Crash raises troubling questions

By RON FOURSHER
Associated Press
WASHINGTON

The dispirited truck driver whose plane plowed into the White House grounds died with trace amounts of cocaine in his system and more alcohol than legally allowed for flight, officials said Tuesday.

And in a worrisome lapse of security, the tiny aircraft showed up on radar screens at the nearby National Airport, but operators did not notice until after the crash. "It was ...
unbelievable," a Secret Service spokesman said.

The news provided federal investigators their first clues about how Frank Corder's plane slipped past expensive security systems; and whether his flight was a suicide, a bungled prank, or a threat against President Clinton.

Agency spokesman Dave Adams said an autopsy showed that Corder's blood-alcohol content was 0.045 percent, slightly above the 0.04 percent legal limit for pilots. The legal limit for driving an automobile in most states is 0.10 percent.

Adams said the autopsy found "trace amounts of cocaine in his system," but complete results will not be available until tissue samples are examined.

Relying on a flawed initial test, the Secret Service at first said Corder's blood-alcohol content was 0.32 percent, eight times the legal limit. It is posible follow-up tests could pinpoint his alcohol content at a different figure, officials said.

Investigators said privately they were not surprised by the autopsy findings, but the results didn't point to a single motive.
"He could have had a final drink or two" before killing himself, "or he might have been a little too drunk to land," said one investigator.

Investigators made significant findings on the most politically sensitive question: How did Corder get so close to smashing into the White House?

Adams said radar at National Airport picked up the plane shortly before the crash, but the operators did not notice it.
"They did not see the aircraft on the radar screen. After reviewing the data, they did see it on the image," he said.

As a result, Secret Service agents at the White House did not know the plane had invaded restricted airspace until it was spotted by a guard seconds before the crash. Adams said he did not know how much time elapsed between the time the plane was recorded on radar and the crash.

The Federal Aviation Administration keeps recorded images of everything operators see on the radar. An FAA spokesman said the normal contingent of two radar operators was on duty at the time of the crash, but he did not confirm the report that investigators have preliminarily determined that the plane could be seen on the radar screen as it approached the White House.
Gettin' down with mom and the Stones

Mick Jagger is my father. My mother has been telling me this for 14 years but I never really believed it until Monday night. I've always been a big Rolling Stones fan. The whole Stones story first came up when I got braces in the fourth grade. When I arrived home from the orthodontist with my lips sticking two inches out from my face, my mom pulled me aside and let me in on her little secret about Mick, or should I say, ‘Dad.’

So Monday night, Mom and I packed it up and headed to Chicago to see the Stones. In the car on the way we jammed to Rolling Stone's greatest hits--Ruby Tuesday, Get Off My Cloud, Satisfaction... Mom knew all the words and even sang along. When we rolled into the parking lot I was sure Mom was burnt out. I mean, two hours of intense lip sync is no easy feat for a woman her age. But that was just the beginning.

When the lights went down, Mom jumped up. Then, he appeared. Actually, he was running out onto stage, jumping and dancing, rocking and singing 'You Can't Always Get What You Want.' One look at Mom and I knew it was true. Mick Jagger is my father.

Now, I have known the lady all my life and never ever have I seen that look on her face before. For at least twenty years now she has never been more happy. In fact, after we took our boxes for Mom and Dad to our car and said goodbye to Dad's parents and walked to the car, she was crying. Maybe it was a combination of her love for Mick and thoughts of dad, or just the song. She was crying, but in a good way.

The next few hours were spent talking about Mick and the Stones. It was a great night, and we drove away, just the two of us.

Barry nominated for DC mayoral nomination

Preparations for Haiti invasion move forward

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press
WASHINGTON
An aircraft carrier that will serve as a launching platform for invading Haiti headed to sea today, Tuesday, and President Clinton scheduled a Thursday night address to make his case that U.S. interests there are vital. Both Democrats and Republicans in Congress complained they were being ignored by a White House bent on war.

Clinton is considering an announcement in a firm deadline for Haiti's military leaders to leave - or sending an emissary to Port-au-Prince with one last demand that they surrender power, a senior administration official said. The USS America sailed from Norfolk, Va., as another huge carrier, the USS Eisenhower, was taking on Army helicopters and soldiers there for a Wednesday departure to the Caribbean.

Defense Secretary William Perry was heading to Norfolk to talk with military leaders aboard the Eisenhower and the USS Kitty Hawk, which would serve as the command ship for military operators in Haiti.

At the White House, chief of staff Leon Panetta threatened that if Haiti's military leaders don't give up power, "action is going to be taken against them very soon." In Haiti, the army-installed government protested what it called "scandalous and unacceptable behavior" of the United States but gave no indication of stepping aside. Lawmakers on Capitol Hill were taking the threats at face value.

"My view is that the cake has been baked," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., who was briefed Tuesday by Perry and Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Gen. John Shalikashvili.

