The making of a ‘friendly’ rivalry

Notre Dame and Boston College’s shared trophy serves as symbol of unity

Boston College. Screaming Eagles. These four words have the ability to rile up the Fighting Irish more than most others, and that includes Florida State. They invoke images of a lost national championship and a year of redemption spoiled. When the Irish student body thinks about this BC game on Saturday, there is only one acceptable outcome, a Notre Dame win.

In just six short years, the Notre Dame-Boston College series has gained the characteristics of a classic American College Football rivalry—a blow-out and a heartbreaker and two student bodies that look forward to the match-up long before the leaves change color.

But lately, the young rivalry has taken a turn for the ugly and the Notre Dame student body made the decision to rectify this over the summer.

Mark Mitchell, the Student Government chief of staff, developed the idea of staging a traveling trophy between the two schools that would belong solely to their student bodies. In an effort to unite the students of two schools with similar traditions and heritages, Mitchell and Boston College’s chief of staff John Kleiderer embarked on a project to bring together the BC and ND communities to celebrate their teams and keep the rivalry “friendly.”

“We all know that the students have tended to regard this competition as a ‘Holy War’ and from what I’ve heard from people who traveled to BC last year for the game, they had a very unpleasant experience. It sounded like it was turning into a Miami caliber rivalry which is just nasty,” said Mitchell.

“And while it’s very easy to discontinue contractual obligations to the newspaper because we really don’t have any connection to them, Boston College is, next to Harvard, the only Catholic school with a division I-A football team.

When Kleiderer and Mitchell reflected on the link between BC and Notre Dame, the two recognized that the history and heritage

University focus expands abroad

In an attempt to internationalize the Notre Dame community and assist in the further development of International Studies, a committee on the subject has been organized by Father Timothy Scully, vice president and associate provost of the University.

The ad hoc committee on International Studies was approved by the University’s Academic Council last May and will work to advise the University on international matters. It will also aid in the bringing about of improvements in the area, according to Ivan Jaksic, assistant provost for International Studies.

“We want to improve on everything, not just the study abroad programs, because we would like to internationalize the whole university to expand students’ horizons and create a wider span of knowledge and experiences,” said Jaksic.

The committee has high goals of what it would like to accomplish, but actually attaining these goals is a slow moving process.

“Something that is very important right now is focus. We are moving with deliberate speed because we are in the process of gathering information and this takes a great amount of time. We are going through a consultation process on how to provide a truly international campus,” said Jaksic.

Presently the committee is examining student wants and demands, evaluating both domestic and international programs, and speaking with faculty members who have an international background. For the 1994-95 school year, only 42% students, 6% of the student body, studied abroad. The committee would like to elevate these numbers significantly, but the more important goal is improving the overall strength of the International Studies program.

“What is important is that students have the appropriate background here so that they can handle a strong, academically challenging program abroad. The question is how to improve the quality of language instruction and offerings at Notre Dame so that when students go abroad, they can immerse themselves fully in the culture in order to get as much out of the experience as possible,” said Jaksic.

Another aspect of the abroad programs the committee would like to examine is facilitating students in going abroad through other university’s programs.

WASHINGTON

In a momentous break with the past, the House passed a Republican-balanced budget bill Thursday that would shrink the federal government, cut taxes and return power to the states. Democrats battled to the end against the measure.

The vote was 227-203, with 223 Republicans and four Democrats opposing the bill. Opposed were 192 Democrats, 10 Republicans and one independent.

The people should understand that in seven years, we will in fact balance the federal budget and save this country and save the next generation," said House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich of Ohio. "We've done our best.

A cheer went up from the Republican side of the chamber as the vote climbed past 217, the number needed to assure passage in the 433-member House. GOP lawmakers poured their arms wide open.

Across the Capitol, the GOP-controlled Senate was expected to approve a similar bill Friday, a major milestone in the Republican revolution launched last winter. "We'll be all right," predicted Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

As the day gave way to evening, Senate Republicans systematically turned aside Democratic efforts to restore two-thirds of $270 billion in savings proposed from Medicare, as well as additional funds for Medicaid and a program of tax breaks for the working poor.

Their agenda is to get rid of Medicare," House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., said of the Republicans. "Their agenda is to give huge tax breaks to the wealthiest Americans.

Muppets back on television

NEW YORK

Kermit the Frog, Miss Piggy and the rest of the Muppets are headed back to prime time on ABC. "Muppets Live!" a community variety hall will replace the regular season replacement under a five-year production deal announced Thursday. Unlike the original Muppets show, which was set in a music-hall theater, "Muppets Live!" will originate from the chaotic studio of KMUP-TV, with weekly guest stars and a menagerie of Muppet characters new and old. "Of course, if this doesn't work out, we'll start visiting people," Kermit, flanked by his sidekick Gonzo, told reporters at ABC studios. "Going door to door!" Comes amended.

Jaycees scrap O.J.'s haunted house

PASCO, Wash.

The Jaycees scrapped plans for an "O.J. Simpson crime scene" at their annual haunted house after a flood of angry calls. But the Jeffrey Dahmer skit will remain. A packed house is enough to turn the Dasmer exhibit, in which an actor depicts the serial killer slicing and dicing a human forearm and foot, burning a human head on a stove and sticking it into a microwave.

Garbage strikes hit lucrative

GARBAGE TRUCK driver Craig Randall sometimes brings his work home with him. There was that old-fashioned sawing machine he salvaged. There were some books he lifted from the trash. And then there was that Wendy's soft-drink cup good for a $200,000 grand prize.

Neither Randall nor his fiancee believed it until Thursday, when Randall showed up at a Wendy's restaurant and picked up his check. Randall, 23, said he lifted the cup off a pile of trash - he can't remember what day exactly - while on his route in the Boston suburb of Dedham. "I won a chicken sandwich the week before, and I figured, hey, I'm going to have some fun with it," he said. This time the ticket said: Congratulations. You have won $200,000 toward a new home.

Armadillos moving up to Missouri

ARMSDOD, Mo.

Motorists cruising the highways and byways of southern Missouri are doing a double-take these days. Joining the assorted cast of road-killed rabbits, raccoons, skunks and the occasional unlucky farm dog is a bony-shelled critter seldom before seen in these parts. The armadillo - the only North American mammal to roll in a wheel-like fashion, scurrying away on stubby legs from their homes in the Ozarks of Arkansas. Destination: Missouri, where indications are they're finding the Show-Me State's environs to their liking.

On a recent drive from Springfield to Branson, a distance of about 40 miles, one motorist counted no fewer than half a dozen armadillos sleeping internally along the side of the road. The armadillos are proceeding further and farther north each year.
Folk choir to present public benefit concert

The University of Notre Dame Folk Choir will present a concert of sacred music on 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 4. The concert, which will take place in Washington Hall, will benefit a Holy Cross mission in Jinja, Uganda, West Africa.

There will be no fixed charge for this public concert, but an offering will be taken up for the support of the Jinja mission. The mission’s pastor is Father Torn Mc Dermott, a former member of Notre Dame’s Campus Ministry staff.

Under the direction of Steven Warner, the 55-member Folk Choir is one of Notre Dame’s principal liturgical choirs. Especially known for its singing at the 11:45 a.m. Sunday Mass in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart on campus, the choir has issued five recordings of sacred music and has toured widely in the U.S. and abroad.

The concert will offer highlights of the Folk Choir’s repertoire, including selections now attracting national attention with their distribution by World Library Publications of Chicago. Sacred song from Africa will also be featured.

Seating for the performance will be first-come, first-served, and concertgoers are encouraged to arrive early.

Malloy to bless new Habitat home

University of Notre Dame President Father Edward Malloy will preside at the blessing of Sam and Betty Kariuki’s new house at 1056 Burns Street on Sunday, Oct. 29 at 3 p.m.

The Northeast Neighborhood house, completed last June, was built by Notre Dame student volunteers with help from the St. Joseph County chapter of Habitat for Humanity. Habitat’s Notre Dame chapter has enlisted more than 100 student volunteers this year, and they hope to begin work on another house in the Northeast Neighborhood sometime during the fall semester.

