, including an exchange of proverbs told at home by the elders of individual tribes.

A highlight event of the Notre Dame African Students Association is the annual "Kouassa-Kouassa," which translates to "that body, that dance." It is a dinner and dance party, held this year in September at Wilson Commons, featuring foods from all over the continent. This year’s Kouassa-Kouassa attracted about 200 people from the entire South Bend area.

Events such as Kouassa-Kouassa are open to the public and have attracted people from many colleges and universities in the area.

Zounlome and Muzigo both feel that the event is successful because it helps people get involved in the association’s activities.

"We feel we are global citizens," says Muzigo, "and it doesn’t make sense to isolate ourselves from the [larger] community."

All are welcome in the Notre Dame African Students Association, and Kouassa-Kouassa can get involved by attending the general meetings, signing up on Activities Night, and registering to members after events such as Kouassa-Kouassa and the film showings.

There are 16 teams left in the NCAA tournament and 15 games to play before a national champion is crowned.

The regional semifinals start Thursday night and by late Sunday afternoon there will be only four teams left. No wonder those four days are considered by many as the best of the college basketball season.

EAST

When: Friday and Sunday

Where: Miami

Who: Fourth-seeded Indiana vs. sixth-seeded Boston College and second-seeded Connecticut vs. third-seeded Florida

What: The Indiana-Boston College game is the ultimate blue-collar matchup, teams whose highlight films would feature screens and defensive switches. Boston College comes in off the upset of 15th-seeded North Carolina so there won't be a repeat national champion. Indiana has continued winning despite being physically run down and its depth will be tested with the loss of freshman guard Sherron Wilkerson to a broken leg.

Connecticut is waiting for star forward Donny Marshall to return this week, Monday at the latest, a player whose style of work that all season. Miami's way off from Gainesville, but the Gators are by far the closest thing to a home team in this region.

SOUTHEAST

When: Thursday and Saturday

Where: Knoxville, Tenn.

Who: Top-seeded Purdue vs. fourth-seeded Kansas and sixth-seeded Marquette vs. second-seeded Duke

What: There aren't many people left who don't know Purdue's Glenn Robinson, the nation's leading scorer, and the only unanimous All-America selection. The Boilermakers will face a Kansas team that played excellent defense in advancing just as it did last year in getting to the Final Four.

Duke was knocked out in the second round last year, ending a run of five straight Final Four and back-to-back-to-back national championships. Marquette kept Kentucky from returning to the Final Four and advanced to the regional semifinals for the first time since 1979. It shouldn't be a match in the middle with Duke's Cherokee Parks against Jim McMillan of the Warriors.

Midwest

When: Friday and Sunday

Where: Dallas

Who: Top-seeded Arkansas vs. 12th-seeded Tulsa and 10th-seeded Maryland vs. third-seeded Michigan

What: The region's ups and downs could be quite familiar for Tulsa, the fifth straight 12 seed to advance to the regional semifinals and all have been knocked out in that round by a top-seeded team. Arkansas, the team with the country's No. 1 fan in Washington, beat the Golden Hurricane earlier in the season. In the overtime game was a matchup of coaches, Richard Brooks' current school and the one he gave his first Division I coaching job. Tulsa was impressive in beating UCLA and Coach Hoya State, and Gary Callaway is no longer an unknown.

Michigan is looking to get its third straight national championship game and it will play a team almost as young as the Wolverines were the last two times when the Fab Five advanced as freshmen. Sophomore Maryland starts two freshmen and three sophomores and will be impressive in both tournament victories.

WEST

When: Thursday and Saturday

Where: Los Angeles

Who: Top-seeded Missouri vs. fourth-seeded Syracuse and second-seeded Arizona vs. third-seeded Louisville.

What: The most maligned of the regions when the draw was announced is the one only to advance its top four seeds. The Midwest-Missouri matchup is one of maligned coaches, Norm Stewart and Jim Boheim, who have been bickered over a lack of success in the tournament.

