An exhibition of photographs taken by Tasttll Indian children from the southern Mexican state of Chiapas opened Sunday in the Snite Museum of Art.

The exhibition, entitled "Portraits and Dreams/Retratos y Sueños," runs through November 19. It consists of 68 black and white photographs ranging in size from snapshots to murals.

Under the direction of the photographer and teacher Wendy Ewalt, the Tasttll children were encouraged to use cameras to tell the stories of their own and their families' lives, dreams and memories. Ewalt will give a gallery lecture on the project and the resulting photographs October 1 at 3 p.m. "I encouraged them to create their own world in photographs in addition to capturing what they saw around them," Ewalt wrote. "For Mayan children, whose dreams play as important a role in understanding their world as do walking events, this assignment was particularly momentous."

The day we were to begin speaking to them turned up with masks they had made from the inside of cracker boxes. One was a bear figure, another a demon, and a devil that had burned out of his head. The project was so spontaneous it was a joy to observe.

University christens Business School
Business and community leaders speak about information technology and the future of the university

By JOSHUA NELSON

The addition of the College of Business Administration will take the University of Notre Dame well into the next century with the latest technology and resources for both students and faculty.

"When Notre Dame started over one hundred and fifty years ago, it was a gradeschool presenting itself as a university. Today it has flourished into a top institution," said the university president Father Edward Malloy.

The dedication started on Thursday afternoon in the Jordan Auditorium with presentations from leading figures in communication, business, government. Topics focused on the changing state of information technology and communication and how they affect us today. "The information age is upon us," said John Keane, the dean of the college, as he began the symposium and pointed to the new building as keeping up with changing times.

Anne Wells Branscomb, president of the Raven Group and a senior research associate of Harvard University's Program on Information Resources Policy, was the first to speak at the symposium focusing on the Networld and the many advantages and disadvantages that go along with "cybercommunication." She stressed that computers in the world are essential to the way that nations do business and through the Networld, business can succeed.

Franklin S. South Africa's ambassador to the United States under Nelson Mandela, concluded the afternoon by speaking on the addition of the College of Business Administration will take the University of Notre Dame well into the next century with the latest technology and resources for both students and faculty.

The accord was initialed in Tabar, an Egyptian resort on the Red Sea, by the chief negotiators, Ahmed Quriea of the Palestinian Liberation Organization and Israel's Uri Sarv, just before the Jewish New Year holiday. The signing in Washington is set for Thursday.

"We will work so that this new year will be a real year of peace," said Arafat, the PLO chairman. "This agreement will open the door for a better future... to create a new Middle East of security and peace."

The agreement followed nightlong talks that elapsed more than 80 hours of tense negotiations. Earlier Sunday, a shouting match erupted between Arafat and Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and the PLO leader stormed out. Arafat was angry that Israel refused to expand the borders of the self-rule enclave in Jericho. There were also reports he wanted a more specific timetable for the release of about 5,000 Palestinians in Israeli jails.

But Arafat relented after Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin promised to discuss the prisoner issue in Washington before Thursday's signing.

The growing concerns of privacy and of gaps between those who have and those who don't reflect the increasing complications in the information technology arena, a factor that motivated AT&T to dismantle itself into three independent companies.

AT&T's Allen promotes technological advances

Only two days after announcing the break-up of the AT&T Corporation, company chairman and chief executive officer Robert Allen was on campus Friday to warn about the ever-increasing gap between the technological haves and the have-nots.

Speaking before students and faculty at the dedication of the University's new $25 million College of Business Administration complex, Allen challenged American businesses to prevent the gap from growing larger and called upon Notre Dame students to continue to meet that challenge.

"At AT&T we work by a statement of values: dedication, innovation, teamwork, respect for the individual and integrity. I have never regretted insisting that AT&T live by its values," Allen said. "And I am confident that you will keep in mind the world outside the classroom and the boardroom.

Israel, PLO sign West Bank pact

TABA, Egypt

After all-night talks, a shouting match and an angry walkout by Yasser Arafat, Israel and the PLO agreed Sunday to sign a pact at the White House ending nearly three decades of Israeli occupation of West Bank cities.

The agreement, the second phase of the 1993 Israel-PLO peace treaty, was hailed by Palestinian leaders as a major step toward creating their own state. Other Palestinians said it gave them too little, and militant leaders vowed to do anything necessary to scuttle it.

The 460-page pact allows for Palestinian self-rule in 30 percent of the West Bank — containing most of its Arab population — after a step-by-step Israeli pullout. Israel had occupied the lands since the 1967 Mideast War.

The plan also allows for concentration, concentration run-of-the-mill plain Jane

Everyone listens up because this is the first, last, and only time I'm going over this. Repeat after me: len-zoo-nerve. That's how you say it. So let's cut out this len-zoo-nerve and len-chow-skii stuff. It's getting on my nerves.

Every year I go through the honored final exams. The professors invariably get through the J's and K's and the first half of the L's. Then they get to me, and say, "Margaret..." looking round the room, desperate for help. Only one professor has ever been able to say my last name the first time letter perfect.

I believe he was fluent in about seven foreign languages, though.

And yes, I officially, legally Margaret. No, you may not call me Marge or Maggie or Meg. It's Peggy. Smile when you say it. And no, I don't know how you get Peggy out of Margaret. It's Irish. My parents decided that it was funny, it was always the guys who decided they were funny, it may explain why I didn't like being called until high school.

And even then, my name for some reason encouraged what became affectionate nicknames. I'm known as Meg, Lenn, whatever. Then, and a few friends a much-needed opportunity to be encouraged to become the Meganator, Meggamoon, and why we couldn't be plain Janes.

My friend Meg has the same problem. She's a Margaret too, as a result, "Meg" has become the Meganator, Meggaman, and Megpatron.

We roll our eyes periodically and wonder why we couldn't be plain Jane. Or I suppose it could be worse. But, my boyfriend has decided that my pet name will be Toots.

Never mind that I had an ancient Aunt Toots, who was kind of a nutcase. Although Aunt Toots got me some really cool presents, like a candy and gin, I knew I really don't find Toots all that romantic. I'm getting used to it, though. Maybe if I ignore it, it will go away. Except the last time I saw Miss Piggy did.

But the last name bothers me sometimes even though I'm used to it. My friends have got to use the name Margaret as fodder for the creative minds.

Leaders compare Powell, Clinton

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON
President Clinton voiced his support for affirmative action to a black audience that included two men who might launch campaigns to drive him from the White House: Jesse Jackson and former Black Caucus head Rep. Kweisi Mfume of Maryland, both indicated they could support a Powell challenge to Clinton.

"If he's right on the issues I could support him," Wilder, who briefly ran for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1992, said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley.

Mfume, a friend of Powell's, said he would support the Democratic nominee, presumably Clinton, "at this point," but added that "things have a way of changing in this world and in this town.