Habitat for Humanity is an ecumenical, Christian ministry that seeks to eradicate dilapidated housing by using volunteer labor, management expertise and donations of money and materials.

Habitat houses are sold at no profit to “partner families” whose members are issued no-interest mortgages and required to invest “sweat equity” hours in the house’s construction.

Senior Dog book orders are due THIS FRIDAY, Oct. 27. Bring your photo, poll, and order form to the class office (2nd floor LaFortune) or send it campus mail.

Forum examines sexual politics

By PEGGY LENCEWSKI
Saint Mary's News Editor

Last night the group currently calling itself People in Support (P's) met last night at the Club House at Saint Mary's College to hear four speakers share their stories about their homosexuality in a forum entitled "Telling Our Stories: A Step Towards Right Relations."

Max Wester, Associate Professor of English at Saint Mary's College, introduced the speakers by emphasizing that "we are not an official group, and we do not represent Saint Mary's policy. Group is too strong a word for us; we'd like to sponsor events and accidental meetings. We're a collection of random people who represent on one but ourselves, and we want to raise awareness. We're going to keep doing this."

Bill Storey, Professor of Theology emeritus at Notre Dame, first discussed the history of gays and lesbians in the United States. "The history of gays and lesbians is not very well documented; it has not been given a lot of time and attention by historians."

According to Storey, gays and lesbians have stories of exodus from "small, hate-filled smaller communities to find a home and a promised land." He stated that, just like racial prejudice, prejudice against homosexuals is "based on irrational considerations."

Storey stated that homosexuality is "a feature of human life that has always existed. During different times they were either respected or put to death." Storey also explained that the gay and lesbian movements were two different movements, and that the gay movement "despised the lesbian movement."

"Lesbians tend to be poor and often have children, since they come out of broken marriages. They get minimum wage jobs and are the easiest group to exploit," he explained. Storey went on to explain that gays and lesbians want "acceptance by their families. We want to be open with our families, and we want to take our partners into the heart of the community." According to Storey, "homosexuals have no free speech patterns, and no campus press, although that is changing somewhat. We'd like to be a normal campus group." He emphasized the difficulties of being homosexual at Notre Dame, but also stated that, "There are positives. Now, more people examine their qualities of life due to opposition."

Two Notre Dame students also shared their stories, describing their experiences of coming out. Tony Silva, a junior at Notre Dame, told his story with a good deal of humor. However, senior Shelley Stefan described the experience of coming out to her family as a wound that "still hasn't healed." Since I came out, my relationship with my family has had an infection," Stefan emphasized that her love for her family has not change although her respect has.

An alumna of Saint Mary's spoke last. She described her experience in the Saint Mary's community as positive, stressing that she received a lot of support from her friends and from GINA. "I was very glad to speak at Saint Mary's, and felt very positive about P's, saying that "it's important that when times get rough, (people) pull together." "The only cure for homophobia is education."

Van Dyne: Feminism hurt by media image

By KARA PAVLIK
News Writer

Susan Van Dyne, a professor of women's studies at Smith College, urged women's studies professors to remember what they represent in her lecture Thursday in Stapleton Lounge. She argued that the media distorts the image of feminism.

"The media shows feminists as having a gender identity problem. The media portrays feminists as deviant through images punishing to women," Van Dyne said. She showed ads from tabloids to display images of feminists as "frumpy, odd-duckies" or as women "full of rage."

"During the lecture entitled "Representing Women's Studies: Our Policies, Pedagogies and Public Image," Van Dyne spoke in support of Saint Mary's growing women's studies department and refuted myths surrounding women and feminism.

Van Dyne also noted the irony of the current feminist movement, calling it "the best and worst of time." For the women's movement in the US, while many college and university programs are catalysts in changing course content and teaching at female colleges such as Smith and Saint Mary's, these colleges are perceived as idealistic and overpriced, Van Dyne said.

But she believes female colleges are "long-term investments" where women's ideas and aspirations are taken seri-ouvously. There, women's studies provide an especially congenial community for female scholars, according to Van Dyne. "With over 600 women's studies programs nationwide, the feminist community is a hub for intellectual activity. No matter how homogeneous the school, there is a more widespread commitment to women of color gay as."

Although the status of women continues to improve, Van Dyne says that the "fear of female power still creates problems." She states that this is shown in political cartoons in which feminism continues to be depicted as a "PC atrocity."

"Women's studies has been attacked for being too academic or too immersed in late 20th century thought. But the reality of women's history cannot be denied. The playing field for women has yet to be leveled."

According to Van Dyne, feminism is a movement that is still being defined. When the movement began in the 1970s, popular feminism focused on personal, shared experiences between women. The movement grew to focus on the clash between females. In the 1980s, the movement grew to focus on the role of blacks and lesbians. While Van Dyne says that women's studies and lesbianism do have a degree of overlap, lesbianism is by no means a complete "Feminism is a place for both heterosexuals and homosexuals, I would hate to say that a lesbian would make a better feminist," she said.

of the two schools is so closely related, that it was something able to be embodied in a trophy for both student bodies.

With this in mind, Mitchell proposed a meeting to Student Government, President Jonathan Patrick and Vice President Kelly McCarthy. We were enthusiastic about it and why it needed to be done.

"At Student Government thought that relations between the students here and at Boston College were not as good as they should be. There are so many Notre Dame students who have friends who go to BC that we really felt we should do something to make this rivalry friendlier," said Patrick.

After receiving the go-ahead from Student Government, Mitchell commenced his plan to design a trophy that would herald what the two schools stand for and have in common.

The football connection shared by Notre Dame and Boston College even includes one coach, Frank Leahy, who led the Eagles to a 20-2-0 record in 1939 and 1940 and then headed for Notre Dame, where he brought four National Championships and four seasons as head coach. Both renowned Catholic institutions, Notre Dame and Boston College were built by generations of Irish Americans and Notre Dame was created to uphold this heritage, as well as that of the multicritically diverse student bodies of both campuses. In that spirit, the trophy should also inspire a spirit of sportsmanship and unity between South Bend and Chestnut Hill.

The trophy itself is made of green enamel and crystal, to withstand the jostling of the winning team and the travel to and from both campuses. It is 15 inches tall by 12 inches wide, the crystal feet in the shape of the island of Ireland and is engraved with a shamrock with the names Notre Dame and Boston College surrounding it.

The shamrock represents both the Catholic character and unity of BC and Notre Dame. It is the symbol Saint Patrick used to celebrate the trinity in Irish tradition.

The trophy sits in a mahogany base with three plaques. Two are for the recording of the game scores and the last holds an inscription which dedicates the trophy to the standards Mitchell, Kin- der and Student Government hope the trophy will embody.

"There are few schools which share as much tradition as Notre Dame and Boston College. Therefore it is only fitting that there be a spirit of respect, sportsmanship, friendliness and competition between the students of both schools. It is extended to all the students of Boston College as a token of goodwill, camaraderie and friendly rivalry. May the shamrock inspire the students of Notre Dame and Boston College to recognize the diversity which makes them unique, and at the same time celebrate all that unites them."

Notre Dame and Boston College will enter selective ranks when the trophy is presented to BC Student Body President William Lyons on Saturday, in honor of BC's 30-11 victory over Notre Dame last year.

Few schools have trophies that belong exclusively to the student bodies and were initiated by the students themselves.

Perhaps the most famous of these symbols is the victory bell that travels between USC and UCLA to commemorate perhaps the greatest crosstown rivalry in the nation. The 295-pound bell is given to the winner of the game, a ceremony begun in 1942 after USC President Dr. Rufus B. von KleinSmid threatened to cancel the series.

The USC students have stolen the bell from its proprietors at UCLA andconfiscated it for 3 years. In an effort to ease the tensions between the two schools, the student body presidents of USC and UCLA signed an accord stating that the bell would be awarded to the winder of the annual classic. The tradition has endured for 53 years and marks the strength of the rivalry between Southern California and UCLA that are still in place today.

Notre Dame itself has several trophies it awards to the winner of classic games, such as ND vs. USC and ND vs. Purdue. Both these games are celebrated with a shillelagh that the winner takes home after the victory.

