Africa, world literature, and women's issues, Dr. Nalowo Lynonga will be teaching at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College as a visiting scholar from the University of Buena in the Republic of Cameroon, West Africa.

Lynonga has two classes at Saint Mary's—"Introduction to Language and Literature" and a world literature course. Her class at Notre Dame is a 300 level on major African writers and is full. One of her four courses is a seminar designed for faculty titled "Critical Issues in African Literature and Society."

"I will be covering lots of things, different backgrounds, contemporary African women's issues, and some of my own research," she said.

Lynonga offers a wonderful expansion for both the students and faculty," said Dr. Dorothy Feigl, vice-president and dean of faculty at Saint Mary's. "With Dr. Ann Louis teaching, studying abroad is becoming as a Fulbright Fellow at the University of Buena in Cameroon, this exploration opens a world of possibility for other exchanges like this one.

When asked how she would be teaching her American students as opposed to African students, Lynonga stated, "Somewhat the same but not with this special focus."

In addition to receiving her Ph.D. in Language and Literature from the University of Buena, Lynonga is planning an informal seminar for faculty and students. She is also looking forward to getting to know the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's community and having a chance to share her knowledge and experiences with them.

Lynonga expands literature program for faculty, students

GOP House freshmen prove 'money follows power'

WASHINGTON

Led by an aggressive freshman class, the new Republican-controlled House is enlisting all records in raising campaign cash and proving the Washington adage that money follows power.

Overall, House members of both parties raised $45.8 million through the first six months of this year, the beginning of a two-year election cycle, according to the Federal Election Commission.

That represented a 38 percent increase over the comparable period in 1993, when incumbents raised $31.5 million, and was the highest total in the 20 years records have been kept.

The increase is attributable to industrious money raising by Republicans, who raked in $27.5 million as they retired debts from last year's campaign and built political bank accounts to defend their majority in 1996. That is more than twice what they raised as a minority.

"Fund raising in general is a lot easier" now that the GOP has taken over, said Dan Morgan, who runs money for about 40 House Republicans including Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas. "People are returning my calls, saying, 'Let me find the money to do that.'

Comparing raising money for Armey when he was a mid-level leader in the minority with now, when he ranks No. 2 to Speaker Newt Gingrich, Morgan said, "It's like night and day.

"Among some PAC groups, there's been a sense of panic because they had invested so much in Democrats," said Steven Stockmeyer, a Republican who runs an association of publicans who won assignment to the vegetative Wining Ways and Means Committee, and Daniel Friis, N.H., a Commerce Committee member.

Among Emig's $1.05 million did super PACs the National Restaurant Association, which has pushed for higher tax deductibility of business meals; Boyd Gaming, which, like other gaming companies, wants to avoid higher gambling taxes; and the Chamber of Commerce, which hopes to get its work done by the House.

"Obviously with a Republican majority you've got a two-fer situation," said Stockmeyer of his business PAC clients.

"There is a strong inter-relationship between education and study of social justice, the experience, the reflection upon the experience and the consequential commitment to justice," she said.

The course study consists of two mandatory classes and three electives in departments including philosophy and economics. The group began offering classes in 1979.

Students take classes and also provide service directly to various communities. The program is planning an informal seminar this year so that all members of the group can get together to integrate their experiences.

Bellalta emphasizes that in a world literature program there is a stress on collaboration between people in different situations. Our students and faculty have different attributes. We strive to get together and solve problems.

"We work as a group, always as a group striving to improve social justice situations, helps others," she said.

"A lot of the women in the program come from rather con-
Could this be more disturbing?

I have only experienced true terror twice: the first was when I was five and almost skidded off the edge of a mountain, but, even more horrifying than that. Just a few weeks ago, I walked into the North Dining Hall. I write this article in hopes that my experience may help others.

Picture it. South Bend, 1995. I had made the five hour journey from home to campus. Having stopped only to quickly refill my gas tank and grab a soda, I was tired and starving. Fortunately enough, however, my arrival came on the same day as the opening of North Dining Hall. I was all ready to fill up on carboles in the Italian Eatery.

I can’t say that I wasn’t warned of the horrors that were to come. Friends of friends had told my roommates to be prepared for the new “welcome to the jungle” motif. Young and foolishly, I walked into the dining hall believing that nothing could be that bad. Anything could be an improvement over last year’s “eatable ivy” meal hall. I was so wrong. After being greeted by the same friendly and charismatic staff, I proceeded to walk into the dining room. I was hot prepared for what was in store.

The walls, once shades of plain white were now festooned with heinous flower and rope borders which not only clashed with the oh so simple carpentry, but also with each other. Huge wreaths predecker the walls with overly decorated flags. For myself, after this piece of red and blue scrap metal that they had placed outside of O’Swo, I was so wrong. I no longer believe that the University would tolerate such vandalism.

The food was a disaster. Up until I walked into the room which so graciously hosted the meal of the week, I was immediately shocked. Something about the way the dishes were decorated by inspired by the outdoors. Pseudo brick covered the walls, and the floors were covered with fake ivy coated the walls. Are all of the denizens of NDH supposed to believe that the University was a land of fried foods, I pressed on to the hall. I was reluctant to believe that the University would allow such a drastic change in the dining hall. I’m actually still except during exam and vacation periods. The American leading the Vatican’s delegation at the U.N. women’s conference said it was a week before she told the conference Tuesday she will work to build a consensus at the gathering, where the U.S. position is expected to clash with the pontiff’s. Vatican delegations were due to depart Wednesday for China to attend the Sept. 4-15 U.N. conference on the status of women. Pope John Paul II shook hands and chatted with delegation head Mary Ann Glendon, a Harvard law professor, and others in the 22-member team, which includes eight Americans. “It’s so important to have a good presence at the conference,” Paul told them. For weeks, John Paul has been making clear that the Vatican will aggressively wage its campaign against abortion, forced sterilization, contraceptive use and other women’s issues during the Beijing forum.

