Law professors move to revoke honorary degree

The Office of the Provost recently received a resolution from the Law School to consider a revocation of an honorary doctorate of law degree awarded in 1981. Kurt Waldheim, recipient of the degree over 14 years ago, had been the Secretary General of the United Nations for 10 years at the time of his award and was the president of Austria from 1986 to 1992.

Recent investigations have shown that Waldheim served as a lieutenant of the armed forces of Nazi Germany (Wehrmacht) in Greece and the former Yugoslavia.

According to Law School Professor Joseph P. Bauers, these are the same forces that slaughtered tens of thousands of Serbs, Jews and gypsies. At the time of his award, Waldheim was Secretary General of the United Nations and later served as a lieutenant of the armed forces and was the president of Austria from the United Nations for 10 years at the time of his degree awarded in 1981.

Survey suggests high campus alcohol consumption

By JAMES BROCKMORE and PHILIP HEINTZ

Nearly three quarters of Notre Dame students drink regularly according to a recent survey conducted by The Observer. That number is almost 20 percent higher than the national average reported in a recent survey.

The informal Observer poll of 200 students asked undergraduates to reveal their drinking habits. Respondents answered six questions related to their alcohol consumption.

The Cooperative Institutional Research Program at the University of California at Los Angeles' Higher Education Research Institute conducted surveys in 1993 to determine rates of alcohol usage by freshman at highly selective universities (a category to which Notre Dame belongs), private universities, and all colleges in general.

The UCLA study found that 61.8% of freshman at highly selective schools reported themselves to be beer or liquor drinkers, compared to 58.2% at private colleges and 54.7% nationally at all schools.

Notre Dame students were asked how many days a week they drank and of those days, how many times they "got drunk." Results indicate that 72% of those polled drink regularly, once a week or more, while 18% abstain completely.

Students justified heavy drinking in different ways. "I like the element of not being in control," one student said. Another stated that drinking causes an "interesting physical sensation." Although student reasons for drinking are predominately social, several students expressed a need for acceptance. One person said "it

College Dems return to campus after hiatus

By ETHAN HAYWARD

Denis William Brogan once wrote, "Any well-established village in the northern Middle West could afford... a few Democrats." It appears South Bend, and Notre Dame in particular, is such a place. After a two-year hiatus, the College Democrats have resurfaced as an official campus organization.

The newly revitalized club's officers, President Mike Gagli and Vice President Paul Horn, state that former officers lacked the drive and organization to keep the club going. Gagli also added that interest in political organizations tends to drop off after a presidential election.

The club has adopted a new charter and is now registered with the national College Democrats organization, an arm of the Democratic National Committee.

A flyer handed out at last week's activities night reads, "The College Democrats is an organization of student activists who recruit and train Democratic students for participation in all facets of political activism, with special emphasis upon electing Democrats and supporting the legislative goals of the Democratic Party."

Gagli says his organization's main goal is to increase membership and keep the club active.
The revised SYR regulations

As SYR season approaches, most of us prepare ourselves for the possible dangers we are destined to encounter. For the freshmen who have yet to experience such an event, remember that you, especially, pay close attention.

1) Upon meeting a blind date, be prepared for the worst. Not only will the procedure hinder you from extreme disappointment, it might also get you right away that no one looks like their dog book picture. (WARNING: Look up for upperclassmen who prescribe a few shots to enhance the appearance of your face.)

2) When you arrive at your date’s room, for the love of God, avoid the jungle juice located in the big metal tub at the party. Although it may seem that the Jungle Juice will be the skull and crossbones in the reflection of the tub, 3) Feel free to talk to other guests. What matters is not who you came with, but who you end up with.

4) As the guests start instantiating in your direction from several members of the party, it is probably because you are not following the strict party regulations about brick laying.

5) The wine might be setting the buddy system when traveling to the bathroom. Between the two of you, you should remember how to get back to the party room. Also, if it appears that your date has disappeared when you return to the party room, at least you have a cool friend to hang out with.

6) A sudden death of a stranger over thirty minutes since your date has gone to relieve himself/herself, you might want to start considering other options.

7) If you forget your date’s name, a simple shout of “Hello, my name is Meghan” or “Patrick” is always a great guess.

8) When you venture into the closet that the annual dance takes place at, feel free to go crazy. Tonight, any moves by John Travolta are both permitted and encouraged.

9) During the dance, ignore invitations that involve phrases like “Hey, do you feel like coming back to my room and looking at some pictures?” You wouldn’t want to miss “Oh What a Night” in order to see a few silly pictures.

10) If by chance you end up at the Dillon SYR party, the room is on your left at the back of the room. (Trust me on this one.)

11) If you try to go to sleep, the guy “sleeping” in the corner for another beer. He really does not want to be disturbed.

12) Believe me, it’s not Mad Dog. You would hate to be labeled as the “kid who poked at the dog during his first two years.”

13) Always remember to whisper out the red light at 2:00. Although “crashing” may sound like a great idea at the time, you must realize the consequences you will face in the morning. Students can recognize the “walk of shame” from a SYR from over a mile away.

Through following these careful guidelines, you can count on a great SYR night. If you regret your behavior at the SYR, it is much more practical to use the old “Wow! Do not remember anything about the other night” phrase than to ignore them and develop a sour relationship with what could’ve been a great friend for the rest of your college life.

The Beatles are back on top... almost. A new documentary and the film about them contain three new music videos, including a song taped by John Lennon in 1994 that Paul McCartney, Harrison and Ringo Starr added their voices to this year, will bring the band an estimated $130 million in gross income for 1994-1995, Forbes magazine said. Only director Steven Spielberg and talk-show host Oprah Winfrey surpassed the Beatles in Forbes’ 1995 annual ranking of the 108 entertainers, released Sunday. It’s the Beatles first time on Forbes Top 40 highest-paid entertainers list, a survey that combines entertainers’ two-year earnings to get a more accurate assessment of overall income. For the second consecutive year, Spielberg reigns as the highest-paid entertainer. The 47-year-old director, who still is raking in the dough from his box-office megahit “Jurassic Park,” will make an estimated $285 million in 1994-95. Winfrey, who in 1993 became the first woman to ever top the list, ranked a distant second behind Spielberg, with a combined two-year take of $146 million.

Skycraving planes crashes into house

SHACKLEFORDS, Va.

A plane carrying at least 10 members of a skydiving school crashed into a house and exploded on Sunday, killing a man sitting on his back porch and everyone aboard. The house caught fire, but authorities said no one else living in the row of about 10 houses along a woody lane in rural Tidewater Virginia was injured. Witnessed was lying on what he heard the plane laboring overhead: “I ... saw the plane in the air, and it turned like it wanted to go back the other way, then it moseyed. ‘I was assuming it was coming in the back door of my house. It sounded like it was going through something and then went boom. By the time we got outside, it had blown and there was fire everywhere.’” She said her neighbor, Vincent Harris, was killed but his son, Vincent Jr., who is 8 or 9, was playing outside and wasn’t injured. “After right the crash, there was a couple of people tried to get in there to get him but they couldn’t. It was all in flames,” she said.

Mafia pleads guilty in poker scheme

NEW ORLEANS

Five alleged leaders and associates of the Gambino and Genovese organized crime families pleaded guilty to conspiracy Saturday in what prosecutors call a Mafia plot to infiltrate Louisiana's video poker business. "The government made an offer we couldn't refuse," said Joel Winograd, lawyer for John Gammarrano, one of the five. The defendants were accused of using at least four front companies to distribute video poker machines and siphon off profits between 1991 and 1994. People ties to organized crime are barred from the gambling business in Louisiana. Four pleaded guilty previously, six were scheduled to plead guilty Tuesday and four were to go on trial on Sept. 18. "This has broken the back of the organized crime family in New Orleans, which means the Gulf Coast, too," said Anthony Basodita, head of a private anti-crime group called the Metropolitan Crime Commission. The case is not related to an FBI investigation into whether state legislators supported the video poker business in exchange for campaign contributions and a hidden interest in the industry. No one has been charged. In this case, the men were indicted on charges of racketeering, mail fraud, wire fraud and engaging in an illegal gambling business. They could have faced more than 100 years in prison and millions of dollars in restitution.

Chess champions face off for title

NEW YORK

Pride is the issue in the World Chess Championship — along with the crown that Garry Kasparov seized when he became the youngest chess titlist in history in 1985. Kasparov, 32, faces Viswanathan Anand, 25. The winner takes home a cool $1 million; the loser gets $500,000. At an opening ceremony Sunday atop the World Trade Center, Anand won the right to play with the advantage of the white pieces in the first game to tell Kasparov’s, "It’s a chance to prove Kasparov’s defenses,” said American Grandmaster Max Blugy. “He has a chance of delivering the first blow.” Kasparov, who lives in Moscow, has never lost a one-on-one series. But if Anand can survive his early jitters, he might use a chance to top the champ. The Professional Chess Association Championship employs a best-of-20-game format, with the winner the first player to get 10 1/2 points. A win scores one point and a draw a half point.
Gingrich cautions Powell

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON
House Speaker Newt Gingrich urged retired Gen. Colin Powell to give up any idea of an independent candidacy, saying Sunday that having a president outside the current party system is a "joke" that could lead to disaster.

