Presidential search to remain confidential

By MAUREEN HURLEY
Assistant News Editor

Information the Saint Mary's College community released in a May 1996 search process regarding the search for the next College President will be limited to maintaining the integrity and quality of the search, according to Sister Rachell Callahan, the Board of Trustees' Presidential Search Committee chair.

Last week, Callahan, along with Shelly Storbeck, vice president and managing director of A.T. Kearney, the consulting firm hired to assist the committee in the search process, presented information to the College community regarding the status of the search process.

The Presidential Search Process was launched following the April 1996 resignation of College President William Hickey. Hickey, when announcing his resignation as ninth president of the College, stated that he would remain at the College's helm until a successor was found.

Following an extensive advertising and nomination process launched in the summer months, the number currently in the pool of "confirmed candidates" to assume the position of 10th President of the College currently stands at 50 to 60, according to Storbeck. And, for now, that is all the College community can know about the candidates. According to Storbeck, the search committee is grappling with the extent of confidentiality that will define the remainder of the search process.

Forums address race issues

By KATE JACQUES
News Writer

Does the University of Notre Dame make students of diverse backgrounds feel welcome on campus? This was just one of the questions posed in an attempt to break the barriers between cultures.

On Monday, November 4, the Center for Social Concerns sponsored the fourth in a series of forums. Rodney Cohen of the CSC moderated the open discussion on multiculturalism, diversity, and Notre Dame's specific participation in a national teleconference between 200 colleges on November 13. Priscilla Wong of the CSC and Chandra Johnson of Campus Ministry also led in the discussion.

Cohen was ranked 53rd among the "Institutions with the Worst Race Relations" according to Princeton Review ranking. The data came from a survey of students and an examination of other statistical support.

Cohen, Wong, and Johnson opened the session with a discussion on the validity of the survey. Those in attendance questioned issues such as the actual presence of racism on campus, affirmation of diversity in the University's position on race relations. Students disagreed as to the extent and frequency of racism on campus. Cohen cited that although violent forms of racism may not be prevalent on campus, that it
Central African chaos leaves Zaire in limbo

KINSHASA
Zaire’s president convalesces at his French Riviera chateau while stu­dents rule the streets of his capital.

The prime minister hasn’t surfaced in days.

So who is running Central African’s largest nation, a resource-rich land threatened by the ethnic hatred in its neighbor to the east?

“Nobody,” a newspaper publisher said.

“The people are just running themselves,” an opposition politician suggested.

“Who knows?” a university student suggested. “You tell me.”

Just months ago, Zairians hoped the country’s first multiparty elections were in sight and that decades of dictatorship under President Mobutu

Sese Seko would be over.

Today, Mobutu has cancer, for which he sought treatment in Europe the year before. Prime Minister

Leon Kengo won Mobutu’s job and appears to be on the line. And since Zairian

Tutsi rebels drove Zairians out of the main cities of eastern Zaire, the army has marched north.

Inflation has soared by 100 percent since June.

Thousands of unemployed youths roam the streets of

Zaire unrest

WASHINGTON

The next four years offer Al Gore a tremendous advantage in the battle to succeed President Clinton. chance for chance to look presidential.

Gore, who has enjoyed remarkable influence for a vice president, in fact, may have even more sway in his second term with an eye on the year 2000. For example, the White House’s new political director almost certainly will have to work with Gore’s legislative agenda.

And Gore may have a say in changes at the Democratic National Committee.

“Already becomes the most powerful vice president in history,” said

White House spokesman George Stephanopoulos. “Can only multiply in the second term.”

Gore sidesteps most ques­tions about how his second term will differ from the first, but he allowed this much about the way he plans to help Clinton: “No doubts in the second term different challenges confront him there will be times when he will ask me to take on new challenges in helping him.”

VP Gore looks to 2000 election

Government recovering from car crash

JACKSON, Miss.

Gov. Kirk Fordice was in intensive care today, recovering from serious injuries after his jeep ran off a highway as he drove alone several miles behind his official escort. The state troopers assigned to accompany him were unaware of the wreck until they were notified by radio, officials said. “It’s not serious,” Fordice said. “It was serious condition — upgraded from critical — at University of Mississippi Medical Center when brought to his heart, lung and liver. He also had fractured ribs, a broken shoulder, a collapsed lung, a severely lacer­ ated ear and cuts. The driver of the Jeep Grand Cherokee ran off Interstate 55 some 15 miles north of Grenada, rolled several times and caught fire at about dusk Tuesday. Trapping him in the wreckage, Grenada is 105 miles north of Jackson. Fordice, a conservative Democrat running for a third term in 2000, was on a ventilator to assist his breathing. His attending physician, Dr. Keith Thurman, estimated he would be hospitalized for at least two weeks “if everything went perfect.”

Pipe bombers convicted

MACON, Ga.

Three members of the 112th Georgia Militia were convicted of conspiracy Wednesday for stockpiling pipe bombs for use against the federal government. A federal jury found Benjamin A. Garnett, Leonard III and members Troy Spain and Jimmy McClane guilty of possessing an unregistered destructive device. They were found innocent of other charges. The three were accused of conspiring to use pipe bombs on roads, vehicles, bridges, properties and federal buildings, the indictment said. Officials. China scaled a plan for financing their “war” against the government by robbing armories and drug dealers, proscut said. Kevin Foshay, a law enforcement informant and prosecutor, testified last week that the three planned to use the bombs at the Summer Olympics in Atlanta. Barker testified that Spain said he hoped they’d make enough money to quit work and train full time for Olympic terrorism.

China released a cancer-stricken dissident from prison

WASHINGTON

In a letter to the European Commission, Zaire’s President Mobutu, cited as an organizer of massive protests around Tutsi monument in 1980, follows the 11-year prison term handed out to another dissident, Wang Dan. Last week, Wang’s family had appealed for the 44-year-old dissident’s release in testimony before the European parliament. Although the government freed Chen on medical parole, the move appeared calculated to counter a report by Washington’s human rights group, the Committee

Christopherson’s Nov. 20-21 visit. Christopherson is expected to be raised human rights issues, among other topics. “It’s a very good-cop-bad-cop routine,” said Robin Munro, a

China researcher for New York-based Human Rights Watch/Asia.

Christopher visits prompt releases

BELLINGHAM

China released a cancer-stricken dissident from prison

WASHINGTON

In a letter to the European Commission, Zaire’s President Mobutu, cited as an organizer of massive protests around Tutsi monument in 1980, follows the 11-year prison term handed out to another dissident, Wang Dan. Last week, Wang’s family had appealed for the 44-year-old dissident’s release in testimony before the European parliament. Although the government freed Chen on medical parole, the move appeared calculated to counter a report by Washington’s human rights group, the Committee

Christopherson’s Nov. 20-21 visit. Christopherson is expected to be raised human rights issues, among other topics. “It’s a very good-cop-bad-cop routine,” said Robin Munro, a

China researcher for New York-based Human Rights Watch/Asia.

China released a cancer-stricken dissident from prison

WASHINGTON

In a letter to the European Commission, Zaire’s President Mobutu, cited as an organizer of massive protests around Tutsi monument in 1980, follows the 11-year prison term handed out to another dissident, Wang Dan. Last week, Wang’s family had appealed for the 44-year-old dissident’s release in testimony before the European parliament. Although the government freed Chen on medical parole, the move appeared calculated to counter a report by Washington’s human rights group, the Committee

Christopherson’s Nov. 20-21 visit. Christopherson is expected to be raised human rights issues, among other topics. “It’s a very good-cop-bad-cop routine,” said Robin Munro, a

China researcher for New York-based Human Rights Watch/Asia.

