Auditorium. yesterday given by Caleb Rosado of Humboldt College in the Hesburgh Peace Institute Auditorium.

Rosado outlined the problems facing the drive towards multiculturalism today and the problems that the movement is sure to find in the future. He described two modern social classes, which, although opposed, contribute to each other. Rosado discussed "McWorld," a term that describes a heterogeneous society driven "centrifugally" or as a rush to contain, to wrap all of society into an easily manageable whole. The ultimate goal is not unity but uniformity.

This type of society creates a reactionary group, which Rosado termed the "Jihad." This group is militantly homogeneous, and tends to align along religious or ethnic barriers. As they strive to preserve their differences, it brings them into a natural conflict with the concept of "McWorld."

This conflict often builds to a violent confrontation, a perfect example of which is the World Trade Center bombing. Rosado said, These two opposing factors illustrate exactly what the multiculturalist movement lacks today, according to Rosado.

"Unity is not synonymous with uniformity," Rosado said, "and neither is diversity synonymous with separation."

The solution lies between, in a "Unity in Diversity," a halfway point between having nothing in common with your neighbor and yet having everything in common with him. The first step toward realizing this goal, according to Rosado, is the analysis of general societal trends.

As society moved from an agrarian era in the 1850s through the industrial period and into the information age, the minds of its people experienced a similar change in orientation.

They gathered in progressively larger groups from tribe to technopols, and their ethnic view moved from conformity to uniformity to today's diversity.

In the future Rosado sees a global society of "neo-villages" connected by a vast information exchange network which will de-emphasize the importance of the body. Ethnic attitudes will progress to a new "mutualism," a sense of reliance on fellow human beings.

"In the world that we're headed for, we need all hands on deck," Rosado said.

The key dynamic in multiculturalism is to maintain the dimensions of unity and division in balanced tension, without ebbing to either side," he said. "Any major overestimation leads to the situations of "Jihai" or "McWorld."

A key foundation for this balance is respect or "Total Quality Respect," Rosado said. "It is a lack of respect for others... which gives rise to the conflicts in organizations," he said.

This becomes especially important on college campuses where the leaders and doers of tomorrow are trained.

Rosado reminded students that their education gives them a responsibility, as women and men of all cultures, religions, and sexual orientations to work for this respect for themselves and others. "Everything from the neck down is minimum wage," he said.

Rosado gave as an example of the way we learn from the past some of his observations on Hurricane Andrew, which damaged much of the coastal southeast.

The first lesson of Andrew was "failure to anticipate immediate change with a proactive process will result in great loss due to a come-from-behind reactive response," Rosado said, and the Second Law of Andrew is to "Be careful how you build, for the storm will show what sort of work has been done."

Dr Zubie Sheikh addressed the attitude of many pro-choice advocates that the pre-term baby, or fetus, is a "glob of cells" and not a person in her lecture titled "The Pre-term Baby: A Glob of Cells" or Special Patient.

Sheikh spoke in hopes of educating people about the importance of prevention, prenatal screening, and pre-natal care. She described tests and procedures for detecting defects in pre-term babies which may be cured if found early enough.

In her experience at the University of Chicago where she has worked in the department of Obstetrics and Gynecology for ten years, Sheikh said "Most of the patients simply don't know what's going on." Often times pregnant women don't even go to be examined until it is too late for proper pre-natal care.

In one case, a pre-term baby developed problems with its kidneys that caused its blad- derover to swell excessively. "We could have taken care of it," Sheikh said. "We could have drained its bladder periodically until it was born and then corrected the problem surgically. But, the woman would not come in, she didn't want to bother with it, and it's free!"

Sheikh described tests which detect these kinds of defects, tests which are essential to ensure the health of the pre-term baby.

If the pregnancy is normal or an abnormal one. Next, the fetal protein test is performed in the second trimester of pregnancy, indicates if there is too much or too little protein present. Excessive of insuffi- cient protein may cause abnor- malities in the nervous sys- tem, mental and physical hand- icaps, or chromosome defects. Finally, ultra-sound tests allow doctors to see physical defects and fetal behavior pattern tests are important for checking the baby's development.

Doubts raised about speeding asylum claims

By MICHAEL SNIFFEN

WASHINGTON

The Clinton administration plans to streamline the handling of the 150,000 annual requests for political asylum but critics wonder whether the measures will merely create a new backlog elsewhere in the system.

Federal officials and immigration advocates in the private sector said the Justice Department is on the verge of implementing three steps: doubling the number of officials handling claims, imposing a $130 processing fee for those who can afford it, and delaying the granting of work permits until six months after application.

In a major policy change, the new system will be put to work on new claims immediately.

"We're adopting a last-in, first-out policy," said one government official, who declined to be identified by name. "We're going to process new applications first and not immediately deal with the backlog.

That backlog now numbers 370,000 cases and the Immigration and Naturalization Service estimates it could hit 500,000 cases by the end of the year.

Immigration and Naturalization Commissioner Doris Meissner was to outline the steps in detail at a news conference Tuesday.

"There's a real risk that this will simply transfer the backlog from one office to another within the Justice Department," according to Arthur Helton, director of migration programs for the Open Society Institute.

The administration plan to increase, perhaps double, the 85 immigration judges simply does not add enough judges to handle the caseload, said Helton, whose pro-immigration foundation was established by Hungarian-born financier George Soros.