Gingrich, in an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press," also revealed some details of the GOP plan to restore fiscal integrity to Medicare, including a proposal to apply means-testing to couples earning more than $125,000.

Powell, in his new autobiography, says he is comfortable with neither party and the time may be ripe for the rise of a third party to represent the political center in America. He makes no commitment to lead such a party.

Gingrich, R-Ga., strongly urged him against that course.

"I think it's frankly in the long run a joke," he said.

This country is a party country. There is no magic independence of people who are just able to stand up and magically produce a government.

An independent presidency would be a "disaster for this country," he said.

If Powell, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, ran as a Republican, he would immediately become the chief rival to GOP front-runner Sen. Bob Dole, Gingrich said.

Gingrich, like Powell, says he will make no announcement of his own presidential intentions until the end of the year. He has stated that he would take a pass if Powell were to run as a Republican, but in any case is leaning against entering the race.

"But I think that there is frankly just enough of a desire for somebody who is aggressive and articulate and willing to lay out boldly when we need to go that I can't quite close the door at this stage," he said.

Gingrich said it's inevitable for there to be some sniping among the declared GOP nominees, but it's important they make sure their political battling doesn't disrupt the Republican agenda on tax cuts, welfare and Medicare reform.

"If we allow ourselves to get pulled apart in the next 30 or 40 days, we're going to look like idiots and frankly, we're not going to elect anybody next year," he said in the presidency and we might lose the House and Senate," he said.

Gingrich said the Medicare reform package to be announced by House Republicans this week would maintain the 1.5 percent sharing increase must now pay for Medicare Part B costs and impose a means test for senior couples earning $125,000 or more.

"We may well phase out starting at about $125,000 for a couple the subsidy from the government for the Part B premium.

Under current law, the seniors' Part B, the portion of Medicare that pays doctors bills and lab tests, would drop to 25 percent.

Democrats say keeping the current percentage could mean the doubling of premiums, now at $46.10 a month.

Clinton renew welfare fight

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press

WASHINGTON
President Clinton appealed to Congress to "go the final mile" on Saturday by burying differences on welfare reform quickly so it can keep it from being entangled by election-year politics.

But his call for reaching "an absolute high ground" was laced with sharp partisan attacks on Republicans, including indirect but clear shots at Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole and House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

"This is a time to deliver for the American people, not to panderm to extremists," he said in his weekly radio address.

"We can't let welfare reform die at the hands of ideological extremism or presidential politics," he added.

Democrats also used their weekly radio rebuttal to focus on welfare debate now roiling in the Senate.

Sen. Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania, delivering the GOP response, asserted that "the Congress and the president simply cannot wait any longer to reform the failed welfare system.

He said the current system has "failed millions of Americans, particularly low-income and disadvantaged minorities to a life that begins and ends on a dead-end street of irresponsibility, poverty and dependency.

The Senate is in the process of considering a welfare overhaul measure and several key votes are expected in the coming week. Senate Republicans are deeply divided over terms of the final legislation, and no particular version appears to have majority support.

The House-passed version would ban benefits for mothers younger than 18 with children under six, and children born to a parent already receiving assistance.

Clinton and congressional Democrats claim Republican leaders are trying to hold welfare reform hostage to extorting a dramatic cut in welfare spending.

"For too long, American people have been frustrated by demands for ideological purity, by politicians who put their personal interests ahead of the public interest," Clinton said in an apparent reference to Republicans.

makes you feel more comfortable in a social situation you normally wouldn’t,” while another explained that “it takes away the inhibitions.” One student claimed that it’s “all there is to do on campus,” and a student said that drinking gives him “more courage to talk to girls.”
If good times, social acceptance, and a sense of courage are contained in a can of beer or a screwdriver, which is the beverage of choice? Students were surveyed regarding their preference between beer and hard liquor. Those who drink revealed that beer is the most popular party beverage on campus, winning 57% of the vote. Thirty three percent preferred hard liquor. Since the legal drinking age is twenty one, 43% of the underage student population have managed to obtain fake identification. Fifty seven percent do not drink or must consult other means for acquiring alcohol, such as having a student of legal age purchase alcohol for them.

the Notre Dame administration’s decision not to recognize GLND/SMC as an official campus organization.
Professor Glenn Hendler of the English Department said he found it heartening that such a free and open discussion of campus closeted was held at the beginning of this academic year. He said the film raised issues about how everyone forms his or her identity, and that he is glad that the controversy has attracted several prestigious academics to the debate.
“The rest of the country is watching Notre Dame,” says Hendler.
One of the academics attracted by the debate was Eve Kosofsky Sedgwick of Duke University, who spoke at Saturday’s forum. She stated that Cohn’s conception of differing public and private lives was implausible.
“The public and private are all over each other, and a figure like Roy Cohn depicts that so graphically. (Coming out of the closet) is puncturing the air out of a room full of people who think they know things about you that you don’t know about yourself,” said Sedgwick.
Another keynote speaker was George Chauncey of the University of Chicago. Chauncey addressed the growing prevalence of college courses examining gay and lesbian issues.
“I felt like I saw the world change before my eyes. There was a sudden, huge growth in the field,” he said.
Professor Carlos Jerez-Farran of the Department of Romance Language & Literature called this weekend’s forum a “major event”. He said it was an opportunity to explore in detail the effects homophobia has on people and that it perpetuated the long overdue intellectual dialogue on homosexuality.
Jerez-Farran also said the events helped “illustrate the operation of power in relation to marginality.”
Professor Daniel Sheerin, chair of the Department of Classical/Oriental Language & Literature, said the film “opened whole new worlds” for him and shifted his thinking on the issue of recognizing GLND/SMC.
“People both inside of the closet and outside of the closet suffer in an atmosphere such as this,” he said.

U.S. warship launch cruise missiles at Serbs

By LIAM MCDOWALL
Associated Press

SARAJEVO
A U.S. warship in the Adriatic Sea fired 13 Tomahawk cruise missiles at Bosnian Serb anti-aircraft missile sites Sunday in northwestern Bosnia, NATO and U.S. military officials said.

The effect of the attack by the cruiser USS Normandy wasn’t immediately known, said NATO spokesman Maj. Panagiotis Theodoreakis.

Minutes after the missiles were launched, a wave of FA-15 jet fighters took off from the aircraft carrier USS Roosevelt, carrying 2,000-pound “smart bombs,” according to NATO officials in Naples, Italy.

There was no immediate word on their target.

It was the first use of cruise missiles in NATO’s 12-day-old campaign to force the Serb rebels to pull their artillery and other heavy weapons away from Sarajevo, and to ease their pressure on other U.N. “safe areas” such as Tuzla.

The Tomahawks were fired at Serb surface-to-air missile sites in the Banja Luka area of northwestern Bosnia, Navy spokesman Lt. Conrad Chun said in Washington. Tomahawks were last used in 1993, when the Navy fired 26 of them at Baghdad, Iraq.

Air Force Capt. Scott O’Grady was shot down by a Serb missile near Banja Luka on June 2, while he was on a NATO mission to enforce the ban on flights over Bosnia. He was rescued six days later.

“If we’re proving anything to the Serbs, it’s that we can have accurate strikes at all times and all weather and with no pilots,” said Capt. Jim Mitchell, the chief spokesman for NATO.

He said there could be more attacks if NATO pilots still consider Serb anti-aircraft systems to be a threat. Mitchell said:

“If we need to use the Tomahawks again we will,” he said in Naples.

Also Sunday, Bosnian Serbs shielded the U.N.-controlled Tuzla airport and NATO retaliated swiftly with airstrikes, destroying rebel positions near the northeastern city.

In an attempt to end the standoff with the Serbs, President Jacques Chirac of France said Sunday he demanded NATO suspend its attacks for several hours to let the Serbs agree to withdraw their guns. He didn’t say when the suspension would take effect.

Despite morning cloud cover, NATO warplanes also carried out airstrikes Sunday in other parts of Bosnia, said Franco Veltri, a NATO spokesman in Naples, Italy.

NATO used cruise missiles because of their accuracy and because they can operate in all types of weather, said Mitchell. He said using them also reduced the risk to NATO pilots.

Mitchell said the decision to use the missiles did not represent a change in the mission being carried out by NATO and the United Nations, nor in the targets being attacked.

A NATO plane, believed to be an unmanned surveillance plane, came under sustained fire from Bosnian Serb anti-aircraft guns near Poljine, north-east of Sarajevo, but wasn’t hit, said Maj. Guy Vitel, a U.N. spokesman.

Earlier Sunday, the Belgrade-based news agency Tanjug named Bosnian Serb officials as saying NATO warplanes had been in action several times overnight in the region around Banja Luka in northwestern Bosnia.

Since Aug. 30, NATO has carried out heavy attacks against a broad array of Serb targets across Bosnia, including ammunition depots and command and communication centers.

NATO and the United Nations have been trying to force Bosnian Serbs to withdraw their heavy weapons from the 12 1/2-mile exclusion zone around Sarajevo.

Bosnian Serb commander Gen. Radko Mladic reportedly said Saturday that he would not pull back the guns that ring the capital. He argued that it would allow Bosnian government forces to move in.

