Irish Eyes Prepare to Watch

The Americans have invaded...

By CAROLINE BLUM

They began to notice it early last week, first around the airport, then in downtown Dublin, Cork, Galway, and Blarney. Everywhere they looked, they would see them. "I can't believe all of the Americans around here lately," Galway pub owner Frank O'Sullivan said. "It's like an invasion."

Twenty-five thousand to 50,000 Americans are estimated to take part in the "invasion," by visiting Ireland not as an off-season vacation, but as a pre-game festivities for Notre Dame football Saturday, and it just won't be the same. Something is missing.

There are still plenty of pre-game festivities—that part of a football weekend is no different. Thanks to the Notre Dame Alumni Association, activities are scheduled to last throughout the weekend.

Friday commences with a game of flag football at the Royal Dublin Society Arena at 11 a.m., followed by the Notre Dame Marching Band parade at 1 p.m. At 3 p.m., the football team will practice at Croke Park, the site of Saturday's game. The practice is free and open to the public.

In the evening, an All Saints' Day Mass will precede a pep rally at 7 p.m. in the Simmonscourt Hall of the Royal Dublin Society.

All the activities are the same as usual, but the atmosphere is somehow different.

The atmosphere in Dublin is especially vibrant as the city is expecting up to 65,000 extra visitors this weekend because of the game and a European Bank Holiday, according to Marie Villa, an employee of the Dublin Tourism Bureau. On bank holiday weekends, many Europeans spend their free time in the city of Dublin because it is rather close, she said. "The Shamrock Classic is supposed to bring anywhere from 25,000 to 50,000 fans from the states," Villa said. And according to the Irish Independent, the game is supposed to generate nearly 15 million pounds—$25 million—for the Irish economy.

But something is still missing. Perhaps it's the lack of advertising. The only advertisements for the game which are clearly noticeable are concentrated in only a few parts of town—at the airport, at the tourism building, and the like. The advertising is all the same. It's a poster of Derrick俚

SMC begins ad push for new president

By MAUREEN HURLEY

The search is on.

A major advertising campaign is well underway for the search for the next president of Saint Mary's College, according to a Board of Trustees memo distributed to the College community.

Colleague President William Hickey, who is currently in his 10th year as president of the College, announced his resignation April. He will remain in the presidential role until a successor is found.

The responsibility for naming the 10th president of the College lies with the College Board of Trustees. The Board has appointed a Presidential Search Committee, led by former Board of Trustees Chair Sister Rachel Callahan, to oversee the search process.

To date, major advertising strategies have included placing advertisements in The Chronicle for Higher Education. In addition, over 100 letters soliciting nominations have been sent to all Catholic colleges, all women's colleges, and other selected institutions.

Calling for a candidate who "will inherit an institution which is strong intellectually and financially and prepared for a new era of growth," an advertisement for...
Free Speech Misunderstood

What is "free speech?" Ever since the University of Wisconsin administration permitted a recognized student group to hold a rally on campus, those two words have been uttered severally, Copy Editor at least in some not-so-well-meaning people at Notre Dame. But outside of Notre Dame, almost all of these have simply taken "free speech" to mean what the uninformed common opinion has defined it to mean, rather than digging deeper into the issue.

For example, Matthew McCoyd (Viewpoint, Oct. 30) writes that the University's action "are those of the author and not necessarily the Observer." Though we may not all agree with what (certain) organizations, have to say, he writes, "we must fight for their right to say it." McCoyd thus defines our right to free speech by referring to a famous quotation from Voltaire, and many people across the country would probably do the same. But is "free speech" in the United States really based on Voltaire's notion? Should we really fight to defend anyone's right to say whatever they want to in our country? For example, can we really allow a "right" to tell lies? Should we defend their "right" to slander my mother? Or should I defend their "right" to browbeat the youth of our nation that the Holocaust never happened?

Needless to say, to call this an obligation to fight for any such "right." The Constitution guarantees that none of us can be arrested for expressions even in print or in assembly. It does not by any means guarantee us the "right" to say we want, and then, in addition to that, the right to expect that no one will hinder us from saying it publicly or privately.

And just as the right to free speech does not guarantee that we may say whatever we want, it is even less the case that it allows us to say it wherever we want. At the Democratic National Convention, protestors were kept far away from the festivities. And this is perfectly acceptable since the Constitution has the right to use a particular location to exercise his or her right to "free speech." In conclusion, the "right to free speech" is irrelevant in the discussion of the administration's recent action since it is obligated under the Constitution to endorse anyone's rally, whether it be proposed by the News or any university. The University can legally refuse to allow any group to demonstrate on campus, and that group's principles are incompatible with those of a Catholic university.

Nor does our right to free speech give us license to speak out wherever we want. To the University of Wisconsin, a particular demonstration does not violate the Constitutional right to free speech, since campus protests involve the use of University property, and the University has no obligation to allow anyone to rally on its property. In the end, regardless of how one feels about the issues at hand, it is only fair for everyone to recognize that no one's Constitutional right to free speech has been violated if the administration's recent action is not. If one goes deeper than the common opinion of what "free speech" really means, one will see that the high and lofty ideal as "free speech" is at stake here, and so "free speech" need not even be discussed.

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Free Americans participate in most celebrated democracy

WASHINGTON

The election is almost upon the country and about all that remains is to try to beat the people into voting on Nov. 12. The experts say that nearly 55 percent of eligible Americans will participate, and they have some theories about what says about the world's most celebrated — and maybe its most democratic — country. A century ago, 80 percent of eligible Americans routinely voted. But in the last 25 years, turnout has gone down. From 64 percent in 1960, when John F. Kennedy was elected, it slid to just barely above 50 percent in 1988 before sagging up to 55.2 percent four years later. But the 1992 race had the incumbent president on the ropes, an attractive challenger and a feisty third-party insurgent. This time around, none of these elements apply and it seems like a lot of people were worried that the participants will barely outnumber nonvoters. If people in only nine states got to elect the president next Tuesday, one of us might have 41 would be extraordinary. But that's what will happen, in effect. The number who will vote is roughly equal to all the voters in the nine largest states: California, New York, Texas, Florida, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan and New Jersey.

The good news is that question that will turn out will be, perhaps, a huge plus. Says, who has been involved in voter turnout for 20 years. He directs the nonpartisan Committee for the Study of the American Electorate.

Jenny Jones on stand at murder trial

West Point cadet charged with rape

WEST POINT, N.Y.

A West Point cadet has been charged with raping a female cadet, the first such accusation since the Military Academy began enrolling women 20 years ago. James F. Engelbrecht, of Conroe, Texas, was charged Wednesday with raping a female cadet at a house in Stockton, N.J., on Memorial Day weekend. He also was charged with committing an indecent act in the presence of another person, said Capt. John Haupt. Few other details were released Wednesday. Lawyers for Engelbrecht told The Times that today's edition that the house is owned by another cadet and that someone was sleeping in the room when the alleged attack took place. A police officer running toward three youths, guns drawn, Chris Aufang, who has about a year to serve on a five-degree murder for the March 9, 1995, shotgun slaying of Jonathan Schmitz, was charged with first-degree murder for the March 9, 1995, shotgun slaying of Scott Anodore. That is why he was supposed to tape a "Jenny Jones Show." But they believe Jones's testimony will bolster their claim that Schmitz was first misled and then humiliated on the show. That, coupled with his existing physical and psychological problems, left Schmitz unable to form the intent to kill Anodore. They say, "We know from her own producers that she wrote the whole script in her own hand. That makes her previous testimony that she has a signed contract and goes on with it even more unbelievable."

Inmates help catch car theft suspect

NEWPORT NEWS, Va.

Two criminals gave a police a lesson on how to catch a thief, chasing down a car thief suspect near an elementary school where they had been cutting grass. "It happened so fast, you really don't know what to think," said Daniel Abaz. The suspect was caught Dec. 16, 1995, with a five-year drug sentence. "I was concerned about the elementary school kids," Brian Hockaday, who has two months to serve a probation violation, said of Tuesday's chase near Greenwood Elementary School on Wednesday. Officer Robert Engelbrecht, their supervisor, Olin Taylor, 22, cornered the 16-year-old suspect in the woods near the high school, where two children were playing. The suspect, who was on probation, was caught after the machine gun, which was supposed to be used to support the rape charge and recommended dropping it, the Times said. The officer also recommended that the Army handle the second charge administratively, but Army officials overruled him and referred charges against Engelbrecht, the Times said.