Gretzky catches Gordie

By DENNIS GEORGATOS
Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif.

The burden of the chase is off Wayne Gretzky at last. Gretzky scored twice Sunday to match Gordie Howe's NHL mark of 801 career goals, then turned the tension that surrounded his pursuit of one of hockey's greatest records into a sigh of celebration.

"It's a tremendous relief for me, believe me," said Gretzky, whose second goal, with 49 seconds left in regulation lifted the Los Angeles Kings to a 6-6 tie with the San Jose Sharks.

"I feel a lot more at ease now and I'll feel more so after I get 802. I hope it's a relief to the team, too. Something like this is exciting and fun, but it can be wearing, too. After I get the record, everyone can go on with their lives." Gretzky had gone four games without a goal after reaching 798 and had just one goal in his previous seven games as he headed into Sunday's game with 799. But he broke loose for a pair of goals to catch Howe while playing one of the Kings' chief rivals for a playoff berth.

"It was a tough situation with the excitement, with everything that's going on, and with the 'Gretzky-watch;' the excitement is tripled," Kings coach Barry Melrose said. "I'd love to get the 'Gretzky-watch' over with and I'm sure Wayne would, too. Then we could only worry about the playoffs."

Though the last two weeks were frustrating at times, Gretzky still demonstrated unparalleled speed in matched Howe, his childhood idol. It took the 33-year-old Gretzky just 15 seasons to equal what Howe did in 26 years.

He could have the record for himself as soon as Wednesday, when the Kings play host to Vancouver or, failing that, perhaps against his former Edmonton Oilers team on Friday.

The first half for the Cowboys (24-10), had 5-footer go in and out with 41 seconds left, then Dawkins hit his 3-pointer with three seconds left on the shot clock.

Reeves scored 32 for Oklahoma State, which had defeated Tulsa 73-61 earlier this season. The Hurricane was without Sha Seals in that game, and the Cowboys played this one with out Fred Burley, who was suspended for breaking unspecified team rules. Seals had 13 for Tulsa, including a 3-pointer that tied the game at 66 and a follow shot over Reeves before time expired on them.

It was the fifth straight year that a 12th seed advanced into the Sweet 16.

Dawkins seemed to have hurt Tulsa's chances by missing the front end of a one-and-one with 59 seconds left. But Gary Collier, who led the Golden Hurricane with 25 points, grabbed the miss and put it back in for a 79-78 lead.

Reeves, so dominant in the back in for a 79-78 lead. The Hurricane rallied from a 50-39 halftime deficit that had grown to 54-42 on Reeves' turnaround jump shot with 17:23.

Collier hit a 3-pointer, and Williams hit a driving layup to tie with 7:54.

Louisville marches on, 60-55

By NICHOLAS K. GERANIOS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. Dwayne Morton scored 26 points, including five in a row that gave Louisville a final lead, as the Cardinals best Minnesota 60-55 Sunday to advance to the Sweet 16 of the NCAA tournament.

Third-seeded Louisville (28-5) will play Arizona (27-5) in Los Angeles. Morton hit five 3-pointers in a seesaw game that featured a combined 19 long range shots. His final 3-pointer gave Louisville the lead for good at 56-55 with 1:20 left, and two free throws iced the victory.

Voshon Lenard led sixth-seed ed Minnesota (21-12) with 20 points, including four three-pointers.

Morton scored eight of Louisville's first 14 points as the Cardinals jumped to a 14-11 lead. But the Gophers responded with 16 unanswered points on route to a 34-22 halftime advantage.

Four 3-pointers keyed an 18-4 Louisville run to open the second half. The Cardinals took the lead 40-38 with 10:14 left on Greg Minor's jump shot.

The lead began whippin' between the teams. Lenard's 3-pointer gave the Gophers a 46-45 lead. Morton's two free throws swung the lead back to Louisville, then a 3 by Townsend Orr gave the advantage back to Minnesota 49-47.