Following a telephone conversation with Chirac, Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic, under apparent Western pressure, gave guarantees that his troops would not launch an offensive in the Sarajevo region if the Serbs withdrew their heavy weapons.

Chirac said the NATO airstrikes would continue if the Serbs refused to bow to demands. “We will not weaken vis-a-vis the Bosnian Serbs who are the aggressors,” he said.

Igor Ivanov, Russia’s First Deputy Foreign minister, was quoted by Moscow’s ITAR-Tass news agency as saying that Malic had no plans to pull back his weapons.

Pope prays for war victims

By DANIEL J. WAKIN
Associated Press

LORETO, Italy
With the Adriatic Sea glittering behind him and an ocean of youth stretching in front, Pope John Paul II paid homage Sunday to young people killed in the Bosnian war.

The fighting continues to devastate homes and schools and “transform what were quiet places of work and living into cemeteries, where young people above all are buried,” the pope said during a Mass outside Loreto, a city dedicated to a shrine to the Virgin Mary.

“We knelt down before the tombs of so many young people, with their mothers and fathers, in tears,” he said. Let the “mute language of their deaths” turn the warmakers to reconciliation, he said.

On the second day of the pope’s trip to Loreto to meet with young people from across Europe, the fighting in former Yugoslavia continued to occupy his thoughts. The Croatian coast lies just 80 miles across the turquoise sea.

Police officials estimated the crowd of people at 400,000. They stood in a huge concave field before the altar, which was covered with a white plastic half-domes.

Many had spent the night after a Saturday evening vigil of music, song and dance presided over by the pontiff.

They waved flags from their countries and used umbrellas to shield themselves from the bright sun.

In his traditional message after Mass on Sunday, the pope said he saw “great hope” for a more just world “in the lines of action” emerging from the U.N. conference on women in Beijing.

The Vatican delegation has charged with representing povcet countries at the conference with opposing the traditional family and motherhood.

The weekend trip to Loreto began a busy period of trips for history’s most-traveled pope. On Thursday, he heads to Africa for a six-day visit.

WASHINGTON

Sen. Bob Packwood wrote his own headline for the behind-the-scenes dealings with lobbyists that helped lead to his downfall: "Republican Fat Cat Buys off Senator with Job to Senator's Wife."

That diary entry, dated Dec. 10, 1990, is part of a rare glimpse into the backroom communications among money, politics, and lobbyists that usually are only whispered about on Capitol Hill, if they are mentioned at all.

The Oregon Republican had not slept the night before, worried that his divorce proceedings would have to go to a public trial and the arrangements he had made with lobbyists and political backers to reduce his alimony payments would become known, resulting in headlines like the one he wrote.

The Justice Department earlier this year declined to prosecute Packwood for soliciting jobs for his former wife from the lobbyists.

Yet the diaries provide unusual insights into how lobbyists and business executives sometimes exploit personal connections inside the Capitol to benefit their own interests — and how they reciprocate to keep friendly politicians in power. Excerpts were released last week by the Senate Ethics Committee.

In one blunt entry, Packwood wrote that Ronald Crawford, a lobbyist with the firm FFR Research Associates, was helpful in raising money for the Washington political action committees "because much of his income is dependent on his relationship with me. He has got a vested interest in my staying in office."

In another, Packwood recounted a 1990 dinner conversation with Crawford in which the lobbyist offered to put up $7,500 a year to help support Packwood's wife, Georgie, after their marriage broke up.

"If you're chairman of the Finance Committee, I can probably double that," he quoted Crawford as saying. Packwood, who at the time was a senior minority member of the tax-writing panel, later told the Ethics Committee the remark was meant as a joke.

Packwood's entries underscore that access to the powerful is the commodity that sets them apart from jobs for mere salaries.

Once, he wrote, he let a group of officials from the American Iron and Steel Institute into his office only because Crawford was their lobbyist. Another time, Crawford came to Packwood's office with a prospective client after explaining, "People hear that you're tough to get to, and they know I can get to you." Packwood wrote that he responded, "Well, that's a happy relationship for all of us."

On Sept. 13, 1989, Packwood recorded: "Ron Crawford was in. He had a special problem involving the transfer of partnership properties...what its legal implications are. He said his client was Shell Oil and this was very, very important to him personally. I said, 'I know how much you hate the oil companies.' He said, 'I still hate the oil companies but I'll do you a favor.' Crawford, in a deposition before the ethics panel, said he didn't offer Georige Packwood a job based on any request from the senator, but said he had considered hiring her part-time.

He acknowledged that his contacts with Packwood and his former aides were important to his lobbying business.

"A lot of the former staffers are sprinkled throughout the administration," he said. An annual party for Packwood associates at his home "is just an attempt to enhance my own business opportunities through those people, contacts, whatever they might be," Crawford added.

Two of Packwood's job solicitations for his former aides underscored the importance of personal relationships when lobbyists begin their careers as congressional aides. Steven R. Saunders, who represents Japan's Mitsubishi Corp. in Washington, worked for Packwood for four years on Capitol Hill. Tim Lee, owner of an Oregon freight logistics company and a major Packwood fund raiser, once was an intern for Packwood.

Saunders had an interest in a patent dispute between his employer and a U.S. competitor that had landed in Congress' lap, the Ethics Committee found. Lee, although not a lobbyist, had an interest in legislation to overturn a Supreme Court decision that could have hurt his trucking business, the panel said.

Most of those Packwood approached agreed immediately to his requests to provide income to Georgie Packwood, the report shows.

Bill Furman, president of an Oregon company that makes and leases rail cars to the hated tankers, immediately offered to provide $40,000 or $50,000 a year when he heard Mrs. Packwood was worried about money, the report states.

Packwood notes that Furman was "eternally appreciative to me...for what I did for him in '86 with the transition rules," a package of tax provisions to benefit certain industries.

In testimony to the panel, Packwood later denied that he connected the job offer in his own mind with previous legislative favors he had done for Furman's company.
The hard-line’s unexpected victory Friday makes the prospect of negotiations between pro-Israeli Christians and Sinn Fein, the Irish Republican Army’s political ally, more remote than ever.

A majority of more than 800 members of the Ulster Unionist party’s ruling council picked him over four fellow members of British Parliament.

Their decision comes against the backdrop of a dispute in Anglo-Irish relations over the importance of “decommissioning” IRA weapons, and growing Protestant suspicions that Britain will retreat from this principle as it has on others to sustain the past year’s truce.

Walker was forced to steer Endeavour around the satellite. As the two craft zoomed around Earth at 5 miles per second, painstakingly lining up Endeavour’s crane with the target pin on Spartan.

More than a half-hour later than planned, astronaut Michael Gerstenmaier reached out with the crane and grabbed the satellite. He hauled the 2,800-pound boxy craft into the cargo bay, where it will remain for the rest of the 11-day mission, due to end Sept. 11.

The 230-mile-high rendezvous was one of the shuttle mission’s major objectives. Ground controllers suspect that the satellite was not in a safe, shutdown mode because of weak batteries or a depletion of steering fuel, so NASA manager Craig Tooley.

The boosters inside the satellite were warm, indicating that everything was working until just before Endeavour showed up, Tooley said.

“We believe that the most likely scenario is that the mission was a complete success,” Tooley said.

During its two days of free flight, the 88 million satellite was programmed to observe streams of charged particles buffeting from the sun’s north pole at 500 miles per second. Gusts of this so-called solar wind can knock out power plants on Earth and interrupt radio signals.

Spartan’s observations were timed to coincide with those by satellites, a large, steel disk intended for electronic research. The astronauts plan to release the $25 million Wake Shield Facility on Monday and recapture it two days later.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.
Endeavour’s astronauts chased and recovered a solar-science satellite Sunday that was spinning and facing the wrong way because of an apparent power problem.

NASA will not know whether the telescopes on the Spartan satellite collected any data until Endeavour returns to Earth on Tuesday, according to a mission official.

Commander David Walker and his crew discovered that the satellite had shut down automatically when they pulled it up to retrieve it two days after releasing it.

Papal edict calls for reexamination of view

"Don't think they should kill him because it's not our right to kill. God should decide for his penalty," said 13 year-old Salvador Gonzalez in arguing last May to a California court that Frederick Lee Jackson should not be executed for the murder of Salvador's mother. As the wire service put it, "Sal­­­va­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­…
Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to your recent story on ND’s study abroad program in Chile. I am from Chile and, though I have lived most of my life in the United States, I have returned to visit my family in Chile on several occasions.

Specifically, I would like to take issue with the photographs that accompanied Tuesday’s story. Though the story itself may or may not have done a successful job of accurately portraying the experience of a handful of ND students in Chile, the lasting impression left by the photographs of a horse-drawn carriage and two seemingly poor children does nothing more than reinforce negative stereotypes of Latin America as a place of backwardness and poverty.

Although the focus of the story may have been limited to the ND program in Chile, it would be naïve to think that the implication of the message contained in those pictures does not extend far beyond the context of the story itself. The Observer failed to transcend tired stereotypes and missed a chance to present interesting information from a fresh and accurate perspective.

