King's legacy, challenge celebrated

Prayer service begins week-long tribute

The 40th birthday of the late Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was celebrated last night in the Chapel of the Holy Cross with a prayer service. The celebration, filled with singing and dancing, was meant to praise the philosophies and dreams of the late Civil Rights leader.

The festivities last night were the first in a week long series of events which will last through Monday, the observed Martin Luther King Jr. holiday.

"The words of King's "I Have a Dream" speech echoed throughout the chapel as the audience could feel the impact of the evening's activities. Chandra Johnson, director of the Martin Luther King Jr. Celebration Committee then challenged the audience, in a short greeting, to fully grasp and understand King's teachings.

The Faith Christian Center Church Children's Sign Choir performed at last right's prayer service honoring Martin Luther King, Jr.

The musical and dynamic talents of Notre Dame students and South Bend community members highlighted the evening which was capped off by the keynote address of Glos Cowell, an associate professor of history at Morehouse College.

After the introduction from Johnson, the Faith Christian Center Church Children's Sign Choir sang "O Se Baba," or "Thank You Father," a Nigerian praise song. The children, who ranged in age from five to 10, later performed "Hallelujah" and "God Bless America."

Brian Lewis, a senior from Alumni Hall, then delivered a dramatic interpretation of "A Man's Destiny," a moving piece by entertainer Harry Belfonte dealing with the "measure of a man's destiny."

London program relocates

Notre Dame's London Centre program will undergo a relocation of its classroom facility in the 1998-99 school year.

Notre Dame's lease on the current Albemarle Street facility expires this year, and because the current building lacks expansion space, Notre Dame has purchased an 85-year lease on a new location.

"We have the lease on Albemarle Street which expires on Christmas day, 1997," said Father Timothy Scully, vice president and senior associate provost of Notre Dame.

"As an incoming provost, I had to get a building. I looked and looked, but I couldn't find anything attractive so I had our real estate agent write a letter stating our position and asking for assistance.1 The British School of Osteopathy wrote back and said they would be interested in offering a facility.

The new building, located on Suffolk Street on the northwest corner of Trafalgar Square, is the same distance in relation to student housing as the current building. Before establishing the classroom facility, the University will undertake a multi-million dollar renovation which will equip the Pedestrians, joggers, and rollerbladers should breathe a bit easier this semester when they use the campus roads.

According to Rex Rakow, director of Notre Dame Security, efforts are being made to more rigidly control vehicular access to the Notre Dame campus.

"We will be trying to direct traffic on the central campus more effectively," Rakow stated. "We need to slow those cars down."

Plans include the addition of more stop signs and tougher enforcement of the 20 mph speed limit.

"It's tough to keep it at 20, that is really slow," Rakow admitted, "but it's necessary for safety."

He cited ice and snow, which translate into longer stopping distances, as a hard rule to enforce.

"This is a pedestrian campus. Students should be able to enjoy it without fearing for their safety from speeding cars," Rakow asserted.

A holiday of arctic hell

Well rested after the break! I was transported from my Luz-e Recliner to the Arctic cold of Colorado shortly after the new year. The vacation break had ended, and the family vacation had begun. Now, I was under the impression that family vacations died at the turn of the age. So did my brother — he’s 23.

With accumulating Christmas debts and sleep deprivation setting in, suddenly, ‘getting away with the family’ sounded so good. On vacation I could eat and sleep as much as I want...and here’s the kicker — it was all free!

I arrived late at the hotel and had dinner with first dinner the night we got in. I stared at the menu, trying to calculate what the cheapest dish would be with tax and service. But then I saw the light. Two key words: Mom and Dad.

I looked back down the hall. There I looked at the wine list. My brother and I con…

This family bonding thing was getting old, and more people from Generation X can be expected to return to church as they start families, the findings indicate many young people not to be the family they grew up with.

Well, I should be more specific. Technically, this vacation did not have a moment where I wasn’t treated like royalty. Everything paid for. Nothing in this world is free, and John (my brother) and I paid for the flight with our free…

Public approval of President Clinton’s job performance hit a record high last week in a pre-inaugural poll that also found Congress with an improved image despite the overwhelming unpopularity of House Speaker Newt Gingrich. Clinton’s 59 percent approval rating was up from 54 percent in the Pew Research Center survey released the 56 percent score he registered just after taking office in January 1993. Thirty-one percent of those surveyed in the new poll disapproved of the way Clinton is handling his job as president, with 36 percent declining to offer an opinion. Democrats overwhelmingly embraced their relected president — 86 percent approved of his job performance. Even three in 10 Republicans approved of Clinton’s job performance. Still, 70 percent said the interconnectedness of Democratic National Committee fund rais…

Boy charged with killing stepfather

An 8-year-old boy was charged with beating his stepfather to death, the Reaseaske Times reported today. Bernard Rosser Jr., 55, was found dead in his home in Dec. 19 after he failed to show up for work as a Franklin County probation officer. Police said he died from a blow to the head. Authorities would say only that a juvenile was arrested Tuesday and held in the Richmond Juvenile Detention Center. According to court papers, the boy’s mother declined to comment after the hearing Tuesday, the paper said. Details about the beating were not released Wednesday, who said Rosser was engaged in child care for the Caldwell County Department of Corrections for about two years, his supervisor, Jeri Barnett, said. He was a juvenile probation and parole officer in New York City and Houston for nearly 20 years, but returns to his native county to get away from urban life, said a cousin, Lester Wainwright.

