Panel discusses race relations, barriers

By ROSSANDRA D'ALESSANDRO

According to some, race relations and Multicultural issues have never been topics of critical importance to the predominately white undergraduate population at Notre Dame. But the small forum gathered in the Grace Hall Pit yesterday evening revealed students of all backgrounds who share a deep concern for improving minority life on campus.

Out of an undergraduate student body of approximately 8,000, there are 500 Hispanics, 330 Asian-Americans, 225-250 African Americans, and 40 Native Americans. Many feel that this lack of representation of non-majority students has led to a general apathy towards racial issues at Notre Dame.

Organized by Grace Hall's diversity commission, Brie Don- ley, the panel was composed of four students of different racial backgrounds. The panelists were sophomores Michelle Weis of Carnegie Hall, Dwuan Simon and Todd Leahy of Grace Hall, and junior Manuel Zamarripa of Grace Hall. During the hour-long discussion, the panelists offered their personal opinions on four questions asked by moderator Maria Puentes, assistant director of Multicultural Student Affairs.

"Racial issues have had a huge impact on my life at Notre Dame," said Wong, the only female Asian-American panelist present at yesterday's forum. "Before coming here, I had never been asked specifically by people I'd just met. What country are you from?" All agreed that minority discrimination exists in Notre Dame's academic community. "As a Mexican-American, I am definitely not in the majority here," Zamarripa said. "I am very aware of my skin color in class. I'm super-sensitive — not paranoid, but very aware — of the way I may appear to my peers in classroom situations," he said.

As a chemical engineering major, I always feel like people don't think I should be in the classes I am," Simon explained. "I don't know if it's because I'm the only black person in my chemical engineering classes, but I'm always being asked, 'Why are you here in this class?' "Why did you choose this major?" I'm intimidated to talk to my professors sometimes because I don't know if they want to help me or want me to get out of their class," he said.

Both Simon and Zamarripa suggested that traditional social functions of the University, such as SBYEs, are often seen as non-inclusive to minorities.

"I don't feel like there is any social function at Notre Dame for me," Simon said. "I'm a dance-type, party-type person, but here I often spend my free time at the ends with only one or two friends," explained Simon.

The final issues addressed by the panel were the programs that present the opportunity to help break down racial barriers on campus and as new options for the future.

"I think it's great that there is so much being sponsored by those sponsored by HAOS (Hispanic American Organization), ISO (International Student Organization), AAA (Asian-

*-machine gun and artillery fire rocked this Central African country today as rebels and government troops fought for control of the capital.

After a week of fighting, the army was reportedly running low on ammunition.

Waiting on 100,000 desperate refugees carrying their belongings on their backs streamed out of the city ahead of the ethnic warfare.

Foreigners already have nearly completed theirodus from this small Central African country.

In one of the most dramatic evacuation maneuvers, a heavily armed column of Belgian troops rescued 18 foreigners from the Nairobi psychiatric hospital north of the airport.

As the convoy arrived, 500 Tutsi refugees camped in one of the compound's buildings rushed out with their hands up, pleading for help.

But they were left behind, along with 200 more refugees living in the capital.

The Belgians only had room for 18 foreign­ers — five brothers and two nuns of the Belgian Charlie order, along with a mentally disturbed Italian woman, two other Belgians and their families.

The hospital and adjacent convent had been besieged since Tuesday night by Hutu gangs armed with clubs.

Model, r ocker to split after nine years

Billy Joel and Christie Brinkley are separating after nine years of marriage, CNN reported Wednesday. The supermodel and her singer-songwriter husband sent a joint statement to Mitchell Fink, a People magazine columnist who confirmed CNN's "ShowBiz Today" segment.

Further details were not immediately available. Calls from The Associated Press to their representatives late Wednesday were not returned.

The couple has an 8-year-old daughter, Alexa Ray Brinkley, 40, served a serious helicopter crash earlier this month, while "bellying" with winds near Telluride, Colo. Joel, 44, responded to a concert in Kansas City the next day to accompany his wife back to Long Island oceanfront estate, outside New York.

