Dowty faces challenges

Rebels announce vote against accord

By JAMIE HEISSER
Assistant News Editor

The Israeli-Palestinian Peace Accord still faces many challenges, but it is a step in the right direction, according to Government Professor Alan Dowty.

The accord, formally named the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, was signed Thursday at the White House in a historic gesture towards peace in the Middle East. As the second step in a three-step process that began two years ago, the signing of the accord has signaled a drastic change in what both sides have been willing to compromise.

"If you look at the agreement as a whole, it is a perfect expression of what both parties want," Dowty said. "It doesn't totally satisfy either side, and each has had to give up what it once considered vital. Both have become much more realistic about what they can achieve, which is what is different from any previous situation."

The agreement sets forth five major provisions, as well as a number of smaller details dealing with the sharing of power.

"The most significant provision of the accord calls for the signing of any future accord to have 61-59 majority unless two other Labor hawks who reportedly are wavering vote against the accord."

However, a third lawmaker who had expressed reservations said he would support the agreement when it is presented to the Knesset on Thursday. His "yes" vote would assure the government a 61-59 majority unless two other Labor hawks who reportedly are wavering vote against the accord.

The pact was signed by Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and PLO leader Yasser Arafat in Washington last week.

Get ready for midterms!

A student diligently studies outside, trying to enjoy the remaining few days of sunshine and warm weather at Notre Dame.

SMC security worker illustrates dedication

By JESSICA ZIGMOND
News Writer

"I just can't sit still," explains Gatskill, a father of four, a grandfather of eight and a great grandfather of three. Along with his wife Betty, Gatskill is making the most of his retirement years.

The work as an escort and dispatcher at security is not new to Gatskill, who spent 41 years working as a bus driver for three major Indiana public transportation companies. In 1948, Gatskill began his work as a bus driver with the Elkhart

Simpson acquitted of murder charges

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - O.J. Simpson was acquitted today of murdering his ex-wife and her friend, a suspense-filled climax to the courtroom saga that obsessed the nation. With two hours left on the jury's sports legend's handcuffs Sunday, he became one of the world's most famous criminals.

"I feel awful. I just feel awful," a sobbing Kathleen Brown, who testified about Detective Mark Fuhrman's racist comments, said in a television interview. "I think this is very hard to take. I think to hear the Goldman family cry was very difficult.""

The star, of course, was Orenthal James Simpson, America couldn't get enough if it.

The verdict capped a legal journey that lasted a lifetime. As the case moved onto one side street after another, Simpson lost his family, his friends, his job and his freedom.

The jurors deliberated for nearly three weeks in a case that riveted the nation and the world in the 1990s. It was Greek tragedy, afternoon soap opera and cir­cumstantial evidence.

The former football star was found not guilty of the June 12, 1994, murders of his ex-wife and her friend. Simpson's attorneys claimed the woman, Nicole Brown Simpson, was murdered by her ex-boyfriend. "It was Greek tragedy, afternoon soap opera and circumstantial evidence."""
Dahmer’s brain lies in question

Being a good environmental citizen cost Brad Reynolds on himself over O.J.

Clinton vetoes Congressional bill

Janitor fired for recycling too much

Chicag Q

Clinton vetoes Congressional bill

Dahmer’s brain lies in question

Janitor fired for recycling too much

Chicag Q
Sweeny: Budget cuts can hurt businesses

By SARAH TAYLOR

Businesses across the country stand to lose large amounts of government funding if the Republican budget cuts are instituted, and the Notre Dame Research Department is no exception, according to Dr. Thomas Sweeney, assistant vice-president and director of the Office of Research.

Actual figures reflecting the loss of funding have not yet been released, Sweeney said. However, the Research Department has enjoyed a great increase in federal funding during the past five years, from $9.6 million in fiscal 1990 to $16.2 million in fiscal 1994.

The pending budget cuts will surely be a slap in the face to such a flourishing department, according to Sweeney.

"Notre Dame has always done very well [in obtaining research funding], especially in the areas of the National Institute for Humanities," Sweeney said. However, the arts and humanities are the primary target of the budget cuts.

"It looks that the health-related agencies will be doing very well," Sweeney said.

Consequently, science research will not feel the effects of the loss of funding as acutely as the arts and humanities.

The full effects of the budget cuts will depend upon the reaction of the Notre Dame faculty. Sweeney said. "The biggest fear is that the faculty may overreact."

If the faculty continues to submit high-quality research proposals, then its members will do well, according to Sweeney. However, if negative reactions to the cuts hinder their productivity, then they will surely suffer.

Though the cuts may be substantial, government funding will not completely vanish. "Keep remembering that the total number of dollars still available for research is large," Sweeney said.

Because Notre Dame professors are instructors, not just researchers, none of the faculty is fully supported by research funds.

Accordingly, Sweeney said he foresees no paycuts or lay-offs for the faculty.

The Notre Dame Research Department has a dual purpose: to locate funding for the faculty's proposals, as well as to submit these proposals to the appropriate agencies.

"When the University cannot provide all of the necessary funding for a proposal, then the Research Department steps in," Sweeney said.

Describing Asian American women's struggle for identity, Eun-Sook Lee, a representative from the Korean American Resource and Cultural Center of Chicago, spoke last night as part of the 1995 Multicultural Fall Festival.

Lee, who immigrated to Canada from Korea when she was a very young girl, said that some stereotypes held against both Asian American men and women may cause them to view each other negatively. These stereotypes cause many Asian Americans to turn to other races in order to find spouses.

Lee said that many Asian American women choose men of other races because of bad experiences with their fathers, brothers or male friends who may have been violent or aggressive.

Lee, who works with her husband at a laundromat, also addressed the topic of violence against women, particularly Asian American women, saying that many, if not the majority, of Asian American women do not report domestic violence.

Some of these incidents of domestic violence go unreported for reasons that are unique to Asian American women, Lee said.

Asian American women are afraid to be excluded from their communities and are concerned about community membership.

When the University cannot provide all of the necessary funds for research, then the Research Department steps in, Sweeney said.

According to Lee, another reason that many women don't report abuse is that they misinterpret the law because of cases in which the police mistreat minorities. They may fear that reporting the abuse by their husbands would bring shame to their families.

In addition, many women keep the violence a secret because their husbands can speak better English than they can, and their husbands could possibly convince the police that his wife is lying or even that the violence is her fault.

"Violence is about power," Lee said. A way for men to assert their strength and power over women. This fact makes it a global problem, obviously not restricted solely to Asian Americans.

Lee said that women, whether or not they are Asian American women because of language barriers and cultural differences, Lee said.

However, the only main ways of dealing with the abusive men are incarceration or counseling, neither of which seems to be very effective in most cases, according to Lee.

Only two-thirds of those men counseled kicked from beating their wives or girlfriends for over eighteen months, and most men either do not go to their counseling sessions at all, or do not finish them, Lee said.

The men who are incarcerated often return even more bitter than before, causing them to continue the beatings, or even increase their intensity.

Speaking about inequality in general, Lee mentioned the low wages and poor treatment that Asian American women receive in the workplace, and noted that severe organizations have been formed to help them with not only these problems but also with many others.

Some of these include the Organization of Asian American Women, and the Organization of Chinese Women and Unbound Feet.