Car stereo thefts on rise at Notre Dame

By HEATHER COCKS
Observer News Editor

A multitude of thefts have recently been reported by Notre Dame students whose locked vehicles have been broken into and robbed of car stereos, according to Chuck Hurley, assistant director of Notre Dame Security. In the past six weeks, several cars parked in the D2 south lot and the CI lot, south of the Joyce Center, have been vandalized and stripped of CD players and other audio equipment.

"The culprits have avoided all cars with visible security systems," stated Hurley. "They break the windows of locked automobiles and take whatever they can find."

Hurley advises students to keep a close watch on the lots, taking note of any remotely suspicious persons or activities. He also urges any concerned parties to call security immediately from the call-boxes located throughout the lots.

Students: 'Make OMSA an advocate'

By KELLY BROOKS
Observer News Editor

The Office of Multicultural Student Affairs (OMSA) needs to become an advocate for students of color, according to minority student leaders at Thursday's Coalition Council meeting.

Student leaders engaged OMSA in a discussion on what they felt the office should be doing for them. OMSA also updated students on the progress of hiring an assistant director.

Jose Gonzalez, assistant director of Multicultural Student Affairs, opened a roundtable discussion by asking "What do you need from OMSA to do your job better?"

Student responses varied, but they agreed that OMSA should become an advocate for students of color. Cristiano Liley, president of African American Student Alliance, felt that the office does its job as well as possible, but that students should still be cautious about leaving their belongings unattended, even for a short time.

Anna Allen, suggested that OMSA could become more pro-active with a published set of definitive goals. People would know what OMSA is working for and OMSA would have something to work towards.

"OMSA's goals need to be concrete in the next year for X, Y, and Z. It should not just be we want this, but this is how we plan to do it," said Liley. Also, students expressed concern over progress in the hiring of another assistant director for OMSA.

The assistant director position that was left vacant last spring when Carrie Few left still has not been filled.

At this time we are still receiving resumes," explained Iris Outlaw, director of Multicultural Student Affairs.

"Students who are interested in joining the interview team are encouraged to stop by the office and sign-up."

The interview that went on this summer involved both students and administrators.

Outlaw stressed the need for students to be part of the interview process because the students are the ones who ultimately have to work with the assistant director.

Outlaw is looking for someone who is a good fit for the office and with whom students will feel comfortable working. In order to keep the multicultural balance of the office, she is also trying to hire an Asian or Native American candidate.

Outlaw hopes to interview candidates on November through December and to have an assistant director in place by the start of the spring semester.

Club officers also announced upcoming events:

- La Alianza is celebrating Dia de los Muertos this Saturday starting at 7:15 p.m. at the Grotto and will conclude it with an 8 p.m. mass at the Keenan-Standard Chapel.
- The Asian American Association is sponsoring a dance class at the CSC on Sunday from 1-3 p.m.
- The InterFace topic for Wednesday Nov. 5 is Internalized Dating.
- The first annual Asian Alumna culture and fashion show will be Saturday Nov. 9.

Play weaves Black, U.S. history

The first national tour of "Having Our Say," a play chronicling the lives and times of two African-American sisters, will make a stop at the O'Laughlin Auditorium at Saint Mary's College tonight.

Nominated for a 1995 Tony Award for Best Play, "Having Our Say" tells the story of Besse and Sadie Delany, who both lived well past the age of 100. The drama presents a family history containing the sisters' memories of significant events and personalities of the past century. The play also covers events from the over-looked perspective of the black middle class.

Presented in the Delany's own words, this production covers much history. The two sisters were born before the Jim Crow laws were enacted in the American South and were active participants in the civil rights movements of the 1960s. After moving to New York City during World War I, their social circle came to include such prominent figures such as W. E. B. DuBois and Paul Robeson. Later, the two "maidens," as they referred to themselves, counted among their friends Eleanor Roosevelt and Martin Luther King, Jr.

According to critics, all the events and acquaintances are recalled in vivid detail and with straightforward insight. The New York Post calls the production "a window on a world full of love, pain and a wonderful deal of hope."

Vivian Camby of The New York Times calls it "200 years of black American life, which is also white American life."

Adapted from the best-selling book, "Having Our Say: The Delaney Sisters' First 100 Years," the production spent eight months on Broadway, where it garnered unanimous praise before closing its last run in December.

"The Delaney Sisters" star in the two-character drama, which is written and directed by Emily Kimbrough. Ticket prices for "Having Our Say" are $18 for adults, $16 for senior citizens, $10 for members of the Saint Mary's Notre Dame community, and $5 for students.

The play is part of the John M. Duggan series.

Mayes, a member of the Great Britain packers, in Heisman Trophy-like pose. Or perhaps what is important is the expected attitude toward the game on the part of Dubliners. “We’re not that crazy about football,” said David Owen, a cab driver in Dublin. “But the football! We’re crazy about that, not American football. Our football is your soccer.”

“Not many Irish follow American football,” he added. But there is still definite interest in the game. All around Dublin, blue and gold can be seen. But it is almost exclusively worn by people who are not students. They are parents and graduates and lifelong fans, but very few are students.

Yes, there are fans here to support the team — managers, cheerleaders, and the band. But the greater number of the fans are obviously not students. Perhaps that is what’s missing.

That’s a theory held by Notre Dame Club of Ireland Vice-President Raymond McElroy. According to McElroy, the Notre Dame Club of Ireland wanted to provide affordable student travel packages so that the student population could attend the game, but the plan was “sided-lined” by big business. The University “basically sold out,” according to Katie McBride, a 1992 graduate of Notre Dame and a member of the Notre Dame Club of Ireland. The University relinquished all rights for about $1 million, McBride explained.

And from that point on, it was “hands-off.” The Notre Dame Club of Ireland hoped to put a travel package together at extreme reduced rates, but permission to do so was refused at a meeting held at Jury’s Hotel of Dublin within the last year. Present at the meeting was Tom O’Kane — owner of Ireland’s luxuriant Adare Manor, promoter of the Shamrock Classic, and controller of all rights to the game — and Michael Wadsworth, Notre Dame’s athletic director. Even Irish coach Lou Holtz was present, according to McBride.

But all that came from the meeting was an absolute “no” for the Notre Dame Club.

And so, as of Thursday evening, there were still plenty of tickets available for the game, selling at either eight, 40, or 50 pounds, according to Villa of the Dublin Tourism Bureau. Cork Park, which seats 70,000, will not sell out.

There will be seats which could have been filled by Notre Dame students, who will instead watch the tape-delayed game in South Bend at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

They may be missing the game in Ireland, but at least they will not be missing the game altogether.

SCM promotes local schools
By SHANNON RYAN
News Writer

In an effort to reach out to educators in the surrounding area, Saint Mary’s College has recently initiated programs specifically designed to enhance the education in local schools. Saint Mary’s varying departments have attempted to promote the value of education this semester through a technology initiative workshop and a session concerning women in mathematics and sciences.

In support of President Clinton’s Educational Technology Initiative, Saint Mary’s welcomed local school teachers to a workshop as part of the “National 21st Century Teachers Project.” This workshop was designed to promote technology and the knowledge of it among current educators, many of whom have not had the opportunity to develop their skills with modern computers.

Saint Mary’s is also encouraging women to enter into the field of mathematics and sciences through the sessions entitled, “Women in Mathematics: A New Release.”

The inspiration behind this session was set in motion six years ago, when Sister Miriam Cooney of the Saint Mary’s department of mathematics welcomed 20 teachers from the South Bend region to a seminar entitled, “Mathematics, Science, and Gender.” These twenty teachers would meet once a week to study literature and to research the role of women in math and science. Each teacher then wrote the biography of at least one female who contributed to those fields which young women are often discouraged from entering.

These stories have now been republished and compiled into a volume entitled, “Celebrating Women in Mathematics and Science,” edited by Sister Cooney. Sister Cooney and the twenty authors will discuss their writings today at the century Center and Marriott in South Bend. Afterwards, guests of the session are welcome to come to a book signing reception.

An influx of Notre Dame fans began arriving at Blarney Castle this week, as crowds of Americans sporting various forms of Fighting Irish apparel sought their chance to kiss the Blarney Stone.

Everyone seems excited to see a two-time Heisman Trophy winner Frank O’Linn said. “We feel honored to perform in our native land on Saturday.”