Clinton's lack on black support has been undermined this year by his shift toward the middle on such issues as welfare reform and balancing the budget in the face of the powerful conservative agenda being pushed by Republicans in Congress.

On affirmative action, he has pledged that programs guaranteeing all Americans a fair shot at jobs and educational opportunities will stay, but has also agreed to take a second look at such programs to ensure they are working properly.

Jackson, who has criticized Powell for not coming out strongly on black issues, said the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff had the "right stuff." Powell's values are such that "if he has the will to go deeper, he certainly has the skill and the appeal," Jackson said.

Wilder questioned whether Powell has that will, saying, "I don't think he'll run. I think he's at the highest point of his development."

House calls for welfare reform compromise

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON
House Majority Leader Dick Armey said Sunday he could accept a welfare reform compromise that allowed cash grants to teen-agers who have babies, but only if the states pay for them.

"If some state wants to be foolish and give cash grants to young girls for illegitimate births, I think we could probably stand loud," explained the Texas Republican said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Armey also said Republican leaders are willing to pass legislation to allow the president to pay the government's bills and avoid a financial meltdown in the event Congress refuses to raise the debt ceiling.

In the coming weeks, Congress must find common ground between a House welfare reform plan that would cut off payments to teen-age mothers and curtail extra payments to women who have more children while on welfare and a milder Senate version that does not contain those provisions.

President Clinton has indicated he might sign the Senate version, but would veto any plan that accepted the House language.

"The Senate bill in our view is a lot better," House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., said on CBS. He said Democrats would support a bill that promoted the transition from welfare to work and did not penalize children.

Armey said he would hold his ground on refusing money to teen-age mothers because "we've got to stop this epidemic of illegitimate births. "We certainly cannot find the Senate position acceptable."

But he said he might accept a compromise where states could opt out of the ban on cash grants to teen-agers. In that case, he said, the states would have to take the money from the block grants they receive from the federal government, and not expect any additional funding.

Armey insisted that Congress' refusal to raise the debt ceiling would not be a disaster because Clinton will be given authority to "pay out those bills that are urgent and necessary and defer payment on those bills where deferred payment is possible."

Existing borrowing authority will be exhausted sometime in November and the administration will need an increase in its credit limit to be able to borrow additional money from the public to meet expenses, including interest payments on the existing $4.9 trillion debt.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., has tied raising the ceiling to Clinton agreeing to a GOP plan to balance the budget over a seven-year period, but says his remarks on the matter last week were misinterpreted.

The economic rebuilding of his country following the overthrow of the apartheid. He made it clear that economic survival cannot be successful without outside help and focused on the importance of justice and freedom in society to avoid corruptive forces from entering the country and undermining democracy.

On Friday, the building was officially dedicated with Robert E. Allen, Kenichi Ohmae, Anne Wells Brancomb, and Franklin Sonnen receiving Honorary Degrees from the college.

Robert Allen, chairman and chief executive officer of AT&T, focused his speech on the responsibility of educating those around us with the technology that we have available to us. To be successful Allen stressed that one must have a "mission" to survive and a shared value, or "common bond," in helping others.

The ceremony concluded with the formal dedication and blessing of the building by Father Malloy and the benefactors.

Leo Burnett didn't major in advertising either.

The new College of Business Administration promises to be the finest, most technologically advanced business school in the world. "We will be able to attract the student we have never been able to attract before. It has definitely taken us to the next level," said Father Malloy. Professor James O'Rourke, director of Notre Dame Center for Business Communication, sees the building as a "new facility to attract even more renowned faculty," and help the college rise in national rankings.

With a brand new source for education, the university has the hopes of attracting more students for both its graduate and undergraduate programs and bringing in highly acclaimed professors.

Peace remains questionable in Bosnia

By DUSAN STOJANOVIC
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia
Agressive U.S. diplomacy, NATO’s military muscle and the Bosnian government’s stunning battlefield victories could combine to bring peace to the Balkans after more than four years of war.

But in a region where nothing is predictable and warring sides have rarely kept their pledges, announcing a swift end to the fighting in Bosnia and Croatia is an optimistic gamble.

Following up on their Sept. 8 agreement to split Bosnia about 50-50 between the rebel Serbs and the Muslim-Croat federation, the foreign ministers of Serb-led Yugoslavia, Croatia and Bosnia are to meet in New York on Tuesday to focus on details that have stymied all previous peace attempts.

Serbs and Muslims have started to exchange overtures, with Belgrade promising to help mediate the conference.

Bosnian government officials said they held a meeting Sept. 11 to discuss how to share the country.

Bosnian government officials said they held a meeting Sept. 11 to discuss how to share the country.

The Serbs also want their land within Bosnia to be virtually an independent country. The Bosnian government and Holbrooke want to retain some central state structure common to both halves of Bosnia.

Differences also remain within the Croat-Muslim alliance.

Many of the recent military gains were made by Croatian forces, who showed little enthusiasm for sharing territory with the Bosnian government. The government, meanwhile, has always feared being squeezed out by Serbs and Croats.

It is not clear how much the Muslim-Croat victories and massive NATO airstrikes on Serb positions have helped the peace process.

Some analysts say the victories will make agreement on borders that much simpler. But others fear they may prompt the Croat-Muslim alliance to continue the offensive or demand more territory than the U.S. plan offers.

"It is highly doubtful that Muslims and Croats will now accept a plan that is giving them only what they already have on the battlefield," said the independent Belgrade weekly NIN. "Why wouldn’t they now demand some major concessions from the Serbs?"

The foreign minister of Serb-led Yugoslavia, Milan Milutinovic, and his Bosnian and Croatian counterparts, Muhamed Sacirbey and Mate Granic, will also discuss the constitutional framework of Bosnia — in particular whether it will establish some sort of central rule for the two entities.

The three ministers are supposed to prepare the way for a big conference on former Yugoslavia that will bring together the leaders of all warring sides in former Yugoslavia for a final peace settlement.

Bosnian government radio has said that may take place in October in Washington.

Milutinovic, who is representing the Bosnian Serbs in this week’s talks, has also voiced optimism about the final outcome, saying between 80 percent and 90 percent of the problems have already been solved.

Bosnian rep to boycott peace talks

By SAMIR KRILIC
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia
Demanding concessions from Serb rebels, the Bosnian government said Sunday its foreign minister will boycott talks next week on a U.S.-led peace plan.

The government made the announcement as state TV reported more gains by the Bosnian army against Serbs in the north and northwest.

A government statement read on state radio didn’t name a replacement for Foreign Minister Muhamed Sacirbey at the talks Tuesday at the United Nations with the foreign ministers of Croatia and Serb-led Yugoslavia.

The meeting was meant to build on a peace plan agreed to on Sept. 8 in Geneva to split Bosnia roughly in half between the Serbs and a Muslim-Croat federation.