The unannounced Galileo spacecraft heading for Jupiter is plowing through a dust storm, the heaviest it has encountered on its interplanetary voyage. Scientists aren’t sure whether the electrical charges that dust comes from a volcano on Jupiter’s moon Io, from particles rings that circle the giant planet, or from the Comet Shoemaker-Levy 9, which crashed into Jupiter’s cloudless atmosphere last year. “Finding a source of dust like this coming out of Jupiter will help,” Jupiter acting like a big electromagnet accelerator sputtering dust into the solar system, is a completely unanticipated discovery,” Torrence Johnson, Galileo project scientist at NASA’s Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, said Tuesday. Instruments are detecting only about 20,000 tiny particles per day, said Eberhard Grun of the Max Planck Institute for Nuclear Physics. But that compares with a typical rate of only about one particle every three days on the voyage.

Man arrested for camera foulplay

SANTA FE, N.M.

A lawyer in town to lecture on sexual harassment said she was provoked when she witnessed, pointed her instant camera up her skirt and took a picture. When the “creep” did it to her again about 30 minutes later, Friday, three to five young men chased him down and pinned him in the parking lot, she said, and the police were called. “I’d say it’s slightly more than ironic to be there discussing sexual harassment and the work- place and to have this happen,” said 43-year-old Diana Scott of Los Angeles. Richard Marquez, 24, was arrested on charges of creating a public nuisance and disorderly conduct. Scott — who said she has “very good legs” and was wearing a very short skirt — was browsing in a shop when a man sneaked up while she was shopping, pointed an instant camera up her skirt and took a picture. When she heard a whispering click, she said she turned around, but a man had already crouched up her skirt. She said she ran out, but when she heard the click again she got angry. "I was just here we were running through the store," she said. "I was yelling, 'Stop that guy!'" Police Capt. Ray Rael said officers ran up and pointed to him and said, "That's my boy," Scott said. "I just shows you have to do more than just talk about issues, you have to be pro-active."
Council considers judicial boards campus-wide

By DEBORAH SCHULTZ
News Writer

The need to instill a judicial board in all dorms was the focus of discussion at the first Hall Presidents Council meeting held yesterday evening at Siegfried Hall.

Tom Matzarie, judicial board chairman, spoke about student government's desire to instigate judicial boards campus-wide. "The judicial board serves as a way to settle dorm issues without having to go through Student Affairs. Every hall should have a board and a representative from every dorm to discuss matters with others across campus. If you don't have one, we would be more than willing to help you start one, because we would really like to get every dorm going on this," Matzarie said.

Kristin Beary and Matt Schlatter, co-presidents of HPC, stated their desire to re-start a tradition that has been out of practice since 1977, called the Rockne Award. "We are still working on whether we have rights to the name, but in 1977-78 a 4-foot statue was passed around to whichever dorm had the most innovative ideas and events. It would be a monthly competition on which all the presidents would decide which dorm deserved the award," Schlatter said.

"HPC has not yet decided which committees will be active this year, but it disposed the 24-hour space and security committees, deciding that Student Senate's committees of the same names were more effective. Possible ideas for new committees included campus improvement and integration for the new dorms on West Quad. "We have lately been making committees for the sole reason that everyone can then serve on one. I think it would be a lot better if we only had the committees that we need," said Gayle Spencer, supervisor of HPC.

From the budget, HPC had $12,000, so each dorm was allotted $500. Matching funds from Student Residences will also be given.

In the attempt to improve gender relations among Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students, a representative from Saint Mary's will attend each HPC meeting. HPC members were also encouraged to attend Saint Mary's hall meetings. "We would like to improve things on a smaller scale rather than trying things campus-wide because that will change things a lot," said Samantha Manigliaforte, representative for Saint Mary's.

HPC intends to raise money for the Heartwalk, giving charity to a Notre Dame volunteer program in Jamaica, and helping out with a Madison elementary school project in upcoming weeks.

Georgian bombed

Associated Press

Tbilisi, Georgia

A bomb blew up a car in Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze’s motorcade as he headed to sign his troubled republic’s new constitution. Shevardnadze was not seriously hurt by what aides called an assassination attempt. Shevardnadze, chairman of the Georgian parliament and a former Soviet foreign minister, was sitting in his car and was struck by flying glass, aides said. Television footage afterward showed him at a hospital.

Postal employee wounds 2

Mail clerk opens fire in Chicago suburb

By CLIFF EDWARDS
Associated Press

PALATINE, Ill.
An employee walked into a Postal Service mail processing center today and opened fire on coworkers, wounding two people, authorities said. The suspect was later arrested at his home.

The gunman shot one person in the second-floor sorting area of the U.S. Postal Service building in this northwestern Chicago suburb, walked downstairs to the lobby and shot another man, witnesses said.

One man was in critical condition. All three workers were postal clerks, said plant manager Mark Towey.

Worker Cynthia Murray said she heard two quick shots, then saw panic break out among the roughly 200 employees at the sprawling glass and steel building.

"People were just falling all over each other," she said. "I saw people trample over people and I saw the smoke from the gun."

Clerk Maude Kelly said she's worked with both the victims and the gunman for about 20 years. All friends, she said.