Reputed mobster gunned down

Gumens burst into the apartment of a reputed gangster drug boss and killed the man and his wife in bed, the latest murder in a mob war that has left Russian criminal gangs flourished in the chaos that followed the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991, and blackmails, car bombings, hijackings, and holdups have become nearly routine as "mafya" groups carve up their turf.

Mobsters have hijacked its way into Russia's emerging business world, killing dozens of businessmen in the last year and extorting millions of dollars through protection rackets. With the stakes rising, organized crime groups increasingly are targeting each other. Avtandil Chkheidze, a 35-year-old ethnic Georgian, was killed at 7 a.m. Tuesday along with his wife by gumens who fired automatic weapons, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

Their child was shot in the arm but survived.
Lecture examines women's movement

By LESLIE FIELD
News Writer

The women's movement should be viewed in a different light, according to Sue Tolleson-Rinehart, professor of political science at Texas Tech University.

She cited recent characterizations of feminists, including Rush Limbaugh's attacks on "feminazis" and Oliver North's criticism of feminists during his campaign for Senator of Virginia as examples of media stereotyping of feminists.

In her lecture Wednesday afternoon, Tolleson-Rinehart focused on America's preoccupation with women's roles and gender equality.

"Women's roles tend to have been culturally defined for them," she said. "Women are expected to be caregivers, not lawmakers."

Tolleson-Rinehart claimed that it is the stereotype of the nurturing, listening, caring women that explains why we see more women in chief political positions like governor, mayor and president.

"Diane Feinstein lost her race as a 'symbolic woman.' To be taken seriously, she had to look like a 'presidential' candidate," Tolleson-Rinehart said. "Boxer made up for this by 'bunching at you with physical energy.'"

Tolleson-Rinehart does not see feminism as "dead," as some have claimed it was in the 1980s, but rather as a key issue that will continue to be talked about and played upon in the United States and elsewhere.

She wants to see women in the public sector as well as private sector of politics. She also commented that, "Women who want to talk, the talk better be able to walk the walk."

Deford also attributes the recent problems with Major League Baseball to television. “Baseball is not the national pastime any more, its a local pastime,” Deford said. “It doesn’t get the ratings of football because its not just once a week, but you can’t dismiss a sport that can draw about 40,000 people a night to see a game and have three million people attend minor league games a year.”

In his closing remarks, Deford offered some advice to aspiring sportswriters.

“It is important to have a wide berth of interest; to have knowledge about many other subjects and be able to apply those to sports. "Just read and write and take any job you are offered.”

Japanese near choice of new Prime Minister

By BRAVEN SMILLIE
Associated Press

TOKYO

Japan’s fractious ruling coal­
tion, which nearly fell apart af­ter the prime minister an­nounced he was quitting, near­ed agreement today on a candidate to replace him: For­eign Minister Taisanom Hata.

Parliament was expected to vote early next week on a suc­cessor for Prime Minister Morito Hiro Hata, who threw Japanese politics into confusion last week by saying he would resign to take responsibility for an emerging financial scandal.

If the left-leaning and conser­vative factions in Hosokawa’s coalition can stay together and preserve their majority, Hata probably will win the vote.

Although he belongs to the coalition’s more conservative faction and was once a member of the opposition Liberal Demo­cratic Party, Hata has champi­oned the promised reforms that formed the coalition’s main ap­peal to scandal­weary voters. Hata, 58, heads the Japan Renewal Party, and has been elected to the powerful lower house of Parliament nine times. He serves simultaneously as deputy prime minister.

Activist discusses history, goals of Greenpeace

By ZOE MARIN
News Writer

Christopher Childs

The past and present ecological problems along with the many misconceptions about Greenpeace were the issues Greenpeace activist Christopher Childs addressed last night. The lecture was animated with a slide show as part of Earth Week.

Environmental issues concerning energy waste and production, as well as protecting forests and animals are the primary concerns of the Greenpeace organization, according to Childs. "A lot of people associate us with saving whales," Childs said, "We're not trying to protect one particular species. We're trying to protect an entire ecosystem.

