GLND/SMC hold open meeting

Over 100 fill LaFortune in support

Less than three weeks after being barred from meeting in the University Counseling Center, Gays and Lesbians of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s College (GLND/SMC) held its first public meeting last night in LaFortune Student Center.

The meeting, which was open to the public, was attended by over 100 people, and was allowed to run its 45-minute course without interruption.

According to GLND/SMC co-chair John Blanford the meeting was intended to “re-assert the importance of our presence and enable the rest of the community to come out and show the support that is out there.”

The meeting concluded concerns resulting from the January 23 announcement of the University’s decision, and stressed the need for a place for gays and lesbians to come out without having to be afraid.

“We need to have a safe space to hold our coming out support groups,” Anthony Silva, GLND/SMC’s chair for support and outreach, said. Silva said that coming out can be a “scary” process, and that he would like to see a space where gays and lesbians could come out without having to be afraid.

Silva noted that the Counseling Center’s Counsel Line phone service was still giving out the names and phone numbers of GLND/SMC co-chairs Blandford and Kelly Smith, and the organization’s Notre Dame chapter.

“Notre Dame is trailblazing in this nation,” said Blanford.

Kaesebier appointed by Board

Carol Colby Kaesebier has been appointed vice president and general counsel of the University of Notre Dame, effective immediately. Kaesebier’s appointment by the Board of Trustees was announced by the University’s president, Rev. Edward A. Malloy, C.S.C.

“In a field of exceptional candidates for this position, Carol Kaesebier emerged both for her overall talents as a lawyer and for her outstanding performance in the counsel’s office over the past six and a half years,” Father Malloy said in announcing the appointment.

Kaesebier has served as the University’s associate vice president and counsel since July 1992. She entered the counsel’s office as assistant general counsel in June 1988 and was promoted to associate general counsel in July 1991.

She now will assume chief responsibility for all University litigation and legal matters, including those related to human resources and employment.

Former Provost speaks to Senate about dismissal

By DEBORAH SCHULTZ

Openness and candor are important elements in any organization, and Father Olivor Williams feels that these principles were violated when he was asked to leave the provost’s office last year.

Williams, a former associate provost spoke to the Faculty Senate last night at their monthly meeting.

He was appointed to the position of Associate Provost in the spring of 1987 and released in June 1994. The original contract Williams had with Father Edward Malley, university president, and Dr. Timothy O’Meara, Provost, stipulated that he would receive a one year notice before his job would be terminated. But when this occurred, Williams was only given two weeks notice.

Williams was replaced by Father Timothy Scully, who was named associate provost as well as a vice-president of the university.

Among the organizations Williams was involved in while serving as associate provost were the Provost Advisory Committee and the Board of Trustees.

“Williams’ speech to the Senate focused on four traits he believes necessary for anyone in a management position.

“The four most important things are openness, proactive behavior, integrity and clarity.”

When these are not present, things go wrong, Williams said.

“I have no regrets,” said Williams. “I just think that the principle of openness was violated and for no good reasons.”

Williams received his two weeks notice one day before he left for South America for a two week stay.

Despite present circumstances, Williams maintains a good attitude about his work for the university and even encourages others to seek positions, but he feels a need to talk about what happened.

“I am happy to come here. I believe I am ethically bound to discuss my seven years in the provost’s office,” said Williams.

Several senators questioned Williams about the circumstances surrounding his departure.

Don't Worry, You're not alone

It's February. The novelty of winter has worn off. It is the month of sickness and let's not forget—the month of love. Valentine's Day is approaching.

"Looming" is the key word here. Valentine's Day has traditionally been one holiday that I've never quite gotten the hang of. I can handle Christmas and even Groundhog's Day, but Valentine's Day is just a sore subject.

The idea that "love" should be professed on one particular day has never appealed to me. Some may think that I am bitter, but in reality, I just think that it is a stupid holiday. Well, obviously it was someone who was not with a significant other, or perhaps it is all just that a "real" valentine would be a nice conversation hearts from my mom and dad, it's so easy, but I just know that I'll end up in one of those Kleenex ads instead.

After finally deciding who is worthy of a valentine, it takes days to make; a present and what should its value be? How do you decide between cards, candy and larger more expensive gifts like a box of candy as well? What is the correct gift? And should I give him anything, or vice versa — the potential for disaster is great.

Well the highlight of my Valentine's day these past few years has been the great care package from my family. Maybe that explains why I’m still single. The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Trans-Atlantic swimmer paddles home to mixed reviews

BARRABADOS

They laughed at Guy Delage when he set off to swim the Atlantic, his life riding on a high-tech kick-board and a supply raft bearing a fax machine and fine golf for New Year's Eve.

Delage, 42, from Nantes in western France, was all alone when he set out Dec. 31 from the Cape Verde Islands, off the west coast of Africa. He said he was eager to experience "absolute solitude" and "a real risk of dying." He vowed to "beater the jaws of a shark than in bed."

It was a considerably chastened Delage who came ashore Thursday in his gray and black wetsuit. Delage said his adventure brought him depression, fatigue, loneliness and danger. The sea paid him a final indignity by slamming him on a reef.

The French newspaper Le Matin reported in December that the venture puts Delage in "that book of records — in between the world accordion champion and the person who can eat the most sushi."

Despite the lack of verification on his journey, the sheer human adventure of crossing the Atlantic alone captured the imagination of well-wishers here. "At first Frenchmen thought he was crazy, but now we respect his inner strength," tourist Pierre Gobin said as he and about 1,000 others watched Delage swim ashore.

Costner's new casino idea criticized

Kevin Costner, who played a Sioux-sympathizing soldier in the hit film "Dances With Wolves," is drawing fire from tribal leaders with a new project, a $100 million resort casino. Costner and his brother, Dan, from the Cape Verde Islands, off the west coast of Africa. He said he was eager to experience "absolute solitude" and "a real risk of dying." He vowed to "beater the jaws of a shark than in bed."

"The old theory of the rich get richer and the poor get poorer," said Mike Jandreau, chairman of the Lower Brule Sioux Tribe in central South Dakota. Bangkok bans elephants from streets

BANGKOK, Thailand

Elephants, once featured proudly on the national flag, are no longer welcome in the crowded streets of Bangkok. Idle elephants brought in from the countryside are rented to people who walk under their stomachs — considered to bring good luck — or use them to carry signs advertising ivory-carving businesses. But city life is hard on elephants because of the heat and pollution, said conservationist Peter Fischli, a board member of the new Thai Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The elephants must eat garbage and dirty water, and have nowhere to take their customary cooling-off showers, Fischli said. The city government sent an order to all 38 of Bangkok's districts this month, telling officials they must eject any big animals in their area, including elephants. Violators could be fined up to $20.