"I can't figure out why he did it. We've been here for a long time. (The gunman) was just a beautiful guy. We would joke and laugh together."

The suspect was arrested 20 miles away at his home in the suburb of Northlake, police said. He was identified by police as senior postal clerk Darany Thoquis.

Police Cmdr. Jim Halder said earlier that the lobby shooting occurred first.

Indiana court cuts number of jail sites

State panel narrows number of jail sites

Indianapolis
A state panel today narrowed the number of potential sites for a new state prison from 12 to four locations.

Areas still being considered for the proposed 1,000-bed medium-security prison are Madison County near the Indiana Reformatory, Wayne County near Richmond, Miami County near Grissom Air Force Base, and the Jefferson Proving Grounds in Jefferson County.

Among the sites ruled out for now are areas in LaPorte, Putnam, Hendricks, Cass, Henry and Jennings counties.

The Site Selection Committee based its preliminary review of sites on such factors as available acreage, topography, site access, existing utilities and buildings.

"These four sites stand out when you consider all the criteria," said Chris Delphyen, commissioner of the Department of Corrections.

More complete evaluations of the four chosen sites will be made over the next several weeks, and serious discussions with economic development officials in those areas will begin.

Public input will be given full consideration at later meetings before a final site is chosen later this fall, Delphyen said.

"I certainly want to make sure in this review that we touch all the bases and listen to the communities," he said.

The estimated $80 million to build the men's prison would have to be authorized by the General Assembly.

Security ‘tight’ at conference

By KATHY WILHELM
Associated Press

HUAROU, China
Chinese officials will open the world’s largest meeting of women on Wednesday by releasing thousands of doves, yet the delegates themselves feel caged by tight security that they fear will get in the way of a successful conference.

Temperatures flared over China’s effort to contain the more than 20,000 participants in the Non-Governmental Organizations Forum on Women in Huairou, a rural suburb 90 minutes’ drive from downtown Beijing.

Although China had said free shuttle buses would be available to take them into Beijing, women who inquired about them were directed to taxis charging $24 each way.

Other participants complained that police searched their luggage on the driveway outside their hotels and apartments, looking for forbidden political or religious materials.

China is believed to have located the forum of private groups in Huairou because of its fears that the delegates’ debates, protests and pamphlets would infect Chinese with a spirit of dissent.

Chinese officials announced Tuesday that marches or protests could be held only in one designated place, a Huairou schoolyard, and could not target China itself.

The forum of private groups is being held in conjunction with the U.N. Fourth World Conference on Women, a senator and more sedate gathering of government delegations which opens Monday in Beijing.

The NGO women say they now will be able to travel to the U.N. conference to lobby delegates. And they want to mingle freely with each other to exchange ideas, make useful contacts and raise funds.

That is where the disorganization and security restrictions chafed. Delegates trying to find out where friends were staying got blank stares from registration workers. Those staying at Huairou’s newly built apartment blocks who tried to exchange phone numbers found no numbers marked on the phones.

Many hotels told guests they could not bring other people to their rooms for conversation. Most barred non-guests altogether.

“To me it’s madness,” said Sonia Bendor of Brazil. “I don’t mind that there’s a leak in the toilet so there’s water all over the floor. What I mind is the isolation and the lack of facilities to do the work we’ve come to do. How will I go to the events I’m invited to? There’s where I’ll meet my donors.”

NGO Forum leader Supatra Masati of Thailand, said there had been “a lot of rumors about all the bad things,” but she downplayed them.

Delegates are “very happy with the setup when so the forum starts everyone will have a good time setting their own agenda,” she said.

However, she acknowledged hearing complaints about too much security and said she told the Chinese about them. The Chinese replied that they want to ensure the women’s safety, she said.

Delegations began setting up displays in dozens of tents and buildings scattered over a 104-acre site.

At the African tent, women tacked a huge map of the continent on one side along with posters declaring: “No To Violence Against Women.”

Women from Kuwait used a compass to find Mecca, the Muslim holy city, before saying their prayers.

Zaire: Refugees must leave by year’s end

By CAROLYN HENSON
Associated Press

GENEVA
Frustrated by the United Nations’ inability to get more than 1.2 million Rwandan refugees to go home, Zaire said Tuesday they’ll be forced to leave if they don’t voluntarily by the end of the year.

The U.N. refugee agency dismissed the deadline. The policy was announced by Prime Minister Louis Kagame wa Donko after meeting for several hours with U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees Sadako Ogata.

“The UNHCR is fully committed to mobilization of the resources and support necessary for the repatriations to take place, but it cannot commit itself to any rigid time frame,” said UNHCR spokesman Ron Redmond.

Zairean soldiers began expelling refugees at gunpoint on Aug. 19, causing some 173,000 to flee into hills and forests around the camps, without food or water.

That prompted fears of a humanitarian disaster on the scale of last year, when millions of refugees flooded into camps that quickly became vast fields of disease and starvation.

The refugees mostly were members of the Hutu ethnic group who were fleeing rebels led by the rival Tutsis. The rebels eventually took control of the country, and the refugees are afraid that if they return they may face retaliation for last year’s ethnic massacres that killed some 500,000 people — mostly Tutsis slaughtered by Hutus.

Zaire stopped its expulsions last week after UNHCR agreed to resume its voluntary repatriation program.

Everyone - no matter how diverse their backgrounds or beliefs - has something in common, just by virtue of their being at Notre Dame together. Some of my best friends are as opposite from me to my alma mater. I cannot fully explain why I feel such strong ties to the atmosphere at Notre Dame so much. It is something which one has to experience for oneself to understand. However, what I can say is this place home.