SAO PAULO, Brazil

A Brazilian jetliner crashed into a residential neighborhood in Sao Paulo shortly after takeoff today, igniting flames that engulfed apartments, homes and cars. A civil defense official said all 95 people on board were killed.

Three other bodies were pulled from the rubble, and the death toll was expected to rise as firefighters searched homes and apartments struck and set on fire by the crash.

At least three Americans were on the plane, the U.S. consulate in Sao Paulo said.

Cathink bank identified one as David Francis Tobolla, a financial director at the company. His hometown was not released.

A second was identified as David Andrews, 49, of San Jose, Calif., a vice president of Rehring Diagnostics Inc. - Americas, a subsidiary of the Hoechst pharmaceutical group.

There was no word on the nationalities of others on the plane. One resident of the middle-class neighborhood where the plane crashed said he saw "a river of fuel on fire flowing down the street."

Dozens of bodies lay covered with black plastic on the sidewalk, while firemen sprayed water on smoking rubble. Pieces of the plane were strewn over the neighborhood, and parked cars were burning.

Thirteen people were treated for shock, burns and minor injuries at the nearby Jabaquara Municipal Hospital. Seven were hospitalized, one in serious condition with burns.

Police and firefighters used plywood planks as makeshift stretchers to carry bodies to black mortar trucks.

Roberto Paracheiro de Toledo, head of the police's Special Operations Group, said 96 bodies were found.

"They all were mutilated and carbonized," he said, asking families to bring dental records to help identify the victims.

"There is no sense in just coming (to the morgue), because they won't recognize anyone."

The vice president of the regional airline that owned the plane, TAM, said the plane's two flight data recorders were recovered from the wreckage.

They were sent to Air Force for investigation, Luis Eduardo Falco said.

"When we arrived, we saw cars being burned, houses demolished, and parts of bodies amid the wreckage," said Col. Leonardo Correa, chief of the Sao Paulo fire department. "It was like a scene from Dante's Inferno."

Three children killed in air raids

By ANDREW SELSKY
Associated Press Writer

KABUL, Afghanistan

The day began with an air raid that killed three children and ended with artillery duels just north of the capital, caught in an escalating battle to outdo the strict Islamic leadership.

At 7 a.m. Thursday, a plane flew in low and dropped two bombs on the northwestern edge of Kabul, destroying two mud-brick homes and her 6-year-old brother died in one house, a 10-year-old boy in the other.

Relatives of the dead siblings collapsed into the arms of the children's grandmother at a neighboring home where the two bodies were laid out on mats.

"God! Why did this happen? What did we do wrong?" women cried.

Fear briefly interrupted the wailing when a plane flew low overhead.

The siblings' parents were among seven people wounded in the air attack. More bombs landed in a field and near Kabul Airport, the likely target of all the explosives.

A coalition force trying to retake the capital from the Taliban Islamic militia has been bombing Kabul on and off since Saturday, but Thursday's raids were the first to kill anyone. Taliban shells and bombs have killed civilians on the other side of the front line.

The Taliban controls roughly two-thirds of the country, but its campaign has stalled since the group took Kabul last month. Ousted government military chief Ahmed Shah Masood, powerful northern warlord Rashid Dostum and the leaders of two smaller factions have banded together to fight the Taliban.

The three children who died Thursday were buried almost immediately in accordance with Islamic custom. Some 200 men gathered in a field about a block away to dig three graves in dry, hard-packed earth and pray.

As the mullah, or cleric, recited from the Koran, artillery explosions could be heard from the front line, 10 miles north.

The allied forces have been skirmishing with Taliban soldiers along the front line for the past week, with neither side gaining much ground.

Late Thursday, Taliban soldiers fired howitzers along the road heading north from Kabul, sending up geysers of smoke and dirt some four miles away.

Liberian warlord evades death

MONROVIA, Liberia

Liberia's chief warlord escaped an assassination attempt Thursday but gunfire killed his bodyguard and at least two others in an attack that raised fears of renewed warfare in the capital.

Charles Taylor, the target of the assault, warned of "the probability of things getting out of hand" as a result of the incident.

Taylor, speaking on his private radio station KISS-FM, said he had ordered his forces to "remain calm," and there were no immediate reports of fighting in the city.

Officials announced a 7 p.m.-6 a.m. curfew, replacing a 10 p.m.-6 a.m. one that had been in force more than a year.

Taylor is one of six warlords jockeying for control of this West Africa nation, which was founded by freed American slaves in 1847.

A civil war that started in 1989 has killed more than 150,000 people.

Guerrillas opened fire on Taylor's entourage as it arrived for a meeting of Liberia's interim government, said Nigerian Gen. Victor Malu.

He is head of the 8,500-strong multinational African peacekeeping army deployed in Liberia.

The assailants had been in a taxi that followed the motorcade past guards and into the compound, Malu said.

E. coli bacteria infect juice

By AUDRA ANG

Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE

A popular brand of fruit juices was pulled off store shelves in seven Western states and Canada after health officials linked the product to an outbreak of E. coli bacterial poisoning.

As of Wednesday, health officials in Washington state had confirmed 13 cases of E. coli infection and at least 10 of them involved Odwalla fruit juices.

At least eight possible cases were also being investigated. Most of the victims have been children. One boy remained hospitalized; the other victims were not seriously ill.

Health officials used dietary histories taken on the victims, coupled with genetic "fingerprinting" of the bacteria, to trace the outbreak to a batch of unpasteurized apple juice that Odwalla uses as an ingredient in many of its fresh mixed-fruit beverages.

"The public is admonished not to drink Odwalla fruit juice containing apple juice," Dr. Alonzo Plough, director of the Seattle-King County Department of Public Health, told a news conference.

Odwalla Inc., based in Half Moon Bay, Calif., Wednesday issued a nationwide recall of all its products containing apple juice. Thirteen types of juice were being taken off the shelves, Odwalla said.

While they all contain some apple juice, most of them, like Blackberry Fruitshake and Mango Tango, do not have "apple" in their names. "Our first concern is for the health and safety of those affected," Stephen Williamson, Odwalla chief executive officer, said in a statement.

Company spokesman Sydney Fisher could not say what volume of juice was involved in the recall or how much it will cost the company. The stock of Odwalla plunged 29 percent this morning on word of the recall, falling $5.37 1/2 to $13 a share on the Nasdaq Stock Market.

Odwalla sells its products in select markets in Washington, California, Oregon, Colorado, New Mexico, Nevada, Texas and British Columbia. The company markets its drinks as natural.

Ten of the 13 confirmed victims drank Odwalla beverages containing unpasteurized apple juice, Plough said. Nine of the victims are children ages 10 and younger. All drank the juice between Oct. 11 and 21.

Plough and officials from the state Department of Health said they did not immediately know if the other three victims also drank Odwalla juice.

Officials were alerted to the E. coli outbreak when five infected children were admitted to the hospital.

E. coli killed three children and sickened hundreds in western Washington in early 1993. That outbreak was traced to contaminated hamburgers served at Jack-in-the-box restaurants. The potentially tainted Odwalla flavors are: Apple Juice, Blackberry Fruitshake, Mango Tango, Super Protein, Strawberry Banana Smoothie, Raspberry Smoothie, C-Monster, Mo'Betta, Femme Vitale, Strawberry C-Monster, Superfood, Serious Ginseng and Deep in Peach.

Odwalla sells 12 other products, from strawberry lemonade to the energy cocktail, that do not contain apple juice and are not affected by the recall.

When Wallace Black found out he had prostate cancer, he thought it was the end of a normal life.

Doctors told the 55-year-old Federal Express worker they would remove his prostate, and he'd probably end up impotent and with little or no control of his bladder.

Instead, he chose to have the cancer treated by injecting it with radioactive pellets, a procedure that has slowly gained favor since the first such operation in the 1970s.

Skeptics say there's not enough evidence to prove that the procedure, called "brachytherapy" or "seed implantation," is as effective as surgery for prostate cancer.

"I was so excited that there might be another route, another way," said Black, 55, of Ponte Springs, Ga. "Sometimes you tell a patient who's going to be imprinted, and you'll lose your life ... you look at every avenue there is," he said.

Cancer of the prostate, the walnut-sized gland at the bottom of the bladder, is the second leading cancer killer among men, after lung cancer. An estimated 317,000 men in the United States will be diagnosed with it this year; an estimated 41,000 will die of it in 1996.