Recent offensives by government and Croat forces have stripped large chunks of territory from the Serbs, and some Bosnians think they can win more on the battlefield than at the negotiating table.

The statement, issued by President Alija Izetbegovic’s office, said without elaboration that “the Serbian side has not positively responded to our constructive suggestions” regarding implementation of the peace plan.

Sacirbey had informed U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke of the decision the statement said. White House spokesman Ginny Terrano called the announcement “part of the ups and downs of shuttle diplomacy,” and said Washington still hopes to hold the meeting.

Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic said the government was not satisfied with guarantees that Bosnia would remain a single country. The Serb rebels have said they want to join the parts of Bosnia they control with Serbia.

"Some of our demands have not been met," Silajdzic said.

The Muslim-led Sarajevo government has demanded that the Serb military leadership in Banja Luka be removed and dialogue opened with moderate Serbs in that northern Bosnian Serb stronghold.

Supporters say disrupting air routes pressures the Cali cocaine cartel, which has seen six of its top leaders fall into the hands of Colombian police since June.

But some Customs agents believe the operation strays beyond their duty to enforce smuggling laws and arrest offenders. "I don't think we should be doing it," radar operator John Fowler said. "I'm a Christian man. I am a believer. How can you as a believer work toward an end which deals with killing people?"

The air surveillance involves secret radar stations on the ground or shot out of the sky since the Air Force resumed its radar-sharing program in March, said Lt. Col. Byron Conover, spokesman for the U.S. Southern Command in Panama. He said he could not break out the number of planes fired upon.

Pentagon officials say Operation Constant Vigil makes it harder for Colombian drug chiefs to airlift raw coca from Peru to cocaine processing labs in Colombia. Peru is the source of at least 60 percent of the world's coca leaf.

The drug "air bridge" exists between Peru and Colombia by air and sea. The cocaine is smuggled out of Peru, which supplies about at least 60 percent of the world's supply, to Colombia. A. The cocaine base from Bolivia and Peru to Colombia, said Brian Sheridan, a top Defense Department official for drug issues.

The United States suspended radar sharing in May 1994 out of concern that U.S. officials could be held liable if Colombia or Peru shot down the wrong plane. President Clinton gave a fresh go-ahead in December, signing executive determinations that the two Andean forces have the expertise to safeguard drug smuggling operations.

On April 14, 1994, a pair of U.S. fighter jets enforcing the no-fly zone over northern Iraq shot down two U.S. Army Black Hawk helicopters they had mistaken for Iraqi craft. All 26 people aboard were killed.

"We can't take the chance of having such a tragedy repeated in the tension-loaded Andean drug-smuggling environment," said J. Randolph Bahhitz, president of the Air Line Pilots Association, in opposing the plan in Congress last year. "Bahhitz's organization represents 42,000 civilian pilots.

"Our members and their passengers would be at risk. But it's the question of due process that nags at some crew members. "How can you justify this situation when our Constitution says innocent until proven guilty?" asked Fowler, who was suspended for five days in 1993 for refusing to participate in a similar operation in Ecuador. "This definitely doesn't jibe with our version of democracy and our version of human rights," complained another radar operator, who spoke on condition of anonymity to protect his job.

"Probable cause doesn't warrant the death penalty. Mistakes can happen."
Evangeliyum Vitae: a Respect for No Angels

With all they have to do, why should Notre Dame students take the time to read Evangeliyum Vitae? There are a lot of reasons. As discussed in our Sept. 11 editorial, everyone must accept the encyclical's teaching that the death penalty may rightly be used only "in cases of absolute necessity, when it would not be possible otherwise to defend society." But the death penalty is also of a sweeping nature only one aspect of that document. Newsweek describes Evangeliyum Vitae as a "clear, most impassioned and commanding encyclical," saying that it "invokes the full teaching authority of the Church to declare... abortion and euthanasia, always evil. But it also offers something more hopeful—a sweeping encyclical plan for the creation of an alternative "culture of life" that respects human dignity from conception to the moment of death." (April 10, 1995, p.56).

John Paul's practical rejection of the death penalty is essential to his affirmation of that "culture of life." The Pope's opposition to capital punishment, as with the death penalty, is not a scorn of any kind, but a "defense of the terms of absolute prohibition he uses with respect to abortion and euthanasia. But Evangeliyum Vitae, is "meant to be... a pressing appeal addressed to each and every person, in the name of respect, protect, love and serve every human life." No. 5. "Every human life even includes the life of the guilty.

John Paul would protect society from crime partly through "rendering criminals harmless" by confinement rather than by killing them. No. 27. More importantly, he seeks that protection in the building of a "new culture of life." No. 95, that would prefer the "refusal of the criminal to his execution. No. 27. He notes that personhood has a "sacred, inalienable dignity" to it that must be concerned for the life and spiritual welfare even of the murderer. No. 19. "Not even a murderer losers his personal dignity." No. 9. And it is such great care must be taken to respect every life, even of that of criminals and unjust aggressors, the commandment "You shall not kill" has absolute value when it refers to the innocent person. No. 20. "One may never intentionally kill the innocent and human law may never validly authorize the intentional killing of the innocent. See No. 57. "Abortion and euthanasia are thus crimes which no human law can claim to legitimize." No. 72. God is pro-life. "God did not make death, and he does not delight in the death of the just." No. 7. John Paul draws on this reality to confront the "culture of death" and the/utilitarian State which enforces it. He insists that "Human life is sacred because from its beginning it involves the creative action of God, and it remains forever in a special kind of relationship with the Creator who is in its sole end. God alone is the Lord of life from its beginning until its end: no one can, in any circumstance, claim for himself the right to destroy directly an innocent human being." No. 53.

John Paul asserts that a society that "loses sight of God cannot help but lose respect for life." (No. 7). The heart of the tragedy being experienced by modern man in the eclipse of the sense of God and of man, typical of a social and cultural climate dominated by secularism... "(When) the sense of God is lost, there is also a tendency to lose the sense of man, of his dignity and his life; in turn, the systematic violations of the moral law, especially in the serious matter of respect for human life and its dignity, produces a kind of progressive darkening of the capacity to discern God's living and saving presence." No. 21. John Paul is nothing if not counter-cultural. In tracing the "culture of death" to its roots, he describes abortion and contraception as "fruits of the same tree." He elaborates by saying, "the pro-abortion culture is especially strong precisely where the Church's teaching on contraception is rejected... The close connection that exists... between the practice of contraception and that of abortion... increasingly obvious. It is being demonstrated in an alarming way by the development of chemical products, intra-uterine devices and vaccines which, distributed with the same ease as contraceptives, act really as abortifacients in the very early stages of... the life of the new human being." No. 12. It might seem paradoxical that, as abortion and euthanasia have become accepted, capital punishment has regained favor. Abortion and euthanasia are generally seen as "liberal" causes and the death penalty as "conservative." However, those issues cut across liberal and conservative lines. In our pragmatist, individualistic culture, abortion, euthanasia and capital punishment all rest on "the criterion of efficiency, functionality and usefulness." No. 23. "If the promotion of the self is understood in terms of absolute autonomy, people inevitably reject one another. Everyone else is considered an enemy from whom one has to defend oneself. Thus society becomes a mass of individuals placed side by side, but without any mutual bonds. Each one wishes to assert himself... and... make his own interests prevail... Any reference to... a truth absolutely binding on everyone is lost and social life ventures onto the shifting sands of complete relativism. At that point, everything is negotiable. Every thing is open to bargaining: even the first of the fundamental rights, the right to life." Nos. 19-20.