Leukemia attacked by researchers

SIOUX FALLS

Researchers experimenting with mice have created a "smart bomb" that attacks and kills leukemia cells without harming normal cells. The technique may be tested on humans this summer. Dr. F. M. Uckun of the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, said the "smart bomb" is actually an antibody that will attach to a receptor molecule found only on the surface of leukemia cells. "Uckun, first author of a study appearing Friday in the journal Science, said the same "smart bomb" technique for the targeted delivery of a killing chemical can also be used for some cancers of the breast, ovaries and brain. He said the findings suggest a treatment that included cycles of first the drugs, then "smart bomb" could be very effective against leukemia. "There are certain substances in breast cancer that you can target," he said. "If you do the targeting right, you can kill the breast cancer cells."

Lawyers can object to juror's looks

SAN FRANCISCO

Prospective jurors can't be rejected because of race or sex. But it's OK for a lawyer to remove a woman if he thinks she's too fat or doesn't like her clothing, a state appeals court has ruled. A prosecutor's explanation that he removed one juror because she wore "a little tiny skirt that doesn't fit her" was accepted by the 1st District Court of Appeal. The judge accepted the lawyer's explanation as a valid, non-racial reason for rejecting the juror. The appeals court upheld the decision last week.

According to Dr. James McKenna, for infants may in fact be unsustainable, evolutionary, biological, and societal, of parent/child co-sleeping for various reasons, including the prevention of infantilization and sexual abuse. Since the 1950s, people have continued to look down on co-sleeping because of the belief that inevitable suffocation, psychological damage, prolonged dependency, or lack of autonomy could result.

It is important to consider if there are "any negative consequences to the cultural model we have excepted as normal," said McKenna, who has proposed that co-sleeping has significant positive effects on the sleeping patterns of infants, in particular in regard to SIDS (Sudden Infant Death Syndrome).

According to McKenna, starting in the 1700s society began to look down on parent-child co-sleeping for various reasons, including the prevention of infantilization and sexual abuse. Since the 1950s, people have continued to look down on co-sleeping because of the belief that inevitable suffocation, psychical damage, prolonged dependency, or lack of autonomy could result.

Co-sleeping may prevent SIDS

By MELANIE LAFLIN

When speaking on the "German model" and if it exists in the world, McKenna, professor at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, was not referring to the sawdust Deiter from Sprocket, but rather the constitution of Germany as a socio-economic structure that entails social justice.

"After four decades of a capitalistic economy, West Germany was the most successful of all major economies with a GDP and world export rate that surpasses that of Japan," stated Streeck. Class compromise in the workplace and beyond seems to have been a significant part of the interaction of cohesion in West Germany. "The organized and regulated capital market economy of Germany, and its organized labor that supersedes high class adaptation distinguishes it from the U.S. economy. The German market is not a market of control. Very few companies are traded in black market, as ownership is very concentrated," according to Streeck.

What makes Germany so different is that its work forces are regulated, its organized labor that supersedes high class adaptation. "Production markets must make plans for the semester"

By NICOLE NIELSEN

At last night's meeting, the Student Academic Council discussed its plans for this semester. The first thing on the agenda was the Career and Counseling Center's Liberal Arts Week, which is to take place March 27-31. The Counseling Center asked SAC to present a panel discussion entitled, "If I had known then what I know now." Several students on the council said they would be willing to participate in the discussion.

The Student Lecture series was also discussed. The SAC would like to have more lectures with legal rights, its public associations create high quality standards and organize coop-erative research, and its employee associations increase labor standards.

"What makes Germany have such a distinct pattern of performance is that it's high cost in labor markets has caused Germany to increase its quality of life. Germany is more competitive in international markets. In terms of skills, and technology, are all being always upgraded," stated Streeck. Because of the problem with the German unification lies with keeping an equilibrium, maintaining high economic quality and social cohesion while accommodating social pressures and international markets, according to Streeck.

"Production markets must have enough space. Production leadership and research and development must continue to match the others. Lastly, the economic labor supply must fit what the markets need, functioning in high skilled jobs," said Streeck. Can this equilibrium last? Germany has suffered the worst recession since World War II. According to Streeck, the Government's under new pressure to maintain the balancing act, the exacerbation of unification Germany, and the changing conditions of a global economy, is the crux of the German economy.

In this new global economy, German institutions are dealing with a new kind of pressure that might not be able to withstand their former economic level," said Streeck.

ford. Several national Catholic universities have recognized gay and lesbian student groups, including St. Edward's of Austin, Texas; a school run by Austin and not in South Bend," said Blandford.

"Ask them (the administration) why they can do it in Cross. The Congregation of the Holy Cross is to not stand for homophobia wherever you see it," said a GLND/SMC board member.

Blandford suggested that students talk to their rectors, classmaters, and professors and encourage acceptance of gays and lesbians at Notre Dame. The possibility of organizing a heterosexual student group to support the homosexual community was also discussed.

Blandford updated the assembled on the resolutions that several campus bodies passed during the late 1950's. In a 1993 book on gays and lesbians in the military, Conduct Unbecoming, author Randy Shilts revealed that Dooley received a dishonorable discharge from the Navy in 1956 because he was a homosexual. A letter from Dooley to University President-emeritus Theodore Hesburgh and a statue of Dooley adorn the University's Grotto.

"When the administration says they can't endorse the homosexual lifestyle are they referring to Tom Dooley?" Blandford asked.

"It seems especially ironic that the university's action to bar us from using campus facilities even keeps us locked out of the "Tom Dooley Room," said Smith.

GLND/SMC officials were pleased with the meeting. "I'm extremely happy seeing all these bodies and faces here supporting us," said Jesus Uresti, chair of GLND/SMC's social committee.

A march in support of GLND/SMC was announced to take place today at 4:30 outside DeBartolo Hall.

This first session will feature Evelyn Echols, founder of Echols International Travel and Hotel Schools Inc., and Dane Miller, founder of Biomet Inc. The opening session will be followed by two Breakout Sessions, in which speakers will lecture on successfully starting, planning, and running a business.

Lunch (not provided) will begin at noon and will feature Daniel Fitzpatrick, CEO of Quality Dining Inc., as the luncheon speaker. Two more Breakout sessions will follow lunch and will end at 3:15 p.m.

The final session will start at 3:45 and will feature Doug Germann, founder of Acquisition Resources Inc. Each of the highlight speakers comes highly lauded. For instance, Echols was named by President Reagan as one of the nation's top entrepreneurs of 1986 and was appointed to the President's Advisory Committee on Women's Business Ownership.

Miller was named by Business Week as one of the top 1,000 executives from 1988 to 1991 and received U.S. SBA's Entrepreneurial Success Award in 1991.

He was also named Indiana's Industrialist of the Year by Indiana Business Magazine in 1989. Fitzpatrick's Quality Dining Inc. owns franchises for nearly 70 restaurants and employs almost 3,500 people in six different states.

Germann specializes in helping companies acquire other firms and has co-authored "Buying a Business (For Very Little Cost)."

Tony Popanz, a senior finance major and the conference's chairperson, says that participating in the conference could prove "invaluable" even to students not enrolled in the business school.