Surgery, the most common treatment, removes the gland in seed implantation, 60 rice-sized pellets packed with radiation are injected into the prostate. Both options are possible only if the cancer is caught early enough and has not spread.

The seeds later become dormant. The injections take about an hour and most patients can return to work in a few hours later.

Frustrated that his own doctor would not tell him about it, Ed Lerner researched seed implantation himself.

"I'd had to hurry me into the hospital to get the cancer out," the semiretired computer consultant said. "I wasn't sure I wanted to be in so much of a hurry."

Lerner turned to Atlanta urologist Dr. Steven Morganstern, who has performed 500 seed implantations over the past six years. He has patients who are cured and others who were not.

Strike drives GM profits down by millions daily

DETROIT

With General Motors losing millions of dollars a day because of strikes at two key plants in the United States, union negotiators met around the clock Thursday in hopes of reaching a settlement.

A United Auto Workers source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said negotiations were considered even closer to a deal.

GM spokesman Chuck Liciard said it was more cautious. "I don't think it's in anybody's best interests to characterize the talks now," Liciardi said. "Negotiators talked throughout the night and those discussions are continuing.

A total of 9,809 workers at the three plants remained off the job because of strikes at GM's truck assembly plant in Joliet, Ill., and two plants in the Detroit area Thursday night because of a shortage of parts from Indianapolis.

Those layoffs were in addition to 19,958 GM workers idled from plants affected in Michigan, Missouri, Ohio and New York because of parts shortages that resulted from the Canadian Auto Workers strike.

The company said single shifts returned to assembly plants in Kansas City, Kan., and Buick City in Flint, Mich. Only the Lordstown, Ohio, assembly plant was still idle because of a strike in New Mexico.

A GM source said three more right-truck assembly plants that depend on parts from Indianapolis were tentatively scheduled to close Friday.

Morraine, Ohio, Linden, N.J., and Shreveport, La. Together, they employ about 9,000 UAW workers, though some may be kept on for maintenance and training.

The two strikes are hurting GM where it is most costly: its highly profitable production of pickup trucks and sport utility vehicles.

GM is bleeding about $5 million a day in profits from lost production.
Gore: GOP ‘following siren song of right wing,’ straying from roots

By JEANNINE AVERSA
Associated Press Writer

Republicans have strayed far from the roots of the party of Abraham Lincoln, Vice President Al Gore asserted Thursday in pressing Texas voters to help re-elect President Clinton and return Democrats to control of Congress.

Gore strongly criticized former Senate GOP leader Bob Dole, the presidential challenger, and House Speaker Newt Gingrich in his remarks.

He has been emphasizing the importance of the Democrats place on relaxing the House and Senate, which they lost to the Republicans in 1994.

He said of Dole and Gingrich: “They are following the siren song of the right wing that has now captured control of the modern Republican Party in 1996.

“This is not the party on the other side that Abraham Lincoln founded. They have strayed far, far from their roots.”

Perot pops up on the road and TV

DALLAS

Billionaire Ross Perot has money to burn in the waning days of the presidential campaign and he’s using it to blitz TV viewers and pop up at rallies around the country.

Perot saved about 75 percent of his more than $29 million in government financing to use during the election home stretch.

Television viewers are being inundated with 15-second spots from Perot, airing nationally during prime-time sporting events and on various cable shows.

Perot, who for several months made only weekly public appearances, is attending campaign rallies daily now, hitting hard on President Clinton’s ethics and the need for an outsider to reform the political system.

He bad appearances planned Thursday in New York and Illinois.

“We’re right on track now with our paid programing, advertising and appearances,” said campaign coordinator Russ Verney, attributing Perot’s recent uptick from single digits in national polls to his stepped-up campaign effort.

A Los Angeles Times poll earlier this week put Perot’s support at 12 percent nationally, and a CNN-USA Today-Gallup tracking survey had him at 11 percent.

Dole: ‘I want to shake up this race’

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI

Bob Dole, looking for a dramatic climax for his uphill presidential campaign, announced a 96-hour, virtually nonstop final push through Tuesday. "I want to shake up this race," he declared.

Trailing badly in the polls and with five days to go, Dole also appealed Thursday to Ross Perot, who's been his chief strategist. "It's not your physical condition," said Perot. "It's not your political condition. It's not your brain," said Mrs. Addy, who will go to the polls with her 19-year-old great-nephew next week.

The retired schoolteacher and principal, who says she's going to the polls for only the national election since women were allowed to vote in 1920, was awarded South Carolina's "Golden Voter" award by the state Senate because of her voting record.

She gets around on her walk, or volunteers at the local nursing home taking care of "old people," she said with a laugh.

Mrs. Addy definitely has developed her own perspective on the history of politics. "Franklin Roosevelt? I 'hated him," she says. "Prohibition? The greatest thing that ever happened to America," said the lifelong member of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

The 104-year-old woman can freshen up. "I will not rest until we have done everything enough to make sure we are your hospital of choice," said the four-times-overnight stop in Columbus, Ohio, on Thursday night, the only hotel pauses before Election Day would be 90-minute stops every 24 hours so Dole and his entourage could fresen up.

Dole will both fly and take long bus trips as part of the coast-to-coast plan, aides said. "Where's the map?" Dole asked aboard his campaign plane, indicating he was ready to go.

The race has been frozen for months, with Clinton holding a double-digit lead in the polls. Dole compared the final effort in his wartime fighting in Europe.

"The last time I fought, it was the clock for my country was in double-digit lead in the polls..." he declared.

The trip is to take him to 15 states to roughly this order: Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, Nebraska, South Dakota, Colorado, Nevada, California, New Mexico and finally to the big three to finish up. "Come on, Jimmy," Dole declared.

"I will not rest until we have made my case to every worker, every family, and every voter," Dole declared.

"I am determined to make every hour of this decisive election count," the Republican challenger said he would take his campaign to the factories of Ohio and Michigan, through the bluegrass of Kentucky, to the towns and neighborhoods of the Midwest, across the Rocky Mountains, through the cities and streets of California.

"We actin' like we're up there in Tampa," Earlier, Dole shared a stage with former President Bush at a rally in a refurbished theater in Tampa.

Absentees may hold key to House

By Jim DRINKARD

WASHINGTON

The growing use of absentee ballots in states like California is likely to make educating the electorate about the candidates of importance in Western states, is likely to complicate the reporting of election returns Tuesday night and could delay for days the determination of who controls the House of Representatives.

"You can have this overhang of hundreds of thousands of votes that haven't been counted," said Mark DiCamillo, vice president of California's Field Poll. "I would expect that in any race where it's close, those votes will have a big impact."

Republicans currently hold only a narrow lead in both the House and Senate. Political analysts say there is a 50-50 chance that Democrats will pick up the 18 seats they would need to retake away control of the House, the chances for a Senate takeover are rates somewhat lower.

If the outcome hinges on a half-dozen or fewer seats — a distinct possibility — close races on the West Coast, where the polls closest, could be the determining factors.

In Oregon, as many as a third of the state's 1.9 million voters are expected to vote absentee ballots in Tuesday's general election. In Washington, the number of absentee ballots is growing.

In Oregon, ballots must be received by election officials by 8 p.m. on Election Day, Nov. 5. In Washington, ballots only need be postmarked by that day, meaning hundreds of thousands of valid ballots may not be counted until election officials actually open them up a day or two later.

“Opinion” is of course the worst word in the English language. begin reforming America where America began—on the campus of the University of Notre Dame. It has been argued in these very pages that there has been a right of self determination in the United States continues to lag behind nations like Brunei in standard of living because of our outdated notions of individual responsibility and its ties to concepts like “ownership” and “property.”

The notion of “rights” has long been exposed as a parochial term employed by dead white males to engage in cultural imperialism, enforcing their beliefs on slaves from Central America clear across to China. It evokes the same maniacal individuality that is responsible for, among other things, the Federal Budget Deficit. If we are to unite as the Global Village we now know we are and raise our children in that Village, “rights” as a concept must be frankly and explicitly abandoned.

