King's daughter dreams of change
Well, we have been in class for two days now and I am officially exhausted. This fact alone is somewhat surprising but when you consider I have been watching TV, sitting in a rocking chair, and sofa lounging, it is baffling. I would not want to be caught so much if I had done something worthwhile. Is it not possible to remove a room, write an epic, or hike the Andes. It is too difficult to say. From your own personal wasteland is.

So there is no intention. A week or so as a psychology companion, I had a vision of a young woman, maybe she collected all the vital necessities for her old Nintendo. In my quest for my adolescent dreams, I donned only in pajama bottoms and sweatshirt as I Awoke. Suddenly I found myself investigating the fluorescent tube lighting in the laundry room which quickly evolved into a search for the attraction. "What's the Boss" and "Designing Women" are a losing battle.

Soon enough I found myself investigating the fluorescent tube lighting in the laundry room which quickly evolved into a search for the attraction. "What's the Boss" and "Designing Women" are a losing battle.

Going from the absolute madness of finals and the Christmas rush to three-weeks of sheer nothing can be disastrous, both physically and mentally. The immense absences become a syndicated reaction. Is it not possible to fall with the new detection technology, according to Vining.

The same computer technology that created dinosaurs in the movie "Jurassic Park" may someday let people get faster and less cumbersome colon exams. And that might help persuade more people to get screened for colorectal cancer, which is expected to strike some 138,000 Americans this year. Technology now under study offers the promise of a different way to examine the colon, says radiologist Dr. David Vining of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine of Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N.C. It is called "virtual colonoscopy," after the "virtual reality" created by computer images.

Using the new technology, physicians will only need to use one test to detect the cancer initially with the aid of a device called a colonoscope. Computer images then may be used to determine the proper course of action and minimize any needed surgery.

The 159,000 diagnoses of colon cancer in 1994 continues the three year trend of fewer cases from its peak of almost 16,000 in 1990. Fewer are expected this year.

Deaths from colon cancer also appear to be decreasing slowly, with 56,000 last year. That number is also expected to fall with the new detection technology, according to Vining.

Children paralyzed after shot by mom

Two children survived for several days after being paralyzed by gunshot wounds inflicted by their mother, who then killed herself, police said Tuesday. The children were discovered after a co-worker looking for their mother when no one answered the door at her home. Officers who broke the door open found the injured children and their mother's body Tuesday, said police. Lt. Tom Langford. Jessica Fowler, 13, was on the living room floor with a gunshot wound to the back. Her 10-year-old brother, Adam, shot through the neck, was lying in a bedroom next to his mother, Karrie Lee Rhodes. The children were without food or water since being shot about four or five days earlier, he said.

The exact time of the shooting had not been determined. The children were in stable condition late Tuesday at the Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children and Women, said nursing coordinator Kim Neuman. The extent of their paralysis has not been determined, Neuman said.

Wolves returned home to Yellowstone

The government captured six wolves in Canada on Tuesday, capping its effort to trap 30 of the animals so it could return them to their original habitat in the northwestern Rocky Mountain states. Service officials and Canadian wildlife agents have worked since Jan. 7 to capture the 30 wolves for release in Yellowstone National Park and central Idaho as part of the agency's effort to restore the species to the area they were driven out of by hunters and cattle ranchers six decades ago. Montana lawmakers have proposed a tongue-in-cheek measure calling for the release of wolves in New York City and San Francisco. The American Forest Bureau Federation and Mountain States Legal Foundation are suing the federal government in U.S. District Court in Cheyenne, alleging the plan violates federal law.

Kinder, Farmer face disciplinary hearing

By DAVE TYLER

Notre Dame sophomore running backs Randy Kinder and Robert Farmer were to face a disciplinary hearing Tuesday to address a complaint filed by a female freshman student.

The student has alleged that an incident took place in Grace Hall early October 16 shortly after Notre Dame's loss to Brongham Young.

The South Bend Tribune reported December 20 that a letter delivered on the 16th of that month notified the principals of "violations of University policy addressed a complaint filed by a student has alleged that an incident took place in Grace Hall early October 16 shortly after Notre Dame's loss to Brongham Young.

Neither the office of Student Affairs or Notre Dame Security officials could comment or confirm the hearing or the allegations because of federal regulations concerning student privacy.

The alleged victim has not filed a complaint with local police but may file charges after the disciplinary hearing, according to the Tribune.

The hearing falls under the jurisdiction of the Office of Student Affairs. According to Du Lac, the University's student affairs guidebook, students found in violation of University or residence hall policy could be subject to suspension of dismissal from the University.

Neither the office of Student Affairs nor Notre Dame Security office report incidents to the St. Joseph's County Prosecutor's office unless the alleged victim fully cooperates.

Petition for lights on Douglas Road discussed

By PEGGY LENCZEWSKI
News Writer

Leigh-Anne Hutchison, RHA member and Regina Hall council president, proposed the idea of circulating and then presenting a petition to the city of South Bend to put stop lights on Douglas Road at Saint Mary's Residence Hall Association meeting last night.

Hutchison said that lack of stop lights on Douglas Road became apparent after the death of Notre Dame Freshman Mara Fox last year.

According to Hutchison, "Douglas Road is frequently used by Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students, and it isn't exactly safe because there are no stop lights to control traffic."

Hutchison said she would be willing to circulate the petition on both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's campuses in conjunction with Notre Dame's Hall Presidents Council.

RHA also discussed plans for Little Siibs Weekend, which will be held February 3 and 4 at Saint Mary's. RHA has planned various activities for the visiting guests.

According to RHA member Brian Farrell, last year's Little Siibs Weekend was a positive experience overall, but hopes "that more activities will be planned, since little kids are always looking for something to do."

Plans for this year's Weekend include a pizza party, a scavenger hunt, and a movie. RHA officer Amy Kramer hopes that the weekend will "be a lot of fun."

"I think the success of the weekend depends on what people make of it," she said.

There was also an announcement at the meeting that tickets for the Keenan Reunion will be available on January 26 from four thirty to six o'clock at the O'Laughlin Box Office.

The Keenan reunion will be performed on Thursday, February 3, to Saturday, February 5.

Alumni killed in accident

Special to The Observer

Joseph Clausen, a 1994 graduate of the College of Business Administration, died December 25 from complications relating to injuries sustained in an October accident.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clausen Sr. of Gurnee, Illinois, his sister Lisa (who graduated from Saint Mary's in 1993), and two brothers.

Clausen worked at Deloitte & Touche in Chicago after graduating in May.

His former rector, Father Joe Boss of Morrissey Hall, celebrated the Mass of Christian Burial at Saint James Catholic Church in Gurnee on December 28.