Accelerated nursing degree offered at SMC

Special to The Observer

College graduates can earn a bachelor of science degree with a major in nursing at Saint Mary’s College through the Accelerated Program in Nursing. Any qualified female college graduate who holds a baccalaureate degree in an area other than nursing is eligible to apply.

The accelerated curriculum, which leads to a bachelor of science degree in nursing in 1993 in response to the needs of its alumnae and the local community. Currently, it is the only program of its kind in the Midwest region.

In addition to the Accelerated Program in nursing, Saint Mary’s has a strong undergraduate nursing program. Both are committed to innovative and progressive education in the field.

Graduates of the accelerated program will be eligible to take the National Council Licensure Examination (NLX-N) to become registered nurses.

Every year, millions of students nationwide borrow billions of dollars to pay for their college education. Of those who borrow, over one tenth will default on their loans.

But of the more than 4,000 of the Notre Dame students who borrowed money to finance educations, nearly 99 percent pay their loans back. The loan default rate at Notre Dame, as measured by the U.S. Department of Education, is a mere 1.5 percent.

"That's one of the lowest in the country," said Joseph Russo, director of financial aid. Russo, who oversees the Row in addition, he noted, the institutions can consider a loan made to a Notre Dame student to be a sure investment.

"Because of the fact that we are so strong in our performance here, we are able to command from the lending community outstanding services for our borrowers, and for Notre Dame," he said.

Gingrich tape stirs controversy

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON

The audio tape of House Speaker Newt Gingrich plotting to hide a sealed envelope from Florida to Washington, like part of an intelligence mission.

By the time it arrived at the Justice Department on Monday night, 22 days after the surreptitious taping of the telephone call between Gingrich and other Republicans, the operation's cover was blown.

As a result, the tape is part of an ethics investigation caught up in bitter partisan fighting. The committee Democrat who received it has stepped aside from the Gingrich case. A Republican who was picking to get off the House ethics committee bowed out too, to maintain the panel's political balance. The FBI has begun a criminal investigation.

The phone call was heard on a scanner and taped in a car. The tape was delivered to a congresswoman's Florida office. In an envelope sealed with parking tape, it was mailed to the lawmaker's Washington office. There, it was handed back to the couple who made it.

They carried it to the ethics committee, and gave it to the ranking Democrat from the couple, accompanying the sealed package, said they understood they had legal immunity. It didn't say who made that promise.

Eventually the tape wound up in the hands of the press, and The New York Times ran a transcript.

The tape has become part of the political theater that has punctuated the final weeks of the ethics investigation.

Outside counsel James M. Cole's report was to be finished today, but ethics panel Chairman Nancy Johnson, R-Conn., told reporters: "It takes a while... to print it. You would not expect to see it tomorrow." Gingrich, as expected, continues to talk about the "cover was blown" story. But the formal panel's report has not been finished.

John and Alice Martin of Fort Worth, Texas, heard the conversation on the Radio Shack scanner in their car while on a Christmas shopping trip. Once they realized the conversation they were picking up was of Gingrich discussing the Republican response to his admitted ethics violations, they recorded it on a hand-held machine.

They called Rep. Karen Thurman, D-Fla., and on Jan. 2 took the tape to her Gainesville office. There, the tape was locked in a sealed envelope, wrapped in parking tape and delivered to her Washington office.

According to House Democratic lawyer David D. Gunther, Gingrich's congressional counsel, the recording was illegal.

"The penalty for a first offense is a court injunction and an unspecified fine, provided there is no illegal purpose or direct or indirect commercial gain. A second offense after an injunction carries a mandatory $500 civil fine.

"The penalties for first offense of intentional distribution of the contents of a cellular telephone calls are the same.

"The Martins' attorney, Larry Turner, said at a press conference the panel's suggestion it didn't dis- close the contents and was not asking anyone to do so.

"We asked if the FRR had simply given the tape to the ethics committee, the court would have to be hard pressed to find that illegal."}

Special interests fund "Blue Dogs"

By CONNIE CASS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON

President Clinton’s inaugural planners shunned corporate money for the main event. But special interests are quietly paying for all sorts of sideevents, from black tie balls to informal parade-watching parties for lawmakers and administration officials.

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco, drug giant Bristol-Myers Squibb, and a handful of telecommunications companies are financing a "tribute to the conservative House Democrats who call themselves ‘Blue Dogs.’"

Blue, dog-shaped cookies will be on the buffet Monday for the pivotal bloc of lawmakers whose votes could swing many issues in a Congress narrowly controlled by Republicans.

Then there’s the gala jokingly called "The Farm Prom," honoring members of the House and Senate agriculture committees, both Republican and Democrat, as well as Agriculture Department officials.

The event’s 41 sponsors, chipping in about $5,000 each, include Archer Daniels Midland, Tyson foods and other agriculture and food companies, as well as groups representing farmers who raise corn, cotton or sugar, cattle, pigs or turkeys. Black tie is optional.

"It’s a way of emphasizing for the policy-makers here the important role agriculture plays," said Ron Phillips, spokesman for The Fertilizer Institute, which is organizing the recurring events to Congress members and their aides to watch the procession from the warmth of an office window.

Through the weekend, there are parties for newly elected Congress members, for states’ congressional delegations and visiting politicians, and for leaders like House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo.

Lawmakers who want to rub shoulders with celebrities can choose from parties thrown by MTV, the American Film Institute or the Recording Industry Association of America.

Still, the corporate presence this year is far reduced from 1993, when businesses underwrote the official inaugural balls and other events with millions of dollars worth of free goods and services and $100,000 interest-free loans.