China released a cancer-stricken dissident from prison

WASHINGTON

In a letter to the European Commission, Zaire’s President Mobutu, cited as an organizer of massive protests around Tutsi monument in 1980, follows the 11-year prison term handed out to another dissident, Wang Dan. Last week, Wang’s family had appealed for the 44-year-old dissident’s release in testimony before the European parliament. Although the government freed Chen on medical parole, the move appeared calculated to counter a report by Washington’s human rights group, the Committee

Christopherson’s Nov. 20-21 visit. Christopherson is expected to be raised human rights issues, among other topics. “It’s a very good-cop-bad-cop routine,” said Robin Munro, a

China researcher for New York-based Human Rights Watch/Asia.

China released a cancer-stricken dissident from prison

WASHINGTON

In a letter to the European Commission, Zaire’s President Mobutu, cited as an organizer of massive protests around Tutsi monument in 1980, follows the 11-year prison term handed out to another dissident, Wang Dan. Last week, Wang’s family had appealed for the 44-year-old dissident’s release in testimony before the European parliament. Although the government freed Chen on medical parole, the move appeared calculated to counter a report by Washington’s human rights group, the Committee

Christopherson’s Nov. 20-21 visit. Christopherson is expected to be raised human rights issues, among other topics. “It’s a very good-cop-bad-cop routine,” said Robin Munro, a

China researcher for New York-based Human Rights Watch/Asia.
Cox: Accuracy, honesty essential for employment

By SARAH CORKREAN

With only five weeks left in the semester and numerous papers and tests to consider, many students have the time to consider where they will spend the next four years of their lives. As seniors near graduation, they are faced with deciding the type of career they would like to have and the potential opportunities that await them.

Cox believes that students need to begin planning for the future this early. "Students need to take the initiative in pursuing the type of career they would like to pursue," he said. "Students should start interviewing with companies before they graduate and continue to work with the career center." Cox also emphasized the importance of students being active in career planning. "Students should be proactive in their job search and not sit back and wait for companies to come to them," he said.

The ability to select a health plan of your choice is one of the benefits of being a Notre Dame employee. A Member of Saint Joseph's Care Group

The University of Notre Dame Department of Music presents an American Centennial Celebration performed by Faculty Member

William Cerny

пліт

with works by William Grant Still, Virgil Thomson, Roger Sessions, Howard Hanson and Peter Mennin

Sunday, November 10 2 pm Annenberg Auditorium

The Snite Museum of Art

The concert is free and open to the public.

JUNIORS IN ACCOUNTANCY

_deadlines to submit resumes for the junior accounting resume book

Friday, November 15 Career and Placement Services Basement of the Hesburgh Library

DON'T MISS IT!!
Navy continued from page 1

problems of finding jobs and homes for the discharged cadets.

In the report, Meinhold said, "I am in fact gay." These five words gained him instant celebrity and a discharge from the military. A court recom­mended him to military duty later that year. Four years later, in March 1996, Meinhold retired as a decorated and respected Naval officer.

Meinhold finds the military's "Don't ask, Don't tell" policy a bad procedure for treatment of gays in the military. He noted that "discharges have increased and actually gone up [in the past four years], becoming a weapon that you can use against someone you don't like."

Meinhold also believes that the military does not adhere to the policy, bending the rules to persecute homosexual men and women. "You cannot tell family members, friends, . . . parents, psychologists, . . . clergy members, . . . you can't even tell your cat."

Meinhold concluded by reaffirming his support of the American military, claiming that homosexual discrimina­tion must be dealt with. "I don't think homophobia is as rampant in the military as in the general population. If you're out and open and honest of who you are, people respect that. (though the policy puts you in a weak position.

possible involvement in the search process. We also know that you want the best possible candidates to remain in the pool. We will do our utmost to reconcile these priorities."

Search continued from page 1

agree with the idea of an entirely confidential process. "I think a search of a purely discreet kind would be bestal to this community," Sister Urena Malik, professor of reli­gious studies stated in the meeting. "This is do-or-die for this institution, as they [the Search Committee] will shape the future of the College."

Callahan responded to that concern, stating, "We under­stand that the Saint Mary's community wants the fullest does not mean that discrimina­tion does not exist.

Diversity continued from page 1

The three pointed to inci­dents concerning racial epi­thets as indications of a prob­lem.

Johnson stated that athletes have shared with her their experiences concerning the differences in the way others treat them when they're on the playing field and when they are a student on campus. The long political debate over affirmative action still rages as well. Johnson supported affirmative action by saying, "In a college environ­ment, a large majority of the learning takes place outside the classroom."

Although African American relations are crucial to the sit­uation on campus, the term race relations does not exclude Hispanics, Asians, women, or any other minority group. Johnson said, "Discussions like these give our students a voice which is visible and valuable. It gives our students hope."

In addition to holding open forums such as these, the CSC offers other ways to combat racial problems on campus. Wong pointed to the annual essay contest and the monthly African American Catholic Masses that are held.

The University recognizes the racial problems on campus and is currently taking action to correct them. Wong said that the Office of Multicultural Student Affairs works in con­junction with the Administration to improve race relations.

The Administration aims to hire more minorities to increase the ratio of those able to relate to minority stu­dents.

Johnson concluded, "something must begin at the top with the University making a conscious effort to change the increasing discriminatory action."

Headed for BC? Looking for a pre-game party or a place to watch the Irish? Join us at

The official Notre Dame gathering spot!

Located at the corner of Exeter and Huntington across from official ND head­quarters, the Copley Marriott.

Don't miss the pep rally at the Marriott Friday at 6 p.m. or the tailgater at Lions Hall on campus Saturday at 1 p.m. (admission fees required)

Go Irish!
By HARRY ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON

More than half America's eligible voters stayed home on Election Day, producing the lowest turnout since 1924 when Calvin Coolidge's campaign didn't excite the electorate either. Chief among the reasons cited by experts was President Clinton's near-certain victory.

The final figures weren't in on Wednesday, the day after the election, but Curtis Gans, director of the Committee for Study of the American Electorate, said he expects Tuesday's turnout to be 48.8 percent of eligible voters. That compares with 55 percent in 1992.

In all, 95.8 million people will have voted, he said, out of 196.5 million who were eligible.

The 1924 turnout that elected the taciturn Coolidge was 50.1 percent. The previous low turnout was in 1824, with 48.9 percent.

Some of the people who did vote indicated they held their noses while doing it.

Gilbert Fnger of Grosse Pointe Park, Mich., said he decided to vote "because I have no right to gripe if I don't." He chose Clinton, but said, "It's almost like I'm voting for the lesser of two evils."

Gans said the attack advertising one or two hours a day "gives people a choice between bad and awful, worse and worse, and creates a pall across the system."

Robert Y. Shaprio, a political science professor at Columbia University, said Clinton's lead in the polls held down the turnout.

"The presidential election was essentially a done deal," he said.

Shapiro says voters in 1992 were upset about the state of the economy and wanted to vote against George Bush. And Ross Perot's presence in the race stirred voter interest.

Paradoxically, Perot probably had something to do with people staying away on Tuesday, Shapiro said.

"This go-round, voters were turned off by him," he added.

"We laid the groundwork for a third party, but I think that Perot was perceived as tired, worn and less effective."

West Virginians voted in far larger percentages than the national average, but the turnout, at just under 64 percent, fell below expectations.

It was "MM politics," said West Virginia Secretary of State Ken Hechler, who had predicted 75 percent. "If you look at MKs, they're all different colors on the outside. And when you bite into them, they're all similar on the inside."
WOW, You’re 21?
Happy Birthday
Nicole
Let's go crazy: The Mexico City Driving Manual

Forget everything you learned in Drivers Ed. To begin with, American driving rules are obsolete and utterly useless in Mexico City: you will need quick reflexes, sharp eyesight, bravery and understand certain tendencies.

