A Notre Dame graduate student has been missing since last week, according to St. Joseph County Police. Alexandra Bumbacea, a ninth year graduate student, was last seen on Wednesday, August 24, police said in a press release. Bumbacea, who was originally from Romania, lived at Campus View Apartments, 54585 Irish Way. Police said Bumbacea was depressed and left a suicide note written in Romanian, which was translated for police.

Police described Bumbacea as 5 feet, 10 inches tall with

ID card open new doors for SMC students

This fall for the first time, all Saint Mary's students must carry their student identification cards with them at all times. If they want to enter several of the buildings on campus.

During the summer, Saint Mary's has installed a universal card access system on several commonly used buildings and entry points to the underground tunnels on campus. Specifically, all students will have access to the west door of McCandless, the north door of Holy Cross, and the ramp door of Moreau Hall between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. everyday. The Student Affairs door will be accessible during limited hours Monday through Friday. The tunnels and stairwells to LeMans Hall will be accessible 24 hours a day everyday as will the Holy Cross, Redonka, and Cushion-Lippin Library tunnels. Students will have access to the tunnel leading to Haggard College Center from McCandless Hall from 7 a.m. to 7:15 p.m. everyday. Other members of the Saint Mary's community, such as employees and faculty, will also have restricted card access to these doors, according to director of security, Dick Chlebek.

"Their cards are valid at certain times and certain locations, such as when they are physically at work during normal business hours," said Chlebek.

A similar system has been used in previous years in the stairwells of LeMans Hall and the outside doors of McCandless Hall.

In the past, only residents of LeMans Hall had access to the LeMans stairwells and elevators and McCandless residents had card access to their residence hall at night. Now all students will have access to all of the buildings with the card access system installed regardless of which hall they live in, according to Chlebek.

"It is universal because it benefits from a campus social life students must interact with other students," said Chlebek.

This universal system allows for this interaction if the students choose to. This system was installed to improve personal safety on campus, according to Chlebek. We want to increase security before something happens," he said.

According to Shea Powell, McCandless residence hall director, everyone has been supportive of the system so far.

"We have not had much of a problem of people forgetting their ID's so far and the people that question the card access system are in favor of it when they find out it is designed for better security," she commented.

Sophomore McCandless resident Kim Melvin says she supports the card access system even if she has to think a few steps ahead of the front door to pull her I.D. card.

Saint Mary's is not the only college with this card access system. According to Chlebek, the University of Maryland, University of Southern California as well as Notre Dame.

ND professors speak abroad on technology

Two Notre Dame math professors presented research on topology and logic at the highly prestigious International Congress of Mathematicians last month in Zurich, Switzerland.

Anand Pillay and Stephan Stolz were among 150 scholars from around the world attending the congress by a committee of the International Mathematics Union.

Over 3000 mathematicians from 60 nations were present to speak at the congress by a committee of the International Mathematics Union. Which determined that the papers of the professors was some of the most impressive work done in math over the past four years.

Pillay, a member of the Notre Dame faculty for 11 years, was one of four logicians to present a paper at the conference. Stolz has given speeches around the world, at places from Copenhagen to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"I'm used to giving talks, but I was a little more nervous than usual because this conference was by far the biggest and most prestigious," he said.

Stolz, a topologist, developed the basis of his paper, titled "Manifolds of Positive Scalar Curvature," in 1989, three years after coming to the Notre Dame faculty from the University of Mainz in Germany, and he continued working on the topic over the last five years.

However, Stolz said that his work is not done.

"It is not like all the questions are answered," he said, "the inquiry continues. There is no definite end."

Stolz's work began about four years ago. His paper discussed a solution to the problem of classifying arbitrary topics and finding rational solutions in equations.

"I hope that my work gives more connection between logic and other areas of math," Pillay said.

"I hope that it generates more excitement in the field of logic, which will broaden the scope for people to work on," he said.

Victoria's Real Secret, a Notre Dame campus band will perform from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. tonight on the Haggard College Center terrace, according to Saint Mary's, president, president of the Student Activities Board (OSA).

The event, which will include free ice cream, is one of many fall semester features organized in part by the Saint Mary's College of Saint Mary's Student government, said Conrie.