The death penalty is not used today as a protector of the sanctity of the innocent lives of potential victims because, in a "culture of death" which allows the execution of the unborn, the comatose and others, there is no sanctity of life. That sanctity of life depends on God, and the American State has officially declared its neutrality on the question of whether God even exists. In this established secularism, the autonomous individual lives out the contraceptive ethic to make himself, rather than God, the arbiter, employing utilitarian criteria, of the ending as well as the beginning of the life of the innocent as well as of the guilty.

Evangeliyum Vitae summons us instead to a "cultural transformation" reconnecting morality with faith and freedom with truth. "The first and fundamental step towards this cultural transformation consists in forming consciences with regard to the incommensurable and inviolable worth of every human life... Only respect for life can be the foundation and guarantee of the most precious and essential goods of society, such as democracy and peace." Nos. 96, 101.

So why should Notre Dame students read Evangeliyum Vitae? Because "we are facing an enormous and dramatic clash between good and evil, death and life, the "culture of life" and the "culture of death." We find ourselves not only "faced with" but necessarily "in the midst of" this conflict: we are all involved and we all share in it with the inseparable responsibility of choosing to be unconditionally pro-life." No. 28. No read Evangeliyum Vitae— reflect and pray on it, and take your stand.

Notre Dame thrashes Texas with 28-point, fourth quarter barrage

By MIKE NORBUT

In the ever-shocking world of college football, Notre Dame players can always hang their hat on one thing. They have a coach that lives and breathes blue and gold.

Less than two weeks after going through major cervical spine surgery, Irish coach Lou Holtz made his triumphant return to Notre Dame Stadium. He watched from the press box and even a little from the sidelines as Notre Dame thrashed No. 13 Texas, 55-27.

But Holtz didn't just sit and watch the game with some famous Notre Dame hot dogs.

"I can be accused of calling plays," he said. "You have a different perspective from the press box. It's great up there."

But as much as he enjoyed it, he had to see IRISH / page 2

A mythical talk with The Coach

Among the scenarios that didn't occur Saturday, but probably should have...

"Mind if I take this seat?"

The question startled me. Up until that point, the mind-numbing buzz of the press box and the savory taste of the complimentary hot-dogs had been occupying my full attention.

Startled from my reverie, I turned to find what appeared to be the fifth Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle. Upon further review, I noticed that it was the coach of the Irish, disguised by his unwieldy neck-brace.

Huh? Had it that Lou Holtz would be in the pressbox, but I had assumed that he would be seated with the big wigs in the lap of luxury.

However, if he wanted to sit with the plebeans, who was I to argue?

"No sir, er, coach, have a seat."

"Call me Lou, son. I hope you won't be bothered by my talking into this headset all the time. I'll strike a deal with you - if you put up with me for the whole game, and we get a big lead, you can call a few plays."

Again, who was I to argue? We went back to our respective duties, me writing 'Rossum' occasionally and him...
Play of special teams especially positive

By TIM SHERMAN
Associated Sports Editor

In the past three games, nothing could be further from the truth. Always a traditional strength of the Irish, the special teams play that Lou Holtz has become accustomed to has been its strong comeback against Texas. And in a game where 922 total yards of offense was gained (excluding return yardages), the play of the special teams units was crucial. "Our kicking game was very productive for us," Holtz noted. "One play seemed to set the tone for the game."

The Longhorns had just scored their second touchdown of the afternoon to trim the Irish lead to 17-13. Phil Dawson, who had just earlier tied the UT record for consecutive made extra point with 54, lined up to take care of what had become routine. The routine was altered though by Irish nose guard Paul Grasmann, who somehow pushed his way into the middle of the Texas line and got his arm up to block the kick. Notre Dame speedster Allen Rossum picked up the fumble return and was off to the races with two points for the Irish. "I just had to do the easy part," Rossum said. "Grasmann did the work." touchdown made the game look out of hand and demoralizing for Texas. "We played hard for a long time," Longhorns coach John Mackovic said. "Then we had to gamble. They tucked on those touchdowns at the end to make it seem more wide open than it was." Notre Dame jumped out to a 10-0 lead after a 64-yard Emmett Mosley punt return for a touchdown. It was the first since Jeff Burriss did it against Pittsburgh on September 30th. Rossum also scored two points off an extra point attempt that was blocked by nose tackle Paul Grasmann. It made the play seven-yard drive capped by a 15-yard touchdown pass from Pat Fitzgerald to wide receiver Randy Kinder. It made a 27-yard field goal attempt seem like an afterthought. At the time, it gave Notre Dame a 19-13 lead, which held until halftime. Texas temporarily took the lead back at 20-19 in the third quarter when quarterback James Brown hit tight end Steve Bradley on a fourth-and-goal situation. Longhorn tight ends accounted for 17 of the 252 yards the Irish defense gave up in the first half. Notre Dame quarterback Andy Reid, who had just earlier thrown an interception, came back in to the game and hit wide receiver Randy Kinder on a three-yard pass to give the Irish a 34-20 lead and proved to be the winning score.

Graded Position Analysis

Quarterback A

Another gutty performance from Ron Powlus, who completed 16-of-28 for 273 yards and two TD's. Somewhat, though, those fumbled snaps will hurt.

Running Backs A

Randy Kinder, Marc Edwards and Autry Denson carried the load, and they did so beautifully. 249 yards on the ground. All you can say is "Wow!"

 Receivers A

Derrick Mayes dropped a few passes, but we'll overlook those considering he caught some in triple coverage. No one got in on the act except for Emmett Mosley, but who cares. For one, they didn't need to.

Offensive Line A

511 yards of total offense. A complete performance from the guys in the trenches, who blew Texas off the ball and into the fifth row of Notre Dame Stadium.

Defensive Line A

They had a pass rush, a fumble recovery, and they corralled Longhorn quarterback James Brown. Tough.