The Bellmaker shillelagh was given to Notre Dame by a merchant seaman who brought the club from Ireland. Notre Dame has held it since 1957. The USC shillelagh boasts emerald shamrocks emblazoned with the year and scores of ND victories and ruby trojan heads for USC victories.

Notre Dame Athletic Director Michael Wadowsky fully supports the Ireland Trophy and hopes it inspires all the students involved. "At a time when the NCAA is trying to encourage a greater spirit of sportsmanship in collegiate athletics, I think the best thing about this trophy and what makes it unique are the high ideals it is set for," said Wadowsky. "A goodwill gesture of this nature is timeless and a very good example to set in collegiate athletics."

The Notre Dame Student Government will present the trophy to the BC student body before kick-off and it will fall into the hands of the victor as the clock registers zero on Sat-the women's movement as small and illogical. The reality, she stated, is that it is very much alive.

Bordt served for several years on the board of an organization called Inside Out: Citizens United for Prison Reform, Inc. It is a grass-roots organization of citizens, ex-offenders and families of those presently incarcerated; it aims to educate the public and to mediate between the public and the people that actually make up prison policies. Based on her experiences, how does Bordt feel prisoners should be treated in an ideal world? She stated that "A piece of me is definitely against prisons and think they should no longer be built, that they cause greater harm than good." She suggested that perhaps the less serious property and drug-related crimes should be dealt with through community service and reconciliation, i.e. by restitution toward victims and by helping criminals to see the error of their ways.

On the other hand, she noted, a piece of her acknowledged that there is a small percentage of offenders who are very dangerous and maybe should be locked up. However, she challenged the idea that the more serious crimes should be equated with longer sentences. She feels this way because she believes that in reality, a longer person stays in prison, the more skilled one becomes in one's criminal ways, and thus the more bitter and unproductive one becomes. Bordt sees crime as more of a societal problem than the fault of the individual; she believes that were criminals given the same economic and educational opportunities as the rest of society, they would be able to remove themselves from their unlawful ways of life.

Bordt is involved with the South Bend Dismas House, a place where Notre Dame students can live alongside ex-offenders. She advocates this as an excellent opportunity for the students to "become exposed to the real world and with people with different opportunities and lives." She stated that "It opens their eyes to race and class is-

School bus crash

At least five people were killed when a suburban commuter train crashed into a school bus in Fox River Grove, Ill.

The bus was carrying about 30 students. The gate came down as it waited at a red light, the rear portion still on the tracks. As students saw the train approaching the back of the bus, many ran toward the front.

The train

The Metra express commuter train was headed for Chicago, traveling about 50 mph in a 70 mph zone of the track. It approached a crossing guarded by a gate, bells, flashing lights and signs.

Torn

The impact of the train sheared the cab of the bus off its chassis and spun it around 180 degrees. The cab came to rest on the ground next to the base of the bus.

Powerless to stop

The engineer hit the brakes, but was unable to stop. The train continued a short distance down the tracks.

Details of the la w suit were unveiled in news conferences in Portland and in New York City.

The lawsuit seeks to link killings of abortion doctors and clinic workers to anti-abortion activists around the country, including the American Coalition of Life Activists and Advocates for Life Ministries, both based in Portland.

The lawsuit alleges that "propaganda" posters giving information about abortion doctors amount to threats that violate federal racketeering laws.

Investigation considers role of faulty light

By JAMES WEBB

They began testing the signal, authorities said seven students, the police chief stopped at a traffic light, killing when the train hit.

"No one is doing any learning, they’re just sitting and crying," said 16-year-old Melanie Jopek.

Dozens of bouquets and monuments were placed against the crossing gates: balloons, poems, a red candle, a white cross and two white teddy bears with red hearts.

The Chicago-bound express train was traveling between 50 and 60 mph, well below the 70 mph limit, when it hit the brakes. The impact sheared the body of the bus off the chassis, spinning it around 180 degrees.

Federal officials said the bus is designed to break apart in a high-speed crash, to put distance between the occupants and the gas tank.

The crossing was guarded by a gate, bells, flashing lights and signs, but space is tight between the stoplight and the tracks, said Chris Knapton, a crossing guard.

Lawsuit aims at protection

By WILLIAM C. CRUM

PORTLAND, Ore. Abortion rights organizations today filed a class-action lawsuit aimed at silencing some of the nation’s most militant anti-abortion activists and seeking at least $200 million in damages.

The lawsuit, filled in U.S. District Court in Portland, is the first nationwide class action intended to protect abortion doctors and clinic workers from violence, said Jane Johnson, interim president of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America.

"These threats of violence have been allowed to continue for far too long and have overshadowed the lives and well-being of many abortion providers across the country," Johnson said in a statement.

Details of the lawsuit were being announced in news conferences in Portland and in New York City.

The lawsuit seeks to link killings of abortion doctors and clinic workers to anti-abortion activists around the country, including the American Coalition of Life Activists and Advocates for Life Ministries, both based in Portland.

FOX RIVER GROVE, III.

Moments before a commuter train slammed into a school bus stopped at a traffic light, killing seven students, the police chief and an engineer arrived at the crossing to inspect the balky signal, authorities said Thursday.

The light is supposed to automatically turn green and clear the tracks as trains approach, but “the timing doesn’t appear to be proper,” National Transportation Safety Board member John Goglia said.

Investigators are trying to determine why the bus carrying 35 students remained in the path of the train Wednesday. They began testing the light overnight and were seeking police phone logs to check for complaints about the signal.

Residents said they’ve been complaining for a long time about poor coordination between the gates and signals at the crossing and the stop light at the intersection just beyond.

“People have been saying something’s going to happen because it’s just not timed right,” said Jim Homola, who was in his car behind the bus when the train hit.

"You do not get a green light to clear the intersection before the railroad signals and gate come down," Ward said. "You put the train on the tracks and wait for it to clear before you do anything."

world and we would like to have opportunities available for Notre Dame students everywhere, in places such as Africa or Asia, but it is very time-consuming and expensive for a school to start its own programs in all regions. Therefore, in certain cases, it may make sense to piggyback off of other already existing programs. We need to see where to collaborate with other schools," said committee member Diana Murray, associate dean of the college of Arts and Letters.
The faculty will be key players in the success of the internationalization of the campus. "Hopefully there will be opportunities for faculty to expand their own horizons through additional opportunities to spend time abroad, allowing them to gain first hand knowledge and bring it back into the classroom," said Murray.

"We have many experts from various parts of the world here and we would like to showcase their knowledge and experiences," said Jaksic. "If students go away they are excited when they return, so we would like to have courses to follow up with, or lectures or activities. We would like their education to be further cultivated here so that their experience is not left behind; rather their return would be the beginning instead of the end of their education," Jaksic stated.

Thomas Riegenscheid was also recently appointed Director of International Studies and he will work together with Jaksic to evaluate the current programs.

"We know that this is a big enterprise, but it is one that is exciting. It will require some work, but we are certain that it is a very important project," Jaksic said.

Group targets ‘trashy’ talk shows

By CONNIE CASS

WASHINGTON

The same people who brought you "gangsta rap" music have lined up a new target: TV talk shows with trashy topics like "Women Who Marry Their Rapist" and "My Daughter Is Living as a Boy."

Denouncing daytime talk shows as "a case study of rot," former Education Secretary William Bennett announced a campaign Thursday to pressure the show's producers, sponsors and viewers to clean up their acts.

"What is happening today is the pollution of the human environment," Bennett, a Republican, said after screening snippets of the offending shows at a joint news conference with Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn.

The talkmasters were quick to talk back.

"It's a real elitist view for a guy like this to stand up and say, 'I don't think 4.5 million people have as much right to see Jerry Springer as I do,'" said Sally Jessy Raphael, citing her own show's viewership.

"These people have as much right to watch their show as he has to watch 'Nightline.'

Bennett, one of the Republican Party's most prominent voices on issues of morality and values, said he was inspired by the Democratic senator to turn his attention to trashy talk shows.

Lieberman worked with Bennett and civil rights activist C. Delores Tucker in their crusade against violent and sexually degrading rap lyrics.

