ND announces Washington Program

By HEATHER COCKS

Notre Dame has developed an off-campus study program in Washington, D.C., which debuts in the spring 1998 semester. The program combines classroom work with mandatory internships in areas specific to a variety of majors.

“The program is directed at everyone,” explained Peri Arnold, a professor in the government department and the director of the Washington Program. “The underlying principle is to adapt to and serve a variety of student interests, from government to business.”

Program requirements include a six-credit seminar, which meets once per week, and attainment of a local internship. Staff members will participate in the search for positions, but students are also encouraged to create their own opportunities.

“We can definitely help place students with an eye toward their career goals,” Arnold said. “But they must apply and pursue it, seriously simulating a job search.”

“It’s really what you make of it. We’re well connected in terms of offering opportunities,” he stated.

“The Holocaust Museum is another interesting option,” he added.

“The opportunity to live in Washington, D.C., is wonderful. We think Notre Dame should send as many students as it can.”

Peri Arnold

“Engineering and science students can apply to various congressional committees, and sociology majors might seek a community-oriented position.”

To fill out their 15 credits, students will be offered the option of taking either two courses or one class and an independent study program culminating in a research paper.

“If the classes seem too directed at one major, students can do the research paper, structured around their particular major,” Arnold explained.

A professor from the Notre Dame campus will teach one or two courses in Washington; in addition, Arnold confirmed that several Notre Dame alumni living in the area have expressed an interest in teaching there.

“The possibility exists that a member of Congress will teach one course,” hinted Arnold. “Imagine, being able to study Congress under the instruction of a contributing congressperson.”

Housing, according to Arnold, is favorably located in the northwest part of the city. Though Notre Dame’s program is not affiliated with any other institution’s, the apartment building will be shared with students from the University of Pennsylvania, Boston University, and Dartmouth and Hamilton Colleges.

“The apartments are new, very nice,” Arnold confirmed. “The shared space allows Notre Dame students to mix with people from other schools, but our program is independent of theirs.”

Arnold feels that the Washington Program is a necessary addition to Notre Dame’s off-campus opportunities.

Junior Parents’ Weekend

Golden Times

The annual Junior Parents’ Weekend was kicked off by a gala held in the Joyce Center. The event featured food, dancing, and live entertainment by The Jess Richmond Band. College open houses as well as dorm luncheons were held Saturday morning and afternoon. Saturday night, a banquet featuring guest speaker University President Father Edward Malloy followed a junior class Mass (below, left). Students (left) prepared the food for the banquet behind the scenes as juniors and their parents were served. Sunday morning, President Emeritus Father Theodore Hesburgh (below, right) spoke at the class brunch, highlighting the histories of both JPW as well as Notre Dame.

THE INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER SERVING NOTRE DAME AND SAINT MARY’S

SMC readies for voice mail service

SMC readies for voice mail service

Voice mail services will be activated Wednesday for Saint Mary’s resident students. In a system similar to that which Notre Dame uses, each student will have their own private voice mailbox with a personal password.

Following the system’s activation, Saint Mary’s students will receive voice mail at no charge for the remainder of the Spring 1997 semester.

All students will receive a user guide in Wednesday’s mail. This guide will provide information and setup instructions for the system. Also, the voice mail system offers an on-line tutorial for new users.

Students will be the first group on the Saint Mary’s campus to benefit from voice mail. There are future plans to extend the service to faculty and administration. The Telecommunications Office will provide assistance to students during regular office hours. A special help desk will also be set up at the Dining Hall during breakfast and lunch Thursday and Friday from 8-9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.
NEW YORK

The word "strike" doesn't often come up in the course of your vaca­tion images to the flying public anymore. That's the precedent set by President Clinton in ordering American Airlines pilots back to work within minutes after they declared a strike last Saturday, averting chaotic disruptions to hundreds of thousands of passengers.

If pilot negotiations at four other major airlines' biggest airports get to the brink of a walkout, airline chiefs and passengers almost certainly will be looking to the White House to keep the planes in the air.

Clinton made a hugely popular decision by effectively removing the one potent negotiating weapon in the airline industry. There was little obvious sympathy for the pilots in their quest for more compensa­tion, largely because at $120,000 a year they already are among the most highly paid professionals in the country.

But Clinton also sent a sig­nal to all airline workers, particularly pilots, that could severely restrict their bar­gaining power. Enforced by the stronger possibility of presidential interventions to prevent strikes, airline bosses now have little incentive to accept union demands.