Kirsten Dunne graduated Notre Dame Law School in 1995.

"I row was your summer?" You've probably heard this phrase a hundred times this week already, and, if you're like most people you are already dreaming of it. However, it seems that people keep asking whether or not it was really that bad. Therefore, I'll tell you how my summer was. It was not one of the best. One week after I returned from school, I began a bar review course. The bar exam took place the 25th and 26th of July, so, up until then, my summer was largely spent getting ready for it. I studied a lot, and it was still extremely difficult. With most exams, you get all psyched up before hand and then after it's over you say it wasn't that bad. Not the bar exam. Despite all my studying, it was hell.

The heat wave which began in early July did not make matters easier. As someone who does not like hot weather to begin with, daily temperatures of at least 90 degrees left me with little incentive to anything.

The oppressive heat continued after my exam was over, which meant that I couldn't really enjoy my freedom.

I am not a hermit, but I left the house much less than I would have had the weather been pleasant.

The day after my exam was finished, I learned that Professor Edward Murphy had passed away, and, shortly thereafter, on one of the darkest days of the year, I learned that Jerry Garcia had died too. I did not know Professor Murphy well, and I did not know Jerry at all, but each of them had influenced and touched me in his own special way. I am confident that they are in a much better place now, but still I miss them. And to top it all off, my sister is returning to Saint Mary's this year. Of course, I have known this for a while, but it is hard for me to accept - especially now. My sister is returning to Saint Mary's, many of my friends have returned to South Bend for the school year. I guess I'll get used to the situation sooner or later, but at least right now, it feels strange, and it makes me sad. However, I am sure that this comes as no surprise to my friends or to those who have read my column before. But right now I would like to welcome the newcomers to the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community and all its trials. The free expression of varying opinions through a minority group - which one has to experience for oneself to understand. However, what I can say is that there is a tremendous sense of unity in the NDSM community. Everyone - no matter how diverse their backgrounds or beliefs - has something in common, just by virtue of their being at Notre Dame together. Some of my best friends are as opposite from me as night is from day, and I often wonder how we grew so close. The answer I inevitably come up with is this - we met at Notre Dame. Notre Dame is a place where you can say hello to a passing stranger without worrying that you might appear insane. It is a place where you know there is always someone nearby to help you with any problems you might have. It is a place which comes together as one in a time of crisis. It is, quite simply, a very special place, unlike any other that I have been able to find as of yet.

Because I do not want to give the impression that Notre Dame is Utopia, I will tell you that you might well experience hard times here. If you are in any sort of minority group - whether it is your opinion, your ethnicity, your physical capabilities, or something else - you might, at times, feel out of place. You might be told, directly or indirectly, by some less sensitive members of the community that you do not belong here. I won't lie to you and tell you that such incidents don't ever occur. They happen, and they hurt. However, for every insensitive person you meet here, I guarantee you that you will find at least one other person who will open his heart to you and be your friend - all differences aside. And when you have friends who will accept you and back you up for who you are, the other people don't seem to matter as much. These are the kind of friends you will meet at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, and, with their love and support, I am confident you will soon come to call this place home.

However, what I can say is that there is a tremendous sense of unity in the NDSM community. Everyone - no matter how diverse their backgrounds or beliefs - has something in common, just by virtue of their being at Notre Dame together. Some of my best friends are as opposite from me as night is from day, and I often wonder how we grew so close. The answer I inevitably come up with is this - we met at Notre Dame. Notre Dame is a place where you can say hello to a passing stranger without worrying that you might appear insane. It is a place where you know there is always someone nearby to help you with any problems you might have. It is a place which comes together as one in a time of crisis. It is, quite simply, a very special place, unlike any other that I have been able to find as of yet.

Because I do not want to give the impression that Notre Dame is Utopia, I will tell you that you might well experience hard times here. If you are in any sort of minority group - whether it is your opinion, your ethnicity, your physical capabilities, or something else - you might, at times, feel out of place. You might be told, directly or indirectly, by some less sensitive members of the community that you do not belong here. I won't lie to you and tell you that such incidents don't ever occur. They happen, and they hurt. However, for every insensitive person you meet here, I guarantee you that you will find at least one other person who will open his heart to you and be your friend - all differences aside. And when you have friends who will accept you and back you up for who you are, the other people don't seem to matter as much. These are the kind of friends you will meet at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, and, with their love and support, I am confident you will soon come to call this place home.

There is no place quite like Notre Dame, and no place I would have rather spent the last seven years. But once again, don't just take my word for it. Experience it, and may you enjoy your time here as much as I did. Kirsten Dunne graduated Notre Dame Law School in 1995.

From Twinkies to Yo-cream

I can always find something to complain about. My life never seems to be going well or as it should. The weather is too hot. I already have more homework than I can handle. Class 23 burned to the ground.

Growing up in a suburb of Kansas City, I never had too many problems about school. The oldest of three, I had much to worry about. The oldest of three, I had more homework than I can handle. Club 23 station wagon for mass, clock bedtime.

On Sundays, I'd do the whole Big Sister thing to a new high schooler. I'd initiate the newbies to the way of Dome, crew of rookie Domers, the freshmen.

It's that time of year again, Norte Dame. Neverland or The Real World?

Cristiane Likely

As a politically conscious Black woman that's hard to do. But hey, if you're destined to be an alcoholic, then I guess that's your problem, just don't drink and drive (obviously) or be late to class. I tend to have a love/hate relationship with this place. Mostly, hate it, but try not to be negative. Actually, most people do have this duality and try to keep it balanced.