The group claimed a partial victory last month when entertainment giant Time Warner agreed to sell its stake in Interscope Records, a leading label for gangsta rap.

Yeltsin suffers second recent heart attack

By JULIA RUBIN

President Boris Yeltsin was rushed to a hospital by helicopter Thursday with his second apparent heart attack in four months, reviving doubts about whether he is healthy enough to govern Russia.

The 64-year-old Yeltsin has dominated post-Soviet Russia, and his health is a matter of constant speculation, particularly with parliamentary elections scheduled for December and presidential elections in June.

The illness came two days after a summit in the United States where Yeltsin succeeded in boosting his and Russia's role in efforts to settle the war in the former Yugoslavia.

Yeltsin has said he is waiting for Solar to win overwork as his ailment, and he blamed it on overwork.

"The president's condition does not evoke great optimism," he told a news conference. "It's unlikely he'll be back at work in the next few days."

He said Yeltsin has canceled a trip to China early next month, and is making other changes in his immediate schedule. A decision was to be made Friday on whether Yeltsin would host a planned summit Tuesday of the leaders of Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia.

Acute ischemia can be caused by stress, high cholesterol, age or chronic high blood pressure.

Symptoms may include difficulty breathing, chest pains, chest pains and other problems.

Before leaving for France and the United States last week, he told reporters he was fit enough to challenge President Jacques Chirac of France in a tennis game. And he tried to demonstrate his improving health in September by playing tennis with President Alexander Lukashenko of Belarus.

Aides said Thursday, however, that the president had shown signs of exhaustion at the end of his U.S. trip. Byshun said he was working too hard on the flight home.

"In the future," he said, "Yeltsin's foreign trips should foresee a certain time for his normal adaptation to different time zones, and several days of rehabilitation after the pressure during the flight."

Yeltsin was brought to the Central Clinical Hospital, traditionally used by Kremlin leaders, on Thursday afternoon from his country residence.

If Yeltsin were unable to serve, Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin would take over. Elections would have to be held within three months if the president died.

Chernomyrdin's spokesman said Thursday that the prime minister had made no changes in his schedule.

Yeltsin yields so much power in Russia that analysts said it is hard to imagine what would happen if he were totally incapacitated.

"To put it bluntly this is a political and economic crisis," he told a news conference in Moscow Thursday. "This is a crisis of the country's declining economy and other problems."
A 91-year-old man receives AIDS from bite to hand

Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Florida health officials say a 91-year-old man was infected with the AIDS virus when he was bitten by a prostitute, a newspaper reported.

It's the first case of blood-to-blood HIV transmission through a human bite to be confirmed by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, the Sun-Sentinel in Fort Lauderdale reported, in its Friday editions.

Investigators working for the CDC determined the strain of the virus infecting prostitute Naomi Morrison matched the strain found in Elmer Hutto, whom she bit while trying to rob last year in West Palm Beach.

Researchers said blood, not merely saliva, was responsible for the transmission, because Morrison had bleeding gums when she bit Hutto violently on the left hand, left arm and right leg.

The CDC has never confirmed a case of HIV infection through saliva alone.

"Many, many, many bites have been investigated, but this is the first time the HIV virus has been transmitted to the victim if the bite is confirmed," said Bob Howard, chief spokesman for the CDC in Atlanta, told The Associated Press late Thursday that he didn't have the case file with him and couldn't comment.

The laboratory report to CDC came from Roche Molecular Systems in Alameda, Calif., which compared the strain of the HIV virus found in both Morrison and Hutto.

The results "are consistent with person-to-person transmission," Roche senior scientist Barbara Bowman wrote on Oct. 12 to Dr. Marcia Kalish, chief of molecular biology in the CDC's division of HIV/AIDS.

Morrison is serving a 10-year sentence for aggravated battery, robbery and burglary of a vehicle. Hutto has moved in with his daughter near West Palm Beach and has not developed AIDS-related symptoms.

A grand jury who violated secrecy rules because he was angry that prosecutors presented no evidence of a larger conspiracy in the Fruit Belt bombing was found guilty of dereliction of duty and incompetence.

"There's considerable evidence that there were more than two people involved, and that should have been presented," Heidelberg said. "The families of the victims need to know. America needs to know." Heidelberg especially objected to prosecutors' refusal to present evidence about John Doe No. 2, the man in FBI sketches released soon after the bombing. Authorities later admitted that the sketches resembled an innocent Army private, but the drawings were never withdrawn.

Though grand juries can vote to hear whatever evidence they deem necessary, in practice the panels are effectively controlled by prosecutors.

The indictment accuses McVeigh and Nichols of acting with "others unknown" to plot the bombing.

Immigrants affect battle for secession

MONTREAL

The battle over whether Quebec leaves Canada is a battle for the soul of the province's French-speaking majority. But in a race too close to call, voters from places like China and Greece will play a pivotal role.

Recent immigrants account for 10 percent of Quebec's 7.3 million people. A large majority of them favor staying in Canada, and many worry that a separatist victory in Monday's referendum would transform them into outsiders in their own homes.

However, even slight immigrant support could swing the vote in favor of secession.

The largest immigrant groups are Italians and Greeks, but there are nearly 300,000 blacks and Asians. There was dismay in their communities when separatist leader Lucien Bouchard recently referred to Quebecers as "one of the white races."

"To us, we are all Quebecers, and it's disappointing when someone makes a distinction," said Cynthia Lam, a Chinese-vote in favor of secession.

Gaby Luonga-Kombe, a Zaire native who heads an anti-racism group, said he received threatening phone calls after he publicly criticized Bouchard's remark.

"We're in a democratic country, but we can't even say what we think," he said.

Polls indicate that separatists could at most expect to get 10 percent of the immigrant vote, but even that margin would markedly improve separatists' chances of victory.

French tourism suffers after wave of bombings

Nuclear testing, a wave of terrorist bombings and stiff competition from friendlier European destinations are driving tourists away from France, the world's No. 1 vacation spot.

But the French government, aghast at the specter of shrinking lines outside the Eiffel Tower and the Louvre, is fighting back with an aggressive plan to woo weary francophiles — and seduce new ones.

President Jacques Chirac's resumption of nuclear testing in the South Pacific has prompted Japanese, Scandinavian, Australian and other environmentally aware travelers to cancel or postpone visits to France, Tourism Minister Francoise de Panafieu said.

A wave of terrorist bombings that has left seven dead and dozens injured since July also has scared off many francophiles.

The Louvre museum said the number of visitors was down 14 percent in September compared to a year earlier. France's national railway company likewise reports that rail traffic declined "considerably" in August and September, after bombings in the subway and near the Champs-Elysees.

French economics focus on tactics to spur growth

By JAMAL HALABY

MIDDLETOWN, Jordan

The Middle East opens one of its largest ever economic conferences Sunday as business and government leaders seek to spur growth in a region where economic performance has stunted development.

Some 2,000 participants from 60 nations are expected to gather at the Oct. 29-31 gathering in Amman, Jordan amid concerns that many of them are struggling to line up deals as the region moves hstily toward greater cooperation.

Middle Eastern economies still lag behind those in other emerging regions such as Southeast Asia and Latin America. Regional trade is limited and many governments continue to play a dominant role in the economy, reluctant to relinquish control to the private sector.

A similar conference last year in Casablanca, Morocco, marked the first large-scale gathering devoted to regional economic development, but it produced more promises than results.

This time, organizers plan to announce the creation of a $6 billion Middle East Development Bank, though support is still somewhat shaky and a number of countries are un­likely to provide new money.

The United States, which will be represented by Secretary of State Warren Christopher, strongly supports the bank as a way to bolster Middle East peace.

However, some European governments feel there are already enough lenders in the region, and some Middle East countries want a comprehen­sive Israeli-Arab peace settle­ment before the U.S. begins any funds to the proposed bank, which would be based in Cairo.

Jordan, which signed a peace treaty with Israel a year ago, hopes the conference will convince foreign investors to come to the kingdom in large numbers.