"I think it has some implications for the industry that aren't all good," said American pilot Ron Keener.

Astronauts finish Hubble repairs

SPACE CENTER, Houston

Astronauts ventured out for the fourth spaceday in as many nights Sunday to patch insulation on the Hubble Space Telescope that's peeling off worn wallpaper. Gregory Harbaugh and Joe Tanner took along swatches of material from emergency kits aboard space shuttle Discovery to make good the loss, and copper wire for fastening the pieces to the telescope.

There was not enough time to do all the repairs, so NASA ordered the crew to conduct an extra spacewalk on Monday, to finish covering the torn insulation. The repairs are not considered necessary; the scientists did not want to wait until the next servicing mission in 1999. Additional sun damage to the insulation could allow Hubble's electronics to fail and could unbalance its mirrors. "We've got a $2 billion investment here," said Ed Weiler, NASA's chief Hubble scientist. "Why take a chance?" Monday night's spacewalk was supposed to be for equipping Hubble with new drive electronics for its solar panels, a tricky job that the astronauts accomplished in 2 hours 21 minutes, and cassettes part for two magneto­graphs, part of the guidance system.

Six journalist unions return to work

DETROIT

A striking union that covers reporters and editors at Detroit's daily newspapers approved an unconditional offer to return to work on Sunday. About 60 percent of 200 members of Newspaper Guild Local 12 approved the offer, union president Lou Mleczko said. Leaders of Local 22 and five other unions announced the offer on Friday. So far, four unions told the newspaper company they accepted the offer. The guild and the sixth union were expected to notify the company soon, union sources said.

The guild was the only union whose members had to veto the offer. Once the six unions submit their offers to Detroit Newspapers Inc., the papers have five days to accept or reject the offer. Detroit Newspapers, which runs business and production operations, said Tuesday it is committed to a standdown of journalists who return to work on the papers later are found to have committed unfair labor practices. Some 2,500 employees at The Detroit News and Detroit Free Press, says the 19-month-old strike will be over if the newspapers reject offers from the six unions. If the newspapers reject the offer, the unions say they will ask the National Labor Relations Board to seek a federal injunction to order the newspapers to return their workers to their jobs. Rejecting the offer also could begin the accrual of back pay for striking workers — if the newspapers later are found to have committed unfair labor practices. Future teachers take classes at Saint Mary's

By LESLIE FIELD

In his State of the Union Address, President Clinton made U.S. education his number one priority. He called for national standards for what students should know; a merit system for teachers; an intensive campaign to teach reading; expansion of Head Start; more choices for parents; selecting a "school" in the form of the school, federal help in repairing schools; and at least two years of college for all students, subsidized by new tax breaks.

As education steps into the national spotlight, Saint Mary's College continues to maintain its position as having one of the nation's premier education departments. Like many research institutions, this college is training talented and effective classroom teachers since 1915.

Missy Straman, an assistant professor in Saint Mary's department of education, cited the education department as one of the best in the school. "Our students have no trouble getting jobs," said Straman.

Straman also commented on the field work and the practical nature of the program. "It's not just a matter of books. They have to go out there and tutor or teach. There are students at other [colleges and universities] who haven't been to another school until they student-teach. Our students know what to expect," Straman said.

"It's no wonder why. One hundred hours of field work are required of juniors before they are able to student teach their senior year. Elementary and secondary education students must complete ten, twenty or thirty hours of observation per semester at South Bend schools for various education classes." If one of the juniors majoring in elementary education, cites the intense field work as a reason for coming to Saint Mary's.

"I'm glad I've had so many opportunities to work in the field," said Parente. "Saint Mary's really just want to go to a big, bigger school." This is so important in the field of education.

Megan Pater, a Notre Dame senior majoring in English and currently student teaching at Washington High School and Navarre Middle School, agrees Parente's view, adding that there are some differences in the Education Department for Notre Dame students.

"My experience in Saint Mary's Education Department has been a very positive one," said Pater. "It's more difficult for ND students to schedule their courses, but if you take the initiative to get all the right information, it will be a good experience." Indeed, most education majors do not have many free electives and scheduling classes must be done with care so that at least one semester is free for student teaching.

