Prominent Republican politician Jack Kemp brings a distinguished list of achievements in public service with him as he speaks tonight at St. Paul University Center on the "Mandate for the New Congress" at 8 pm. Kemp served as the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) in the Bush Administration. He was instrumental in passing two major pieces of legislation during his tenure.

The HUD Reform Act sought to rid HUD of the waste, fraud, and abuse that characterized the department under past administrations. In addition, Kemp's HOPE initiative (Home Ownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere) intended to Yesterday's Saint Mary's class elections determined that the tickets headed by Leslee Jones and Ellen Coleman will fill the offices of the senior and sophomore classes respectively. The abstention of the majority of voters in the junior class elections, however, forces another election for junior class officers.

The sole junior class ticket composed of Leslie Field (running for president), Emily Bollner (vice president), Becky Kellogg (secretary) and Annie Korte (treasurer) received only 47 percent of the vote.

Of the 51 percent of the class that voted, 53 percent abstained. In order to win a class election at Saint Mary's, 50 percent of the vote is needed.

"We are very hurt and disappointed in our class," Field said. "We treated this election with utmost seriousness and had a solid platform with good ideas."

We have worked very hard for our class for the past two years and find it strange that no one ran against us if they seem to be so dissatisfied. Accepting for sophomores interested in running for junior office will be held in the next few weeks, according to Election Commissioner Amy Altesleben.

"It appears that the class wasn't satisfied with the ticket," Altesleben said. They obviously voiced their opinions in the election, hopefully there will be more of a selection of tickets running in the next few weeks."

The Field ticket has not given up all hope.

"We are the most pro-Saint Mary's, pro-sophomore class people you'll ever meet," Field said. "We will run again to prove ourselves because we want to continue our efforts from the past two years."

The officers-elect for the class of 1996 are Leanne Jones, president; Laurie DeMattia, vice president; Monica Moore, secretary; and Megan Reilly, treasurer; winning 51 percent of the vote.

Following the trend of support for GLND/SMC shown by other student government councils on campus, the Hall Presidents' Council unanimously passed a resolution last night objecting to the administration's policy and calling for official recognition of that group.

The resolution, submitted by Nikole Neidlinger, office was presented by Student Body President of Student Affairs. O'Hara has seven days to respond to the resolution.

The resolution states that recognition of GLND/SMC is important to the majority of students on campus. These people (the HPC members) are representative of the students, she said. "This is what the campus wants."

A Campus Life Council resolution, identical to the one passed by HPC, is to be presented by Student Body President David Helsing to Patricia O'Hara, vice-president of Student Affairs. O'Hara has seven days to respond to the CJC resolution.

GLND/SMC co-chair John Blandford, who attended the HPC meeting, said that the administration is out of touch with the rest of the campus.

"I think the administration is missing what the faculty and students are after," he said.

Following the trend of support for GLND/SMC shown by other student government councils on campus, the Hall Presidents' Council unanimously passed a resolution last night objecting to the administration's policy and calling for official recognition of that group.

The resolution, subm itted by Nikole Neidlinger, off- campus co-president, and HPC co-chairs Rich Palermo and Hilary Bonenberger, and Jonathan Patrick and James Nilson, who are all members of a unique organization of students called Volunteers In Support of Admissions (VISA).

VISA is a group of approximately 230 Saint Mary's students dedicated to volunteering their time to aid the Admissions Office in promoting their college to interested, prospective, and accepted students.

According to admissions counselor and VISA Coordinator Katherine Rosswurm, this element of voluntarism is what makes VISA so unique to Saint Mary's in comparison to other schools where student admissions workers are usually paid. The group helps supplement and extend the work of the five full time admission counselors at Saint Mary's.

"We only have five admission counselors at Saint Mary's," Rosswurm said. "Five women can't pull in a freshman class on their own."

VISA also gives prospective students a student personality to relate to, in addition to the personal attention they receive from the counselor who works their area.

"Sometimes students might not believe us. They might be much too guarded, but they will believe a student," Rosswurm said. VISA helps the recruiting process through its four main departments: high school liaisons, overnight hostsesses, telecounseling, and tour guides.

Oh, the Power of Prayer...

The semester is progressing at a quickened speed now. Only 16 days remain until spring break. So life is looking pretty good, except for the fact that we are bombarded with exams, papers, and other time consuming projects. Since we’ve had so many tests lately, I’ve started feeling some really disturbing things about the whole exam process. It begins the night before the exam, though you’ve known about it for five weeks. You see all of these people in the library from your class. Thinking that they’re slackers just like you, you approach them and ask how their studying is coming.

Contrary to your wishful thinking, they proceed to explain to you that they feel completely confessable about one this because they’ve been studying for roughly three weeks now. After a minor corona, you wish your fellow student “good luck.” You decide to reevaluate the situation and decide that yeah you can afford that “good luck.” You decide to reevaluate the situation and decide that yeah you can afford that “good luck.”

So you randomly pick and choose what you’ll study and pray to M. Jude that you’ve choose wisely. Jude is not off the beaten path. But maybe, just maybe you’ll see a 94 at the bottom of your exam.

You confidently make your way into the classroom which is filled with a couple down students cramming in all of those last minute formulas and definitions. Obviously, they have not yet been able to receive the power of prayer. Then those people start to make you nervous because they are talking about things you didn’t even study—and this stuff they’re memorizing. It’s at this very point that you remember there’s a test.