According to Popanz, "It doesn't matter what course of study you pursue. If you're going to be your own boss, if you have persistence and drive, if you come up with a way to fulfill an unfilled need, that's going to make you an entrepreneur in any sense.”

Innovation '95 is open to any students interested and admission will cost $10.

SAB makes plans for planning AnTostal

Yesterday's Student Activities Board (SAB) meeting at Saint Mary's centered around the activities and events being planned for AnTostal.

SAB members announced many ideas for events to occur on the Thursday of the week-long spring celebration.

Among the features planned are Acro-Flight, Alpha Experience, "The Dating Game", slip and slide Jell-o pits, Sumo wrestling, and the "Rocky Horror Picture Show." According to AnTostal chairperson Candy Novak, "We are trying to plan more activities this year that students will be interested in, and we're trying to find a wide variety of unique ideas so that we can really out-do last year."

According to Novak, Sumo wrestling and the "Rocky Horror Picture Show" were banned from the Notre Dame campus because of the mess that resulted from them. Therefore, the members of SAB decided to sponsor these events this year for the Saint Mary's campus.

It was also announced at yesterday's meeting that a band will not appear at Saint Mary's for AnTostal this year. This is due to the fact that many bands will be performing on the Notre Dame campus on Thursday of the AnTostal week. "We don't see a point to have a band perform on the same night that Notre Dame is featuring bands," said SAB chairperson Audrey Comrie. "This is because the point of AnTostal is to give students a variety of events to take part in."

As an alternative to bringing in a band, SAB will possibly bring an outdoor movie, similar to a drive-in, to the campus. It was decided that if more options were presented to students, it would be beneficial for everyone involved.

There will be no dorm events between Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students for AnTostal, it was declared. This would present too much trouble for students to travel back and forth between campuses, according to Novak. SAB will be speaking to the Hall Councils about possible hall events between the two campuses, according to Novak. SAB will be speaking to the Hall Councils about possible hall events between Notre Dame and Saint Mary's residence halls. Suggestions for a new logo for AnTostal are also being accepted at the front desk at Haggar College Center according to Novak. The theme is "Crush for the Crown", and entries should be submitted early next week.

In other SAB news:

• A cultural event will be planned for the first or second week of March.

Dr. Michael Messner discussed the effects of organized sports on masculinity in a lecture last night.

The outcome of most men's sports ultimately involves hurting the opponent. Men in sports learn not to think about hurting people. "They bring this suppression of empathy off the field and see violence as a legitimate means to get what they want," said Messner.

He cites the recent O. J. Simpson trial, saying "sexual abuse is not quite as unusual as it seems." He proposes that coaches should not play on young men's sexual insecurities. The older men can also help to set the standard for younger men by not engaging in demeaning behavior towards women.

Messner also believes that young boys should participate in co-ed sports to learn early in life that girls can be as competitive as boys. "We must move towards equality in women's sports so that sexual aggression toward women will decrease," concludes Messner.

Miriam Eckelhoefer has been named the state winner of the Indiana Music Teachers Association (IMTA) student competition in college-level singing performance. Eckelhoefer, a sophomore music major at the University of Notre Dame, studies voice with Karen Burszynski, associate professor of music and director of the Notre Dame Singers.

She is the daughter of Christine and Reinhold Eckelhoefer of Fallbrook, CA. IMTA state competitions are open to instrumentalists and vocalists of IMTA members and begin with a district competition in the spring semester. The audition process includes a written and an aural theory test to encourage musicianship as well as performance. All district winners advance to the statewide competition in the fall semester.

IMTA is a professional organization affiliated with the Music Teachers National Association.

The semifinals and finals of Notre Dame's 1995 College Bowl Tournament are scheduled for Feb. 11 at the Center for Continuing Education. The final four teams will begin testing their brain power at 10 a.m. with the two winners advancing to the final at noon.

The tournament champion will represent Notre Dame in the College Bowl regional tournament Feb. 24-26 at Quincy College.

Created in 1953, the College Bowl is the world's longest running general knowledge quiz competition.

Four student teams from campuses across the country compete in a question-and-answer game. The knowledge in every question is from history, literature, science, religion and geography to current events, the arts, social sciences, sports, and popular culture. Dubbed the "varsity sport of the mind," the College Bowl was televised weekly from 1959-1970. More than a dozen of the University of Notre Dame organizations will join with others from South Bend Feb. 11 in the 1995 City-Wide Celebration of Black History Month. Organized by the Pan African Cultural Center of South Bend, the community celebration will take place from 2-10 p.m. at Clay High School.

Activities will include seminars, workshops, African drumming and dancing, film presentations, and readings from the International Black Cinema Festival, a dinner, and music, including an appearance by the Notre Dame Voices of Faith Gospel Choir.

Roland Smith, executive assistant to the president, director of the Notre Dame Institute for Urban Studies and concurrent associate professor of sociology, will be among the panelists in a seminar entitled "African and African-Americans: An Issue of Time and Space.

The City-Wide Celebration of Black History Month is open to the public. Tickets are $10 for adults, $7 for college and high school students and senior citizens, and $2 for elementary school students and middle school students.

The ACS has been hindered by a University policy that disallows solicitations on campus by charities, a policy both MacLeod and Madden say they understand. Consequently, the ACS has been unable to reach its target group — the fans at basketball games.

Moreover, MacLeod and the ACS formed their partnership only a month before the season began, not enough time to get the program on solid footing.

The ACS is looking into developing some corporate sponsorships to promote the program for next season, according to Madden.

Quayle reverses quest for presidential nomination

By JO H N  K IN G
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Hard-pressed to attract the money and talent necessary for a strong campaign, former Vice President Dan Quayle abruptly reversed course Thursday and said he would not seek the 1996 Republican presidential nomination.

Quayle's decision came less than three weeks after he vowed to campaign aggressively as a voice for the conservative "unsilent majority" that he said was appalled at the decline of the family and the liberal bent of the social welfare system.

In a statement, Quayle said he was confident he could have waged a winning campaign if he had subjected himself to a grueling fund-raising schedule this year. "However, we chose to put our family first and to focus Republican operatives, however, however, however, it became clear as Quayle geared up to run that the fund-raising outlook was bleak, and that he and his family were having a hard time convincing seasoned campaign operatives to sign on. A new, front-loaded GOP primary calendar has put a premium on early fund-raising, a difficult process cited by several others who recently bowed out, including fellow Bush administration advisors Jack Kemp and Dick Cheney.

Quayle associates said recent health problems were not a factor; Quayle was hospitalized recently for blood clots and then had to have his appendix removed because of a benign tumor. "He is completely recovered," said Quayle advisor Mark Goodin. "He was extremely excited and fired up about running a campaign," said Goodin. "But the financial aspect of it threw a bucket of cold water on his enthusiasm."

The decision leaves three definite Republican candidates: Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas, Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas and former Gov. Lamar Alexander of Tennessee.

Advisers, associates and Republican operatives, however, said it became clear as Quayle said he was confident he could have waged a winning campaign if he had subjected himself to a grueling fund-raising schedule this year. "However, we chose to put our family first and to focus on the disruption to our lives that a third straight national campaign would create," he said.