Friends, classmates and professors of Clausen are invited to Morrissey Hall on January 28 at 5 p.m. to celebrate Mass and share in a meal in his memory.

Gays banned from parade

By GLEN JOHNSON

BOSTON

A federal judge ruled Tuesday that a veterans group can bar homosexuals from its St. Patrick's Day parade this year because the event is being run as an anti-gay protest.

U.S. District Judge Mark Wolf said calling the parade a protest against previous court orders that allowed homosexuals to march gives the South Boston Allied War Veterans Council the right under the First Amendment to exclude gays.

"The First Amendment has been used to protect the rights of protesters to burn the American flag and of Nazis to march through a community of Jewish Holocaust survivors," Wolf wrote.

The First Amendment, he said, protects speech "without regard to the truth or social utility of the ideas expressed."

A spokesman for the Irish-American Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Group of Boston said the organization had not decided if it would march in spite of the judge's ruling.

"We're disgusted that a judge would report a protest that's taking the place of the St. Patrick's Day parade," said GLIB Executive Director David O'Connor.

Gay William F. Weld also criticized the ruling, saying, "I think everybody should be allowed to march."

Gays marched in 1993 under the view that everybody should be allowed to march. GLIB's protest would be "a lot of fun."

"I think the success of the weekend depends on what people make of it," she said.

There was also an announcement at the meeting that tickets for the Keenan Reunion will be available on January 26 from four thirty to six o'clock at the O'Laughlin Box Office.

The Keenan reunion will be performed on Thursday, February 3, to Saturday, February 5.

The original march on Washington D.C. was only the beginning for the civil rights leader, who, according to his daughter, also dreamed of an even longer march on Washington. Dr. King wanted to know where it came from," she said.

"America is not a melting pot but a brilliant mosaic, a patchwork quilt, or a beautiful salad.

The idea of America as a melting pot was one of the many "cherished notions" that King said must be challenged in order for progress to be made. She said, "The country will never cure racism without examining past errors. We can't change past errors, but we can make sure it never happens again."

The Martin Luther King Jr. holiday was created in order to bring attention to these errors and to promote action, but King said, "In my eyes, King, also, said she hoped that the holiday "inspires people to unite to act and reach out to make a difference in your own backyard or on the other side of town. It should be a day on, not a day off; a day not only of words but deeds; a day not of apathy but action."

Chrysler Corp. earned more than $3.7 billion in 1994, the biggest profit in its 69-year his tory, and thousands of blue-collar employees are in line to receive bonus checks estimated at $7.5 million on average.

The previous annual earnings record for the nation's third biggest automaker was $2.4 billion set in 1984.

For the fourth quarter of 1994, Chrysler earned $1.2 billion compared with $777 million in the October-December period of 1993. The latest profit total reflected a favorable tax adjustment of $132 million.

"Chrysler had an outstanding year in 1994 in just about every respect," Chairman Robert J. Eaton said in a statement. "We enjoyed record sales worldwide and record earnings." He said the profits from automotive sales were 7.5 percent of total sales, the highest percentage in company history.

For all of 1993, the company had a net loss of $2.5 billion, because of accounting changes that produced a one-time reduction in earnings of nearly $5 billion.

Earnings-per-share were $3.20 for the fourth quarter and $10.11 for all of 1994, compared with $2.11 earned in the quarter and a yearly loss of $7.62 in the respective 1993 periods.

Chrysler's revenues in 1994 were $52.2 billion, up from $43.6 billion in 1993. Fourth-quarter revenues were $14.3 billion vs. $12 billion a year ago.

Pacific coast region disasters are compared

California earthquake remembered in Japan

By SCOTT LINDLAW
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES

The images were all too familiar: rescue workers pulling victims from crumpled buildings, collapsed freeways. A city afire. Even the date was the same.

This time, the earthquake struck on the other side of the Pacific Ocean, but for many people in Southern California, it stirred powerful memories of their own disaster.

"I feel a tremendous sense of compassion because we all know what they're going through," said Elma Coven of Northridge, one of dozen who gathered at a church Monday night to remember the Jan. 17, 1994 quake.

The magnitude-7.2 earthquake that struck western Japan early today killed more than 1,300 people and injured thousands more.

The magnitude 6.7 Northridge quake precisely one year earlier killed 61 people and caused $20 billion in damage.

At precisely 4:31 a.m. today, the hour when last year's quake struck, 1,000 people attended a candlelight vigil at the site of the Northridge Meadows Apartments collapse, which claimed 16 lives near the quake's ground zero. There were tears and a choked-up rendition of "Amazing Grace.

"People of Kobe, we sympathize with you," read a cardboard sign attached to the chainlink fence surrounding the site.

Both quakes struck just before morning rush-hour traffic.

For Doug Richardson, television images of a Japanese office worker being tossed violently back and forth took him back to the scene a year ago in his Los Angeles home.

"I just remember trying to get out of my house and not being able to see your hand right in front of your face," he recalled. "I was telling myself, there's no way I'm going to live through this. My roommate was screaming for me to get out.

The similarities may be chilling, but the Japanese quake isn't likely to affect California, said Jim Mori, the seismologist who heads the U.S. Geological Survey office in Pasaden.

"Stress on faults maybe can be transmitted a few miles, or a few tens of miles, but certainly something on other side of the world is not going to affect the seismic activity in Southern California," he said.

California officials have given seminars to Japanese groups seeking to learn from the Northridge experience, and a top state search and rescue expert was in Osaka, preparing for a conference on quake-related issues, when the big one struck today. Osaka, not far from Kobe, had significant damage.

The United States "will stand ready to help" Japan recover, Press Secretary Mike McCurry said. The Federal Emergency Management Administration is prepared to offer technical expertise and emergency response if requested, he said.

Last year's Northridge earthquake triggered a massive outpouring of federal disaster relief.

The White House said nearly $11.5 billion was made available in recovery efforts, with direct aid going to more than 600,000 people.

Clinton was visiting California State University at Northridge today to talk to quake survivors, our rebuilding projects and address the community.

"I have been asked to visit flood rescuers at a local fire station. He was then traveling to Roseville, Calif., to walk a flood-stricken street and talk to local residents.

Before sunrise, Clinton began the day with a jog on the Pacific Coast Highway as the moon glistened on the water beside him. Clinton concluded his run in Venice Beach, a popular tourist hangout. As his motorcade pulled away, a young man on the street dropped into a crouch was waved his finger at the procession of cars, as if he were spraying it with bullets. A security car stopped and the man was admonished but not detained.

Storms battering California for almost two weeks created floods and mud slides that killed at least 11 people and caused an estimated $300 million in damage.