Dugged by questions about election fund-raising, the Clinton team decided this time contributions to $100 this time, and to accept no in-kind gifts or corporate loans. It doesn’t hurt that they started with a $9 million surplus from the 1993 inaugural.

That leaves unofficial parties as the only outlet for corporate big spenders.

Lobbyists acknowledge they use inaugural parties to help nurture friendships with lawmakers, even if the crowds and festive mood make it tough to talk shop.

Career comes full circle for superintendent

By THERESA HUMPHREY
Associated Press Writer

WHISTINGTON Md.

When J. Wayne Whittington claimed he was "in school superintendent business" because he is black, the jury did more than just give him his good name back. It suggested the district put that name on a school.

On Wednesday, the district that just renaming Grafold Primary School the H. DeWayne Whittington Primary School.

"It means more to the black community than anything else," said the 65-year-old educator, who also was awarded $920,000 in his race-discrimination lawsuit.

For many of the 320 people who crowded into the school gymnasium, it was a fitting tribute on the 68th birthday of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

But to Whittington and many school officials in Somerset County, on Maryland’s rural Eastern Shore, it was a hard feeling victory.

No sign went up with Whittington’s name on a school. Instead, the school district flashed an old projector with the school’s name change on a piece of stationery.

"I will forgive them," Whittington said. "But I don’t think I will ever forget what they did to him.

Whittington—who in four decades worked his way up from high school class vale-dictorian to teacher, principal and finally superintendent—was ousted in 1992 when the Somerset County Board of Education voted 3-2 to let his contract expire without explana tion. One board member said a reporter he “did not want a bigger running the schools,” according to Whittington’s 1992 lawsuit. He claimed another board member once asked a local artist to create a sign with KKK on it.

After losing his job, Whittington was so ashamed he couldn’t watch a video of a dinner held in his honor. He avoided people and cried at home.

He vividly recalls a visit to a middle school in his last days as superintendent. When he tried to correct the behavior of a black sixth-grader, the child turned on Whittington.

"He said ‘You can’t tell me what to do, you lost your job.’

Since then, two of the board members have been replaced by two former white suburbanites ever to serve on the board.

There is still no love lost between Whittington and his former colleagues. He hasn’t heard from them ever since.

His lawsuit polarized the county and Grafold, a hamlet of 2,880 people some 20 miles northwest of the county seat. Whittington did the end of the lawsuit in June, at best, an uneasy closure.
 Rebels accept peace proposal

By JOSEPH FRAZIER

LIMA, Peru

Leftist rebels agreed Wednesday to participate in talks to end Peru's month-old hostage crisis on the condition that everything — including for freedom for their jailed comrades — be on the table.

The announcement, made in a two-way radio transmission from the seized Japanese ambassador's residence, appeared to be the first major break in the standoff since the Tupac Amaru rebels released seven hostages on New Year's Day.

Negotiations to free the 74 remaining hostages had been stalled since then, with each side hardening its position.

President Alberto Fujimori has refused the rebels' demand that he free hundreds of jailed guerrillas. The government's initial response to Wednesday's rebel announcement didn't waver from that position.

Defense Minister Gen. Tomas Castillo said he welcomed a solution — within the bounds established earlier by Fujimori. There was no immediate word on whether the government would harden its position.

We think this demand should be addressed without any obstacles ... so that the situation can be solved as soon as possible.

A Tupac Amara rebel leader

Rebel negotiator Domingo Palermo has met rebel leader Nestor Cerpa only once, on Dec. 31. Plans for a second meeting collapsed Sunday when the rebels demanded that Palermo bring a proposal to free the jailed rebels.

Instead, Palermo proposed that a commission — including representatives of both sides, the Red Cross and the Roman Catholic Church — be set up to negotiate an end to the crisis.

Details on when and where the negotiating panel will meet have yet to be settled.

Palermo had said the commission's agenda should include "all themes identified in previous contacts." It wasn't clear whether that extended to possible freedom for jailed guerrillas.

But in their radio transmission, the rebels insisted that everything, including the fate of their imprisoned comrades, be open for discussion.

"We think this demand should be addressed without any obstacles ... so that the situation can be solved as soon as possible," said a man who identified himself as Cerpa.

Hebron accord sparks angry debate in Cabinet

By NICOLAS TATRO
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM

An angry debate erupted in the Israeli Cabinet today after Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu presented the accord he signed hours earlier with Yasser Arafat on troop pullbacks from Hebron and rural areas of the West Bank.

Science Minister Benjamin Netanyahu interrupted Netanyahu to challenge his sales pitch for the accord, an Israeli official said, describing the clash as "vicious" and held amid "tremendous tension." The official spoke on condition of anonymity.

"The prime minister committed himself to give away sections of the Jewish homeland. He gets zero from Arafat," Begin said on Israeli radio before the meeting.

Nine hours into the stormy meeting, Cabinet members abruptly broke off their talks, angered by an Israeli TV report that the United States did not intend to let Israel decide for itself the extent of its troop withdrawal from the West Bank.

The meeting resumed only after U.S. envoy Dennis Ross called the Cabinet members himself to assure them the TV report did not reflect U.S. policy, an Israeli official said.

Ending months of wrangling, Netanyahu and Arafat shook hands today after reaching the agreement designed to jolt the peace process back to life. The accord is the third concrete step in the process since Netanyahu's government took office in June, pledging to slow the handover of land to Palestinians.

Israel radio said the Hebron redeployment would be completed in about 48 hours, with the start coming as early as Friday.

Netanyahu reportedly has an 11-7 majority in the Cabinet despite the rebellion in coalition ranks, mainly from hard-liners in his Likud Party. The main opposition in the Cabinet was to Israel's agreement to complete three further withdrawals after Hebron by mid-1998.