If you haven’t blanketsed by now, congratulate yourself. You’re not out of time to swing by Mediguyre on your way to the test, you’ll probably have to settle for Dial-a-Miracle and gummy bears.. Now you’re ready to begin. But there is so much information, and it is startling to get hit, so you begin arbitrarily deciding what is important. “He won’t ask that.” “I need to study this.” “This is a must.”

But maybe, just maybe you’ll see a 94 at the bottom of your exam. So you’re ready to begin.

For all those caught in the dilemma between religion and economics, Catholicism and capitalism, Rebecca Blank, a professor at Northwestern University Business School, addressed this controversy basing her thoughts on Biblical testimony and her own experience.

Blank, who has a Ph.D. in economics, also discussed how the Christian Church demonstrates its involvement in economic policy. The strongest authority that integrates these opposing sides, according to Blank, comes from both the Old Testament and the New Testament in the Bible.

She said that in her studies as an economist, “working with data and statistics is not enough to be an economist.” It is important to have hands-on involvement with society in order to better understand the system, Blank said. She used the term “middle axioms” to explain that “in a market economy, we must care for those that the economy does not.”

Blank suggested five ways in which the Christian Church is involved with the economy empowers the poor to speak. Fourth, it models successful alternative economies and programs. Most importantly, Blank said, prayer in the Church community is an integral part for a successful economy.

Recycling program requires funding

Saint Mary's Residence Hall Association (RHA) hopes to ask the administration for enough funding to implement a new recycling program.

At last night's meeting, RHA Vice-President Kathy Pilevage announced that Sara Sawtelle, a Saint Mary's chemistry professor, offered the support of the science department.

According to Pilevage, Sawtelle said that the science department would be happy to offer support for a recycling program.

RHA would like to implement a program comparable to Notre Dame's program, but is unable to do so due to a lack of funding.

The admission counselors cannot possibly go to all the high schools in their area, especially in the states they do not cover. According to Rosswurm, this department all the more vital, according to Rosswurm.

Many of the details of the high school liaison program are worked out by high school liaison programs with high schools, according to Rosswurm.

"For many prospective students, it is good to see a Saint Mary's student who went to their high school," Rosswurm said. "I have the chance to personally contact students that the Saint Mary's counselors often do not have the opportunity to visit at distant high schools," junior Herrmann said.

"Saint Mary's admission counselors try to visit the high schools as possible and try to give every applicant individual attention, but I think that an admission counselor makes an incredible influence on the decisions of the incoming freshmen.

The overnight host program is also key in reaching students and getting them on campus before they actually arrive for orientation.

According to Rosswurm, about ten weekends are set aside each semester for group hosts to spend one night on campus. They can choose from either a Thursday or Friday night.

"Katherine (Rosswurm) tells us that she is an overnight host to Saint Mary's to the prospective students," said overnight host co-chairman Imburr.

According to Imburr, the overnight host takes time with their guests watching movies in the dorm room, taking students to classes, and last year she even took someone to the Gin Blossoms concert. As a co-chair, Imburr calls hostesses to make sure they have contacted their guests to make arrangements. She is "on call" for hostesses during the school week, and she makes sure guests receive a follow-up call.

Imburr's involvement in VISA stems from her pride in Saint Mary's. "I like being a host and want to share Saint Mary's with prospective students just basically because I am proud of my school."

The telecounseling department is a third department of VISA that has broken records in reaching large numbers of students by phone this year. According to telecounseling co-chairwoman Brandee Carlson, the job of telecounselors involves calling prospective students, normally juniors and seniors in high school, accepted students, and students who have shown an interest in Saint Mary's.

"We try to promote interest, answer questions about the school, and talk about student-related information," Carlson said.

The telecounselors meet approximately three weeks per semester for three hours an evening during the week, and for two hours on Thursday, to phone prospects, according to Carlson. An admission counselor has to be always present in case a telephone counselor has any more technical question about admissions standards and academics.

All admission counselors call students in their area as well, but in the fall, the telecounselors call to answer questions about student life, and in the Spring, they call to congratulate students on their acceptance and to again answer questions.

Another unique aspect of the telecounseling department is alumnae involvement. Numerous Saint Mary's alumnae make phone calls to answer questions as well. Alumnae also get involved in VISA by attending college nights and when counselors cannot and they also hold receptions at their homes for prospective students.

The fourth department of VISA is the tour guide program. According to tour guide co-chair Jamie Nilson, students can be involved as either weekday or weekend guides. Tour guides spend an hour a week giving a scheduled tour. Special event tour guides give tours during special events, such as Spring Day on Campus.

Tour guides are trained at the beginning of the semester. "At the beginning of the semester, myself, the three other tour guide chairwomen, and an admission counselor take the department on a tour and give handed books with facts about the Saint Mary's campus," Nilson said.

"When I visited Saint Mary's, my tour guide sold the school to me," she added. "The tour was a very big deciding factor in my decision and also my parents'. I am trying to give back to Saint Mary's some of what it has given to me."

The personal attention that this admissions program strives for is reflective of the entire atmosphere at Saint Mary's.

"VISA shows Saint Mary's personal touch. We go overboard when a student visits. We try to show them a good time, give them a great tour and make them at home," Rosswurm said. "We want to show her that if she chooses to come to Saint Mary's, this is how she will be treated. Saint Mary's life is just an extension of the treatment the students have gotten from VISA and the admissions office."