Freshman Orientation, I heard an overzealous freshman vehemently declare her love for this place and I wanted to tell her, "Girl, you don't even know Notre Dame how can you love her?"

I try to look back at what brought me to Notre Dame and what is keeping me here. The latter is easy. I'm staying because I have invested so much time and energy, not to mention money, in this place that I'm not about to give up on. I have strong enough in my convictions to say "I don't like Blah-blah-blah about Notre Dame", and then be strong enough to say "well, I'm going to do something about it."

You see adds in the classified section of this paper and wish you could be so passive, submit letters of concern to the editor and have your voice heard. But I have our concerns and most of us are so bogged down in academics that we don't have time to pursue them, and they persist.

So which brings me back to the ideal of Notre Dame. What is it? Or better how can we mold Notre Dame and make it truly ours by attempting to maintain some warped dated visions held by rich alumni who wish to maintain and affirm the Notre Dame you see in coloring books or movies.

I am not trying to do away with Notre Dame that exists now, but to make it more inclusive of all students not just Irish-Catholic.

I said before that I have a love/hate relationship with this place and was quick to tell you what I didn't particularly like, but what I love most about this place is someone of the people I've met and encountered. Throughout everything they make the trip worthwhile and are there, ready whenever you are.

A s part of Accent's "Money" theme, Assistant Accent Editors Dan Cichalski and Angie Kelver catalogued every penny they spent over the course of eight days. The results are presented here because we thought it would be a nifty idea to try and figure out how to save money and cut costs. We will admit that the next 8 days may not be typical. But still, it's an interesting and amusing experiment. Try it for yourself and see what a spendthrift you are! Results will, of course, vary for all students depending on personal health, lifestyle, or the weather.

Angie's Week

Monday, August 21

$204.72. Books, books, books. Does anyone else feel like screaming "Ripoff City"?

$25.61. Shoe store is an absolute necessity. There is nothing (so far) around it. When I think about others that may have tread those aisles before me, money is really no object.

$1.81. Marlboro Lights. Yes, I know what the Surgeon General says. Yes, I know it is a disgusting habit, but this word is habit. Addiction.

Tuesday, August 22

$5.33. Pizza Hut lunch break. I completely love those breadsticks.

$40. Cheesos from the vending machine. Maybe I should have eaten more at lunch.

Wednesday, August 23

$1.73. Marlboro Lights. Yes, I know what the Surgeon General says. Yes, I know it is a disgusting habit, but this word is habit. Addiction.

Thursday, August 24

$5.00. Cover charge at one of South Bend's classiest establishments. Boy, I'll have to make sure my Mom gets a copy of this Observer. Maybe I'll send one to Grandma and Grams too. They'll be so proud.

Friday, August 25

$27.23. A couple more books for my classes. Gee, I was really worried that I wouldn't have enough reading to do already.

$1.05. I had a coupon for a small Blizzard for a buck at Dairy Queen. I certainly couldn't let it go to waste.

$1.93. Marlboro Lights. I know, my clothes smell, my teeth are yellow and my mouth is slowly dying out.

Saturday, August 26

$6.83. Dinner at Friday's. Mushroom cheeseburger. Yum, yum, yum.

$1.75. Marlboro Lights. Please don't say a word. I really do plan on quitting someday. I promise.

$3.00. My contribution for a veg. Mom, please don't feel bad. It's not your fault. Did I let you know that I was just a bad seed to begin with.

Sunday, August 27

$4.40. Cheesos. My only purchase for the day. Not too bad.

Monday, August 28

$1.81. Yup, you guessed it. No explanation necessary.

$2.50. Vanilla latte from Cap'n-Cino's. I figured a little caffeine was really nothing to my body in the grand scheme of things.

GRAND TOTAL: $391.13

Not too bad, I guess. Without books, that's $86.41. But, if I spent $86.41 every week for the rest of the school year, that would be a whopping $2765.12. Um, I don't think I saved quite that much this summer. Not to mention the fact that I bought virtually nothing of actual substance, and completely mortified my mother by broadcasting this fact in The Observer. With the money I spent, I probably could have fed a needy family in Ethiopia for a month or so. Maybe next week I will instead take my money and make a donation to the American Cancer Society. Then again, maybe not.

Monday, August 21

$261.08. This is the bill from that primary trip to the Bookstore. Press and Dad will recognize this figure that shows up in their mail a few weeks after they spent over the course of eight days. The results are

Tuesday, August 22

$13.01. Thirteen dollars for various stuff bought at the Bookstore—Grandma's birthday card, highlighters, notebooks, folders, and those sticky books for hanging stuff on the walls without drilling them.

$15.00. Dues for the Student Managers' Organization. Fifteen dollars for the privilege of being buried. But I'll stop at the helmet painting. Hey, did you know they use real gold in the paint?

Wednesday, August 23

$69.20. Subscription rate for full delivery of The New York Times. "All the news that's fit to print" is the coverage of the Simpson trip as well will be on my doorstep every morning this semester.

Friday, August 24

$5.00. Donation for (ahem) refreshments for one of several Grace Hall Welcome Back Weekend parties. I know some of you were there. You're welcome.

$10.00. Dinner at Macri's Den. They seated us in the Norman Rockwell room so I parked my part of the tip.

$2.00. Two dollars to see Sandra Bullock smile 43 times in "While You Were Sleeping," which averages out to about 4 1/2 cents a smile. Perhaps the best two bucks I've ever spent.