Eager to show his sympathy, Clinton produced special radio and television addresses for California last week. Aides bragged that the administration took less than an hour to approve Republican Gov. Pete Wilson's request for federal aid.

More than 10,000 people already have applied for the aid, hoping for loan guarantees, temporary shelter or direct aid. Several agencies have ante'd up, including the Transportation Department, which released $5 million Jan. 12 and was to provide another $15 million today.

Applying the resiliency of Californians, Clinton told the crowd Monday, "You keep com-back."

Aides shrug off suggestions that Clinton's disaster response was politically motivated. But they said it was important to get the federal government involved quickly and visibly, otherwise, voters blame the president.

"I think Americans have the right to expect the government to act swiftly. I don't think there's anything political about that," McCurry said.

Clinton, who won California in the 1992 election and has already placed a strong presence here, has watched his political fortunes sag in recent months. The most recent Los Angeles Times poll showed him with a 50 percent approval rating in the state, higher than his national average. But that was in October, and the political landscape has changed drastically since then.

A Roman gynecologist last week announced the birth of Elisabetta two years after her mother’s death—from a frozen embryo thawed and implanted in the womb of her father’s sister. The news split the worlds of science and religion in a country that has no laws about “test-tube” births.

Bilotta refuses to say just when Elisabetta was born, other than “about 20 days ago.” He says he won’t violate the privacy of the family by identifying them.

Details, however, may emerge soon. Italy’s medical association has summoned Bilotta to a summer hearing to verify that the birth took place.

“Obviously, it’s true,” Bilotta said in an interview this week. He dismissed doubts as professional envy.

His principal doubter is Dr. Severino Antinori, the Rome gynecologist who set a world record last summer when his 62-year-old patient gave birth to a baby conceived from her husband’s sperm and a donor egg. Antinori doubted Bilotta had the technical expertise and access to equipment for a successful pregnancy from a frozen embryo.

The case also brought a stinging condemnation from the Vatican’s official newspaper, Catholic teaching opposes “in vitro” fertilization, donor eggs and “borrowing wombs.”

Bilotta, who is Catholic, says he followed “my conscience and my science” in deciding to implant the embryo.

“As long as freezing of embryos is allowed, it’s only right that the embryos are moved from the freezer but are used,” he said, sitting in the laboratory where eggs removed from patients are mixed with sperm.

A priest who teaches bioethics at Rome’s Catholic University of the Sacred Heart gave Bilotta some backing on Tuesday.

“Embryos are human beings” that deserve to be born, “even when not under the optimal conditions” of a natural pregnancy, said the Rev. Gonzalez Miranda.

But Miranda stressed that such dilemma should be avoided in the first place by banning the use in vitro techniques.

The July birth to a 62-year-old mother momentarily put the spotlight on Italy’s lack of laws governing such procedures. Despite the outcry, little progress has been made toward legislation in that area. A national committee on bioethics — whose recommendations would have been debated by parliament — has been shaken by resignations and political infighting.
Congressional votes to come within 10 days, Dole says

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON Sen. Robert Byrd, one of the fiercest Democratic opponents of a balanced budget amendment today temporarily thwarted Republican efforts to advance the measure through committee.

With the Senate Judiciary Committee debating the measure, the West Virginia Democrat, invoked a little-used Senate rule to object to the proceedings. Under Senate rules, any senator may block any committee from meeting more than two hours after the Senate has convened for the day.

Republicans almost certainly will have the votes they need to push the amendment — the centerpiece of their "Contract With the American People" — through Congress and to the states for ratification. But Byrd's tactic indicated how strongly he and perhaps some other Democrats are prepared to resist.

"It's the acme of arrogance for us as members of the Senate and the House of Representatives to put forward a constitutional amendment to balance the budget without laying on the table the American people can see what the plan is by which we expect to reach that balanced budget by the year 2002," Byrd said.

"I don't propose to be rushed," he said. "I may be run over by the streamroller but I don't propose to get out of its way or just jump upon it and ride along with it."

Sen. Orrin Hatch, the Utah Republican who chairs the Judiciary Committee, said he would call the panel back into session early Wednesday to continue work on the amendment.

"I hope he'll restrain the use of this rule," Hatch said of Byrd, widely acknowledged to be the master in using the Senate's arcane rules to accomplish his political objectives.

Even though it had met for nearly two hours, the committee had scarcely begun work on several amendments that Democrats are expected to propose. But with Republicans in the majority, Democrats conceded the measure is all but certain to win ultimate approval.

"This year Congress may very well pass a balanced budget amendment in the Constitution and send it to the states," said Sen. Joseph Biden, the senior Democrat on the panel.

The balanced budget measure is the linchpin of the Republicans' efforts to shrink government since it would force lawmakers to cut spending in order to balance the budget.

Committee meetings need the unanimous consent of senators to continue more than two hours after business has begun on the Senate floor. This consent is almost universally granted.

But at 11:15 a.m. EST today — one hour and 58 minutes after the Senate was called into session — Byrd said he objected to further action by the Judiciary Committee.

He said that Republicans, by not detailing what kind of spending cuts would be required to balance the budget by the year 2002, were keeping Americans "in the dark as to where the pain will be."

The House Judiciary Committee approved the amendment last week.

The measure requires approval by two-thirds majorities in both chambers of Congress and ratification by three-fourths of the states before becoming the 28th Amendment to the Constitution.

Support is strong in the House, although the Republican drive for quick passage has hit several snags.

House Republican leaders are pushing for language in the measure that would require three-fifths majorities of both chambers to approve tax increases. "We believe this is the superior version because raising taxes should not be the easy alternative to balancing the budget," Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, and Majority Whip Tom Delay, R-Texas, said in a statement Monday.

But the three-fifths provision could impede passage in the Senate, where support is weaker. Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., the chairwoman of the Labor and Human Resources Committee, on Sunday compared the balanced budget amendment to the largely inefective prohibition amendment. The 18th Amendment, banning the sale of alcohol, was ratified in 1919 and repealed by the 21st Amendment in 1933.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., interviewed by guest host Rush Limbaugh on CNN's "Larry King Live," predicted House and Senate votes on the balanced budget amendment in about 10 days. He said there would be "a big, big debate" but predicted the amendment would get the 67 votes it needs in the Senate.

Dole did appear to suggest the amendment might not fully solve the budget problem.

Where is ND's moral leadership?

Dear Editor:

A few weeks ago, I was hit with two important pieces of news from Notre Dame. The first was my (incredibly wonderful) sisters' email which was bulging with pride over the recent efforts of the women's soccer team (Way to go ladies!). And the other was Daniel DeLuca's important article on African-Americans and their resident-alien status in the United States version of the Catholic Church.