Throughout the past twelve years, VISA has grown from a handful of students to 230, who are committed to helping see that their school grow.

"VISA is the most important club on campus because it is constantly ensuring Saint Mary's future," Rosswurm said.

Baltic States in transition

By JENNIFER ANTONINI
News Writer

The future of the Baltic States is a complex issue, according to Kari Mottola of the Finnish Foreign Ministry Office.

Mottola offered an explanation of the transformation of the former Russian states yesterday at the Hesburgh Center.

The Baltics, which include Latvia, Lithuania, and Estonia, are undergoing a transformation since their independence in 1991. Prior to their independence these Baltic States were subject to external and internal crises, he said.

“The Baltic States wish to be treated like any other sovereign state,” Mottola said. Mottola explained that the Baltic States’ fight for equality began with becoming independent from Russia and eliminating any Soviet practices in the States. The Baltics have taken a “no nonsense” attitude toward guarding against the Soviets running their country.

Since their independence, the Baltic States have entered a transition period. Russian groups have been withdrawing from the three Baltic States since August 1994. The economy has been changed as well as Russian training submarines have been dismantled, according to Mottola.

The hardest part of the Baltic’s reembrace, Mottola said, is their fight to be integrated into the European Union and North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

This integration period means that the Baltic States “have to deliver,” Mottola said. According to Mottola, aiming to become members puts these States in the position to compete. In 1996, the European Union is predicted to enlarge. Mottola sees the Baltic States as having an equal chance at membership in NATO.

Geopolitics and geostrategy will determine if the Baltic States will gain a membership to NATO. The road to stability for the Baltic States is going to be rough but equality will come, Mottola said.

link our class together, and think that a directory that lists seniors according to where they live would really help,” Jones said.

The Pauliite Rachkowski (president), Heather Durie (vice president), Robin Walsh (secretary) and Besty Killian (treasurer) ticket received 39 percent of the vote, and ten percent of the junior class abstained. Fifty-seven percent of the class of 1996 voted yesterday.

“We hope that Pauliite’s ticket stays involved next year because we’ll need their help,” Jones continued. “We can’t wait to get our board in place, lay out our goals and expectations, and get off to a good start.”

The Ellen Coleman (president), Debbie Dziekan (vice-president), Katie Mahon (secretary) and Meghan McNally (treasurer) ticket swept the class of 1998 with 50 percent of the vote.

“We were very happy about the results,” Coleman said. “We would like to thank everyone who had confidence in us. We hope that we will serve the class of 1998 well.”

The ticket consisting of Martin Shaughnessy (president), Sarah Grudzinski (vice-president), Amy Moore (secretary) and Claire Konstant (treasurer) took 25 percent of the vote, while the Sarah Corkean (president), Roseann Bour (vice-president), Katie Macdonald (secretary) and Carrie Koontz (treasurer) ticket received 20 percent.

“We want our classmates to become involved with their government from the beginning,” Coleman said. “We want to begin implementing a recycling and volunteering program right away.”

The election results are unofficial until confirmed 48 hours after the closing of the polls.

Religious group to oppose surgeon general

By VICKI BROWN
Associated Press

NASHVILLE
The Southern Baptist Convention will oppose President Clinton's choice for U.S. surgeon general, leaders of the nation's largest Protestant denomination said Tuesday.

'Urges retention of Dr. Foster'

Southern Baptists, whose 15.4 million members include Clinton and Vice President Al Gore, oppose abortion and preach sexual abstinence until marriage — two points on which Baptist leaders criticized Dr. Henry Foster.

'This is not our sole reason for opposing him, but the man has acknowledged doing at least 39 abortions,' said Richard Land, head of the Southern Baptist Christian Life Commission, which deals with public policy issues for the denomination.

Southern Baptist Convention President Jim Henry planned a news conference Wednesday to urge Southern Baptists to contact their senators about Foster's nomination.

Foster, an obstetrician from Nashville, was picked Feb. 2 to replace Dr. Joycelyn Elders as the country's top public health officer.

Elders was fired after saying she wanted to teach abstinence to teenagers and oppose government distribution of contraceptives to teens.

Foster, on leave as dean of Meharry Medical College in Nashville, made a name for himself by fighting teen-age pregnancy in Nashville's housing projects.

His "I Have a Future" program aims to delay sexual activity in teens-agers through a variety of tactics, including abstinence and contraception.

Copies are available to those who request them.

Kids with cancer survive
same, black or white

By BRENDA COLEMAN
Associated Press

CHICAGO
Black children with cancer survive as well as their white counterparts if they get state-of-the-art care, even when the black youngsters are poorer or have worse cancers, a study found.

'The most surprising finding to us was that there were no differences in survival among black children in the same hospital,' said Dr. Ching-Hon Pui, vice chairman of the department of pediatrics at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis.

The findings are reported in Wednesday's issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association.

Black children tend to have more aggressive cancers that are also more difficult to treat. While researchers said these differences are not the result of inferior care, they are diagnosing, Pui said.

Yet state-of-the-art treatment is the same, black or white, for all children at St. Jude, he noted. They are treated equally and are not assigned to certain types of treatment. Therapists who work on specific cancers are also not told whether their patient is black or white.

For example, in leukemia, there were no differences in outcome between black and white children treated in the same hospital.

'The results may be unique to the Memphis hospital,' the researchers noted. At other hospitals, they said, results might vary from those at St. Jude.