These organizations deal with topics such as education, outreach, health, child care and drug abuse among Asian Americans. Most of the groups mentioned are concerned mainly with Asian American women.
DIVERSITY IS POWER

Sponsored by:
Multicultural Executive Council

MULTICULTURAL FALL FESTIVAL

CULTURE ON THE QUAD
October 2-6
Fieldhouse Mall
4:30-6:00 p.m.
Performances By:
Native American Club
Hawaiian Club
Greek Club
Filipino Club
Troop ND

Fireside Chats
October 2-6
"Women in the Arts"
Notre Dame Room, LaFortune
12:15-1:15 p.m.
Monday: Professor Lyonga
Tuesday: Professor Alice Cheang
Wednesday: Sonya Gernes
Thursday: Diana Mythus
Friday: Jill Godmillow

SPECIAL EVENTS
October 3
102 DeBartolo
7:00 p.m.
Eun-Sook Lee

October 5
Ball Room
7:00 p.m.
John Ole Tome

TASTE OF NATIONS
Friday, October 6
8:00 p.m.
Stepan Center
Entertainment by Sabor Latino
Shannon honored for business achievements

By KATHLEEN POLICY
News Writer

Saint Mary's professor William Shannon III, who coordinates the international business curriculum and marketing section of the College, was selected for inclusion in the 1995 edition of "Who's Who in America," a biographical reference of individuals who demonstrate outstanding achievement in their fields, and have contributed significantly to the betterment of society.

Known as an outstanding entrepreneur, Shannon received this accolade due to his score of achievements in the business field. He serves as chairman of the Hacienda Mexican Restaurant Chain. In spite of all his accomplishments outside the College, Shannon says his greatest loyalty is to the Saint Mary's community.

"I delegate the day to day responsibilities at the Hacienda to the employees, so that teaching can be my main focus," said Shannon.

Shannon is honored by being chosen for "Who's Who." However, he said most of the Saint Mary's faculty and administrators qualify for the same honor.

"The faculty and administration at Saint Mary's do so much; many of them have accomplishments that should be recognized," said Shannon. "I had been in business before becoming a full-time faculty member, so I participated in many organizations and endeavors, and my opportunities were more diversified than other faculty members." Shannon's primary focus is helping women in business, which is exhibited through the Shannon Executive Scholar Program. This program brings back distinguished alumnae in all fields to share insights with students and faculty.

Reflecting on his honor, he offers one word of advice to students—"L.U.C.K." This philosophy is an acronym for listen, discover the uniqueness of yourself, competence in school and in work, and knowledge to succeed in professional career, according to Shannon.

In order "to use his knowledge to better the college," Shannon said he plans to spend more time at Saint Mary's and less with outside activities.

University benefactor dies

Word has been received of the death of Margaret Hall Cushwa of Youngstown, Ohio. Mrs. Cushwa died Saturday after a long illness. She was 89 years old.

Mrs. Cushwa was a 1930 graduate of Saint Mary's College, and her husband Charles was a 1931 Notre Dame alumnus who died in 1975. Both were active and frequent benefactors of the University.

The most significant of their many gifts made possible the establishment of the Cushwa Center for the Study of American Catholicism in 1981. Mrs. Cushwa also served on Notre Dame's women's advisory council and on the board of regents of Saint Mary's College.

She is survived by two sons, Charles Cushwa of Poland, Ohio, and William Cushwa of Youngstown, both Notre Dame alumni; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Ellen Wolnovich of Youngstown; 11 grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at Saint Columba Cathedral in Youngstown on October 4 at 6 p.m.
Simpson continued from page 1

who made it from the housing projects of San Francisco to the mansions of Brentwood with charm, good looks and a pair of feet that could run like the wind. His public life was the object of envy: glory on the football field at the University of Southern California and for the Buffalo Bills, fame as a commercial pitchman for Hertz, pop culture status for his "Naked Gun" movies.

His private life, however, was something else. Prosecutors said Simpson was a man whose outward strength of body and personality hid a inner vulnerability and weakness. He was, they said, racked by jealousy, plagued with anger, bent on and the every situation. He was a time bomb. He exploded, according to prosecutors, on June 12, 1994.

There was never any testimony about how Simpson was for 78 critical minutes that night, from when his house guest Brian "Kato" Kaelin last saw him to when he was next seen at the service station. Simpson's defense rested on

HPC continued from page 1

VCs, Cannon said, adding that "you do not have to spend the full $500 you are entitled to, but you may." Some halls have already made purchases for which they would like to have funds matched. These purchases, along with any others that have yet to be made, must be be completed by December 6, which is the deadline for dorms to receive their funds.

Other business at the meeting included an announcement that the Gerch Games Room in LaFortune Student Center is sponsoring a series of tournaments in which the winning dorm will be awarded a pool table, valued at $200.

"We have an extra pool table this year," We are only using seven of the eight from last year," this year we have made room for darts and other things," said Ryan Rohr. "We thought that darts might like the table, so in order to decide who gets it we are holding a tournament." Each dorm will have a mini-tournament at the Gerch Games Room to decide who will represent the dorm in the final tournament. The mini-tournaments will result in two winners from each dorm, and these two people will compete in the super tournament for the pool table, according to Rohr.

"We are encouraging a lot of people to sign up because it should be a lot of fun, and each dorm will win some sort of price," Bohr said.

The Gerch Games Room will be open to dorm residents and any other student who wants to play with the pool tables that are located there. There is a maximum of four people per game, and the cost is $5 per person or $20 for four people.

Brendan Kelly, a Student Government representative, will speak to HPC about South Dining Hall renovations and the possibility of a new dining hall in the fall of this year.

John Ole Tome, Masai Warrior & Cultural Entertainer from Kenya Speaking at Notre Dame

The Multicultural Executive Council, in association with the Pan-African Cultural Center and the Office of International Students, is hosting a reception for the upcoming Food and Entertainment event.

Accord continued from page 1

Israeli held West Bank to be divided into three sectors. Israelis will withdraw completely from Arab-populated areas including six cities but will share authority with the Palestinians in rural areas. The "redemption" of Israelis will begin within ten days of the signing and completion will occur within six months. Opposition within both Israel and Palestine has arisen as a result of the concessions made by both sides. While Arafat holds some degree of control over insurgent groups such as Hamas, it is nearly impossible to control the smaller armed groups. One group, Hamas, is said to be inspired by Iranian clergy to disrupt the process. "Preventing all acts of terrorism is like trying to prevent traffic accidents. You can't anticipate or protect the targets because it only takes a handful of bullets," Dowty said.

As a result there will be many "ups and downs." In the process, however, situations must be made room for darts and other games, room to decide who will win the super tournament." Students will have the opportunity to work two different jobs and will be able to "keep busy" during their time at the university.

Accord continued from page 1

The situation is at a very fragile point and any violent acts by either side could harm the peace process. For this reason Israelis have been leaving Vassar Arafat, leader of the Palestinian Authority, to control any acts of terrorism that might take place. While Arafat holds some degree of control over insurgent groups such as Hamas, it is nearly impossible to control all acts of terrorism. One group, Hamas, is said to be inspired by Iranian clergy to disrupt the process. "Preventing all acts of terrorism is like trying to prevent traffic accidents. You can't anticipate or protect the targets because it only takes a handful of bullets," Dowty said.

As a result there will be many "ups and downs." In the process, however, situations must be made room for darts and other games, room to decide who will win the super tournament." Students will have the opportunity to work two different jobs and will be able to "keep busy" during their time at the university.
removing as acting Superior General of the Jesuits, look upon this Pope as a moral battering ram in bringing down the Berlin Wall and European Communion.

In the words of Mikhail Gorback, "Nothing that has happened in Eastern Europe in these last few years would be impossible without the Pope and without the important role, including the political role, he played on the world stage.'

More recently the pope has energized Vatican diplomats to exert formidable pressure on various United Nations confer­ ces, on population and development, in Cairo, Egypt, and on women in Beijing.