Lawmakers in both chambers said there should be a vote in Congress before the administration commits any U.S. soldiers to Haiti. But White House spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers said there was no need and that any action to restore Haiti's elected leaders could be "minor compared to what was needed" in the Persian Gulf War.

Democratic leaders in both houses, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell and House Speaker Thomas Foley, both said they endorsed the president to come to Congress before any invasion. But Dole said, "No president in my lifetime has agreed" that congressional approval is necessary for military action.

Dole said he was pressing for a chance to bring the Haiti issue to the Senate floor for debate. In the House, Rep. Gene Taylor, D-Miss., hoped to force the White House to take up a resolution barring intervention in Haiti without congressional approval.

Despite pleas from Secretary of State James Baker and the United Nations, few Democrats outside of the Bush faction, which is also divided on the issue, stood publicly behind Clinton.

Vatican suffers abortion set-back

By DANIEL WAKIN

Negotiating like a country but voting like a religion, the Vatican managed to take away at abortion language at the U.N. population conference. But it failed to block worldwide recognition that abortion is a fact of life that governments must deal with as an issue of public health.

That was a setback to the Holy See and to Pope John Paul II, who has been leading a single-minded moral crusade against abortion.

The Vatican also suffered damage on the diplomatic stage. It infuriated many diplomats and U.N. officials with its vigorous fight in conference rooms to keep more liberal abortion language out of the 50-year plan to curb population growth.

And it was forced on the defensive for alloying itself with extremist governments like those of Libya and Iran. In the end, those countries and nearly a dozen other Muslim nations objected in Tuesday's final session to specific points in sections on reproductive rights.

The Vatican also got limited support from Latin American countries, including Argentina, Peru and Venezuela. They withheld agreement on phrases in the reproductive rights section but accepted the abortion passage. Brazil, the world's largest Roman Catholic country, did not side with the Vatican.

Yet in eight grueling days of bargaining here, the Vatican and its Catholic allies won numerous battles, including: -Recognizing that parents should be involved in teen sex counseling.

- The elimination of "pregnancy termination" from the definition of reproductive health care.

- The deletion of the phrase "sexual rights." -Two mentions that abortion should not be promoted as a method of family planning.

- A language that family and reproductive health matters should conform to local laws, cultures, ethics and religion.

The Vatican didn't even fight a call for access to contraception and the distribution of condoms to fight AIDS, knowing it could not win on that front.

Massive anti-crime bill becomes law

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON
After six years of talk and bitter congressional debate, the gun control bill became law Tuesday, banning most assault-style weapons and providing billions of dollars to build prisons and hire police.

President Clinton, signing the $30 billion, six-year measure at an elaborate outdoor ceremony in the White House, hailed its provisions but said all Americans would have to help as well.

"Even this great law ... cannot do the job alone," he said. "By its own words it is still a law. It must be implemented by you. And it must be supplemented by you."

"Even when we put a new police officer on your block, the officer can't make you safe unless you come out of your home and help the officer do his or her job," said Clinton.

Elction-year political overtures loomed large as Clinton noted that "some people in this town tried to keep this day from us," lest it authorize a call of violence that saw "half a million demonstrators ... killed by other Americans" in the last 25 years.

Clinton did not directly blame Republican leaders for the bill's slow calls last month. However, he pointedly praised the relatively few GOP congressional members who were invited to the ceremony because they bucked their party leadership to keep the bill — and its disputed firearms ban — alive. They were among those "without whom we would not be here today," Clinton said.

The law — Bans the manufacture, sale and possession of 19 specific types of assault-style weapons and scores of copies and firearms with similar accoutrements.

Manufacturers must stop immediately, but those in private hands or in stores are exempted.

— Allows the death penalty for 60 additional federal crimes, including driving-by shooting and carjacking deaths.

— Sends some third-time felons to prison for life. As for the money, some of which already has been appropriated, the law authorizes $10.8 billion for state and local law enforcement and $8.8 billion for subsidies to help hire up to 100,000 new officers, fulfilling a 1992 Clinton campaign pledge.

The law also authorized $6.9 billion for crime-prevention programs, many of which were criticized by Republicans as wasteful "pork" spending.

This effort by ensuring the University's full compliance with the principles defined by the Knight Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, which is co-chaired by Father Hesburgh, and the American Association of University Professors (AAUP), the principles defined by these two organizations are a code of conduct for intercollegiate athletics. According to the Faculty Senate, "the University of Notre Dame's observance of responsible academic leadership and ethical standards in intercollegiate athletics has brought it distinction, respect, and leadership."

One way for the Academic Council to confirm its support of certain principles is by publishing them in the Faculty Handbook, which would be recorded in The Academic Code, according to the Faculty Senate. Among these principles are the following: "unquestioned academic and financial integrity of its athletic programs," "integrated ... academic and athletic objectives," and "a high standard of student performance in extracurricular activities." The Faculty Senate meeting will meet three more times this semester in the Center for Continuing Education.