He said the 85 judges, who also have other business, currently decide 20,000 asylum claims a year. Doubling them might add another 40,000 asylum decisions, but Helton said he expected they would be given an additional 120,000 cases a year.

"The new system may involve less work for an immigration officer to refer cases to immigration judges than to grant asylum," he said.

Now, even applicants with no real chance of winning asylum can get a work permit just 90 days after applying and work for years while they wait for their claim to be denied. To get asylum, an applicant must have a well-founded fear of ethnic, religious or political persecution if returned to his or her country of origin.

Senators to boycott Observer

By ANALISE TAYLOR

At its last meeting of the 1993-1994 school year, Student Senators voted to boycott The Observer unless it abandoned its plans for a weekly magazine and advertising department independent of Adworks and Scholastic.

If The Observer does not comply by April 15, student government will put advertising funds for student groups and clubs on hold, according to Student Body President Frank Flynn.

"The club coordination council supports the resolution to boycott The Observer," said Club Coordinator Frank McGehee. "From this point on, we will no longer run the club column, and the council asks all the clubs on campus to withdraw financial support of The Observer through advertisement placements."

"The current government has control until July 1," Flynn said.

Several senators supported the idea of allowing Student Body President Elect David Hungeling and the new administration to handle the situation, but others wanted a decision made because revenue was involved.

Some senators suggested that the class of 1997 not re-elect President Frank Flynn.

"We would not be representing the interests of the student body if we do not act on this," said Freshman Council President Tom Mattzke. "I recommend that the class of 1997 not use The Observer unless it complies with the resolution."

In other Senate news, Student Senators voted for the Irish Rover recipient and an amended version of the SLU constitution passed by unanimous consent.

Sometimes these tests detect incurable defects which render the pre-term baby unable to survive outside the womb. In such cases, Sheikh advocates abortion. However, in other cases she sees the pre-term baby as a "special patient" which needs special care to insure its health.

While she does not deny a woman's right to an abortion, she says such care would prevent unnecessary abortions and miscarriages.

Sheikh's lecture was sponsored by ND Right to Life. "We invited her because those who are pro-life see the baby as the patient, those who are pro-choice see the mother as the patient, and we wanted to hear a view that was midway between," said Maurine Kramlich, the group's vice president of operations.

WASHINGTON

The House Banking Committee's chairman said today he's "not interested in protecting anyone" in the Whitewater affair, and defended his decision to cancel what would have been the first House hearing on the subject.

Rep. Henry Gonzalez told a news conference the committee would conduct hearings "at the proper time and under proper circumstances" — not, he said, while Republicans planned to "create a dummybook" and interfere with a special counsel. Gonzalez' comments did not concern the broad Whitewater hearings the House voted to hold if the bipartisan leadership agrees on a time and format.

The Texas Democrat referred to legally required hearings on the savings and loan cleanup agency, which were scheduled March 24 and then canceled by Gonzalez.

Gonzalez, Republicans, citing a House rule that allows the minority party to call witnesses, had invited a list of witnesses that read like a who's who of the Whitewater affair.

Gonzalez said that under his interpretation, the Republicans could not conduct an investigative hearing if the majority Democrats did not plan to do so.

"I'm not interested in protecting anyone ... only in preserving the integrity of the committee," Gonzalez said, adding he only has met President Clinton once or twice and never talked to the White House about Whitewater.

Meanwhile, the ranking Republican on the committee said Sunday he cannot conclude two top White House aides acted illegally when they complained to a Treasury official about the Savings and Loan Guarantee Fund.

"It's natural that they would interfere with a special counsel," Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press." "I think it's real, but it's not thoroughly devastating."

The White House, meanwhile, challenged a published report that Hillary Rodham Clinton did not put any of her own money at risk to realize roughly $100,000 in cattle futures trading profits in 1978 and 1979.

But the expert, Professor Marvin A. Chirelstein of Columbia University Law School, issued a statement Sunday calling the Newsweek article "false and irresponsible."

"The statement was distributed by the White House."

Older Americans may worry about their health insurance, but younger people are more likely to be without coverage, the Census Bureau said today.

Nearly one American in four had no health insurance at some time between February 1990 and September 1992. But among people aged 18 to 24, 25 percent had a lapse in coverage during that period, the bureau said in a report released today.

Young adults are often not covered because they are beyond the age to be included in their parents' plan and are not in jobs that offer protection, explained Robert Bennefield of the Census Bureau.

"When you are young you think nothing can happen to you, so you tend to not purchase insurance ... that's part of the problem," Bennefield added.

Among people 65 and over, most of whom are covered by Medicare, only 1 percent reported a gap in insurance coverage, according to the study based on the monthly Survey of Income and Program Participation.

The majority of gaps in insurance coverage are job-related, explained Ron Pollack, executive director of Families USA, a group that studies poverty and health problems.

And while the 65-and-older group has coverage, Pollack said, those just under 65 often have insurance gaps because of early retirements or being laid off and having problems finding a new job.

For people under age 18 — those most likely to be covered by parents' policies — the chance of having a gap in protection was 27 percent during the period studied. Among the 18-21 age group, the gap jumped to 47 percent for those 22 through 24.

But things improved for the 25-34 age group, with 32 percent likely to have a gap. That at-risk share fell to 22 percent for ages 35 to 44 and 19 percent for people aged 45 to 64.