IRISH EXTRA

Kicker Kevin Kopka was 6-of-6 on extra point attempts Saturday.

test the waters out on the field. He found them to be not quite as smooth as he would have liked. "There's too much going on on the field," the coach said. "It's a little too hectic. I got nervous when (5-8, 160-pound) Scott Sollomme bobbled me. And when that happens, you know you're in trouble." The plan now is to have Holtz in the press box for next week's clash with Ohio State. But no matter where he sits, it's certain he'll make sure people know he's there. "It's kind of hard ever not to feel his presence," receiver Derrick Mayes said. "He's everywhere, even when he's not in sight, but definitely in mind." Holtz was in defensive coordinator Bob Davie's and offensive coordinator Dave Roberts' minds via headsets. "I have a switch that enables me to talk to either one," he said. "The great thing is I can turn them off but they can't turn me off." Calling quarterback Ron Powlus on an option in the fourth quarter was his doing, as was limiting the offensive scheme near the end of the game. "Once they took the lead we just went back to one formation," Holtz said. "We just played Notre Dame football." It was too much for the Longhorns, whose defense gave up 511 yards to the Irish offense. The 28 fourth-quarter points was the statistic that broke their back, however. "Some time there in the fourth quarter, they kind of gave way, I guess," said fullback Marc Edwards, who finished with three touchdowns Saturday. "We were just grinding it out, and eventually broke their back." Edwards' balancing act that turned into a 27-yard scoring run slammed the door in the Longhorns' face with just under two minutes to play. Cornerback Allen Rossum's interception return for a guys blocked well and gave me a great." On the other side of the ball, the Irish kick coverage was solid. With dangerous returner Mike Adams under the kicks, they had to be. Along with placekicker Kevin Kopka, punter Hunter Smith, a Texas native, was primarily responsible for keeping Adams from getting an opportunity to take one back. "I wanted to get the ball high in the air," freshmen Smith explained. "The goal was give our guys time to get down there and make plays, so I sacrificed some distance for height. Our coverage was good."
Edwards evolving into double threat for Irish

Tough fullback relied on for more than just blocking prowess

By TIM SHERMAN
Edwards evolving into double threat for Irish

Holtz explained. “We felt we of his three fourth quarter touchdowns. Each of these scores served as another proverbial nail in the coffin and put the game out of reach for the Irish.”

“We just went there out and took over in the fourth quarter,” Holtz said. “We’re getting close to becoming a great team.”

Another sign of a great team is the ability to convert third downs. In this game, the Irish were far from a great team at that third-down moment of the game. Now, though, that is a different story.

“We did a good job converting the third-and-ones and third-and-twos,” Edwards said. “That is just a compliment to the offensive line. They’ve been doing a great job ever since the start of the year.”

Edwards deserves his fair share of the credit as well. He has proven to be the indispensable fullback yards man that a Holtz-coached team so badly needs in crucial short yardage situations.

He has also turned into a receiving threat out of the backfield, something the Irish so sorely need. In fact, Edwards is the squad’s second-leading receiver (behind Derrick Mayes) with 14 catches, including six for 72 yards against the Longhorns.

“As a fullback, I just have to take what the defense gives me,” said Edwards. “That varies from week to week, but right now I’m just keeping it (throwing to the backs) if it’s there.”

The other thing Edwards would like to continue is the big play. While he lacks the great speed and elusiveness that often are requisites for the big gain, he compensates in brute power.

On Saturday, Edwards had two plays in excess of thirty yards, including a 30-yard pass and a 27-yard touchdown run in which he bullied a safety en route to the end zone.

“Coach Mosley (the running back coach) always says to us that we just have to be a team.”

Marc Edwards drags Texas tacklers on the way to his third touchdown of the game Saturday.

shooting ‘Mays’ into the headest. After a while, though, the temptation proved too good. During a TV timeout, I turned to him and noted, “Wow, Minor’s really playing well.”

“That Kory Minor is going to be a heckuva football player,” said Lou. He then switched to the ‘Davie’ button on his headset and shouted, “Bob, blitz Minor every play. I have a hunch.”

He showed little emotion during the game, but his teammates have noticed that he’s far less tense on the sidelines. So Emmett Mosely’s punt return got him excited.

“So, go, go,” he shouted into his headset, and down on the sidelines I noticed Davie bringing his hands to his ears in agony.

“Just that’s great to see,” Lou said, slapping my back. “Emmo’s the man.”

“Know Tim, that hot dog looks pretty good. You want one while I’m up?” I declined, citing health reasons, which I realize must sound a bit ridiculous to a man who just underwent major surgery.

After a nervous ballhoo of Lou furiously pac ing up and down the press box cursing both our linebacker and the Longhorn band flag bearers, he settle d down as the Irish took control, gleefully joining in the cheer in his honor.

“Know Tim, I’m really proud of this foot ball team,” they said. “Made them lay Lady on the top of the Dome proud, and I’ll tell you one thing, that’s all you can ask of a football team.”

Lou also made good on his promise to let me call a play. As third and in our honor, I went with his favorite—option right. No audibles. We made it, and we both looked like geniuses.

“Love that Powell kid,” yelled Lou, and once again I saw Davie clutch his ears. “’ll make him an option threat yet.” The rest of the press-box glared over, but Lou just ignored them.

After the win, Lou turned to me to give me a high-five, but instead winced in pain. “Maybe I’m not ready for that much activity,” he noted.

Still, you could tell he was itching to get back. “The field looks too open from up here,” he said. “I might be tempted to pass more. I’m all about being on the field, making decisions from there. After ten years here, I can’t change that.”

“Much though I’ll hate to see my sidekick leave, I tend to agree with him.”
Ron Powlus makes one of his 29 hand-offs to tailback Randy Kinder. It was the most carries by any back in Lou Holtz’s 10 years at Notre Dame.

The list of records just keep adding up for Derrick Mayes.

He needs just one more touchdown catch to tie the career mark for Irish wide receivers, set by Tom Gately, who played from 1969-1971.

"I hadn't thought about it," Mayes said. "And I probably won't appreciate it until 20 or 30 years down the line, when I'm talking to my grandchildren."

He has 105 total catches, 18 of which have gone for touchdowns. He had another one Saturday, which at the time gave Notre Dame a 17-7 lead.

"The guy's just an incredible receiver," Irish coach Lou Holtz said.

"The catch in the end zone was a great catch."

Like any perfectionists would, though, both Holtz and Mayes commented first on the receiver's shortcomings.

"I think Derrick Mayes dropped more passes than in his entire career here at Notre Dame," Holtz said.

"I don't remember the touchdown, but I remember the passes I dropped," the receiver agreed.

Mayes played the final three quarters with an injured calf.

Injury Report: In addition to Mayes, Charlie Stafford left the game in the first half with a knee injury. He will have an MRI performed Monday or Tuesday.

Sophomore Jarvis Edison suffered an abdominal contusion after a third quarter collision with LaRon Moore. Edison spent the night in the hospital, but should be available for Saturday's game against Ohio State.

Well Wishes: Texas coach John Mackovic had nothing but kind words for Notre Dame after being thrashed by them.