WASHINGTON
Democratic congressmen leaders met with President Clinton on Tuesday and said they may request Republicans to help pass the health reform bill that could be poised this year.

"We want to explore the possibilities and see whether there is a meaningful probability that we could work together to produce some legislation," said House Speaker Thomas Foley of Washington.

But Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said health reform was "hanging by a thread" and a group of Senate Republicans led by Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, said they would oppose any efforts to pass health reform legislation in the month or so that remains.

Some wondered how the leaders could hold out any hope for consensus in the eleventh hour when it has proved so elusive for months.

"The American people believe that it's time for us to stop listening to each other and start listening to the president," said Gramm.

"I think it is a bad idea to try to bring this debate back to life," Gramm said.

Lawmakers on both sides of the aisle said that is what voters have told them.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., said he supported trying to do something this season, but added, "I would guess that most people returning to Congress today from the two weeks at home will have found what I found in Connecticut, which is that the most commonly expressed opinion about health care was what the Brooklyn Dodgers always used to say, 'Wait till next year.'"

Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., speaking at a news conference with Gramm, said it would be disastrous if Congress rushed out "some scaled-down little thing whose name sounds good, which has a sweet and sexy sound to it about how you're going to be safer if only these things will take place." He said such a bill would end up being big and harmful.

Foley said the attempt to reach a consensus would necessarily be modest.

"It isn't all going to be accomplished this Congress, I think that is probably clear," he said. "But I hope some initial steps can be taken that are constructive, positive and initial, and will still have a meaningful result leading to the achievement of the goals that we have sought.

Meanwhile, prospects for reaching a consensus on the proposal of a self-styled "mainstream" group of Republican and Democratic senators appeared slim to none as senators returned to work.
Lawmakers seek accountability

By MELISSA ROBINSON

With dwindling time in the 103rd Congress, a bipartisan group of lawmakers launched a final push Tuesday for legislation that would force Congress to abide by the same laws that govern private employers.

Traditionally, Congress has exempted itself from health and safety, civil rights and labor laws that other employers must follow.

But a group of lawmakers, spurred by public concern about government, has proposed extending such protections to an estimated 40,000 employees of Congress.

"It can help restore the public's faith in government," Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, a chief sponsor of the bill, said at a news conference.

Those covered would include congressional staff and employees of branches of Congress such as the General Accounting Office, Congressional Budget Office and the Library of Congress.

Because some legislative workers are already covered, the number of new workers reached by the bill could be as low as 25,000.

At issue is whether the bill will be considered by the Senate before Congress adjourns in a few weeks. A Senate committee is scheduled to take it up next week, and a similar bill overwhelmingly passed the House last month.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., another prime sponsor, said he would meet with Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, in the next few days to convince him to bring the bill up for a vote.

If Mitchell does not agree, Lieberman and Grassley said they would try to attach the bill to virtually any other bill that reaches the floor.

Former U.S. Treasurer sentenced to prison

By HARRY ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON

The former U.S. treasurer, whose signature appears on most of the nation's currency, was sentenced Tuesday to four months in prison for evading taxes and obstructing justice.

Catalina Vasquez Villalpando had pleaded guilty earlier in the year to three felony charges, which also included conspiring to hide outside income while she served in the Bush administration.

Her signature is on all U.S. paper money printed between December 1989 and April 1994.

"I'm embarrassed," she told U.S. District Judge Thomas Hogan, her voice breaking. "I hope you will find it in your heart to take what I owe society in some sort of community service" rather than in a prison sentence, she said.

A few minutes later, Hogan said, "I can find no basis to excuse your conduct." He said the office Villalpando held imposed more of a burden to obey the laws.

She was told to surrender to a federal prison, still to be determined. After serving her time, she will be put on supervised release for three years, including four months of house detention. She also must do 200 hours of community service.

Villalpando had faced a maximum possible sentence of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine on each of the convictions.

An oddity in the case involved the conflicting views of two prosecutors about how much Villalpando had cooperated in their separate investigations.

Justice Department lawyer Jonathan Busch said she had lied "time and time again" and had done "nothing to advance the ball."

But Robert Warren, of the Office of Independent Council which is conducting an investigation of the HUD scandal, said, "She has been entirely truthful. ... She has not dissembled with us."

Busch said, "She did not fle tax returns over five years, a period that overlaps her service as a special assistant to the president of the United States." He said she "admitted nothing about her own criminal culpability until after she was confronted with her crimes."

In February, Villalpando admitted reporting 1989 tax income of $161,983 rather than the actual $329,884.

Three possible crash scenarios identified

By CLAUDIA COATES
Associated Press

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Federal investigators have identified a possible cause of the crash of US Airways Flight 427.