Greenpeace was founded in 1971 by a small group in Vancouver, Alaska in protest to nuclear testing being conducted by the United States. "They had an idea, a way to take a stand on an issue that they felt needed attention," Childs explained.

The small group never quite made it to their destination, but when they returned to Vancouver, they were well received. "They thought a lot of people would laugh at them," said Childs, "Instead, so many people were encouraged and inspired by them."

The two main goals of the Greenpeace organization are to encourage nonviolence and to bear witness to the truth. Childs said that these basic fundamental goals were modeled after similar ideals from the Quaker society. "Things change for the better when people with commitment make them change," said Childs.

One way Greenpeace employs this ideal of nonviolence is by hanging various signs on anything from skyscrapers to Mount Rushmore and the Statue of Liberty. "We like to climb and hang big signs for everyone to see," Childs said.

In revolt to Dupont's use of CFCs, a dangerous chemical that not only eats away the ozone layer, but also increases the greenhouse effect, Greenpeace hung a large sign on a water tower that advertised the corporation. The sign resembled a giant blue ribbon, awarding Dupont first place for polluting the earth.

Another popular tactic for nonviolence involves literally jumping in front of large whaling ships or holding on to the bow of a navy ship stocked with nuclear weapons. "Our motto is 'Be in the way,'" said Childs.

One particular member of Greenpeace went as far as boarding a Japanese whaling ship and handcuffing herself to the harpoon gun in order to 'be in the way.'" Childs said that Japan and Sweden are the only two countries disbelieving an international law which bans the whaling of great whales.

Although some of the work is risky, some of it is also illegal. In the past, Greenpeace activists, including Childs, have been arrested for trespassing. One particular New York judge helped Childs and his friends avoid a jail sentence since he admired their work.

Alternative sources of energy are one main way Greenpeace feels the environmental problems can be tackled. Greenpeace's own ship, The Rainbow Warrior, was specially designed to utilize wind power. "We like solar. We like so much we got ourselves some," Childs said.

Greenpeace built a solar-powered studio in which various artists including U2, R.E.M., and the Jesus and Mary Chain recorded and donated tracks towards an album. This album, entitled "Alternative NHG," is currently on sale in record stores.

"The first lesson handled at Greenpeace is do your best, and even though at first it doesn't look like you're succeeding, wait and see what happens," said Childs.

Arafat apologizes for attacks

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

The Palestinian Authority President Yasser Arafat apologized for the recent terrorist attacks on Israeli civilians, saying he was not aware of the activities of his security forces.

Arafat wrote a letter to Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, expressing his regret for the violence and the harm it has caused.

"I express my sincere regret for the violence that the Palestinian security forces in the West Bank and Gaza Strip have committed," Arafat wrote in the letter.

"I have ordered my security forces to step up their efforts to prevent any such incidents," he added.

"I take full responsibility for the security measures taken by my security forces," Arafat said in the letter.

The letter was released by the Palestinian Authority on Wednesday.

Arafat's apology comes as the Israeli government has continued to press for a solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

The Israeli government has demanded that the Palestinian Authority take strong action against the perpetrators of violence.

Israel has been carrying out a series of military operations in the West Bank and Gaza Strip in response to the violence.

The Israeli government has also imposed a blockade on the Palestinian territories, which has caused widespread hardship.

Arafat has been under increasing pressure to address the security issue, as the violence in the region continues to escalate.

The Israeli-Palestinian conflict has been ongoing for more than six decades, with no signs of a peaceful resolution in sight.
Clinton angrily defends his Whitewater stance

Press' angst now part of story

WASHINGTON

President Clinton testily defended his handling of Whitewater questions Wednesday, saying what he said were suggestions that he "stop being president and do my homework" and to "do my best to answer the questions asked of me.

"Maybe you have total and complete recollection of every question that might be asked of you at any moment of things that happened to you 12, 13, 14 years ago," Clinton said icily.

"Maybe you could give your tax records up for 17 years and at the moment answer any question."