Pater cited Notre Dame English department advisor Charly Sniegoz, as a very accommodating man who works within the constraints of the department policies. Parker is concerned that students in other Notre Dame departments receive less support while taking advantage of classroom classes at Saint Mary's.

Kimberly Flint-Hamilton, assistant dean of the College of Arts and Letters Notre Dame, says the teacher-certification offered by Saint Mary's education department as the most common reason for Notre Dame students to take classes there.

"Saint Mary's has one of the best education departments for a school of its size," said Flint-Hamilton, stressing the quality of the program.

Notre Dame students like Pater also have a chance to become certified through Saint Mary's Middle School/Junior High endorsement. The program is open to elementary and secondary education students alike. It began last year as a way to make students more marketable in the job market.

Students participating in the program must complete additional field hours and spend half of their student-teaching at a high school and the other half at a middle school. So far, this has not proven as successful as a year-long program. "Notre Dame no longer has an education major," said Parker. But the opportunity does exist.

John Uhran, associate dean of the College of Engineering, noted that during the last year and a half, there has been a great demand from students to take classes at Notre Dame. "Our students have no trouble getting jobs," he said. "But it has not been really used to any great extent." Common sense shows that the lack of participation on behalf of Saint Mary's students is not at all surprising. Saint Mary's is a liberal arts college. Its students would not have applied to a college that does not have an engineering program. They wanted to be engineers.

"If, however, a Saint Mary's student discovers after her arrival that she does want to be an engineer, she always has the option to transfer to Notre Dame," Uhran said.

Each year there are approximately 10-12 Saint Mary's sophomores and juniors who transfer into Notre Dame. "They are interested in the education program," said Uhran. "We have many students who want to transfer. If the program is successful, we will want to transfer to Notre Dame."

"The most important thing is for students to get out," Mortary said. "I'd like to see a year long student teaching program. I'd also like to see Saint Mary's professors come in and do cooperative learning for me over a time of two weeks or so how to do it. That's how we learn." Mortary has been teaching at Washington for ten years, and says that Saint Mary's has an excellent program.

Next summer, Notre Dame, in conjunction with Saint Mary's and the Catholic Diocese of South Bend, will offer a Master's of Science and Administrative program. Students and administrators are looking forward to providing further education at the administrative level.

Co-op allows for class exchange

By JUSTYN HARKIN

The relationship between students at the University of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College is not limited to just social events, student organizations, and community service projects. Because of the proximity of the schools and their common traditions, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's offer a cooperative program in academics, allowing students from both institutions to take a limited number of courses from the neighboring school.

While it is obvious that male students enrolled in Saint Mary's courses is from Notre Dame, differentiating a Saint Mary's student in a Notre Dame class is a lot more difficult. The Office of the Registrar cites 210 as the number of Saint Mary's students taking Notre Dame classes this semester; because no records are available of what kind of classes they are taking, this number is hard to find.

Saint Mary's students take Notre Dame classes for various reasons. Ranging from scheduling troubles at their own institution to the suggestion of a professor on behalf of a Notre Dame friend.

"There is a good relationship between our departments," said Gagliolo. "It's been a very positive one." Saint Mary's and a B.S. from Notre Dame in engineering. The program takes an additional year to complete, making a total of five years before their diploma.

Samuel Gagliolo, assistant dean of the College of Business Administration, commented that the level of cooperation between the business departments at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's is for the benefit of both institutions.

"There is a good relationship between our departments," said Gagliolo. "When students have been in a bind concerning scheduling their classes we've always done our best to help." An additional benefit of the close academic relationship between Notre Dame and Saint Mary's is the opportunity for students ranging from scheduling conflicts at their own institution to the suggestion of a professor on behalf of a Notre Dame friend.

"My experience in Saint Mary's Education Department has been a very positive one," said Parente. "It's more difficult for ND students to schedule their courses, but if you take the initiative to get all the right information, it will be a good experience." Indeed, most education majors do not have many free electives and scheduling classes must be done with care so that at least one semester is free for student teaching. Diverse talent hits LaFortune

By CHRIS SHIPLEY

On Friday night, students came together in the LaFortune Ballroom to explore the essence of African American art in the 1997 production of Blak Kofee House, "Souls of Black Folk."

The event gave poets, musicians, and actors the opportunity to show off their talents to a Valentine's Day audience of students and parents.