Jason Osborne stole the ball and slammed a dunk to tie the game at 52-52 with 3:51 left. Osbourne's free throw gave Louisville the lead.

Lenard responded with another 3-pointer to put Minnesota ahead 55-53.

Then Morton's fifth 3-pointer gave Louisville a 56-55 lead. Minnesota's Arriel McDonald missed two free throws with 51 seconds left, and Morton was fouled on the rebound attempt. He hit both for a 58-55 Louisville lead.

Lenard missed two 3-point attempts in the closing seconds. David Grim added 14 points for Minnesota, 12 in the first half.

Neither team shot well in the game, with Louisville hitting 41 percent of its shots and Minnesota 41.5.

The Cardinals of the Metro Conference are making their second consecutive trip to the Sweet 16. They last played Arizona in the 1982 Mideast Region semifinal, with Louisville winning.
Marquette maintains poise as Kentucky falls

By FRED GOODALL
Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.

Tony Miller handled Kentucky’s defensive pressure and Marquette survived one of the Wildcats’ ferocious second-half rallies Sunday to advance to the Sweet 16 for the first time in 15 years with a 75-63 victory in the NCAA Southeast regional.

Damon Key scored 25 points and Miller, a 5-foot-11 playmaker with three times as many assists as turnovers this season, broke Kentucky’s vaunted full-court trapping defense for a key basket as the sixth-seeded Warriors (24-8) held on after blowing most of an 18-point lead.

Tony Delk scored 22 of his 24 points in the second half as third-seeded Kentucky, which three times this season overcame double-digit deficits to win, rallied from a 42-4 deficit.

The Kentucky guard scored 12 in a 15-0 run the Wildcats used to get back into the game, then made his fourth 3-pointer during a 10-2 spurt that trimmed Marquette’s lead to 56-54 with 6:40 to go.

Miller took over from there, dribbling the length of the floor to beat Kentucky pressure and make a layup over Jared Prickett, then avoiding costly mistakes down the stretch.

Marquette made 10 of 12 free throws in the final 2:19 and held Kentucky (27-7) to 32 percent shooting from the field, including 10 of 38 3-point attempts. The Wildcats were only 1-for-11 on 3-pointers in the opening half.

The victory sends Marquette into the Sweet 16 for the first time since 1979 and only the second time since the Warriors won their only national title in 1977.

Tempo figured to be a key for Miller’s ability to handle Kentucky’s full-court pressure and the Warriors’ patience on offense were the keys to the Warriors building their 39-24 halftime lead.

Kentucky went nearly seven minutes without a field goal and Marquette took control with Key and Aamal Mclasskill scoring inside and Rob Legtorman and Anthony Pinder contributing timely 3-pointers during a 23-7 surge that put the Warriors up 30-16.

Key had 10 points at the half, while McCaskill, playing 13 minutes because of Jim McElhiney’s foul trouble, was 4-4 for 4 from the field and had nine points, six rebounds, a block and a steal.

Kentucky rallied from a half-time deficit to win six times this season, but wasn’t quite equal to the task after Roney Edofor made a 3-pointer to give Marquette a 42-24 lead in the second round.

Washington’s Chad Harrigan (4-0) went eight innings and gave up seven hits and two runs for the victory.

Irish freshman Larry Mobs took the loss for Notre Dame giving up three hits and two runs in 4.2 innings on the mound. Mobs was the third of five Irish pitchers in the game.

On Thursday, the Irish pounded out one more hit than Tennessee, but fell to the Volunteers 8-5.

Price took the loss allowing five hits and three runs in a four inning performance.

Notre Dame drew within the second round of a run in the Volunteers in the seventh inning on Mages’ two-run home run, but Tennessee pulled away with a run in both the eighth and ninth innings.

Junior Bob Lisanti led the Irish with three hits including a double while Mages added two including the seventh inning blast and Greg Layson chipped in two also. Solmas, Haas, Topham and Robbie Kent also contributed hits to the Irish effort.