For months now, the most politically potent pope ever to exist in Peter's footsteps has been the first pontiff to hold weekly public audiences at the Vatican.
Salary awareness merits response

Notre Dame: World of ‘haves’ and ‘have-nots’

Dear Editor:

Thank you, Megan McGrath and The Observer, for your recent article, “Support staff lies at lower end of pay scale.” It has turned out to be an article of great importance. And thanks, Teresa Ghilarducci, Jean Porter, and others, who have taken it upon themselves to seek the truth and testify on behalf of Notre Dame’s administrative staff.

You are absolute champions! My coworkers and I know only too well the truth in every word of Megan’s article. It is great relief to have the injustices suffered by so many discussed openly and honestly for the first time.

And I am encouraged by Roger Mullins’ (Human Resources) willingness to investigate this important issue. But please, Mr. Mullins, don’t try to defend them under the guise of protecting salaries. The average of my annual salary and that of my department head is $65,000, but one of us struggles every month to come up with her rent.

You know that Notre Dame is a community of “haves” and “have-nots.” For those of us who are paid at or below poverty level, the inequities are not imagined or even exaggerated. They are terrible and they are wreaking havoc in the lives of good people—people who count on Notre Dame in good faith, with their skills and dedication and reasonable hopes for their own futures.

We are counting on you to take this opportunity to eliminate from your wage system needless obstacles to our success.

Jean Porter
TERESA GHILARDUCCI
Former Organizers

Forum organizers clarify points

Dear Editor:

We would like to express our appreciation for Megan McGrath’s coverage of our Gender Studies Forum on staff salaries last Thursday, Sept. 21. She did a fine job in sorting through a complex presentation and an emotional discussion.

However, there are two points at which Ms. McGrath’s story could be misleading. Because we are eager that the facts be placed before the Notre Dame community as accurately and completely as possible, we would like to correct her story on these points.

First of all, Teresa Ghilarducci’s statement that Notre Dame’s secretarial wages rank near the bottom, compared to local employers, referred to the relative rank of secretarial wages, compared to other occupations within this university.

No other major local employer, to our knowledge, pays its secretaries at the low end of its pay scale; typically, guards, janitors, and nurses’ aides are the lowest paid occupations within an occupation.

Secondly, we did not say that “most” university secretaries make less than $16,000 a year (the amount needed in this state to support a family of three, containing one worker, above poverty level). We said that there are many working at this level, but we do not claim that a majority are. In our opinion, even one Notre Dame employee living at poverty level is too many.

We appreciate the opportunity to offer these corrections. It is our hope that the University will provide fuller data on the salaries paid to the clerical staff, so that we can all have a clearer sense of the situation of secretaries at Notre Dame.

Jean Porter
TERESA GHILARDUCCI
Former Organizers

ND Football

Former grad offers thanks, luck for season

Dear Editor:

I’d like to extend my heartfelt congratulations to the entire Notre Dame football team and coaches for an outstanding effort versus OSU this past weekend.

Even since I ventured out for my first away game as a student, it has never ceased to amaze me how so many opponents fritter away that once (or once every 60 year) chance to knock off the Irish. They play to beat Notre Dame rather than to win for themselves.

We do not share that animosity. We represent the benchmark for college football. The Johnny-come-latelys may take a game or two from the Irish, but there is something they can never take away from us.

At the end of the ND/OSU game I was proudly wearing my Notre Dame class ring, something the OU players and fans will never experience.

The last 10 years have brought us some of the most competitive and exciting football in the history of the university. Sure, we made some mistakes against OSU, but we did play toe-to-toe with one of the most powerful teams in the country for well over 30 minutes.

Cheer, Cheer for Old Notre Dame. Good luck against Washington, and I’ll see you at the USC game.

Charlie Russ
Class of 1982
Johnnie Cochran's false paradigm of racial justice

Johnnie Cochran's false paradigm of racial justice is a concept that was introduced by attorney Johnnie Cochran Sr. in the late 20th century. Cochran argued that the legal system was biased against African Americans and that it took a paradigm shift to address this issue. However, many legal scholars and activists argue that Cochran's paradigm is flawed and does not accurately reflect the complexities of the American legal system. The paradigm has been criticized for its oversimplification of the problem and for ignoring the systemic racism that exists within the system. Some also argue that Cochran's paradigm has been exploited for commercial and political gains, rather than being used to truly address the issues of racial justice.
The newly released book, "Domes," is said to capture the true experience of Notre Dame. With great insight, "Domes" tells what life is really like under the Golden Dome, claimed one reviewer. While that may be, there is another book which better describes the mystery that is Notre Dame. "Doing the Truth in Love," written by Emeritus Professor Michael J. Himes, captures the true heart and soul of the Notre Dame community. For Himes, describing what Notre Dame life is like, is not only a scholarly pursuit but also a personal endeavor. In a book which discusses the concept of conversation, based heavily upon several conversations Himes participated in at Notre Dame, Himes in many ways, speaks to the Notre Dame community.

In the process, he actually creates a conversational, rather than a didactic, text. Reading the book is like sitting down for a long talk with a close friend. As in a verbal conversation, one is offered fresh insights and a chance to look at experiences and observations through someone else's eyes.

Even more importantly, as in a "talking" conversation, one has the chance to talk back. Himes breaks up his topics into short chapters which conclude with not only an answer but also a question and discussion. He even offers a short list of other texts entitled "Resources for Continuing Conversations," so that in his conversations, like "real" ones, do not end in themselves but stir the participants to pursue further issues.

Opening with the provocative statement, "Whatever comes into your head, someone, anyone, anyone who says 'God' is not God," Himes quickly sweeps the reader into a question and consideration of what is the mystery of God and faith, and how one relates to one's own life and purpose. "The least wrong way to think of God," Himes contends, "is as a pure and perfect self-gift, as the relationship of agapic love, and as the action of service for the good of the other. The only way in which the concept of God as being more of a verb than a noun, God is "the doing, the loving," and the rest of the book probes more deeply into what exactly this means for us, discussing the understanding of this mystery in our lives and the effects this mystery has on our "doing.

In clear and concise language laced with a great sense of light humor, Himes brings up several topics which might logically result in a realization that our perception of God cannot be God. Following into three basic categories of ideas that all appear in and amongst the other categories like the jumble of a "real" conversation, the topics are divided into eight chapters.

Each first presents Himes' side of the conversation, and then offers a reflection, written by a member of Himes' personal conversational group, many of whom are well-known faculty members in the Notre Dame community. The chapters conclude with a chance for the reader to participate in the dialogue through questions and suggestions for reflection.

Upon completing the book, it becomes apparent how Himes came up with his striking title, "Doing the Truth in Love." The first part of the book deals with "the Truth," discussing the basis of the truth of faith, the basis of the truth of life, and the basis of the truth of being human, and the concept of community and our relationship to it.

The second part moves the conversation to a discussion of "Doing," in other words, how our actions are affected by the understanding of God as agapic. Offering solid advice on discerning God's will for us, this section is a gold mine for anyone who has ever attempted to figure out what his or her destiny holds.

The third and final part of the text discusses in "Love," the process of making our understanding part of our loving selves. In a cyclical style, this section helps the conversationalists to put what they discovered about "Truth" into growing closer to "Doing," both actual actions of service and those closest to us. If racial tensions are still prevalent in the world, then this text is written for the historian who reads it and figures out what his or her destiny calls for. If you read nothing else before you leave the land of the Golden Dome, read at least a few pages of "Doing the Truth in Love." In less than one hundred and fifty pages, Himes captures the true mission of Notre Dame.