The Junior Parents Weekend crowd was treated to an assortment of arts including the emotional performance of seniors Tracey Randolph, Sola Sawyer, Erica Williams, and Sonya Williams, who brought the audience to their feet with their musical interpretation of "Is My Living in Vain?"

Following a brief intermission, junior Erik Burrell presented his poem "Labels." Burrell spoke out against falling into the trap of labeling others and then challenged each of the audience members to stop "Notre Dame's anti-diversity."

The program culminated in the works of Andre Anderson and Curtis Trent, two members of the South Bend community who presented their powerful work in "Poetic Flow."

With the most poignant ideas of the night, Anderson and Trent showed their angst towards the state of human relations.

In his poetry, Anderson talked of the traps of prostitution and the threat of AIDS to young people. Trent focused his poetry on the contradictions and hypocrisy in America today.

"These days the young people have gone crazy and the old people have heart attacks," Trent emphasized.

Chandra Johnson, from Campus Ministry, then addressed the students and challenged both the seniors and the freshmen to be future leaders in the world.

The Blak Kofee House, which was begun in 1982, has grown into a highly anticipated part of the Black Cultural Arts Festival.

"The festival is just one of the events planned by the Office of Multicultural Student Affairs for the celebration of Black History Month."
Deceased officer had ND ties

An Ohio State University police officer who was fatally shot last week had a brief connection with Notre Dame, helping Notre Dame Security begin its own bike patrol unit three years ago.

Michael Blankenship, 43, who worked at Notre Dame for a week during the summer of 1994, was killed last Monday during what seemed to be a routine call to the Wexner Center for the Arts on the OSU campus in Columbus, Ohio. The killer remained at large until Wednesday, when a dead man bearing a "striking resemblance" to a police sketch of the suspect was found in an Upper Arlington, Ohio, apartment. The Columbus Dispatch reported. Upper Arlington is a suburb of Columbus.

Blankenship's partner later identified that man, Mark Edgerton, as the gunman, police sources said. Edgerton had apparently committed suicide.

Phil Johnson, assistant director of Notre Dame Security and a personal friend of Blankenship, said Blankenship was well-respected by his colleagues.

"He really was a tremendous officer. He was well-liked by all the people at Ohio State," Johnson said. "This a tremendous loss for the law enforcement community."

During his week-long visit to Notre Dame in 1994, Blankenship helped start the bike patrol unit by training the officers, Johnson said.

"He was very generous in giving a lot of help," Johnson said. Blankenship and another officer — identified by police sources as Officer Sandria Nicer — Blankenship's regular partner — were answering a theft call from the Wexner Center about 5:45 p.m. Monday, police said. When the officers entered the lobby, they approached the suspect and a disturbance ensued.

Blankenship, who is a member of the Marianist order, apparently attempted to search the man, who refused to take his hands from his pockets, police said. The man suddenly pulled a pistol and shot Blankenship in the face, fired at the other officer but missed, and then fled.

An article in Thursday's edition of The Dispatch that investigators have "a lot physical evidence" from the apartment and the crime scene, including a pistol and blood-stained clothes. Tests were expected to be conducted over the weekend to determine whether the blood matched Blankenship's, police said.

"This brings some closure to this tragedy," Johnson said. "The people of OSU know that the perpetrator is not loose in the community."

Blankenship was the first Ohio State campus officer to be killed in the line of duty.
Chair promises extensive probe
Burton announces two dozen more subpoenas for finance documents
By JIM ABRAMS

WASHINGTON

The chairman of the House committee investigating campaign fund-raising said he has issued nearly two dozen new subpoenas and is looking into reports that the Chinese government wanted to contribute to the Democratic Party.

"The bottom line is, it's going to be a much more broad investigation than we thought it would be," Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., chairman of the Government Reform and Oversight Committee, said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Burton said he had previously issued five subpoenas and Saturday night sent out 20 more for documents his committee wants to see. He declined to provide details of the new subpoenas, saying he had yet to inform committee Democrats. Democrats on both the House panel and the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, which has launched a parallel probe, have complained he has not been forthcoming about what he is seeking.

A report released today showed that Democratic and Republican parties raised an unprecedented $263.5 million in largely unregulated "soft money" campaign donations during the two years leading to the 1996 election — almost three times the amount in the 1991-92 campaign.

There are no limits to so-called "soft money" contributions which cannot legally be spent directly on a candidate's behalf. The money may be used for generic advertising, get-out-the-vote efforts and other party-building activities.