The Palestinians expect to control more than 80 percent of the West Bank by the middle of next year. But David Bar-Ilan, an adviser to Netanyahu, said there was enough flexibility in the agreement to allow Israel to keep most of the West Bank.

"I assume we will be able to keep under the present agreement over 50 percent of the West Bank if we find it necessary," he said.

Netanyahu's most ardent past supporters — the Israeli settlers of the West Bank and Gaza were astounded by the agreement. However, the Tel Aviv stock market welcomed the news, rallying 1.5 percent.

"Netanyahu wrote a book that said there should be no surrender to terrorism, and now he signed an agreement with a terrorist group," said Noam Arnon, head of the 500 Jewish settlers who live among 130,000 Palestinians in Hebron.

DARE TO DREAM WITH US

This weekend begins a celebration of the life and contributions of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. It is a celebration marked not only by officialdom, and not only in places like Washington, D.C. or Atlanta. It is a life celebrated here, at Notre Dame, as well. We celebrate Dr. King's life because of the prophet that he was, even to the point of death, for justice, for equality and for peace. This weekend begins a series of events which are meant to awaken in us the spirit which Dr. King engendered in a nation and a people. The stakes are high and to lose is much to lose. The challenge is to take the risks that we must to constantly revive and renew that very spirit of justice and of equality.

I believe that this is an important moment for this community. It is a time and an opportunity for us to take stock, to examine our relationships and our attitudes, and to bring to prayer and action our hope for a better world. This celebration beckons us to consider our own prejudices, as individuals and as a community. It is time for us to challenge one another in those situations from which we may all too often, and all too quickly, shy away. It has never been easy to stand up against injustice or prejudice. It wasn't easy for Dr. King, and it won't be easy for us. But in his wake I am left with persistent questions which keep me for complacency: What am I doing to assure the just treatment of all people? Would I be willing to die for what I believe to be ultimately true? Am I really living the gospel that I profess? The matters are weighty ones, for all of us.

There is little that I could say here that could add either to the volumes of praise and commentary which have been produced in response to Dr. King's life and writings, or to the contributions which he himself made to our country and world. My inclination, instead, is to use Dr. King's words to speak to the temptation we may feel to step outside of the fray, and to stand clear of the battle for justice and for economic and racial equality:

If a man happens to be 36 years old, as I happen to be, and some great truth stands before the door of his life, some great opportunity to stand up for that which is right and that which is just, and he refuses to stand up because he wants to live a little longer and he is afraid his home will get bombed, or he is afraid that he will lose his job, or he is afraid that he will get shot, he may go on and live until he's 80, and the cessation of breathing in his life is merely the belated announcement of an earlier death of the spirit.

We die when we refuse to stand up for that which is right. We die when we refuse to take a stand for that which is true. So we are going to stand up right here... letting the world know that we are determined to be free.

This article is, in the end, an appeal for all of us here at Notre Dame to stand together for that which is right, to stand together for that which is true. Whatever one might think of him, Dr. King's contribution to this nation and the world are undeniable. He woke a world from complacency and indifference, and articulated a dream which has given hope to generations of Americans. That dream is a universal one, one which seeks love and justice for all people, regardless of race or creed. It is a quest that this community must claim as its own. The Gospel which we here so proudly profess, demands it of us. Please, stand with us in reviving the dream.

hours one Thanksgiving weekend doing 120 mph down the expressway for L-O-V-E; Carl, who flew to Italy to get dumped; or Martha, who used to FedEx peanut butter and marshmallow cream cheese to her boyfriend every third Monday of the month until he dropped her for his next-door neighbor. Let alone that you’re ‘just not that type of person.’ Lose five points for lack of forethought.

Receive a phone call when you least expect it. Spend forty minutes realizing that your boyfriend (or girlfriend) is supposed to be in the car, in the hotel, in the hospital, waiting for you. Break down and use the phone. Use the $10 calling card you had stashed in the back of your purse or wallet for emergencies. When that runs out, learn to call during the Magic Hours: midnight to two a.m. Spend every other night out in the hallway in your jammies with the phone, listening for a familiar voice. Realize that you used to mock people who did this. Realize the whole thing is ridiculous. Give up on the idea of seeing him or her. Lose five points for confusion.

Every minute you spend crying in your best friend’s room while they try to cheer you up, lose two points for blatant displays of emotional suffering.

Get a phone call ten minutes later from him or her offering to pay your airline ticket. Remember that this will go off without a hitch. Take your car and a fistful of dollars for the toll road. Figure you’ll tell your friends and make up for the Chunky Monkey. Lose ten points.

6. Wallflowers - Bringing Down the Horse
8. Black 47 - Green Suede Shoes
9. Local H - As Good as Dead
10. Various Artists - Trainspotting Soundtrack

In an age of "buzz clips" being a one-hit wonder is not as shameful as it once was. Some bands seem to put out albums without worrying about the strength of the entire product. It was tough to come up with ten groups that had solid records. Trainspotting a highly acclaimed independent movie release spawned a soundtrack that includes Iggy Pop on one of his better singles in recent years. The album has some weak spots, but they are few and far between.

Local H brought the duo into the realm of workable combinations. The group's pounding rhythms and heavily distorted guitars create a unique sound that does not die throughout the album. Black 47 came back with another album of traditional Irish instruments mixed with old fashioned rock-and-roll. This album, like each of their others, burns onto the scene and then burns out almost as quickly. It was, however, a very complete effort.