The assumption that everyone is a “him” is part of the insidious sexism for which the subject of any statement is male — denying women the affirmation they deserve as legitimate members of our society. Dear Editor:

This Saturday, Lyons Hall is sponsoring the Fourth Annual Mara Fox Scholarship Run. For the underclassmen at Mara High, it is a source of great pride and support to honor Mara Fox, who was hit and killed in an alcohol-influenced auto accident. Who, why, and how are the questions of the underclassmen, Mara Fox was a freshman, set to graduate in the class of 1997, who was standing on top of a soap box, I am sorry. But the loss of just one friend to drunk driving is a problem we must all face. The only action that can be taken is to raise the level of awareness to drunk driving. The 1996 season is the 1996 season.

Northern Ireland. This place generally conjures images of bigotry and violence—a place where Catholics and Protestants hate each other, a place where people gun each other down in the streets. While in certain isolated regions this holds true, overall, Northern Ireland is "a brave wee place where all the lads (no matter what their religion may be) can go down to the pub and take a Guinness," claims Michael Dunnigan, a local bartender in Ballamena.

For the most part, the people of Northern Ireland carry on with their daily lives without the threat of violence. Kids walk to school alone and the elderly can shop along the street without worry. "Oh sure every weekend some of the boys are going to march here or there, but we just drive by it," explains Cathrine Finney, a mother of six from Belfast. "We've gotten used to it by now—we just live our lives." And live they do.

"In America, people arrange their social lives around their work lives. Here it's backwards. We arrange our work lives around party time," maintains Nial O'Hagean, a civil servant from Derry (according to Catholics) or Londonderry (according to Protestants). And spending nights at various watering holes around Northern Ireland attests to that statement.

For the most part, Northern Ireland is as warm and welcoming a place in the country as any.

Irish Pubs of Lively
New Orleans was awarded the 1999 Super Bowl today.

NFC owners were to announce the Super Bowl site later in the day, with the favored contenders Phoenix and Atlanta among the other candidates.

All night, officials of the mayor of Dade County where the Super Bowl will be played "The very best of the West," said the mayor on the telephone.

The original name was supposed to be given to San Francisco, but uncertainty with the stadium's future forced the NFL to look elsewhere.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle has essentially promised a Super Bowl to Tampa, which is building a new stadium.

He said he would remind the owners Monday of the $100,000 a day, or $700,000 a week, that he could contribute to the Super Bowl Committee.

"Traditionally, I have not made recommendations," Rozelle said Wednesday.

"Obviously, in a situation where you have a commitment to Tampa, and in any other situation where we would have that type of thing, I'll reiterate that to the membership," he said. He added that he is "very much in favor" that represents a recommendation."

Tampa's new proposal is being fueled by a half-cent sales tax increase that voters approved in September 3 referendum. Former Tampa mayor William Powell spoke out before the referendum, contending public money should not be used to benefit the NFL franchise.

The Tampa stadium is expected to be completed in September 1998, 16 months after the Super Bowl in January 1997, when Tampa says it must be operating 18 months to stay ahead.

According to a recent study, the economic impact of last January's Super Bowl on Phoenix was $300 million.

On Wednesday, the owners reviewed a number of issues, including the current season, the preseason games, the growth of the league in the last year, and the ownership question.

NFC owners have long been considering help buy stadiums in other sports, but some kind of plan that would be added to approved Wayne Huizenga and Paul Allen.

Huizenga owns the Dolphins, the Florida Marlins and the Florida Panthers, and Allen owns the Trail Blazers, has an exclusive option to purchase the Seattle Seahawks.

The issue will not be settled until at least the meetings, Tagliabue said.

"I think the vision, the enthusiasm, the negotiations that we've had so far, for the first time we've had a Super Bowl team that can possibly make it to six in a row," he said.

In addition to the usual personnel decisions, the Braves had to make it six in a row, Tagliabue said.

"Obviously, it depends to some extent on the top of the team," he said. "If you're rebuilding, you might need the four games. If you think you've got a strong, good veteran team, and you've been able to hold it together, you may feel you can support those other games."

Television revenue also drew large discussion in light of the NFL's new contract negotiations that will begin after the 1993 season. The ratings are good and Monday night television ratings are especially high, Tagliabue said.

Former Tampa mayor William Allen, who owns the Portland Trail Blazers, said he would like to see the Super Bowl come back to the Tampa area.

Allen, who is a strong proponent of the Super Bowl, said he was "very disappointed" that the Super Bowl was moving to Atlanta.

"Sure, it's very frustrating and very saddening, because we know in our hearts that we have a team that was good enough to be world champions," general manager John Schuerholz said. "But that's the nature of this business."

The top priority was finding a 24-game winner John Smith, who may command near $7 million a year.

But the Braves also face tough decisions in the off-season, a season that Tagliabue said has five potential starters for next year, and must preface a number of key relief corps that proved major weaknesses during the World Series.

The Braves have most of the talent to go for the World Series, but Tagliabue felt the team to make six straight post- season appearances if the group is left alone, Tagliabue said.

"If you're going to go for a World Series — let alone a World Series — you're going to have to make some sacrifices," Tagliabue said.

"We have the talent right now, he said. "If you're going to try to win, you may feel you have the four games. If you think you've got a strong, good veteran team, and you've been able to hold it together, you may feel you can support those other games."

The main objective for both team will be halting the run.

Darnell Autry of Northwestern and Penn State's Curtis Enis are both nursing sore shoulders but are expected to play.
Saturday. Autry has 10 rushing touchdowns and is averaging 132.4 yards per game. Enis has also scored 10 touchdowns on the ground while averaging 92.2

yards per game this season.

"I think Autry is as good a tacklable as there is in the coun­ has allowed 152.8 yards per game rushing. Indiana's Alex

Smith had 130 yards on 30 car­

In its 27-24 win over Illinois last Saturday, the Wildcats were scorched for 166 yards by Robert Holcombe.

"We have to stop the run and force 'em to throw the foot­

The quarterbacking edge

New Blazer runs into more legal trouble

By BOB BAUM

PORTLAND
Isaiah "I.J." Rider, who has said he looked forward to a fresh start in Portland, has been cited for possession of marijuana less than two days before he is to play in his first Trail Blazers game.

Rider, 25, was cited at 11:30 p.m. Wednesday when sheriff's deputies found him sitting in the back seat of a car parked alongside a highway in Lake Oswego, an affluent suburb south of Portland.

"They observed Mr. Rider holding a pop can and a lighter near his mouth," Clackamas County sheriff's spokesman Damon Coates said. "Deputies seized the items and found the can to be converted into a smoking device, which contained a small amount of marijuana."

Rider, already suspended for Friday night's season opener because he missed the team's final exhibition game last Sunday, said after Thursday's practice that he was only sitting in someone else's car.

"The bottom line is I happened to be a back seat passenger in someone's car," Rider said. "I'm a big name. The cops didn't find a dangle. I know how big a name I am. I happened to be in someone else's car, so it's kind of messed up."

Coach P.J. Carlesimo said Rider was suspended for Friday night's game at Seattle and no decision would be made on any action against the star guard until the team investigates.

"It's a very unfair situation. I'm unhappy to jump to a conclusion without knowing anything," Carlesimo said. "It's unfair to anybody. It wouldn't matter whether it was J.R. or any of our players. You people are implying that because there's a past here, we should jump to a conclusion. That's not fair.

Rider had a history of off-court problems in his three seasons with the Minnesota Timberwolves and was arrested this summer in his hometown of Oakland, Calif., on charges of marijuana possession, illegal gambling and possession of illegal cellular devices.

Blazers management came under considerable criticism when it went ahead with a trade that brought Rider to Portland.

In Oregon, possession of less than an ounce of marijuana is a non-criminal offense subject to a tier system; $500 to one; Rider was cited to appear in court on the charge Nov. 18.

The sheriff's department said two deputies had parked their car nearby and were on foot investigating an unrelated matter when they noticed two cars pull off the highway and turn off their lights. Deputies thought it was probably some teen-ageers drinking, Coates said; but as they approached they couldn't tell what was inside.

Rider was the only person cited. Neither the cars nor the others inside them were searched, Coates said.

Rider said he planned to discuss the situation with Carlesimo and Blazers president Bob Whitsett.

"It looks bad now, but it will work out," Rider said.

Whitsett was traveling and unavailable for comment.

Rodriguez named baseball's best

NEW YORK
Alex Rodriguez, who began the season batting ninth for Seattle and became the top hitter in the majors at age 21, was voted The Associated Press major league player of the year Thursday.