Choose your car wisely. If it is nice (i.e. in one nice, shiny piece) it will be stolen. The Club is your friend. There is a reason that most side-view mirrors in Mexico City are detachable, only scratch and don't actually hit the person. Remember that speed is regulated by a distance of 0.5 mm between you and whatever is in your path. The dotted lines in the middle of the road which we in America interpret as the division of lanes are merely a suggestion here in Mexico City. You will learn to weave. This will help you dodge the occasional unlucky dog or pedestrian who strays into your path.

Don't stop for pedestrians no matter how they look. They are the Devil incarnate, weaving and dodging in and out of traffic like kamikaze bats out of hell. They drive backwards down one-way streets. They drive on sidewalks. They are evil. Combis are no better, just larger. They are Volkswagen minivans pretending to be busses, almost always driven by a large tattooed man who reminds you of a distant uncle recently released from jail. They do not obey the laws of gravity or physics. They charge less than tow trucks, almost always driven by a large tattooed man who reminds you of a distant uncle recently released from jail.

More deadly than taxis are Volkswagen Beetles masquerading as taxis flood the streets by the millions. They are not really taxis, no matter what the signs or "Let's Go! Mexico" travel guide say; they are the Devil incarnate, weaving and dodging in and out of traffic like kamikaze bats out of hell. They drive backwards down one-way streets. They drive on sidewalks. They are evil. Combis are no better, just larger. They are Volkswagen minivans pretending to be busses, almost always driven by a large tattooed man who reminds you of a distant uncle recently released from jail. They do not obey the laws of gravity or physics. They charge less than tow trucks, almost always driven by a large tattooed man who reminds you of a distant uncle recently released from jail.

Be just like every other driver in the city. Be prepared to run. Be prepared to walk. Be prepared to drive. Be prepared to be stolen. Sometimes you will be in the car less in Mexico City; you will need quick reflexes, sharp eyesight, bravery and understand certain tendencies.

Bernadette Pampuch

When Pigs Fly

ELECTION '96...A FINAL SUMMARY...

I LOVE YOU, MAN...

Wake up!

A HUNGRY BEAR DON'T EAT COTTON CANDY BUT A PICKLE STILL SOUN ON AN ONION ROLL!

MILLIE WHAT, USTENTO TURNING STREET!

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"Beauty is a mystery. You can neither eat it nor make flannel out of it."

—Jake the Jumping Snake
LEMONHEADS

The thirteen tracks on this latest treat from Boston’s favorite band range, as usual, from the mediocre to the very good. The Lemonheads have never been purveyors of music that will change lives, but over the past few years they have consistently held our attention with a talent both genuine and consistent. Car Button Cloth is a worthy successor to previous efforts, and is led by the excellent “If I Could Talk I’d Tell You,” an episodic-sounding dizzy with such great melodies you can’t but think of the most imaginary friend.

Requisite wittiness appears in the form of “six,” a song about actress Geenath Paltrow in the movie “Seven,” and we all know what happened to her! Sure enough the main, memorable lyric, “Here comes Gwyneth’s head in a box,” provokes one of those haggis unsettling occasions in life where one is forced to ponder the frailty of the human mind, especially when it belongs to Evan Dando. “Young Your Mind” offers further evidence that things may not be all quite right in there. This album is also distinguished due to its inclusion of a song, “The Outdoor Type,” about fearing of camping (is there a word for that?), perhaps the first time that a song has raised the concern of great concern to millions of anxious listeners, yet the piece works on account of an innuendo of the nastiness and deceit inherent in human relationships. Similar sentiments are found in “Break Me” and “Misogyny,” the former being especially notable for the frustration expressed therein. The last three tracks of the album should only be endured if one has unfortunately forgotten to stop the CD beforehand, they are hardly a fitting end to an otherwise enjoyable and quickly collectible set.

by Julian Elliott

---

CONCERT REVIEW

Stabbing Ash

Nestled deep within Happy Valley, just off Penn State’s main campus, a group of three bands came to a small bar called the Crowbar on October 23. The bar has been frequented by Cranberries, Nine Inch Nails and Iggy Pop to name just a few. It is of virtual legendary status among the students at Penn State’s Happy Valley, just nestled deep within the Pennsylvania backwoods of the State’s rural area.

They played a short set, cutting their performance short when they realized that no one was really getting into their music. In bred, they were terrible. Canada’s Mother Earth was just another band to come out of the molder, sounding like a hybrid of Pearl Jam, Rage Against the Machine and Santana, but definitely failed to capture any of the bands’ strengths. The band was primarily hit (out of five) by Julian Elliot.

Their performance reflected their youthful innocence, Stabbing Westward’s show on the other hand was absolutely jaw-dropping. This band has developed into a live act that is considered to be one of the best in the nation for their stage presence.

PRESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The Presidents of the United States of America want to be Jimmy Carter or Gerald Ford on their sophomore release II — the spirit of the Seventies and a bit of a joke. Fuzzy riffs, thundering drums, hot licks, pick-scraps and fist pumpin’ pop crank from start to finish. PUSS hurray their trademark twangy, wild Kinder-jam of old petul-pushr, scratchy MC5, Kiss and Foghat era rawk. Well... almost. There’s still two songs called “Bug City” and “Froggie.” Sounds like someone has the blues. However, II is music composed for the explicit purpose of being cranked out in V8 Ford Mustangs in mall parking lots.

Give the Presidents some credit though. They are the most unpretentious rock-and-roll band in America. They’re anti-pretentious. Would you ever hear Eddie Vedder or Stone Temple Pilots sing “Little puffy cloud with a tongue/ Floatin’ over a cheese puff/ Rosebud?”

The Presidents fully embrace their elected position of arena rockers, as they open the album asking the listener “Hello ladies and gentlemen... let’s rok [sic]!” The Presidents are a joke — an embodiment of just how silly commercial rock-and-roll is — but they know it. That fact alone puts them miles ahead of Bush.

However, the Presidents still rock. “Lunatic to Love,” “L.I.P.” and “Vocalcent” put motor in the bunto of even the most stone-faced music critic. Those who couldn’t get past the kids’ song/album theme will be rewarded with a whole album of the last three hits of the album will be happy to know that they focus more on electrician, speakers and amplifiers on II.

Sprinkled with clever drum fills, funny side-bass (even bass-maestro Mark Sandman of Morphine, friend of President Chris Ballow, jams on “Froggie”), and head-bobbin’ stop-starts, II offers much of the typewrite „rock” of the band. Listening to the Presidents is the guilty music equivalent of eating a box of Twinkies on the couch at midnight.

Sure, you should be exercising or studying, but the couch is much more entertaining.

by Brent DiCrescenzo
By BRAD PRENDERGAST

It's a Friday afternoon in the fall, and some of The Observer's editors are at their desks, cleaning off the debris from a week's worth of issues and recovering from the previous night's strains of producing the larger Friday paper.

The down time on a Friday afternoon is perfect for reorganizing both desks and minds, a window of opportunity between the end of classes for the week and the commencement of the weekend's festivities. With no issue to put together that night, the office is relatively quiet. Except for the intermittent phone calls.

Every couple of minutes, editors from various buildings on campus ask when the paper is going to arrive. The lunch hour is arriving a few hours late today.

"Is there going to be a paper today?" a caller asks, a little miffed. Don't worry, there will be. Excluding days immediately following class breaks, The Observer hasn't missed a weekday since 1970.

Not-so-quiet origins

Robert Sam Anson and Stephen Feldhaus were the driving forces behind The Observer when the newspaper began in the fall of 1966, exactly 30 years ago this week. Feldhaus was the editor of the Voice, The Observer's weekly predecessor. Anson had guided Scholastic magazine's news department and had interned with Time Magazine over the previous summer.