The plane went into a nosedive, said Kay Snyder, an investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board. "It was a very good shape now," she said. "It has been severed from the fast-track request.

We are more important to continuing our recovery and building global growth than the Uruguay Round," she said. Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, agreed to take up separate fast-track legislation early in the next Congress.

In Congress, would agree to vote on future trade agreements without amendments within a specific time after they are submitted by the president. Such authority is considered crucial to preventing complex trade agreements from being picked apart by special interests in Congress. Senator Kennedy said delaying fast-track authority would not hinder progress in current trade negotiations, most notably with Chile.

Gibbons said he and Moynihan would work to resolve remaining differences before a vote before Congress adjourns in mid-October. The bill had been threatened by the dispute over future fast-track authority between Congress and the White House.

Several contentious issues remain, including provisions of the implementing bill affecting U.S. anti-dumping laws and provisions on paying for the roughly $12 billion in tariff revenues that would be lost during the first five years of the agreement.

Liberals wanted to require future trade agreements to address labor and environmental standards. But conservatives saw that as a back-door way to stiffen U.S. environmental and labor laws and business interests feared it would restrict their operations overseas.

"I think it was the major impediment to (GATT). It would have been very difficult to resolve in the next year," said Rep. Bob Matsui, D-Calif., chairman of the Ways and Means trade subcommittee.

Although the deadline for ratifying GATT is July 1, the United States and other major industrialized nations have promised to push for approval this year.

Banned FIS leaders released from jail

By RACHID KHARI

ALGERS

The top two leaders of the banned fundamentalist Islamic Salvation Front were released from prison and put under house arrest, and three other leaders were freed, the president's office announced Tuesday.

The banning 2 1/2 years ago of the Salvation Front, known by its French acronym as FIS, triggered an insurgency by Muslim militants that has left about 10,000 people dead. The widely popular FIS was about to win control of the National Assembly in 1992 before the elections were abruptly annulled.

President Liamine Zeroual is under increasing pressure to reach an agreement on sharing power or forming a transitional government. The opposition urged him to release the jailed FIS leaders so they can take part in talks.

FIS leader Abassi Madani and Ali Belhadj were released from a military prison in Bida, south of Algiers, and placed under less-stringent house arrest.

The statement from Zeroual's office didn't say where Madani and Belhadj, arrested in June 1991 for "attacking state security," had been sent, only that it was "to another place of residence." Government sources, however, said they were moved to a nearby state-owned residence "for their own security" but would be able to receive visitors.

They had been sentenced in July 1992 to 12 years in prison each.

Neuaddress Chigara, Abdellah Omar and Kamel Guennamzi, also high-ranking FIS leaders, were allowed to go free, the presidential statement said.

"We are happy with the liberation of some of our leaders," said Rabah Kebir, head of the FIS in exile, based in Germany.

"We consider that a positive step but not sufficient," Kebir said in a statement read over the telephone. "There remain to be released all the members of the leadership, in order to reconcile all the necessary conditions for a beginning of negotiations.

Astronauts release satellite to probe sun

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL

Discovery's astronauts released a satellite Tuesday to study the streams of charged particles hurrying from the sun through the solar system at 1.5 million mph.

The deployment itself was flawless, the shuttle radar system failed and commander Richard Richards could not track the satellite as the two spacecraft drifted apart.

The satellite, Spartan, will study the solar wind for two days as similar observations made by Ulysses, the first spacecraft to orbit the sun's poles. Ulysses was launched by the same shuttle and shuttle commander four years ago.

Astronaut Susan Helms used Discovery's robot arm to lift the 2,800-pound, gold-colored Spartan from the cargo bay. She released the satellite late in the afternoon as the Discovery soared 160 miles above the Index Ocean, just south of Australia. Then Richards slowly backed the satellite away, and the radar problem arose.

An hour later, Richards finally locked onto the satellite with the shuttle radar, but the distance measurements were off by 2,000 feet.

Richards had counted on using the radar for Thursday's rendezvous with Spartan; the crew must capture the satellite to bring it back home next week.

Mission operations director Randy Stone said the astronauts will have to use backup navigation systems to capture Spartan if the radar isn't fixed by Thursday. Shuttle astronauts have never attempted a rendezvous without radar.

"It is a significant national mission, but it really does not put Spartan in any jeopardy whatsoever," Stone said.

The $14 million Spartan mission is in order to point at the sun. The two telescopes on the satellite will focus on the sun's seeing corona, or outer atmosphere, where solar wind originates.

One telescope will observe ultraviolet light emitted from the sun's south pole to determine the temperature and speed of the solar wind at that point of origin; the other will measure visible light to determine solar wind density.
Rice fails to tell whole story

Dear Editor:

Professor Rice’s articles generally infuse the Observer with a redeeming perspective. However, the article, “Murder is murder, regardless of who and why,” (Dept. 3) left me wanting. In the article, Dr. Rice condemned the use of violence that has been perpetrated against abortionists as of late. Rice (as well as the Catholic Church, myself, and others) views elective abortion as tantamount to cold-blooded murder. While I do not necessarily disagree with the conclusion, so much of the article contained statements which have no logical progression.