While the study results are promising for black children, they are not for all. Overall survival rates for black children are still lower than those for white children.

More black children are diagnosed with cancer, which is probably reflecting the higher incidence of poverty among African-American children in America, said Dr. Suzanne Ildstad, a pediatric oncologist at St. Jude.

'Baboon supplies marrow for AIDS victim to replace Dr. Joycelyn Elders as surgeon general

By DANIEL HANEY
Associated Press

ATLANTA
In a sign of doctors' growing despair in the fight against AIDS, a patient with the disease will soon receive a bone marrow transplant from a baboon to rebuild his ravaged immune system.

The transplant, described Tuesday at a conference sponsored by the American Association for the Advancement of Science, is meant to resupply the human bloodstream with baboon blood cells, which do not get infected with the AIDS virus.

Given the fact that there is no treatment for AIDS, people have been very comfortable with moving ahead," said Dr. Suzanne Ildstad, who is directing baboon experiments at Emory University.

One early attempt at the procedure has failed, but animal experiments suggest that this time, the transplant might work, thanks to a new discovery in immunology.

Many questions remain, however, including whether baboon blood cells can carry out the same job inside a person as human cells do.

The operation will be done at San Francisco General Hospital, where doctors are collaborating with Ildstad.

Researchers would even consider such a seemingly outlandish approach..."It fulfills everything we hope it will," Ildstad said.

The operation will take place sometime in the next few months, in one of several terminal ill AIDS patients who have been screened for the surgery.

The operation is expected to take at least a year. Researchers hope the baboon marrow will last for 5 to 10 years, and that they can produce more than enough to replace the patient's own marrow.

There is no danger the baboon marrow will be transmitted to the patient.

The baboons will be kept under surveillance for signs of disease.

AIDS victims are still living with the disease, however, and even the most promising therapies have yet to reach the clinic.

Dr. Anthony Fauci, head of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, said, "I'm not optimistic that we're going to have a cure in the next decade of all-out research, no therapy has been convincingly shown to even slow the disease."

The attempt is clearly being taken seriously. Collaborators on the experiment include Drs. Anthony Fauci, head of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, and Dr. Robert Gallo, a pioneering AIDS researcher at the National Cancer Institute.

AIDS wrecks the body's ability to fight disease by attacking its blood cells, particularly a category of white cells called T cells.

Researchers will transplant the baboon marrow cells, called stem cells, that manufacture new blood cells.

If all goes well, these cells will supplant and repopulate the blood with all kinds of baboon white cells, including T cells, as well as red cells.

Ildstad said her work in lab animals suggests that the transplanted marrow will permanently take up residence in its new host and go on producing blood cells indefinitely.

Experiments giving rat marrow to mice have been successful, she said. Not only does the marrow survive, but the blood cells it makes seem to work perfectly fine.

In her latest test, she has given baboon marrow to three baboons. The first baboon to undergo the transplant, six months ago, is still doing well, and 20 percent of its circulating blood cells are now human.

Happy 21st Aaron!

Preparation time reduced with software

By VIVIAN MARINO
Associated Press

NEW YORK

For a few weeks every winter John Lewis would go into hibernation, hole up not because of the chill outside but because the cold, hard stacks of tax forms, reference books and spare calculators awaiting him in the dining room.

"We could only eat on the kitchen table," said Lewis, 57, of Rockville, Md., a recently retired Honeywell Corp. marketing executive. "My wife kept on threatening to leave; of course, she didn't."

Tax season is a little less of a burden these days. Most of the cumbersome work involved in preparing the Lewises' returns is handled by their personal computer — in less than half the usual preparation time and at a fraction of the cost of hiring a professional.

Many other people, who have had similarly taxing ordeals, are also turning to PC tax preparation software for help this year.

"The demand for them now is pretty good...and growing," said David Trembley, research director for the Software Publishers Association.

In fact, Trembley says, sales of tax software have been outpacing the industry as a whole.

Revenue of tax software publishers was up 19 percent in the first nine months of 1994 from the previous year, while unit sales jumped 26 percent, he said, quoting the most recent data available.

For the current tax season, industry leaders TurboTax and TaxCut report sales up around 30 percent and at least 20 percent respectively.

Mark Guine, a vice president at Intuit, which publishes TurboTax, said the heavy demand contributed to a temporary backlog of orders.

Both companies expect demand to grow in the future.

"Clearly, some people will never use tax software, but still there's a large number of people who could potentially use them," said Daniel Caine, chief developer for TaxCut, which is published by Block Financial Software, a subsidiary of H&R Block. "The category is nowhere near saturated."

To be sure, the Internal Revenue Service estimates that half the 116 million individual tax returns expected this year will be prepared by nonprofessionals, most of the pencil-and-eraser variety.

The IRS expects to receive 5.4 million PC-generated 1040 tax returns this year, up from 4.8 million in 1994 and 1.5 million in 1993.

Steve Pyrek, an IRS spokesman, says tax software users usually get their tax refund a couple of weeks earlier than those who complete their returns by hand because PC-generated returns are nearer and use less paper and are therefore easier to process.

The steady increase in tax software usage, and the potential for more, is partly due to the fact that more people are buying PCs. About 40 percent of all U.S. households are expected to own one by the end of 1995.

But tax software also is growing in popularity because the products have improved. And prices have come down considerably, with the average cost for a final-version program around $30 to $40.

Early, or planning versions, which come out in October, go for as little as $8.95, with a promised discount on the final product.