B.B. King released a collection of his best live tracks including some that were not previously released in the United States. The album shows the old bluesman in his fits greatly from his inherited song writing and his work over the last thirty years. Jakob Dylan's band, Wallflowers, benefits greatly from his inherited song writing talent in creating a solid, strong album.

One of the top blues labels in the world, Alligator Records turned 25 this year. In celebration they released a two-disc set of tracks from most of their most famous artists. The album is a must have for anybody interested in the state of modern blues. Soundgarden continues to turn out quality songs with almost no effort. Beck, who seems to have grown up in the last couple of years, departed from the noise that was Mellon Gold to create a solid, melodic album with Odelay. Sublime brought out their self-titled major-label release to great critical acclaim. Unfortunately, because of the lead singer's death from heroin overdose in April it was their last. They did, however, leave a very jumpy, fun album of reggae-tinted rock behind.

The top release of 1996 was the Refreshments Fizzy, Fuzzy, Big and Buzzy. The songs are infectious. They combine humour with serious situations that make their songs interesting as well as fun to listen to. There is not a bad song on this album.

Charles Dickens wrote "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times." This quote seems to epitomize the year of 1996 in music. Smashing Pumpkins enjoyed remarkable success, but their touring became solely about "THE DEED." Smashing Pumpkins' The Aeroplane Flies High epitomizes the youthful brashness of the band.

Sublime's self titled album, despite being one of their weaker efforts is still a great album while Brit Pop sensation, Pulp, managed to churn out another great album with Different Class. Wilco gave a strong effort with Being There and rumor has it may appear some time in February at Notre Dame.

Rivers Cuomo and crew added another great album to their discography with Pinkerton. Like Beck they seemed to show a little more maturity with this album. "Tired of Sex" is a very memorable song as Weezer searches for love rather than sex, proving that we (being the male population of the world) don't care solely about "THE DEED".

A trio of Ireland's youngsters known as Ash came together to form their second album 1997, appropriately named after the year in which the trio was born. Their album is full of energy and includes some Star Wars samples. Their anathematic "Girl From Mars" epitomizes the youthful brashness of the band.

So what can we expect from 1997? Will one hit wonders continue to inundate the air waves? Will Blackwater's painful "No Diggity" continue to make listeners ill? Will Perry Farrell ever sober up enough to realize that Jane's Addiction was much better than Perry vs Floyds ever will be? Surely, it will be interesting year indeed. We will just have to wait and see.
The 10 Best Albums of 1996

1. Pulp - Different Class
2. Nick Cave and the Bad Seeds - Murder Ballads
3. Various Artists - Trainspotting Soundtrack
4. Suede - Coming Up
5. Republica - Republica
6. Sleeper - The It Girl
7. Cocteau Twins - Milk and Kisses
8. Imperial Teen - Seasick
9. Orbital - InSides
10. REM - New Adventures in Hi-Fi

The January release of Pulp's Different Class went largely unnoticed by the same general public and made little impact on the charts and this is a shame considering the quality of the album. Brilliant in concert, Pulp have made headlines in many places, and despite being around for years this album represented a breakthrough due to uncontrained imagination which played such an important role in its composition. Pulp have never been afraid to be them themselves and damn what others think, and when this attitude is combined with genuine talent a great album was the result. Nick Cave shares a similar attitude, and to release an album made up of entirely gruesome stories concerning various murders was perhaps not every publicist's dream - yet he did it and what emerged was a spectacular and memorable collection both haunting and funny with some excellent guest vocalists. "Trainspotting was a great movie, and the album which accompanied it included Pulp, Lou Reed, Iggy Pop, Blur, Elastica, Sleeper, New Order and Underworld, whose techno anthem "Born Slippy" is a classic of its genre. Suede's third release was met with critical acclaim and good sales, welcome relief for the critics' favorite target. Republica appeared on the scene with a storming single of universal appeal and an album of similar pounding energy. Sleeper did their bit and improved greatly over their previous work while the Cocteau Twins came out with what seems like their hundredth album, and one of their most esoteric to date. Imperial Teen showed that intelligent pop never dies, and Orbital carried on in their role as leaders of the techno armies. Finally REM released one of their most difficult albums which did, however, contain enough moments of brilliance to warrant its place in the top ten. It was a good year all around.

In eight years as the San Francisco 49ers coach, George Seifert won the team's last Super Bowl and then left his team since the start of the season as a head coach. With a record of 108-35-0, Seifert is the franchise's all-time winningest coach and has a winning percentage of .755, which is 49 wins faster than any other NFL coach.

"It's a big surprise, a shock," said correspondent Tyreek Drakeford. "I don't know if it is something that happened in a spur of the moment type thing. From what I understand, Seifert is always under pressure to win the Super Bowl. It keeps mounting each year he doesn't win it. That's part of the business. You take it as it comes."

Certainly, Seifert's departure signals wide-ranging changes for the 49ers, whose season ended in a 34-15 playoff loss at Green Bay two weeks ago.

Defensive coordinator Pete Carroll, a candidate for the St. Louis Rams job, was passed over and the move appears to seal the fate of offensive coordinator Marc Trestman, whose departure has been rumored after players grumbled about his play calling.

Mariucci was schooled in the 49ers system while working for the Packers, getting much of the credit for turning Fave into a two-time NFL MVP.

Under Mariucci, Favre became one of the youngest quarterbacks in NFL history to play in the Pro Bowl and he finished his first year with the Packers in 1992. "There's no doubt of the one-third of the teams have made changes," said Mariucci. "Favre, 57 next week, won Super Bowl in 1989 and 1994. With a record of 108-35-0, Seifert is the franchise's all-time winningest coach and has a winning percentage of .755, which is 49 wins faster than any other NFL coach."