But it was the juxtaposition of these which really got to me. Something in this mix was begging to be discussed and after writing and re-writing this letter five or six times, I think I've stumbled upon some usually unspoken issues that are real and I feel the Notre Dame community needs to address with some emotionally honest dialogue.

1. The need after 20 years of being "co-ed" for Notre Dame to further and further shake up its campus identity as a male-dominated, football school.

2. The time for Notre Dame to make a real—not simply rhetorical—institutional stance promoting racial, cultural integration in its own house at a time when the national trends are not promising on and off the field.

I would hope that the form and position of this stance should become an important campus and alumni debate soon. As alumni we should participate in more ways than our full subscriptions and contribution checks. I have been very impressed with the programs of continuing alumni involvement in the life of the Notre Dame family and call for people to continue this discourse.

Sport and the powerful sociology surrounding these businesses are losing all sense of proportion to reality. When we shrug off social problems as "obvious" or "plain common sense" we lose our footholds in the realms of cause and effect. What we lose is the ability and desire for real concerted action for authentic, collective community living and action. Women have long been second-class citizens on ND's campus and it needs to change.

Ozersky rocks the boat

Dear Editor:

Way to go Ozersky! In one short, in-depth, well-thought-out column, you managed to insult a 6-year P.O.W., 5 carrera majors, сотни военных, several dozen combat veterans, and a tenth of the student population. With a record like that I'm sure you're well-qualified for a top-notch job in either the waist air industry or the warehouse of the local Quickie Mart.

OTC offers more than cammies

Dear Editor:

The ROTC people must be glad to know that Josh Ozersky ("No cammies on campus", Dec. 8) does not feel their program is "bad." Furthermore, they must be gratified to learn that he has the authority to approve of their wearing uniforms. Perhaps it would be profitable for him to spend more time discovering the diversification of the education at Notre Dame. It is more than liberal arts majors. Have you forgotten Architecture, Business, Engineering and Science? He may want to consider investigating the quality of a ROTC program, which is composed of career-oriented, self-starting individuals who have identifiable career objectives and realistic means of obtaining them.

JUDITH KLOC
Secretary Student Senate

Where is ND's moral leadership?

Dear Editor:

Secondly, most of the recent conservative moves to the right including California Prop. 187 and the scientifically-protected racism of the recent IQ study do not feel any sort of ownership in the Catholic Church, at the University or in larger society. For my senior research project, I researched the history of African-American students at ND. I was awakened to a little discussed skeleton in the Catholic closet as I read the letters written by past presidents of Notre Dame denying black Catholics admission on the (weak and improbable) premise that they did not want to upset the ten per cent of the universe from the south.

And for dulce to point out that Notre Dame graduated a black student in 1947 is being generous—he was almost forced in because he was a WWII veteran. Notre Dame didn't have a graduating class including more than ten African-American students until the 1970's. And it was not a funny coincidence in ND history that the first black student body president at ND was followed soon by the infamous king and his court discrediting any real achievements for minorities achieved through determined collective action. Something that I hope is either quelled.

Race and gender are at a crucial crossroads. We need leadership in enacting the gospel values—this Christian rhetoric melts into cliche and the meaning of the symbols fade and change if they are not reinforced in reality. Notre Dame should take a stand on these issues as well as allowing the showcasing of black athletes to make millions for a school that doesn't publicly show to be on their side—before they become assumed and reached the improved level of common sense and tradition. As a student and as an alumnus I urge the university and Notre Dame to show real lacking moral leadership by rethink our cliches and stretching our self-conceptions for the sake of a better definition of who we are and who we want to be.

Colorado exercises its options in Fiesta Bowl blowout

By GEORGE DOHRMANN
Sports Editor

TEMPE, Ariz.

A sleek quarterback, the option, and a coach is carried off the field.
A fond farewell, a surprising good-bye, and a blowout.

Colorado 41, Notre Dame 24. All for the Buffaloes, nothing for the Irish.

Under a desert sky, the University of Colorado did what it had done once all season, dominated an opponent. The prey was Notre Dame who could not stop Buffaloes' quarterback Kordell Stewart on the option, couldn't spoil the final game for Colorado coach Bill McCartney, and was simply a note in the final chapter of Heisman Trophy winner Rashaan Salaam's book of stats.

Colorado (11-1) finished No. 3 in the polls behind a big day from Stewart, a team day from Salaam, and as fine a coaching performance by McCartney in his 13 years in Boulder, Colo.

"For our players to play so well against a great team like Notre Dame and send us off like this is something I'll savor for the rest of my life," McCartney said.

McCartney's curtain call was also the final see IRISH / page 2

Only the jerseys were Champions

When Notre Dame last visited this sun-soaked city, Lou Holtz allowed no alterations to his players' regular-season uniforms. No logos. No last names. Nothing but basic blue.

But styles, like fortunes, change.
Six years to the day after the undressed Irish won the national championship here, they returned dressed in gaudy green, aploy reminiscent of an even more distant era.

Like the Gerry Faust era. Or the Dan Devine era. Coaches whose gimmicks sometimes exceeded their gameplans.

It is telling of his team's mental approach that Holtz, a motivator of some renown, had to reach into a laundry bag of tricks to inspire the Irish.

Colorado, on the other hand, rallied around its retiring coach and played classtage for Salaam who announced after the game he would forego his senior season to enter the NFL draft.

"I'm leaving with coach Mac," Salaam said. "I got to do what I got to do."

It was hardly Salaam's finest effort (87 yards on 27 carries) but surely his most giving. The junior standout was spared in the game he would forego his senior season for a pro career.

Unlike his Colorado counterpart, Taylor, left a little controversy in his wake. After an inconsistent regular season, he was suspended for the bowl game for accepting compensation in exchange for his coach's complimentary tickets to the regular-season finale at Southern Cal.

Salaam's lackluster season reportedly hurt his status among some NFL scouts, but he has long been considered a top professional prospect.

MAYES STAYS: Notre Dame's other underclassman considering abandoning the college game, wide receiver Derrick Mayes, says he will stay instead to return to school for his senior year.

After catching four passes for 93 yards and two touchdowns against Colorado, running back Chris Hudson, considered the best in the business, Mayes' decision became a little more difficult.

But unlike Taylor, he stuck to his initial plan and he will be back in an Irish uniform in 1995.

HOUNDING HUDSON: How much did Hudson bound Mayes?

"I met (Hudson) in the mall (in Tempe)," Mayes said. "He even followed me into a candy store. He told me to get used to it."

"I couldn't, at this time, estimate which has a better chance."
McCartney takes Holtz, Irish to school

By GEORGE DOHRMANN

SPORTS EXTRAS

TEMPE, Ariz. — It was supposed to be Notre Dame's day. For 4 1/2 quarters Wednesday, the Irish were in the driver's seat, and they were running away in the backfield and three wideouts, which they had never done before, Holtz said.