FRANCISCO SANTONI

Off-Campus

Dear Editor:

I am writing to protest the recent RecSports decision to permit an Off-Campus Women’s Football team. First of all, we participants of the sport know it is a “dorm football” Off-Campus is not a dorm, and it has no place as an organized sport. Kinds reminds one of the catchy Jingle “One of these things is not like the other, one of these things does not belong.”

The mere presence of an Off-Campus team shows hypocrisy on the part of both RecSports, as a Notre Dame organization, as well as members of the Notre Dame student “family.” RecSports claims that allowing Off-Campus residents to play for their dorms takes away playing time from freshmen. Whatever.

Anybody who’s ever played a team sport knows that playing time isn’t the top priority. As in any sport, younger players need to gradually gain experience and skill before being thrown into the fire. Besides, coaches are very fair about distributing playing time, understanding that everyone isn’t the top priority.

Now let’s talk about where the real disadvantage to dorm teams occurs. By permitting an all-senior squad, RecSports is in effect confounding the creation of an All-Star team while stripping teams of their leaders. We need our seniors, not only for their ability, but for their undying spirit and invaluable experience.

Thirty seniors with three years of experience, should, by all logic, beat thirty persons of varied classes and ability often. Hence it is nonsense of the Off-Campus men’s and women’s teams last year. And what kind of legacy did those teams leave? Is anyone left behind from last year’s Off-Campus group to keep that spirit alive?

There is none of the University’s most prized commodity, tradition, in the concept of an Off-Campus team. Off-Campus is the Florida State of dorm football, forsaking pride and heritage for the sake of winning at all costs.

What can we do about the destruction of the dorm family effected by RecSports through Off-Campus football? We must protest! We must inundate RecSports with letters such as this one, decrying this assault on the soul of the dorms. We must educate our rectors about this situation and encourage them to plea on our behalf as Sister Sue Bruno of PW has already done. If necessary, we must boycott our own dorm football games until this grave error is corrected. At the very least RecSports should move off-campus the option of playing for their teams.

If enough seniors want to deny the dorm that has housed them for three years, fine. But let the seniors who still know their roots play for their dorm. Seniors who are considering playing for Off-Campus should realize that the loyalty and tradition away from the dorms and should resign from the Off-Campus roster.

So much emphasis is placed on the family atmosphere of dorm life here at Notre Dame. I’ve been here since more than a year, but if asked what the high point of my experience here has been, I would immediately and enthusiastically respond that it is the Eleanor, and the people I feel with my friends in my own Pasquerilla West Hall.

W e who remain mourn our loss as much as we mourn their inability to play their final season. Without our seniors, we are ungrounded in the concept of dorm unity by the die-hard juniors on the PW team. Although many of those players moved off-campus, their undying loyalty lies with the Weasels.

Notre Dame 35-28 Purdue

Breaking Away

Randy Kinder's remarkable run caps a day of offensive pyrotechnics that sees Notre Dame pull away from Purdue

By TIM SEYMOUR
Associate Sports Editor

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. Perhaps at the end of the season, Irish fans will be able to point to Saturday's 35-28 victory over Purdue as a turning point, a time when the team finally convinced itself it could win.

Until then, it will be remembered for barely averted disaster and unexpected heart palpitations.

"The kids played their hearts out and gave the fans a hell of a show, which you'd like to see all the time," stated Purdue coach Jim Colletto.

Not if you are an Irish fan.

Notre Dame's victory over the once-bustleless Boilermakers was not secured until Ivory Covington and Bobbie Howard combined on fourth down to stop Purdue's Edwin Watson on the Irish six yard line, just short of a first down, with under a minute left.

Such last second dramatics have been far from the norm in the Notre Dame-
Frosh step to forefront for Irish

By TIM SHERMAN

Irish freshman linebacker Bobbie Howard figured prominently on Saturday. The linebacker recorded seven tackles in his debut.

In addition to three scoring strikes of at least 30 yards, Notre Dame also ripped off ten plays that covered at least 14 yards against Purdue. Eight different Irish had at least one in these plays that turned the offensive back into the quick strike offense Holtz loves. "We had some people make some plays," Holtz said. "It was a little bit like what we're used to. We mixed it up well. Some people broke some tack­les and made things happen.

Notre Dame's first scoring strike was a nice wrinkle to a drive that had already seen three balls thrown to Derrick Mayes. On a third-down and four play from the Purdue 30, the Irish set up a timely screen pass to Randy Kinder that caught the Boilermakers off guard and was executed to perfection. "I had one really good block on [tackle] Alston," guard Ryan Leahy said. "Mike Doughty picked up a corner blitz and then I got downfield on the free safety and throw one on him. I couldn't have been the one thing happen­ing behind me but I guess it looked good.

Tailback Autry Denson carried nine times for 69 yards for Notre Dame. He showed great potential as a playmaker.

Ron Powlus completed 17-of-25 passes for 252 yards, and his four touchdowns tied the Notre Dame mark that he also set last season against Northwestern. Notre Dame also ripped off ten plays from 30 yards, and made things happen.

T he Irish were consistent all right, but much to Holtz' pleasant sur­prise, they were consistent not just on offense, but also at making the big plays.

The ensuing two-point conversion turned the game and brought back visions of last week's debacle against Northwestern. Momentum did not remain with Purdue for long though. Rather than staggering under the unexpected pressure of the moment, the Irish offense collected itself and returned the favor, as tailback Randy Kinder broke right on the first play from scrimmage and sprinted 52-yards to put Notre Dame back in the lead. "At that point we just came back and answered," said Mosley. "That's what we were together. Randy broke a lot of big ones."

"I told the guys in the huddle, "Ok, I made it interesting," said Powlus. "Then I said, 'Let's make a big one.'

While Kinder delivered in that fashion, the big plays became almost routine as the two squads tallied a combined 990 yards in total offense. However, it was the last 13 yards of offensive that stymied the Boilermakers.

After Heisman hopeful fullback Mike Alstott missed a fourth down conversion, Purdue kicked the ball away and Notre Dame took over. In his first start, senior Ryan Leahy's synapse that "Purdue is a win is a win" became the team's motto.

"We didn't play particularly well on defense, but we did make some plays," said Irish coach Lou Holtz. "We're glad to win."

Graded Position Analysis

Quarterback B+
Ron Powlus completed 17-of-25 passes for 252 yards and four touchdowns. But a fourth quarter interception for a touchdown could have been costly.

Running Backs B
Randy Kinder exploded for 142 yards, including a 52-yard run in the fourth quarter. Autry Denson looked strong in his debut, and Marc Edwards played tough.

Receivers A
The Irish proved that they had more than just Derrick Mayes. Chyrlle Smith and Sollmann got in on the act. A nice job blocking downfield as well.

Offensive Line A-
502 yards of total offense is nothing to shake a stick at. Neither is allowing just one sack. A good job considering they lost Jeremy Akers just three days before.

Defensive Line B
Mike Alstott plowed ahead as expected, and Corey Rogers had a couple of nice runs. But the Irish line hold when it needed to, even with critical injuries.

Special Teams A-
Purdue conceded field position because they were afraid of Emmett Mosley's return capabilities. The only blemish here was Kevin Kopka's misfield goal.

Coaching B+
Some unexpected play calls and confident bunch of players. There were a couple of fourth downs when you have to wonder why Holtz didn't try for a field goal.

Overall Grade 3.37
The emotion was there, the heart was there, and a victory came as a result. They needed it, even if it was a close win over Purdue.

-Mike Norbut

Purdue series, which Notre Dame has swept handily since 1985. For a team desperately groping for confidence, though, the Irish won't complain.

"It may not have been pretty, in fact it may have been ugly, but never underestimate a win," stated Notre Dame defensive coordinator Bob Davie.

That win looked secure midway through the third quarter after Irish quarterback Ron Powlus fumbled a touch­down pass, his fourth of the day, to wideout Emmett Mosley off a fake re­verse, putting Notre Dame up by a seemingly comfortable 28-13 margin. Purdue for long though.

After the team traded punts, Purdue quarterback Rick Trefzger missed Alston in the flat on third down. On that third down play, I went to the flat and was wide open," said Alston. "He should have thrown it to me, but you can't dwell on that.

Be sure that the Irish will not dwell on it either.

Certainly there were areas needing improvement, but for a team facing the prospect of an 0-2 start, senior Ryan Leahy's synapse that "Purdue is a win is a win" became the team's motto.

"We didn't play particularly well on defense, but we did make some plays," said Irish coach Lou Holtz. "We're glad to win."

Linebackers B+
A strong unit once again. Intense as usual, even with the new faces. Bobbie Howard played well in his first start, and Lyon Cobbins was all over the place.

Secondary C+
Shawn Wooden's and Mark Monahan's picks paced this unit. Brian Magee played well. But Allen Rossum and Ivory Covington have to be happy the game's over.

Coaching B+
Some unexpected play calls and confident bunch of players. There were a couple of fourth downs when you have to wonder why Holtz didn't try for a field goal.
Big plays make for big day for Irish offense

Good decisions, execution add up to over 500 yards of total offense

By Tim SHERMAN
Associated Press Editor

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. Through the second week following the Northwestern game, Irish coach Lou Holtz stressed that because his offense did not have big-play capabilities, they would need to consistently gain yards and keep control of the ball.