The idea to start a new newspaper belonged to Feldhaus, who had grown frustrated with the Voice's financial woes and the University administration's control over that paper. The two, along with Pat Collins, then the newspaper's editor of Scholastic, decided to reestablish the student newspaper as an independent entity. To do that, the trio agreed that the Voice had to be terminated.

A week after the Voice died, The Observer was born. It published its first issue on Nov. 3, 1966, under the headline "A Promise, A Purpose, A Newspaper Is Born." Anson and Feldhaus were co-editors-in-chief, and borrowed the name of the newspaper's weekly predecessor; the larger Friday paper.

Anson had guided Scholastic during that first year. His reasoning was that a newspaper on firm financial footing. Anson faced calls for his expulsion after the publication of an absolutely sexually graphic story which originally appeared in a Berkeley, Calif., newspaper — the article encouraged people to "screw with love" and said that "watching someone else screw could be very enlightening." Anson faced calls for his expulsion.

Then-University President Father Theodore Hesburgh said that he "wouldn't give (Anson) the satisfaction" of expelling him and instead told editors to write a letter of apology to the campus community.

The controversy also led to a turning point in the establishment of the university — the creation of a student-faculty advisory board to guide The Observer. The advisors made it clear that censorship was not their intention, and the resulting guidelines and procedures solidified the newspaper's presence on campus, possibly making sure that it would last. The advisory board was later abolished and a mediator role was created in the University president's office.

The tradition continues

The idea to start a new newspaper belonged to Feldhaus, who had grown frustrated with the Voice's financial woes and the University administration's control over that paper. The two, along with Pat Collins, then the newspaper's editor of Scholastic, decided to reestablish the student newspaper as an independent entity. To do that, the trio agreed that the Voice had to be terminated.

A week after the Voice died, The Observer was born. It published its first issue on Nov. 3, 1966, under the headline "A Promise, A Purpose, A Newspaper Is Born." Anson and Feldhaus were co-editors-in-chief, and borrowed the name of the newspaper's weekly predecessor; the larger Friday paper.

By BRAD PRENDERGAST

New Editor

It's a Friday afternoon in the fall, and some of The Observer's editors are at their desks, cleaning off the debris from a week's worth of issues and recovering from the previous night's strains of producing the larger Friday paper.

The down time on a Friday afternoon is perfect for reorganizing both desks and minds, a window of opportunity between the end of classes for the week and the commencement of the weekend's festivities. With no issue to put together that night, the office is relatively quiet. Except for the intermittent phone calls.

Every couple of minutes, editors from various buildings on campus ask when the paper is going to arrive. The lunch hour is arriving a few hours late today.

"Is there going to be a paper today?" a caller asks, a little miffed. Don't worry, there will be. Excluding days immediately following class breaks, The Observer hasn't missed a weekday since 1970.

Not-so-quiet origins

Robert Sam Anson and Stephen Feldhaus were the driving forces behind The Observer when the newspaper began in the fall of 1966, exactly 30 years ago this week. Feldhaus was the editor of the Voice, The Observer's weekly predecessor. Anson had guided Scholastic magazine's news department and had interned with Time Magazine over the previous summer.

The idea to start a new newspaper belonged to Feldhaus, who had grown frustrated with the Voice's financial woes and the University administration's control over that paper. The two, along with Pat Collins, then the newspaper's editor of Scholastic, decided to reestablish the student newspaper as an independent entity. To do that, the trio agreed that the Voice had to be terminated.

A week after the Voice died, The Observer was born. It published its first issue on Nov. 3, 1966, under the headline "A Promise, A Purpose, A Newspaper Is Born." Anson and Feldhaus were co-editors-in-chief, and borrowed the name of the newspaper's weekly predecessor; the larger Friday paper.

Anson had guided Scholastic during that first year. His reasoning was that a newspaper on firm financial footing.
Evolution of a Newspaper...

The Observer: Born from liberal roots

By Derek Betcher
Assistant Editor

Right reason can't monopolize Notre Dame's patent for extremist journalism. Thirty years ago, The Observer captured that distinction by bursting onto campus in a storm of unrestrained bias and leftist opinion. For the next several years, the fledgling paper would routinely antagonize the administration and offend the students with its liberal writing, editing, and advertising policies.

"We were cheerfully biased about everything, be it the lowliness of Michigan State, the lunacy of the Vietnam War, or the deplorable lack of drugs, booze, and sex on campus," founder Robert Sam Anson wrote in a 1986 retrospective. As blatantly hedonistic as it was published priorities were.

The Observer was created with the serious intention of filling what its editors saw as a deplorable lack of opinion on campus. Anson and his cohorts had concluded that the crumbling weekly The Voice was both directionless and fundless, and they felt Scholastic was tied too closely to University administration to be truly independent. On Nov. 3, 1966, the campus' disgruntled liberal writers found an outlet.

"Here was a newspaper that was fact-filled, slick looking, and, rarest of all for Notre Dame, positively bristling with opinion," Anson said.

"Silly or not, though, The Observer's mission is to never just lay there," he added.

The first issue took a decidedly antagonistic path with its commitment to competent news reporting. In that light, current sentiments lamenting a loss of direction would be misplaced. The shift should be attributed in large part to political and social changes in our nation and our media.

Anson, for one, doesn't mourn the transition. "The 60s, and the hot-bloodedness of The Observer, must have been good for our inexperience. Perhaps it's just as well," he said.
The Observer Turns 30

This is the dawning of the Age of Technology
From linotype to Power Mac, production has slowly evolved

By HEATHER COCKS

It's already past 2 a.m. and there's still an 84-year-old woman sitting at her desk by the window. Her glasses are perched on her nose, and her hands are moving quickly across the keys of the old typewriter. She has been working here for over 40 years, and she's never missed a deadline. She's the last of her generation, and she's proud to be a part of the Observer's history.

Grauel also brought her daughter, Jill, to The Observer with her. Jill is now a senior at Notre Dame. "I keep getting older and the kids are growing up," Grauel said. "I'm just happy that I can still come to work every day and be a part of something that's so important to me."

The Observer is a place where dreams are made and stories are told. It's a place where people come together to share their experiences and ideas. It's a place where people can find a sense of community and belonging.

The Observer has been around for over 150 years, and it's still going strong. It's a testament to the power of print and the importance of local news. And it's a reminder that the Observer is more than just a newspaper. It's a part of our community, and it's a part of who we are.
The Observer continues to...

By MATTHEW LOUGHRAN
Assistant News Editor

Every weekday morning, beginning at 11 a.m., students make their way to the dining halls for lunch. Generally, the line to get to the front entrance are hundreds of people long. Copies of The Observer to tell them what happened in their world the previous day. As much more moves into the construction of the paper than just writing and printing stories.

The work begins early in the evening (Note: Use of gender in the following is just for example. It does not necessarily reflect the gender of each editor on any particular evening):

- 6 p.m. The copy editor and copy editor show up at the office to begin work for the day. The news story board lists the campus stories coming in that night. The editor and the assistant editor go over the board, determining which stories will go on which page.

- 6:30 p.m. The copy editor has drawn up the layout sheets and completes the Associated Press stories to fill out the back pages. Most of the campus stories will not be in by now, so the assistant busies himself with laying out the front page.

- 7:30 p.m. Campus stories have started trickling in. Some Writers are sitting at every computer trying to get the campus stories up. (The "Macintosh SEs" writing furiously about various lectures, special events, and administrative meetings that occurred that day.

- 8 p.m. The copy editor has chosen the graphics and stories for the AP pages, and laid them out for the production worker to print.

- 10 p.m. The assistant editor begins work on page two. This involves finding five brief, sometimes amusing, AP stories related to any particular evening: a related AP story to fill out the remainder of the page. This process becomes a little easier, when the stories are not offensive, the process is a little quicker.

- 11:30 p.m. The assistant editor has filled out the rest of the paper as best he can. The people you'd best know are the people you'd best love: a re the people you'd best love.