By LAUREN AIMOINETTE
Academical Columnist

The newly released book, "Domes," is said to capture the true experience of Notre Dame. With great insight, "Domes" tells what life is really like under the Golden Dome, claimed one reviewer. While that may be, there is another book which better describes the mystery that is Notre Dame. "Doing the Truth in Love," written by Emeritus Professor Michael J. Himes, captures the true heart and soul of the Notre Dame community. For Himes, describing what Notre Dame life is like, is not only a scholarly pursuit but also a personal endeavor. In a book which discusses the concept of conversation, based heavily upon several conversations Himes participated in at Notre Dame, Himes in many ways, speaks to the Notre Dame community.

In the process, he actually creates a conversational, rather than a didactic, text. Reading the book is like sitting down for a long talk with a close friend. As in a verbal conversation, one is offered fresh insights and a chance to look at experiences and observations through someone else's eyes.

Even more importantly, as in a "talking" conversation, one has the chance to talk back. Himes breaks up his topics into short chapters which conclude with not only an answer but also a question and discussion. He even offers a short list of other texts entitled "Resources for Continuing Conversations," so that in his conversations, like "real" ones, do not end in themselves but stir the participants to pursue further issues.

Opening with the provocative statement, "Whatever comes into your head, someone, anyone, anyone who says 'God' is not God," Himes quickly sweeps the reader into a question and consideration of what is the mystery of God and faith, and how one relates to one's own life and purpose. "The least wrong way to think of God," Himes contends, "is as a pure and perfect self-gift, as the relationship of agapic love, and as the action of service for the good of the other. The only way in which the concept of God as being more of a verb than a noun, God is "the doing, the loving," and the rest of the book probes more deeply into what exactly this means for us, discussing the understanding of this mystery in our lives and the effects this mystery has on our "doing.

In clear and concise language laced with a great sense of light humor, Himes brings up several topics which might logically result in a realization that our perception of God cannot be God. Following into three basic categories of ideas that all appear in and amongst the other categories like the jumble of a "real" conversation, the topics are divided into eight chapters.

Each first presents Himes' side of the conversation, and then offers a reflection, written by a member of Himes' personal conversational group, many of whom are well-known faculty members in the Notre Dame community. The chapters conclude with a chance for the reader to participate in the dialogue through questions and suggestions for reflection.

Upon completing the book, it becomes apparent how Himes came up with his striking title, "Doing the Truth in Love." The first part of the book deals with "the Truth," discussing the basis of the truth of faith, the basis of the truth of life, and the basis of the truth of being human, and the concept of community and our relationship to it.

The second part moves the conversation to a discussion of "Doing," in other words, how our actions are affected by the understanding of God as agapic. Offering solid advice on discerning God's will for us, this section is a gold mine for anyone who has ever attempted to figure out what his or her destiny holds.

The third and final part of the text discusses in "Love," the process of making our understanding part of our loving selves. In a cyclical style, this section helps the conversationalists to put what they discovered about "Truth" into growing closer to "Doing," both actual actions of service and those closest to us. If racial tensions are still prevalent in the world, then this text is written for the historian who reads it and figures out what his or her destiny calls for. If you read nothing else before you leave the land of the Golden Dome, read at least a few pages of "Doing the Truth in Love." In less than one hundred and fifty pages, Himes captures the true mission of Notre Dame.

By LAUREN AIMOINETTE
Academical Columnist

The newly released book, "Domes," is said to capture the true experience of Notre Dame. With great insight, "Domes" tells what life is really like under the Golden Dome, claimed one reviewer. While that may be, there is another book which better describes the mystery that is Notre Dame. "Doing the Truth in Love," written by Emeritus Professor Michael J. Himes, captures the true heart and soul of the Notre Dame community. For Himes, describing what Notre Dame life is like, is not only a scholarly pursuit but also a personal endeavor. In a book which discusses the concept of conversation, based heavily upon several conversations Himes participated in at Notre Dame, Himes in many ways, speaks to the Notre Dame community.

In the process, he actually creates a conversational, rather than a didactic, text. Reading the book is like sitting down for a long talk with a close friend. As in a verbal conversation, one is offered fresh insights and a chance to look at experiences and observations through someone else's eyes.

Even more importantly, as in a "talking" conversation, one has the chance to talk back. Himes breaks up his topics into short chapters which conclude with not only an answer but also a question and discussion. He even offers a short list of other texts entitled "Resources for Continuing Conversations," so that in his conversations, like "real" ones, do not end in themselves but stir the participants to pursue further issues.

Opening with the provocative statement, "Whatever comes into your head, someone, anyone, anyone who says 'God' is not God," Himes quickly sweeps the reader into a question and consideration of what is the mystery of God and faith, and how one relates to one's own life and purpose. "The least wrong way to think of God," Himes contends, "is as a pure and perfect self-gift, as the relationship of agapic love, and as the action of service for the good of the other. The only way in which the concept of God as being more of a verb than a noun, God is "the doing, the loving," and the rest of the book probes more deeply into what exactly this means for us, discussing the understanding of this mystery in our lives and the effects this mystery has on our "doing.

In clear and concise language laced with a great sense of light humor, Himes brings up several topics which might logically result in a realization that our perception of God cannot be God. Following into three basic categories of ideas that all appear in and amongst the other categories like the jumble of a "real" conversation, the topics are divided into eight chapters.

Each first presents Himes' side of the conversation, and then offers a reflection, written by a member of Himes' personal conversational group, many of whom are well-known faculty members in the Notre Dame community. The chapters conclude with a chance for the reader to participate in the dialogue through questions and suggestions for reflection.

Upon completing the book, it becomes apparent how Himes came up with his striking title, "Doing the Truth in Love." The first part of the book deals with "the Truth," discussing the basis of the truth of faith, the basis of the truth of life, and the basis of the truth of being human, and the concept of community and our relationship to it.

The second part moves the conversation to a discussion of "Doing," in other words, how our actions are affected by the understanding of God as agapic. Offering solid advice on discerning God's will for us, this section is a gold mine for anyone who has ever attempted to figure out what his or her destiny holds.

The third and final part of the text discusses in "Love," the process of making our understanding part of our loving selves. In a cyclical style, this section helps the conversationalists to put what they discovered about "Truth" into growing closer to "Doing," both actual actions of service and those closest to us. If racial tensions are still prevalent in the world, then this text is written for the historian who reads it and figures out what his or her destiny calls for. If you read nothing else before you leave the land of the Golden Dome, read at least a few pages of "Doing the Truth in Love." In less than one hundred and fifty pages, Himes captures the true mission of Notre Dame.
Brian Boitano lights up the ice

By JOHN LUCAS
Editor-in-Chief

By KRISTA NANNERY
Accent Editor

A

for football, ice skating is the number two spectator sport in America. That should make Brian Boitano's benefit performance, "Skate for Life," perfectly suited to the campuses of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

As part of the ongoing Ara Parseghian Medical Research Foundation's fund-raising efforts, this evening's program at the JACC will feature such ice skating sensations as Brian Boitano, Debi Thomas and Kitty and Peter Carruthers.

Proceeds are raised with those raised by earlier campus performances of the play "Coaches" and the band Chicago, will aid doctors and scientists across the country in their attempt to find a cure for Niemann-Pick Type C disease. In order for all proceeds to benefit the foundation, the production costs of the event are being underwritten by such companies as American Airlines, Notre Dame Federal Credit Union, McDonald's Corporation and "Blue and Gold Illustrated."