Rodriguez hit .358 with 36 home runs and 123 RBIs in his first full year in the big leagues. He set modern-day marks for slugging percentage, the highest for anyone since Lou Boudreau in 1944. He finished with 54 doubles, most in the majors, and three grand slams, tied for most in the big leagues. He also tied a team record of five hits in a game and finished with a .311 slugging percentage, the highest ever by a shortstop.

Rodriguez also stole 12 bases, and made a relatively low 15 errors on defense. But he says there's room for improvement in all areas.

"I need to make more contact. I struck out more than 100 times," he said. "I can cut down on my errors. I'd like to steal 30-40 bags. I made a lot of dumb baserunning mistakes this year."

Piella liked what he saw, however.

"We expected him to do the job defensively for us, which he has," Piella said. "We expected him to hit for some power. But not like this."

The main disappointment for Rodriguez was not making the playoffs. The Mariners slumped in September, finishing 21/2 games behind the NL West champion Padres.

Caminiti hit .326 with 40 home runs and 130 RBIs for the NL West champion Padres.

‘Air’ McNair ready to launch

By JIM COUR Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE

Still holding true to their belief that later is better than sooner, the Houston Oilers will make the third start of his two-year NFL career when Houston (0-3) goes against the Seattle Seahawks (3-3).

McNair, 23, made his first two starts at the end of last season, when the Oilers were out of the playoff chase. This time it's the start of the second half of the season and they're in the race.

The Oilers have a lot of confidence in McNair, the first quarterback and third player chosen in last year's draft. "I think he's made a lot of progress," Fisher said. "I think at this point he's ahead of schedule."

He's felt very comfortable with McNair coming in and doing the things that he can do," linebacker Michael Barrow added.

"(McNair) represents a dilemma for opposing teams. He's a big, outstanding athlete with a strong and accurate arm who can run. It's being a scrambling potential that sets him apart, sort of a young John Elway.

McNair will go back to the bench when Chandler gets healthy. He says he agrees with Fisher's premise that it's better to wait until later in McNair's career. Sort of.

"A lot of quarterbacks who have come in and started in their first year have not been successful," McNair said. "It's been very hard sitting on the sideline because I'm a competitor."

The only player in NCAA history to gain more than 16,000 yards in total offense played in his third game of the season in a 10-9 loss to San Francisco last Sunday. He replaced Chandler during the opening drive of the second half and was 5-for-9 for 42 yards with one interception. He also had a 10-yard run.

Nothing special to scare an opposing team, right?

The Seahawks disagree.

"We're not looking forward to chasing him all over the Kingdom," Seattle defensive end Michael Sinclair said.

McNair liked that experience. "It's a lot of fun and watch as the kid start more, because it matters if the Oilers win or lose Sunday. It didn't matter last season.

This year we're in the battle to win each and every game and that's something I'm thinking about," he said.

After a 1-4 start, the Seahawks will be trying to go 3-1 since John Fox replaced Rick Mirer as their starting quarterback.

In McNair, they will be facing their third backup quarterback in two years. They won at Miami when the Dolphins were without Dan Marino and they beat the Chargers 32-13 in the Kingdom last Sunday when San Diego was without Stan Humphries.

He's also the Cards. We can disguise some things and confuse him into throwing an interception," Seattle coach Dennis Erickson said.

The Seahawks secondary had little success against San Diego's Sean Salisbury, intercepting four passes and also recovering a fumble. Darryl Williams had two of the interceptions and ran back one 79 yards for the first touchdown by the Seattle defense this year.

The defensive backs — Williams, Robert Blackmon, Carlton Gray and Corey Harris — benefited from a strong pass rush from tackles Cortez Kennedy and Sam Adams. And Erickson said it was the best defense has played in his two seasons here.

Sinclair, who leads the league with nine sacks, said Seattle's secondary must play aggressively for the team to be successful.

Those San Diego receivers had alligator arms when they came across the middle," he said. "He's got the message to them early.

Seattle's defense is allowing 134 1/2 yards rushing a game and it'll be facing rookie sensation Williams, Robert Blackmon, Carlton Gray and Corey Harris — benefited from a strong pass rush from tackles Cortez Kennedy and Sam Adams. Broncos bound for Super Bowl?

By JOHN MOSSMAN

DENVER

Finally, in his 14th NFL season, John Elway has it all, and he is taking his Denver Broncos along for the ride. The Broncos have the best record in the AFC (7-1), as the NFL's top-rated running and defense and third-best offense. Like it or not, league observers are beginning to tout the four-time Super Bowl champions as favorites to make another run at pro football's coveted trophy.

Elway, 41, is playing better than ever. On a pace to set a number of career records, he threw for 300 yards in three straight games before settling for 286 yards and three touchdown passes in three quarters as the Broncos dismantled their AFC West rivals, the Kansas City Chiefs, 34-7 last week.

At the halfway point, Elway has completed 169 of 273 passes (62 percent) for 1,998 yards, 17 touchdowns and 10 interceptions.

Despite his Hall of Fame numbers, he has thrown for 4,000 yards only once in his career and has never thrown more than 26 TD passes in a season. He could surpass both career and has never thrown for 4,000 yards and 30 TDs in a season — when our running defense, which held the Chiefs of- Kansas City's lone score came on a kickoff return. A unit that ranked dead last in the NFL in 1994 has been staggeringly stingy. Free-agent acquisitions Bill Romanowski and Alfred Williams have blended with holdovers Steve Atwater, Michael Dean Perry and a healthier Dan Williams to give Denver the second-best defense in the league, always a critical statistic.

Shanahan, fired in his second season as head coach of the Raiders in 1989, has matured upon his return in Denver. Still a brilliant Xs and Os tactician, he has learned to make solid decisions. He also has learned the value of being a players' coach.

During the preseason, he helped create a close-knit team spirit, no one seriously fishing trip, playing golf together and inviting players, coaches and his wives to his home for a cookout.

"I think this is my best team ever," Broncos owner Pat Bowlen said this week. "And I think the chemistry is as good as it ever was. Some people may think we're a flash in the pan. But it's becoming tougher and tougher to disguise the fact that we're a good football team."

Badin picks up first victory

By NICOLE JOHNSON

The Observer

The night may have been bitterly cold but there was plenty of heat on the gridiron last night as the women's interhall football regular season came to a close.

In the first contest, the 2-1-2 Pangborn Phoxes set out to tame the 0-4 Badin Attitudes. The first half yielded no touchdowns but a Phox fumble in the endzone gave the Attitudes a 2-0 lead at the half.

The safety was all that was needed to give Badin the edge to win as a touchdown just minutes into the second half by Stephanie So showed the Attitudes were playing with just that.

Badin went on to win their first game 8-0, with their final contest versus Howard on Sunday.

The Howard Ducks hoped to follow Badin in what looked to be a night of upsets as they faced undefeated Lyons.

An interception by Lyons' Paige Capparelli was run back for a touchdown. The Ducks came right back however, with a touchdown by Nicole Torrado, to lead the game 7-6., earning her the distinction of the first player this game to score less despite frequent turnovers. With nine seconds left in the game, it was Kathy Yanez again to score both an extra point to put the game out of reach 13-7.

The frostbite seemed to set in as both offenses remained scoreless despite frequent turnvers. With nine seconds left in the game, it was Kathy Yanez again to score both a touchdown and the extra point to put the game out of Howard's reach 20-7.

The undefeated women of Lyons' will play their final regular season game this Sunday in their march towards the title.

begins. "We have been working on supporting each other on the field," said Sobrero. "We are getting everything down.

"The team has been working on one touch passing," said Brown. "Also we have been working on improving the quickness of our game." Last year the Irish had quite a scare thanks to the Buckeyes. Last year in a regular season game at OSU, the Buckeyes managed to match the Irish’s effort. The game finished regulation all tied up, and was forced into overtime. Senior Cindy Daws ended the possi-bale upset for OSU, when she put in the winning goal. "There is no big revenge for us against Ohio State," said Sobrero.

"We have not even talked about last year," said head coach Chris Petrucelli about whether or not the team is seeking revenge. This year the Irish are not going to let the Buckeyes get that close. Although OSU might prove to be a challenge for the team, as the Buckeyes return ten to their starting lineup. "It is a game where we will have to play very fast.

Sunday will also be a big day for the Irish. Not only does the team take on the Villanova Wildcats, but it is senior day. "A big factor will be Sunday for our kids," said Petrucelli.