Overall, 24 percent of whites, 36 percent of blacks and 48 percent of Hispanics had a break in insurance coverage. Men were slightly more likely to have a gap in coverage than women, 27 percent to 24 percent.

By income, 49 percent of Americans living in poverty had a gap in insurance coverage. The risk was greater for those between poverty level and twice that income.

A separate Census report showed that 1992 revenue for the nation's health care service industry topped $625 billion, a nine percent increase from 1991.

"Revenues for nearly all health service industries increased, with home health care and kidney dialysis centers posting the largest gains," said Tom Zdeblick, manager of the bureau's annual survey of the service industry.

Hospitals accounted for more than half of all health service income at $335 billion in 1992, while doctors and clinics brought in $150 billion.

BERLUSCONI IS LEADING IN ITALY

By FRANCES D'EMILIO
Associated Press

ROME
With the parties that have led Italy since World War II brought down by scandal, voters were turning to a media magnate and his conservative alliance to fill the void, exit polls and projections showed Monday.

Silvio Berlusconi, whose populist themes and volunteer-based campaign organization raised comparisons with Texas billionaire Ross Perot, entered the political arena two months ago to keep the former Communists out of power.

The projected outcome showed how much his message of privatization, tax cuts, job creation and the virtues of the free market touched a chord. He also stressed conservative themes such as stricter immigration laws and vaguely defined "traditional values."

As leader of the top vote-getting party, Berlusconi would be a likely choice to be named premier. Italy's president generally picks a member of the largest party in Parliament as premier, and the premier forms a government that must be approved by both houses.

However, it was unclear whether the right could muster enough unity or support from the center to form a government.

Exit polls gave his alliance 47 percent in the Chamber of Deputies to 31 percent for the leftist coalition dominated by former Communists. The conservatives were leading by a narrower margin in the Senate, according to projections by the Abacus firm for RAI state television.

First official returns were expected late Monday, the second day of voting. A complete count was expected by Tuesday, as voting in Italy is done with paper and pencil.

The direction of Italy's political future hung in the balance in the outcome of the elections.

The moment was comparable to the choice Italians faced after the defeat of the Fascists in World War II. In 1948, voters rehired a Communist lid to run the country and instead chose the Christian Democrats, the start of more than four decades of dominance by the center-left, pro-Catholic party.

The Christian Democrats and their coalition partners, the Socialists, were brought down by corruption investigations over the past two years that exposed systematic kickbacks from businessmen to politicians.

Stock prices on the Milan exchange rose strongly Monday and the lira rallied against the dollar amid growing expectations the right would win and form a stable government.

Berlusconi, a multimillionaire who heads a media and entertainment empire with World Alliance of the Northern League (which favors autonomy for Italy's more-prosperous north), the formerly neo-fascist National Alliance and his own Forza Italia (Go Italy).

The 57-year-old former nightclub crooner constructed his campaign around his egos, riches and anti-communist diatribes that seemed rooted deep in the Cold War.

Israel, PLO accelerate negotiations

JABALIYA REFUGEE CAMP, Occupied Gaza Strip
Israel's undercover troops killed six senior members of the PLO's military wing in a Gaza shootout Monday, violence that could threaten attempts to restart Israel-PLO peace talks.

In a sign of Israeli determination to move forward with autonomy, however, Israeli television said the army will be ready to pull out of Gaza by April 14.

The shootout between the Palestinians and soldiers led the highest one-day death toll in the occupied lands since Feb. 23 massacre at a Hebron mosque that killed 30.

The army said the six dead were senior members of the Fatah, the military wing of Yasser Arafat's mainstream PLO organization. They were still sought by the army despite the PLO-Israel autonomy accord.

When the shootout erupted in the Jabalia refugee camp north of Gaza City, the six were distributing leaflets criticizing the PLO for attempting to return to talks on implementing Palestinian autonomy the occupied territories.

Two of the six Palestinians were shot point-blank— one grabbed by the hair and shot in the head and a second killed as he lay bleeding on the ground, witnesses said.

A seventh Palestinian and two bystanders were wounded, witnesses said. The army reported only two wounded.

After the shootout, Fatah called for major confrontations with the army on Tuesday and a three-day mourning strike. "We must make the land burn underneath the feet of the Israeli soldiers," blared Fatah trucks with loudspeakers.

Fatah, like the larger Palestinian community, is split over the issue of restarting talks in the wake of the massacre. Negotiators were to meet in Cairo on Tuesday to continue efforts to restart the talks, but their efforts were jeopardized by the continuing violence.

The report of the pullout preparations coincided with comments made by Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, who said Monday that an autonomy agreement could be wrapped up by mid-April and he followed by a speedy troop pullout from Gaza and Jericho.

On the eve of resuming talks with the PLO, a senior army official said the military has already moved out much of its equipment from the soon-to-be autonomous areas, and that it would only take a few days to complete the pullout.

Military officials told Israeli television it would be completed in two weeks.

Babbit stresses ecology

By LISA GENASCI

WASHINGTON

The executive lobbying that sparked a fight over the ecology of the Pacific Northwest underscores the need to take a broad approach to protecting the environment, Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt said Monday.