June 1968-69, The Observer moved from tri-weekly to daily, and printing ended at 5 p.m. that day, since then, barring internal trouble, external conflict, or natural disaster, The Observer has been printing each day ever since. The campus community was facing, had the loss of student fees and rent-free space. This as a means for the campus community to continue operating.

Most of the stories are now printed on the news pages, and the lack of funding, Bach stepped down, and publication was suspended for two days.

On Sept. 30, as the editorial board debated the paper's future, Anson made an unexpected appearance in time to counsel the editors and given them a much-needed pep talk.

Anson, unmoved by the turmoil. The Observer was facing, had been returning to campus, to thank Hesburgh for his role in the entire philosophy to pervade the world the previous day. But the assistant editor has a few stories up. It's not surprising.

The administration responded with Anson, the paper's Interim News editor, he was a freshman writer, and the lack of funding, Bach stepped down, and publication was suspended for two days.

On Sept. 30, as the editorial board debated the paper's future, Anson made an unexpected appearance in time to counsel the editors and given them a much-needed pep talk.

Anson, unmoved by the turmoil. The Observer was facing, had been returning to campus, to thank Hesburgh for his role in the entire philosophy to pervade the world the previous day. But the assistant editor has a few stories up. It's not surprising.

The administration responded with Anson, the paper's Interim News editor, he was a freshman writer, and the lack of funding, Bach stepped down, and publication was suspended for two days.

On Sept. 30, as the editorial board debated the paper's future, Anson made an unexpected appearance in time to counsel the editors and given them a much-needed pep talk.

Anson, unmoved by the turmoil. The Observer was facing, had been returning to campus, to thank Hesburgh for his role in the entire philosophy to pervade the world the previous day. But the assistant editor has a few stories up. It's not surprising.

The administration responded with Anson, the paper's Interim News editor, he was a freshman writer, and the lack of funding, Bach stepped down, and publication was suspended for two days.

On Sept. 30, as the editorial board debated the paper's future, Anson made an unexpected appearance in time to counsel the editors and given them a much-needed pep talk.

Anson, unmoved by the turmoil. The Observer was facing, had been returning to campus, to thank Hesburgh for his role in the entire philosophy to pervade the world the previous day. But the assistant editor has a few stories up. It's not surprising.

The administration responded with Anson, the paper's Interim News editor, he was a freshman writer, and the lack of funding, Bach stepped down, and publication was suspended for two days.

On Sept. 30, as the editorial board debated the paper's future, Anson made an unexpected appearance in time to counsel the editors and given them a much-needed pep talk.

Anson, unmoved by the turmoil. The Observer was facing, had been returning to campus, to thank Hesburgh for his role in the entire philosophy to pervade the world the previous day. But the assistant editor has a few stories up. It's not surprising.
CONCERT REVIEW
Pumpkins Smash Through Fort Wayne

By JOEY CRAWFORD

Billy Corgan was the alleged monster of the rollercoaster-and-rolling-stone rock and roll industry. Throwing curses at the crowd and leaving during mid-set caused the crowd to be dubbed as a nightmare to terrorize the stage. Off-stage, his behavior was deemed as equally questionable. So it seemed kind of ironic last Monday night when guitarist Jonathan Melvoin died of an overdose of heroin, and drummer Jimmy Chamberlin was arrested for possession of the drug. Their tour, in the past few months, was crushed to death in the mosh pit. Then on Halloween.

The Smashing Pumpkins have had a rough year. First tragedy struck at a concert in Dublin on May 11, when a seventeen-year-old Iberian O'Brien was crushed to death in the mosh pit. Then on Friday, July 12, the band was thrown into emo­ tionally charged territory when one of the lead singers, Alanis Morissette, committed suicide. The band was left reeling from the shock of the loss. The Smashing Pumpkins have had a rough year. First tragedy struck at a concert in Dublin on May 11, when a seventeen-year-old Iberian O'Brien was crushed to death in the mosh pit. Then on Friday, July 12, the band was thrown into emo­tionally charged territory when one of the lead singers, Alanis Morissette, committed suicide. The band was left reeling from the shock of the loss.

The Smashing Pumpkins entered with the hit song "One Mississippi" and the presence of their lead singer, Billy Corgan. The band's energy was palpable as they played their first song, "The Everlong." Corgan's vocal performance was powerful and emotive. The band continued with "Dressed in black" and "Drown," two hit songs, "Stupid Girl" and "Only" Day. Despite the.troubles that have affected the band in the past year, the Smashing Pumpkins showed that they are still a force to be reckoned with. The band's performance was a reminder of their talent and their ability to overcome adversity.

The Smashing Pumpkins' set list included hits such as "Rhinestone," "Bulls on Parade," and "Bulls on Parade." The band's set list was a mix of their popular hits and deep cuts from their albums. The band's performance was a testament to their dedication to their craft and their ability to connect with their audience.

The Smashing Pumpkins' performance was a reminder of their talent and their ability to overcome adversity. The band's energy was palpable as they played their first song, "The Everlong." Corgan's vocal performance was powerful and emotive. The band continued with "Dressed in black" and "Drown," two hit songs, "Stupid Girl" and "Only" Day. Despite the troubles that have affected the band in the past year, the Smashing Pumpkins showed that they are still a force to be reckoned with. The band's performance was a reminder of their talent and their ability to overcome adversity. The band's performance was a reminder of their talent and their ability to overcome adversity.
Frisco's woes just offensive

By DEAN GREGORIUS

Associated Press Writer

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Jerry Rice is pleased. Steve Young is pleased. Even head coach George Seifert is pleased.

Despite San Francisco's 2-43 record heading into Sunday's game, the 49ers are concerned about an offensive explosion that has to have lost its explosiveness.

"When we're not putting people on is when we're not doing the things that we feel we ought to be doing," Seifert said. "That's the urgency that we have to get it done and I'm on board with the players on that." Seifert said Wednesday.

"I've got to start doing some of the things I've got to do," Rice said. "If I'm not working on all cylinders, you can see that." Rice said. "Basically, we're not executing the plays. I'm just waiting around to see what happens. You can't do that. You have to dictate what's going on.

"More troubling to the 49ers are numbers indicating a loss in efficiency.

San Francisco has converted third downs at a rate of 32.8% and has allowed a league-low opponent to convert third downs inside the opponent's 20. This year, the touchdown ratio has plunged to 39.5.

"We're a mediocre offense and we've got to come on with a score on every possession. We should be making plays and scoring a lot more points." Injuries have been part of the problem. Young has missed all six games due to a strained back area and wide receivers Nate Singleton and J.J. Stokes have missed some time due to season-ending injuries.

Tackle Harris Barton has also been bothered by a groin strain and tackle Kirk Scalford has yet to play this year because of a right foot injury.

"That's their frustration," Seifert said. "They know what we've accomplished and that our expectations haven't changed. Our standard hasn't changed. We don't feel good about it.

"At the same time they've been disappointed by facing a Dallas team with the league's second-ranked defense. The Cowboys also enter with an element of desperation knowing they have to stay in the playoff hunt.

"Offensively, we're kind of in limbo for this game. We just want to realize how good this (Dallas) defense is," Barton said.

The 49ers are used to putting up points almost at will. Over the previous two seasons, they have scored or exceeded 37 points in five of six games this season, with a victory over San Diego in the Super Bowl in January.

The 49ers, who have won four of seven games this season, a 39-17 victory over then winless Atlanta. NOTICES

SPRING BREAK Travel Free Offerings:

- $99 Japan in late April or May
- $129 Cancun or Jamaica Spring Break trips
- $149 Mexico, Costa Rica, or Panama
- $169 Puerto Vallarta, Mazatlan
- $299 Las Vegas, San Francisco, or LA
- $599 Hawaii, or Lord of the Rings

TICKETS

NOTICE

ATTENTION: NATIONALS SPEAKERS/SCHOLARSHIPS/INTERNSHIPS AVAILABLE.