Saturday, August 26

$3.10. Purchased one copy of "Sports Illustrated." Destined to be one of the classic covers: a simple, black-and-white photo of Mickey Mantle. No words, no explanation, none needed.

$3.15. Rented "Outbreak" and kept waiting for the monkey to run into Monica and Rachel's apartment. Definitely a good movie, definitely. Now I've got this terrible urge to see a doctor.

Sunday, August 27

$18.00. Cab fares to and from the South Shore Railroad Station at the airport. If I had a car out here, this wouldn't be necessary—$18 of gas could get me to Toronto.

$17.30. Round-trip train ticket to Chicago to view the Claude Monet exhibit at the Art Institute. Again, another unnecessary expenditure: three cars are sitting in the driveway at home and only two people need to see—things that I don't have to do a math major to figure that one out.

$3.81. Fine dining at Michigan Avenue's Burger King. I considered spending this money on a glass of water at Michael Jordan's restaurant but then I would have had to tip the server as well.

GRAND TOTAL: $461.60

Wow. That's a lot for eight days (an average of $51.29 a day). Of course, it's the first week of the year and there were things like books to buy and art exhibits to see—things that I won't be doing that regularly. It was an interesting week keeping track of every penny I spent but it's not something I'd want to do all year. It's more fun to just spend the money and know you're enjoying what you do or what you get for it rather than seeing how much you've got left after knowing what you had in the first place.

Monday, August 21

$290. For two rooms for two weeks.

Tuesday, August 22

$5.20. Total for eight Monet postcards (65 cents each), some of which may accompany my upcoming review of the exhibit right here in The Observer.

Friday, August 24

$400. I took thirteen days, but I gave in and made that first call to Papa John's. I hope he doesn't blow that tip in one place.

GRAND TOTAL: $1607.00

Agassi, Sampras advance easily in opening round

By STEVE WILSTEIN
Associated Press

NEW YORK—Impervious to aces and immune to scorching heat, defending champion Andre Agassi blazed through the first round of the U.S. Open in 81 minutes Tuesday to push his winning streak to 21 matches. Agassi, seeded No. 1, shrugged off 15 aces by Bryan Shelton, drilled all the balls he could reach, and turned a potentially tough opponent into a streak to 21 matches.

of the U.S. Open in 81 minutes could reach, and turned a powerful, hotshoter into a streak to 21 matches.

2, as courtside temperatures soared into the 90s.

Playing gracefully and with nearly flawless precision from the baseline, Agassi picked up where he left off a year ago when he started his surge to the top of tennis. Shelton accommodated him by spraying 47 unforced errors—Agassi had only 14—and double-faulting nine times while trying too hard to score an upset.

"I am used to that feeling of playing guys who are just playing, in a sense, outside themselves," Agassi said, dismissing the pressure of being the top seed at the Open for the first time. "I don't spend too much time thinking about the ranking very much."

Agassi rated himself a much better player than he was last year when he came into the Open unseeded and ran through a gauntlet of top players.

"I am executing with total confidence," he said. "I have definitely taken my lumps. I have definitely learned my lessons, some of them the hard way. But I guess, ultimately, I never give up."

Two-time champion and No. 2 seed Pete Sampras was nearly as efficient in a 6-3, 6-3, 6-4 victory over Fernando Meligeni, an Argentine more at home on clay than on the Open's hard courts. But Sampras punched a hole in the notion that all the men's matches are little more than a prelude to an inevitable final between him and Agassi.

"Everyone's assuming that, expecting that, but that's the last thing on my mind," Sampras said. "It would be great to get to the final and play anyone, and it would be special to play Andre. But there's a lot of time between now and next Sunday. I think I'm off to a good start."

"It's not like Martina and Chris. Everybody knew they'd get to the final each week. That's not going to happen in the men's game."

The women's top seed, Steffi Graf, took nearly an hour longer than Agassi to beat the unseeded American Amanda Coetzer 6-7 (7-1), 6-1, 6-4 and avenge a defeat against the scrappy little South African in the Canadian Open two weeks ago.

"I don't particularly like losing," said Graf, who succumbed in the first set after fighting off eight set points. "I definitely wanted to play her as soon as I could. I knew it wasn't going to be easy because I really haven't had a lot of matches."

Graf acknowledged that her emotional state, shaken by the arrest of her father and the pressing charges, was affecting her tennis. Her chronic back problems, which led to her loss in the final last year, also continue to take a toll.

Rigorous schedule makes Purdue's blood boil

By STEVE HERMAN
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS

Purdue's Boilermakers are eager to get their new football season going, although it's not exactly beginning with pushovers.

Purdue opens the new campaign Saturday at No. 23-ranked West Virginia. The next week, the Boilermakers return home to face No. 9 Notre Dame. "We've been practicing 18 or 19 days now, and the players are bored seeing one another," coach Jim Colletto said Tuesday.

"This schedule is going to test everybody in the program. I just read it's been ranked the eighth-toughest in the country, so we have to stay relatively injury-free."

He said the players haven't talked about being underdogs.

"We figured it's motivation enough just to play the first game on the road. You just have to show up and play. The game, as far as I can tell, is still 0-0," Colletto said in a telephone conference call from West Lafayette.

Purdue went 1-10 in 1993 and improved to 4-5-2 last year, although the Boilermakers did not win a game after the fifth week of the season. They return leading rusher Mike Alstott, a 240-pound fullback who could become Purdue's career yardage leader this season. Also back is quarterback Rick Trefzger, who missed the last three games a year ago after he tore a knee ligament.