A couple of the Irish will step on the field Sunday, for their last regular season game. Irish starters seniors Jen Renola, Kate Fisher, Amy VanLaeke, and Daws will try to crush the Wildcats in their final regular season appearance at Alumni Field. Seniors Stacia Masters and Megan Middendorf will also be participating in their final regular season match. The Villanova game will be a chance for the team to prepare for their first game in the Big East tournament. The Irish are scheduled to play the Wildcats in the first round of the tournament.

seemed to be moving slower. A couple of times I was just in the right place at the right time, when you're playing well."

"That's the first time since I've been here that a goalie has worn a game for us. Going into the year, he's one of the best goalies in the country. I don't think there's any question about it."

The next night, against Miami of Ohio, Eisler took a shutout into the third period, but the Redkins spoiled it in the third period with a pair of goals.

Combined with the final 19-35 of the Ot. 18 tie against Western Michigan (3-3), Eisler did not allow a goal for 120 minutes and 34 seconds before Miami's Joe Bodnar found the
net. Eisler had made 75 consecutive saves without allowing a goal prior to Bodnar's score.

Eisler's totals for the OSHL and UM games were 68 saves and 2 goals (97.3% save percentage) allowed. For the season, he has allowed just six goals in four games, for a 1.48 goals-against average that ranks first in the CCHA among goalies who have played more than 200 minutes.
His 95.4% save percentage also ranks first among CCHA goalies with 200-plus minutes and trails
Miami's Trevor Averback
(95.7% in 150 minutes) among CCHA goalies who have exhibited consistency.

The attention Eisler's play has attracted is no news to ardent followers of Notre Dame hockey. As a freshman he was the team MVP and rookie of the year. As a sophomore he made 26 starts, finished fifth in CCHA action with 544 saves, and posted his fifth career shutout against Ohio State. And now it appears that Eisler is continuing his success. Where is this success leading?

"My dream is to play profes­ tional hockey," declared Eisler.
"I'm going to give the pro my best shot. I don't know what if it will be the NHL or the Minor Leagues, but I'd define like to play for at least a couple of years."

Notre Dame goalkeeper
(1-1-1, CCHA) has an important weekend ahead of them. Tonight they take on Michigan, ranked number one in the country, at the Joyce Center at 7 p.m.; and tomorrow they travel to Bowling Green for another
CCHA game.

"This is a huge weekend for us," explained Eisler. "We're very excited to have the opportunity to play these teams. We have the chance to show the league and the country that we're for real."

For the meantime, the country knows that at least Eisler is for real.

was the only squad to push the Irish to a fourth game, and they did so twice. In the regular-season match junior Jaimie Lee led the squad to a 15-13, 15-9, 14-16, 15-5 triumph with 19 kills. In the Big East championship game it was Lee's classmate's turn. Angie Harris notched 18 kills in a 5-15, 15-7, 15-1, 15-4 win. Last year the Orange could only manage 7 points against the Irish.

"They (Pitt) are the strongest team in the Big East (other than the Irish) and it is definitely an important match for us," commented Brown. "We have the rest of the Big East and the tournament so we would definitely like to be going into the tournament being seeded first and remaining undefeated in the conference."

The Panther tandem of senior Stephanie Dufresne and hitter Jennie Driscoll will hope to lead their squad past the Irish whose emphasis on blocking has given them one of the best blocking averages in the country (2.97/game). 6-4 freshman Mary Loffler has made her presence felt with an average of 1.51/game. Senior Jen Hause also gets her share of blocks with her imposing 6-5 frame.

Coach Brown voiced some of her Panther concerns. "They are going to compete real hard. One of the things they have done is adjust their block and make us hit angle, so we have been working on that in practice. Their setter, Dufresne, and senior hitter Jennie Driscoll are both really good and have been playing togetherness," Driscoll said. "We have good timing."

One of several players explained that they need to stay focused on their side of the net as the Irish have been upset several times this season.

"It has been the best team in the Big East that we have played, and at this point we can take anyone for granted," Lee said. "I don't think we should concentrate on them as much as we should concentrate on our side of the court," senior hitter Jen Briggs expressed. "If we play our game than no one in the Big East will be any kind of competition. It is a pivotal match for us because it is becoming that time in the season when we need to start playing, start picking it up."

Harris knows make her "a little bit questionnable" for this weekend's action. In addition, setter Carey May is still not fully recovered from her shoulder injury as she continues to get more comfortable and is developing her timing with the hitters.

May's injury has certainly been a setback for the team. However, the starting lineup has been in tact for the last seven matches in which the Domers have gone 3-4, with two of those losses at #1 Hawaii, but a sense of urgency might be felt as time is running short on the squad.

"We are searching for an answer and if we knew it we would have fixed it by now," Briggs noted. We know that time is running out, but we're just going in there everyday and are pushing away at it." For a team that put up an impressive 27-7 mark a year ago, one wonders how this team tries to remain confident when they have already lost eight this season.

"It's tough at this point to stay upbeat and confident in light of everything that has happened this year," said Lee. "But, I think everyone is really trying to block out the negatives and focus on what we have left and realize that this is the beginning of the second half of the season."

"It's been hard, losing that much and still being confident," Briggs said. "But, I think the people in the Hawaii match was important, how we ended it. We didn't just roll over and die, we saw a spark so I think that has helped a lot."

So the team's attitude remains positive as they don't look back and refuse to give up. The team can still see the light at the end of the tunnel, as Jaimie Lee mentioned. "I guess everyone is hanging on to hope in the rest of the season because that is all we have."

Road to a repeat

Notre Dame junior goaltender Matt Eisler (West Milford, New Jersey) was named the Central Collegiate Hockey Association defensive player of the week after posting a 120-minute shutout streak in action this past weekend.

This is an incredible honor for Eisler.

To put the significance of this achievement into perspective, consider the following facts. The CCHA includes eleven teams and is the most competitive hockey league in the country, boasting perennial powerhouses like Michigan and Lake Superior as members. From all of these teams, the CCHA picks one defensive player per week to honor. Usually this honor is reserved for a player whose team went undefeated during the week, but Eisler’s accomplishments during the week were so outstanding that they outweighed Notre Dame’s loss to Miami of Ohio.

“I was a bit surprised because we went 1-1,” stated the netminder, “and the award is normally reserved for players whose teams went undefeated. But it was definitely a pleasant surprise.”

Just what did Eisler accomplish this last weekend?

On Friday night he posted a shutout against Ohio State, making 47 saves and literally freezing the net. “I was seeing the puck well, I was playing confidently, and things went well for me,” Eisler said. “I was seeing the puck well, and I was also more focused. I had the week to practice, and it showed in my game.”

The following Saturday he played outstanding against Wisconsin, allowing only four goals on 47 shots while earning the victory.

“I was just especially focused that night,” recalled Eisler. “I was seeing the puck well. I was playing confidently, and things went well for me.”

But it was definitely a pleasant surprise.

Pitt, ‘Cuse next tests

During the course of a sport’s season a team usually has to persevere through times when things aren’t going that team’s way or they can’t seem to hit their stride.

Unfortunately for the Notre Dame volleyball team this stretch has lasted the entire year.

The Irish began the season ranked sixth in the nation but with their record now standing at 13-8, coach Debbie Brown finds her team has fallen to the twenty-fourth slot in the USA Today/Amescent Volleyball Coaches Association poll.

After a 1-3 road trip that took the Irish out west, they will head back to the Big East where they have thrived in hopes of finding their stride for the second half of the season. Since joining the Big East, Notre Dame boasts an 18-0 record with 15 of those wins coming by way of sweep.

This weekend they will do battle with Pittsburgh and Syracuse. The Panthers’ 5-0 Big East record puts them in a first place tie with the Irish setters who also place more importance on Saturday’s match-up. In last year’s campaign, Pitt swept the Irish, but this year’s Panthers are a much more balanced team.

“I think we need to see how we do against Pitt,” Brown said. “We have the Big East record to battle and we need to get back on track. We need to show everyone that we are still a force to be reckoned with.”

Outside hitters Jenny Birkner (left) and Angie Harris hope their team can break out of a season-long funk this weekend.

WIN AN AUTOGRAPHED MICHAEL JORDAN BASKETBALL

Register to win in the Men’s Fragrance Department now through November 9th. One winner will be chosen from a random drawing of all stores’ entries. Basketball to be awarded in January 1997. Some restrictions may apply.
Navy sails into Dublin this weekend with the nation’s third-best rushing attack. Currently averaging 306.8 rushing yards a game, the Midshipmen have subordinated opponents all year with their feared triple-option wingbone attack.