Some companies, like Parson's Technology, are even giving limited samples away, while more offer price cuts on programs for state income tax returns.

When tax software programs were introduced about 10 years ago, all buyers got for their money were tax forms duplicated on their computer screen.

The latest souped-up versions offer a wide variety of functions, including access to virtually all available tax forms and a custom form for each user; on-line advice; up-to-date tax law information; the ability to access data from other personal finance software; and full-motion videos on most of the multimedia CD-ROM programs.

We would really appreciate advanced notice so give us a call.

See You on Saturday!
In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to have the Assistance of Counsel for his defense. U.S. Const. Amend. VI. The Supreme Court has found that the constitutional right to effective assistance of counsel includes the right to represent oneself, provided that one "knowingly and intelligently" waives his entitlement to counsel and intelligently" waives his entitlement to have counsel. Therefore, the right to counsel cannot be considered to be a constitutional right in the first place—cannot take from an individual absent the authority tends to indicate that it does not, and I strongly agree with both the reason in the first place—

Kirsten Dunne, ND '92, is a third year law student.

Mr. Ferguson seems to have become at least partially aware that he should not have represented himself. Following his conviction Friday night, he asked for a court-appointed attorney for his appeal (a question which will have to wait for resolution). However, he completely lacked this awareness when he originally fought for the right to represent himself, and under such circumstances, his conviction cannot be justly allowed to stand. Not only does it represent a miscarriage of justice in a broad sense, but it demonstrates a failure to recognize what the Supreme Court identified twenty years ago as the lifeblood of the law"—respect for the individual. When asked what he thought of the outcome of the case, commentator Daryl Gates responded that "It's a shame New York doesn't have the death penalty." Such a statement invites no intelligent response, but Gates is right in one respect: the outcome is, indeed, a shame.
The bookstore has great t-shirts for Mom and Dad—but when students want to buy t-shirts for themselves, they buy them from other students. There is a gentle knock on the door. You see a young student wearing a spanning new white t-shirt with a creative slogan, and a back pack dangling over one shoulder. If you are impressed with the shipment, you gladly hand over ten to twelve bucks in exchange for the t-shirt. If you are disappointed, you send him with empty pockets to your neighbors.

While watching the young entrepreneur you are thinking, what a great way to make a fast buck. However, you notice tiny beads of sweat dripping from the solicitor’s forehead. Is it worth the risk? Is it really illegal? Yet, what would college be like without unauthorized t-shirts?

Mod Quad junior Jeff created two t-shirts last year for the Boston College and Florida State games. He purchased one hundred black cloth t-shirts from an acquaintance that runs an underground printing company in his basement in Houston, Texas. Each shirt cost roughly $6.50 after being printed, door to door, he directly pulled six to seven of his friends and made a proposition. If each friend sold ten t-shirts, they would each get a shirt free. That would account for approximately seventy t-shirts, and Jeff sold the rest on his own.

The Boston College t-shirt with the slogan "Revenge Never Tasted so Sweet," sold out before the game started.

According to Digger, if he was going to do it all over again he would have had a better strategy. Some facts to remember:

• Students like alcohol-related topics.
• Hit Notre Dame and Saint Mary's bookstore and decided to create 1,000 hats in two different shades of green. Currently they have only sold one hundred and seventy-five.
• College students just do not have that much money to spend, said Leslie. "People would rather have three pitchers of beer instead of a hat. We were very careful. We were also respectful to our R.A.'s. We did not put up any signs advertising our hats, and if they were in the hall we would bypass them. All in all, it taught us a lesson in business, and how important marketing really is."

"This was definitely a learning experience for me," said Digger. "I didn't only do it for the money. It is more rewarding when you have a creative idea and you put it on a shirt, and you are sitting in class and two or three people have it on." Digger does not have future plans in the shirt business. Senior off-campus student Allie took a different approach. She and a female companion would roller blade around the campus. "It was a big plan," said Digger. "For the Cotton Bowl extra money to buy plane tickets to California and Atlanta."

"I would definitely do it again," said Allie. "although I was a little scared about getting caught. I figured they were on foot and I was on Rollerblades, so if they saw us, we would have the advantage."

Some of Allie's tips:

• Students like alcohol-related topics.
• Hit Notre Dame and Saint Mary's alumni—they spend more money.
• Tailgate parties are fun places to sell your shirts.

Two Saint Mary's students shared a similar idea. Erin and Leslie were dissatisfied with the selection of hats in the Saint Mary's bookstore and decided to create their own.

"We love it when we see our hats around campus. I have even seen one in the Orlando airport," said Erin. "However, we had an unrealistic goal."

According to Leslie, it was a lot more work than they expected. They purchased two hundred and fifty hats in two different shades of green. Currently they have only sold one hundred and seventy-five.

"College students just do not have that much money to spend," said Leslie. "People would rather have three pitchers of beer instead of a hat. We were very careful. We were also respectful to our R.A.'s. We did not put up any signs advertising our hats, and if they were in the hall we would bypass them. All in all, it taught us a lesson in business, and how important marketing really is."

Leslie and Erin's suggestions:

• Do not overload on your first order. If they sell, order more.
• Freshman Orientation is the biggest weekend for sales.
• Be prepared to put a lot of time into it.
• Some students are not so lucky. Zahm Hall senior Roger lost six hundred dollars selling unauthorized "Northern Exposure" t-shirts before the Florida State game. He was caught by Pangborn's rectress, and all his t-shirts were confiscated. He was forced to hand over his profits on all two hundred t-shirts to student affairs, which gave the money to charity.