DOING IT...

Rick Duda started competing in triathlons six years ago. Since then, he has built quite a name for himself. From 1993 to 1996, Duda earned All-American Triathlete Honors, and was Junior National Champion in '94. As a member of Team USA for the past two years, he competed in two world championships: Cancun in '95 and Cleveland in '96. He also competed in four national championships.

Duda turned in his best performance to date at the U.S. National Amateur Championship this year in Orange County, where he placed sixth. As a member of the U.S. National Team, Duda spent the past two summers training in Colorado Springs. His dream is to compete in the 2000 Olympics, where the triathlon will be featured for the first time.

Duda is a junior who is enrolled in the College of Business. If you're interested in learning more about his training, or if you'd just like to join him for a run, Duda's running group leaves from the main building every Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. Beat him, and make a name for yourself, too.

CAMPUS CORRESPONDENT: TIMOTHY S. MCCOMM, JUNIOR

Perhaps there's a pair of worn-out athletic shoes in your closet that deserves an honorable retirement. The duct tape-encrusted high tops you wore the first time you stuck big brother's jumper back in his face, the running shoes that carried you over the river and through the woods for months on end without a whimper—those puppies deserve more than the usual Dumpster burial.

NIKE'S Reuse-a-Shoe campaign gives you that chance. Each year, NIKE collects more than a million pairs of shoes at retail outlets, community centers—and college campuses—across the country. The shoes then are ground into materials that can be used to construct running tracks, basketball and tennis courts. The program keeps tons of matter out of our nation's landfills. It also provides a fitting way to pay homage.

Watch this space for details about where to find Reuse-a-Shoe collection canisters around campus this spring.
The Packers played at Lambeau three times in December and in the playoffs against San Francisco in a driving rainstorm that reduced the field to a mud pit. Last Sunday, Green Bay beat Carolina in mud-17 wind chill on Sunday.

Bledsoe could site Dan Marino, who was the youngest quarterback to win a Super Bowl at age 23 in the 1985 game. Marino lost; Staubach and Ken Stabler were when their teams won the big three. Bart Starr got two.

But Bledsoe, despite a so-so performance in the AFC Championship game against Jacksonville, deserves some credit, too. No less an authority than Parcells says so.

"You've got to play with it to keep the ball away from Brett Favre. It means winning with it to keep the ball away from Brett Favre. It means establishing Martin and the running game and sticking with it to keep the ball away from Brett Favre. It means keeping that suddenly stingy Patriots defense off the field as much as possible.

It means playing Packer offense," he said.

"That's a good question," the Packers' coach said Wednesday, "I think in both the 49ers game and the Carolina game, the conditions for throwing the ball were poor. And so, yes, you had to run the ball more. And I'm not sure that we're going to run the ball as much, because we don't have to worry about that stuff."

Yet, in his next breath, Holmgren shows how loathe he is to cut back on the running game that plowed over oppo­nents, made his West Coast off­ense more effective than ever and carried the Packers to the NFC title.

"We have had some bad success running the ball. So, if we can keep that up, obviously we're a better offensive team, if we can have balance like that."

Holmgren said.

Favre threw just 15 passes against the 49ers, completing 11 for 79 yards. Against the Panthers, he was 19-of-29 for 292 yards, but it was all predi­cated on the run, as halfbacks Levens and Bennett jumped-started the team following the bruising blocks of Henderson and tight end Mark Chmura.

"Our running game was butchered early on. I've always said we've run a real running team," Favre said. "But when the conditions have gotten bad, we've turned to the running game and ran really well. We're just going with it."

"I make my job a lot easier," Favre added. "I wasn't really worried in that game because we were running the ball so well. We know something would open up and it did. When you've got Edgar and Dorsey and Levens, they're our best combina­tion in the league."

On Sunday, Levens rushed 10 times for 88 yards and caught five passes for 117. Bennett reached the Super Bowl by averaged 22 times for 99 yards.

General manager Ron Wolf said last week that "our team is good on defense, I don't think we can run around and play in cold weather because they give us a lot in cold weather. If they give me the ball to me in warm weather, I'm still a good running back."

"I think that statement's a lit­tle overrated, the fact we built our team for the elements," Holmgren said. "The area where it shows the most is with Eddie Bennett, in my opinion, because he's such a good run­ner in bad conditions. But he's a good player on turf as well; he's just really good in that other stuff."

The fact is few Packers can stand the cold.

"I don't think our receivers like sloppy track. I know that Brett doesn't like the ele­ments," Holmgren said. "Our defense, since our team speed is good on defense, I don't think the elements help us there."

Favre is looking forward to playing inside.

"Don't have to wear sleeves, all that stuff. That's going to be nice, playing in a controlled cli­mate, no wind," he said, smiling.

"I probably won't even know what to do. Hopefully, I won't have a horrible game. I'm used to these conditions now."

Louisville, Wake Forest roll on

LOUISVILLE, Ky. - Freshman Nate Johnson was 11-of-13 from the field and scored a season-high 24 points to lead No. 10 Louisville to a 92-78 victory over Houston on Wednesday night.

Louisville (14-1, 3-0 Conference USA) shot a season-high 57 percent (34-of-60) from the field, the first team this season to shoot better than 50 percent against Houston (8-6, 0-2). The Cougars entered the game holding opponents to 42 percent shooting.

Johnson, a 6-foot-6 forward, made two baskets after Houston turnovers during a 12-0 run that gave Louisville a 25-17 lead with 9:08 remaining in the half.