"Defensively, they played 11 games where they were in a 50-defense. Eleven games. And there wasn't a snap this year when they weren't in a 50 front. Today, the new line up in a 50 front the whole game."

Colorado's surprises on both sides of the ball paid large dividends, particularly on offense where quarterback Kordell Stewart amassed 348 yards total offense, 200 through the air. Gaping holes in the Irish defense allowed big play after big play.

"What's that hurt us the most," Linebacker Justin Goheen said. "There were so many times when we had them third and eight, third and 11, third and 10 and they popped a long one up."

The popped the most to the outside where the Irish were thin thanks to a spread offense that the Irish hadn't practiced against.

"We had been practicing against two tight-ends and a hunchback, Rashaan,\" McCartney said. "But we felt we had more diversity in our attack.

"We made some changes a month ago because we respect the entire Notre Dame team,\" McCartney said. "I just wanted to keep it off-balance because if you give Notre Dame a month to prepare for you they are going to be sharp and that crisp deficit."

"By playing a lot less two-tight-ends, we hamstrung Rashaan,\" McCartney said. "But we felt we had more diversity in our attack."

"It just haven't seen a football team that sharp and that crisp.\" Holtz said.

I Guess That’s Why They Call it the Blues: Coping With Clinical Depression

By COLLEEN MORRISSEY

Last year Kara was a Northwestern University junior full of boundless energy and smiles. From the moment she entered a room she was smiling and seemed pleased to be there. But sometimes her roommates could not tell if she was talking to her or not, if Kara expected an answer. When Kara went to exercise, sometimes she ran up and down the stairs of her dorm instead of going to the gym. But sometimes her roommate would come to their room and find Kara in tears. Days passed when Kara was not hungry at all and only nibbled on dry cereal. She did not get enough sleep but kept waking up for hours in the middle of the night. Kara knew something was wrong so she consulted a campus counselor and later, a psychiatrist. In the spring of 1994, Kara was diagnosed as having Bipolar II disorder.

One of the two main types of clinical depression, Bipolar II disorder is an illness that causes alterations in mood, energy level, and activity pattern from day to day, month to month, and even day to day. It is also known as manic depression, or manic-depressive disorder, and is characterized by periods of depression from deep depression to manic elation with periods of normal mood in between. A person suffering from Bipolar II disorder, Bipolar I disorder, or any other mood disorder might no longer be interested in activities once enjoyed. Often, victims are simply unable to function, let alone to be fruitful participants in the social interactions of everyday life. Although depression is not limited to any particular race or income level, the National Institute of Mental Health has revealed that out of 12 million Americans who suffer from depression each year, 62% of them are women. 25 percent of women, compared to only 10 percent of men, will experience one or more episodes of major depression in their lives. However, these numbers only indicate the people who have sought treatment. Women and men may be equally likely to seek therapy for depression, but women are more likely to have sought treatment for depression, thus making it appear to be more common in women. Therefore, we can assume that depression is more common in women than men.

According to the National Institute of Mental Health, during a depressed phase, people are likely to stop exercising, exercise too much, lose weight, and eat more often or oversleep. They might feel restless or have a reduced activity level, along with having insomnia, early-morning awakening, or oversleeping. However, some people have atypical depressions in which they gain weight and sleep more often than usual. This type of depression is thought of as being the opposite of the classic form of depression.

According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, people with atypical depression might feel less restless and have a reduced activity level, along with having insomnia, early-morning awakening, or oversleeping. However, some people have atypical depressions in which they gain weight and sleep more often than usual. This type of depression is thought of as being the opposite of the classic form of depression.

The college environment is an atmosphere where people encourage others to get help. In the real world, people don’t usually confront peers about depression, according to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Also, college environments are widely known to be stressful and pressure-filled. Students may not be aware of the signs of depression or may be too embarrassed to seek help. Therefore, it is important to encourage others to get help. According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, the success rate rises to 90 percent if the depression is treated early and the patient is willing to have treatment. Therefore, it is important to encourage others to get help.

Therapy addresses issues such as negative thinking, problems in relationships, and management of stressful situations to prevent a recurrence of a depressive episode. For students suffering from depression, Saint Mary’s College has counselors available for therapy. Saint Mary’s does not charge for these services, and there is no limit to the amount of therapy sessions a student can take part in. The college also employs a local psychiatrist, Dr. Ricken Wilson, to consult patients and prescribe medications.

Through therapy, Kara’s psychiatrist in Oregon diagnosed her as Bipolar II and prescribed three medications to control it. She might have to remain on the medicine for the rest of her life, but that does not bother her. “If it makes me feel better and gets the chemicals back to normal levels, then I don’t care how long I have to take it,” Kara said.

Because depression affects every aspect of life, it is important for depressed people to have support from their close friends and family to help cope with the disease. Depressed people should seek help and continue taking medicine and seeing the doctor. Emotional support, encouragement, and understanding is essential to help the victim through the depression.

Fortunately, Kara has a supportive, understanding group of friends to turn to when she needs help. Her mother and two weeks in Evanston, Illinois as a constant source of support while Kara went through the last busy weeks of the quarter. Kara says she’s happy at the right moments, sad for a reason, doing well in school. Depression is controllable with the proper help.
Michigan's seniors lead surprise road win over no. 20 Illinois, 69-59

By RICK CANO

CHAMPAIGN, Ill.

Ray Jackson scored 16 points and Michigan applied some tough defense to No. 20 Illinois, beating the Illini 69-59 Tuesday night and ending their five-game losing streak.

Michigan (10-6, 4-1 Big Ten) won its first three-game winning streak of the season and tied for first place in the Big Ten Conference.

The Wolverines, with consecutive road victories for the first time this season, also defeated coach Lou Henson's 400th victory at Illinois.

Lackadaisical Lenard receives wake-up call from Coach Haskins

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS

Voshon Lenard almost certainly will become Minnesota's all-time leading scorer this season.

Unless his shooting improves, he might have to do it from the bench.

Although he could have been simply a motivational player, coach Gopher Bill Curie says Tuesday he is considering deeming Lenard if the Golden Gopher starts continuing his eratic play.

After making seven 3-pointers in a win over Northwestern last week, Lenard followed with a 1-12 performance from long range in Saturday's loss at Wisconsin.

"It could happen any time," Haskins said of the lineup change. "Just to give him a different look, a different perspective.

Haskins said freshman Eric Harris might move into the starting lineup, with Townsend Orr moving to Lenard's spot at shooting guard. That change might be available for comment.