"The first test that we faced of this proposition that we must see it whole was, . . . the Pacific Northwest timber plan," Bab­bitt said in a speech during a forum at the National Academy of Sciences.

The Northwest saga is "really quite an extraordinary situation where for the past 10 or 15 years the agencies of the United States, which had essentially been denying responsibility for the consequences of the over-cutting and destruction of the forests in the Pacific Northwest," Babbitt and Vice President Al Gore spoke at a conference on environmental and natural resources research and development. It is sponsored by the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy.

"We are trying to shift in the executive branch away from arguments about positions such as ecosystem management, Gore said, "to gain sufficient cooperation across political boundaries, to look at entire ecosystems as they should be looked at."

Babbit singled out the Northwest logging dilemma in explaining the importance of taking a broad view in considering environmental impacts.

"The day when I could sort of designate the back 40 as a national park, put a fence around it and say that will take care of our obligation to nature, is simply gone," Babbit said. "The empty spaces have shrunk down, the habitat surface of the earth is now fragmented to the point that there isn't any back 40 left.

"We are ultimately driven then to the question of attempting to see it whole, of asking, can we find within the ecosystem of this planet some kind of equilibrium?" he said.

Software publishers lose billions to piracy

Publishers lost $7.4 billion worth of software last year from the piracy of business software, down almost one-quarter from 1992.

The Software Publishers Association, representing 1,100 publishers of computer programs, said Monday that piracy cost $7.9 billion in 1992.

Despite the one-year decline, the trade group, which surveys, said the association's research director David Tremblay.

International instability causes Dow tumble

Oil and technology shares led stocks lower on Monday as investors worried about the world's economy and political dangers.

The Dow Jones industrial average plunged 120 points on Monday before regaining some of its losses in the session to close down 12.38 points, at 3,978.36.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by just 12 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 287.32 million shares as of 4 p.m., up from 249.56 million in the previous session.

It was the third consecutive day of declines for the stock market, which saw particular weakness among the smaller capitalization issues.

Analysts said last week's pessimism caused by world events, spilled over into Monday's session. The Dow lost 120 points last week, while the Nasdaq index tumbled 26 points.

Serbia hit hard by U.N. sanctions

Judging by the dozens of shiny new BMWs and Mercedes-Benzes tooling around Belgrade, Serbia is flourishing.

Only a closer look at the empty stores, burnt-out buildings and the worn faces of people makes it clear that what we're seeing searching for a bargain reveals Serbia's true state.

Belgrade was always Balkan: chaotic, yet governed by complex custom; rundown, but stylish; its women are thin, with puffed-up hair, heavy makeup and short skirts.

In Serbia, the male role model is Zeljko Raznatovic, alias Arkan, a Belgrade cafe owner who played one of the toughest Serbian militias in the Croatian and Bosnian wars and who sat for a year in a Belgrade prison.

Dear Editor,

I am a 22 year old college senior. If you were to look at me you would see a "normal" college student ready to graduate. Unfor-nately, what I let others see and what I feel inside are sometimes completely different things. The reason for this is that I was raped. It took me a long time to accept that I was raped, admit it, verbalize that I was raped, be-see and what I feel inside are

Unfortunately, what I let others do was forget. When I could not deeply depressed, emotionally withdrawn, and all I wanted to do was forget. When I could not forget, or feel numb, all I wanted was to die. However, near a year after the incident I am beg-ning to feel like I am going to survive. I will never be the same, but I will survive.

Every rape victim has a diff erent story. If we are strong enough to accept that we were raped, then we are faced with the decision of letting others including our family, friends, and and in self all in one cruel vio-

to rebuild him or herself from nothing. Rape drastically changes a person and most of those changes are not visible, nor do they ever go away.

I wish that I could get that arrest to happen. I want to believe that everyone knew what happened to the victim, in vicious fashion. The court system would work actually for the victim and not put them on trial. Everyone would be more sensitive to the issues involved and not expect the victim to just get over it in a week, month, or year. Everyone would be a support, or a friend to a to me that I was not their fault, and that it can happen to anyone, even myself.

Dear Editor,

I am writing this letter for

Sexual Assault Awareness

Week. I was raped when I was 17 years old. It was right before final exams my junior year in high school. My parents were out town and I invited a friend to watch over a movie. Within an hour of his arrival, he raped me. At first I did not realize it was rape. He was someone I knew and I had invited him into the house.

I called a friend who advised me to report it to the police.

I did report the rape to the police, and I was treated terribly by them. The police would not make an arrest, but and would not let it drop. I made an appointment to talk to the District Attorney and over a year after the incident, an arrest was made. During fall freshman year I testified in a preliminary hearing and this past summer the case was plea bargained. Exactly two years after I was raped, the man who raped me plead-guilty to indecent assault for one year of probation. This summer his probation will be up. My recovery process was long and filled with a lot of counseling. It was not an easy road.

My message to the Notre Dame community is about raising awareness and speaking out. Rape is underreport-ded here. I did not even realize to what extent until I did a class project about it.

It is hard to report, especially when the rapist is someone you know. Most people fear the consequences of reporting (everyone will know, they will think it is my fault, maybe it was my fault, etc.), and victim-blaming is still prevalent today. Shame, guilt, humiliation, and degradation are all common feelings, and who wants everyone else to know about them?