Shamahn McBride scored the first four points of the second half to pull Houston within 46-41, but Johnson hit a 3-pointer from the corner and slipped inside for a layup as Louisville went on a 14-5 run to go up 60-46 with 15:39 to go.

Houston rallied late in the game, closing to 77-69 on John Braxton's slam dunk at 4:29. But B.J. Flynn countered with a 3 from the right wing 18 seconds later, and Houston got no closer than nine points the rest of the way.

Alvin Sims contributed 21 points, while Galen Robinson and Kenya Capers each had 14 and McBride had 13 for Houston, which shot 45 percent (29-of-65).

Houston turned the ball over 23 times, which Louisville converted into 26 points. The Cougars scored 25 points off Louisville's 15 turnovers.

No. 2 Wake Forest 58, Virginia 54

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. - No. 2 Wake Forest survived a second-half field goal drought and its first major scare of the season, getting two bank shots from Tim Duncan over the final 1:07 to edge Virginia 58-54 Wednesday night.

The win gives the Demon Deacons (13-0, 5-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) their best league start in 34 seasons and kept them as one of only two undefeated Division I teams. At an ACC championship celebration earlier in the day, the Demon Deacons needed every ounce of energy and all of Duncan's season-high 28 points to hold off the Cavaliers to win their 25th straight home game.

Virginia led 54-48 with 5:04 left as Wake Forest was in the final stages of a 12-minute field goal drought. But Tony Rutland's long 3-pointer with 2:58 left pulled the Demon Deacons to 54-48 and Ricky Peral's tip-in on a missed free throw by Duncan 56 seconds later tied the score at 54-54.

Jamal Robinson then threw up an air ball 30 seconds later and turned the ball over to Wake Forest for its final surge - that of course would include the All-America Duncan, who ended up fouling out two of Virginia's big men.

Duncan's short bank shot with 1:07 left gave Wake Forest one of its few leads of the game, and after Harold Deane threw the ball away trying to get it inside, Duncan nailed another turnaround banker with 10 seconds left to seal the win.

Duncan also had 14 rebounds and four blocked shots for his 22nd straight double-double and the 71st of his career. Courtney Alexander led the Cavaliers with 18 points, while Norman Nolan added 13.

Virginia led all but three possessions of the first half as the Cavaliers made their first five shots and eight of their first 11.

Meantime, the Demon Deacons, who came into the game shooting 55.2 percent in their last four games, were ice cold from the field, missing 15 of their first 19 shots. That cold streak even stretched to Duncan, who started 3-for-11.

Deane's 3-pointer 5:07 before halftime gave Virginia a nine-point lead, 28-19 - equaling Wake Forest's largest deficit of the season. However, Wake Forest was able to pull within one point at halftime as Loren Woods, who didn't play a minute in a win at No. 13 Duke on Saturday, scored on a follow and a bank shot and finished with eight first-half points as only three Demon Deacons scored.

Irish swimmers compete well against foreign foes

Irish swimmers, divers travel across seas, cap long road trip at Lone Star State

The Observer • Thursday, January 16, 1997

By JOHN COPPOLELLA

The Notre Dame men's swimming and diving team was busy during the holiday season, participating in the Clay Boy International Short Course Swim Meet in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil and the 1997 All-American Diving Championships at the University of Texas in Austin, Texas.

In Brazil, the Irish swimming and diving team, along with Josh Davis, an All-American swimmer, represented the United States of America in an international competition that included Argentina, Brazil, Russia, and Spain. The Brazilian national team won the event, but Notre Dame swam well and sophomore Chris Fugate earned a third place finish in the 100-meter backstroke. The competition was Olympic-caliber, and although they did not finish on top of the medal count, the Irish came away with a great experience. "It was a great international experience for us," commented Coach Tim Welsh. "The exposure, especially on television where 20-30 million people watched the competition worldwide, was amazing. The international thrill was a wonderful experience for us."

In Texas, the Irish dove into the 1997 All-American Diving Championships. Under the leadership of second-year diving coach Caiming Xie, two Irish freshmen excelled in this national competition. Herb Huesman had the highest finish for the Irish, placing fifth in the men's three-meter diving competition with a score of 463.90. Huesman finished ninth overall with a score of 414.15, barely missing the finals, which took the top eight divers of the meet. Additionally, Tyler Maertz took 11th in the preliminaries of the three-meter diving competition with a score of 374.50.

Although the Notre Dame men's swimming and diving team had a busy holiday season, they swim again Friday at Rolfs Aquatic Center against Bowling Green. The head coach of Bowling Green, Randy Julian, who is in his second season, was an assistant coach at Notre Dame for five years and worked with Coach Welsh.

The Hoosiers trailed 56-49 before Reed took over, scoring all but one of their final 17 points. His one-man show featured three 3-pointers — including one that gave Indiana the lead for good, 64-61 with 1:27 to play.

He missed a free throw with 5.1 seconds left, giving Northwestern (5-10, 0-4) a chance to tie. But Nair Pomoday's 3-point try at the buzzer fell just short.

Knight didn't say before the game why Reed, Indiana's second-leading scorer, didn't start.

Andrae Patterson scored 20 points for the Hoosiers, who in their previous two games fell to the 17th-ranked Hoosiers rallied for a 66-63 victory over Big Ten doormat Northwestern.

Indiana head coach Bobby Knight looks on as his team barely escapes with a 66-63 victory over Big Ten doormat Northwestern.

Indiana had an especially rough 2 1/2-minute stretch midway through the second half. Reed had to call a timeout when he was unable to inbound the ball. On the subsequent play, Patterson got trapped in the corner and needed another timeout.