"We at SAB are especially excited about, 'Twilight Tailing,' which is a new idea for us," she said.

The event will be made up of a full day of activities beginning at noon on September 9, the day before the Michigan football game. In addition to free submarine sandwiches being offered at the picnic, students will have the opportunity to participate in such activities as human bowling, the Veltercwall, volleyball, tie-dying, receiving fake tattoos and canoe races around Lake Marian," Conrie said.

"Following the pep rally from 9 p.m. to 11 p.m. will be a bonfire on the Saint Mary's soccer field and the music of, 'Global Village,' a well-known band around the Michigan State University Campus," Conrie said.

Other future events making a comeback this semester consist of Student Activities Night on September 7, college relationship speaker Ellen Goodblatt, Murder Mysteries which are based on audience interaction and the Crack-Ups Comedy series which will be held on a monthly basis.

In addition to the various student organizations, the Student Academic Council, lead by president Melissa Peters, has helped to schedule the renowned poetess Maya Angelou on October 6.

"We have also planned to continue our 'Eye on Alumnus' series which features selected alumnae in lectures geared toward current Saint Mary's students because we feel it is important for the women here to hear first hand about what these graduates have accomplished after receiving their degrees from Saint Mary's," Peters said.

Throughout the 1993-94 school year, Peters also helped to design a book of past senior comprehensives to be an aide to undergraduates, as well as an introductory course for Saint Mary's freshmen which would focus on time management skills, note taking and an introduction to campus activities.

"The Student Academic Council hopes to establish both of these within the next few years. Recently, we have put together a pamphlet entitled, '150 Fun Facts for Freshmen,' which includes little known facts about the College and we hope to be in the mailboxes within the next two weeks," Peters said.

"Throughout the year, one of my main goals is to improve the students' social space around the campus," said Peters, Student Body President Noha El-Ganzouri.

"We are planning to look at the current space, how it is used and hopefully take advantage of some of it in a way that will meet the needs of the students. I see their needs as definite priorities this year," El-Ganzouri said.

"At the reggae concert on August 28, I was excited to see such a fantastic turnout from both schools and my hope for the year is for the continued success of the various activities offered to both Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students here at SMC," said Conrie.
When I felt those old familiar South Bend screeches and throat symptoms at the sound of my alarm clock this morning, I just knew that it was going to be one of those cough drop kind of days.

After realizing that those items hadn't even been on my Venture list last fall, withdrawals is supposed to be months away— I hit the streets, and on my alarm clock, my nose would stop running in nine more minutes.

The的味道 was overwhelming as I slipped into my cozy pink slippers and headed for the elevator. I was already sick enough and wasn't going to do anything to be exposed to all of the other germs roaming around the infirmary.

After filling out my paperwork, I was directed to go directly to the infirmary. "Do not pass go," is my mom—when I'm really desperate, I have to go to the infirmary and be poked, prodded, and gagged by anyone but my favorite nurses. I have the chunky dining hall soup would never be worse?

U.S. prepares for showdown with the Vatican

By RITA BEAMISH

WASHINGTON

The Clinton administration is girding for a showdown with the Vatican over abortion while struggling to keep the spotlight on global population and development at an upcoming United Nations conference.

Adding to the complications was growing opposition from conservative Muslims who see the conference as a threat by affluent Western societies to their cultural beliefs.

The administration has played a lead role in shaping the International Conference on Population and Development set to begin Monday in Cairo. Vice President Al Gore will lead a 45-member delegation representing the United States.

Most of the 155-plus nations and some 1,200 non-governmental groups sending delegates agree on many aspects of an aggressive voluntary blueprint for curbing population growth in both poor and rich countries.

Despite what they regard as remarkable accord on goals like improving women's status and integrating population and development strategies, U.S. officials anticipate a heated fight over still-to-be-decided sections on abortion as a reproductive health option.

However, Undersecretary of State Tim Wirth said Wednesday that compromise language appears likely on another contentious front — providing family planning information and care to adolescents.

"Our position is that everything should be done to avoid abortion," said Wirth, the administration's point man on population issues.

The United States, nonetheless, will continue to insist that "if a pregnancy gets into trouble, a woman ought to have access to the full range of reproductive health care services," including abortion, Wirth said.