GUARANTEE! springbreaktravel.com

$129! DAY TO NIGHT'S BEST LOCATION $139! CANCUN & JAMAICA SPRING BREAK FOR FOOTBALL WEEKENDS. 5 ROOMS WITH ENTRANCE TO STREET, INCREASE SOON - SAVE $50! SPRING BREAKFAST INN HAS SPACE AVAILABLE. OTHER WHO CAN CALL STEVE 243-9357.

ATTENTION:

ATTN: NATIVE JAPANESE SPEAKER

SCHOLARSHIPS/INTERNSHIPS AVAILABLE.

GUARANTEE! SPRING BREAK TRAVEL.COM

$129! DAY TO NIGHT'S BEST LOCATION $139! CANCE.
This article is about you...even if you weren't on the trip that this article will ultimately speak of, it's about you. You'll only know how or why after wandering your way through the ponderings of a wayward traveler. I leave you, therefore, with only the option to read on.

During the Fall Break I was able to travel to Appalachia as part of a joint effort to bring students and alumni together for a work project, sponsored jointly by the Center of Social Concerns and the Office of Alumni Community Service. There were a few things that we knew about the undertaking when we began, but there was much that we didn't know. We knew that we would be working with an organization called the Christian Appalachian Project (CAP); and we knew that we would be doing some type of construction work (however unprepared we knew ourselves to be for such tasks). What we didn't know, and what we didn't know we didn't know, was how much this trip, this veritable adventure, would mean to us as a community and as Christians.

There is something in all of us that wants to do something noble, something beyond the ordinary. Especially as Christians, we know ourselves to be called to lift up the poor, to shelter the homeless, to free the prisoner. There is something courageous and noble about it, too. On the way we met many whose lives of committed service humbled us in the face of our own feeble commitment. We met many who found contentment in a life with far fewer of the "necessities" of life. And we met each other. At the outset, we were two groups, alumni and students, brought together by Notre Dame, intending to do our part to save the world. In the end we were forced to recognize the commonality of us all. Not only among our group of alumni and students, but with the people of the region as well. They were poor, but in so many ways, so were we; we were rich, but in so many ways, so were they. We were forced to assess the measures we use to calibrate wealth, and to consider what it is that will bring happiness. In the end, our hopes of saving the world could only be fully realized by the recognition that our salvation was wrapped up with theirs. We, too, were being saved...by the wisdom of a people, the beauty of a landscape, and by the grace that brought us all together. I am reminded of the words of an Aboriginal woman who said: "If you have come to help me, you are wasting your time. But if you have come because you liberation is bound up with mine, then let us work together."

So, what does all this have to do with you? That's something you'll have to work out. I have to believe that all of us feel called to something more. It may not be to build houses in Appalachia, but it is to build the Kingdom. How each of us goes about doing that isn't always clear... sometimes it seems downright impossible to figure out. The fact remains that we're not in this alone...and if Campus Ministry can be of any help at all, as you make your way through Notre Dame, then let us do that for you. Come build with us.

Jim Lies, C.S.C.

Campus Ministry Events

Power Lunch: Sacramentals
Thursday, November 7, 12:45pm -1:45pm, Faculty Dining Room

Freshman Retreat
Friday-Saturday, November 8-9, St. Joseph's Hall

Notre Dame Encounter
Friday-Sunday, November 8-10, Fatima Retreat Center

R.I.C.A. Retreat
Saturday, November 9, Mary's Solitude

KAIROS (4th day): Taize Prayer
Wednesday, November 13, 7:30pm, Chapel of the Holy Cross (Stanford-Keenan Chapel)

Power Lunch: Marriage as Sacrament
Thursday, November 14, 12:45pm-1:45pm, Faculty Dining Room

THIRTY-SECOND SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

WEEKEND PRESIDERS AT SACRED HEART BASILICA

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Day</th>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Time</th>
<th>Homilist</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Saturday</td>
<td>November 9</td>
<td>5:00pm</td>
<td>Rev. Edward A. Malloy, C.S.C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sunday</td>
<td>November 10</td>
<td>10:00am</td>
<td>Rev. Charles Gordon, C.S.C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>11:45am</td>
<td>Rev. David Scheidler, C.S.C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td> Decon James Lies, C.S.C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Homilist</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Scripture Readings For This Coming Sunday

1st Reading  Matthew 25:1-13
2nd Reading  1 Thessalonians 4:13-18
LOS ANGELES

Jim Harrick, the second-winningest coach in UCLA basketball history behind the storied John Wooden, was fired Wednesday for an alleged recruiting violation and a false expense report. His dismissal came just two weeks before the start of the 1996-97 season, and just 19 months after Harrick coached the Bruins to their first NCAA basketball title in 20 years — the first since the Wooden era.

It also comes a mere week before the start of the fall signing period.

Steve Lavin, a 32-year-old assistant, will be the interim coach this year; the school will look for a successor during the season.

Chancellor Charles Young said Harrick was offered the option of resigning but “he did not take that option. He was terminated.”

He said Harrick will not be paid because he was terminated for cause: “I felt I had no alternative,” Young said during a campus news conference. “We think what we did was right. It is a very serious infraction.”

Harrick, in a separate news conference at his lawyer’s Beverly Hills office, said he was shocked he was fired.

However, asked whether he lied on the expense report for a dinner for three recruits and five current UCLA players, Harrick said, “I did, but I corrected it.”

“You have to get things right. I made a mistake. I needed to use better judgment. … It (the punishment) far outweighed the crime by mountains and miles. They’re making something out of nothing.”

Young said Harrick did not accept the offer to resign because “if you resign, then I’m saying they have something and I agree with them.”

He said he was fired without warning, being called into see Young and Dalis after practice Tuesday and dismissed “with no explanation whatsoever.”

“It’s like getting hit in the head with a 2-by-4. I thought maybe they would reprimand me,” Harrick said.

Young said he expects some NCAA or Pac-10 sanctions.

“What the conference and NCAA will decide, we can only conjecture,” he said, adding that UCLA was not instructed to take action, but that the school did so of its own accord.

The school, in response to an NCAA inquiry, had been looking into possible recruiting violations.

The 58-year-old Harrick was informed of the firing by Young and Dalis after practice Tuesday.

“UCLA appreciates the hard work that Jim has invested in the men’s basketball program during his eight years as head coach, and his program has been very successful,” Young said. “However, his termination is linked to the seriousness of this situation.”

Harrick signed a five-year contract, reportedly for an annual salary of $400,000, in the summer of 1995, shortly after the Bruins won their NCAA title in Seattle.

He was cleared on Oct. 21 by the school and Pac-10 of violations in the sale of a car he owned to the older sister of standout point guard Baron Davis two days after Davis orally committed to playing for the Bruins next season.

Young said UCLA’s investigation has been reported to the Pac-10 and the NCAA, and the sale of the car was “completely unrelated” to the dismissal. A league inquiry turned up no evidence of wrongdoing in that matter.

Lavin, who was hired by Harrick, said getting the coaching job, even on an interim basis, placed him in a “difficult” situation.

“I don’t think anyone wants career advancement at the expense of someone else’s career,” he said. "I’ve spoken with coach Harrick, all I’ve tried to do is provide some support and love.”

Current assistants Michael Holton and Jim Sala will work under Lavin when the Bruins open Nov. 20 against Tulsa in the Preseason NIT.

In addition to committing an NCAA violation during a recruiting dinner, UCLA and Harrick violated NCAA rules regarding ethical conduct, for “refusal to furnish information relevant to an investigation of a possible violation of an NCAA regulation when requested to do so by the NCAA or the individual’s institution.”