He pledged anew to cooperate with a special counsel investigating the Whitewater affair and to "do my best to give more information to the press."

The issue came up in a question and answer session after his speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

For months, the president has been buffeted by questions about a 15-year-old investment of tax dollars.

"What limits there should be on the use of American tax dollars for abortion overseas."

"A richly exotic story of love and betrayal!"

"Call them..."The Running Felons"...

"We're not just observers, we're participants," he said.

"You once get that kind of power you become subject to the scrutiny of the press."

"A student-run daily newspaper..."

"Pressure to investigate the matter so "I could explain why I don't have my homework.""

"Butterfly's angsty now part of story"

"The story comes to no conclusion, but the public seems to have."

"Maybe you could give your tax records."

"We're not just observers, we're participants," he said.

"Maybe you could give your tax records up for 17 years and at the moment answer any question."

Homosexual literary themes prompt reflection

Dear Editor:

It is as a result of the interest that some of my colleagues showed about the course I introduced last semesters that I am writing this letter. The readings—Questions of Homosexuality in Literature—that I felt encouraged to offer in these remarks publicly. I thought that by doing so, I would help to educate about the contents of the course and its dynamics. They could also serve as possible guidelines for further studies about the representation of same sex desire in sexual-alienating literary discourse.

The course was conceived as a way to approach, intellectual, the issue of homosexuality, and to call attention to hitherto neglected fields of study. I also wanted to raise issues and to create a space for dialogue where gay and lesbian students could relate to experiences they share, and to expose struggles that are more than just sexualities, are not often discussed in the classroom or outside. I thought that, as a gay man, by making subtle analytic use of my own knowledge, research, and experience, I could offer special insights into the subject. I also thought it was time to bring into discussion the much misunderstood topic of homosexuality, especially after the wave of homophobia that had swept the campus the previous semester, generated in part by members of an educated community that prides itself for its sophistication, tolerance and openness.

One of the initial apprehension I had was how to deal with a course that began with Sappho and Plato and ended with "The Kiss of the Spider Woman" some twenty-five centuries later? Soon I discovered that my apprehensions were unfounded, since the inclusion of these two seminal authors proved of paramount importance for several reasons. It helped us to see the difference between the modern attitude towards homosexuality that heterosexual discourse has constructed, and the more sympathetic response to the more expression of homosexual attitudes in words and behavior that characterized the ancient world (Dover "Greek Homosexuality I"). Plato's "Symposium" was particularly valuable because of its presence within the homosexual literary canon. It is one of the few works where some of the authors we studied could see the love of men openly discussed. The "Symposium", moreover, played a formative role in the defense of homosexual love and in the plea for understanding that some of these authors set out to write. Most important, given the context of the course, was to see from this contrast how sexuality is not a given, nor a product of free will, as it is traditionally thought, but rather a social construct, something fluid that can be conducted according to the imperatives of a given society in a given time. Projecting our modern sexual categories backward in time, contrasting our erogenous and homophbic attitude toward guiltless, positive attitude toward sex that characterized the ancient world is such an enlightening experience for most of us in the course.