Three of Parseghian's grandchildren, Michael, 8, Marcia, 6, and Christa, 4, have been diagnosed with Niemann-Pick Type C. It is a progressive, degenerative genetic disease which hinders the metabolism of cho-esterol and is almost always fatal. At this time, there is no known treatment for the disease, although geneticists hope to isolate the defective gene within the next two years.

Peter Carruthers, who along with his sister, Kitty, won the silver medal at the 1984 Olympic Winter Games in Sarajevo explained, "My wife is pregnant, in her fourth month, and children are about to enter into my life. With the Parseghian children, it's a situation where I'll do anything I can do to help the research.
That's the bottom line. If we can raise money for scientists to eliminate this childhood disease, then I'm very satisfied. Life is very delicate. If I have the ability to skate and raise money, then that's a very easy exchange."

The Carruthers' Olympic medal was the first medal won by a U.S. pair in 32 years. They came out of retirement to perform in "Skate for Life."

They're not the only ones to take time out of a busy schedule for a good cause. Debi Thomas, perhaps best remembered for her 1988 Olympic bronze medal, is in her third year of medical school at Northwestern University where she hopes to specialize in surgery.
She is also considering NASA's astronaut training programs.

"All of these men and women are extraordinary athletes, performers and competitors," said Parseghian.
"I know this evening will be long remembered, as will the gosse of these great skaters. With their help, we can bring the Foundation's efforts ever-closer to our goal."

Other skaters performing tonight include: Rosalynn
Summer, Caryn Kadavy, Rory Flack Burghart and Aron Christiansen. Most have worked and skated together in the past and all are well-known in their field.

During a relaxed practice session Monday afternoon,
U.S. National bronze medalist and Pro-Am champion Caryn Kadavy was heard saying, "I enjoy doing more obscure benefits," he says of "Skate for Life." Features 1988 Olympic Gold Medalist Oksana Baiul will be his co-star.

Among the first to go on the ice, the 1988 Olympic Gold Medalist will be his co-star.

Tonight, the first time so many U.S. figure skaters have performed in South Bend. Hopefully, it won't be the last. But whatever the case, cold as the ice may be, this performance certainly promises to be hot, hot, hot!

Ashleigh Thompson contributed to this article.
The Juggler has become representative of the elusive enterprise of artistic endeavors on the Notre Dame campus. A random poll of students revealed a shocking unfamiliarity with this esteemed publication.

Maybe it is that crazy name that throws everyone off. The staff of the Dame campus, a random poll of students, revealed a shocking unfamiliarity with this esteemed publication. Selection is based upon literary merit, aesthetic quality, and originality. Clearly personal preference and discernment hold the most influence although the members insist upon maintaining a comfortable balance between differing styles and media. The selection process is highly competitive and rigorous. According to Bobby Pacheco, a junior ALPP student, Professor Kevin di Camillo initiated a new poetry journal called The Rubarbarian so that more students could see their work in print. In its inaugural issue last spring, the Rubarbarian specifically stated that its intent is not to compete with The Juggler but to complement the magazine.

A strong affection for literature and the written word seems to spur the members of The Juggler editorial staff. Bill Helman, assistant editor, expressed an avid interest in the field; he founded a similar literary publication in high school. Michelle Mudry, a veteran staff member of two years, admits that she enjoys reading and writing and that working for The Juggler hones her interest in a particular way. “Writing is something that takes inspiration and time, but reading is something that you can do anytime. It is intriguing to read other people’s work, and it gives me some inspiration to write my own,” she said.

To a certain extent, it seems this group appreciates their relative anonymity—presumably under the pretext that it protects the authenticity of their work. There is something in the conclusion of a small community that adds a special value to the product that would be immeasurably lost with a greater visibility. However, they certainly encourage and invite the participation of campus artists to promote a broad variety of material. In considering the perplexing title of this publication, one can see The Juggler as a reference to the classic literary character of the court jester. In this analogy, we come closest to the true nature of the Dasso admits, “especially since it was my first year (as co-editor).”

Not one to throw in the editorial towel, Dasso, together with 1996 Chimes co-editor Leslie Seymour, are determined to avoid final-week attempts to turn out the next magazine. “We’re hoping that by starting earlier, we can avoid a lot of last-minute stress,” says Dasso. The project began Monday, September 18, when Dasso and Seymour met for the first time with new and old staff members to mobilize their troops for the latest issue.

Dasso and Seymour aren’t alone, however. In their attempts to make Chimes ring better than ever with the public this year. Chimes faculty advisor Dr. Max Wexler works closely with the co-editors to offer advice, publishing assistance, and evaluations of student work. Revised procedures for the 1996 edition include a computerized staff list and instructional binders for editors. In addition, the literary magazine that has been a part of Saint Mary’s almost since the school itself began to hit the Internet. Students who indicated interest in joining the staff of Chimes at SMCS Activities Night found welcoming notes in their e-mail boxes last week.

As the 1995 Chimes heads to student’s post office boxes, the 1996 issue is already well underway. Chimes is currently organizing creative output from the women of Saint Mary’s, past submissions have been accepted and work is being collected. Besides the usual prose-and-poetry literary magazine format, the editorial staff also accepts artwork. Each submission to Chimes is placed before the editorial board for review. Dasso stresses that no one person gives the thumbs up or down to a piece. “When we read stories... we all discuss (them) by committee. It’s a mutual agreement.” The Chimes staff and the English department work together in order to provide Saint Mary’s students with ample opportunities to submit art and written work. Students may turn in submissions to any English professor, to the English office in Madeleva, or to the Chimes co-editors.

Organizational binders, e-mail lists, drop-off points... the body of Chimes is orchestrated from these to form a snapshot of the hearts and minds of Saint Mary’s students. Its soul is the student’s interest in a particular way. “Writing is something that takes inspiration and time, but reading is something that you can do anytime. It is intriguing to read other people’s work, and it gives me some inspiration to write my own,” she said. The Juggler editorial staff....
Michigan's Dreisbach awaits sentence for fraudulence

ANN ARBOR, Mich. Michigan quarterback Scott Dreisbach is awaiting sentencing for his role in attempting to buy alcohol with false identification, the prosecutor's office said.

Dreisbach, 19, who played at Penn High School in Indiana, was ticketed May 25 by the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department. Joe Burke, Washtenaw County chief assistant prosecutor who confirmed a story Tuesday in The Michigan Daily, the school's student newspaper.

Dreisbach was ticketed in August. On Sept. 13, Dreisbach pleaded no contest to the criminal misdemeanor. He is to be sentenced Oct. 20 in 15th District Court.

"He is an intelligent man," said Burke, a 17-year-old assistant defense attorney. "It's an internal struggle." Burke said the original charge was "fraudulent use of identification in possession," and we amended it to an attempt at that crime," Burke told The Michigan Daily.

"We didn't think we could prove that he used the ID to make the purchase," he said.

The prosecutor's office decided to charge Dreisbach awaiting use of a fraudulent identification in possession because the attempt carries a stiffer penalty.

The attempt charge is a misd­emeanor, carrying a maximum term of up to 45 days, and/or a $500 fine.

Dreisbach started the first four games for the No. 7 Wolverines (5-0), but he is expected to sit out at least another three weeks with a sprained thumb.

---

Wednesday, October 4, 1995

The Observer

SPORTS

Associated Press

Michigan's Dreisbach awaits sentence for fraudulence

ANN ARBOR, Mich. Michigan quarterback Scott Dreisbach is awaiting sentencing for his role in attempting to buy alcohol with false identification, the prosecutor's office said.