No. 3 Clemson 67, No. 11 Maryland 63

College Park, Md.

Terrell McIntyre hit two 3-pointers and Harold Jamison had two baskets in a critical 10-2 run, and No. 3 Clemson held on to beat the No. 11 Maryland Terrapins 67-63 Wednesday night.

Keith Booth led Maryland (14-2, 4-1) with 16 points and Sevarus Jaskievicz had 15. The score was tied before McIntyre hit a 3-pointer and Jamison followed a Maryland miss with a layup to put the Tigers up 56-51 with 4:08 to go.

The Irish diving team concluded the holiday schedule in the All-American diving championship at the University of Texas in Austin. In the one meter event, Gina Ketelhohn placed ninth, narrowly missing an eighth place and a spot in the finals by a few points. Rhiana Saunders took seventh place by another very close margin. In the three meter competition, Ketelhohn came in 13th place with a score of 389.05 points, just ahead of Saunders who was 14th with 385.70.

"Both divers have made a lot of progress throughout the season," Weathers said. "The All-American Championship is one of the premier diving events in the country, and it was encouraging to see how high they both placed."

Notre Dame will swim in three meets over the upcoming weekend. On Friday, they will face Bowling Green at the Rolls Aquatic Center. They will then swim on Saturday at Illinois against the Indiana and the Fighting Illini before heading home to face Minnesota the next day.

These meets will be more important than the Hawaii dual-meet and the invited swim. Weathers commented, "The Big 10 teams usually put up quite a challenge, and it will give the team good experience for the Big East teams we will face later this season."

The Irish will face Bowling Green at 5:00 p.m. and Minnesota at 1:00 p.m. on Sunday.

NCAA championship games. Renola tallied up shutouts in all four of the Irish's NCAA games in 1995. She will graduate this May with a degree in English and computer applications. Renola has earned a spot on the Dean's list six times in her three plus years at Notre Dame. The other Irish captain, Daws, was bestowed one of soccer's highest honors. She was named the 1996 Missouri Athletic Club Sports Foundation Collegiate Soccer Player of the Year. Daws was the first player to receive this honor at Notre Dame.
Throughout her career, Daws has been plagued by a nagging injury. She broke her left foot in the summer of 1994. This was the first season that she was healthy. She lead the Irish to a record of 24-2. Daws captained the Irish from the middle with her excellent skills. In the championship match, UNC feared her so much that they double teamed her the entire game. This past season, Daws scored 26 goals and tallied a career high 72 points. She is currently Notre Dame's all-time leading scorer with 161 points.

Concluding a road trip is always a pleasure, and the trip home can be even sweeter with a convincing win.

The Notre Dame women's basketball team did just that as six of their last seven contests were on foreign soil and they were too much for Syracuse (4-11, 2-5 in Big East play) as they came away with a 72-45 victory.

They have won four in a row which pushes their season mark to 14-4, and they remain undefeated in Big East play at 6-0.

Four Domers scored in double figures as the squad shot over 50 percent from the field, and they held the hosts to just 25 percent while forcing them to launch it from the cheap seats as they attempted 24 three-pointers.

Leading the way for the Irish again was All-American candidate Katryn Gaither who scored 21 on 9 for 17 shooting while also snagging eight rebounds. Senior superstar Beth Morgan struggled a bit but put in 15 of her own while her counterpart at forward, Rosanne Dibb, added 12 on five of seven shooting.

On the perimeter senior guard Jeaninne Augustin ran the offense and dished out ten assists and committed just one turnover in her 28 minutes on the floor.

A pleasant surprise for head coach Muffet McGraw came in the person of freshman center Julie Henderson out of Ann Arbor, MI, who didn't miss a shot from the field on her way to 12 points and five rebounds in just 15 minutes of action.

On the other side of the ball, Teekya Barnes scored 21 of the 45 points for the Orangewomen although she shot 8 for 22 from the field. Neither Kristyn Cook nor Raquel Nurse could find the basket as they combined to shoot 2 for 22 on the night.

The Irish put out a 6-9 lead to start the contest and finished the half with a ten point lead. In the second stanza, McGraw's squad used runs of four, five, and seven to open the lead to 17. With five minutes left, Notre Dame maintained their intensity and went on a 14 point run which was ended by a turnover in her 28 minutes on the floor.

While most students spent their holidays at home or on vacation, the Notre Dame women's swimming team continued to compete through the holiday break.

"Luckily," junior Linda Gallo admitted, "we were able to have a change of pace, swimming in a warmer climate than South Bend."

Notre Dame began their holiday schedule on December 30 in Honolulu, beating Hawaii soundly, 133-72. Gallo was a triple winner, capturing the 200, 500 and 1000 freestyle races.

Shannon Suddarth won the 200 individual medley and the 200 breaststroke. Leticia Herrera, Erin Brooks and Courtney South were other winners for the Irish. With the win, the Irish improved their dual-meet record to 4-1.

After a two-day break, Notre Dame began the new year by placing third in the Rainbow Invitational at Honolulu. Texas A&M claimed the title with 333 points, while Wisconsin placed second with 65, just three points ahead of the Irish. Notre Dame was led by second-place finishes from Brooks in the 100 backstroke, Gallo in the 500 freestyle, and Suddarth in the 200 breaststroke. Gallo and Suddarth also placed third in the 200 individual medley and the 100 breaststroke, respectively.

"The team competed much better in the Rainbow Invitational," Weathers commented. "While there weren't any first-place finishes, the times were much faster than in earlier competitions. I think this competition really improved the