From Plato we moved on to Sappho's poetry. It was my intention when proposing the course to include lesbian literature as well, even though I knew very little about the subject. I was determined to learn more about the experience as the students taking the course. Moreover, that I wanted to avoid at all costs when proposing a pioneer course like this one was to fall into the trap of reproducing discrimination between gays and lesbians, especially when one of the main aims of the course was to avoid it. The course was very popular. It was difficult when listening to these guiltless songs about lesbian love not to admit the canon passion and the powerful emotional response they generated in modern audiences some twenty-five centuries later. After "the fair Sappho", as Socrates calls this source of erotic wisdom in "Phaedrus", we moved on to the analysis of Shakespeare's "Sonnets" and Whitman's "Calamus" poems. In his poetic "Institution of the Dear Love of Comrades," which we read paying close attention to the passion, Whitman expounds on the male body and to the homosexual context that determines the psychological tension of the poems. Both these poets were particularly interesting for the grandeur of their artistic expression and for the supremacy of human love that they celebrate, regardless of genital details. The study of these two poets was also valuable because it allows us to see the length to which some of their commentators have gone to defend these concocted ideals of our culture from the lens of sexual inversion and the otherness it implies. These commentators do not realize that what seeds explanation is their inherent homosexual, not the ability with which these poets could chart the full variety of human involvement, homosexual desire existing for most of the authors we studied as an integral part of Nature. The way in which some literary critics insist on leading the reader by the hand, protecting us from "evil" with ignorance while doing "good" with insensitivity is truly admirable. They, like everybody else in our culture, have been subject to eons of homophobic machinations that have inevitably conditioned their perceptions. This conditioning led us to talk about the conspiratorial of reticence and the effect it has had in perpetuating the stereotypes about sexualities that are so prevalent among us. And so we moved on across centuries, cultures and national borders, across gender and sexualities, finding confirmation of what some of us knew already and others were finding out: "love can beatas any in / what seems final to every common eye" (John Gay).

With the twentieth century, we "entered the broken world / To trace the visionary company of love," as Hart Crane had put it. It was introduced significantalbly by Oscar Wilde's pained sincerity in "De Profundis." It was particularly revealing to choose Wilde's meditation because of the unprecedented consequences that his trial would have on the formation of the homosexual identity in years to come. John Rosewell has defined its effects conclusively when he remarks that "It is unlikely that at any time in Western history have gay people been the victim of more widespread and vehement intolerance than during the first half of the twentieth century."

CHICAGO Jason Bere scattered four hits in seven innings and Julio Franco homered Wednesday night as the Chicago White Sox beat the New York Yankees 5-3 and stretched their winning streak to four.

Bere (1-0) struck out six and walked two. Paul Assenmacher picked up his first career save as former teammate and Kirk McCaskill finished the loss. The Sox won their fourth straight.

Jim Abbott (1-1) gave up four runs — three earned — and eight hits in 2-2/3 innings as Bere struck out three.

White Sox manager Gene Lamont was ejected by umpire Tim Tschida in the fourth inning for arguing an out call at the dugout.

New York advanced only runner as far as third, but Wade Boggs fanned with Pat Kelly on base in the fifth, ending the inning.

Consecutive doubles by Darrin Jackson and Tony Gwynn Jr. left Chicago ahead in the first. Ron Karkovice and Chuck Stenchever hit back-to-back home runs. Guillen appeared to score as he slid across home, but Karkovice doubled on a wild pitch. Vaughn reached first safely and Greenwell went to third on the play.

Baker called in reliever Steve Soberella and an 0-2 pitch to Vaughn went to a catch. An attempt to score Guillen on the throw back to the plate made it 3-1 going into the second.

The Sox needed two runs in the second for the win.

Rodriguez hit a leadoff double and Greenwell followed him with a sacrifice fly to make it 2-0. White sox reliever Mike Krukow got the win.

The Sox hit 12 home runs against the Indians in this three-game series.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. One night after a humiliating 22-11 loss to Boston, the Kansas City Royals regained some respect.

 Rookie Bob Holman, who has replaced a displaced Nolan Ryan, was Kansas City's designated hitter, hit a two-run homer in the third. Holman, 22, is hitting .277. He was called up from Omaha to give the Royals a 2-1 victory over the Red Sox.

"That's what you dream about, hitting a home run in the bottom of the ninth to win a game," Holman said. "There's no better deal than that. I think the fans were a little down on us after what happened to us last night, and maybe this will show them in the back that we have a good team.

Chicago Cubs' pitcher Greg Maddux gave up a home run on a curveball from Jeff Russell (0-1) after Dave Henderson homered on a 1-2 pitch to startstop John Valentin.

"When I saw it out of my hand, I thought he was behind it," Henderson said of his go-ahead home run. "It had a loop in it, and the hitter picked it up. It didn't have the good trajectory."

Boston starter Aaron Sele, who took no hitter into the seventh inning in his last start in Kansas City on Aug. 28, shut out the Royals for 7-1-3 innings.