The warning probably was meant only to motivate Lenard, who took advantage of a new NCAA rule to return for his senior season after being drafted by the Milwaukee Bucks last summer.

He made just 10 percent of his 3-pointers in one-four-game stretch during December, but he also made six 3-pointers in another game before setting the school season record with seven against Northwesterns.

Overall, Lenard is shooting 40 percent and 34.6 percent from 3-point range. He is averaging 18.1 points and needs just 1 more score to reach Michael Thompson's scoring record.

"I don't think he's ready," Haskins said Tuesday. "I think I've got the finest player from 1974-78. On his current pace, Lenard would break the record Feb. 18 at home against Michigan State.

Niners strike gold with flaunting Floyd in backfield

By ROB GLOSTER
Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. While Deion Sanders is the dance leader of the San Francisco 49ers defense, fullback William Floyd provides the swagger on offense.

Floyd is a rookie who signs autographs "Bar None," a nickname on offense.

Francisco 49ers defense, fullback William Floyd provides the name he adopted after his father said he would be the best fullback in football "bar none."

When we lost Tom Rathman, we got a rookie who doesn’t play like a rookie." Young said. "To me, he's the consummate fullback. When we lost Tom Rathman, we got a rookie who doesn’t play like a rookie."

Marc Logan took over as the 49ers' starting fullback when Rathman went to the Los Angeles Raiders before the season, but lasted only five games in that role. Floyd got his first start at Detroit, where he helped rally San Francisco from a 14-0 deficit, and has been the starter since.

Floyd scored a pair of touchdowns in that Detroit game, which the 49ers won 27-21 to hand the ball to the turf. Floyd picked it up, handed it to Wallace again and said about it. I like that."

Floyd's chest-heating end zone celebrations include spikes so violent that referees run for cover when he prepares to slam the ball to the turf. They also have provided riveting theatrics from a once stolid team.

When Ricky Watters ran for 103 yards and two touchdowns against Tampa Bay in October, Floyd tackled him in the end zone to celebrate the second score. Watters said it was the hardest hit he took all day.

When Floyd scored his third touchdown against Chicago in the playoffs, he tried to get tackle Steve Wallace to spike the ball. The noble Wallace refused, placing the ball on the ground. Floyd picked it up, handed it to Wallace again and slummed the lineman's hands — and the ball — to the turf.

San Diego's Means provides the thunder for the Bolts
By BARRY WILNER
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO
Anyone who thinks Means is in his element when he's stomping over tacklers should have seen him after the San Diego Chargers won the AFC championship.

Of course, when you're a 245-pound clump of thunder with a lightning bolt on your uniform, you can be the life of the party anytime you want.

As the celebrants around him in the visiting locker room at Three Rivers Stadium dunned, screamed, even rapped a little as they mockingly waved Terrible Towels, the 22-year-old Means summed up all of his accumulated wisdom, took a long puff on a huge cigar and asked, "We're pretty good. Where are we going?"

Had his teammates heard him, they would have responded as a chorus, "To the Super Bowl." But none of Means' buddies were close enough to know what he said.

They all know what the "Naitone Snitch" has done for the Chargers this season. He detonated at just the right time, finishing second in the AFC with 1,350 yards rushing, scored 12 touchdowns and made the Pro Bowl in only his second NFL season.

In the playoffs, he led the Chargers back from a 21-6 halftime deficit to a 22-21 and over Miami. Then he helped wear down Pittsburgh's starters in the final minutes by laying flat defenders who strayed into his path.

Means is as self-assured as a grizzled veteran. Not necessarily cocky or boastful, but certainly aware of his importance to the Chargers and his ability to live up to the organization's demands.

"Once they made the Butts trade, I knew I was going to be the man," said Means of Chargers general manager Bobby Beathard's decision to deal top running back Marion Butts to a draft day to New England. "All Butts had done was lead the team in rushing five straight years as the focal point of a power attack."

"After the draft, coach Ross came to my house in North Carolina — I think it showed a little something that he stopped there — and he was talking to me and my mom. He said I'd have the opportunity, that my role would pick up in the offense and I would have the opportunity to start.

"I knew the chance was there, but he didn't hand me the starting job. I think it kind of boosted my confidence, though, and it showed he would give me the chance to be the back."

"The training was rough, but I knew what it was all for. I could sacrifice for a couple of months to get everything right. It was worth it."

"As was making room for Means, a second-round pick from North Carolina, coach Beathard nor coach Bobby Ross worried about Means taking over.

"He's a big strong guy who has breakaway speed and is not afraid to take a hit, because he knows he's usually going to come out of it OK," Ross said. "He's also a pretty good receiver and a smart football player and a pretty good blocker.

And a terrific talker. Means means what he says, and isn't afraid to stir up controversy or give frank answers to tough questions.

Such as on the matter of respect:

"It's time to start giving ourselves some credit, because the way it's been going, nobody else is going to give us credit until we start. It's time we start pumping ourselves up a bit." Or on his quick NFL success:

"I think other people are more surprised by it. I'm not. I felt if I could get the ball 20-25 times, I could put up some numbers. I feel like in order for us to be a success, the running game has to be successful, and that means me." Or on taking off his helmet to celebrate a 20-yard TD run, his longest of the year, in the regular-season finale against Pittsburgh:

"I wanted to show everyone my face. I wanted to show them the man behind the mask."

Means might not be a Jim Carrey, but he's certainly head- ed for stardom, which should please his mother, Cowedolyn Stevenson, who latched on from football when he was in junior high school.

"He had to learn what was important," she said. "I had to show him down a little bit."

"After that, I didn't have any problems."

Belles back to action
By JENNIFER LEWIS
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The (3-6) Saint Mary's Basketball team returned from Christmas break early in order to prepare for their rivals, the University of Chicago. The Belles will face off against Chicago tonight at 7pm at home.

Chicago and Saint Mary's have been notorious for having close games. Two years ago the Belles knocked by Chicago in double overtime, however, Chicago came back with a vengeance last season and beat the Belles.

Presently, the University of Chicago is ranked nineteenth in the nation. The Belles are concentrating on stuffing the 6'1 center, Anne Penota.

"Penota is an excellent player, strong rebounder, consistent scorer, and a shot block er," said Wood. "We will have to control her to beat them."

Saint Mary's is planning to run a relatively new strategy which allows a more versatile line up. The Belles starters in tomorrow's game are: Julie McGill, Jennie Taubenheim, Barb Howells, Sara Kepperud, and Brenda Hoban.

A group of nonstarters volunteered to be part of a group coach Marvin Wood calls "the rabbits." These players are willing to enter the game after eight-nine minutes on the clock and give the other team ball.

Originally, the rabbits only played for approximately two minutes, just enough time to give the starters a break. However, the strategy is working so well that they have playing up to six minutes.