Dreisbach, 19, who played at Penn High School in Indiana, was ticketed May 25 by the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department. Joe Burke, Washtenaw County chief assistant prosecutor who confirmed a story Tuesday in The Michigan Daily, the school's student newspaper.

Dreisbach was ticketed in August. On Sept. 13, Dreisbach pleaded no contest to the criminal misdemeanor. He is to be sentenced Oct. 20 in 15th District Court.

"He is an intelligent man," said Burke, a 17-year-old assistant defense attorney. "It's an internal struggle." Burke said the original charge was "fraudulent use of identification in possession," and we amended it to an attempt at that crime," Burke told The Michigan Daily.

"We didn't think we could prove that he used the ID to make the purchase," he said.

The prosecutor's office decided to charge Dreisbach awaiting use of a fraudulent identification in possession because the attempt carries a stiffer penalty.

The attempt charge is a misde­meanor, carrying a maximum term of up to 45 days, and/or a $500 fine.

Dreisbach started the first four games for the No. 7 Wolverines (5-0), but he is expected to sit out at least another three weeks with a sprained thumb.

---

Wednesday, October 4, 1995

The Observer

SPORTS

Associated Press

Michigan's Dreisbach awaits sentence for fraudulence

ANN ARBOR, Mich. Michigan quarterback Scott Dreisbach is awaiting sentencing for his role in attempting to buy alcohol with false identification, the prosecutor's office said.

Dreisbach, 19, who played at Penn High School in Indiana, was ticketed May 25 by the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department. Joe Burke, Washtenaw County chief assistant prosecutor who confirmed a story Tuesday in The Michigan Daily, the school's student newspaper.

Dreisbach was ticketed in August. On Sept. 13, Dreisbach pleaded no contest to the criminal misdemeanor. He is to be sentenced Oct. 20 in 15th District Court.

"He is an intelligent man," said Burke, a 17-year-old assistant defense attorney. "It's an internal struggle." Burke said the original charge was "fraudulent use of identification in possession," and we amended it to an attempt at that crime," Burke told The Michigan Daily.

"We didn't think we could prove that he used the ID to make the purchase," he said.

The prosecutor's office decided to charge Dreisbach awaiting use of a fraudulent identification in possession because the attempt carries a stiffer penalty.

The attempt charge is a misde­meanor, carrying a maximum term of up to 45 days, and/or a $500 fine.

Dreisbach started the first four games for the No. 7 Wolverines (5-0), but he is expected to sit out at least another three weeks with a sprained thumb.
Griffey’s homers not enough in 9-6 defeat

By BEN WALKER
Associated Press

NEW YORK

Don Mattingly and the New York Yankees would not be denied, despite the greatness of Ken Griffey Jr.

The wild-card Yankees overcame Griffey’s two home runs and beat the Seattle Mariners 9-6 Tuesday night in their AL playoff opener.

A standing, stomping crowd of 57,178, the largest at Yankee Stadium since it was remodeled for the 1976 season, saw David Cone pitch New York to a 1-0 lead in the best-of-5 series.

Mattingly, playing in the postseason for the first time in his 14-year career, delivered an RBI single and a double. Playoff veterans Wade Boggs and Robin Sierra both homered and Bernie Williams doubled home the go-ahead run during a four-run seventh inning that made it 4-4.

Griffey highlighted Seattle’s first postseason game with a solo homer off the upper-deck facade in the fourth inning and a long, two-run homer in seventh that tied it 4-4.

His performance was reminiscent of George Brett’s three home runs at Yankee Stadium for Kansas City in a 6-5 loss to New York in Game 3 of the 1978 AL playoffs.

Still, it was not enough to stop the Yankees in their 35th year of postseason play, most in the majors, and first since 1981. New York broke the 4-4 tie in the seventh against loser Jeff Nelson and two other relievers, keyed by Williams’ RBI double and Sierra’s two-run homer. Williams singled another run home in the eighth with his third hit.

Griffey went 3-for-5, drove in three runs and scored three times for the Mariners, who arrived at their New York hotel shortly before 4 a.m. EDT Tuesday.

They were delayed because of Monday’s playoff win over California, a victory that meant ace Randy Johnson will not be able to face the Yankees until Game 3 at the latest.

Seattle scored twice in the ninth off John Wetteland before he retired Jay Ruhnke and Mike Bowers with two runners on base to end the game.

Griffey highlighted Seattle’s first postseason game with a solo home run off the upper-deck facade in the fourth inning and a long, two-run homer in seventh that tied it 4-4.

His performance was reminiscent of George Brett’s three home runs at Yankee Stadium for Kansas City in a 6-5 loss to New York in Game 3 of the 1978 AL playoffs.

Still, it was not enough to stop the Yankees in their 35th year of postseason play, most in the majors, and first since 1981. New York broke the 4-4 tie in the seventh against loser Jeff Nelson and two other relievers, keyed by Williams’ RBI double and Sierra’s two-run homer. Williams singled another run home in the eighth with his third hit.

Griffey went 3-for-5, drove in three runs and scored three times for the Mariners, who arrived at their New York hotel shortly before 4 a.m. EDT Tuesday.

They were delayed because of Monday’s playoff win over California, a victory that meant ace Randy Johnson will not be able to face the Yankees until Game 3 at the latest.

The Indians scarcely touched Cleveland’s ace on the first pitch of the fourth inning.

Cleveland starter Dennis Martinez lasted six innings, allowing two runs and five hits, walking none and striking out two. Clemens went seven innings, giving up three runs and five hits, walking one and striking out five.

The Indians scarcely touched Boston starter Roger Clemens through the first five innings, and Clemens, who lasted seven innings, might have stayed longer but for a 23-minute rain delay that interrupted the game in the eighth.

Clemens had been miserable in his two previous starts against New York, giving up 0-2 with an 8.25 ERA. His only loss over his last 11 starts this year came in Cleveland on Sept. 16.

These were the playoffs, though, and Clemens looked pumped. Throwing fastballs clocked occasionally in the mid-90s, he retired Cleveland’s first nine batters routinely before Kenny Lofton singled to right on the first pitch of the fourth inning.

By then, Varitek had put the Red Sox ahead 2-0 with his two-out homer to right in the third inning.

Varitek hit 27 homers during the regular season, ranking second on the Red Sox to Mo Vaughn’s 39.

Cleveland starter Dennis Martinez lasted six innings, allowing two runs and five hits, walking none and striking out two. Clemens went seven innings, giving up three runs and five hits, walking one and striking out five.

Celebrate a friend’s birthday with a special Observer ad.

ND WRESTLING

Tuesday, October 3 at 4:15
Wednesday, October 4 at 6:00
Thursday, October 5 at 4:15
Wrestling Room in JACC Located in Gym Near RecSports Office

Cleveland Indians carry their flair for the dramatic to the extreme Tuesday night, winning their first postseason game in 41 years on Tony Pena’s homer with two outs in the 13th inning, beating Boston 5-4.

Pena, who spent four years with the Red Sox from 1990-93, drove in a 3-0 pitch from Zane Smith just over the blancher railing in left field.

It ended the longest night game in postseason history. Three previous night games went 12 innings; the Mets and Astros played a 16-inning night game in the 1986 NLCS.

It was the 10th time this season that the Indians ended a game with a home run. The Indians were 13-0 in extra innings this season, and this latest victory gave them a 1-0 lead in the best-of-5 series.

Pena, who had only five homers in the regular season, ended the game just after 2 a.m. local time — but most of the nation didn’t see it.

Baseball Network did not show the game in the majority of the country. Although televised in Cleveland and New England.