On Saturday, they were consistent, but much to Holtz's pleasant surprise, they were consistent not just at moving the ball but also at making the big plays.

In addition to three scoring strikes of at least 30 yards, Notre Dame ripped off ten plays that covered at least 14 yards against Purdue. Eight different players had a hand in these plays that turned the offense back into the quick strike offense Holtz loves.

"Total some people make some plays," Holtz said. "It was a little bit like what we're used to bring. We moved it up. Some people broke some tackles and made things happen." Notre Dame's first scoring strike was a nice wrinkle to a trick play that had already seen three balls thrown to Derrick Mayes. On a third-and-four play from the Purdue 30, the Irish set up a tim e screened pass to Randy Kinder that caught the Boilermakers off guard and was executed to perfection.

"I had one really good block on that screen," guard Ryan Leavy said. "Mike Dougherty picked up a corner blitz and then I got downhill on the free safety and threw one on him. I couldn't see what was happening behind me but I guess I looked good."

The open field has looked pretty nice to Kinder as well as all the Irish back had to avoid Leahy and saunter into the end zone. The execution over last week seemed to be immeasurably better, but not necessarily important was the fact that the Irish made the correct choice.

In particular, Purdue's defensive schemes dictated a lot of what the Irish did.

Scott Sulliman's 15-yard touchdown reception in the third quarter illustrated this.

"Ron checked to the play and it was a great check," Sulliman noted. "He saw something he didn't like and it worked out right. He threw a good ball and I caught it going to the back."

Emmett Molsey, too, was the beneficiary of a beautifully conceived play.

Early in the game, the Irish ran a reverse to Derrick Mayes that raised some eyebrows in doubt. Those doubts were erased late in third quarter as a fake reverse resulted in a 51-yard hook-up between Polwus and his flanker.

"Basically, we knew they were keying in on Derrick so we ran the fake reverse," Molsey explained. "We solved their safety concepts up and they tried to fill quickly and we got him coming up.

The game gave Ron plenty of time."

Molsey has started to come into his own as a playmaker for the Irish and foresees bigger and bigger things.

"I think he's going to make big plays. There's a lot of guys out there that are capable of making big plays. It's just a matter of getting the opportunity and taking advantage of it."

After Purdue evened the contest at 28, the opportunity once again became clear. On the first play of the drive, he took a pitch from Polwus and the Boilermakers moved the ball of the line of the Irish.

"It was the only time we went with an unbalanced line," noted Holtz. "We went unbalanced slot and it was well executed. We came back and took the ball back to take care of the safety."

Overall, it was a day for the Irish to take care of worries about a potentially anemic offense.

The first quarter in this game was very representative of what this team can do," Molsey said.

Norebut

and most importantly, it became battle-tested. Notre Dame's stand on their own 12-yard line with a minute to play against a team that had gained almost 500 yards of offense had everyone on the edge of their seats.

But they came out fine. In fact, they came out with flying colors. The Irish saw their football players face what had been considered as a "bump up" before setting a team.

"We were in a very emotional situation," Irish quarterback Ron Polwus said following the game. "That was one of our worst games, but there's a game."

"There was so much pressure on us to get a win," he continued. "We believe in ourselves, but it's a more important day by far than ever before in the papers."

You can only take so much pecking when you've lost six of your last eight games over the past two seasons. Sure, beating Navy and Air Force are fun, but there's something to be said for beating a real team.

And believe it or not, Purdue is a real team. They have a Heisman Trophy candidate in Mike Alstott. They have a marching band with their own media guide. And of course, Purdue is the home to the world's largest drum.

But really, it could have been the Little Sisters of the Poor out there playing Notre Dame. A win is a win, and you can't complain when you've just lost to Northwestern.

"This is just huge," Polwus said. "We really needed this."

Confidence is the most important intangible in football. Teams don't even have to be talented to win. They just have to want to win.

Northwestern wanted to win. They expected to. Not like that is a given. They didn't want to win. Northwestern felt Saturday. Purdue felt the hurt of an emotional outburst by the Fighting Irish.

Not to jump to conclusions, but a team similar to this squashed by Northwestern two years ago before upstaging a one. The game itself, however, the Northwestern National Championship after losing to Roster in the College Bowl.

This team isn't that level yet. But you never know what can happen when you win a game or two.

Maybe everyone was just a little too quick to call these guys losers.

Game Notes

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — The Irish now have two decades of dominance to speak of.

After going eleven years without giving up a loss to Southern Cal, Notre Dame has now gone ten without losing to Purdue. It might not be as impressive as knocking off the Trojans, but it's something for this team to hang its hat on.

It's the first win over a non-military academy since the Irish beat Stanford in the fifth week last season. Their two wins since then have come against Navy and Air Force.

"This is a huge confidence boost," Irish quarterback Ron Powlus said. "We needed a win by a point, twenty points, fifty points, anything."

Finally! Though elusive, Irish head coach Lou Holtz finally captured his 200th victory with Notre Dame's 200th win over Purdue.

"I'm glad it came at Notre Dame and I'm glad it came with a group of guys that played their hearts out," The Irish certainty did that. That emotion was evident throughout the game. "No one likes to lose," receiver Emmett Mosley said. "We just got it together and picked it up a notch."

The Rebound: Holtz was concerned with how his Irish would react after a shocking 17-15 loss to Northwestern. "I did not know how we were going to respond this weekend, especially with us playing on the road," he said.

Notre Dame responded by piling up 502 yards of total offense and a converted on three turnovers. Shawn Wooden had two interceptions and Mark Monahan added a third.

The Records: Powlus' four touchdown passes ties a Notre Dame game record. That record is held by three other quarterbacks — Angelo Bertelli, Darlye Lamonica and Steve Beuerlein. Beuerlein did it in 1986 against USC.

Ironically, that game was also the last time an opponent intercepted a pass and returned it for a touchdown against the Irish. Powlus' pass in the fourth quarter was picked off by Derrick Brown, who ran it 54 yards for a score. The Trojans' Lou Brock (no, not the one the Cubs traded away) was the last to do it almost ten years ago.

Injuries: Wooden, Allen Rossum, Renaldo Wynn, Corey Bennett and LaRon Moore all suffered from leg cramps at various points in the game. Wynn's looked to be the most painful, as he was carted off on a stretcher in the fourth quarter.

Safety Jarvis Edison suffered a mild concussion in the first half and did not return to the game.

In the Background: Irish starting receiver Charlie Stafford has seen plenty of playing time this year, but no action. He has not caught a pass in two games, and he has held for field goals and extra points.

Irish Voll Field of Play: Purdue was so scared of kicking to Mosley that they pooched it every time in the second half. "It's hard when you let a team start on the 50 yard line," Purdue coach Jim Collette said. "We had a hard time making up for that."

Heisman Watch: Can a fullback really win the Heisman? Purdue thinks Mike Alstott can. They're hyping him for all it's worth, including selling "A-Train" shirts to gullible visitors.

Slap in the Face: Take a look at the polls. See anything scary? Like maybe Northwestern cracking the Associated Press Top-25? The Wildcats are now in the No. 25 slot, just one spot below the Irish. A hard-er slap in the face would have only been if Northwestern was ranked above Notre Dame.

The American students live in a hostel-like residence situated blocks from the University and, perhaps more importantly, the beach. Students find the palm trees of Fremantle, the change from South Bend scenery and enjoy the warm Australian climate during their stay. During a week-long mid-semester break, students can travel to cities such as Queensland, Sydney, Melbourne, and Tasmania. Some students take advantage of the opportunity to snorkel in the Great Barrier Reef, white-water raft, or even skydive. While touring, many students glimpsed kangaroos, koalas, Tasmanian devils, and other wildlife. Still others chose to venture into the Outback to visit Aboriginal colonies and historical prisons.

In their studies students approach learning "hands-on," while gaining a distinct international perspective. In the community, Americans meet a friendly and mellow attitude. "No worries, mate" seems to be the motto.

However, one minor adjustment is the Australian accent. Although no foreign language is necessary for this abroad program, Australian slang and dialect are challenging but interesting to experience.

Students who participate in the Fremantle program are rewarded with a closeness to one another, an insight into Australian ways of life, and a growth in perspective. Kathleen Clark, who returned from a semester in Fremantle last Spring, believes that "To have the opportunity [to go abroad] is really amazing. Australia always seemed far away, out of reach. Now that it is part of my experience I have a deeper appreciation of my life here."

The University of Notre Dame Australia

The University of Notre Dame Australia provides a trip for the students at the end of the semester to the Yucatan.

The program is more than this though. In speaking to those who have already made the trip, it is clear that one grows intellectually, spiritually, and emotionally. The atmosphere is warm, welcoming, and festive. Traditions, many Catholic, are immensely important, and the solidarity of the people is evident from the start. Baumester expressed it best in trying to convey the mariachi music, the street vendor delicacies - when she claimed, "Everything has a flavor."

The Mexico City program is described by all the participants I spoke to as not only incredibly enriching, but a vital component to their social development. Whomever you talk to, you are sure to encounter enthusiastic encouragement to go and take advantage of one of the best experiences Notre Dame has to offer.