"It ended up working out really well," Roger said. "The money was used to pay the heating bill for a South Bend family, for the entire month of January."

In gambling with unauthorized t-shirts, there may be more to lose than there is to win. Nevertheless, next year there will be an array of t-shirts with brand new creative slogans to accompany a shipment of the old classics for incoming freshman.

McMahon named Irish DB coach

Special to The Observer

Associated Press

Tom McMahon, defensive backfield coach the last three years at Wisconsin, has been named secondary coach at the University of Notre Dame by head football coach Lou Holtz. McMahon replaces Dean Pees, who coached the Irish defensive backs for two years on Barry Alvarez's Badger staff. McMahon said Wisconsin knew the nation in interceptions in 1993 with Pees, who fell Messier Big Ten with seven pickoffs. McMahon's '94 Wisconsin pass defense ranked fourth in the Big Ten, permitting only 121.6 passing yards per game, with Messier ranking 14th nationally in interceptions.

Prior to coming to Wisconsin, McMahon spent three seasons (1989-91) as secondary coach at Arizona State - with his '90 Sun Devil unit ranking fifth nationally in pass efficiency defense and leading the Pac-10 in interceptions. He coached Arizona State defensive backs Nathan LaDuke and Phillip Sparks, both finalists for the '90 Jim Thorpe Award - with both second-team All-American, earningursors Warren Woodson being chosen in the first two rounds of the '92 NFL Draft.

Grateful Grant is the King of NBA rookies

Associated Press

OK, so it sounds corny. Brian Grant, enjoying his NBA rookie season, believes that his hard work paid off.

He is opening some eyes with the Sacramento Kings.

After a contract holdout kept him out of training camp, Grant won the power forward job in 23 games between the lines.

In his first full month as a starter, he has averaged 15.8 points and 9.7 rebounds in 15 games. He started the NBA's rookie scoring race.

"Lots of times, I thought I'd be in Europe, or back home working — somewhere," said Grant, who was born in Georgetown, Ohio. "The surprising thing is, if you work hard, good things will come to you. I thought I was only in high school and college.

"Sometimes you do everything we've asked of him," Kings coach Gary St. Jean said. "There's a very big upside to his basketball. I couldn't give you a downside.

Through those three quarters Monday night against the Detroit Pistons, Grant had done game-high 20 points, and Sacramento had a two-point lead.

But Grant was blanked in the fourth quarter.

He finished with 20 points — 12 of them in the first quarter — but the Kings were blanked in the fourth and lost.

McMahon says that Grant is a "guy who's done everything we've asked of him."

But it wasn't always clear to Grant, who had only 9.8 points a game, had 10 during the deciding spurt alone and finished with 14 points. Rodrick Rhodes led the Wildcats with 16 points, and Tony Delk also had 14.

Kentucky had the best record in the SEC in 1990-91 but didn't win the championship because of NCAA probation.

The Wildcats now hold a 1-2 game lead over Mississippi State with only three conference games to go in quest of their first outright title since 1985-86.

They also clinched a tie for the Eastern Division title.

It was a dreadful offensive display by Alabama, which continued to struggle at home against conference opponents.

The Tide has now lost four of the seven SEC games played at Coleman Coliseum, which was the scene of the Tide's first season loss.

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Shawn Respert and Quinton Baston put back Jimmy King’s missed free throw as the second half wound down, but didn’t get a chance to slice the Michigan State lead to one point.

Respert was fouled immediately on the inbound play and hit both free throws to push the lead back to three.

The Spartans worked the ball around for a final shot, but it was tipped away by Respert. Jackson recovered under the basket and Michigan State led 45-44, mercy killing the Wolverines with 19.2 seconds remaining.

Each team had trouble scoring against the opposing team — but Michigan and Michigan State battled the entire second half of the first half, hitting 20 of 28 shots, withstanding a late surge to beat Pittsburg 85-72 Tuesday night.

Michigan State’s lead 27-19 with 8:1/2 minutes left in the first half — the biggest lead by either team — but Michigan State retook it with a minute remaining to cut the margin to 65-62. Baston also had 10 rebounds.

But Makhtar Ndiaye scored on a putback to send the teams off the court at halftime tied at 36-36.

Jackson and Maurice Taylor finished with 17 points apiece for Michigan, and King and Baston added 13 apiece. Baston also had 10 rebounds.

The Spartans tied the score at 34-34 on a Snow free throw, then regained the lead on a pair of free throws by Brooks, who had 13 points in the first half.

Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim watched his Orangemen hang on to an early lead to defeat Pittsburg in the Carrier Dome.

Orangemen cruise

SYRACUSE, N.Y.

No. 17 Syracuse, led by John Wallace’s 20 points, built a 29-point second-half lead, then withstood a late surge to beat Pittsburgh 85-72 Tuesday night.

Syracuse (18-6, 11-4 Big East) shot 71 percent in the first half, hitting 20 of 28 shots, in stopping a three-game losing streak and defeating Pittsburgh (7-16, 3-12) for the eighth consecutive time.

The undermanned Panthers, with only seven scholarship players on the roster, battled back, aided by 10 Syracuse turnovers and a 25-13 rebounding edge in the second half.