Junior quarterback Chris McCoy has been the catalyst of Navy’s attack, compiling 731 yards and 9 touchdowns on the ground in leading the Midshipmen to a 5-1 mark. Fullback Omar Nelson has also shone, averaging 7.6 yards a carry and scoring 5 touchdowns.

Dominant against the run early in the sea- son, the Irish front seven have had problems stuffing opponents’ ground attacks lately. Air Force quarterback Beas Morgan, similar in style to McCoy, ripped the Notre Dame defense for 183 yards in the Falcons’ 20-17 win.

Rick Kaczenski often finds himself in the middle of things

By JOE VILLINSKI
Associate Sports Editor

otre Dune center Rick Kaczenski doesn’t think about it. Doesn’t think about his size. Doesn’t think about the guys 50 pounds heavier lining up against him in the trenches. After 17 consecutive starts on the offensive line, those bigger guys tend to run together in a blurry blur.

No matter that the Irish senior is 6-4, 235 pounds. The only thing that matters to Kaczenski is getting in someone’s way.

No matter what it takes.

“He’s (Kaczenski) got to do anything he can and that’s how he plays,” offensive coordinator Dave Roberts said. “He’s got to grab you by the top of the shoes and bite you on the ankle. Right now, he’s not the biggest guy in the world, but he’s got so much guts.

Enough guts that these size differences make no difference to him.

“I just try not to even think about it,” Kaczenski said. “I just go out there and play. Once you’re on the field, it doesn’t matter. Weight, height, speed. It all doesn’t matter. You’ve just got to go full blown.”

That type of attitude quickly earned the respect of his teammates when he entered the starting lineup last year. With Kaczenski starting the final 11 games of 1995, the Irish finished 6th nationally in rushing, averaging 233.5 yards per game. His quickness and tenacity made him a favorite of the coaches.

“Rick’s not the biggest guy, but he is the toughest,” Roberts added. “There’s no question about his athleticism or his heart.

“He’s a warrior. He looks up and sees Dusty Zeigler in front of him, question marks filled Kaczenski’s head.

The MATCH-UPS
A position by position look at who holds the advantage

Quarterbacks

Powlus is passing extremely well this season, but recent fumbles have hurt. Navy’s Chris McCoy is doing his best Beau Morgan impersonation.

Running Backs

Irish backs have been disappointing this season, but they get the edge based on sheer numbers. Navy’s Omar Nelson has caused fits for opponents.

Receivers

Easily the most improved unit for the Irish, but still far from dangerous. Navy’s receiving corps spend most of the day blocking for McCoy and company.

Offensive Line

A major sore spot for the Irish lately, unit is even more suspect following loss of Rosenthal. Navy’s line has helped churn out big yardage all year.

Defensive Line

Despite a poor showing against Air Force, the Irish D-line remains a formidable trio. Navy’s line has also been strong in stuffer the run.

Secondary

While their complexion is constantly changing, the Irish unit is holding their own. Navy’s solid bunch is led by Second Team All-American Sean Andrews.

Special Teams

A much improved unit against the Falcons, the Irish have a dangerous return man in Rossum. Navy’s excellence on punt returns so far this year.

The Irish Extra • THE MATCH-UPS

Coaching

Navy’s Weatherbie has righted a once sinking ship, propelling them to a 5-1 start. Holtz’s erratic play-calling hasn’t helped the Irish cause this year.

Overall

The Irish can’t blow a game in their “homeland,” right? What once looked like a laugh may turn into a nailbiter, however.

Holtz must inject life into fading Irish

I made a prediction at the beginning of this football season. I declared that no opponent would invade Notre Dame Stadium and leave with a victory. Well, we all know what happened against Ohio State. So, I guess I was wrong. But OSU was expected to be a tough game, and the Irish made it competitive. There were simply some inconsistencies, and it cost ND the game.

But after the loss, I figured that the losing trend had run dry. The rest of our opponents would surely not give us fits, I assumed.

So, when the Irish trounced Washington in the Stadium, all was well under the Dome. Back to normal.

Now maybe I'm the only one on campus who thought this, but there was no doubt in my mind that the Irish would handle Air Force in Rock's House. The Falcons would throw the wheat and win. It was sure that such a thought would be a small victory for the Irish. But even if it was, I certainly wouldn't have been too bad about it. After all, the team had to know that every game counts. An Alliance Bowl bid was in our future if we kept winning, and unranked opponents travel should be on the endangered species list.

Well, we all know what happened against Air Force. To summarize, the Irish played remarkably poor football. Numerous adjectives were used to analyze Notre Dame's performance: flat, uninspired, unfocused, inconsistent. Again. And the team had better listen.

But after the loss, I figured that the losing trend had run dry. The rest of our opponents would surely not give us fits, I assumed.

It was sure that such a thought would be a small victory for the Irish. But even if it was, I certainly wouldn't have been too bad about it. After all, the team had to know that every game counts. An Alliance Bowl bid was in our future if we kept winning, and unranked opponents travel should be on the endangered species list.

Well, we all know what happened against Air Force. To summarize, the Irish played remarkably poor football. Numerous adjectives were used to analyze Notre Dame's performance: flat, uninspired, unfocused, inconsistent. Again. And the team had better listen.

But after the loss, I figured that the losing trend had run dry. The rest of our opponents would surely not give us fits, I assumed.

So, when the Irish trounced Washington in the Stadium, all was well under the Dome. Back to normal.

Well, we all know what happened against Ohio State. So, I guess I was wrong. But OSU was expected to be a tough game, and the Irish made it competitive. There were simply some inconsistencies, and it cost ND the game.

Now maybe I'm the only one on campus who thought this, but there was no doubt in my mind that the Irish would handle Air Force in Rock's House. The Falcons would throw the wheat and win. #11 Northwestern at #15 Penn State

After last year's dream season at Northwestern, many people thought the overachieving Wildcats would stumble in 1996. The critics were wrong. Northwestern has fought and scrambled its way to a 7-1 record thanks to several come-from-behind victories.

Adrian Autry, no relation to Darnell, filled in admirably in the latter's absence last weekend at Illinois. Defensively, linebacker Pat Fitzgerald is one of the Big Ten's best.

Penn State was one of Northwestern's many upset victims last season, but the Nittany Lions hope this year's game at Happy Valley will yield different results. Tailback Curtis Enis and the Nittany Lions will face a big test versus Penn State.

Five teams in the Big 12 rivalry produced many experts predicted that these two teams would fight for the conference title. But undefeated Arizona State has left the Trojans behind.

The Peerless Prognosticators

With Darnell Autry nursing an injury, Northwestern QB Steve Schnur will face a big test versus Penn State.

The Yellow Jackets must disappoint some of the Big Ten's best.

The Cornhuskers, on the other hand, are the two-time defending national champions. The Cornhuskers are anchored by a massive offensive line that includes Eric Anderson, Aaron Taylor and Chris Dishman. The man who earned the unlucky task of replacing Tommy Frazier at quarterback has been Scott Frost. With the exception of a shutout loss at Arizona State, he has been solid.

Oklahoma's first-year coach, John Blake, led the Sooners to an upset victory over Texas three weeks ago. But this is the upset he would really like to have.

#21 Washington at USC

When the season began, many experts predicted that these two teams would fight for the conference title. But undefeated Arizona State has left the Trojans to fight for second place.

Washington's strength on defense is its linebacking corps. In particular, Ink Ateaga has already drawn comparisons to NFL Pro-Bowler Junior Seau. On offense, freshman quarterback Brock Huard must maintain his composure against the Trojans' defense. Tailback Corey Dillon ranks among the nation's leading rushers and scorers.

Brad Otton was supposed to be the next great Trojan quarterback. At 6-6, he'll have to settle for being the tailback. Defensively, corner Dakyon McCutcheon will give Washington's receivers big problems.

#3 Florida State at Georgia Tech

Each team knows the importance of winning this game. The Seminoles hope to keep their national championship hopes alive, and the Yellow Jackets just want to crack the Top 25. The Seminoles want to continue their ACC dominance with another win on the road. They rely on a big game from Heisman hopeful Warrick Dunn, the only two-time, 1000-yard rusher in Florida State history.

The Yellow Jackets must disappoint some of the Big Ten's best.