Tim Kraus, the first of four Irish pitchers, got the win with three shutout innings in an exhibition against Chou College.

Hoosiers hit 3's, oust Owls, 67-58

By DAVID GINSBURG

LANCASTER, Md.
Bob Knight and John Chaney, two feisty coaches seemingly out of the same mold, finally met and the guy with history on his side came away the winner.

Indiana used an aggressive defense and some sharp-shooting from 3-point range Sunday to advance to the final 16 of the NCAA tournament for the fourth straight year with a 67-58 victory over Temple.

The win gave Knight 40 victories in NCAA tournament play, a number reached only by UCLA's John Wooden and North Carolina's Dean Smith.

He has been in the Final Four five times, winning the national championship in 1976, '81 and '87.

Only Wooden with 10 and Kentucky's Adolph Rupp with four have won more.

The East Regional game marked the first matchup between Knight and Chaney, two men with enormous respect for each other.

"It was certainly a great pleasure to go against a master in this business, a man who has done a tremendous job of developing character in his team," Chaney said. "We both felt like athletes ourselves, and I felt really good about that. I just wish I could have shot a jump shot, though."

The Owls could have used some offense. Despite taking 19 more field goal attempts than the Hoosiers, they shot only 33 percent from the floor and missed 15 of 23 3-pointer.

Indiana made 22 of 48 shots — including 10 of 20 3-pointers.

Brian Evans scored 18 points and mel Smith had 13 of his 15 in the second half for fifth-seeded Indiana (21-8). Temple (23-8), the fourth seed, got 24 points from Eddie Jones and 20 from Aaron McKie, both playing their last college game.

"I love playing against Temple. They play hard and they compete," Knight said.

"John has always had a great appreciation for defensive play, but I thought we played well defensively today, too. Temple is a heckuva team, and I told John Chaney, there's nobody I'd less rather see us beat than he and his team because of the admiration I have for him and how hard they play," Knight said.

And so the Hoosiers are back in the round of 16, despite an up-and-down season that featured a 50-point loss and injuries to several starters.

The team will have to play the rest of the way without guard Sherron Wilkerson, who broke his leg in the second half.

"I don't know if this is a bigger thrill than last year. We've got a good team," said guard Damon Bailey, who has endured a pulled abdominal muscle for several weeks.

"We feel like we can play well against a team, but a couple of games we didn't show up. We can't do that and expect to win," Bailey said.

Chaney didn't make it 11 minutes into the game before being tagged with a technical foul.

He maintained his composure the rest of the way, however, even as Indiana began to pull away.

Knight, meanwhile, sat on the bench for much of the game and rarely raised his voice.

Indiana was clamping to a 53-30 lead before Leary hit a 3-pointer with 4:29 to go. After a basket by McKie, Alan Hunter missed two free throws and Leary followed with a layup to make it 60-52 with 2:31 left.

When it was over, the Eagles fans at US Air Arena stormed the court in a scene similar to the celebration in South Bend, Ind., on Nov. 29, 1993, when the Boston College football team knocked off top-ranked Notre Dame.

"Four months exactly, huh?" Boston College's Howard Bolden said. "Happy anniversary.

Down 50-36 with 17.34 left, North Carolina scored nine consecutive points to start an 18-3 run that tied it at 53 on a follow dunk by Eric Montross with 11:01 remaining. Rasheed Wallace and Jerry Stackhouse scored four points each in the run, which included an intentional foul call on Boston College's Danya Abrams for slamming down Derrick Phelps from behind on a fast break.

Phelps lay on the floor for several minutes, after which he walked to the bench and stayed there the rest of the game.

The Tar Heels tied it at 58, 70 and 72 before Curry sank a pair of free throws to make it 74-72 with 38.1 seconds to go.

Eagles pull upset of UNC

By JOE MACENKA
Associated Press

LANOVER, Md.
Boston College's Eagles are getting good at this upset business.