"They will object to that," Wirth said of the Vatican. Vatican delegate Bishop James McHugh, the bishop of Camden, N.J., said he hopes for language clarification or omission that will allow the church to support the document.

But, McHugh added, "We don't have a way in which we can accept a little bit of abortion."

The United States has sought to shift attention away from the controversy as political analysts eye the potential of the large Catholic swing vote for the 1996 presidential election.

"This is not a conference about abortion. This is a conference about the urgency of population stabilization and economic development," Wirth said. "Unless we stabilize the global population, almost every hope for economic development, political stability and maintenance of the integrity of the ecosystems will be severely threatened."
Mayors push for quick implementation of bill

By SONYA ROSS

WASHINGTON

Mayors urged President Clinton on Wednesday to swiftly implement the newly passed $30 billion anti-crime bill so they can begin hiring police officers in hopes of cutting urban crime before 1996.

The U.S. Conference of Mayors put together a three-member task force to prod Congress and the Clinton administration along as they appropriate money for cities to use in anti-crime efforts. It comprises Denver Mayor Wellington Webb, Louisville Mayor Jerry Abramson and Paul Helmke, mayor of Fort Wayne, Ind.

Knoxville, Tenn., Mayor Victor Ashe, president of the conference, said unless money is made available quickly, cities won’t be able to adequately recruit and train new officers in order to put them on patrol next year. Most cities, he said, have an average training period of six to eight months.

"Under the best of circumstances, it's going to be a year. We sure don't want it to take a year and a half," Ashe said.

Clinton is expected to sign the measure sometime after Labor Day.

Ashe said the mayors hope Clinton will treat their need for crime-fighting help as he would treat federal aid to areas struck by disaster.
Man shot outside NBC studio in New York

By TIM SULLIVAN

NEW YORK
A man armed with an assault rifle drove to a busy tourist hub in Rockefeller Center just as workers were going home Wednesday and shot another man in the back outside the "Today" studio.

The gunman was arrested moments later and the victim was listed in serious condition at a hospital.

Witnesses said the man whipped out the gun from under a long coat and opened fire. "He got back to his car so cool, calm and collected, and started backing up as if nothing had happened," said Bob Crofts, who was at Rockefeller Center for a meeting with a colleague, Dan Brennan.

Two police officers nearby ran over and "within two seconds, they were on top of him with guns drawn," Brennan said. Brennan and Crofts said the gunman at first refused to get out of the car, but finally surrendered to the officers.

The gunman was identified as Manny Tager, 46, of Charlotte, N.C. Police had no motive in the shooting.

An AK-47 assault weapon was recovered by police at the shooting scene, outside the glass-encased studio of NBC's morning television show and near the skating rink where a huge Christmas tree rises every year.

Tourists loaded with shopping bags and people going home from work stopped to look as police sought witnesses.

"It's just a sign of the times," said Judith Conney, adding, "We're from Chicago, so we know about these things."

The boy has a tattoo on his arm that says "I love Mommy" and is nicknamed "Yummy" for his love of cookies. He stands about 4-foot-8 and weighs 68 pounds.

Police say he is a veteran felon. Now they suspect he is an 11-year-old killer.

The boy is being sought in connection with two shooting sprees Sunday that left one teen-ager dead and two injured.

But Cook County Public Guardian Patrick Murphy said Wednesday that boy is almost as much a victim as those who took the bullets. "He has had a horrible, horrible life," Murphy said.

The sixth-grader has a thick file in the juvenile court system, where over nine years, he has been both victim and accused, Murphy said.

According to Murphy's records, the boy was removed from his mother's home after investigators found cigarette burns on his neck, back and buttocks, scratches on his face and abdomen, and cord marks on his legs.

He and his brother were placed in the custody of his grandmother, who Murphy said provided no discipline.

"She let them do whatever they wanted," Murphy said. "He and his brother both engaged in pretty outrageous criminal activity."

The grandmother has an unlisted phone number and could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

In the past two years, the boy was prosecuted at least eight times for felonies including robbery, car theft, arson and burglary.