The University of Notre Dame Australia is housed in the heart of Fremantle, Australia. The program is geared for business students in the Fall and Liberal Arts in the Spring semester. This will be the fourth year South Bend students will attend the Australian branch of Notre Dame and each year the student body grows. Classes, formerly only American students, are now integrated with Australian students. The growth of the Fremantle branch has contributed greatly to the development of the program, which now has over five hundred undergraduate students.

Australia is the world's largest city opens its doors to the Notre Dame community.

Austria

By MIKE JACCARINO

Europeans delight in watching other people. By custom, a French or Austrian will sit facing the street rather than a person who has joined them to watch the passersby stroll along the venues. Conversation continues over the outdoor tables in the cafe but only as the patrons partake in the subtleties of life as it walks in front. An American tourist may pass by as the patrons wave for one more latte or another cappuccino.

The International Studies program affords Notre Dame students the opportunity to partake in that time-worn tradition of viewing life—to sit in a cafe and watch the whole European world stroll by. Of the programs available, the Austria-Innsbruck trip is the oldest, now entering its thirty-first year.

The students of the program spend a year studying a humanities curriculum at the University in Innsbruck. But the trip begins long before the flight leaves North America. It begins in the classroom of Professor Marie Antoinette Kremrer. Students intending to embark for Austria must first maintain a 2.5 GPA and at least a B average in either German or French. The cost of the trip equals that of a year at Notre Dame, taking into account scholarships and aid.

The program is designed to teach the German language and to provide an introduction to Austrian culture, but the course outline is often expanded by the professor. From the beginning, the program is designed as a meeting ground for the American student and the Austrian as the professor points out the care they can view the grandeur of the Austrian Alps which extend above the pastures around the city.

At any time during their stay, students are free to venture to other parts of Europe. Most traveled to Munich for the merrymaking that takes place under the huge rectangular tents of the Oktoberfest. They watched burly, sweating German waitresses carry six mugs in one trip. The students return to the city, many students return having seen the whole of the continent. As these trips and other activities the students have grown to love, walking in the Alps or taking a gondola ride through Venice are independent, they are not included in the cost of the trip. At the University, class sizes tend to be quite small, while the teachers are frequently heads of their departments selected by Notre Dame. Professors do not entirely change their teaching style for American students, but teach in consideration of varying levels of German proficiency. A stipend is given every two weeks for expenses and for meals. Later in the year, students can apply for a guest family which they visit about twice a week.

If you’re sitting by yourself, his is not uncommon to walk over to another who is sitting alone. You might meet your future bride or life companion that way. It’s far better than sitting alone.’

Junior Gretchen Guschke found the most beautiful aspect of traveling to a foreign country to be the honesty and openness among them. The trip was described by all as a rare growing experience.

Peter Kittleson found himself engaged in a conversation about these experiences with an Austrian stranger. They spoke of the way the Austrian had thought nothing of walking over to chat with the other times Peter had been approached by strangers. “If you’re sitting by yourself it’s not uncommon to walk over to another who is sitting alone. You might meet your future bride or life companion that way. It’s far better than sitting alone.”

Days of Our Lives Correspondents

T

All the Peanut and Pumpkin fans, we are deeply apologetic for last week's misspeaking of Samantha Brady's nickname "Sami," as well as her sister Carrie's name. We regret any confusion or anger this may have caused. However, we do feel that those who called and complained to the Observer and not directly to us are only trying to steal our fame and fortune as the Observer's "Days of Our Lives" correspondents.

Now, let's stop the games! Stefano was released from the hospital and into Marlena's open arms (i.e., her apartment, her home, let's be honest, her love shack). We bet he can't wait until he regains the use of all lower extremities and not just his legs. Marlena's goodwill caused much tension among those who remember Stefano's evil deeds.

Does anyone have any idea as to what Tony's psycho plan is? It's a little crazy. Either he's going to kill someone and set John up to take the fall, or he's going to trick John into killing someone. Which ever way, several of Salem's mental institutions pop into our minds. Maybe Laura can recommend a good one.

Recently and surprisingly going away for some quality time without Jack. Surprisingly, they were back in about an hour, claiming they wanted to make sure Abigail got to bed on time. We don't know if they thought she would be at the Penthouse Grill or what, but that's where they turned up.

At the same time, Laura was doing everything in her power to seduce Jack, which wasn't much. Jack couldn't stand to see Peter and Supreme rapping, so he headed to the balcony, where he was confronted by Peter. They proceeded to get into a "very realistic" fight, after which, possibly two punches, Peter fell jumped off of the balcony and onto a ledge. Luckily, Miracle-Doctor-Know-All Mike was with his one-date-of-the-year at the Grill and was able to get Peter to the hospital. It didn't look good for Peter, but we're sure he'll bounce back.

High-Hair Hope and Big-Butt Bo finally got their divorce, much to Hope's and Carmen's dismay. It basically took all week for this to happen, with little upsets and scares thrown in for good looks. Sami weased her way into a job with Austin and Carson, so they wouldn't be alone together. Victor and Vivian are well on their way to a night of amou. Unfortunately, it makes us sick.

We are sure if you watched on Friday, you'll remember the "tongue incident." We wish Victor would remember poor Kate, who is still off cleaning fish somewhere in the Atlantic. Ollie harassed Ivan, and began to suspect the truth about Vivian's intentions with Victor.

Predictions: Tony picks Marlena at the "Bride to kill." Stefano continues to wear pastels. Peter will smile more at Christmas. Hope and Bo get back together. Bo makes a stand and leaves the show to take basic Spanish.

If you have more predictions or comments, feel free to e-mail them to the Observer's "Days of Our Lives" experts at Christina.N.Piclar.1994@nd.edu.
Even without Deion, Cowboys still too much for the Broncos

Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — After a week in which the Cowboys snagged Deion Sanders as their first-round draft choice, corporate sponsor, Troy Aikman and Emmitt Smith just went out and did their usual.

Aikman accounted for three touchdowns and Smith rushed for over 100 yards and scored a touchdown Sunday as Dallas defeated the Denver Broncos 31-21.

Aikman, who gave up some of his salary this season so Sanders could squeeze under the salary cap, started slow and finished fast as he threw two touchdown passes and jumped like a springboard diver for another.

Smith, who needed smelly socks after a particularly hard hit, came back to score his 80th career touchdown on a 1-yard run Sunday, which had four touch- downs in a 35-0 victory Monday night over the Giants, rushed 26 times for 114 yards.

For Dallas (2-0), it was the 26th victory in the last 32 regular-season games. The contest was played at a Texas Stadium decked out with logos from Nike, the company whose sponsor- ship of the Cowboys angered the NFL.

John Elway threw touchdown passes of 11 and 59 yards to Anthony Miller as the Dallas secondary showed signs of needing Sanders as soon as possible.

However, Larry Brown intercepted Elway and Charles Haley had two sacks as the Denver offense failed to match Dallas’ firepower.

Miller scored a third touch- down on a 3-yard pass from Hugh Millen with 47 seconds left.

The Cowboys led by a touchdown starting the second half, but Aikman hit tight end Jay Novacek with a 7-yard scoring pass, Smith scored to cap a 62- yard drive and Elway fumbled but got the game out of reach with a 45-yard field goal.

Dallas awakened from its Deion daze on a big second quarter play provided by the defense to finally get the edge on the Broncos (1-1).

Tackle Chad Hennings tipped an Elway pass which corner- back Brown intercepted and returned 18 yards to the Denver 6. Two plays later from the Aikman rolled out and hit full- back Daryl Johnston for 3 yards.

Aikman put together a 93- yard drive in 10 plays to put Dallas ahead 14-0. Passes of 29 and 16 yards to Michael Irvin and a 14-yarder to Smith put Dallas on the Denver 2. From there, Aikman rolled out again, couldn’t find a receiver and dove into the end zone over the tackle of Ray Crockett.

Elway, frustrated for most of the first half, threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Miller as Denver trailed 14-7 at halftime.

Elway, now 1-1 against Dallas, hit 11 of 24 passes for 152 yards. Aikman completed 18 of 31 for 196 yards.

Colts 27, Jets 24 (OT)

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The Indianapolis Colts bumed their way into a 21-point hole. The New York Jets then lifted them out of it and Jim Harbaugh passed them to victory.

The Colts, behind backup quarterback Harbaugh’s passing, rallied for the second straight week. They lost in over- time to Cincinnati last week. This time, they won 27-24 as Mike Cofer hit a 52-yard field goal with 4:27 gone in the extra session.

Harbaugh, whose mobility let him avoid pressure time and again, made another statement for recapturing the starting job given to Craig Erickson. His 24- yard completion to Sean Dawkins on third down in over- time set up the field goal. After Cofer earlier missed much shorter kicks.

Harbaugh was 11-for-16 for 123 yards in leading the comeback.

It was a stunning turnaround for both teams. Until late in the third quarter, the Colts (1-1) made the big mistakes, setting up nearly all of New York’s points. Then the Jets (0-2) began dropping the ball and committing silly penalties.