The school said Harrick was charged with “knowingly furnishing false or misleading information concerning the individual’s involvement in or knowledge of matters relevant to a possible violation of an NCAA regulation.”

Harrick also violated university policy by filling a false expense report in connection with the dinner, the school said.

According to the university, a recruiting dinner at a local restaurant on Oct. 11 was attended by five current players even though only three recruits were present.

It’s against NCAA rules for a school to provide a free meal or entertainment to a student who assists in the recruitment of a prospect during an official visit unless the student is designated as the one student host for that prospect.

On Oct. 15, the school said, Harrick filed an expense report that misrepresented who attended dinner, a breach of NCAA and UCLA policy. The report did not include the names of the extra players, but did include the names of the two guests. The investigation revealed that neither guest ate dinner at the restaurant that night.

Six days later Harrick was cleared in the sale of his car.

When questioned about the dinner by UCLA officials conducting the investigation, the school said, Harrick misrepresented significant facts on more than one occasion.

Later, when confronted by university officials who had the facts of the dinner, Harrick admitted he had misled the school.

Harrick and Dalis bought a car for $19,500 from a friend of Dalis’ mother. The two owners canceled the car sale for $15,000, and Harrick and Dalis used the $4,500 to pay for the dinner.

The school said Harrick was offered the prospect of a payment towards a tuition scholarship, and he accepted. The school said Harrick did not pay for the dinner.

Harrick is linked to the seriousness of the situation...
Golden Eagles could be clipped for gambling

By JIMMY GOLEN
Associated Press

NEWTON, Mass.
Two Boston College players bet against their team in Oct. 26 loss to Syracuse, the local prosecutor said today. The school said those two players and 11 teammates were suspended for betting on sports.

Middlesex County District Attorney Thomas Reilly said there was no evidence of point-shaving, but he noted that an investigation was continuing.

Syracuse beat BC 45-17. One of the players was a member of the special teams, but neither player was in a position to affect the outcome of the game, Reilly said.

Reilly said a total of 13 BC players had bet on college and pro football and on major league baseball games, including this year's World Series.

The bets ranged from $25-$50 to "several hundred dollars and others that were much higher," Reilly said.

A list of players "suspended for failure to meet their responsibilities as a student athlete at Boston College" was released, but there was no indication which of the players might have bet against their own team.

At an afternoon news conference BC athletic director Chet Gladchuk said, "When it comes to the moral and ethical con­duct of our players and when it pertains to the integrity of our university, there will be no compromises at Boston College.

The suspended players were identified as running back Jamal Anderson, offensive lineman Marcus Bembry, defensive back Paul Cary, defensive linemen John Coleman and Dan Collins, wide receivers Chris Covone, Steve Everson and Brandon King, tight end Scott Dragoes, center Kyle Geiselman, linebackers Brian Mays and Jermaine Monk, and tight end Rob Tarido.

Syracuse was a 13-point favorite against Boston College but trailed 14-7 before rallying for 17 straight points in the first half of the first half.

The Orange got the ball for those three scores on two BC punts and an interception.

The 8,800-student school was for failure to meet their responsibilities.

Gladchuk said, "When it comes to our players and when it pertains to the integrity of our university, there will be no compromises at Boston College.

The 8,800-student school was at the center of a point-shaving scandal in 1982 when Rick Kuhn was sentenced to 10 years in federal prison for his role in fixing six basketball games during the 1978-79 season.

Initial reports pointed to a similar problem this time.

But coach Dan Henning, either knowing or hoping that no such evidence existed, stressed Tuesday that things could have been worse.

"We're dealing with a situation here where the NCAA has a rule, but there are going to be some individuals here that are going to live with some kind of problem if they have bet on a game," the embattled coach said. "That's not my major concern.

"My major concern is if anybody on our football team has bet on our game and against us. That's an indefensible position."

Henning has closed practices this week as the team prepares for its biggest game of the year, on Saturday against No. 17 Notre Dame at the Meadowlands.

"We'll deal with that when the time comes," he said. "But right now, it is not something that it was originally thought.

Henning said Speight and another player whom he did not identify had asked out of practice Monday and would sit out again on Tuesday. Speight has denied any gambling.

"He (Speight) doesn't feel like he can practice football as long as his name has been put up like that," Henning said. "He's unfortunate. But I certainly understand his feelings."

"THE DOMER"

Now, you can own your very own piece of Notre Dame Stadium. This exclusively manufactured piece for students features an authentic piece of brick from the Stadium and a plate citing its origin mounted on a solid walnut base. A certificate of authenticity is affixed to the bottom.

Pick up your "Domer" at:
LaFortune Center Information Desk 9 a.m. - 8 p.m. Mon. - Fri. 12 noon - 8 p.m. Sat. & Sun.
Please be sure to bring your I.D. card! (Limit one piece/person)
Drop-in Volleyball - RecSports will be offering Drop-in Volleyball on tonight and Tues., Nov. 12, Dec. 3, and Dec. 10, from 7-10 p.m. in the Joyce Center.

Late Night Olympic Steering Committee - Anyone interested in serving on the Late Night Olympic Steering Committee, please call Kara at 1-5237.

Off-Campus A-team Basketball - If interested in off-campus basketball contact Jeff Milligan at 271-9423.

Off-Campus Volleyball - Anyone interested in playing off-campus intramural volleyball please call Greg at 273-9553.

Basketball ticket sales will be extended until Monday on first come, first serve basis. They will also be sold at Moonlight Madness Saturday night.

Basketball Clinic - The Notre Dame women's basketball team will be holding a free basketball clinic on Sat., Nov. 9 at 10:30 a.m. in the Joyce Center. For more information and to register all participants call 1-6969.

"It's not a question of money," Irish athletic director Mike Wadsworth said. "It's a question of whether it would be the kind of game that gives the coaches and players a challenge." The only other option involves a "concession" on the part of another bowl that already has conference commitments. Wadsworth may have to work some kind of deal if the Irish are not chosen for an Alliance bowl game.

"The only issue I raise is this: is it a good thing for college football for a successful Notre Dame team to have no significant bowl game."

Corsu believes Notre Dame's popularity and huge following will translate into good TV ratings which would make the Irish very appealing. The Irish, however, would like to make the decision easier for the Bowl Alliance by winning each of its last four games.

What happens if the Irish fail to earn a spot in one of the Alliance bowl games? There is only one bowl game in the country that does not have contractual obligations with conferences to fill both of its spots. That game is the New Era Independence Bowl. If the Irish travel to Shreveport, Louisiana, for the December 31 contest, they would face the National Championship game.

Corsu believes Notre Dame's popularity and huge following will translate into good TV ratings which would make the Irish very appealing. The Irish, however, would like to make the decision easier for the Bowl Alliance by winning each of its last four games.

What happens if the Irish fail to earn a spot in one of the Alliance bowl games? There is only one bowl game in the country that does not have contractual obligations with conferences to fill both of its spots. That game is the New Era Independence Bowl. If the Irish travel to Shreveport, Louisiana, for the December 31 contest, they would face the National Championship game.

Corsu believes Notre Dame's popularity and huge following will translate into good TV ratings which would make the Irish very appealing. The Irish, however, would like to make the decision easier for the Bowl Alliance by winning each of its last four games.

What happens if the Irish fail to earn a spot in one of the Alliance bowl games? There is only one bowl game in the country that does not have contractual obligations with conferences to fill both of its spots. That game is the New Era Independence Bowl. If the Irish travel to Shreveport, Louisiana, for the December 31 contest, they would face the National Championship game.

Corsu believes Notre Dame's popularity and huge following will translate into good TV ratings which would make the Irish very appealing. The Irish, however, would like to make the decision easier for the Bowl Alliance by winning each of its last four games.