Dr. Rice contends that the idea of “immunity” is a necessary prerequisite to using force; it is only inside the abortionist’s “killing room” that the immunity criteria is satisfied. Rice makes this statement recognizing that the anti-abortionist can only get as far as the parking lot where, Rice argues, the immunity criteria is not satisfied. If Dr. Rice had three daughters, each of which was raped and murdered on successive days at a place similar to an abortion mill, I find it hard to believe that he would not find the parking lot immune enough to polish off the rapist/murderer. In this scenario, I find it incredible that Rice could convince himself of his espoused immunity criteria.

According to Rice, once the immunity criteria is satisfied in such a context, this would justify the use of “reasonable force” to defend the child. He qualifies “reasonable force” saying, “it is practically inconceivable that lethal force would have to be used.” But in the above scenario, I find I must ask if Rice, or any other upstanding moral father, would not use a force sufficient to discourage the rapist/murderer from preying on his daughters. Constrained by the violence of the federal authorities, it seems that lethal force could be a practical contender; Rice may only get a moment of opportunity to discourage this evil. Rice’s belief in the full humanity of the unborn makes this analogy morally equitable. This leaves us with the question: is it readily conceivable that the criteria for force is met, or would Rice really not use force to save his daughters?

In order for Professor Rice to be convincing, he needs to address some of the issues raised in this letter.

Debates on whether businesses should be “super-stores” in the South Bend/Mishawaka area. In addition to these two stores the Meijer Corporation has stores throughout Michigan, Ohio, and Indiana. Most of the stores outside Indiana are organized by the United Food and Commercial Workers Union (UFCW). However here in the state of Indiana, which has consistently proven itself to be anti-union and in my opinion anti-worker, the company refuses to acknowledge the presence of the union in the work place. Informational picket lines have been set up outside the businesses to educate the consumer about the situation in the stores.

As two of the finest institutions of higher education in the country, we as students should not allow our reputations to be marred by associating ourselves with these two companies. Therefore, I am asking the Observer to cease advertising from both of these companies as well as asking the Saint Mary’s Notre Dame community to carefully consider shopping in these stores which make multi-billion dollar profits at the expense of their employees.

Is Nothing Sacred?
Never too late for resumes

By CAROLYN WILKENS

Ah...the days of Fall. A time for students to soak up the last rays of Indian Summer before September drifts away and South Bend's winter weather really arrives. It's a time when studies, sports, and socializing crowd students' schedules and dwelling on the future could be put off...for another time.

Unfortunately, one can choose to remain blissfully ignorant for only so long. And with the ultimate question to end all questions, the reality check really kicks in with a vengeance.

The ultimate question being: "So what are your plans after you graduate?" can leave even the most state-hearted senior smiling weakly and wobbly in the knees. Fear not; Career and Placement to the rescue.

For any student, it's only a short walk over to the library, where Career and Placement is located in the basement.

There you will join about a dozen of your fellow classmates who also have decided that the real future is not so far away after all.

The Career and Placement begins early to advertise their services. The department mails resumes to juniors in October, and then sends out more periodically as little reminders that college doesn't last forever.

Some juniors do begin gathering information about writing their resumes and cover letters. Whatever they decide rests entirely on their own judgment. Although students are not required to write a resume prior to graduation, it is strongly recommended that they do.

At Career and Placement, students can learn the correct way to write a resume and cover letter. Handouts on how to write resumes are available at the front desk of Career and Placement.

Also, in the Resume Expert packet there is a special tutorial diskette which explains the steps. Books on this kind of stuff can also be found in the basement library, and if you're still feeling a little lost, workshops are provided during the semester.

Resume Expert is a special program which Career and Placement offers to students for eighteen dollars, in order to help them find jobs. Once the student has completed the resume on disk, it can be easily formatted into the database network.

The student answers a whole series of questions which include personal experience, special skills, and even geographical preference. All their answers are then taken into account realative to companies nationwide which recruit Notre Dame students.

When companies contact Career and Placement they request specific criteria which they are looking for. Academic major, internship and job interests are all possible requirements. Through the database, Career and Placement can then match up the students to the company that could potentially best suit their needs.

According to Kitty Arnold, the director of Career and Placement, both the resume and cover letter are essentially the only two pieces of paper which represents the student.

They are essentially the student's introduction to the working world. Therefore, she suggests they should be strong and powerful as possible.

As for the creativity of the resume, Arnold suggests caution when deciding on the extent of inventiveness.