The government has drawn up a list of 27 projects that would cost an estimated at $5.2 billion. Among them is a ambitious plan to construct elec­tric power grids of Egypt, Jordan, Israel and the Palestinians.

"We lived through many years of wars, conflicts and troubles. But with peace at hand, we are looking forward to development and reward­ing investments," said Trade Minister Ali Abu­Ragheb.

In the latest sign of increased cooperation, Israel and Jordan signed a trade agreement Wednesday that reduces tariffs.

Earlier this year Jordan's Parliament lifted a 47-year-old boycott on deals with Israeli entrepreneurs. Israeli lawmakers also approved an investment law which removed a 49 percent ceiling on foreign ownership in firms.

"We believe doing business with the Arab countries will be to their benefit, not to ours," said Mendi Barak of the Federation of the Israeli Chambers of Commerce.

"Israel imports $27 billion worth of goods per year from countries all over the world. We also want to buy from our Arab neighbors."
Students arriving at the "Ivies" this fall are encountering a surprising phenomenon. Women's studies courses outnumber economics classes by as much as two to one. Princeton remains the lone exception, but so does many other women's studies courses compared with 32 in economics. What is happening is something to do with the fact that over 50 percent of those who graduated from college in May still cannot find jobs appropriate for their degrees.

That's only half the picture: the former standard of excellence in academic circles is now the standard for government. New Republic editor and outspoken liberal Michael Kinsley wrote this of his attempt to hire a recent college graduate as his research assistant: "The government makes it economically difficult for the honest citizen to hire a single employee." Consequently, many new businesses are being founded, not by the new graduates, but by the old ones.

Kinsley said government regulation "plunges you into an entirely new dimension of complexity as an employer." With "a minimum of 37 different forms of government regulation to hire a single employee for a year." As a result of government regulation, Kinsley's young assistant ended up running a business where he found her: in the unemployment line.

Two simple reasons explain why half of today's college graduates cannot find jobs befitting their degree. First, colleges are encountering a surprising phenomenon. What are our colleges and universities doing wrong? While skill requirements for employment are increasing (57 percent of employers say skill requirements have increased), the quality and substance of our national institutions are eroding. Except in a few schools which have maintained their commitment to quality academic instruction, multicultural and politically correct courses supplant classes that have practical value for future employment.

What courses are now preparing our students for the workforce? At Columbia University this fall: Rare Gender; and the Politics of Rock n Roll and The Invisible Woman in Literature: The Lesbian Literary Tradition. At Penn: Search for Extraordinary Life and Sex through the Ages: A History of Sex. Women's studies can sustain. Rather, this administration is more concerned about building demand for federal student loan programs than in planning for employment needs. Consequently, higher education needs the same thing that state universities want—federal aid and the Politics of Resistance: Feminism Income Distribution and Yale's Gender Capitalism and the Third World.

What has happened to Notre Dame spirit?

Dear Editor:

Lately both The Observer and Scholastic have debated the causes of the recent decline in school spirit. As a senior who has seen the Notre Dame Spirit in its golden form (Penn State '92, Florida State '93), my initial reaction to those who claimed that spirit was waning was to disbelief them. But when several members of both the football team and marching band told me they find our student section "extremely quiet" (as one football player put it) — especially in comparison to the last few seasons — I began to wonder if my skepticism was unwarranted. Are we less spirited now in the days of Powlus and Bettis? Are we less spirited now in the days of Powlus and Bettis? Are we less spirited now in the days of Powlus and Bettis?

"I have a field advantage anymore." - A Notre Dame football coach on Mutual Radio, 1992.

It seems that there are those who do not appreciate fully their precious years under the Dome, and often measure their happiness by watching a stadium scoreboard read. Indeed, that is not spirit, that is fair weather front-running.

For those who may need a reminder as to the little things we need to cherish, I suggest you read "Dome" I've recently become absorbed in: Kevin Coyne's "Dome." This new book reminds us of what it was like when the option was run effective. It was like when you found you of what Notre Dame truly represents: solidarity, community, spirituality, family. Go raise hell in the stands.

People talk about "96 and a shot at #1."

We should make the band play them right. — Notre Dame Class of '79

Well here I am again, Notre Dame's #1 Fan. After being around Notre Dame for 27 years, getting to know the players as young people, making friends, going to football games, and watching the students cheer on their team, this student body is one of the worst. Please don't get me wrong. I'm not being a judge, I am just saying it the way I see and hear it.

This year's team needs to know you're there not just when they score a touchdown, or the ball carrier for a loss, or an interception, but also when the chips are down. They deserve it. It's a shame that these young men have to be like cheerleaders to get the student body to cheer loud. I recall when you couldn't hear each other talk and when the opponent couldn't hear their offense. For in so many ways you become that twelfth man when you cheer with the cheerleaders and make all that noise for that team, your team, down there on the field. So in turn you become even closer to your team and not just because you stand on the sidelines to feel you're part of the team but because you are the team. The more you get into the game by yelling, getting enthusiastic, getting excited, the more you are helping your team. Like Nike says, "Let's just do it!"

The Forgotten Art of Coloring

By JOEY CRAWFORD
Assistant Accent Editor

Red, yellow, black, green, purple, silver, selenium, sky blue, magenta — enough colors to make even the most prominent psychedelic fans’ heads spin. Sun yellow, fuschia, periwinkle, azure, mauve — these are the colors of youth. Sea green, cayenne, blue-green, green blue, violet. These colors, as well as a plethora of other exotic ones, make their home in the Crayola box of 64, equipped with its own sharpeners. Burgundy, midnight blue, copper, pimento — they represent the sights, the smells, and, yes, even the tastes of adolescence.

The forgotten art of coloring is a crucial part of every child’s life. For some, coloring offers the first chance to explore their imagination in a concrete fashion. Sadly, though, coloring is an art that is left behind when a child journeys into adulthood. But the memories instilled by this favorite pastime will endure for eternity.

Who can forget the first time their parents brought them home that big box of 64 Crayola crayons? Children distinctively remember the first time they opened that yellow and blue box of Crayolas. It is a memorable experience in any child’s life. It almost becomes an archtype. The smell of wax sears through their tiny nostrils as what seems to be a thousand different colors dance in their head. It is a beautiful sight: 64 neatly sharpened crayons standing in line like tiny soldiers waiting to explode with a child’s creative energy. Children throw themselves onto the living room floor and become completely entranced by the flurry of colors. Sesame Street or some other popular show might be on the television, but nothing can tear them away from their Crayolas and their coloring books.

It takes a great deal of time to master the skill of coloring. Color schemes and staying within the lines are foreign concepts at first, but eventually children learn proper coloring etiquette.

Children color with raw and primitive fury. Their tiny tongues twirl and swirl with concentration. Coloring becomes a pseudo birth ritual; the formerly plain black and white cartoons of the coloring books come to life and seem to almost leap off the page with the addition of color. The hobby becomes like a drug; they just can not color enough.

There comes a time when coloring books no longer seem to quench their childish desires. They need more. They can not take everyone yelling at them to stay within the lines. Eventually, children journey beyond the lines. They begin to draw pictures on blank sheets of paper with their Crayolas. Plain paper gives children the freedom to create any image they desire. They create magnificent scenes of fantasy worlds. They see their hopes and dreams come alive on the paper. They seek out the walls of their homes and schools to become their next great master piece.

Unfortunately, often times this is where young children’s creative journeys end. They are reprimanded by adult figures for coloring outside of normal lines. This abruptly ends their journey, although they will be haunted by their dreams of coloring throughout their entire life. When they become older, they will catch themselves writing and drawing throughout their entire life. When they become older, they will catch themselves writing and drawing throughout their entire life. When they become older, they will catch themselves writing and drawing throughout their entire life. When they become older, they will catch themselves writing and drawing throughout their entire life.

Coloring is a beautiful thing. The hobby is a tremendous source of happiness and relaxation. The novelty of seeing an ordinary black and white drawing become animated with color rarely wears thin. This novelty allows a person to feel like a kid again. It allows a person to become in tune with their creative side that may have been lost during the transformation to adulthood. On a more serious note, while coloring is easy to become oblivious to the horrors of the adult world and return to innocence. The adventures of coloring also offers a fine road map to the journey of life: sometimes it is all right to cross the lines. Strawberry, silver, gold, orange, prussian blue, gray....