What happens if the Irish fail to earn a spot in one of the Alliance bowl games? There is only one bowl game in the country that does not have contractual obligations with conferences to fill both of its spots. That game is the New Era Independence Bowl. If the Irish travel to Shreveport, Louisiana, for the December 31 contest, they would face the National Championship game.

Corsu believes Notre Dame's popularity and huge following will translate into good TV ratings which would make the Irish very appealing. The Irish, however, would like to make the decision easier for the Bowl Alliance by winning each of its last four games.

What happens if the Irish fail to earn a spot in one of the Alliance bowl games? There is only one bowl game in the country that does not have contractual obligations with conferences to fill both of its spots. That game is the New Era Independence Bowl. If the Irish travel to Shreveport, Louisiana, for the December 31 contest, they would face the National Championship game.

Corsu believes Notre Dame's popularity and huge following will translate into good TV ratings which would make the Irish very appealing. The Irish, however, would like to make the decision easier for the Bowl Alliance by winning each of its last four games.

What happens if the Irish fail to earn a spot in one of the Alliance bowl games? There is only one bowl game in the country that does not have contractual obligations with conferences to fill both of its spots. That game is the New Era Independence Bowl. If the Irish travel to Shreveport, Louisiana, for the December 31 contest, they would face the National Championship game.

Corsu believes Notre Dame's popularity and huge following will translate into good TV ratings which would make the Irish very appealing. The Irish, however, would like to make the decision easier for the Bowl Alliance by winning each of its last four games.

What happens if the Irish fail to earn a spot in one of the Alliance bowl games? There is only one bowl game in the country that does not have contractual obligations with conferences to fill both of its spots. That game is the New Era Independence Bowl. If the Irish travel to Shreveport, Louisiana, for the December 31 contest, they would face the National Championship game.
Happy Birthday! In the next year of your life...ertura...
SPORTS

Thursday, November 7, 1996

Women's Soccer
Trophy Fish leads backfield with consistency
Fisher's solid play essential to defensive unit
By KATHLEEN LOPEZ
Sports Writer

At the beginning of the season, the main focus for the Irish was defense. The defense has developed into one of the strongest in the nation, capitalizing on an outstanding defense in guidance, leadership, and determination.

Senior Kate Fisher provides these elements for head coach Charlie Neibauer. She is not one of the more recognized players on the team, but she is one of the most valuable.

"Kate plays an important role on the team," said Petrucelli about her senior. She is not extremely vocal when it comes to being in the spotlight, she prefers to show her power on the field. Besides shutting down many of the opponent's attackers, she is known for making breaks down the sideline sparking the attack.

"She is an intense individual on and off the field," said Petrucelli. Fisher starts for the Irish defense at left back, and is a member of the winningest class in the history of the women's soccer program. She has been a solid defensive wall for this most successful class.

While at Notre Dame, Fisher has found herself at various positions. She started her career with the Irish at forward, where she came off the bench to ignite offensive opportunities, chalking up four goals and ten assists.

"She came in as a forward," said Petrucelli about Fisher's initial role on the team. "And then we swapped her into the midfield. Her best spot is in left back."

Ron Pavon in her sophomore year, she made the switch, which landed her in the position that she presently dominates. Due to an injury to her teammate, Julie Vogel, Fisher switched to defense. She started every game at defender, and registered 13 assists.

"She plays two roles," said Petrucelli about the defender. "One role involves the defending aspect. Kate does an excellent job shutting down the player."

Then last year, Fisher strengthened the backfield yet again for the team. She scored her first goal since her freshman year, and she registered six assists.

This year Fisher has proven dominance on the field. At this point in the season, she has scored a goal in the game against Santa Clara. Also she has registered ten assists. Besides the statistics, Fisher has found herself named to two all-tournament teams, at the Duke adidas soccer Classic and the Santa Clara Nike Classic. "She is getting the recognition that she deserves," said fellow teammate senior Megan Mooney.

After Kate Fisher's switch from forward to defender, she has been a cornerstone in her career she has thrived earning numerous all-tournament selections.

see FISHER / page 14

Football
Bowl picture remains unclear
By TODD FITZPATRICK
Sports Writer

With a national championship and an appearance in the Sugar Bowl out of reach, the Irish football team must strive for most modest post season goals. So the question remains. Who will Notre Dame be playing on New Year's weekend? The easy answer is: it depends.

Despite a season that fell short of many Irish expectations, Notre Dame could still play in an Alliance bowl. Unless a natural disaster wipes out half of the nation's ranked teams, Notre Dame will not play in the Sugar Bowl. But Notre Dame still has a shot at the Fiesta Bowl or Orange Bowl. Here's where it gets confusing. Four of the six Alliance spots will be awarded to the champions of the Atlantic Coast, Big East, Big 12 and Southeastern conferences. The remaining two bids are awarded to at-large schools. That's where Notre Dame could sneak into the Fiesta or Orange.

According to the Bowl Alliance rules and regulations, the remaining two at-large positions may be filled by an at-large team eligible for post season competition if they meet one of the following requirements:

1) has won at least 8 college football games during the most recently completed regular season; not to include wins in either the Pigskin or Kickoff Classic.
2) is ranked among the Top 12 bowl eligible teams in either the AP or the CNN/USA Today final regular season polls.

If ranked no lower than either the AP or the CNN/USA Today Poll than the lowest ranked team selected by a Bowl from the Conference Champions.

Contrary to popular belief, the Irish do not need to finish in the Top 12 to be eligible for an Alliance bowl. They only need to meet one of the Alliance's requirements, the easiest of which would be to win at least 8 games. To meet this requirement, the Irish need to win 3 of their last 4 games. ESPN analyst Lee Corso said that: "If the Irish are 8-3, "they're going anywhere they want except the Sugar Bowl." That remains to be seen, but

Due to the losses to Ohio State and Air Force, coach Lou Holtz and the Notre Dame players will still need to work. Last week, Fisher's running game found new life as the offensive line anchored by the safety of the offensive line.

The Fisher Rush vs. the Planner offense since the majority of their attack depended on quarterback Mike Daigler will again be called upon to provide a key rushing yard. Not to be overlooked, however, are the rushing talents of Dave Lachota and Erik Himan. QB Mike Daigler will probably be expected to pass more this week, especially in key game situations. This factor will be especially key since the Fisher secondary looked shaky last year at times against the Alumni secondaries.

The Fisher defensive line has shown that they could shut down even the best running game in the league by completely dominating the Fisher offense last week against the Planner defense. This could prove to be especially troublesome for the Planner offense since the majority of their attack depended on the running game.

see BOWL / page 14

see INTERHALL FOOTBALL / page 14

see page 12

Inside

Harrick gets the boot

Dodge earns rookie of the year

 see page 10

Soccer
Trophy Fish leads backfield with consistency
By ADRIAN WILKERCSON
Sports Writer

It is one year later, and one round earlier, but make no mistake about it, Flanner Hall knows that is their chance for redemption.

There would be no better way for the 'Cocks to cap off their final season than to erase the memories of last year's triple-overtime defeat at the hands of the Fisher Green Wave.

This rematch has additional importance, the winner goes to Notre Dame Stadium for what would be Flanner's second chance at a championship and Fisher's opportunity to repeat as interhall champions. Here are the key matchups for this Sunday's game at Stagap North.

The Fisher Rush vs. the Flanner Defensive Front Seven
This aspect alone will determine Fisher's chances for success. Last week, Fisher's running game found new life as they ran through the Alumni defensive line, one that was considered the league's best.

Fisher will also count on quarterback Alfredo Rodriguez to repeat last week's impressive rushing numbers. The safety of the running game will depend on the defensive line anchored by Sean Lynch and Brian Regan to stonewall the Flanner line in the much the same manner as the winningest class in the history of the women's soccer program. Essential to an out-

see INTERHALL FOOTBALL / page 14

see page 12

see page 10

see page 12