Exactly four months after pulling off the biggest shocker of the college football season, the Eagles staged a repeat on the basketball court Sunday by knocking defending champion North Carolina out of the NCAA tournament.

"This is clearly the best win since I've been coaching: I can't put into words how happy I am," eighth-year coach Jim O'Brien said after BC's 75-72 East Region victory over the top-ranked and top-seeded Tar Heels.

"I'm not really that surprised. We have a great deal of confidence in ourselves," said Bill Curley, who scored 10 of Boston College's last 11 points.

"Everybody was laughing at us, saying we didn't have a chance. But we believe in ourselves."

Boston College used timely 3-point shooting and hustling work on the boards to spoil North Carolina's bid to become the winningest team in the history of the NCAA tournament.

Both the Tar Heels and UCLA have won 63 games in the event.

It also ended North Carolina's run of 13 consecutive appearances in at least the region semifinals.

"There's a lot of tears in that locker room," coach Dean Smith said. "But they're mature enough to know that there are bigger problems in the world."

Ninth-seeded Boston College (22-10) will meet Indiana, a 67-58 winner over Temple, in Friday's regional semifinals in Miami.

"I don't even want to hear about Indiana," said Gerrord Abram, who made six of the Eagles' 12 3-pointers and led Boston College with 21 points.

"You can't even imagine how good it feels right now to know Boston College secured its first trip to the round of 16 since 1985 by holding on after the Tar Heels (28-7) had rallied from a 14-point deficit in the second half.

When it was over, the Eagles' fans at US Air Arena stormed the court in a scene similar to the celebration in South Bend, Ind., on Nov. 29, 1993, when the Boston College football team knocked off top-ranked Notre Dame.

"Four months exactly, huh?" Boston College's Howard Bailey said. "Happy anniversary.

The Tar Heels tied it at 58, 70 and 72 before Curry sank a pair of free throws to make it 74-72 with 38.1 seconds to go.

North Carolina's Jeff McInnis missed a jumper in the lane with 21 seconds left, and Abram got the rebound. He was fouled with 17.6 seconds left and made one free throw.

The Tar Heels called a timeout to set up a final play, which ended up being a 20-foot baseline jumper by Wallace with five seconds left. The ball took a long bounce off the rim and Easley tracked it down with two seconds left and ran out the clock.

"We were No. 1 in the polls," Smith said, "but that means absolutely nothing until you get away from it for about 20 years and say, 'Hey, that was a big season.'"

Curley had 18 points and nine rebounds and Abrams had 14 points and 10 rebounds. Easley and Malcolm Hackbury each had 11 points.

North Carolina got 16 points and seven rebounds from Montrous, 15 points from Stackhouse, 11 points from McInnis and 10 points and 13 rebounds from Wallace.

Senior Gerrord Abram poured in 21 to lead Boston College over top-seeded North Carolina.

decision sealed the 9-3 win. That win put the Irish in the semi-finals against Penn where the Irish battled to an early 3-1 lead. However, two 5-4 bouts sparked Penn to a 9-5 victory, forcing the foil team to once again face Fairleigh Dickinson for third place. Notre Dame avenged the earlier loss to the Knights by downing them 9-6 with Kalogera leading the way(3-1) by defeating Pierrette Kaller 5-3 to clinch third.

"We are very happy with third," said women's head coach Yves Auriol. "Our girls showed a lot of heart and determination on Friday and Saturday. We defeated our big rival in a very tough Ohio State team, stopped the defending NCAA women's foil champion Temple and came back to beat Fairleigh Dickinson. We are thrilled with third place."

"The full teams' accomplishments have set the stage for our sabre and epee teams," commented DeCicco. "As I've said all season, this team has achieved all of its success through team efforts and not individual stars," he added.