Lemieux's 500th goal downed Isles

Associated Press

Mario Lemieux's hat trick gave him 500 career NHL goals as the Pittsburgh Penguins rallied to beat the New York Islanders 7-5 Thursday night.

Lemieux became the 20th player to reach the 500 plateau at 17:12 of the third period on a low right circle wrist shot that beat a screened Tommy Soderstrom. It was also the 32nd three-goal game for Lemieux, who became the second-fastest player behind Wayne Gretzky in league history to reach the 500-goal mark.

Lemieux, in his 11th season in the league, reached the milestone in 665 games. His 500 goals tied him for 19th place on the career list with Lanny McDonald.

Tomaso Sandstrom added two goals and Ron Francis and Jaromir Jagr also scored for Pittsburgh.

Zdeno Paffai had two goals for New York, while Alexander Semsky, Travis Green and Wendel Clark had one apiece.

With the score tied at 4-4, Sandstrom gave Pittsburgh the lead for good at 10:36. Lemieux won a draw in the left circle, pulled the puck to Sandstrom in the slot, Sandstrom's one-timer beat Soderstrom low to the glove side. The play took two seconds.

Jagr's game-winner came at 12:03 on a backhander from the low slot with the Penguins on a power play. Clark netted a rebound at 14:47 to make the score close, until Lemieux's historic goal.

The Penguins gained their first road win of the season in four games, while the Islanders lost for the sixth time in eight games.

Francis put the Penguins ahead 1-0 at 4:57 of the first. Jagr fired a slap shot from the left circle off the left post, and the rebound bounced right to Francis, who put the puck in the wide-open net.

Lemieux, who set out last Saturday to Los Angeles with back spasms, fired a 50-foot shot from the right point between Soderstrom's pads at 18:04 on a power play.

New York defenceman Mathieu Schneider, who suffered bruised ribs during Wednesday night's loss in Philadelphia, aggravated the injury, and sat out the last two periods.

Following Capasso’s goal, the Irish rode the Broncos into the ground, outshooting Western Michigan 15-5 in the half. Notre Dame made it 2-0 when Bill Lanza tallied his sixth goal of the season on a brilliant header off a hard cross from Bill Savarino. Lanza’s goal was his first since his return from a groin injury he suffered on September 15, and gives the senior 20 points in just 11 games this year.

The Irish continued their dominating play in the second half, and Konstantin Koloskov pushed the lead to 3-0 with his one-timer off a Ben Bocklage cross that beat outstretched Bronco goalie Kevin Kline at the 51:53 mark of the match. A Bronco own-goal off a fracas in front of the net closed out the scoring at 59:59, and the Irish goalkeeping tandem of Gerick Short and Pat Polking secured what has been in many ways a disappointing season. An away game against Big East rival Connecticut on Sunday will determine the future of this young team, who are struggling to make the Big East tournament. “This win is important for us,” said Capasso. “It gives us some momentum going into the game against Connecticut. The past couple of weeks, we haven’t had much to build on, and I think that changed tonight.”

“We played well tonight, and the goals that we scored showed some intensity and confidence,” commented Berticelli. “The game on Sunday against Connecticut is obviously an important game for us. If we’re going to get into the conference tournament, we have to win that game.”

Hershiser, Indians, avoid elimination

By BEN WALKER
Associated Press

CLEVELAND

This could be the start to the ultimate comeback.

Orel Hershiser and the Cleveland Indians, just one game away from losing the World Series, beat Greg Maddux and the Atlanta Braves 5-4 Thursday night, cutting their deficit to 3-2.

Albert Belle's two-run homer in the first inning — plus a brushback to Eddie Murray that led to a rare, bench-clearing incident in the Series — energized Cleveland early.

The Indians, who made a habit of coming back all year, went on to beat the best pitcher in baseball, sending the Series back to Atlanta. Maddux stopped Cleveland on two hits in the opener, but Hershiser outpitched the three-time Cy Young winner this time, allowing five hits and two runs in eight innings.

The Braves still have two more chances to win their first title since moving to Atlanta. Game 6 will be Saturday night, with Dennis Martinez starting for the Indians against Game 2 winner Tom Glavine.

Hershiser, who walked one and struck out six, is 8-1 lifetime in postseason, four wins coming this year.

Jim Thome, who singled in the go-ahead run in the sixth, hit a solo homer in the eighth for a 3-2 lead. Ryan Klesko homered for the third straight day — a two-run shot off Jose Mesa with two outs in the ninth. Mesa earned the save by striking out Mark Lemke ending the fourth one-run game of the Series.

Maddux set a major-league record this season by winning 18 straight decisions on the road.

Maddux, signed by the Braves last year to help bring them the championship they've chased without success, clearly was not as sharp from the start.

He walked the second batter of the game, Omar Vizquel, after walking no one in the opener. With two outs, Belle_homered into the Atlanta bullpen in right field for the second straight day.

That brought up Murray and on an 0-1 pitch, Maddux, known for having the best control in the majors, knocked him back with a high-and-tight fastball.

Murray took a couple of steps out toward Maddux and pointed at him as plate umpire Frank Pulli got between them. Both benches and bullpens then emptied, though no punches were thrown.

Such incidents hardly ever happen in the Series. There was a much-publicized incident involving Ducky Medwick of the St. Louis Cardinals and Detroit third baseman Marvin Owen in 1934, and Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees nearly got into a fight with Brooklyn pitcher Whit Wyatt in 1941.

Thome and Manny Ramirez, both struggling in the Series, put Cleveland ahead 4-2 with consecutive RBI singles with two outs in the sixth for a 4-2 lead.

Luis Polonia hit Hershiser's first pitch of the fourth for a rare home run, and the Braves tied it 2 at 2 with a run in the fifth, missing a big chance to score more.

Polonia's homer was his first since the Braves got him on Aug. 11 from the New York Yankees, who needed to make room for Darryl Strawberry.

Polonia, playing left field while Klesko was the DH, had hit two home runs this season for New York and 17 in his nine-year career.

Hershiser, usually a picture of calm, became a bit ruffled in the fifth.

Klesko led off with a single and Lemke followed with a slow bouncer to the left of the mound. Hershiser charged in to grab it, but rushed a throw that pulled shortstop Vizquel off second base, leaving both runners safe.

Charlie O'Brien sacrificed and Braves manager Bobby Cox made the first move from the dugout, pulling No. 9 hitter Rafael Belliard — 0-for-12 in the Series — and sending up pinch-hitter Dwight Smith.

Indians manager Mike Hargrove countered with an intentional walk, loading the bases for speedy leadoff man Marquis Grissom. On the first pitch, Grissom hit a two-bagger to the right of the mound that Hershiser tried to field with his bare hand but dropped.

Grissom was credited with a single, his 24th hit in the postseason, tying the single-season record set by Boston's Marty Barrett in 1946. It also gave Grissom a 12-game hitting streak in the postseason; the record is 17 by Hank Bauer of the Yankees in the 1956-58 World Series.

Bases loaded, one out, score tied 2-2 and Polonia up. Big trouble for the Indians. That is, until Hershiser used one of his favorite sinkers to induce the quiet Polonia to ground into his first double play since joining the Braves.

There's a funny thing about rivalries. No matter what the records are and who has the better talent on paper, the game always seems to go down to the wire. That should prove to be the case once again when the 1-3 Notre Dame hockey team takes on rival Boston College tonight at the Joyce Center.

"It will be a hard fought game where we will have to be at our best to win," said senior captain Brett Bruininks. "We will have to cut down on our mistakes and take advantage of theirs to come away with the victory.

At one time, the Eagle hockey team was a force to be reckoned with in the NCAA. However, in recent years, their play has fallen sharply, and the Boston College program is now just a shadow of its former self.

After finishing a dismal 11-22-2 last season, Boston College enters tonight's contest with an 0-2 mark. Head coach Jerry York returns for his second season at the helm after dominating the CCHA with Bowling Green for 15 years.