In recounting events of a generation ago, and trying to reconcile the myths of the Sixties with the reality of a much-hyped era, this columnist has often remarked on the outrageous sexual atmosphere that existed at Notre Dame.

There were undergraduate women at Notre Dame, and the ratio of nearl... seven Notre Dame men to every Saint Mary's woman meant there were very few dating opportunities for the women. Those who dated non-Notre Dame men were socially isolated into license at the other end.

That came with the times degrading consciousness emerged from the seeds the moment they were planted, some to bear fruit, some to rot in the ground, and beneath it all, the presence of that much ice in the parking lot made the adrenaline flow. It is the issue of healing, and the healing did not...the presence of that much ice in the parking lot made the adrenaline flow. It is the issue of healing, and the healing did not...

25 years later, nothing's changed

In the spring of 1975, women and men on these two campuses stood in great need of healing, and the healing did not come, and the semester ended in violence and anger.

But it is now of the semester that the seeds were planted, some to bear fruit, some to rot in the ground, and beneath it all, the presence of that much ice in the parking lot made the adrenaline flow. It is the issue of healing, and the healing did not...

So let us begin: In the spring of 1975, women and men on these two campuses stood in great need of healing, and the healing did not come, and the semester ended in violence and anger.

But it is now of the semester that the seeds were planted, some to bear fruit, some to rot in the ground, and beneath it all, the presence of that much ice in the parking lot made the adrenaline flow. It is the issue of healing, and the healing did not...

How their grandparents lived...the issues they are, and not what the mass media and Notre Dame 'be-man' would like to pass them off as. It is not getting rid of bras, language niceties and male 'courtship'—these are only symbols of the roles into which we are socialized. It is free sex, as many men wish—or the denial of sex, as many men fear. Finally, it is not simply trying to get more 'career...women into hierarchies whose values and styles of operation are defined in male, white, profit-oriented terms.

"Women's liberation is an addiction on the existing rules which oppress us all—is and is therefore...men's liberation as well."

Pete Peterson, '71, is Readership Editor/Viewpoint Manager. His phone number is 631-5331.
Dear Editor:

I have noticed that both the opinions expressed in the Viewpoint section and the Observer's mainstream coverage of GLND/SMC and GLND/SMC's efforts to gain campus recognition have been slanted in favor of GLND/SMC. I thought that it was time for a different point of view to speak out. Kudos to the University administration for making a brave and courageous decision in its policy instead of shamelessly bowing down and giving into the demands of GLND/SMC. The University should have to let a group that is so diametrically opposed to its mission, values, and beliefs meet on campus. GLND/SMC never should have been allowed to meet on campus in the first place.

Let me now turn the Word of the Lord. The Bible has this to say about homosexuality: "You shall not lie with a man as with a woman, such a thing is an abomination." (Lev. 18:22). If a man lies with a man as with a woman, both of them shall be put to death for their abominable deed, they shall forfeit their lives. (Lev. 20:13). "Do not be deceived; neither fornicators nor idolaters nor those who participate in the sexual acts of homosexuality, nor those who practice witchcraft, nor those who violate the Lord's covenant and forsake the likeness of God: (1 Corinthians 6:9-10). And I"m sure all of us are familiar with the story in Genesis about God destroying the cities of Sodom as God thought that destroying Sodom and Gomorrah was too lenient of a punishment (Gen. 19:23-24). In his book Homosexuality and the Christian Way of Life, Fr. Edward Malloy mentions four sins which the Church has long believed cry to heaven for vengeance: the sin of sodomy; willful murder; oppression of the poor, widows, and orphans; and defrauding laborers of their wages. That"s a pretty select company.

For a Catholic university to officially recognize a group of homosexuals and/or allow them to convene on campus does not make sense; it would be tantamount to recognizing and allocating campus facilities for a pro-abortion group or a group of pedophiles. In his article "Marred gay symbols show campus intolerance" (Observer, Feb. 6, pg. 11), Douglas Metz correctly points out that the University administration"s recent decision to deny GLND/SMC from using campus facilities for meetings have been almost all pre-GLND/SMC. I thought that it was time for a different point of view to speak out. Kudos to the University administration for making a brave and courageous decision in its policy instead of shamelessly bowing down and giving into the demands of GLND/SMC. The University should have to let a group that is so diametrically opposed to its mission, values, and beliefs meet on campus. GLND/SMC never should have been allowed to meet on campus in the first place.

Discrimination not the Catholic way

Dear Editor:

For the past 10 days, the Observer, the local newspaper and both radio and television stations have carried stories about the Vice President of Student Affairs' decision to no longer allow the members of GLND/SMC to meet in the University Counseling Center. While both students and members of the Office of Student Affairs have been quoted on the subject—no one, from either print or electronic media, has sought my reaction. I have interpreted this to mean that most people realize that this is not a Counseling Center issue. However, I am very concerned about how is this being perceived by our many gay students, both those who are outed and those who are not. I am also concerned about the various "historical" renderings that have surfaced. I would like to address both of these.

The University Counseling Center's core staff is a group of psychologists who are licensed in the State of Indiana, are members of the American Psychological Association and have various other professional credentials and affiliations. Many of us are also Catholic and are all well aware of the positions of the Catholic Church in this area-official and otherwise. As psychologists we support the position that homosexuality is not a "choice" or "preference" but is a sexual orientation. Being homosexual is not a disorder. How one chooses to act out their sexuality behaviorally is affected by many factors including laws, ethical beliefs and religious values. These decisions occur within the contexts of family, church, school and society. It is sad to have to say this, but given some of the comments I have read in this paper, it is also neither contagious nor likely to be spread.

The homosexual clients who have used our office in the past have done so for many reasons. We do not "treat" homosexual behavior but do assist students who are having difficulty in either discerning the sexual orientation or coping with the many stresses that being homosexual places on individuals in our community, in fact, most of our homosexual clients simply note that they are gay and proceed to present their clinical concerns. These are typically similar to the needs of heter­osexual students—anxiety, depression and relationship problems. It is our hope that the members of GLND/SMC and Notre Dame will continue to see our office as a place for support and professional help.

Moreover, the events that led to the recent decision include the following. About nine years ago GLND/SMC approached the University for official recognition. This was denied. Father David Tyson, then Vice President for Student Affairs, charged the University Counseling Center and Campus Ministry with the task of providing special services to gay students. We have provided services in two areas. First, we have sponsored educational programs for gay students, since unrecognized groups cannot do so. The topics and speakers were typically chosen by the GLND/SMC. There have been times that we brought in speakers and participated in colloquia on this topic without a request from the group.