The men's team competition will take place today in sabre and in epee tomorrow. Not only is Notre Dame in contention to win the overall team title, but the Irish can also now boast three All-American performances in the individual competitions. Sick finished fifth in the men's foil individual meet at the Brandeis tournament on Friday. His fifth place finish was finalized after losing a 15-13 decision to Princeton's Jadrien Steele who finished fourth. The freshman phenomenon's performance earned him second-team All-American honors, while Brunner and Power placed 17th and 24th, respectively.

"I am very impressed with Jeremy's performance on Friday," said men's head coach Mike DeCicco. "To finish in fifth place and be All-American as a freshman is phenomenal. He can build on this experience for the next three years."

"I'm pleased with how I forced Friday," said Sick. "I'm coming back next year and I'll work even harder."

In the men's sabre individual competition, senior captain Chris Hajnik finished 10th to claim third team All-American honors. Penn's Evan Glanz eliminated Hajnik from the competition with a 15-10 win. Other finishes for Notre Dame were freshman Bill Lester, who took 21st, and senior Bernard Raza, who finished 24th.

The third All-American in the bunch includes Junior Rakesh Patel who took 12th place in men's epee yesterday evening. In the third team All-American along with Hajnik, seniors, epee captain Greg Wuzniak, and Rian Girard ended up 13th and 24th respectively.

Women roll along, win two more victories this weekend to push their record to 13-3. In the match against Illinois, sophomore Sherry Vitale and her 11th ranked teammates earned two double wins. Vitale defeated Andrea England 6-0, 7-5 at number-two singles, then joined with sophomore Moredh Siegfried to defeat England and Shannon Dean 6-1, 6-0 at number-three doubles. Faustman defeated Audrey Smith 6-2, 3-6, 6-0 at number-four singles and Gowen defeated Dean 6-0, 6-1 at number-six singles. The two later teamed at number-one doubles to defeat Holly Taylor and Heidi Cakans 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

Fencers stand in 2nd, foils take title

By JOE VILLINSKI

March Madness spread to the Gosman Center at Brandeis University Sunday as the Notre Dame men's foil team won the NCAA National Championship leaving them only 22 points behind Penn State for the overall national title with men's epee and sabre still to be fenced.

Over Friday and Saturday the women's foil team finished third in the team event paving the way for the men to do well today.

"The men's first place and the women's third place finish on Saturday have put us right on track for our ultimate goal of winning the overall national championship," said men's head coach Mike DeCicco.

In the finals, the Irish jumped out to a quick 2-0 lead and then cruised past an emotionally-drained St. John's team 5-2. The Redmen had just defeated #1 seed Penn State in a grueling 5-4 match and could not make a sustained effort against the powerful Irish squad. Freshman Jeremy Siek and junior Stan Brunner each won two bouts against St. John's to bring the first national championship to Notre Dame this year.

Before mauling NYU in the semifinals 5-0, the Irish got past the Redmen in the round robin portion with a gut-wrenching 5-4 win St. John's held advantages of 2-0 and 4-3 before Power kept the Irish from being eliminated with a 5-3 win over Kevin Laundy. In the rubber bout, Siek clinched the upset over the #2 seed with a 5-2 win over Brian Mornon.

The third seeded Irish foil team started their run to number one with consecutive 5 wins over Columbia and Michigan State. Brunner and junior Connor Power won two bouts against the Lions, while Power and Siek claimed two bouts against the Spartans.

"The men's foil team performed brilliantly today," added DeCicco. "They showed the heart and guts that this team has displayed all season."

As for the women's competition, women's foil finished third, turning in an outstanding performance among some of the toughest women fencers in the world. The foil team went 1-1 on Friday, defeating midwest rival Ohio State, but then dropping a close decision to Fairleigh Dickinson. Both teams were tied at eight wins apiece, but the Irish lost out in the tie-breaker because Fairleigh Dickinson won on numbers 10-53. That loss dropped the Irish down to the sixth seed to face Temple on Monday.

There, the Irish were victorious as seniors Kim Arndt and Corrine Dougherty both won 3-0 and Mindi Kalogeru's 5-1 win.