Kansas City starter Tom Gorrie was almost as tough as Kansas City's against Johnson added an RBI single in the eighth off Steve Howe.

ATLANTA--Today's multimillion-dollar salaries likely will prevent any of the current crop of players from breaking his career home run record, Hank Aaron says. Aaron was saluted in pre-game ceremonies Wednesday night prior to the San Francisco Giants-Atlanta Braves game honoring the 20th anniversary of Aaron's 715th home run. The accolades included a letter from President Clinton. "Aaron's homer that broke Babe Ruth's record came on April 8, 1974 at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium in the fourth inning against left-hander Al Downing of the Los Angeles Dodgers. Aaron wound up with 755 in his 23-year career. That record will be hard to break, he said during a news conference prior to the on-field ceremonies.

"I think the players of today and I've said this so many times before -- have more athletic ability than those of 20 years ago," said Aaron.

"But the way salaries are now, many are super rich if they play 10 years. The first 13 years of my career I didn't make $100,000 (a season). I was still hungry. "I really don't know how I'd do if I were playing today. The minute my season was over in 1957-58, I'd go to work. I needed that other paycheck."

He said the outstanding players of today "can do most anything but, I can't predict what they'll do."

The week of April 8-15 was designated by Major League Baseball as Hank Aaron Week. Each club playing at home paid tribute to Aaron on April 8. The Braves opened the season on the road and didn't return to Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium until Tuesday night. "Hank Aaron distinguished himself as one of the best players in baseball has ever known," said Clinton's letter in part. "I am delighted to commemorate this event... Best Wishes for a wonderful celebration, Bill Clinton," the letter concluded.

Major League Baseball presented Aaron with a Tiffany statue of himself and a life-sized baseball card. The Braves contributed a $10,000 check to the Hank Aaron Rookie League, an Atlanta baseball league for youngsters.

WHERE ARE ALL THE PERFECT PEOPLE?

Are you looking for perfection? You may wish that you had the perfect grades, the perfect body, the perfect personality, the perfect job, and the perfect mate. Perhaps there is nothing more sought after and nothing less attained than perfection.

There is something healthy about the desire to improve, but our lives can be incredibly frustrating if we think that we, and people around us, must be perfect. Our standards can always be higher than our performance. Perfection, as most people define it, is not all that it is cracked up to be.

It seems to me that "perfect people", if there were such people, would be too intimidating to an imperfect guy like me. Perfect people, if there were such people, would be nearly impossible for me to relate to.

Come to think of it, I do not think I could be friends with a person who is as perfect as I want to be. I do not think that I would want to live or work with perfect people.

The relentless search for what we define as perfection can be a real source of unhappiness. We can spend a vast amount of energy on trying to be beautiful and trying to be with the beautiful people. Deep down, maybe we know that our energy can be better spent.

Jean Vanier, founder of the International LArche Communities for the mentally handicapped, is an example of a person who is trying to give up the relentless search for perfection which is the source of so much unhappiness in the world.

...CONSIDERATIONS

"Beauty exists in every person. If we stop looking for perfection and if we accept the person who is in front of us, we can be aware of some incredible gifts," says Jean Vanier.

Jean Vanier will receive the third Notre Dame Award for international humanitarian service on Monday, April 18, here at the Stepan Center. There will be a prayer service at 7:00 p.m. Jean Vanier will speak at approximately 7:30 p.m. All are welcome!

Notre Dame can seem like a place that awards the most perfect, as the world defines perfect. The Notre Dame Award, which will be presented to Vanier, is one way for Notre Dame to say that perfection, as the world defines it, is not all that it is cracked up to be.

We can spend so much energy on trying to be perfect. We can spend a vast amount of energy on trying to be beautiful and trying to be with the so-called beautiful people. Deep down, maybe we know that our energy can be better spent.

Belles anxious for chance at bid to nationals

By TARA KRULL
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's tennis team begins its quest for a bid to the nationals today when it departs for the Midwest Invitational in Madison, Wisconsin.