The Panthers shaved Syracuse’s lead to 73-64 on Orlando Antigua’s 3-pointer with 2:36 to play. Syracuse hit 10 consecutive free throws in the final 1:55.

Pittsburgh, which overcame a 15-point deficit in losing to Syracuse 65-63 in the first meeting this season, got 21 points from Jamie Peterson before he fouled out with 1:14 to play and 15 from Antigua.

Lawrence Moten finished with 19 points for Syracuse and Michael Floyd added 14, including 6-for-6 from the foul line in the final two minutes.

Wallace was perfect on six shots from the field and two free throws for 14 points in the first half.
Allen, Huskies surge past feeble Eagles, 88-75

By CHRISTINE HANLEY
Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn.
Ray Allen matched his career-high with 31 points and No. 4 Connecticut used a 19-2 run early in the second half Tuesday night for an 88-75 comeback victory over Boston College.

The Huskies (21-2, 14-1 Big East) were down by nine points three times early in the second before making the big run that sent them to their 15th straight win over the Eagles.

Allen, who scored a season-low 11 points Saturday when Connecticut was thrashed 96-73 by Villanova, finished 11-for-20 from the field, including 6-for-11 from 3-point range.

Donny Marshall finished with 20 points and Brian Fair and Travis Knight each added 12 as the Huskies rebounded from their first Big East loss of the season.

Paul Grant led BC with a career-high 20 points, one better than the 19 he scored in loss Saturday against St. John's. Duane Woodward finished with 14 and Danya Abrams had 13.

After Abrams put Boston College up 52-43 with a baseline jumper, Marshall started the Huskies' spurt with a 3-pointer and Allen scored the last eight points, making it 62-54 on a three-point play.

It didn't look like a game between the best and worst of the Big East.

Boston College (8-15, 2-13), which had built its halftime lead by forcing nine turnovers and shooting 55 percent from the field, was held to Antonio Granger's pullup jumper during the 4 1/2-minute stretch. Woodward ended Connecticut's run with a 3-pointer to make it 62-57 with 9:41 remaining, but the Eagles failed to get closer the rest of the way.

Tyson ready to rumble next month

INDIANAPOLIS
State prison officials say former heavyweight champ Mike Tyson is still scheduled for release next month from the Indiana Youth Center, despite a report he could be let go this week.

his opponent he compares to favorable 1994 graduate Brian Weiford—who jabbed his way to titles last year and in 1993. But Weiford was a longtime student of boxing where Keaney is more like a student cramming for a final.

It doesn’t help the cause that he will not participate today in what would have been his final sparring session. He is one of five boxers playing in the intramural basketball finals tonight in the JACC Arena. Nate Mick, Keaney, and Jeff Goddard for the Off-Campus team, Ryan Walker and Dave Baker for Grace.

"I’m not happy about missing practice but I didn’t think our team would get to the playoffs and here we are in the finals."

Baker for Grace.

"I think a lot of guys there first time have never got back in shape."

And then someone reminds Keaney that he could face Mike Manley, last year’s 180 champ somewhere down the road. He smiles and shrugs and says the only thing he can.

"This guys lift and are bigger than me. All I can do is... jah."

Pairings: The trainers and managing pairs and seed the fighters late tonight but the top seeds in each weight class are all but set.

135 - Eric Garcia
140 - Greg Marks
145 - Dru Couri
150 - Chris Rosen
155 - Eric Hilligas
160 - Mike Thompson
165 - John Christoforetti
170 - Jeff Goddard
175 - Rob Naticchia
180 - Mike Manley

There might not be a 185 division in favor of a 185er down the road. He smiles and says the only thing he can.

"This guys lift and are bigger than me. All I can do is... jah."

"The quarterbacks and Washington had a good showing last week."

"I hate the clock and the 3-point shot," Knight said after a sloppy win over Northwestern. "I wish I had retired seven years ago and wouldn’t have to put up with that... because I don’t even like the game."

Knight certainly can’t like his position as his team bids for a 10th straight NCAA tournament berth. With five games remaining—all but one against teams with better overall records—and no postseason conference tournament, the Hoosiers probably would have to finish at least 18-12 to make the 64-team field.

"I don’t have any pretense that we’re a national contender," Knight said after a loss to Michigan snapped the nation’s longest home winning streak at 50 games last month. "I’d just like to see us develop an attitude toward playing that makes us as good as we can be... not game by game but possession by possession. Then it would be interesting to see what kind of team we have."

How could a team that was 21-9 last season and a preseason No. 10 pick fail so far? The answer is in the offense. Except for senior Tyson King seemed to back away from his earlier comments.

"Mike will be out when they let him out," he said. "I don’t want to be put in a position of speculating."

Tyson is serving a six-year sentence in Indiana for a 1992 rape conviction.

"Usually, Indiana can beat you to death from the outside, but they’ve struggled with that this season, as we all know," Michigan coach Steve Fisher said.

Henderson, a 6-foot-9 senior, leads the Big Ten in field goal percentage at .594 and is second in scoring at 23.3 points a game. Forward Brian Evans, averaging 16.8 points and a team-high 3.2 assists, is the only other double-figure scorer but has been inconsistent.

As a team, the Hoosiers are shooting 47.4, their worst since Knight’s first Indiana team went 454 in 1971-72. Even free throws, normally a point of Hoosier pride, are tough to make—672 from the foul line is the worst since 444 in 1970-71, the year before Knight arrived.