Irish show no mercy, cruise 14-4

By TIM SHERMAN

The Irish were no mercy, cruising to a 14-4 win over Columbia Saturday in the opening period of the NCAA tournament at the Wildcat Dome.

"It was an ugly game," said Snyder. "There was really no flow to the game because of the amount of penalties (6 illegal stick penalties against UNH). We could have played a lot better."

Despite scoring 14 goals, the Irish offense was actually a bit sluggish.

The Notre Dame lacrosse team executed this plan rather well on Saturday, as they whacked the weakened Wildcats of New Hampshire by a 14-4 score.

UNH arrived at Notre Dame a depleted squad. Approximately 15 Wildcats were not on the field and were not facing the Notre Dame.

The Irish never let up, they were not a bit disappointed, as they did not get a true measure of how far they had come from their last outing, a loss to Georgetown.

"I just wish they had their complete team," said Irish goalie Ryan Jewell, who recorded his third victory of the season. "It would have made it a more satisfying win. But it was a win nonetheless."

The Irish wasted no time in taking charge of the game.

An early illegal stick penalty on UNH did not hinder their cause at all. The Irish capitalized by scoring 3 quick goals during the penalty en route to a 7-1 first period lead.

Irish attacker Robbie Snyder and Randy Colley were instrumental in the run. Snyder tallied three times and added five assists. Fellow senior Colley contributed his usual three goals.

Despite scoring 14 goals, the Irish offense was actually a bit sluggish.

"It was an ugly game," said Snyder. "There was really no flow to the game because of the amount of penalties (6 illegal stick penalties against UNH). We could have played a lot better."

The Irish have to pleased with the fact that they seem to be adjusting well to the loss of a few key players to injuries. The depth of the team is beginning to show.

"We can't whine about the unfortunate injuries," said Jewell. "We just Irish attacker Randy Colley looks for the pass during Notre Dame's 14-4 victory over the Wildcats of New Hampshire Saturday."

have to keep doing what we have to do."

"One of these things is to maintain the defensive intensity."

The opening period output would be the final defense needed as the long sticks dominated the undefeated Wildcats.

Junior Mike Iorio, Billy Gallagher, and Chris Bury, along with hard-working midfielders basically shackled undermanned UNH, making Jewell's job all that much easier.

"It's great to have such a strong defense in front of me," said Jewell. "We've been together for three years and know each other pretty well.

The cohesive unit deserves much of the credit for the early season success of the 3-1 Irish."

"Defense is the strength of our team," said Snyder noted. Just ask UNH.

Topping off for baseball

The Irish got plenty of hits, but not enough timely ones at the College Baseball Classic this weekend.

Notre Dame (5-4) outhit each of its opponents this weekend, but only came away with one win while losing to 14th-ranked Washington and 12th-ranked Tennessee.

On Saturday, the Irish defeated Brigham Young 7-2 as senior Tom Price pitched a five-hit complete game. Price (2-2) who has yet to give up a walk this year struck out six and walked none in the game.

"We needed someone to step up and give a little extra effort. Tom Price gave us that effort and it allowed our offense to relax a bit," said Irish coach Pat Murphy.

Sophomore Mark Mapes led the Irish offense with two hits including a two-run double in the first inning. Freshman Scott Sollmann and senior Matt Haas each added two hits and two runs scored to the Irish effort.

Notre Dame put five runs on the board in the third inning as back to back doubles by Haas and Mapes scored two runs and sophomore Robbie Kent singled to put Mapes across the plate. Sophomore Perry Husek and Ryan Topham also scored in the inning.

The Washington Huskies (14-2) bested the Irish 4-2 with a four-run eighth inning on Friday.

Washington catcher Christian Showey's two-run double off sophomore A.J. Jones broke the scoreless tie and started the four-run charge.

Once again, the Irish notched more hits than their opponent with eight to Washington's seven, but Notre Dame did not put a run on the board until the top of the ninth. In that inning, junior Craig DeSensi doubled to drive in two runs.