The Belles have been anticipating this weekend since the beginning of their season as this will be their only chance to make a statement.

"We have been working on mentally focusing during practices," Cromer said. "This is our only shot for nationals. We need to just go out there and do it."

The top sixteen teams from the Midwest Region are invited to this invitational.

Saint Mary's Tennis Proposed Lineup

Singles
- #1 Singles -- Mary Cosgrove, Sr.
- #2 Singles -- Thayma Darby, Sr.
- #3 Singles -- Andrea Ayres, Jr.
- #4 Singles -- Kate Kozacik, Fr.
- #5 Singles -- Jennifer Kelly, Fr.
- #6 Singles -- Maryse Plum, Jr.
- -- Nancy Sorota, Fr.

Doubles
- #1 Doubles -- Cosgrove/Ayres
- #2 Doubles -- Darby/Robin Hryko, Jr.
- #3 Doubles -- Nancy Waibel, Jr./ Ashley McArdle, Fr.
- #4 Doubles -- Darby/Robin Hryko, Jr.
- #5 Doubles -- Cosgrove/Ayres
- #6 Doubles -- Waibel/Plum, Jr.
- -- Sorota, Fr.

Teams are ranked into two brackets, 1-8 and 9-16. The Belles are in the latter bracket and face the possibility of playing Albion College and Hope College.

Saint Mary's suffered its second loss of the season to Hope last weekend and faces Albion later in its competitive schedule.

Both the teams should pose a challenge for the team.

"We aren't going to let our loss against Hope affect us, should we play them this weekend," she said. "It's also important for us to keep in mind that some of our toughest matches of the season are coming up after this weekend, so we can't let up."

Other teams ranked in the same bracket with Saint Mary's are DePauw University, St. Benedict's College, and the Universities of Wisconsin at La Crosse, Whitewater, and LaCross.

The Belles are scheduled to play their first match on Friday at 10:45 a.m. If they win this match, they will play again later on Friday and once more on Saturday.

The team's opponents are selected by a two-draw format and the tournament is double elimination.

Nevertheless, the Belles have their work cut out for them.

Technically, the top two teams at the invitational's end receive national bids.

However, the chance for an at-large bid is still alive if the Belles make a strong enough showing within their own bracket.

"It is extremely important that we represent Saint Mary's in the best that we can, through both our playing and sportsmanship," Cromer said. "We receive great exposure at this invitational because there are so many coaches and committees there. Everybody sees you."

The players themselves have a good feeling about this weekend as well. Junior Nancy Waibel commented that the Belles' entire line-up is solid.

This weekend is what we've worked for since the beginning of this season," Waibel said. "We are all ready to win."

The Belles earned their invitation to Madison as a result of all their hard work and determination.

They've focused their energies on this weekend when they have the opportunity to show everyone what they're made of, according to senior co-captain Mary Cosgrove.

"I am hoping that this weekend's matches will give our team the opportunity to prove the real talent that exists among our players," Cosgrove said. "We have the skills to win, yet our ability to remain focused on our goals will be the key to our success."

age (.471) on the team behind senior Matt Haas. His speed has also been helpful in the outfield where he has been able to chase down numerous hits to the gaps. Sollmann ranks second among outfielders with 41 putouts and only three errors.

"With my speed, I knew I was going to be a part of the lineup either pinch running or doing other base running," said the Cincinnati, Ohio native.

"I still feel like I haven't shown what I can do out there. I haven't been happy with my defensive play. I have to have the attitude that if I mess up, I mess up and not let one error lead to another error."

Speedy Sollmann stealing spotlight
Freshman steps up to challenges

By JENNY MARTEN
Senior Sports Writer

As a high school senior, he was named the top running back in Ohio after rushing for 2,000 all-purpose yards and leading his team to the Division I state championship game. And in the fall of 1993, Scott Sollmann came to Notre Dame, but he didn’t come to play football.

He came to play baseball for Pat Murphy.

“Why baseball? Why Notre Dame?”