Originality is good, but a fine line between professionalism and tactlessness should be observed. "Making yourself too different is like shooting yourself in the foot," Arnold says. Instead the student should stress her strengths, and allow her skills and experience speak for themselves.

Exactly how much work this resinum writing process can vary greatly with each student. For example, one student who is focused on being an accountant already has an idea of what direction she wants to take. Others without a specific career in mind may not be so lucky. These students need to focus more on what they want, and determine a specific area to express in their resume.

Campus interviews can also be set up through Career and Placement. For a twenty-dollar processing fee, students are able to interview with visiting business recruiters.

Even if you have been slow in getting your act together, take heart. Somewhere out there in your destiny is a job with your name on it. And your resume is the first step towards finding it.

When writing a resume:

DO:

•Show your power to articulate.
•Stress your strengths.
•Try to communicate good orientation.
•Use heavy bond paper in professional color (white, ivory, beige, or gray).
•Proofread. Proofread. Proofread.
•Use an easy-to-read format.
•Have a professional look over your resume.

DONT:

•Lie about your accomplishments and background.
•Use someone else's resume as your own (Where I worked this summer, two people actually matched the same resume! Go figure they did not get the job.).

"Murder Mysteries has been popular on other campuses and we thought it would be fun to bring it here again," said Klimer.

She invites everyone to come for a good time and just to have fun.

Campus interviews can also be set up through Career and Placement. It's an event in which students can meet with companies and companies can meet with students. The Saint Mary's campus is presented by a group from Michigan.

This exciting event requires 100% audience participation, according to McCandless Hall Junior Kelly Klimer, S.A.B. Cultural Chairperson. "It's very interactive. Whoever solves the murder becomes the master sleuth and wins $50," she said.

"Those making accusations, however, must name not only their suspect, but how their suspect committed the murder," Klimer explained.

Murder Mysteries is sponsored by the Notre Dame Career and Placement for students to soak up the last rays of Indian Summer before September. The Saint Mary's College Clubhouse is known to most students as Dalloway's Coffee House.

The Saint Mary's College Student Activities Board (S.A.B.) is sponsoring Murder Mysteries tonight at 7 p.m. in the Saint Mary's College Clubhouse. Some students have already decided that the show is definitely worth the trip.

"We love Murder Mysteries," said junior Jennifer Killeen. "It's time of fun and relaxation. How about a good mystery?"

"Yes, and the prize is a prize," said junior Christine Ross.

And to all those seniors, this is a chance to do something besides think about the future and the decisions that must be made.

"The only two pieces of paper that are essentially the only two pieces of paper which can "murder" will occur. Students and audience members may then approach the cast to ask for clues to solve the mystery.

Hayden Fry, Iowa worried about trip to Happy Valley

By GRIG SMITH
Associated Press

IOWA CITY, Iowa

It's bad enough that Penn State is so good, but just venturing to Beaver Stadium to play the sixth-ranked Nittany Lions is no easy matter, either, Iowa football coach Hayden Fry said Tuesday.

When Penn State was invited to join the Big Ten Conference a few years ago, there were all sorts of promises that the airport at State College would be enlarged. That hasn't happened yet, so Fry's Hawkeyes will have to fly into Harrisburg and then make up to a three-hour commute to the stadium for Saturday's game.

"I kind of agree with Bobby Knight. He said, 'You can't get to Happy Valley from Indiana, and once you get there, you can't get back.'" "Fry said, quoting the Indiana basketball coach.

The Hawkeyes (2-0) face their first stern test of the season against a Penn State team that has whipped Minnesota and Southern Cal by a combined score of 94-17 in its first two games.

Iowa has beaten Iowa State 37-9 and Central Michigan 52-21. "This is the kind of ball club that can put the hurt on people," Fry said about the Nittany Lions.

The last thing Fry wants is distractions, something that's likely to happen on the way to the game. "That's what happens on those long trips," he said. "Everything's so pretty. You're watching the eagles soar around, the deer standing up on the rocks looking down at you and everything."

Then you walk into Beaver Stadium and you're walking right into 155 howitzers right at you; big change of environment."

Fry said it's the same at other schools, such as Arkansas, where airplanes have to "land way back in the pea patch somewhere to get there."

"The runways at Fayetteville, Ark., are right on top of the mountains. You don't throw your anchor out."

"And then you go through all those winding hills of the Ozarks and everything, it's beautiful." Even Kinnick Stadium in Iowa City can seem imposing to visitors, Fry said.

"The stands are right on top of the sidelines and everything. That's a new experience who've never been in our place. We have an advantage there," he said. "People go to sleep in the dressing room. They like that pink color."

Fry said he'd like the Hawkeyes to at least walk through Beaver Stadium on Friday night but said that would depend on weather and traffic. If they can't make it, he said it won't be a problem "if I don't make it one."

"So much is mental, like people used to artificial turf. A lot of teams were beat before they played the game. Or you go to Colorado, can't breathe, high altitude," Fry said.