The bottom line is that unless people start reporting it, rape will not be seen as a “problem” on this campus. Besides making it known to the other person, we need to make it known to ourselves and society that it is unacceptable for another person (even a close friend) to do anything to us that we do not want.

Yes, the cops were jerks.

Yes, it was an alarming and frustrating experience. Yes, I got bad reactions from people.

Never once did I wish I had not reported it. Though, I sent the message that I was not going to take it. I may have protected other women in the process, and at the very least, I let the rapist know that he

Easter baskets are being prepared for South Bend children with communications disorders.

By KATIE MEYER

Easter is around the corner once again. For most of us the thought brings happy expectations of going home, taking a break from classes, and even the end of any self-imposed sacrifice made for the Lenten season.

It is easy at this time of year to forget that there are those for whom self-sacrifice is a necessity instead of a choice, that there are people nearby that go without not only during Lent but all the time. 300 of these individuals and families won’t be forced to go without a meal, thanks in large part to the Notre Dame Faculty and Administration Food Basket Project.

Needie receive Easter bundles

By DAN MCKILLOP

The Observer/Tom Perez

Approximately 300 baskets of food were organized and distributed by ND students to help provide less fortunate than ourselves with a large meal.

Each basket contained a turkey (10 of which were donated by ND faculty and administration), canned vegetables, fruit, desserts, and other assorted foodstuffs.

The needie aren’t the only people who benefit from the Easter Basket Project. The volunteers do as well. Sophomore Trang Bui describes the feeling as the “gratification of helping someone and knowing that I’m making a difference... (the Project) is not just giving money, it’s working with organizations that are teaching people to become self-sufficient.”

Bui became involved in service work in high school and has continued to help others in her college career. The Knott Hall resident began working for others because she “thought that there were a lot of problems in the world with hunger, so I found organizations that were doing something about it.”

After her second year of volunteering for the Easter Basket Project here at ND, Bui says she can “definitely recommend it to others because there are so many people who need help out there... it’s a pretty large scale program so anyone who helps out really is making a big difference.”

Performing service also helps volunteers “gain a greater understanding of the world and your place in it,” according to senior Craig Anzilotti. “Service is a great way to get educated, build friendships, meet people from different backgrounds and understandings, and to open your mind.”

Anzilotti has participated in many service activities at ND and in South Bend over the course of his four years here, including service field seminars and a summer service project at the Center for the Homeless in South Bend, a project which led to his current employment at the Center.

Anzilotti has participated in the Easter Basket Project for four straight years and says that he enjoys every minute of it. “Service to me is what basketball is to a basketball player – it’s just something I love to do. The reason I get involved in it is because I love it.”

If you missed out on this opportunity to help others and you want to get involved in service, there are literally dozens of organizations and clubs on campus that can help you get started. A quick call to Campus Ministry or the Center for Social Concerns can lead to an exciting, fulfilling experience. Just ask Trang or Craig.
Marquette was paying him about $150,000 a year in Marquette was to be run through the 1996-97 season and about $150,000 buyout clause. In five seasons at Marquette, O'Neill had an overall record of 86-62, including 20-8 and 24-9 the last two years. Marquette played in the Southeastern Regional on Thursday in Knoxville, losing to eventual champion Duke by 10 points.

Marquette was O'Neill's first head coaching job at the major college level. In his first season, 1989-90, the Warriors were 15-14 and went to the NIT. The next season they were 11-17 and improved steadily: 16-13 in five seasons.

O'Neill has been here before. In 1990, his first year at Major O'Neill replaced the ousted coach Charlie Miller of Miami (Fla.) in March. Miller's mother, Inetha, said she was not worried about the demands coach Bob Knight makes on his players.

"I saw him head-but where my daughter, Terri, is 13. "I'm not afraid of things coach wants them to do," she said. "And those are the things that we didn't do at times this year. It's something they've got to learn to do, and they'll be able to do it on every step they take on the floor."
Alvarez visits Irish practice

By TIM SHERMAN
Sports Writer

University of Wisconsin head coach Barry Alvarez returned to his old stomping grounds yesterday to visit practice. Notre Dame's ex-defensive coordinator, who coached the Badgers to an 11-1 record and a Rose Bowl victory this past season, was impressed by the intensity the Irish showed on the practice field.

"It looked like a good hard practice out there," said Alvarez, who seemed impressed with both units, but especially with the defense. This is no surprise considering the success he had with Notre Dame's defensive unit. Alvarez led the Irish defenders to the 1988 national championship.

Depth at the running back position was a problem for the Irish at practice yesterday. Neither junior Lee Becton, who pulled a quadriceps muscle on Saturday, nor freshman Robert Farmer, who has a knee injury, participated in practice. Fullback Marc Edwards was also absent.

To fill in, Emmett Mosley, who has been working at wide receiver this spring, shifted to tailback. Mosley, who has impressed at receiver, seemed equally capable in the backfield.

The Irish continued to practice trick plays yesterday. Junior Charles Stafford looks to be the replacement for Lake Dawon and Adrian Jarrell on the reverse. In addition, a shuffle pass to Derrick Mayes was worked in.

With the loss of place kicker Kevin Prendergast, the kicking game is a major concern for coach Lou Holtz.

One possible solution for this problem is junior Stefan Schroffner. Schroffner looked comfortable behind 33-40 yards yesterday, making seven of eight kicks.