Boston lost its 11th consecutive postseason game dating back to Bill Buckner’s infamous error in the 1986 World Series. The Red Sox were swept by Oakland in the ALCS in 1988 and ’90.

The game went to extra innings tied at 3, and the teams traded solo home runs in the 11th inning to extend it again.

Boston’s Tim Naehring homered off Jim Poole in the bottom half, and the Indians tied it in the bottom half on Albert Belle’s leadoff homer against Rick Aguilera.

The plot thickened when the Red Sox had the umpire confus­ cate Belle’s bat. Belle was sus­ pended for seven games last year for using a corked bat against the Chicago White Sox.

Belle, who led the majors with 50 home runs this year, fixed his biceps muscle and pointed to it angrily after the Red Sox had his bat taken away.

Boston’s four runs all came on home runs, including John Valentin’s two-run shot in the third. Luis Alicea’s solo home in the eighth and Naehring’s in the 11th.

Alicea’s homer was the third of his four hits, and it erased the 3-2 lead the Indians had taken in the sixth on Belle’s two-run double and a single by Eddie Murray.

The Indians carried their flair for the dramatic to the extreme Tuesday night, winning their first postseason game in 41 years on Tony Pena’s homer with two outs in the 13th inning, beating Boston 5-4.
The Cincinnati Reds sent a quick message Tuesday night — their shaky play during the season's final month, especially quick on message Tuesday night with two outs in the first and Santiago and beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-2 in the opener of their NL playoff series.

Los Angeles' career postseason game.

The result was a 5-4 victory for the Atlanta Braves on Tuesday in the opener of their NL playoff series, the first postseason game in Rockies history.

Jones' second solo homer broke a 4-4 tie in the ninth to win it for Atlanta. But the Braves had to sweat out this victory when the Rockies loaded the bases with one out in the bottom of the inning.

Closer Mark Wohlers retired the first batter, then gave up back-to-back singles to Mike Kimsey and Bichette. Wohlers walked Larry Walker to fill the bases.

CARLOS ROCKIES

Colorado countered with two runs in the fourth, highlighted by Castilla's two-run hom run to right, with Bichette taking third on the sacrifice fly by Bichette. Martinez scored on Ellis Burks' RBI double in their half.

With two outs in the top of the ninth, Jones homered to right-center off Rockies closer Curtis Leskanic. Jones also homered in the sixth during a rally that produced a 3-2 tie.

Dwight Smith's two-out, pinch-hit single in the eighth gave the Braves a 4-3 lead, but Colorado countered on Ellis Burks' RBI double in their half.

Rockies reliever Mike Munoz retired the first two batters in the eighth but surrendered a single to Ryan Klesko. Darren Holmes replaced Munoz and gave up a single to Javy Lopez. Smith, batting for Jeff Blauser, singled to right for a 4-3 lead.

Dante Bichette drew a leadoff walk off Greg McMichael in the Rockies half. Walker singled to right with Bichette taking third, on right fielder David Justice's bobble.

Jones made a diving stop of Galarraga's shot down the third-base line and threw out Walker at second, with Bichette taking third. Alejandro Pena then served up the RBI double to Burks.

Maddux ended the Rockies' threat in the seventh.

Colorado's Kevin Ritz nursed a 3-1 lead into the seventh, when the Braves scored twice to tie.

Vinnie Castilla, a former Braves prospect, hit a two-run homer for the Rockies, while Marquis Grissom and Jones had solo shots for the Braves.

Maddux's best feat was escaping a bases-loaded, one-out predicament in the seventh.

He got pinch-hitter John Vander Wal, who set a major league record with 28 pinch-hits this season, to bounce to the mound. Maddux threw home for one out, and Lopez's relay to first cut down Vander Wal.

Grissom's two-out solo homer off Ritz gave the Braves a 1-0 lead in the third.

The Rockies countered with three runs in the fourth, highlighted by Castilla's two-run homer. With one out, Walker walked and went to third on Galarraga's single that ricocheted off the right-field foul line.

Burls then brought Walker home on a short sacrifice fly, with Walker beating Justice's high throw.

Castilla, claimed by the Rockies in the 1992 expansion draft, hit a 425-foot drive to center for a 3-1 lead.

Atlanta tied it in the sixth. Jones hit a leadoff homer. Justice walked with one out, Walker walked and went to third on Galarraga's single that ricocheted off the right-field foul line.

Steve Reed replaced Ritz, and pinch-hitter Luis Polonia hit a single to right, advancing one run, allowing two runs, and scoring another on a throwing error.

Beckler, a former Braves prospect, hit a two-run homer for the Rockies, while Marquis Grissom and Jones had solo shots for the Braves.

Maddux's best feat was escaping a bases-loaded, one-out predicament in the seventh.
Rodman faces challenge of blending talents with Bull stars

By RICK GANO

CHICAGO

Dennis Rodman’s game is as unique as his personality and now he will have to blend those talents with two stars who were once bitter rivals, Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen.

Rodman, the NBA’s top rebounder for the last four years, was voted league’s best defender in 1990 and 1991 and helped the Detroit Pistons win a pair of championships.

Four straight times in the playoffs the Bulls and Pistons met in emotional and intense series and Rodman’s aggressive defensive tactics often turned the tide for the Bulls. He was fined $5,000 after one game for Dagrazzi-style pushing Pippen, who required six stitches in his chin.

Detroit won the first three postseason meetings before the Bulls finally broke through en route to their first of three straight titles.

“I don’t know if you can put him as the baddest of ‘The Bad Boys,’” Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. Bulls fans disliked center Bill Laimbeer just as much as they did Rodman. Now he’ll be wearing a Chicago uniform, it appears.

“Anybody who enjoys basketball and would say if there is a ballplayer who can rebound and defend in the league that could bring a certain status in the game, a certain amount of control from that position, Dennis is the one who’s changed the course of the game,” Jackson said.

“You see it in Michael on the offensive end, you see it in Scottie on the offensive end.”

Jackson consulted with Pippen and Jordan before deciding to go ahead and let general manager Jerry Krause trade with San Antonio for Rodman, whose career has been a troubled one on and off the court. Jackson said Rodman and Jordan had played together in Los Angeles where Jordan has been shooting a movie this summer.

“I talked to our team leaders and they said this guy is one of the best players in the game, it would be tough not to go for him,” said Jackson. The Bulls made the deal by giving up backup center Will Perdue.

Another plus for the Bulls is that Rodman, who’s averaged an incomparable 17.7 rebounds a game the last four seasons, doesn’t need to shoot the ball to be effective in an offense where Jordan, Pippen and Teo Kokoska do most of the scoring. He can dominate a game with defense and rebounding.

Last season he collected 20 or more rebounds in a game 20 times, including a season-high 30 against the Houston Rockets. Rodman, who averaged seven points during a tour of duty with the Sacramento Kings last year, said he can play with or against anyone.

“I have no problem with anybody in the world. I can deal with anything,” Rodman said in an interview with XTRA-AM.

“Conflicts. It doesn’t matter. The main thing you do on the basketball court is you communicate in the basketball world. Once you’re off the court, you go your own separate ways.”

But Rodman, who is set to make $2.5 million in the final year of a contract this season, said he isn’t going to Chicago just to play with certain players. And he’s not crazy about his contract, either.

“Chicago is cold as hell. If I decide to go there, it’s not because of Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen or anything like that. That don’t mean nothing. I don’t bow down to any man, whoever they are or what stature they have,” he said.

Michael Jordan and his teammates must now adjust to the addition of the controversial Dennis Rodman to the Bulls.