"I'd like to congratulate Notre Dame and Lou Holtz," he said. "I hope Lou is feeling better, and I hope they didn't mess up his golf swing. He has a great golf swing."

Disgruntled Texas fans were not quite as complimentary following the game.

"To hell with Notre Dame," yelled an inebriated Longhorn. "Go Northwestern!"

Bad Memories: Texas' James Brown tied a Notre Dame record for touchdown passes by an opposing quarterback with four, three of which went to the tight end. The last quarterback to do it was Glenn Foley (stop here if you remember the name—you don't want to read the rest, who led Boston College to a 41-39 victory over the Irish in 1993.

Back on Track: Notre Dame's win over No. 13 Texas was its first victory over a ranked opponent since defeating Texas A&M in the Cotton Bowl following the 1993 season.

Monsters of the Midway?: Defensive coordinator Bob Davie has a little different pet name for his defense these days.

"Coach Davie called us the 'Bad News Bears,'" cornerback Shawn Wooden said. "Either everything goes right or everything goes wrong. Things went right for the Irish in the second half, as they intercepted Brown three times. Wooden got one of on a tipToe move by the sideline..."
Chicago took the stage on Saturday night and pleased the crowd with their unique pop-rock-with-horns sound and didn't stop until two hours and twenty-five minutes later. And then they came back for an encore. In the end, after a total of twenty-six songs and more than 150 minutes of music spanning Chicago's twenty-six-year career, a satisfied Joyce asked another, "Does Anybody Really Know What Time It Is?"

With the patrons already in a festive mood following Notre Dame's "resounding victory," (as James Pankow, the band's trombone player, pointed out), the celebration continued. Opening with "Saturday in the Park" from their first album, Chicago Transit Authority, Chicago mixed '70s classics, '80s hits, album, Chicago Transit Authority, and vocals; James Pankow with the bass and vocals; Robert Lamm on keyboards and vocals; and somethings into the woodwinds; Bill Parazoider handling the woodwinds; Tris Imboden banging the drums; and Keith Howland on guitar.

Each musician possesses immense talent and they were all given a chance to display it throughout the night. Of the numerous showcases was "The Mood" a kind of "acoustic set" that they played. Then Chicago performed a benefit concert for the Ara Parseghian Research Foundation at the Joyce Center on Saturday night. Away," with a rockabilly-like solo on guitar, Howland, the band's newest member, accompanied Chicago on "Look Away" and also had a few impressive electric solos of his own during "You're the Inspiration" and "I'm a Man." "We've been looking for someone like Keith for a long time," Lamm, the only remaining member of the core city of Chicago, told the audience. "We just had to wait for him to be born."

The signature of the band's achievements lies in their music and they did not fail in putting forth their best effort. Occasionally, the combination of keyboards, guitars, drums, and horns was so overwhelming that the lyrics were hard to discern. However, the crowd did not seem to mind. Those who knew the words sang along; those who did not appreciated Chicago's excellence at combining electric guitar solos with jazzy horn arrangements—a superb mix of rock rhythms and big band beats.

In several songs, only one or two members of the band occupied the stage, forming a kind of "acoustic set" that many bands include in their shows these days. In these sets, Chicago returned and added a "glimpse" like in their rendition of Cole Porter's "Night and Day," one of many songs off their current release, Night and Day (Big Band), that they played. Then Chicago picked it up again with a classic that concluded in a five-minute drum solo and light show that puts Dave Carvey's performance in "Wayne's World" to shame.

When Imboden finished his showcase, the band came back on stage and Pankow stepped up to the microphone to congratulate the football team and express Chicago's appreciation and hope at having been asked to be a part of this benefit show for the Ara Parseghian Research Foundation. "We're here to pay tribute to a legend and a great humanitarians," he said as a photo of Parseghian was projected behind him and the crowd went into the "Notre Dame Victory March" as a tribute to Parseghian, and all those in attendance who supported his foundation, since all proceeds from the concert will go directly to it.

From this point on, through Bennie Goodman's "Goody Goody" and their own "Does Anybody Really Know What Time It Is?" and "I'm A Man" to the "Look Away" and Chicago's lesson-learning, "25 Or 6 To 4," the band was spectacular and the majority of the audience stayed on its feet and many were moved to the stage, clapping and dancing.

Following the final note, Ara Parseghian stepped on stage, accompanied by his wife, "Ara, Ara" to express his gratitude for Chicago's efforts and the audience's donations. There the band played a few songs before they left the stage together, the lights went down, and the audience was out, hummed to themselves and smiling.

Hope's hide-and-seek ends in handcuffs

By CHRISTINA FTICAS and ERIN KELSEY
Days of Our Lives Correspondent

Hello "Days" fans, we're back again with another week of exciting twists, turns, and, well, rather predictable events in Salem. Tony has been officially diagnosed with acute myeloid leukemia, however, and has ordered test after test to find a cure. (According to inside information, the real Thao is very anxious to leave the "Days" writers are sad to see him go. Yes, we too wish Tony had his own days, and his crazy fascination with the she-man, Kristen). Tony found himself in the hospital but recovering quickly. Jennifer has been vigilant about being by his bedside and, because of this, she has heard some very interesting murmurs by Peter in his sleep. Apparently, Peter is having nightmares about Arendim. He has no idea why, since all his ever had were good memories. But, in his dreams he is a little boy sitting on the steps saying, "I'll never tell." Even with the bad acting of the boy playing Peter, the point got across—Jack was right, there are secrets about Arendim. Unfortunately, no one has revealed what they are as of yet. Nori Kronen, whose strange response to the Arendim was uninterpretable—Uncle Lou, the owner of the bar in Arendim, and certainly not the Parrot-Man.

Hope was held hostage by computer gang members, Clinton and Jerry (not to be confused with Ben and Jerry). When she was first captured, Hope was incredibly angry with her bad luck. She had just gotten her memory back and didn't want to lose her life. She greeted her captors with, "I'm Officer Brady, and this is my beat." (This was surprisingly not followed by her own rendition of "The Broom Is Going To Get You"). When Jerry left Clinton, who opposes violence against women and was the "Days" plug at political corrections for the week, along with Hope, she managed to convince him to let her go free. Unfortunately, Jerry got back before she could escape. Hope was then back where she started.

An angry Jerry released Hope, promising her death and demise, but Hope was able to escape again. She proceeded to run to a phone. However, she made the stupid mistake of running to a phone that was only on the other side of the door. Surprisingly, when Clinton and Jerry found her missing, the other side of the door was where they looked. (Have you done this before, Clinton and Jerry? How did you know that when Hope escaped, she would go outside the building you were holding her in? Wow, there's no escaping smart criminals like them.) Clinton and Jerry finally handcuffed Hope to the building and they split. Bo and Ab found her there, and when Bo went to get her out, the building caught on fire. So must have worked harder on this magic trick than did John Black on his Houdini-like trick because Bo was somehow able to get Hope out of the handcuffs without a key. The fire suffered smoke inhalation and, for a moment, was not sure if she would survive. He began saying such things as, "I love you, Hope. I can't live without you. Don't leave me again." Billie heard it all and wasn't happy.