In another loss at Michigan on Sunday, Indiana shot .296 and Henderson was held to 12 points on 4-of-13 from the field. The Hoosiers’ season average of 75.2 points a game is the lowest since they averaged 71.2 in 1984-85, the last time they did not make the NCAA tournament.

Knight was asked if the Hoosiers stay after practice to work on shooting.

"No, we don’t allow them to shoot," he said sarcastically. "We spend almost no time working on shooting. We practice our entrance and exit and the lather man’s name, and then we go."

With the graduation of Damon Bailey, Todd Leary and Pat Graham, all effective outside scorers, Knight has gone with freshmen.

Hurtling Hoosiers

By STEVE HERMAN

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.
An NCAA tournament without Indiana March Madness minus the General in the red sweater!

Unless the Hoosiers suddenly find their scoring touch, that could be the capper for a season that already has seen — a 50-game home-court winning streak snapped.

— 10 losses, the most since 1990.

— A loss to Michigan in which Indiana shot less than 30 percent.

— Play so poor that coach Bob Knight had to deal with retirement talk and wondered out loud whether the new style of speed and 3-pointers had passed him by.

"I hate the clock and the 3-point shot," Knight said after a sloppy win over Northwestern. "I wish I had retired seven years ago and wouldn’t have to put up with that... because I don’t even like the game."

Taubenheim shines but Belles bow, 66-56

By ARWEN DICKEY
Sports Writer

Playing catch-up last night, the 5-16 Saint Mary’s basketball team was defeated by the 20-5 Spartans of Aurora University in a tight game, 66-56.

Early in the first half, Aurora went on a 9-2 run. Saint Mary’s kept after the Spartans though and tied up the game at 17 with 6:02 left in the half. Although Aurora took the lead again, the Belles finally got on top, 24-23, with 59 seconds left. Saint Mary’s went into the locker room finally got on top, 24-23, with 59 seconds left. Saint Mary’s went into the locker room.

The Belles had a breakdown in the second half according to head coach Marvin Wood. Saint Mary’s scored the first bucket of the half, but Aurora sunk a three-pointer to tie up the score 28-28. The Spartans took off with an 11 point run, and they never looked back.

“They threw in a half-court run and dump which created problems for us,” said Wood.

Even though the Belles kept the game close early in the second half, Aurora never gave up the lead again. The Spartans slowly picked up Saint Mary’s taking advantage of foul shots making 15-25 and three-point opportunities with five.

The Belles tried to come back late in the second half, but to no avail. Saint Mary’s scored 30 points in the second half compared to Aurora’s 41.

Wood commented, “Our shooting was poor, and they were quicker than we were. They put on pressure in the passing lanes and on the boards.”

The Belles had a stellar performance by junior forward Jennie Taubenheim who scored 20 points, grabbed 16 rebounds and had a three-point goal. Sophomore forward Katy Lalli also scored in double digits with ten while junior guard Colleen Andrews had seven including a three-pointer.

Sophomore Marianne Banisko and freshman Julie McGill had nine and six rebounds respectively.

“We had three girls out, and so we had people without experience playing. Hopefully we can get people healthy. We are going to work on our press and defensive scheme for Anderson University on Saturday,” said Wood.

Bengal Bouts trainer Terry Johnson looked up at Pat Keaney during his sparring session Tuesday and said the phrase the senior from Virginia has heard a thousand times, "The jab, throw the jab." The six-foot-five Keaney, standing in another hemisphere compared to the smallish Johnson, nodded his head and again faced his partner. "The jab, he thought. Always the jab.

Forgive Keaney's frustration with his role in the Bengal Bouts which start Sunday. A former walk-on with the Irish basketball team, Keaney is new to the sport of boxing and still understanding how a stilt wins in a sport of mallets. "Sometimes I wish I was fighting guys my own size, or that I could throw big punches," he said, "but I understand that if I'm going to have a chance to win it's going to be through the jab."

His understanding slips sometimes. He throws the big punch, lets his opponent get inside, and take a shot at his thin frame. Then Keaney hits his head and reminds himself, "The jab, Pat. The jab." It was a lesson he learned the first time he stepped in the ring to spar his roommate, Mike Mulderrig, six weeks ago. "I took a shot to the face and said to myself, 'Do I really want to do this?'" he said. "All I could think was that I liked basketball better."

But boxing has grown on Keaney and he is growing into a contender because of, well, his jab. "If I can keep guys off of me and stop the little guys from getting inside and pounding on my body then I think I have a chance," Keaney said. "There are some good boxers I'm going to have to face, guys that are stronger than me, but if I use my jab..."

The possibility of Keaney winning by decision is far greater than the possibility of him knocking out his opponents.

 Walsh looks to avenge loss to PE
By SHANNON O'DONNELL
Sports Writer

Don't always rely on the past to predict the future. That is the mentality of the Walsh women's interhall basketball team as they head into the finals tonight against the Pyros of Pasquerilla East. Walsh defeated Brennan-Phillips 34-32 Monday night to advance to the finals, and they are not going to let their fall to PE in the regular season dictate the outcome of tonight's challenge.

"PE beat us once during the regular season. They had a couple of players down low who killed us on the boards. We need to box out and keep them off the boards," Walsh coach Pat Carlevato said. "We need to use our quickness because I think we are quicker than they are."

The women of PE defeated Lyons 43-25 Monday night to advance to the finals.

BIG EAST BATTLES
Conference leaders UConn and Syracuse both prevailed last night in the rough and tumble Big East.