Sage advice for college life

I have often been asked, as one “thick skinned” at Notre Dame, what young men and women arriving at Notre Dame for their first year should expect. Often, the most dreadful fear is that we could be cardboard ecclesiastics, while at the same time, some of the gayest prophets are doomed to be extinguished in a sea of blackness and suffering. Tempest fugit! I may be just an impractical old cleric, but I have seen enough autumns pass beneath the shadow of our golden dome to give a few hints.

• The University makes quite a squawk about its rules and regulations, but have no doubt, it’s all for show. With an affectation ofwink of its motherly eye, Notre Dame actually expects you to follow rules, as few rules here and there; if they didn’t they wouldn’t have the sort of spirit that made us America’s foremost Catholic University.

• Likewise with the University Honor Code—a snitch is a snitch here too, make no mistake, and the evangelists “b Cobbles” and “scoffers” come in now and then. See for yourself.

• One of the grandest fixtures on the Notre Dame campus is our beloved Father Hesburgh, for whom the library is named and who occupies a spacious office on the thirteenth floor. If you happen to run across this august and gregarious man, make sure to call him by his nickname, “Fat.” There is nothing he so loves as being addressed this way from a distance by the latest bearer of the Notre Dame torch.

• Another ND luminary famous for his accessibility is Coach Holtz. Either of his nicknames—“four eyes” or “old black and man”—will earn you the eaying affection so famous in gridiron lore. Nota bene: try a few choice jests about “Under the Asiatic Dome” or last year’s season (and championship hope) ending less than puny.

Josh Ozersky

Boston College: Coach Holtz is famous for “rolling with the punches” and likes nothing better than a good exchange with a new student.

• Notre Dame football is famous across the land, of course, but few away from South Bend know it as well as the pranksmile. As generations, running backs or fullbacks who have fumbled a ball or missed a tackle have had to endure the same “bodily” treatment as the first-year students—that is, having their expansive bellies whipped with a rolled-up magazine while the student yells “Nice game! Bubby Bubby!” and prepares for a second stroke. In the days of Frank Leahy and Ara Parseghian, this tradition was done with a rotten can similar to those used in Singapore, but times have changed. Make sure to exercise this custom on the buckskin, most intimidating player you can find; as often as not, they are the best-humored. At home, games alcohol is prohibited in the stadium, but you can be sure a hip flask of Irish whiskey, proffered to the ticket agent in exchange for a good place in line, will find a warm welcome.

• Notre Dame’s professoriate, too, likes a bit of sport and depends on the incoming freshman to supply it. Eminent instructors like Alvaro McIntyre of the Philosophy department or Charles Rice of the Law School often count as a loss in the week they are not the target of a well-placed water balloon or a joy-buzzer hand-shake. Only freshmen are allowed to address these men by their first names, however, so take advantage of the privilege while it lasts.

• Lastly, although the University’s drug and alcohol policy is a strict one, Notre Dame tends to look the other way on special occasions. On days after a big win in football, the smell of a thickly-rolled “blunt” walking through the air may be your only sign of gridiron success. And, although this may be considered somewhat more daring, the addition of such “designer hallucinogens” as MDMA in your drinks in the punchbowl at a University-sponsored dance is sure to make your name into the ski-rn.

The experience of learning and living in a Catholic environment as seeped with tradition as Notre Dame’s is a unique one. It is my deepest wish that you enjoy it and regret it to the fullest. I hope these tips will help you to a holler, more fulfilling, freshman year and I encourage all stu­dents to refrain from contacting me if they do not. My prayers are with you.

The Fighting Irish Marching Band prepares for the Northwestern game in Chicago on September 3

The Band of the Fighting Irish

By THERESA ALEMAN

Her loyal sons (and daughter) will soon be marching out to victory once again. The Fighting Irish Marching Band is keyed up and ready for the 1994 football season. Under the direction of Dr. Luther Swayzee, the band has a "blow-out" season planned.

After rigorous tests of musical and athletic skill, the band has been narrowed to 307 members. A record group of 240 freshmen auditioned for band membership last Thursday. A record group had practiced three to four times a day during camp. It's definitely a lot of work and it does take up a lot of time, but it's worth it," Dini said.

Practicing at least two hours a day, every day for the entire season, makes for a pretty tight-knit group of friends according to Jennifer Radwan, a junior clarinet player. "We're all very excited about this year. According to Jennifer Radwan, the band is truly one of the best experiences of college. I've met great friends that I'm sure I'll still be in contact with after college, and they've become my family away from home.