Secondly, and more importantly, the group could not reserve rooms for meetings, we offered our large group meeting room and the University had no reservations on and off campus could not be found. If you have a group room under your own name. I did this not to hinder the fact that they were meeting at all, but rather to avoid their having to identify themselves as this group to our front office. Some of the students who are gay and or GLND/SMC, the group and its meeting place was not recognized and it came to the University administration for taking a stand and changing GLND/SMC. The University administration has amended a policy proposal, which fortunately was rejected, would have, among other things, "call out" at the University Counseling Center as a part of the Notre Dame community. This amendment to the Merriam Webster's Collegiate Dictionary defines "integral" as "essential to completeness." While the proposal was not amended without this "essential" group? Could it survive? Would student enrollment fall?

How did Notre Dame manage to survive for over one hundred years before such an amendment to the Merriam Webster's Dictionary was made? In conclusion, I fully support the decision by the University administration and encourage others who share my belief to let their feelings be known. We cannot lose sight of the fact that Notre Dame is first and foremost a Catholic institution.

On the Road by Jack Kerouac
Called the Bible of the Beat Generation, On the Road is the masterpiece of beat king Jack Kerouac. Its impact not only encompassed his generation but continues to do so in the generation of today, where it has had profound impacts on such artists as Michael Stipe and 10,000 Manics. With its rhythmic prose, On the Road is a tale detailing the numerous experiences of the author himself. As the device of the fictionalized autobiographical piece, Kerouac incorporates friends and fellow writers Allen Ginsberg, William S. Burroughs, Neal Cassady, as well as himself to accentuate his classic beat novel. Kerouac, one of the character Sal Paradise, tells the tale of following his friend Dean Moriarty, who to Sal enjoys the essence of living. It is a whirlwind of images, as the two travel across America hitchhiking, doing drugs, and listening to jazz. On the Road gives us a glimpse of what life is like living as a beat. The novel that spurned many young Americans to don knapsacks and hit the road is a story of adventure and the endless search for stimulating experiences. Sal and Dean take us on a crazy rush of events that few people will ever live. On the Road is written with a certain honesty that attracts many a reader, beat aficionado or not. Kerouac, using his spontaneous method of writing prose, finished On the Road in three short weeks. In those three weeks, one of the most influential novels of the decade was written.

The Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test by Tom Wolfe
The title alone is intriguing enough. The Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test is a non-fiction piece written about Ken Kesey, author of One Flew Over the Cuckoo’s Nest, and his Merry Pranksters. This is a story of a bunch of people gathering on a bus, speeding across the country, doing somewhat bizarre tests with LSD, and being sent off to Mexico. Their wild adventure comes to a close with an acid graduation ceremony. Included is Neal Cassidy—the same Neal Cassidy who Jack Kerouac drew upon for his character Dean Moriarty. Cassidy is still the wild man, living on pure instinct. Aside from the wildness and somewhat bizarre nature of the book, it quietly tests the judgment and morals of our country during the 60’s.

Junky by William S. Burroughs
The first work by beatnik writer William S. Burroughs, Junky is an intense account of one man’s drug addiction. Originally published as Junkie under the pen name William Lee, this work takes us on an intense journey with a drug addict. We encounter his psychedelic dreams, crazy schemes to score drugs, and torrid pain in his attempt to kick using “junk”. We see the addict progress from nominal user to full addict to jailed drug pusher. Burroughs is in turn Burroughs, who by drawing upon his own drug addiction, takes command of 60’s slang and uses it with great effect in retracing his heroin-based life from his Midwest roots to the slums of Mexico City. Like most of the writers of the Beat Generation, Burroughs had a strong following. His readers are intrigued by the humor he can bring to serious topics such as drug abuse. His writing style is slightly mechanical, but the outlandishness of his hallucinogenic tales make him a popular favorite.

Irish alum brings passion

By CAROLYN WILKENS

Michael Collins is a man of defined passions. His passion for running, developed early on in life, would eventually take him across the Atlantic from Limerick, Ireland to Notre Dame on a track scholarship. Two years later, he had discovered another great passion, writing, which would eventually earn him several honorary writing awards and the publication of three books.

As a student, Collins recalls his first impression of Notre Dame as a radically different place. “I was pleasantly surprised, although it was a great deal more wealth than what I was accustomed to.” While at Notre Dame, he discovered an interest in literature. As a junior, he signed up for Professor William O’Hourke’s creative writing class simply because he thought it would be easy. However, he discovered a competitive environment in the classroom, the kind which he had thrived on as a runner. Collins acknowledges that O’Hourke was an important writing mentor for him both as an undergraduate and later as a graduate student at Notre Dame.

Collins will return to Notre Dame campus as author and alum on Sunday, February 12, for the annual Sophomore Literary Festival. He says he is “baffled” by the honor, because as a writer he is still relatively young.

If his earlier work, The Man Who Dreamt of Lobsters, is any indication, his audience won’t be disappointed. Collins’ trademark, writing style has an almost surreal hypnotizing quality. He writes about what he knows best: the world of Ireland with all its complications and multi-faceted dimensions. Rather than shy away from the negative aspects of the Irish culture, Collins revels in the insular reality of it. “For my foreign audience I want a proper portrayal of the kind of Ireland I grew up in,” he says. He bases some of his work on actual tales which he remembers from his youth in Ireland. “First Love” and “The Whore Mother” are two such examples. “The Meat Eaters,” one of his earlier short stories,
Int’l Student Festival: A cultural learning experience

By SANDY KOEHLER

Tradition is important. But the Notre Dame/Saint Mary’s community is no longer just Irish-Catholic. The rich cultural heritage of the students from both universities will be displayed on Saturday night when “Learning from Other Cultures,” the theme of this year’s International Student Organization (ISO) Festival, presents music and dances from countries around the world.

Marcelle Trieu, the President of the International Student Organization and the organizer of the festival says, “Through the ISO, we want to help people learn about different cultures and see another side of the Notre Dame community and student body that isn’t often seen. That way, this year’s theme is “Learning from Other Cultures.”

Galatas also adds, “All of the people involved in the dance are self-taught, so there is a great deal of improvisation, but our version of the Flamenco will give the audience a taste of the Spanish culture.”

Other acts in the festival include the band Sabor Latino, Troop ND, and dances from Mexico such as the Merengue. Dances from the Phillipines, Lithuania, Greece, and the Dominican Republic among others will also be represented.

Besides the music and dances, there will also be a fashion show in which participants will display the costumes and dresses of different cultures.

With all of the acts in the show, in its tenth year, the festival has grown to involve at least 120 people. Trigo says, “This year we have even grown to include Greek dancers from the South Bend community. I think it is great how we are able to bring together the student body and the community for this year’s festival.”

However, Trigo also feels that there is a need to bring together all of the different cultures on campus including those that are not necessarily considered to be international.

“Even though Troop ND represents the culture of the U.S. in a sense, there are still not many people of European descent involved in the International Student Organization and the festival,”

Trigo encourages more students to get involved because the ISO and the festival are not limited to students that are first or second generation Americans.

“I would like to see more students get involved, but I am not sure just how to see this happen. However, I just want people to know that the ISO and the festival should include every student on campus because we all have different cultures and backgrounds that we can learn from.”

Throughout the year, the ISO promotes cultural activities on campus to improve interaction between students of different cultures.