In addition to Becton and Farmer, the Irish were without wide receiver Mike Miller (back spasms), tight end Oscar McBride (ankle), defensive linemen Thomas Knight and Reggie Fleurintus, and defensive backs Travis Davis and Anthony Swiney. None of the injuries were of a serious nature.

Holtz

held up the play of running back Robert Farmer. "The guy you’re going to be shocked at is Robert Farmer," Holtz said. He was comfortable with players at running back, tight end, receiver and quarterback. The offensive line, however, is undergoing a facelift.

"The offensive line is a problem because this is the first year without established players," said Holtz. In years past, he pointed out, established linemen such as Mirko Jirkovich, Gene McGuire and Todd Norman were on hand to push the younger players along. Ryan Leahy and Mark Zajavovski return, but they saw sporadic action on the line last season.

Holtz left no doubt about the starting quarterback. Ron Powlus is listed as the definite starter. But he said Thomas Krug would push Powlus.

With the loss of place kicker Kevin Prendergast, the kicking game is a major concern for coach Lou Holtz.

The kicking game remains a prime concern for Holtz in 1994. "I promised we would not be in the same situation we were in last year," he said. "We’re not in the same situation we were a year ago. We’re worse."

Holtz said that Ron Powlus or Stefan Schroffner could get the punting duties. "Or we could go for it on 4th and 8," he said.

Holtz said next year’s interior linemen, who switch to 3-4 alignment, will likely be Brian Hamilton, Oliver Gibson and Germane Holden. He praised the play of Hodrien, who logged time in ’92 but saw lim-

THE HOLY CROSS CANDIDATE YEAR?
By WILL MARTIN
Sports Writer

After an impressive indoor season, Notre Dame coach Joe Piane believes strong showings in the first three outdoor meets will give the Irish track team the momentum it needs to continue the results for the rest of the year.

"The team had a great indoor season, but we expect to have a great outdoor season," said Piane.

This past weekend, the Irish track team split up into three groups to compete in the Eastern Kentucky Invitational, the Raleigh Relays, and the Purdue Invitational.

"Things pretty much fell into place as to where we sent the students," said Piane. "We wanted to send each kid where he or she would receive the greatest competition."

At the Eastern Kentucky Invitational, the team posted its most successful outing of the year, placing runners in the top five in 20 different events.

Leading the way for the men's team was senior sprinter Dean Lyle, who tied for first in the 200m dash with a time of 21.64 and placed second in the 100m dash by only .02 of a second. In the 400m hurdles, freshman Troy Langevine placed first, while senior Chris Lilly finished in second place. Also, junior Joe Currnan won the 800m run.

"My performance was encouraging because this was only my second outdoor meet in college," said Lyle. "The times were better than I expected."

The women's team was equally successful, winning first place in five different events. In the 1500m run, the top five places were occupied by Notre Dame runners, led by sophomore Amy Siegel in first and freshman Carolyn Long in second. The 100m hurdles were also dominated by the Irish, who captured the top four spots. Junior Lisa Janck finished first, and junior Monica Cox grabbed second.

First place finishes were also brought home by freshman Allison Howard in the 400m dash, sophomore Erica Peterson in the 400m hurdles, and junior Becky Afflter in the 800m.

"The women's team did a good job," said Piane. "Since there was no women's competition at Purdue, the majority went to Kentucky, and they responded with a good performance. I thought Lisa Janck and Erica Peterson ran well."

The Irish relay squads were not exempt from the winning ways, either. Both the men's and women's 4x440 meter relay teams won first place at the meet. The men's team, made up of Langevine, Currnan, sophomore Aaron Schieleke, and junior Rich Anthony, won with a time of 3:19.97, while the women's team of Long, Peterson, Howard and freshman Heidi Altman crushed the opposition, winning by five seconds over second-place Western Kentucky.

In addition to the success had at the Eastern Kentucky Invitational, other members of the track team continued the winning ways at the Purdue Invitational and the Raleigh Relays.

The Irish only brought home one victory from West Lafayette, Indiana, but top five finishes in other events allowed the team to consider its performance at Purdue a success, according to Piane.

"We sent many of our competitors in the field to Purdue because the other meets did not offer all of the events," said Piane. "They may not have won, but they placed well in a tough field."

In the 3000m steeplechase, sophomore Mike Smedley placed first, after finishing with a time of 9:24.3. In other events, senior Chris Ross finished third in the 400m intermediate hurdles, freshman Pat Gormian placed fourth in the 800m, sophomore Todd Johnston placed fourth in the high jump, and freshman Greg Wilson brought home third in the javelin.

The team also sent a small delegation of athletes to North Carolina State University for the Raleigh Relays. In Raleigh, Jeff Hochnack finished first in the 1500m event for freshman, and junior John Cown placed fourth in the 3000m steeplechase.

Now, the team must use this success as a springboard for the remainder of the outdoor season and translate the confidence into continued impressive performances, according to Piane.

"This weekend was a great start for the outdoor season. It was nice to allow many different people to compete," said Piane. "But now, things really start rolling as we compete in Indianapolis and Tennessee in upcoming weekends."

It will be in these meets that the true test will come for the Irish.

Commodores advance to NIT finals

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
Newspaper Staff

New York

Billy McCaffrey scored 28 points and Ronnie McMahan 27 and Vanderbilt held Arkansas Jones to 17 points in an 82-76 victory over Kansas State on Monday night in the NIT semifinals.