Fry, appearing relaxed and jovial, stayed away from talk about his 1983 team that went to Happy Valley and came away with a 42-34 victory, the most points scored against Penn State at Beaver Stadium. Instead, he heaped praise on the Nittany Lions and coach Joe Paterno.

"There's not really anything you can think of bad about Penn State. It's kind of the utopia in college coaching, whether it's academics or football or a man like Joe Paterno as their leader. It's all A-plus, No. 1," Fry said.

"I'm not going to say anything but nice things about Penn State, the environment, the food. It's about the only thing we'll get to enjoy," he said. "I'm not looking forward to this trip."

Tailback talks surfaces at Ohio State

By RUSTY MILLER

COLUMBUS, Ohio

Eddie George still is the starting tailback at Ohio State. But the gap between him and his backups grows smaller every day.

Buckeye coach John Cooper said at his weekly Tuesday luncheon that he and his staff were taking a long, hard look at the tailback position heading into the 24th-ranked Buckeyes' 90th home opener Saturday against Pittsburgh.

"We've got to have better production out of that position," Cooper said. Cooper acknowledged that George was No. 1 and "a great individual," but then discussed ways the sophomore needed to improve.

"He needs to run with his eyes," Cooper said. "The other thing Eddie needs to do — and he's a great kid to be around — Eddie needs to spend more time in the film room. He needs to spend more time with his position coach. He needs to know the blocking schemes. He needs to know to cut it out side." He added, "Whether he can ever get the vision, the kind of vision you love to have, I don't know. That remains to be seen."

George has gained 198 yards and scored three touchdowns as the Buckeyes have split their two starts in 1994. Dimmutive Stanley, a sophomore whose father is a former Ohio State assistant coach, has carried eight times for 26 yards. Pepe Pearson, a freshman from Euclid, has five carries for 20 yards. Jermon Jackson, a freshman from Ironton, seemed a likely redshirt candidate but may see action as quickly as Saturday.

Cooper said George has a tendency to rely on his own instincts and run over potential tacklers rather than patiently wait to pick up a block. "Eddie is so determined. He wants to do it but he thinks he can do it on his own," Cooper said. "You can't do that at this level. You can't do that against Washington. You can't run over that kind of defense against the run. You can't keep giving up that kind of yardage and have the kind of defense we expect to have."

The kicks off at 12:36 p.m. at Riverfront Stadium.

FSU gets good news on suspended players

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.

A temporary agreement clearing the way for the NCAA to restore the eligibility of five Florida State football players, including All-America linebacker Derrick Brooks, was approved Tuesday by a federal judge.

"The preliminary injunction is a 10-strike for us," said Florida State president Talbert "Sandy" D'Alembert. "It getsFSU the protection it needs to go forward Saturday and the following Saturday."

Brooks, tailback Tiger McMillon and reserve offensive lineman Marcus Long were scheduled to come off a two-game suspension from D'Alembert on Saturday, but the school was at risk of further penalties if they played without the NCAA restoring their eligibility.

The third-ranked Seminoles visit Wake Forest this Saturday. Two other players, guard Patrick McNeill and offensive tackle Forrest Costly, are serving four-game suspensions for their involvement in accepting gifts from prospective agents last November.

"It gives us a chance to put this player issue behind us," said Wayne Hogan, acting athletic director. "It was becoming a huge monkey on our backs."

The players, however, will not sign a waiver that moves the jurisdiction of their eligibility to the NCAA under the terms of the agreement. That, D'Alembert said, should be only a formality.

Attorneys for all sides went to work immediately on the language of the agreement described as a "workable solution," by U.S. District Judge William T. Stafford, who said he would then sign it.

Dave Berst, longtime NCAA enforcement executive, said the deal looked like a win for all parties to get out of the legal morass that threatened to keep the Seminole players idle.

Upon receiving the signed order by Stafford, the NCAA will act quickly, possibly within hours, Berst said.

The agreement came after a 90-minute recess ordered by Stafford. He was not anxious to deal with the larger question of the constitutionality of a Florida law in a few minutes when he just resolved many of the legal briefs Monday.

"You've been working on it all summer and you expect me to wing a decision?" he asked his attorneys.

Stafford restricted the injunction to only the eligiblity question and left the debate on the constitutionality of a due process law to be determined later.

Sanders pleads innocent

An attorney representing Deion Sanders entered written pleas of innocent on Tuesday to a felony charge and two misdemeanor charges stemming from an encounter with an off-duty police officer at Riverfront Stadium.

The Cincinnati Reds center fielder was not required to appear at an arraignment before Judge William L. Maloney Jr. in Hamilton County Municipal Court.

Instead, attorney James Keys Jr. entered written pleas of innocent to a felony charge of failure to obey, police officer's order, and two misdemeanor charges of leaving the scene of an accident.