"We think we're in fairly decent shape," said Colletto, listing a stress fracture in the right leg of backup tackle Chad Hoogendoorn, who missed the last three games a year ago after he tore a knee ligament.

"We think we're in fairly decent shape," said Colletto, listing a stress fracture in the right leg of backup tackle Chad Manning as the only significant injury. Manning probably will miss at least one game, he said, while starting tackle John Hoogendoorn returned to practice after injuring his knee.

Colletto said Ed Watson will start at tailback against the Mountaineers. He will be backed up by Corey Rogers, the Big Ten freshman of the year in 1991. He received academic eligibility and has climbed from fifth in the pre-season depth chart to second. "Ed Watson deserves to start. He was the starter at the end of last year and in spring practice," Colletto said.

"But Corey is No. 2 and will see a good deal of action on Saturday. He's worked hard to do it, so he's earned the right to play. I hope he learned a lesson from it," he said of Rogers' academic problems.

Colletto's main concern going into training camp was the secondary, which lost some key players and lists three sophomores and one junior as likely starters.

"We've made an improvement in the secondary, but until we play somebody else, it's hard to make a definitive statement of where we're at," he said.

Niners face Texas-sized competition in quest to repeat

By DENNIS GEORGATOS
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO
An obsession with overtaking the Dallas Cowboys helped carry San Francisco to its fifth Super Bowl title last season. This year, the set the 49ers are trying to top is their own.

"It's just as demanding, but the weight of what we face is really our own past," said Steve Young, who's going for a record fifth straight passing title. "There's no one else, no other team. It's just ourselves.

We have to go out and extend ourselves beyond who we were last year."

The 49ers were a special team in 1994. Young set an NFL record for passing efficiency and won a second MVP award. Jerry Rice became the league's career touchdown leader and the team scored a club-record 505 points, fourth most in NFL history. Meanwhile, a collection of marquee free agents led by Deion Sanders turned San Francisco's defense into one of the league's top units.

The fortified 49ers denied Dallas an unprecedented third straight Super Bowl crown by defeating the Cowboys in the conference championship last January. The 49ers then beat San Diego 49-26 for a record fifth Super Bowl victory.

In bidding to repeat as league champions, the 49ers are taking a more businesslike approach. Young said the desperation that drove the team in 1994 has been replaced by a quiet resolve.

"I think it'll be more professional and more dedication than obsession," club president Carmen Policy said. "It'll be kind of like the Cowboys in '93. They won the Super Bowl in that magical year of '92 when many thought they should've come to Candlestick and gotten beat, and they didn't. In '93, they felt a commitment to purpose and that professional dedication.

"I'd like to see a duplicate. We win two, and then in '96 let's decide who's the team of the decade."

There are significant differences between the 49ers of 1995 and the 49ers of '94. Chief among them is whether free agent cornerback Sanders re-signs with San Francisco or opts to play elsewhere. Dallas is among the teams competing with the 49ers for Sanders' services.

"I don't think that we must have him," San Francisco coach George Seifert said. "But with the expectations and the things we have to do, you want to get all the talent you possibly can, whether it be Deion or any other player.

"We'd like to think that we're capable coaches. But we're all in this business long enough to realize the team that generally has the most talent and is put together best has the best opportunity to win this thing."

Ricky Watters, San Francisco's rushing leader the past three seasons, is among the talent the 49ers lost. Watters went to Philadelphia through free agency.

Both coordinators are newcomers. Marc Trestman replaces Mike Shanahan, who left to coach Denver after three years as San Francisco's offensive coordinator. Pete Carroll, fired as New York Jets coach at the end of last season, succeeded Ray Rhodes, who ascended from defensive coordinator to take the Philadelphia Eagles' coaching job.

San Francisco also has 16 new players, including top draft pick J.J. Stokes. UCLA's career receiving leader, Stokes is expected to miss the first month of the season with a broken right hand.

"I think any time you have that type of change, there's a change in the chemistry of the team. All of that remains to be seen," added Seifert, a two-time Super Bowl winner as head coach who begins the season with an 84-24 career mark, the best winning percentage (77.8) in league history.

"The frontline players, with the exception of Ricky Watters — and nobody knows what's going to develop with Delon — our team is intact from a year ago and I think we've helped ourselves with some of the fellows we've picked up," Seifert said.

Johnston calling his own shots

By MATT HARVEY
Associated Press

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. It won't quite be like the old-time NFL quarterbacks calling all their plays, but West Virginia's Chad Johnston will have a great deal of freedom in directing the Mountaineers offense this season.

"Chad is intelligent, can read coverages that a lot of us can't read," tight end Lovett Barnett said. "That's his biggest thing, his intelligence. (The coaches) allow him the freedom to call things when he wants to because of his intelligence and the way he can see things on the field."

Johnston, a 6-fooot-3, 210-pound junior in his second year as a starter, threw for 1,863 yards, 16 touchdowns and 11 interceptions while completing 124 of 245 passes last season.

Coach Don Nehlen began giving him more freedom in changing plays at the line of scrimmage as the season progressed. Now Nehlen says he's comfortable with most of Johnston's decisions.

"Chad for the most part knows what we want to do, yes," Nehlen said Tuesday. "I think he's got a great deal of respect for Chad and (backup) Eric Bogos."

Johnston generally has the option of calling two or three plays when he comes up under center. He can change the call by using a few signals to take advantage of an expected blitz, stunt or zone.

"It's something we did last year, but we're emphasizing it more," Johnston said. "I'll say we're doing it over 50 percent of the time now."

It has worked well in practice and scrimmages, he said. Johnston has worked hard to earn the freedom.