The first activity of the year is a picnic which is open to everyone on campus. Their second event this year was an International Banquet in November in the Center for Social Concerns where there was food from different countries of the world.

As a senior, Trigo will be graduating from Notre Dame in the spring, but he hopes that the ISO and the festival will continue to grow and involve more students from Notre Dame and St. Mary’s.

The International Student Organization Festival will be held this Saturday night at Washington Hall at 7:00.

For writing back to ND

exemplifies Collins’s writing prowess. He skillfully braids together his words to create a kind of light-rope tension, creating just the right amount of tinned suspense. He finds themselves tripping over words to reach the end, simply in order to breathe work which he consciously observes. “Originally when you start to write you have a lot of ideas that are already ingrained in you. The first couple of stories just come out of your head. But writers have to constantly re-investigate their material. Different perspectives on the same idea can always create new stories.” Eventually he would like to get into script writing and movie directing, but that’s for the future. In the meantime, Collins continues to hone his writing skills as he works on his latest book, a nonfiction work. He is currently working on his Ph.D. at the University of Illinois in Chicago where he lives with his wife.

The author still finds time to run eight miles a day, which gives him the opportunity to think about his writing. Writing and running, two passions combined, appear to be the key ingredients Collins has found to write his own success story.

Editor’s note: The Sophomore Literary Festival begins Saturday with Mark Legner. An interview with Mr. Legner will be published in Monday’s Observer.

We ask the candidates what you really want to know...boxers or briefs?

By KRISTA NANNERY

It's Student Body President and Vice President election time. But for a change, let's forget the issues. Let's forget the ideas. And let's forget the debates. Does that stuff tell us what we really want to know about the candidates? Does it let us into the secret recesses of their minds? Does it tell us their innermost desires, their likes, their dislikes? Who are these people anyway? Are we just going to let two complete and total strangers determine the course of Student Body Government for the next year? Simply answered, no. We can't. We won't. There must be more to these people than e-mail forums and fire side chats. And there is. We found them, we asked them. 20 Questions. Things you really want to know. Things you really care about. Things that could just make or break who you vote for. The answers might astound you. They could just amaze you. They'll definitely surprise you.

Question 1? Easy enough. "What is your favorite Ben & Jerry's Ice Cream flavor?" There was no agreement on this one folks. Even amongst platforms. Not even amongst candidates. Klau-Herczeg went for Chocolate Chunky-Monkey plain ol' standby fave, Cookie Dough. Larissa couldn't answer question 1, "Boxers or Briefs?", but our male candidates were all unanimous in their preference for boxers.

Question 3, "Seinfeld or Letterman?" Here's where a strange phenomena began. Larissa went for Seinfeld. The guys, Letterman. Larissa would later diverge from her male counterparts on such agreement on this one folks. Not even amongst platforms. Klau-Herczeg went for Chunky-Monkey plain ol' standby fave, Cookie Dough. Larissa couldn't answer question 2, "Boxers or Briefs?", but federal and get this, when asked, "Have you ever torn the tags off your pillows or mattresses?" Larissa was the dog. Klau chose Cindy, while McCarthy and Patrick both went for an older, more mature woman, only one who said "No." This could mean we have three criminals on our hands, everyone. If they'll pull the tags off their pillows and mattresses, a federal offense, what else might they be capable of?

Klau-Herczeg's answer to, "Who's your favorite Brady?" was the only non-human response—Tiger the dog. Klau chose Cindy, while McCarthy and Patrick both went for an older, more mature woman, Alice. Larissa was also the only candidate who, when asked, "Do you shower at night or in the morning?" chose night.

We'll all admit to being unhappy with the dining hall. What better way to improve the overall quality of the food and atmosphere of our eating facilities than to make our future Student Body Government officers aware of our own likes and dislikes? J.P. and Kevin, when asked, "What's your favorite dining hall theme meal?" both agreed Circus Lunch had to be the best. We might have to work on Dennis a little, though. For him, every night is his favorite night. He answered, strangely enough, "All-you-can-eat night." Most would assume that every night is all you can eat night at Dennis' dining locale of choice, North Dining Hall. Hopefully, he hasn't been leaving with more than two pastries or two pieces of fruit. That combined with the mattress incident could mean we have a hardened criminal on our hands. A great dislike for seafood of all forms was voiced by three of the four candidates; J.P. answered "Monte Cristo Sandwiches" to "What is your least favorite dining hall meal?" while the rest of the candidates chose Mississippi fried catfish, filet of sole, and shrimp poppers. With a little teeth pulling, we managed to wrangle everyone's favorite yogurt flavor out of them. The guys, however, were a little reluctant to admit to having a favorite. Eventually, Kevin professed a love of Irish Mint, Dennis for Coconut, and J.P. for Country Vanilla. Larissa strayed from the group and went wild and crazy with her choice...Peanut Butter and Chocolate Swirl.

All candidates voiced preference for Captain Kangaroo over Mister Rogers. But things got really weird when we asked, "If you were a Muppet, which one would you be?" and "If you were a zodiac sign, what would you be?" Coincidence or psychic phenomena? You tell us. We think the similarities are just getting a little too weird. Maybe two certain people have the wrong running mates. Maybe two people were separated at birth. Maybe we're just getting a little too into this. Nah.

Twenty questions and four candidates later, we were starting to resemble our favorite Muppets and decided to call it a night. It was time to review the data, and as you might have noticed, the results amused us, they scared us, and they made us think. So it's up to you. Should you go for Beeker and Dennis' dining locale of choice, North Dining Hall? Hopefully, we found them, we asked them. 20 Questions. Things you really want to know. Things you really care about. Things that could just make or break who you vote for. The answers might astound you. They could just amaze you. They'll definitely surprise you.

Brian Hill will coach the East, but is already thinking about the tough road that lies ahead in the second half of the season. "I'm confident that as long as we stay healthy we will be a good basketball team. But whether that'll reflect in our record is another matter," Hill said.

With O’Neal leading the league in scoring (29.7 points per game) and Hardaway (20.7) teaming with him to form the NBA’s highest scoring tandem, the Magic have been nearly invisible at home. The club’s 23-1 record at Orlando Arena is the best home mark in the league.

The off-season acquisition of Grant, who helped the Chicago Bulls win three world championships, and improvement of Anderson, who has developed a reliable jump shot, has made the Magic so strong that they have been able to withstand injuries. Barkley, for instance, was forced to sit out the last week before returning to the court. But he starts seven times. He was the top vote-getter last year, when he averaged nearly 17 points, also have been instrumental in the strong start.

"Every championship team has a good bench with players that can come off and make something happen," said Scott.

PHOENIX

Some people think Charles Barkley has mellowed in this laid-back town. Some don’t think he ever needed to.

Barkley, frequently in hot water, has been careful to get his message across here, lists himself among the latter.

"I don’t know if I’m mellowed," he said. "I’m just a strong-minded, strong-willed person, but I think my personality was greatly exaggerated in Philadelphia. If you ask me a question, I’m probably going to tell you the truth. That’s just the way it is."