"Sending the other women in, gives us time to regroup," said starter Jennie Taubenheim. "They really do a good job getting us back into the game."

Peters and Coates close careers

By BETSY BAKER

Although the season has ended and the Notre Dame volleyball team is now looking forward to next year, when the team takes the court for its first game of the 1995 season, there will definitely be something missing. Actually, that something is someone, or to be exact, some two.

As the 1994 season ended with a loss to Penn State, so did the careers of two of Notre Dame's most talented and exciting players in its volleyball history, co-captains Christy Peters and Nicole Coates.

Christy Peters is one of, if not the best player to pass through the history of the Notre Dame volleyball program. She is the only player in Irish history to have over 1,500 kills and 1,500 digs. She holds the career record with 1683 kills in 4469 total attempts, and 1640 digs. She was named MVP at all four regular-season tournaments the Irish participated in this season. She has been selected to ten of eleven all-tournament teams and has been named MVP seven times in her career.

Despite missing eight matches this season because of illness and injury, she still finished second on the team in kills, digs, and led the team in total attempts. She led the Irish in kills seventeen times and in digs eleven times.

Nicole Coates' versatility has earned the 5-7 outside hitter a place in the Irish record books. Her consistency in serving ranks sixth in the career service aces with 90 aces. She set four career highs during the 1994 season.

Steve Duke and skated past another WMU defender before crashing the puck past helpless WMU goalie Brian Heeney. Just when the Irish faithful had settled down following Lorenc's goal, Notre Dame tightened the game at 3-2 on senior right wing Brett Bruininks' sixth goal of the season. At the 4:50 mark of the second period, sophomore defenseman Brian Welch stole the puck from Bruno right wing Brian Gallentne and immediately found Lorenc open in the left hand corner of the ice. Lorenc in turn set up Bruininks for the easy score.

With the defenses playing outstanding, the game stood at 3-2 for most of the third period. With 5:03 remaining, the Irish, playing like a team possessed, knotted the contest at three on Tim Harkins' fourth goal of the year. Just when the game seemed destined for overtime, WMU's Whitton delivered the knockout punch and ruined Notre Dame's attempt at a comeback victory. After winning three of their last five games over the holidays, the Irish had hoped of carrying their momentum into the second half of the season. However, after last night's loss and with games this weekend against second place Michigan and third place Michigan State, their work is certainly cut out for them.

Notre Dame’s dreams are dashed by Penn State, 3-0

By BETSY BAKER
Sports Writer

Revenge was sought, but not granted. For the third consecutive year, the Notre Dame volleyball team was eliminated from the NCAA championship by the Penn State Lady Lions.

Although the 1-5, 1-6, 1-5 three-game sweep of the Irish by Penn State was not indicative of the team’s ability or potential, the season-ending loss was a disappointing one for the team.

“It’s an unfortunate way to end the season,” said Irish head coach Debbie Brown. “We had a great season, but we didn’t show what we were capable of doing.”

It was apparent after only the first few points of game one that Penn State was going to have the upper hand in this match. Although the Irish had had many matches in which they were down early, they usually were able to come back; in this match, however, they were not.

Penn State’s mental and physical strength quickly took over the match, working for many side-outs, but could not convert them into points. The Lady Lions’ strength was in their defensive performance at the net. Out of the four teams in the Midwest Regional - Colorado, Nebraska, Penn State, and Notre Dame - the Irish were clearly the smallest team. Notre Dame’s height, or lack there of, and stopped the Irish team’s strongest weapon, its outside attack.

The 1-5 loss in game one set the tone for the match. Penn State forced the Irish to commit many hitting errors, and limited them to a .000 hitting percentage. Both teams had only ten kills in the first game, but the difference came in the Irish matched each one of their kills with an error, committing ten hitting errors in the first game.

“We committed many hitting errors and we didn’t perform the fundamentals of the game,” said Brown.

In game two, the Irish didn’t even have a chance to commit errors as nearly every kill attempt they made were blocked by the Lady Lions’ front line. Penn State had 27 kills in the second game and committed only one error, compared to 16 kills, in 1.5 attempts, and 8 errors for the Irish. Penn State was not only a strong team, but also a smart team, as they drew Irish dugout into the middle of the court and then perfectly placed a hit for a kill down the side or back line.

Game three was no different as the frustration and inability of the Irish effort began to show, and Notre Dame went on to complete the game and the match 1-5.

It was evident that the Irish team was not playing up to its potential, but the Irish players should not be disappointed by a loss to the Lady Lions. Penn State’s performance against the Irish undoubtedly showed that their second place finish in last year’s tournament is well deserved.

In addition to its defense, one of the major reasons for Penn State’s success and for its defeat of the Irish is All-American senior setter Salima Davidson. Davidson was selected as the 1993 Big Ten Most Valuable Player and was co-captain, as a junior, of the Runner-up National Champion team. As setter, she holds a position of leadership on her team, and she plays as if she revels in that leadership.

Davidson is all over the court, and the Irish got a taste of that Friday night. She had two kills, 33 assists, 8 digs, and two block assists against the Irish. Just when the Irish thought that they had landed a point as one of Jenny Birtles and her wizardry right-side hits shot off a Lion defender into what appeared to be an unattainable territory, Davidson ran swiftly from the net and put the ball back into play, as Penn State achieved the side-out.

Davidson led the Lions in the last eight reasons for their top-ranked, undefeated Nebraska, giving them a second straight trip to the final four at which they lost UCLA.

The Irish season ended in a 3-3 record and a great spring-board for future volleyball success. The team was undefeated at the Joyce Athletic and Convocation Center this year and their 15-4 loss to their conference winning streak to 24 consecutive victories. They won their fourth straight Midwestern Collegiate Conference tournament and regular season title.

Coach Brown finished up her fourth season with the Irish posting a 11-6-30 career record thus far. She celebrated her hundredth victory at Notre Dame with a win over Texas on October 14. Her record and 800 winning percentage makes her the winningest coach in Notre Dame volleyball history.

The Faculty Senate, desiring to create an atmosphere in which all students are able to learn and develop to the best of their ability, supports the following guidelines:

Statement Regarding Discriminatory and Sexual Harassment

Inclusive language is the norm and is to be used in lectures, demonstrations and student assignments and papers. The University of Notre Dame shall use respectful and gender-inclusive language in its official publications and documents and calls upon members of the University community to adopt such usage in the conduct of their work and their social life both within and outside the Notre Dame community.