"I really work at it and try to know as much I can about every opponent we play," he said.

renewed if we could play our home part of the series at Dyche Stadium (the Northwestern home field)," Barnett says. "I think it's a good series for the Chicago area, but I would not be in favor of going back to Soldier Field."

going against each other. Notre Dame probably feels the same.

This season also marks the end of the contract between Notre Dame and Northwestern. However, third-year coach Barnett would like to see the series' head coach determined to continued.

"I would love the series to continue."

OMAHA, Neb.- Nebraska running back Lawrence Phillips can play Thursday against Oklahoma State and in other games even though an NCAA investigation is continuing, the NCAA's director of eligibility said today.

Carrie Doyle said the NCAA has determined that Phillips' lunch with an employee of California sports agent Steve Feldman will not affect his eligibility.

The NCAA continued to investigate two other issues involving Phillips, Doyle said. One involves the 1995 Mustang convertable that Phillips has been driving. Doyle would not identify the other issue, but the university has provided the NCAA with information about Phillips' status as a ward of the state of California.

"We can play until the institution and legislative services determine that there are violations," Doyle said.

Asked if Nebraska risked forfeiting games in which Phillips played should violations be found, she said: "No. As long as the institution acts in good faith and imposes similar conditions, there would be no sanctions."

University officials have said Phillips repaid Verizon approximately $20 for his portion of the meal. Since the money was repaid, Doyle said, the incident was considered minor.

"It's not that it's hanky-panky, but we try to look at a situation and impose similar conditions that have imposed in the past," she said from her office in Overland Park, Kan. "This particular fact scenario required that the young man repay the cost of the meal."

The NCAA's legislative services division, which determines if incidents are violations of NCAA rules, continues to work on the other two issues, Doyle said.

Legalistic services director Steve Maloney has declined comment, saying only that the case is under review.

At Papik, NU's associate athletic director in charge of compliance, said the school has sent the NCAA information about the convertible, which Phillips has been driving since January.

The owners of a group home in Phillips' hometown West Covina, Calif., have said they leased it for him. NU has provided information on Phillips' relationship with Tina McElhaney, the head of the group home.

The state of California was Phillips' official guardian beginning at the age of 12.

SEE, SCHOOL ISN'T SO BAD.
FOUR FOOD GROUPS OF THE APOCALYPSE

There's no such thing as a free lunch anymore. The apocalypse may be upon us, and we're going to have to make due with what we have. Here's a guide to the four food groups of the apocalypse:

1. Veggie Group: This group includes all the vegetables that are still growing, such as broccoli, carrots, and potatoes. They're great for providing nutrition and sustenance.

2. Meat Group: This group includes all the meat that's still available, such as chicken, beef, and pork. They're great for providing protein and energy.

3. Staple Group: This group includes all the staples that are still available, such as rice, beans, and pasta. They're great for providing carbohydrates and energy.

4. Non-Food Group: This group includes all the items that are still available, such as water, gasoline, and electricity. They're great for providing survival essentials.

Relaxed Holtz pleased with play and attitude

BY TIM SHERMAN
Associate Sports Editor

The pessimism should have been thicker than Bobby Bowden's southern drawl yesterday at Lou Holtz's first weekly press conference of the 1995 season. After all, the Irish enter Saturday's debut against Northwestern coming of a 6-5-1 debacle in 1994 and with less depth than any time in recent memory. Any other year, this would be cause enough for Holtz to have a mild nerve breakdown.

This is not any other year though.

"I'm going to have some fun
this year," a rather relaxed Holtz explained. "This team is very easy to be around. It has been fun because they like the game."

Not only has Holtz enjoyed the altitude of the team, he has been relatively pleased with their play.

"They're really haven't been any major disappointments other than a few injuries," Holtz said. "We have a better offense at this point than last season. Our offensive line is the very easy to be around. It has been fun because they like the
game."

Still, Holtz is a pessimist by nature and finds the two hours of optimism to be short-lived.

"I think we're very well prepared at this point and a very confident with them if Stafford beyond the injuries when assessing the Irish.

"Charlie Stafford has a shoulder injury and may not be ready to go for Northwestern although he says he will," Holtz said. "But Emmett Mosley and Corey Bennett as a preseason All-Big Ten selection and nam ed
the Wildcat secondary the best in their conference.

However, if any quarterback has the ability to penetrate the Northwestern defense, Barnett believes it is Notre Dame's Ron Powlus.

"After watching an entire year of Ron Powlus, I think he is a terrific quarterback," Barnettsaid. "I don't know if I've seen a better quarterback before."

But as much as the defensive line is a key concern, the secdary is beginning to come into focus.

"I'm going to have some fun
this year," Barnett's southern drawl yesterday at Lou Holtz's first weekly press conference, he might have accessed the normally dour Irish head coach of stealing his lines.

Monday, the Northwestern coach looked forward to Saturday's opening match-up at Notre Dame with a great deal of optimism and enthusi­ sasm, much like Holtz did Tuesday.

"I think we're very well prepared at this point and a very focused football team," Barnett said. "We're a very hungry football team."

Despite being underdogs to the host and eighth-ranked Irish, Barnett believes his squad has strength in the right places.

"As a good match up as we return eight starters on defense and they return eight starters on their offense."

The Northwestern defense is led by two-time Big Ten Honorable mention honoree William Bennett.

The senior free safety
led the Wildcats last season with three interceptions and was second with 100 tackles.

The Sporting News listed
Bennett as a preseason All-Big Ten selection and named the Wildcat secondary the best in their conference.