The Commodores (20-11) used a matchup zone most of the time to frustrate Jones, who scored 62 points last Thursday against Fresno State in the quarterfinals. This time, he was 4-for-11 from the field, including 1-for-6 from 3-point range.

Vanderbilt advanced to Wednesday night’s championship game to play the winner of the other semifinal between Villanova and Siena. McCaffrey and McMahan were too strong offensively for Kansas State (20-13), which was led by point guard Anthony Beane with 19 points.

McCaffrey and McMahan freed themselves for jumpers or went around the defense to score on drives through the lane. When they weren’t scoring, 6-foot-10 center Chris Lawson was. He finished with 14 points and combined with McCaffrey and McMahan to score 46 of Vanderbilt’s 50 points after halftime.

The Commodores outshot Kansas State 57 percent to 38 percent from the field. There were four fouls, but neither team had an unfair advantage.

Jones gave Kansas State a 49-47 lead with his most impressive play of the night, a baseline drive and dunk with 14:08 left in the game. Kansas State twice got the lead up to five, but Vanderbilt came back with an 8-0 run to lead 65-62 with seven minutes left. The Wildcats stayed close with foul shots, but didn’t get the deficit below two in the final 6:12 minutes.

McCaffrey hit two foul shots with 54 seconds left to put Vanderbilt ahead 80-73, but Deryl Cunningham made a 3-pointer with 26 seconds left to cut the deficit to four.

Vanderbilt, however, used a long inbound pass to set up Frank Seckar for an uncontested layup that wrapped up the victory.

The loss ended Kansas State’s 16-game winning streak against non-Big Eight teams, a streak dating to a season-opening loss to Southern Mississippi.

Cunningham finished with 12 points and Demond Davis and Belvis Noland had 10 each for Kansas State, which will play in a consolation game Wednesday.

McCaffrey was the leading scorer in the first half with 13 points. Neither team shot well, neither led by more than five points. The Commodores closed the half with a 17-9 run to lead 32-29 at intermission.

Lights out at Duke for angry Irish

By KATE CRISHAM
Sports Writer

As if facing three nationally ranked teams in one weekend weren't enough, the 11th-ranked Notre Dame women's tennis team found itself battling an even more formidable opponent this weekend—the forces of nature.

An umpire's controversial decision to suspend play against eighth-ranked Duke on Friday due to darkness resulted in a tied match for the Irish. The match was tied 3-3 after the singles match for the Irish. The match was suspended at 2-2 after singles matches when the Duke head coach decided that the lighting on the courts was insufficient for further play.

"Their coach felt that the lights weren't adequate enough, but we thought that they were," said head coach Jay Louderback. "Finally, an umpire said that they weren't sufficient," said Louderback.

No one on the courts was insufficient, so we had to stop playing," said Louderback. "The only thing about that is that our men's team played Duke later under those same lights, and then they were considered sufficient," said Louderback.

No one on the courts was insufficient, so we had to stop playing."

"We really tough," said Tholen. "We definitely won't be intimidated.

"We definitely won't be intimidated."

Wendy Fitz-6-4, 7-5 at number-one singles. Senior Christy Faustmann defeated Kim Schiff 2-6, 6-1, 6-3 at number-five, while senior Lisa Tholen defeated Hilary McKinney 2-6, 7-6, 6-3.

The Irish vented their frustration over the suspended match in a 7-2 win over 30th-ranked North Carolina. Crabtree, Lord, Tholen and freshman Erin Gowen claimed double wins in the victory over the Tar Heels. Crabtree defeated Ariana Cervenka at number-one singles 6-3, 6-1 before teaming with Tholen to defeat Cervenka and Freddy Ellison 6-1, 6-3 at number-one doubles. Lord defeated Ellison 6-4, 6-3 at number-two singles.

The luck of the Irish ran out on Sunday against Wake Forest, however, as they lost 4-5 against the 26th-ranked Deacons.

"It was a very tough match," said Louderback. "It's much better to play the more competitive teams."

"We can compete with anyone in the country," he said.

"We definitely won't be intimidated."

Sherri Vitale was sick with the flu." We didn't play tentatively at all, and the five matches we lost were real close," he said.

"Wake Forest just played really tough," said Tholen. "We lost four three set matches, and we could have won just as easily as we lost.

Both Louderback and his team are pleased with their progress so far.

"We're playing really well right now," said Tholen. "Even though we lost, we have our heads up.

"I think we're in pretty good shape for the end of the year," she said.

"We've been playing a lot of tough teams, and we've been playing real well against them," said Louderback. "It's much better to play the more competitive teams.

"We can compete with anyone in the country," he said.

"We definitely won't be intimidated."