The killer was Boomer Esiason’s fumble of a snap at the Colts’ 23 with 5 1/2 minutes left and the Jets approaching field-goal range. Harbaugh drove the Colts 75 yards in seven plays to tie 24-24.

At the end of an 11-yard scramble by Harbaugh, Donald Evans drew a penalty for a hit out of bounds, sending the ball to the Jets’ 14. Harbaugh hit a wide-open Marshall Faulk on the next play for the score.

Earlier in the fourth quarter, Sean Dawkins caught a 15-yard pass, scoring to cap a 62-yard field goal drive.

The Jets got back into it when Tony Bennett picked up Ronald Moore’s fumble and scooted 32 yards for a touch- down late in the third quarter.

Before that, Jets wide receivers Charles Wilson and Wayne Chrebet each caught touchdown passes and a defense paced by Wilber Marshall and Otis Smith converted turnovers into touch- downs for a 24-3 edge. All four of them are newcomers to the Jets.

The Jets put together a pre- cise 9-minute drive to open the game, scoring on Wilson’s leap- ing catch of a 5-yard pass from Esiason.

Smith then picked off Erickson’s poor pass, thrown behind Faulk, and cut to the right sideline for a 49-yard interception return.

Heisman candidate dismissed from team

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Lawrence Phillips, the star Nebraska running back who scored four touchdowns Saturday, was arrested Sunday night for allegedly beating his ex-girlfriend and was thrown off the football team.

“We will do everything we can to help him get his life back together, but he is dis- missed from the football team effective immediately,” coach Tom Osborne said.

Phillips was arrested on suspicion of misdemeanor third-degree assault. He is scheduled to appear Tuesday at an arraignment at 2:30 p.m., his attorney, Hal An- derson said.

“Phillips was the nation’s third-leading rusher last year with 1,722 yards, and had been mentioned as a possible Heisman Trophy winner. Phillips had been the target of an NCAA investigation.

IN THE BASILICA OF THE SACRED HEART
O’Meara shines in sudden death to win Canadian Open

By HARRY ATKINS
Associated Press

OAKVILLE, Ontario — Hard-charging Mark O’Meara missed mistake-free golf in a stirring match with his friend Bob Lohr, winning the Canadian Open when Lohr bogeyed the first playoff hole Sunday.

It was the second PGA Tour victory of the season for the unflappable O’Meara, who shot a bogey-free, final-round 67 for 14-under-par 274 at Glen Abbey Golf Club in the suburbs of Toronto.

Lohr, who took a three-stroke lead into Sunday’s fourth round, had three bogeys in his round of 70, but birdied three of the final four holes to force the playoff. Two of Lohr’s bogeys came in a three-hole stretch of the five valley holes, where O’Meara charged into a three-stroke lead with five holes to play.

The playoff began on No. 18, a 508-yard, par-5. Lohr, using a fairway wood, hit his second shot into the pond that guards the green. O’Meara, playing it safe, laid up and hit a wedge within 25 feet of the pin with his third shot.

Lohr’s attempt to save par from about 28 feet curled below the cup. O’Meara then hit a nice lag putt and got down in two for the 10th triumph of his career which began in 1981.

It was O’Meara’s sixth playoff, the third for Lohr. O’Meara is 2-4 in overtime affairs and Lohr 1-2.

Their closest pursuers included defending champion Nick Price, Hal Sutton, Bob Tway and Andrew Magee. But they might as well have been playing on another planet. All the action involved O’Meara and Lohr, whose lone tour victory came in the 1988 Disney Classic.

Price, winless since last year’s victory, made par-4. Sutton closed with a 69 to finish four back at 274. Magee and Bill Glasson were at 71 and Glasson on a 70.

O’Meara, who won the Honda Classic in March, has a history of closing fast. He earned more than half of his $214,070 he took home in 1994 during the final two months of the season.

The $234,000 winner’s share of the $1.3 million purse Sunday hiked his 1995 earnings to $780,729, topping his previous career-high of $759,648 in 1992.

This year’s charge began in the PGA Championship where O’Meara was two strokes off the lead entering the final round and finished sixth. Last week, he tied for 10th in the Milwaukee Open.

The match between O’Meara and Lohr was even after 11 holes with both at 13-under. O’Meara, with only his 12th putt of the day, rolled home a 20-footer for birdie while Lohr made par-4.

O’Meara took the lead for the first time with a 6-foot par putt at No. 12, a par-3. Lohr, from an elevated tee, left his tee shot short of the green and was unable to save par.

O’Meara continued his charge on No. 13, the first of three par-5s on the homeward nine, by curling in a 15-foot downhill birdie putt to go 14-under and two strokes ahead.

Lohr pushed his second shot at No. 14 into some thick rough on the right side of the green.

injury of Senior setter Shannon Tuttle.

“Our team chemistry is so good this year,” Lee said. “We are very focused on maintaining our top-ten ranking and achieving the goals we have set for ourselves.”

The Irish have come one step closer to achieving their goals with the Big Four victories this weekend. They defeated Kentucky 15-10, 13-15, 17-15, and 15-12 on Saturday morning and then capped off the weekend with a 15-17, 15-11, 10-15, 15-4, and 15-7 victory over Louisville Saturday night.

Despite the unexpected duration of the matches, Coach Brown credited her team with its response to the pressure placed on them.

“As the season goes on, we will become more consistent,” Brown said.

“But when our backs were against the wall this weekend, we played very competitive.”
San Francisco dents Chicago wildcard hopes

By MIKE NADEL

CHICAGO

Delon Sanders, showing that he's a pretty good baseball player, too, tied his career high with four hits Sunday as the San Francisco Giants completed a three-game sweep of the Cubs with an 8-7 victory.

William VanLandingham (6-3) allowed four hits and one earned run in five innings before leaving with a strained groin muscle. The Giants have won nine of 12 to keep alive their slim postseason hopes.

Red Beck pitched the ninth and gave up Scott Bulte's two-run homer but held on for his 29th save.

San Francisco remained 5 1/2 games back in the NL West and still trail five teams in the wild-card race. One of those teams is Chicago, which began the day four games back. The Cubs, whose 24-34 home record is the league's worst, have lost four straight games and five of six.

One day after signing a reported $30 million, five-year contract to play football for the Dallas Cowboys after the baseball season, Sanders doubled, drove in two runs and scored twice. Mark Carreon had a two-run double. Barry Bends, Kirt Wanwaring, Matt Williams and John Patterson also drove in runs.

Sanders had plenty of help Sunday as the Giants pounded Steve Trachsel (6-11) and four relievers for 12 hits. Ex-Cub Glenallen Hill homered, doubled, drove in two runs and scored twice. Mark Carreon had a two-run double. Barry Bends, Kirt Wanwaring, Matt Williams and John Patterson also drove in runs.

Howard Johnson and Mark Parent homered for the Cubs. Johnson's two-run drive in the sixth off Jose Bautista cut Chicago's deficit to 6-4 but San Francisco regained control with a two-run seventh that included Hill's homer, his 20th, and Patterson's pinch-hit RBI single.

Notes: In 24 career day games, VanLandingham is 12-0. He's also unbeaten at home (9-0) and evened his road mark to 3-5 with Sunday's win. ... The Cubs have committed 10 errors during their 1-5 slump. ... In a pregame ceremony, the National League retired the numbers 1, 2 and 3 in honor of Hall of Fame umpires Bill Klein, Jocko Conlan and Al Barlick.

with a dominating 25-3 edge in shots on goal, and the second half effort pleased head coach Mike Berticelli.

"We needed the first half to sort out what they were doing defensively," commented Berticelli. "We talked about it at half-time, and made the necessary adjustments. We were patient, and let things open up. I was most pleased that the team was able to make the adjustments."

Sunday's game, the first ever Big East contest for the Irish, proved to be much more of a challenge for the team. Lanza again proved his value to the team, as he had a hand in all three of the Irish goals, and Bocklage continued to emerge as a scoring threat.

Bocklage put the Irish on the board with a diving header off a pretty Lanza assist 20:22 into the game, and Lanza struck again just 15 seconds later when he stole the ball off the Syracuse kickoff and weaved through the defense to make it 2-0.

The Irish played a solid game defensively all day, with Tony Capasso effectively shutting down Syracuse freshman phenom Jeff Knitel in the middle, and both Peter Van de Ven and Greg Volko playing well in goal.

The Notre Dame defense has proved quite stingy in the season's first three games, allowing the Irish to oust the Syracuse kickoff and weaved through the defense to make it 2-0.

"Obviously, with this being the first Big East game, I was pleased with the result," said Berticelli. "We came out very strong in the first half, but kind of slacked off in the second half. Overall, I thought we played very well, creating a lot of chances and finishing off our shots well. As young as we are, our players are doing a good job."

The Irish's next two games will put them into the thick of the Big East race, as they travel to New Jersey next weekend to play matches against Seton Hall and Rutgers University.

Everyone Welcome!
Belles continue to struggle

By NICOLE BORDA
Saint Mary's Sports Writer

With a new coach and a new was supposed to be different. Belles continue to struggle of 1-3 to off 1995.

St. Mary's planned to put last season's 4-12 record behind them. But with a record of 3-3 to start off this year, things are not looking up.

The Belles are playing physical in an attempt to make up for their lack of size.