Teammate and frequent golfing companion Danny Ainge, whom Barkley credits with helping him out of trouble last summer, sees both sides.

"I think everybody gets mellowed to a certain extent," Ainge said. "I don’t think that means he’s lost an edge. He’s still competitive, but we all grow as time goes on, so I’d say he mellowed a little bit." Barkley, who turns 32 this month, has been selected for his ninth straight All-Star game. Fans have voted him to start seven times. He was the top vote-getter last year, when an injury kept him from playing, and this season he outpolled all other West forwards.

He should play Sunday despite an eye injury suffered Wednesday night. Utah’s Tom Chambers hit Barkley while trying to block a shot shortly before halftime and the Suns star did not return. He had some double vision but the injury was not deemed serious.

Ainge said Barkley’s dark side was overpublicized during his days in Philadelphia — all the more so because the 76ers never reached the NBA Finals after Barkley’s rookie season.

"He seems more popular because he’s in a winning envi-ment," Ainge said. "But Charles was a great guy back then; I remember how fun he was to play against. He was a funny, jovial guy on the court and said funny things to the refs and the opposing players. The negative stuff is blown out of proportion when you’re losing.

Barkley has been in several bar scuffles in Arizona, once pouring beer on a woman’s head after she tore up his autograph. In each case, witnesses told investigators the accusers provoked the incidents.

Devils roll to win over defending champions

Associated Press

Defenceman Bruce Driver set up three goals to lead the New Jersey Devils to a 4-1 win over the New York Rangers on Thursday night in their first meeting since their seven-game Eastern Conference final last season.

While there was little at stake early in the season, the game was as entertaining and as closely played as last year's series which the Rangers won in the second overtime of the seventh game.

This game was similar to Game 6, the one Mark Messier guaranteed a Rangers' win with New York trailing the series 3-games-to-2.

Just like that game, New Jersey jumped to a 2-0 lead. Scott Niedermayer and Claude Lemieux scored power-play goals 1:38 apart on Driver set-ups, but the Devils had trouble getting a third goal by Rangers goalie Mike Richter, who had at least five good saves in the second period.

Brian Noonan revived hopes of another Rangers' comeback by converting in close against Martin Brodeur on a power-play setup by Messier just 38 seconds into the third period.

However, this time there would be no three goals by Messier and a 4-2 win.

Adam Graves came close to tying it on a rebound midway through the period and Brian Leetch and Graves were denied in close by Brodeur with 7:45 to play.

With the Rangers still pressing, Bobby Holik broke out of the Devils' zone after Sergei Zubov was trapped and beat Richter with a slapshot from the left faceoff circle with 6:39 to go. Tom Chorske added another breakaway goal with 4:23 left.

Brodeur finished with 27 saves in recording the Devils first regular-season win over the Rangers in two years. New York won all six regular-season games last year.

New Jersey is now 3-0-1 at home this year.

Richter had 29 saves as the Rangers saw their three-game (2-0-1) unbeaten streak end.

New Jersey, which had converted only on 0 of 27 extra-man chances in its first eight games, connected on its first two against New York.

Panthers 3, Flyers 0

John Vanbiesbrouck made 26 saves as the Florida Panthers handed the Philadelphia Flyers their second straight 3-shutout loss Thursday night.

The Flyers, who traded Mark Recchi for three Montreal Canadiens earlier in the day, were shut out 4-0 in Ottawa Monday night. The Senators and the Panthers have a combined record of 5-13-3.

The last time Philadelphia was shut out in back-to-back games was in 1973, when the Flyers lost 3-0 in Los Angeles on Oct. 20 and 4-0 in Montreal on Oct. 25.

Dave Lowery, Stu Barnes and Gord Murphy scored for the Panthers, who recorded their first shutout of the season.

The Rangers scored their goals in the first 11:52 minutes of the game. The Flyers, who were outshot 18-7 in the period, mustered few real scoring chances even-strength or on four-power plays.

Penguins 5, Islanders 2

The Pittsburgh Penguins, led by Shawn McEachern's two goals, set a team record for their best start in a season with a 5-2 victory Thursday night over the New York Islanders.

The Penguins, only unbeaten team in the NHL this season, improved their record to 9-0-1.

Jaromir Jagr had a goal and three assists as the Penguins continued to win without many of their top players. Mario Lemieux, Tom Barrasso, Kevin Stevens and Luc Robitaille are out for a variety of reasons.

Ken Wregget, who has played every minute in goal for the Penguins in Barrasso's absence, stopped 32 shots.

Jamie McLennan was in net for the Islanders, and turned aside 27 Pittsburgh chances.

New York has lost four straight regular season games to the Penguins at Nassau Coliseum since a 4-2 win on Feb. 20, 1993.

Pittsburgh capitalized on a second-period power-play opportunity to take a 1-0 lead on Chris Joseph's slap shot from the point at 3:30. The goal marked the ninth time in 10 Islanders games that they have allowed the first goal.

Ray Ferraro tied the game when he picked up a loose puck at the blue line and cut in alone on Wregget. Ferraro's stuff attempt hit Wregget's stick shaft and rolled into the net.

McEachern then gave Pittsburgh a lead they would not relinquish at 13:57, bouncing on a loose puck in the left crease and one-timing the puck between McLennan's pads.

Jagr clinched the game at 1:03 of the final period, skating out untouched from behind the net and jamming the puck between McLennan's pads.

McEachern then tapped in Jagr's feed at 3:46, and Ron Francis scored on his own rebound at 14:29. Ferraro's second breakaway goal at 17:46 only closed the gap to three goals.

Cherokee Parks' sixteen points led Duke to a seven-point upset win over the 18th-ranked Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech last night.

Duke pulls off upset

DURHAM, N.C.

Duke broke out of its month-long slump Thursday night, snapping a nine-game Atlantic Coast Conference losing streak by finally hanging on down the stretch to beat No. 18 Georgia Tech, 77-70.

The Blue Devils (11-11, 1-9 ACC) were on the verge of winning twice in the last two weeks, failing to No. 1 North Carolina and No. 8 Maryland by two points each. This time around the Blue Devils got key baskets by freshmen Trajan Langdon and Ricky Price in a span of 20 seconds as Duke cooled off the ACC's hottest shooting team in the league, made four straight foul shots over the next 19 seconds to seal the win.

Cherokee Parks led Duke, which avoided losing in Cameron Indoor Stadium for a fifth straight time, with 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Atlantic 10 adds three more teams for 1995-96 season

By JIM O'CONNELL
Associated Press

The Atlantic 10 will have 12 schools next season, five of them first-year members after Virginia Tech, Dayton and La Salle officially joined the conference on Thursday.

The three newcomers join fellow rookies Xavier, and Fordham in a league that has gone from a questionable future months ago to a solid basketball conference that will reach a number of major television markets.

"Our athletic directors identified these three institutions as what we are and where we want to be as we head into the future," Atlantic 10 commissioner Linda Bruno said. "We are excited and we will get much better."