When fans see the band rush out for pre-game, they see only a few minutes of the band, but they do not see all of the work that has gone into only a few minutes of music. Although Putt didn't need to try out, he was ready for a National Championship year and the band will be too!" said Jill Albanese, a junior clarinet player and the band's secretary.

Behind the Scenes: My Life as a Band Member

"The University of Notre Dame proudly presents its marching band. The Band of the Fighting Irish!"

I remember my first game day. After sitting in the student section for a year, the band was something I had wanted to be a part of since fourth grade. I didn't have the courage to do it my freshman year. After finally getting a chance to represent the University of Notre Dame and get the unique opportunity to march into Notre Dame Stadium I was nervous than I had been for tryouts.

I think that I can speak for many people in saying that the band is truly one of the best experiences of college. I've met great friends that I'm sure I'll still be in contact with after college, and they've become my family away from home.

During the audition process, and for the new freshmen that were to arrive the next evening.

The next day, the new members were thrown right in with the returning members in the march to Stepan Field. For the next four days, old and new members alike bought the weather, the boredom, absolute exhaustion. But most of all, I'll never feel the rush of adrenaline and the sense of pride as I came trotting out of the tunnel to represent the University of Notre Dame and its tradition.

To be a band member means playing an active role in a tradition that is over 100 years old. Every person that showed up at the final marching auditions wanted to be a part of this tradition, and all deserve credit for going through with the auditioning process.

A.K.A. THE BJ-200e

I had just polished off a crumbcake doughnut and a steamin' cup of Joe when the phone rang.

A woman's voice spoke, "Is this Nick Canon, Print Detective?" I answered in the affirmative.

She told me she had a lot on her mind and even more on her desktop. A phone, a computer, a keyboard, a mouse pad, a scanner, and a personal printer that in her words, "was as big and slow as a dinosaur."

"Not good," I said. Then she got real serious, "I run a fast-paced small business. I'm looking for a printer that matches that description and I don't have time to deal with a lot of hype. From the tone of her voice, I could tell she was running out of room and running out of patience. So I asked, "You know 'Little Swifty' (A.K.A The Canon BJ*200e)?" She laughed, and said, "Maybe if you hum a few bars."

"I like a lady with a sense of humor, so I told her I'd meet her at her favorite computer store in 20 minutes. I arrived, and immediately spotted her in the printer section. She looked the part. Successful, business-like. Except her eyes were a little glazed.

"There are hundreds of printers in the naked city," I said. She turned around, "Nick?" I nodded and said, "Let me introduce you to a friend of mine, Little Swifty." Her eyes lit up as we walked over to the BJ-200e. "It's so sleek, so compact," she whispered. I hit the print sample button. Her eyes lit up again, and she continued to whisper, "It's so fast, and the output so crisp and clean." I didn't want to name drop, but I told her a couple of pros over at PC Digest found the BJ-200e to be 20% faster than its closest competitor, and offering the best quality."

"The only thing left was the price, and before she could even ask I told her, "It's a steal." Yep. She was happy all right. Come to think of it, so was I. As we parted I wrote down a number she could call if she had more questions, 1-800-848-4123.

And then, I looked in her big beautiful eyes and told her what I tell everyone, "Before you buy a printer, investigate."

Women’s volleyball to use experience, new talent to dominate

By DOMINIC AMOROSA

After an exhilarating ride through the NCAA tournament last season, the Irish found themselves in the Midwest regional final against powerhouse Penn State. The Irish fell to the Nittany Lions in three games, but the groundwork was established for a return trip to the nation’s elite.

“We’re better at this point of the season than last year,” said head coach Debbie Brown. “It’s a similar team, but we’re looking to improve.”

The Irish return seven letter winners from last year’s squad and boast one of the finest freshmen crops in the country.

Senior co-captains Nicole Coates and Christy Peters (see story) will anchor the young team from the outset.

“Last year showed us what we’re capable of doing,” said Peters.

“We have set some high goals, but there’s no added pressure to duplicate last year’s performance,” commented Brown. “Our preseason has gone well and it should be fun to actually play against other competition.”