A separate pretrial hearing on two other misdemeanor charges was rescheduled for Tuesday before Judge David Davis. But Sanders was granted a continuance until Oct. 12 on charges of driving without a license and resisting arrest.

Offense shines despite Sullivan's absence

By TARA MOONEY

Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's soccer team crushed Anderson University in a 5-1 victory yesterday afternoon.

Maureen Sullivan, Cathlynn Howe, and Eileen Newell all scored one goal each for the Belles (2-0). Lisa Nichols had an impressive performance with two scores and junior Tiffany Racynski added two assists.

"We played well against a team we had never faced before and generally had no previous knowledge of as a team," freshman Sarah Dakel said.

Despite several minor injuries the team performed well. Sullivan, a senior captain, sat out two-thirds of the game with an injured ankle, but is expected to play in Thursday's game against Calvin College.

"We were still tired from the weekend game but we ended up pulling together," Sullivan said.

The Bells game against Calvin begins at 4 pm at Saint Mary's.

"We are starting to come together as a team on and off the field," added sophomore Jody Jennings.

"I think our team played well, but there is definitely room for improvement for Thursday's game," Newell said.

TWO QUICK QUESTIONS

1. If someone were to ask you if you drank responsibly this past weekend, what would you say?
2. What is responsible drinking?

Here is how many health professionals define responsible drinking:

Zero = Zero Alcohol. Especially if you're under 21, driving, chemically dependent, on certain medications, or pregnant.

One = One drink per hour, which sets the pace for moderate drinking.

AND

Three = No more than three drinks per day, and never daily.

Irish top Boilermakers

By BETSY BAKER

The Notre Dame volleyball team is as hot as the weather in South Bend right now, but as we can all expect the cold weather to come, there is no end in sight to the success of the Irish.

The 3rd-ranked Irish are now 10-0 after defeating the Purdue Boilermakers in three games last night 15-4, 15-8, and 15-10. One of the many highlights of last night's match is that every player on the Irish roster saw playing time.

Senior co-captain Nicole Coates led the Irish victory with 12 kills and four service aces. Coates powerful performance was too much for the Boilermakers to handle, forcing them to commit numerous passing errors.

Another player who shined for the Irish was freshman setter Carey May, who contributed 17 assists.

"Both Nicole and Carey did a great job for us tonight," Coach Debbie Brown said. "Carey's performance is especially impressive, because as you change setters, you change the rhythm of the game." Brown is happy with her team's performance tonight, especially since everyone played, but expected to see more of a challenge from Purdue.

"I did not expect to get everyone in, but everyone came in and did a great job. It's important to get everyone some experience, especially going into a big tournament like this weekend," Brown added, referring to the Colorado Coors Tournament this weekend in Boulder, Colorado.

Purdue's looking flat, with one reason being the absence of several key players, due to injury. But Purdue Coach Carol Dewey made no excuses for her team's performance.

"We've struggled with consistency this season," Dewey said, "but I'm not going to make any excuses for our performance."

Dewey did not hesitate to compliment the Irish and their performance.

"Notre Dame is a good passing team," said Dewey. "They have good ball control, "

Holtz thinks title chances gone

But if players prove him wrong.

By TIM SHERMAN

At the very best, he is a tough man to read. But not this year.

In one breath, Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz is praising his team for their performance in Saturday's 26-24 loss to, finding nothing but positive things to say about his team. Then, without a hint of warning, he will summarily dismiss any notion of re-entering the national championship hunt.

So, what are we really to take away from last weekend?

"I'm telling the team that the National Championship is not realistic," said Holtz. "If they want to prove me wrong then they are welcomed to try."

For now at least, they will be trying without tight end Pete Chryplewicz.

"Pete Chryplewicz has broken his Navicular bone in his wrist," said Holtz. "He will definitely miss a few weeks."

That was really the only significant injury that came about from Saturday, although two Irish stars were banged up. Derrick Mayes, who was helped off the field following his acrobatic go-ahead catch, sprained his ankle and did not practice yesterday but should play Saturday at Michigan St.

Meanwhile, x-rays on co-captain Lee Becton's injured foot came back negative. Nonetheless, the perpetual worrying nature in Holtz came through.

"I really totally expected them (the doctors) and say he had a broken foot. I was quite delighted to hear it wasn't."

Another thing that has delighted Holtz has been the play of the sophomore class. Besides such usuals as Powless and Kinder, he has high hopes for a number of others.

"Mike Doughby will play much more at left tackle and Melvin Dansby at right defensive end. You are going to see more of Lyon Cobbins at linebacker, Scott Sallmann and Emmett Mosley at wide receiver."

While stopping short of using the hackneyed phrase "youth movement" that baseball managers come to love at this time of year, Holtz clearly has his eye on the future.

"I think the National Championship is very much within our grasp with this team. But not this year."