West Virginia and Rutgers will leave the current nine-team league after this season to join the Big East. When that move was announced last year, many thought Massachusetts and Temple, the conference's linchpins as far as basketball was concerned, would consider leaving.

Instead, the Atlantic 10 added five schools and appears solid heading into next season.

There were always options for us," Bruno said. "The first scenario was 'don't do anything,' and we had said all along we weren't in a rush unless the right schools were available. At no time did we get locked into a set number. We were worried about quality not quantity. We got the best of both worlds now with a number that's workable and we filled out our conference with quality programs."

Bruno said the league will be split into two divisions and keep the name despite the discrepancy in numbers.

"The athletic directors have decided divisions is the way to go," she said. "We have not begun to approach how we will divide and what format we will use. We will meet in the next few weeks as we wanted to wait until these three schools were aboard to be part of that process."

The three newcomers were all facing being without a conference after recent moves, although Virginia Tech and La Salle both opted for the Atlantic 10 over other leagues.

Heading into the last match of the regular season, the men's fencing team find themselves pretty confident we can accomplish that goal.

"However, things might change due pressure on themselves," DeCicco said. "They just have set some new goals, and do what we need to do to reach those goals," sophomore sabreman Bill Lester added.

While the men struggle to find their winning ways again, the women continue to roll as they moved their record to 17-0 last weekend. In doing so, the Irish set a new mark for the all-time consecutive win streak which now stands at 46 for the current team.

The women will look to continue this streak today as they fence North Carolina, Duke, Stanford, and James Madison in Durham. "We're going into the meet positively," freshman foilist Anne Appel said. "Coach said there isn't anybody we should be scared of."

As the women put their undefeated streak on the line, they do so brimming with confidence after last weekend's victory against Princeton. The Irish were forced to rally against the Tigers in the epee lost 11-5. Just as in previous weeks the other team was there to step it up a notch as the foil team reeled off twelve victories to down Princeton 17-15.

If one match sums up a season, that one may have been the epitome of the women's. "They have got a nice chemistry right now," DeCicco added.

The Notre Dame hockey team is on a mission. That's right, the 7-21-1 skaters have a quest in front of them this weekend.

"At this point, our mission is to win the battle of pride and self respect," said Terry Lorenz, a senior left wing that is on a mission. That's right, the 7-21-1 skaters have a quest in front of them this weekend. When the 5-20-2 (3-17 in the CCHA) Ohio State Buckeyes visit tonight and Saturday at the Joyce Center Fieldhouse, the Irish will be the only item in question.

If the Irish (4.865 save pct.) and Kurt Brown (.876 save pct.) are expected to alternate at goaltender against the Buckeyes. The last place team is forced to win, has emerged as a key contributor. The sophomore left wing enjoyed the finest performance of his career against Miami, scoring four of the Irish's eight goals over the weekend.

"Terry Lorenz is playing better than he has all year," said Schafer. "He really sparked the comeback against Miami."

Defensively, the Irish could be in trouble. They gave up 13 goals in two games against the Redskins, and junior defensemans Garry Gruber will be sidelined with a knee injury. On the positive side, goaltender Matt Eisler continues to improve with experience, and backup Wade Salzman will be available if necessary.

On the other side of the coin, the OSU offense is lead by junior Randy Holmes (28 points) and senior Steve Richards (26 points). Juniors Tom Askey (465 save pct.) and Kurt Brown (.876 save pct.) are expected to alternate at goaltender against Irish defensemen.

Kentucky
The Irish simply will not be able to match the Wildcats' athleticism.
But in the topsy-turvy world of college basketball, the home court and a little luck sometimes squash a more skillful opponent.
And Kentucky is nothing if not skillful.
Excitable sideline-scourrier Rick Pitino has assembled another fearsome group, led by sleek guard Tony Delk, who scores 16.4 points per game, swingman Roderick Rhodes scores 14 a game.
The Wildcats' biggest strength is their suffocating defensive pressure, a burden that will have to be broken by point guard Lamarr Justice.
Kentucky likes to translate turnovers into easy baskets at the other end. Methodical offense is not the Wildcats' mission.
They average 87 points, including more than eight 3-pointers per game.
Notre Dame's 3-point shooting, normally a strength, has been non-existent lately. In their last two games, the Irish have failed to connect on a shot from behind the arc.

KUROWSKI'S BACK:
Keith Kurowski is expected to see some playing time Sunday. He has missed more than two weeks after undergoing laser surgery to correct a heart problem and suffering from a post-operative infection.
He was in uniform for Wednesday's game against Duquesne and he will likely begin playing himself back into shape against Kentucky.

Happy Birthday, Kristi!

One Last Chance

By JASON KELLY
Associate Sports Editor

Another opportunity arrives Sunday for the Notre Dame men's basketball team, one last chance to slay one of the game's giants.

Sixth-ranked Kentucky—ugly uniforms and all—visits the Joyce Center for a 1 p.m. matinee.

It will be Notre Dame's final shot to snatch a victory from an elite team after a few feeble efforts fell short, most notably last week's 37-point shellacking at UCLA.

But these marquee matchups have been infrequent for the Irish this season thanks to a softer schedule that has already guaranteed a winning season.

That's why Sunday's game has such significance. National television exposure and an NCAA championship-caliber opponent will inject some vibrance into what has been a rather lifeless arena at times this season.

During many home games, the Joyce Center has resembled the second floor of the library, only quieter and with fewer students.

Sunday it will shake. At least as long as Notre Dame remains within a reasonable distance of the Wildcats.

"We believe we can win every game," freshman Derek Mann said. "You have to." Confidence may be Notre Dame's greatest ally because talent tips the scales toward Kentucky.

Irish hope marketing equals success

Pack the JACC tonight because the Irish are back.

The Notre Dame women's basketball team has its biggest conference game of the season as second place Butler comes to the Joyce Athletic and Conversation Center at 7 p.m. tonight. The Irish are first in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference as the only undefeated team.

The Irish played Butler twice last year, and split with one victory and one loss, both by less than a three point margin.

"The biggest thing about this game from a fan's perspective is that these two teams are so similar," assistant coach John O'Brien said. "They have more experience with three seniors, but at this point in the season, that shouldn't make much of a difference."

Tonight's game will be the battle of the one-two punches in a contest between number one and number two. Both teams center their offense around a big post inside and a hot shooter on the perimeter.

Butler's leading scorers are seniors Sarah Arning and Liesl Schulte, each with double digit averages per game. Schulte is the team's leading scorer at 15.7, and also leads the team in rebounds and blocked shots.

The Bulldogs may have a tree, but the Irish have a Tryna. Katryna Gaither, a 6'3" sophomore out of Mount Vernon, NY, is averaging 17.6 points per game in addition to a field goal percentage which ranks her 13th in the nation at 67.6%.

"Tryna will do a great job against Liesl," co-captain Letitia Bowen said. "Liesl has a good touch under the basket but she isn't as quick as Tryna."