“I guess baseball has always been my number one love. I have always been very successful at football, but it was time to choose one sport,” explained the freshman centerfielder.

“Eventually, I decided that the high school championship game was going to be my last. Notre Dame showed the most interest in baseball. Sollmann’s baseball talent is as considerable as his gridiron talent. The three-time Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) All-American has become a major contributor to the Irish baseball team with his speed on the basepaths and with his scrappy play in centerfield.

The 5-foot-8 lefty is the only freshman on Notre Dame’s roster to have started all 21 games this season. Filling the hole in the outfield created by Eddie Hartwell’s graduation, Sollmann has been a valuable asset for Murphy.

“He is really coming into his own. He has unbelievable speed,” said Murphy. “(Scott) getting on base helps everyone around him.” A watchful eye at the plate moved Sollmann from the last three spots in the batting order to the lead-off spot for the last two spring break games.

In his first week of college baseball, he drew five walks in 21 plate appearances while singling in his first collegiate game and tripling in the fifth game of the break. He also was successful on three-of-four stolen base attempts.

Since then, Sollmann has settled into the number two spot in the lineup and flourished there. His current numbers are testimony to that. In addition to walking 12 times, he’s hitting .361 with 15 runs scored and six runs batted in. A 10-for-13 performance in the four-game series with Xavier boosted his average 112 points.

Although his claim on the two-spot seems secure, Sollmann doesn’t really care where he is in the order.

“It’s easier battering seventh or eighth rather than first or second. It’s the mentality people have. The seventh and eighth batters aren’t supposed to get the hits while the first batters are supposed to be the better hitters,” said Sollmann. “My game plan stays the same no matter where I hit. I’m not an RBI producer. I want to get hits and get on base.”

Sollmann’s speed has been a valuable addition to the Irish offense this year. He leads the Irish with 13 stolen bases and six of his 22 hits have been bunt singles giving him the second best on-base percentage.

Freshman Scott Sollmann has capitalized on his speed and athletic ability to bat .361 this season with 12 walks and six bunt singles.

Softball ready for milestone

By MEGAN McGARTH
Sports Writer

The song remains the same for the Notre Dame softball team.

“Blame it on the Rain.”

Hopefully, nature will cooperate and allow the Irish to play a doubleheader today against Western Michigan in Kalamazoo.

The Irish were scheduled to host DePaul Monday at Ivy Field, but rain early in the day forced the game to be canceled, and Irish coach Liz Miller had to wait for another chance to get her 600th career victory.

While this milestone places Miller among the elite of NCAA coaches, it is not the most pressing thing on her mind.

“To be perfectly honest, I didn’t even know I was close to that number because I don’t really keep track,” Miller said.

Of greater concern to Miller is the high-powered Western Michigan offense, led by South Bend native Stephanie Hendrickson. The junior is currently batting .360, which is tied for sixth best in the NCAA.

“We know they’re going to have a strong offense,” Miller said. “Henderson went 10-for-15 this weekend in a four game series. They can hit and they run very well. Hopefully we will be able to get them to make some mistakes.”

Hoping to stifle the Western Michigan bats will be pitchers Terri Kodata and Joy Battersby. Kodata, the MCC player-of-the-week, is coming off a phenomenal weekend in which she threw a perfect game, a no-hitter, and won another game in a relief appearance. She is second in the NCAA with 11.0 strikeouts per game.

Freshman Batterbys has a 10-4 record and a 1.94 ERA, but more intimidating for tomorrow’s opponent is that the Irish have won the last eight games in which she has started. The Irish have displayed

Seniors honored at basketball awards banquet

In an awards ceremony highlighted by the speech of former Notre Dame basketball captain and NBA All-Star Bill Laimbeer, three seniors were honored at Tuesday night’s annual basketball banquet.

Monty Williams, who closed his athletic career as the No. 12 scorer in Irish basket-ball history with 1,371 points, claimed the National Most Valuable Player Award.

His classmate Carl Cozen, who enters his final season with a 3.114 grade point average as an accounting major, won the St. Joseph Valley Student-Athlete Award.