Holtz continued from page 20

His fatigue has continued into the early part of this week, though doctors have advised the 58-year-old Holtz to cut back on his schedule. For one thing, Holtz chose not to attend his weekly press conference, instead opting for defensive coordinator Bob Davie to do the talking.

More telling is the fact that Holtz has only been attending roughly half of each Irish practice.

“Coach was out there for the second half of practice,” punter Hunter Smith said. “He’d rather be at his best for half a practice and giving it all.”

Cutting back on his activities will also allow Holtz to re-energize himself for the long trip to Seattle.

“He will definitely be making the trip to Seattle so he has been taking it easy this week,” Smith explained.

The other important thing that will be joining the team to Seattle is confidence.

“I’d say we’re definitely
The Congregation of Holy Cross
Welcomes
The Members of its 1995-96
Candidate Class at
Moreau Seminary

For information about the Holy Cross Candidate Program:

Rev. John Conley, CSC
Rev. Patrick Neary, CSC

Vocation Directors
Moreau Seminary
PO Box 541
Notre Dame, IN 46556
(219) 631-6385
Lewis finally overpowered the Angels, due to the offensive play of Emily Miller. Miller had some impressive gains from her rushing.

Then the quarterback Liz Talarico had a completion to Carrie Upp for the touchdown, as Lewis posted six points on the scoreboard.

The game continued to be a fight with numerous fourth down attempts missed. In the end, Maureen Neville secured the victory with her interception of the Angels' pass, as Lewis went on to win, 6-0.

Pasquerilla East 13, Farley 6

Farley made it clear that they were there to play, as Farley's finest scored on their first offensive effort. Camille Clinton dominated on defense making numerous gains on her rushing attempts.

Quarterback Tiernee Lucke found Clinton open in the middle, and Clinton ran it in for the touchdown. The extra point attempt was missed and Farley's finest posted a quick six points.

The rest of the half featured a battle between the two teams with no one giving ground. Numerous outstanding defensive and offensive plays were run by each team. At the conclusion of the half the Pyros found themselves down by six.

The Pyros got back in the game with an interception. Karen Randesi then had several receptions for small gains. Then Elizabeth Plummers found her wide receiver open in the end zone as the Pyros posted six points on the board.

The Pyros defense then took over, and shut down the Farley offense in four downs. With time running short, the Pyros wasted no time.

A few short gains were made by the Pyros' running game. Then the Pyros took to the air, and Plummers found Randesi deep in Farley's territory for the touchdown and the extra point.

"I saw it floating up there, and I went for it!" stated Randesi about her game winning touchdown. That last minute touchdown lifted the Pyros to victory over Farley's Finest, 13-6.

Siegfried coach Scott Hardy directs the Slammers last night in their 13-8 victory over Off-Campus.
Wednesday, October 4, 1995

FOUR FOOD GROUPS OF THE APOCALYPSE

CALVIN AND HOBBES

DILBERT

DENTISTS, AND BOYS WHO TRY TO ENGAGE DENTISTS IN TREATMENT.

BILL WATTERSON

YOUR HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1995

Happy Birthday in the Next Year of Your Life! Take a break, have some fun! Join us for a fit walk on Wednesday, October 11, 1995 at 4 p.m. in front of LaFortune Student Center. As part of Alcohol Awareness Week, the Office of Alcohol and Drug Education is co-sponsoring with Rec Sports a "Fit Walk." Register in advance at the Office of Alcohol and Drug Education, 1 Mezzanine Level, LaFortune Student Center.

Sponsored By: Office of Alcohol and Drug Education.
Bengal Bouts set to begin for novices

By TODD MURPHY

Sports Writer

For almost seventy years the Notre Dame Bengal Bouts have been a constant source of entertainment for countless fans, as well as giving students of all skill levels a chance to compete. For many competitors, getting in shape to swing the leather for a few rounds is a way to try something that they wouldn't normally have a chance to do. For others, it remains a goal to be gotten by thousands of push-ups, millions of sit-ups, and gallons of sweat.

Thus, the Notre Dame Boxing Club is warming up to start the fun all over again by sending a call out to all the rookies. Tournaments and training for novice boxers will begin soon. This is the time when potential Bengal Bouters can get a jump on technique training and become familiar with the sport. There will be about fifty returning boxers this year. Captain and returning senior Mike Farrell commented, "Many of the champions may have been seniors last year, but quite a few finalist are coming back. Novice is a great chance to make a name for yourself early."

There will be a mandatory meeting for all hopeful novice this Wednesday, October 4th, at 4:30 p.m. in the boxing room downstairs in the J.A.C.C. Practice will begin the Monday after fall break.

WATER POLO

The Notre Dame Water Polo Club hosted its first tournament of the year this past weekend, beating Ohio University (15-11), Bowling Green (15-6), and Michigan (13-2). Irish captain Walter Morrissey assumed his leadership position by demonstrating a strong presence for the team. Captain Brain Wood also stepped up in the game against Ohio University scoring three straight goals after OU brought the score to within one.

Other Irish having a stellar weekend were Pat Lane, Ty Skilling, and freshman goalie Mike Megall who kept the Irish in the Ohio game. The Irish travel to Dayton this weekend for the midwest seedcraft tournament. "We are doing really well, but we'll have to play a lot better to win this weekend," Morrissey said.

CREW

The Irish traveled to the very hub of Crew activity this past weekend when they raced in the Head of the Potomac. The Irish men's division raced two four person boats (finishing 9th and 11th) and

Due to swelling in his throat caused by recent surgery, Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz will be watching the Washington game on Saturday from the press box.

Change of scenery for Holtz

Swelling forces Irish coach from sidelines

By TIM SHERMAN

Associate Sports Editor

A tough week for Lou Holtz and the Irish just got a little bit tougher.

The recovering Holtz has experienced a slight set-back in the recuperative process this week as he bled swelling of the throat.

At first, the ailment didn't appear to be related to Holtz's recent spinal cord surgery but that didn't turn out to be the case. "The swelling is definitely related to his surgery," Notre Dame sports information director John Heidler noted late last night.

In light of the new complication, Holtz is not expected to be back on the sideline this Saturday against Washington. "Coach Holtz won't be on the sideline for the next two weeks," Heidler explained. "He will be in the press box though."

In hindsight, the comeback attempt of Holtz was probably a bit pre-mature.

After the Ohio State loss, Holtz appeared very haggard and worn at the post-game press conference. see HOLTZ / page 16

---

Laurie's two touchdown passes slam Off-Campus

By KATHLEEN LOPEZ

Sports Writer

There was a chill in the air and the fog was rolling in, as the Siegfried Stammers upset Off-Campus Laurie's rushing and by Jen Laurie's throwing. Schafnitz ran down the sideline for a first down and then grabbed Laurie's pass and gained another first down.

Quarterback Laurie fooled the Off-Campus' defense and rushed for the touchdown. Then Laurie completed a pass to Anne Dubay who was all alone in the corner of the end zone to complete the extra point try.

The rest of the half was a battle back and forth between the two teams. Off-Campus' offense was highlighted by Charo Gonzalez and Patti Vassallo, both of who had large rushing gains on the reverse.

The Crime's defense showed its strength, including when Carrie Eginton intercepted Laurie's pass. However, the Crime went in at halftime down by six.

Off-Campus came out charged for the second half, and scored on their first offensive effort.

---

Women's Soccer vs. Connecticut October 6, 7:30 p.m.

Cross Country Notre Dame Invitational October 6, T.R.A.

SMC Sports Soccer vs. Kalamazoo October 5, 3:30 p.m.