Irish upset Duke, sweep matches in Carolina
By PHIL LANCER
Sports Writer

The 16th-ranked Notre Dame men's tennis team solidified its reemergence as a national collegiate tennis powerhouse this weekend, with two 4-3 upset squeakers over No. 6 Duke and No. 21 North Carolina. "After coming so close so many times to grab one, it feels fantastic to close the deal," commented Notre Dame head coach Bob Baylis, who has seen his team end up on the losing end of too many 4-3 matches lately. The two major wins were made a reality with clutch performances by sophomore Jason Pun at the No. 6 singles slot. The first of the two terrific showings by Pun took place last Friday when the Irish faced the Blue Devils. Pun's teammate and Irish captain, fifth-year senior Andy Zurcher, had just upset No. 6 Chris Pressley, a pere-nial favorite to win the NCAA's, by the score 6-4, 3-6, 6-3. It soon became clear that Friday's match-up would be decided by the outcome of a battle in the number-six singles slot. In a match that took six hours, Pun defeated Duke freshman Sven Koehler 6-7, 6-3, 7-6, 6-4, 4-6, 3-6, to clinch the win over the sixth-ranked Blue Devils. "We're not talented enough to completely overwhelm everybody," stated Coach Baylis, "but we have enough courage and tenacity so no one can beat us without a struggle." This weekend's unlikely hero, Jason Pun, proves that we don't have any soft spots in our lineup," he added. "The bottom half of the lineup was simply outstanding." The Irish didn't have long to celebrate before facing No. 21 North Carolina on Sunday. Despite Zurcher's 6-4, 6-2 loss to nineteenth-ranked David Caldwell, the Irish were able to pick up four singles wins from freshman phenom Ryan Simme (6-1, 7-6), sophomores Mike Sprouse (6-4, 6-1), and John Jay O'Brien (6-4, 6-1) and, to once again clinch the Irish victory, Pun fought for a 6-1, 4-6, 6-3 win. Senior Todd Wilson was upset in a 6-2, 6-3, 6-3 match, and the doubles teams went 1-2 with senior Allan Lopez and partner Ryan Simme providing the sole win, but the Irish had already captured their second consecutive upset.

Holtz speaks at St. Ed's Forum

If Lou Holtz is still woozy from the topsy-turvy 1993 football season and the loss of four assistant coaches, he put on a good act last night's at St. Edward's Hall Forum. Holtz, who spoke in the hall chapel to accommodate the large crowd, gave a preview of the 1994 edition of Irish football while telling stories and addressing many concerns on the minds of fans. Holtz glowed when asked about the prospect of Barry Alvarez coaching the Irish when Holtz leaves. Alvarez, currently coach at St. Edward's Hall Forum.

"We lost the starters and their backups. We lost six players overall. That's hurting our progress so far," Holtz said.

"To compensate, offensive line coach Joe Moore has moved Leahy to right tackle, a move that has presented quite a challenge for the Yakima, WA native. "Playing tackle is a lot of work," Leahy said. "The pass rushers are a lot faster on the outside."

His efforts to fit this adjustment have kept him practicing his footwork and technique long after practice has ended on numerous occasions this spring. Along with Leahy's switch to tackle, Notre Dame's coaching staff has been getting a look at freshmen Mike Doughty and Chris Clewenger at tackle and sophomores Jeremy Akers and Will Lyell at guard. The amount of experience this squad has, however, does not compare with offensive lines of previous years. But Leahy remains confident. "Coach Moore's philosophy is that he picks the five best linemen and they get the playing time," he continued. "It will all come together in the end. It always does."

"We didn't just lose our starters," he continued. "We lost the starters and their backups."

Holtz talked first about the probable starters for next fall. His praise fell first on the linebacking corps, which has a new system to digest with new defensive head Bob Davey. "The most pleasant surprise of the spring has been Jeremy Sample," said Holtz. "He has been playing outstanding." Sample saw time late last season at outside linebacker.

Holtz also highlighted the play of Bertrand Berry, a six-foot-three, 230 pound outside linbacker who bench presses 420 pounds and runs the 40-yard dash in 4.5 seconds. "The bad news is he doesn't have a younger brother," said Holtz, poking fun at the other probable starter in the interior, Justin Goheen.

Junior guard Ryan Leahy will be looked to for leadership in next year's inexperienced offensive line. The loss of senior stand-outs Tim Ruddy and Todd Norman leaves many question marks for coming season. Leahy's switch to tackle, Notre Dame from 1941-43 and from 1946-53, capturing four national favorite to win the NCAA's, by the score 6-4, 3-6, 6-3. It soon became clear that Friday's match-up would be decided by the outcome of a battle in the number-six singles slot. In a match that took six hours, Pun defeated Duke freshman Sven Koehler 6-7, 6-3, 7-6, 6-4, 4-6, 3-6, to clinch the win over the sixth-ranked Blue Devils. "We're not talented enough to completely overwhelm everybody," stated Coach Baylis, "but we have enough courage and tenacity so no one can beat us without a struggle." This weekend's unlikely hero, Jason Pun, proved that we don't have any soft spots in our line-up, he added. "The bottom half of the lineup was simply outstanding." The Irish didn't have long to celebrate before facing No. 21 North Carolina on Sunday. Despite Zurcher's 6-4, 6-2 loss to nineteenth-ranked David Caldwell, the Irish were able to pick up four singles wins from freshman phenom Ryan Simme (6-1, 7-6), sophomores Mike Sprouse (6-4, 6-1), and John Jay O'Brien (6-4, 6-1) and, to once again clinch the Irish victory, Pun fought for a 6-1, 4-6, 6-3 win. Senior Todd Wilson was upset in a 6-2, 3-6, 6-3 match, and the doubles teams went 1-2 with senior Allan Lopez and partner Ryan Simme providing the sole win, but the Irish had already captured their second consecutive upset.