The strength of the Irish lies in the two outside hitter positions. Peters, Coates, junior Brett Hensel and sophomores Jenny Birrkn and Kristina Ervin, as well as freshman phenom Angie Harris will pound the opposition with kills.

“We will rely most on our outside hitters,” said Brown. “That is the position where we have the most depth.”

Besides Coates and Peters the outside hitters boast some solid credentials. Hensel can play any position on the court and is essential to the serving rotation. Birrkn and Ervin both made the MCC newcomer team last season and Birrkn was also the newcomer of the year. In addition, Harris comes in as one of the most highly touted freshmen in the country.

“The early part of the season will be important for us to establish some consistency and start building confidence for our younger players,” explained Brown.

In order to use the outside hitters to the maximum, the Irish will rely on junior setter Shannon Tuttle.

“Shannon has done a great job of controlling the team,” said Brown. “She has an advantage of being in the system for two years and her mental preparation is better.

Middle blockers Jen Briggs and Jen Rosse will support the net for the Irish. Rosse is the tallest Irish player at 6-2.

The Irish must contend with a tough schedule as well as the lofty expectations placed on the program. After opening tonight against Valparaiso, the Irish will host the Shamrock Invitational this weekend.

Other national tournaments on the schedule include a trip to the Colorado Coors Tournament in Boulder, as well as the Big Four Invitational in Louisville.

“This team believes they can be very good, and they’ll work their tails off to make us good.”

CAMPUS MINISTRY...

...CONSIDERATIONS...

A STORY OF FAITHFULNESS, OF BLOOD, AND OF NEW BEGINNINGS

By now, we have greeted everyone with the famous words “How was your summer?” and have told everyone how ours was in response to the same question.

We are delighted, even exhilarated, to be back on campus and to be with our friends again.

We are happy to be back on what has now become “our turf.”

their first match of the Mideast Regional.

In a match that lasted over three hours, the Irish defeated the Gophers in five games, as Peters had a game high 26 kills and Coates had a career high 26 digs.

Both Coates' and Peters' names fill the record books. For a single season, Coates set a record in 1993 for service aces with 46, a category in which she is also in fifth place for the 1992 season with 39.

Her serving performance in 1992 also puts her at the top of the single-season ace average list, followed only by her performance in '93. Peters set single season records for kills averaged per game with 4.3, and her 524 kills make her second on the Irish single-season kill list. She also set a record with 500 digs, averaging 4.3 in 122 games played. As far as Irish career records, Peters is second in digs, third in kills and fifth in service aces, followed in sixth place by fellow captain Coates.

With one season still left, it would not be surprising to see one of the talented captains of 1994 take over one or more of these categories. Both Coates and Peters are very aware of the task that lies ahead of them. As far as their goals for this year, they both believe that they have to mature quickly in order to build on last years success.

"It is crucial to get into a rhythm and to play together," says Peters. "Considering that our main goal is to beat a lot of ranked teams and to improve last year's ranking." "We need to play every point really hard," adds Coates. They both agree that the Irish can contend with anyone this season and they have the ability to go beyond their potential and beyond what anyone else expects of them.

Approaching their last season with the Irish, both girls agree that the time has flown by very quickly. "We're excited about the season, but since time has flown by, we're not approaching it differently from any other season," says Coates.

When asked about the pressures of not only being the captains, but also being the only seniors, Coates and Peters agree that the expectations are no more than the normal high level of play demanded, as evident by their individual and team performances of the past.

So as the Irish volleyball team takes the court tonight, both players and fans alike can be confident in the leadership and ability that comes from the two senior co-captains, Nicole Coates and Christy Peters.

With a pressure of matching last season's performance and developing young talent ahead of her, an essential component of Coach Brown's game plan this season is the experience and leadership of her upperclassmen. She finds this in senior co-captains Nicole Coates and Christy Peters.

On the court and off the court, Coates and Peters have been chosen to lead the young Irish team, a job preceded by their performances in their first three years at Notre Dame. The most impressive was their performance last year as juniors. As the Irish won the 1993 Midwestern Collegiate Conference Championship last year, both Coates and Peters were named as members of the All-Tournament team. Peters was also named Tournament MVP and M.C.C. Player of the Year. They continued their outstanding showings into the NCAA tournament as the Irish defeated Minnesota in...