At the end of Friday's show, devilish Alice convinced Hope to spend a few days on Smith Island knowing full well that Bo and Sean D. were on their way there also. Alice must be working for the same writers who are officially saying goodbye to Billie this coming Friday. Nothing exciting happened with Carrie, Austin, Sami, and the Lucas family. Supposedly, Carrie pretending to be Lucas's girlfriend will, at the same time, drive Austin to Sami's bed. Carrie hasn't slept with Lucas since that time. Austin took Sami out to dinner on Carrie's insistence. Sorry, no updates on Marlena and Stefano since last week. Also, if any of you "Days" fans out there think you know what's happening, you look like any of the "Days" characters, please e-mail us at Christina.N.Fticas@nbc.com.
Mattinling may not return is his lack of run production. He didn't show much this year. That was evident in his batting average. He didn't hit it out to the bases loaded, and again in the fifth when he grounded into a double play.

Mattinling is batting just .236 with runners in scoring position and .284 overall with six homers and 47 RBIs. He's hit five home runs in Sunday every time he came to bat.

"It felt good, but I still trade for that first inning at bat," said the fans' cheers.

"It's kind of a mixed kind of deal. We wanted to accomplish something today but also with the fans, their show of support. They wanted to see something and I wanted to show them something I just wish it had been earlier," Mattinling said of his eighth-inning home run.

Mattinling also brought out the lineup card in manager Buck Showalter.

"He told me it was an order. He's never ordered me to do anything since," Mattinling said. "I'm glad I did it, really."

Tony Clark and Danny Bautista had back-to-back home runs Monday night. The Tigers sent 10 batters to the plate.

Andy Pettitte (11-9) held the Tigers to three hits in the first six innings, but Cecil Fielder opened the seventh with a triple and Phil Nevin's single.

In the eighth, Pettitte was relieved after allowing three straight singles, and Travis Fryman hit a three-run shot. Federal, who was back pitching his first pitch for a two-hitter.

Europe stuns U.S. in Ryder Cup

By RON SIRAK
Associated Press

ROCHESTER, N.Y.
The European team stunned the United States by taking seven singles matches Sunday to win the Ryder Cup for the first time since 1987.

Leading 9-7 going into the final day, it seemed like a lock for the United States. It hadn't been outscored in singles play since 1985, the year Europe had its breakthrough victory in the Ryder Cup.

But when Philip Walton, the 10th and last man to qualify for the European team, putted within tap-in distance at No. 18 to win his match against Jay Haas 1-up, Europe had 14 1/2 points and the Cup.

Europe defeated the United States 14 1/2-13 1/2.

The victory gave Europe the Ryder Cup for the first time since 1989. It won in 1985 by shocking the Americans in Sunday's singles play by the same 7 1/2-4 1/2 score it did Sunday at Oak Hill Country Club.

The Europeans won again in 1987 and kept the Cup with a tie in 1989 before losing the next two. The United States now leads the series 23-6-4.

Europe the crucial point, 1-up.

Walton's match official said. "I was trying not to think whether my match was going to be the turning point, but I could sense it," Faldo said. "I scrambled for two pars, but to try and play golf while you're nearly shaking, it's a different game. You really have to play from the heart. To do something here for the team, it's so emotional."

At No. 17, he made an 8-foot slider and American had a two-shot lead. But since the '85 victory by Europe, it is 3-2-1 in favor of Europe.

"What a fantastic win," Woosnam said. "It just shows that the strength of golf in Europe is getting bigger and bigger all the time."

While Walton's match officially gave Europe the Ryder Cup, it was the match between Faldo and Strange that really decided things.

Trailing 1-down with two holes to play, Faldo won them both when Strange made two bogeys and the Englishman made two pressure putts, giving Europe the crucial point, 1-up.

It did not come easy.

"I put my A-team right in the middle of it and they came through," an emotional European captain Bernard Gallacher said.

"I am sorry for Lanny Wadkins. He's the best captain that America could have had."

2-0 early in the game. Indiana wasn’t about to quit however, as the Hoosiers struck back with a goal of their own when Tommy Keenan put a header off a goal by Notre Dame goalie Peter Van de Ven off an Indiana corner kick at the 20:17 mark of the game.

The Hoosiers continued to pour in the pressure following their first goal, and the Irish spent the greater part of the remainder of the first half defending against the speedy Indiana attack. Defender Brian Engesser was remarkable in the first half, as the Irish were able to hold off the Indiana charge to preserve a 2-1 lead going into the second half.

The Irish had a few golden opportunities to get up 3-1 in the first half, but failed to do so, and when Indiana’s Jeff Hanjister knocked a loose ball into the goal following an Indiana corner kick, the game was knotted at 2-2.

Following Hanjister’s goal, the Irish had to scrap just to preserve the tie, as Indiana had several scoring opportunities, most coming off corner kicks.

It wasn’t until overtime that the Irish defense fully collapsed, with goals by Lazo Alanzo, near on-field brawl after Keegan barred into Van de Ven.

The loss was the fourth straight for Notre Dame, and dropped them to 1-3 in Big East play. The Eagles improved to 4-4-2 in the Big East.

The Irish will have to improve their defense in their next game against Loyola Marymount.

The Notre Dame men's cross country team finished first at the National Catholic Invitational at Notre Dame on Friday, while the women's team landed a second place finish.

Once again, the men's team had a group of four people finish close together at the top. Junior Matt Althoff finished first for the Irish and second overall with a time of 24:52.8. Derek Seiling, Joe Dunlop, and Derek Martinus were close behind. Althoff was pleased that four runners finished close at the top again. "That's something we're going to build on from meet to meet," Althoff said. "I had a great summer of work, and it's nice to find your self doing well."

Antonio Arce finished tenth overall, Althoff said having the meet at home helped put running at Notre Dame in perspective.

"It's (National Catholic Invitational) a chance for small Catholic schools to come here," Althoff commented. "They (other schools) walk around saying, 'this is really cool.' "We're lucky to run here everyday."

Notre Dame was ranked fifteenth going into the meet. "I have never really listened to the rankings, they mean so little," Althoff continued. "We believe we're higher ranked, but we could care less what other people think."

Maureen Kelly led the women's squad with a time of 17:55.6 and a third place finish. Amy Siegal finished second on the team and fifth overall in a time of 17:59.0. "I was pretty happy," Siegal said. "I still think there's room for improvement which will come as the season goes on."

Lindsay Dutton, Michelle Lavigne, and Carolyn Long finished twenty-fifth, thirtieth, and thirty-first, respectively.