All forms of harassment, whether verbal or physical, are forbidden by University policy and State law. It is the responsibility of faculty, staff, and students to ensure that no such harassment is allowed. Sexual harassment by any faculty, staff, or student is a barrier to the educational, scholarly, and research purposes of the University of Notre Dame and is in violation of law and University policy. The University of Notre Dame affirms its commitment to maintaining a learning and working environment which is fair, respectful, and free from sexual harassment.

Newton D. Becker, BS, MBA, PhD, CPA
National Director

Whereas the Dulles says: “The University of Notre Dame affirms its commitment to maintaining a learning and working environment which is fair, respectful, and free from sexual harassment.” (p. 78, l.)

Whereas included in the description of sexual harassment is conduct that “has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with an individual’s performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive University environment” (p. 78, ll.)

Whereas the Faculty Handbook states that harassment includes “any hostile, intentional, and persistent badgering, addressed directly at another, or small group of others, that is intended to intimidate its victim(s) from any University activity, or any verbal attack, intended to provoke the victim(s) to immediate physical retaliation.” (p. 75, ll.)

Whereas the recent revelations concerning highly charged anti-woman remarks (The Observer, October 13, 1994) have contributed to an environment that is hostile toward women; and

Whereas graffiti carved into the carrels in the Hesburgh Library also indicate the same hostile environment toward women; and

Whereas women students have judged a perceived lack of response as an indication that the issue is not taken seriously at the University; it is therefore

Resolved, that the Faculty Senate publish the following statement and request every faculty member to read it to their classes on the first day of the spring semester 1995, or to distribute copies of it, or both. (This statement does not include the establishment of any new policy but is a reminder of already established University policy.)
Irish guard Ryan Hoover, key to Notre Dame's fortunes for the rest of the season, was held scoreless in the loss at Dayton last night.

ty to solidify its post-season potential. An NIT berth seems very feasible if the Irish can perform well against the established powers and knock off the rest of the pack. An NCAA appearance (seriously) seems plausible only if the Irish can win all three of their upcoming games and handle Kentucky or UCLA.

And, of course, if they can beat the bums. Realistically, the Irish need to win eight or nine of their last 11 to hold any hope of filling out a big Dance card. Six or seven and the NIT seems likely.

But whatever happens between now and March Madness, the Irish have already shown significant signs of improvement, though they have also show occasional glimpses of the past.

Irish 7th in Sears’ Cup
Observer Staff Report

In the second annual NACDA/Sears Directors’ Cup race, which recognizes the top athletic program in the country, Notre Dame is seventh following the 1994 fall sports season. Four Irish teams - men's cross country, men's soccer, and volleyball - all advanced to postseason competition in their respective NCAA championships.

Penn State is in first place, followed by Stanford, Colorado, Wisconsin, Arizona, and North Carolina. Rounding out the top 10 following Notre Dame are UCLA, James Madison, and Southern California.

Points in the competition are awarded for each school's finish in 22 sports-10 core sports.

Young Irish improving, still showing signs of old

Notre Dame, despite loss to Dayton, at 10-6

By JASON KELLY
Associate Sports Editor

Just when you thought it was safe to go back to the Joyce Center, the Notre Dame men's basketball team returned to its problems of old.

Winning the games it was supposed to win— a problem in recent seasons—the Irish traveled to Dayton Tuesday with a 10-5 record and renewed optimism.

They left with a 73-63 defeat. It was reminiscent of recent seasons that have been hindered by the inability to defeat the drags of the schedule. Dayton entered Tuesday's game at 5-7, and still reeling from an 82-39 loss to St. Louis Saturday at home. But they rebounded quickly.

Notre Dame retreated quickly, falling to 10-6 as it enters the toughest stretch of the season to date with games against Xavier, Duke and Boston College. When last we checked on our heroes of the hardwood, they were 3-2 after a loss to DePaul on December 10.

But the Irish won seven of 10 games during the semester break, losing only to Louisville, Missouri and Oregon in the championship of the Far West Classic. Notre Dame had its chances to win each of those games, but all were losses to respectable opponents.

Dame men's basketball team returned to its problems of old. "They outfought us," Irish coach John MacLeod said. "Lamarr Justice (13 points) and Pat Garrity (18 points) gave us yeoman's duty tonight, but we couldn't get much scoring in other areas."

Justice has grown into a steady force for the Irish inside, while Justice has become a more aggressive offensive threat outside.

Sharpminders Keith Kurkowski and Ryan Hoover have been spectacular at times, but somewhat streaky. Kurkowski sat the entire second half Tuesday and Hoover played 25 minutes without scoring.

Some of Notre Dame's recent success can be attributed to its schedule. The Irish got to 10-6 without beating anyone of substance except for a Nov. 29 win over a then-struggling Indiana team. But there was still reason for optimism, because beating the bad teams represented a step in the right direction. And only a few breaks separated the Irish from wins over Louisville or Missouri.

While Tuesday's loss certainly doesn't diminish what the Irish accomplished earlier in the season, it certainly puts a dent in the armor as the Irish stare into their first serious slate of games.

Xavier, Duke and Boston College back-to-back-to-back would intimidate even the best of teams in this season of college basketball parity.

With two of those games on national television, Notre Dame has an opportunity to show its fans what it's capable of.

Irish get bucked by Broncos, fall at home 4-3

By MICHAEL DAY
Sports Writer

It's nearly impossible to achieve success playing with one hand tied behind your back.

Despite a valiant effort, the shorthand­ed Irish found that out the hard way Tuesday night in a 4-3 loss to Western Michigan at the Joyce Fieldhouse.

Playing without leading scorer Jamie Ling, who was given a game disqualification in last week's loss to Michigan State, the Irish struggled most of the game to muster any kind of consistency at the offensive end. However, following a sluggish 30 minutes in which they fell behind 3-0, Notre Dame received the wake-up call they needed and outplayed the Broncos for most of the remainder of the game.

Unfortunately for the Irish, WMU left wing Mike Whitton's score with just 3:30 left dashed any hopes of a comeback victory. "I regret that the last goal scored took away the reward for the effort put forth tonight," said head coach Ric Schafer.

"We just need to learn how to win those close games."

Western Michigan broke a scoreless tie with 13:12 remaining in the first when Bronco center Jeremy Brown received a pass from left wing Derek Inman and slid the puck past Irish goaltender Matt Eisler.

The score stood at 1-0 until the 10:59 mark in the second period. Inman once again was involved, setting up star left wing Chris Brooks for his 30th point of the season. Center Kyle Millar's ninth goal of the year increased WMU's lead to 3-0 with 6:46 remaining in the period. Millar's goal seemed to strike a nerve, as the Irish exploded for a pair of goals in a two minute span late in the second period.

"All of a sudden we showed some real signs of excitement and life," said Schafer. "I'm proud of the way we fought back and didn't give up even when we were down."