At the offensive end, Boston College is led by senior forwards Tim Harberts (40 points last season) and Don Chese (19 goals, 12 assists). Ryan Mittleman and Marty Reasoner also provide punch on the front of the Eagles. We must stress defense to beat them. If we can afford to have any breakdowns in the game," said senior defenseman Gary Gruber. "If we have good team work and get good goaldenoting, then our offense will take over and we'll win the game."

Gruber, who leads the Irish defense with one goal so far this year, will be joined by the talented core of Ben Nelsen, Jeremy Oue, Bryan Welch, Davide Dal Grande, and goaldenoter Matt Eisl. The unit was considered the strength of the team last season, so they will be expected to improve after giving up thirteen goals in the final two games against Alaska Fairbanks last weekend.

"To beat them, we will have to do a better job of controlling the puck in crucial situations," said Brian McCarthy. "On the other side, we will have to capitalize on their mistakes to avoid what happened in the last game."

On the other side of the coin, the Irish offense has been a pleasant surprise so far in the early stages of the season. After being held to just one goal in the opener against Guelph, Notre Dame exploded for 15 goals in the three game series against the Nanooks.

"It is important that we play a complete, 60 minute game of hockey against them," said Bruininks. "After last weekend, we know that we cannot afford to give up any leadeners on either end of the ice."

Senior center Jamie Ling, one of 30 finalists for the 1996 Hobey Baker Memorial Award, has been stellar so far this season. After leading the Irish in scoring last season, he is back at it again, leading the team in goals (five) and overall points (seven).

In just the second game of his Irish career, freshman right wing Brian Urick tallied four goals in last Thursday's 7-2 victory over Fairbanks. Fellow freshmen Benoit Conoir and Aniket Dhuphale have also opened the eyes of Notre Dame fans and coaches realizing four and three points respectively in last weekend's series.

"My linemates did a great job of setting me up against them," said Urick. "I'm not surprised that I was able to score, but I know it wouldn't have happened without my teammates helping me out." The Irish squeaked out a tough 2-2 victory over the Eagles last season, as right wing Tim Harberts found the net with less than a minute left in the game. Irish fans should be treated to another hard fought, low scoring affair against an evenly matched opponent.

Isn't that how rivalry games always seem to go?"

The Saint Mary's Swimming Dual meet, to highlight busy weekend

By LAURIE KELLEHER
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary’s swimming and diving team begins their season this afternoon at The Notre Dame Relays meet at Rolfs Aquatic Center. This is a fun event for all teams participating. The Belles are competing against Notre Dame, Boston College, and Northern Michigan.

“This is going to be a nice start to the season,” said junior distance swimmer Shannon Kelleher. On Saturday they will have their first dual meet at DePauw. While sad to miss the Boston College football game, the girls are excited to have their first dual meet.

“We are looking forward to the meet Saturday,” sophomore Tasha Mitchener said. “It should be fun.”

Because Saturday will be the Belles’ first dual meet, the swimmers are uncertain about how they will do.

“We’ve been working hard,” said Kelleher. “We’ve been training harder and have increased yardage and weights so we are broken down. We think we will make a good showing on Saturday.”

Leading the Belles this Friday and Saturday are captains Natalie Cheeseman and Jen Mitchell, who are seniors, and junior Shannon Kelleher. Other seniors include Jill Cooper, Jen Djysik, Katie Gibbs, Teressa Popp, and Katie Rose.

The juniors on this year’s team are diver Megan Mcllugh, Mary Ruschmeier, and Lisa Shreder. The sophomores are Sarah Gillen, Tasha Mitchener, Allison Smith, and Betsy Wright.

This year there was a big turnout of freshmen who include diver Anne Baughman, Alyssa Kenealy, Erin Laurell, diver Sara Levandusky, Cynthia Meyer, diver Katie Bryan, Lisa Schulte, and Tara Thomas.

The Notre Dame Relays begin at 4 o’clock p.m. at Rolfs Aquatic center.

Boston College College visits for invitational, dual meet

By BRIDGET CASEY
Sports Writer

Coming off a period of intense training and an impressive win against Western Ontario over Fall break, the Irish swimmers look forward to making their first splash into the Big East with a meet against Boston College this weekend. Before the football teams even take the field for pre-game warm-ups, Saturday morning’s meet against the Eagles will cap off a full weekend of competition for the Irish.

Friday afternoon the Irish swimmers aim to take over where they left off last weekend against a field of seven teams gathering for the annual Notre Dame Relays.

On the women’s side, the Irish finished first and second in nine of eleven events, sweeping two of them. In the 200 Individual Medley, the senior and junior sister combination of Jestyln and Alyssa Peterson led the field, followed by sophomore standout Lauren Relay and junior Liz Hite. The 200 Breaststroke showcased the solid depth of the team with sophomore Jenna Rozzini finishing first in a time of 2:15.50 followed by fellow Irish Megan Eckstein and Chrissy Holberg in second and third respectively.

Fellow captains Courtney South and Linda Gallo also notched wins in the 50 Freestyle, respectively, with South finishing in a time of 25.18 and Gallo leading the field by a full four seconds.

In their first meet, Irish freshmen Anne Iacobucci and Berca Roedersheimer were victorious with Iacobucci winning the 1,000 Freestyle (10:51.03) and Roedersheimer taking the 200 Breaststroke in 2:30.38.

The Irish men were equally impressive against Western Ontario winning all but two events. Senior Dave Dobrey set the pace for the team winning the 100 and 200 Freestyle and anchoring the 400 Medley Relay team in a first place finish, combining with fellow senior Rob Flynn, junior Matt Rose and freshman Jeff Page for the win.

Irish freshman Scott Zumbach led the talented underclassmen with wins in the 200 Butterfly (2:00.16) and the 1,900 Freestyle sweep (9:51.86) with freshman Wes Richardson and senior co-captain Tim Szwedz."The freshmen looked really strong and will add to the depth of the already talented team," Irish co-captain George Lathrop said. "Such a strong team is a great way to start the season. We are definitely looking forward to swimming even faster this weekend and beating BC."

This weekend’s festivities begin with the Notre Dame Relays on Friday at 4 p.m. and will feature BC, Marquette, Northeastern Illinois, Wabash, Valparaiso, St. Mary’s and Northern Michigan.

Saturday’s dual meet against Boston College will begin at 10 a.m.

“We have been training really hard and are definitely looking forward to raceing,” senior co-captain Anna Cooper said. “From the freshmen especially, we are anticipating some big swims”.

Fellow captain Joy Michnowicz added, “We are looking forward to a good start to the season with a big win over BC and fast races from everyone.”
Big East Championships to provide top-ten competition

By B.J. HOOD
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame cross country teams travel to Manhattan for the Big East Championship on Saturday. The Irish are coming off the competitive Iowa State Classic.

Once again, the Irish runners will face some distance between Butler and three other teams still in the hunt for a Midwest bid to the tournament.

Last year Butler graduated eight seniors and brought in twelve freshman this year in order to compensate for the losses. This youth combined with the grade of the post-season makes the Bulldogs no pushover.

"We have a young team that anytime we play a top-five team, our kids won't have any trouble getting up for the ball," Blitz added.

In order to negate this factor, the Irish will need to accomplish the two things that have proved vital in their thirteen wins. "We have to have a strong start and we have to keep possession of the ball," Petrucci noted. "Butler's probably a little more technical, while Boston College is probably a little more athletic."

The Eagles have shaped their game around this athleticism during the year.

"We play a finesse game," Boston College coach Terez Biancardi said. "We try to pass a lot and play the ball on the ground."

Boston College's 8-6 record is a little deceiving considering they have lost majority of their games by one goal.

"We've had some good wins and disappointing losses," Biancardi added. "We have dominated, but couldn't put the ball in the net."

With a 4-3 record in the Big East, they will need to put the ball in the net if they hope to make the conference tournament next weekend. Leading the Eagles in this effort are captains Jessica and Allison David and Kara Nance.

"We have to have a successful game against Notre Dame to make the tournament," Biancardi said. "It's a great opportunity to play a soccer powerhouse."