"It was a big help to have people there cheering, and to know the course better than anyone else," Siegal explained. "We all tried hard."

Notre Dame's next meet is in two weeks, once again at Notre Dame. Siegal thinks the twenty-first rated Irish runners will only improve with two weeks of work.

Rams manhandle Bears to remain undefeated

ST. LOUIS

The St. Louis Rams just keep beating the odds.

After four games, they still haven't turned the ball over and they haven't lost either, matching their victory total from their final season in Anaheim, Calif., with a 24-28 victory over the Chicago Bears on Sunday.

Chris Miller threw for 231 yards and three touchdowns, his best day as a Ram, before leaving with a concussion in the fourth quarter, and the St. Louis defense added its fourth score of the season.

Before a sellout crowd of 59,679 with only 45 no-shows, the Rams went to 4-0 for the first time since 1989, when they reached the NFC championship game. Entering this season their record was 23-57 in the 1990s, tied for the worst in the NFL.

Error-free ball has been the answer. The Rams avoided a big problem when Todd Kinchen fumbled high into the air on a punt return with 6:42 to go as Cedric Figaro leaped for the recovery. The Rams also forced two turnovers, their 13th and 14th of the year.

Erik Kramer completed 27 of 38 passes for 317 yards and four touchdowns to lead the Bears (2-2), while Jeff Graham caught six passes for 145 and a

TD. Troy Drayton had eight catches for 106 yards and a touchdown for St. Louis.
Kramer's first three scores came in the second quarter as Chicago took a 21-17 halftime lead. Kramer had 230 yards passing at the half. The Rams answered by consuming 11:15 on two drives in the third quarter, both ending with Miller touchdown passes.

St. Louis began the second half with a 14-play drive, their longest of the season, and capped it on Miller's toss to Mary Cook on fourth-and-goal from the 1 with 7:36 to go.

The Rams went 60 yards on six plays on their next possession as Miller hit Drayton for a 12-yard score with 54 seconds left in the quarter, giving them a 31-21 lead.

The Bears cut the gap to 31-28 on Kramer's 47-yard pass to Graham with 12:59 remaining. The ball was underthrown but St. Louis defender Todd Light fell down.

Miller was hit twice after throwing an incomplete with 9:42 to play and spent the rest of the game on the bench. Mark Rypien drove the Rams to their final score, a 25-yard field goal by Novacek with 4:42 left.

St. Louis' defense clinched it when Carlos Jenkins tackled Curtis Conway 2 yards short of a first down at the Rams 45 on a fourth-and-7 pass with 1:40 to go. back in route to a 15-11 victory over the Irish. Game three brought much of the same as the Irish collapsed after holding an eight-point advantage, with a 10-2 lead, eventually losing the game 14-16. Once again, the Longhorns overcame and captured a quick Irish lead in game four, to win the game and match 15-13.

Despite their stamina, the Irish were plagued with inconsistency, especially in their serving. "We missed a lot of opportunities on Friday, especially with our serving," Irish head coach Debbie Brown said. "I missed many serves and the serves we did get over went easy and straight to them."

Brown voiced her concern over the effect of the loss to the Longhorns on Friday going into the matches against Colorado.

The team was disappointed after the loss to Texas and I was a little concerned at the beginning of the match with Colorado," Brown said. "But we got back into it and played very well."

The Irish easily controlled both matches against the Buffaloes giving them a much needed boost of confidence. Their serving returned to being the consistent and powerful weapon that it had been before their match with the Texas, and the team returned to being as confident and dominating as they had been in their first match.

The Irish were led by sophomore Jamee Lee and Angie Harris who had 23 kills each in the loss to Texas and combined for 48 of the team’s total 88 kills in the two matches over Colorado. The team’s co-cap-

BEFORE TRUSTING YOUR FUTURE TO ANY COMPANY, ASK FOR SOME LETTERS OF REFERENCE.

Y ou put more than just your savings into a retirement company. You put in your trust and hope for the future, too. So before you choose one, ask some questions. How stable is the company? How solid are its investments? How sound is its overall financial health?

A good place to start looking for answers is in the ratings of independent analysts. Four companies, all widely recognized resources for finding out how strong a financial services company really is, gave TIAA their top grade.

IN THE FINAL ANALYSIS, TIAA IS LETTER PERFECT.

TIAA received an A+ (Superior) from A.M. Best Co., AAA from Dun & Bradstreet Rating Co., Aaa from Moody’s Investors Service and AAA from Standard & Poor’s. These ratings reflect TIAA’s stability, sound investments, claims-paying ability and overall financial strength. (These are ratings of insurance companies only, so they do not apply to CREF.)

And TIAA—which, backed by the company’s claims-paying ability, offers a guaranteed rate of return for the opportunity that currently holds these highest marks.

CREF, FOUR MORE LETTERS EVERYONE SHOULD KNOW.

For further growth potential and diversification, there’s the CREF variable annuity, with seven different investment accounts to give you the flexibility you want as you save for the future.*

Together, TIAA and CREF form the world’s largest private retirement system based on assets under management, with over $145 billion in assets and more than 75 years of experience serving the education community. For over a million and a half people nationwide, the only letters to remember are TIAA-CREF.

Triumphs...
Irish crush No. 15 Colorado after dropping first of season to Texas

By BETSY BAKER

It was a weekend of beginnings and endings for the seventh-ranked Notre Dame volleyball team. To the dismay of the Irish, the ending came first. Entering Friday night’s match against No. 17 Texas, the Irish posted an undefeated 8-0 record and boasted a 27-match winning streak at home that dated back to the 1993 season. However, in an enduring four-game match that lasted nearly three hours, the Longhorns handed the Irish their first loss of the season and ended their reign at the Joyce Athletic and Convocation Center.

Nevertheless, the Irish showed great resilience by beginning a new streak in style on Saturday and Sunday with two consecutive victories over fifteenth-ranked Colorado, in one of which they held the Buffaloes scoreless, giving the Irish their first 15-0 shutout of a team since a November 14, 1992 15-0, 15-3, 15-0 victory over LaSalle. It was also the first time that Colorado had been blanked since November 21, 1998 in a match against Oklahoma.

Regardless of the 15-13, 15-1, 16-14 victory on Saturday, and the 15-0, 15-9, 15-4 truncating of the Buffaloes on Sunday, the blemish on the Irish 10-1 record lingers.

Men's Soccer

The headaches continued for the Notre Dame men's soccer team last weekend, as overtime losses at Alumni Field to no. 5 Indiana and Big East rival Boston College dropped the team's record to 3-4, with a 1-3 mark in Big East play.

Youth, injuries, and questionable officiating all contributed to the Irish losses this weekend, and at least the first two factors will continue to hamper this team, which has gone from a 3-0 top 10 team to an unranked 3-4 squad in just a matter of two weeks.

Konstantin Koloskov scored two goals in the loss against Boston College.