In Saturday's game against Ohio Wesleyan, Freshman Monica Cernanec, who got the start for the Belles, had a goal from senior Brigid Keyes against Denison.

However, Saint Mary's found themselves suffering from the same problem they've had in previous games. The ball wasn't making it to the goal.

The game ended in a 1-0 loss for the Belles. Sophomore Sandra Gaus thought that her team performed well.

"These two games were tough losses. We definitely played better. It was just bad luck," she said.

It seems certain that head coach Solomon Scholz will be reevaluating the rest of the season. However no one knows for sure just how he plans to turn this around for the Belles.

"I have told my team that our goal is to win," Scholz said at the start of the season. What the remainder of the season will bring for the Belles is still in question.

For the Belles, this season has been tough losses. "We definitely played better. It was just bad luck," she said.

The Belles have better skills and we're just not capitalizing on them," Cernanec said.

Yesterday the Belles went up against Denison.

"I have told my team that our goal is to win," Scholz said at the start of the season. What the remainder of the season will bring for the Belles is still in question.

Sampras defeats Agassi for third U.S. Open title

By STEVE WISTEIN

New York

Knuckles bleeding, aces flying through the whipping wind, Pete Sampras outlasted Andre Agassi to capture a third U.S. Open title Sunday and gain the No. 1 ranking in the season of his greatest rival, if not the rankings themselves.

Sampras spilled blood diving for a volley, rocketed Agassi with 24 aces, and when they engaged in the most crucial baseline rallies, the champion at his own game to win 6-4, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5, two months after taking his third straight Wimbledon.

Right down to the end, when Sampras served his 142nd ace of the tournament at 120 mph, he put on brilliant show of his power, control and resilience under pressure that he dedicated to his absent and ailing coach, Tim Gullikson.

"That's for you, Timmy," Sampras said to the television camera, knowing Gullikson was watching back home in suburban Chicago. "Wish you were here."

One point, a magnificent rally of 22 shots that sent them both scurrying from side to side, made all the difference in the first set and, ultimately, the match.

A backhand crosscourt by Sampras ended that rally, broke Agassi and closed out a set in which Agassi had yielded only two points in his first four service games.

It was a game that showed both the best of Sampras and the worst of Agassi, with a little luck thrown in. Sampras reached his first break point with a forehand return that clipped the net cord and trickled over out of Agassi's reach.

Agassi's service winner brought it back to deuce, but he went to break-point again when he clipped an easy overhead 10 feet long.

Agassi thought he'd even it up again when he put Sampras running desperately in a baseline duel. Instead, it was Sampras who put away that last shot of the longest rally, and Agassi who could only stare at it and hang his head.

Oakland too much for Washington youth

By JOSEPH WHITE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

No longer obsessed with the long ball, the Oakland Raiders offense took their time. A well-rested defense responded by keeping the Washington Redskins out of the end zone in a 20-8 victory Sunday.

Defensive coordinator Jeff Hostetler contented to throw screens and underneath patterns against a tough Redskins secondary, had two touchdown passes but only one completion for more than 30 yards as the Raiders new, ball-control game ate up the clock and kept the crowd noise down at RFK Stadium.

"It's no use hitting your head against a stone wall," said Hostetler, 22 of 29 for 265 yards, "They let us take what we wanted. We spread the ball around, went underneath. We took a couple of shots downfield, but after that we played smart football."

For the second consecutive week, Hostetler completed passes to nine different receivers. With several options for every play, he was able to get rid of the ball without being sacked — even though the line has lost two starters to injuries.

"There's going to be a time when we play a team that stops those underneath patterns," said Hostetler, who received a warm handshake from owner Al Davis in the locker room.

"Then we'll be able to go for longer ones."

Three of the Raiders scoring drives lasted 18, 9, and 10 plays. The first one, which culminated in a Cole Ford field goal, went 89 yards and consumed more than 11 minutes.

"We're not running out for a lot of long ones," coach Mike White said. "But the percentage plays and the ball-control is what we're working toward. That's going to be our style and hopefully we can make some big plays, too.

"It's easier to throw for 50 yards than to make those small gains, but (we want to) be efficient and not make mistakes, not get a lot of penalties, and to allow our defense to play and play with a little rest."

Washington and Michael Westbrook pooled the Redskins only two penalties for 14 yards.

Raiders defense, on the field nearly 10 minutes less than the offense, allowed the Redskins to sustain a few drives, but buckled down when it mattered.

"Anytime you can keep a team out of the end zone, it builds character, even for late in the season," said defensive tackle Jerry Ball, who created the turnover that led the to Raiders go-ahead drive.

The Raiders (2-0) have allowed just 13 points in their first two games.

Hostetler's scoring passes, both in the second half, typified the Raiders attack: a 1-yard strike to tight end Andrew Glover and 8 yards to running back Derrick Fenner.

Another of his targets was Harvey Williams, whose two receptions for 29 yards augmented an 84-yard rushing day by the fifth-year running back.

The Redskins had a few promising drives of their own, but Gus Ferrozzo — starting for Heath Shuler — couldn't get his team any closer than a failed fourth-down run attempt.

Irish notch first Big East victory

By DYLAN BARMER

The Notre Dame men's soccer team had a productive weekend, using their time off from classes to win two games, putting their record to 3-0. The victories, 7-0 over Valparaiso on Friday night and 3-0 over Syracuse on Sunday afternoon, included a triumph in their first ever Big East matchup, and no doubt helped the Irish cause in the NCAA soccer poll. The currently 23rd ranked Notre Dame soccer team looking to extend their series lead over the Hoosiers to 23-0. While the outcome was extremely one-sided, the Hoosiers displayed a great deal of resolve in the first half, as the Irish held only a 1-0 lead following the end of the first 45 minutes of play.

Notre Dame's first half goal came just 1:30 into the match, when the red-hot Bill Lanza took the ball off an Irish throw-in and fired a low shot past an out of position Aaron Rhamé. That would be all that Rhamé would allow in the first half, however, as the freshman goalie made a couple of spectacular saves, and the Valparaiso defense kept the Irish attack visibly off balance. The second half was a different story altogether, as the Irish subdued the Valparaiso defense and exploded for 6 goals, including two by freshman forward Ben Bocklage, who showed considerable signs this weekend of being a threat in the side of Irish opponents for years to come.

And a very large threat indeed. The 6-3, 190 pound Bocklage opened the Notre Dame floodgates in the second half when he took a beautiful pass from Lanza just minutes into the half and put the ball past an outstretched Rhamé for his first career goal. Team captain Tony Capasso scored the Irish's third goal when he went top shelf on the outmanned Rhamé, and then forward Josh Landman took over. Landman, who entered his senior season as a midfielder with zero career goals, had tallied four in just three games as a reserve forward this season. His third career goal came when he knocked the ball into the lower left corner to stake the Irish to a 4-0 lead. When the Irish went up 5-0 on a Brian Engsberger header (just the defender's second career goal), it was Landman who provided the assist, and when the Irish pushed their lead to 6-0, they did so on a pretty chip shot by Landman.

Both Landman and Bocklage would finish the game with two goals apiece, as Bocklage scored Notre Dame's seventh goal of the game when he lofted a Stoichkov-esque direct kick over a wall of Valparaiso defenders. The Irish finished the game with 23 kills and 3 service aces.

Irish take Big Four Championship

By BETSY BAKER

The ninth-ranked Notre Dame volleyball team improved their record to 5-0 this weekend by winning the Big Four Classic Tournament for the second year in a row. The Irish defeated Indiana, Kentucky, and University of Louisville to achieve their eighth consecutive Big Four victory and become the only team to win three overall and back-to-back tournament titles. It was a tiring weekend for the Irish as they played fourteen games in twenty-four hours. The Irish defeated Indiana in five games, Kentucky in four games and Louisville in five games presenting more of a challenge than the Irish had anticipated.

"I don't think anyone caught us off guard this weekend," Irish head coach Debbie Brown said. "But we definitely played more games than we anticipated.""

"We dictated how the matches went and when the other team was playing well, we helped them by making errors," Brown said. The Irish defeated Indiana Friday night 15-9, 15-6, 9-15, 12-15, and 15-13. The Hoosiers surprised the Irish by matching their kill count. Jaime Lee, who was named tournament MVP, led the Irish against the Hoosiers with 23 kills and 3 service aces. Lee, a sophomore outside hitter, recently made the transition to the outside position after playing middle blocker last year due to the abundance of talent outside for the Irish. Playing outside is actually a return for Lee who has played most of her career in that position. Her return has definitely paid off for the Irish as she achieved three 20-kill performances for the Irish this weekend.

"Playing middle blocker last year helped Jaime, but outside hitter is her natural position," Brown said of Lee's team-leading performance this weekend.

"She has already and will continue to make an impact for our team."

Lee enjoys playing outside hitter and hopes that she can continue to contribute to the team's stellar performance.

"I can play both positions physically, but I am more into playing outside hitter mentally," Lee said.

"It is also more fun." In addition to readjusting to a different position, Lee and the rest of the Irish team has been called upon to step up and take over a leadership role which became vacant this year with the graduation of All-American Chiya Peters and the