A house of power is all the Irish have been their past two games, outshooting their opponents 87-3. Maintaining this momentum is crucial heading into tournament play.

"This is the time to start playing well," midfielder Julie Maund said. "We had a big team meeting and wanted to get this moving in the right direction."

"It's important for us to get on a roll," Petrucci added. "We've started to do that with our last two games. We've got the ball rolling and we just got to keep it rolling."

No pun intended. Or maybe it was.

Conference foes to visit Irish

The 14th-ranked Notre Dame volleyball team takes to the road again this weekend with hopes of remaining undefeated in the Big East and regaining the confidence and rhythm that was crushed by four exhausting losses over fall break.

The Irish, now 5-0 in the conference, rebounded well after dropping four straight matches to No. 22 Georgia Tech, No. 8 Texas, No. 12 Long Beach State, and No. 4 Stanford, with two conference victories last weekend over Syracuse and Pittsburgh.

However, the Fall break defeats did some damage to the team's morale and the main challenge for the Irish now lies in returning to the level of play that they were at before the break.

“We're still working on getting back into a rhythm," Irish head coach Debbie Brown said. "Fall break took a toll on us." The Irish have continued to look to play back to the level of the 8-1 team they were at before the break.

Conference foes to visit Irish this weekend with the hopes of remaining undefeated over the rest of the regular season. While the Big East provides competitive matches for the Irish, they are nowhere near what the Irish will see in post-season play.

We were enough to slow the Saint Francis team’s domineering behavior, the hooligans fell to the Belles 2-0. “Saint Francis was extremely aggressive toward us on Wednesday,” junior forward Lisa Nichols said. “They kept causing us and we were intentionally violent. We’ve never been aggressive toward us on Wednesday.”

Preparation was a factor, and the Belles allowed their fiery opponents to dominate the first 15 minutes of the half. Once the adrenaline started flowing, however, forwards senior Tiffany Raczyński and sophomore Debbie Diemer marched down the field with the ball. Receiving an assist from Diemer, Raczyński looked towards the goal and fired. And her target was hit.

Debbie) was a beautiful goal,” head coach Solomon Scholz said. “They kept talking us and bodies to get verbal toward us. They used free kicks. For the first time we were dominated, and we were rewar ded.”

The battle ended with one yellow card, an injury, no deaths, and a score of 2-0. Saturday the Belles travel to DePauw for what they hope to be a less physical game.

Senior Tiffany Raczyński scored a goal in Saint Mary’s 2-0 victory over Saint Francis on Thursday. Because Saint Francis was extremely aggressive toward us on Wednesday, the Belles fell in three close games, 15-8, 10-15, and 10-15. “The game was bad because it was our last, but the loss made it feel worse,” senior middle hitter Sara Stronczek said. Head coach Julie Schroeder-Biek attributed the team’s loss to inconsistent play and poor concentration. “These are the same problems that we have been battling all year,” said Schroeder-Biek. “One minute we will be playing well and the next we will be caught sleeping.”

Schroeder-Biek also believes the team’s loss to be connected to the team’s attentiveness. "The game was not crisp," said Schroeder-Biek. "They transitioned and attacked us. The game was bad because it was our last, but the loss made it feel worse." senior middle hitter Sara Stronczek said. Head coach Julie Schroeder-Biek attributed the team’s loss to inconsistent play and poor concentration. “These are the same problems that we have been battling all year,” said Schroeder-Biek. “One minute we will be playing well and the next we will be caught sleeping.”

The Belles go on the read this weekend for a matchup with Lake Forest.

Men's Soccer
Irish back to winning ways with 4-0 victory
By DYLAN BARMER
Sports Writer

For the first time in what must have felt like a long while, it was fun again. Fun to take the field. Fun to break through the cold fall night with the ball on your foot. Fun to celebrate the goals with your teammates. Fun to win.

The Notre Dame men's soccer team had all kinds of fun in defeating Western Michigan 4-0 last night at Alumni Field, revealing in every moment of their domination over the hapless Broncos.

"I just told the guys to go out and play well and have some fun," commented head coach Mike Berticelli after the win. Berticelli's team was obviously listening, as the Irish controlled every facet of the game, outshooting the Broncos 25-12 en route to a convincing win. The win snapped the Irish's three game losing streak, and brought their record to an even 8-8 on the year. The goal was the seventh of the year for the Irish midfield and paved the way for an Irish Writing.

Sophomore midfielder Scott Wells and the Notre Dame men's soccer squad shut out Western Michigan 4-0 Thursday evening.

Rivalries begin, conclude
Boston College, Butler, to visit in final weekend of regular season
By JOE VILLINSKI
Assistant Sports Editor

The final two regular season games at Alumni Field this weekend will mark both a beginning and an ending for the No. 5 women's soccer team.

Tonight's contest against Boston College will be the initial match between the two teams, while Sunday's game against Butler may be the last.

Along with Xavier, Butler was the other team from the Midwestern Collegiate Conference that remained on the schedule this year.

"This will be the last time we play them," coach Chris Petrucci said.

For the Irish, it might be tough to say goodbye to the Bulldogs based on their record against their former conference rival. Over the past four years, the Irish boast a perfect 4-0 record, allowing Butler only four goals in those games.

However, Butler shares similar sentiments regarding Notre Dame's departure from their schedule.

Poulin welcomes challenge of rebuilding
Boston College, Butler, to visit in final weekend of regular season

Dave Poulin, the new Irish head coach, faces a daunting task in improving on last season's losing record and turning the squad into a national powerhouse.

There is excitement in the air. A certain aura of hope and anticipation permeates the Notre Dame campus these days. It is an element that has been missing for several years, and although you cannot see it or touch it, there is no denying its existence. The cause of this excitement is the rejuvenated Irish hockey program, and the source is none other than new head coach Dave Poulin.

Poulin, plucked away from the NHL, ranks last April, faced the daunting task of turning around a program that, let's face it, needs a complete 180 degree revolution after past failures.

"The program has gone through some difficult stages," said Poulin. "We have a great deal of work to do to turn it around, but I truly envision this as an elite hockey program at some time in the future.

The Irish have struggled ever since their move into the CIHA in 1992 before bottoming out last year at 11-25-1. Former head coach Rick Schaefer along with his "my way or the highway" coaching philosophy were sent packing last March in an anticipated announcement.

Just over a month later, Poulin left the NHL for South Bend, and to say that he has been labeled the "savior" would be an accurate assessment.

"I am truly looking forward to the challenge that awaits," said Poulin. "I realize that it will be very frustrating at times, but I've acquired the ability to keep going no matter what stands in front of me.

If anyone is up to the challenge, it is Poulin. The thirty-six year old Notre Dame graduate has excelled at every level during the course of his career. While in college, the two time captain received numerous accolades and established several long-standing Irish records.

After signing with Philadelphia in 1983, Poulin spent 14 seasons in the NHL with the Flyers, the Boston Bruins, and the Washington Capitals. During his 14 year career, he amassed 530 points and played in two NHL All-Star games and three Stanley Cup finals.

"We're bringing back, clearly, the most famous, most successful hockey player. Dave's career has been nothing short of phenomenal," said former Notre Dame Athletic Director Dick Rosenthal at the press conference last April.

Poulin brings an aggressive, up tempo style of play to Notre Dame that may have been lacking the past few seasons under the guidance of Schaefer. With the players responding well to Poulin's new style so far, the coaching change appears to have been just what the doctor ordered.

"He is able to relate to his players, and the players are able to relate to him," said junior left wing Brian McCarthy. "He has stressed communication and the team concept, and that is something we may not have had a lot of last year.

"There is a great team here, with the same guys that last year, we were a team of individuals with a bunch of cliques. He has made us a team. He has taught us to work hard and to have confidence in our abilities.

It all starts at practice. Poulin has created a game-like atmosphere during daily workouts, and the players truly believe that they will benefit in the long run.

"We have upbeat, high tempo practices where we perform at the game level," senior defenseman Barry Grohlik explained. "He talks a lot about work ethic and practicing hard the whole time. The confidence he has in us gives us more confidence every day.