The Center for Responsive Politics said Republicans gave $144.1 million and Democrats $122.3 million in such contributions during the 24-month period prior to last year's election.

The Republican-led Congress is unwilling to initiate campaign finance legislation when Republican fund-raisers are bringing in twice as much as Democrats, complained Sen. Bob Torricelli, D-N.J., on ABC's "This Week" program.

Burton said the first priority must be investigating past wrongdoing, including a Washington Post report last week that the Chinese embassy in Washington had considered making campaign contributions to the Democrats.

One key Democratic figure involved in raising money from the Asian community, John Huang, "may very well have given information that he shouldn't have to the Chinese and others" as part of the fund-raising efforts, said Burton.

If the White House, or anybody connected with the White House was selling or giving information to the Chinese in exchange for political contributions, then we have to look into it because that's a felony and you're selling this country's security, economic security — whatever — to a communist power," Burton said on CNN's "Late Edition."

While House counsel Lanny Davis, also appearing on NBC, said President Clinton was "very seriously monitoring" the China issue, but stressed that "there's no policy affected by contributions to this president."

"The White House, or anybody connected with the White House, was selling or giving information to the Chinese in exchange for political contributions, then we have to look into it because that's a felony and you're selling this country's security, economic security — whatever — to a communist power."

Scientists pinpoint evidence of dinosaur killer

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON

Scientists who drilled core samples from the ocean bed said Sunday they have found "smoking gun" evidence that a huge asteroid smashed into the Earth 65 million years ago and probably killed off the dinosaurs.

"We've got the smoking gun," said Richard D. Norris, leader of an international ocean drilling expedition that probed the Atlantic Ocean floor in search of asteroid evidence.

Norris said the expedition recovered three drill samples that contain fossil remains of many animals and came from a healthy, "happy-go-lucky" ocean just before the impact. Just above this is a layer with small green glass pebbles, thought to be ocean bottom material instantly melted by the massive energy release of the asteroid.

Next was a rusty brown layer which Norris said is thought to be from the "vaporized remains of the asteroid itself."

The heat of the impact would have killed any life, said Norris, that the stony asteroid would have instantly been reduced to vapor and thrown high into the sky. It then snowed down, like a fine pow­der, all over the globe.

"Norris said brown deposits, like that in the core sample, have been found elsewhere and they have a high content of iridium, a chemical signature of asteroids. Just above the brown layer, is 2 inches of gray clay with strong evidence of a nearly dead world."

"It was not a completely dead world, but most of the species that are seen before (early in the core samples) are gone," said Norris. "There are just some very minute fossils. These were the survivors in the ocean."

This dead zone lasted about 5,000 years, said the scientist, and then the core samples showed evidence of renewed life.

"It is amazing how quickly the new species appeared," he said.

Although the dinosaur-killing impact occurred in the southern Gulf of Mexico, Norris went to the Atlantic Ocean, believing that waves from the impact would have washed completely across Florida.

Robert W. Corell, assistant director for Geosciences of the National Science Foundation, said the core samples are the strongest evidence yet that an asteroid impact caused the mass extinction of life.

"In my view, this is the most significant discovery in geo­sciences in 20 years," he said, adding in a telephone interview.

This gives us the facts and what happen to life back then. It is the first real evidence of a smoking gun.

The ship bearing the core samples returned to port on Friday and the NSF announced additional funding for core samples that will be shipped to laboratories soon.

Catholic activists seek change and tolerance

By BETH GARDINER

NEW YORK
While the faithful attended services inside St. Patrick's Cathedral, dissident Roman Catholics were on the front steps stumping for change.

Members of the liberal group We Are Church passed a resolution in New York and nationwide Sunday, calling on the church to relax its stance on the ordination of women, celibacy for clergy, clergy homosexuality and other issues.

“The majority of American Catholics are moving ahead regardless of what the Pope says,” said Margaret Dubinis, of Los Angeles, who signed the group’s petition on her way into Mass. “There’s a silent majority within the church that is doing this any way.”

Leaders of the Fairfax, Va.-based We Are Church hope to get a million American Catholics to sign their referendum for change, said Sister Margaret Fiedler, the group’s national coordinator.

Cardinal John O’Connor told parishioners they must decide for themselves whether to sign.

O’Connor said.

INDIANAPOLIS

There is a dark secret in a Roman Catholic diocese that covers most of the northern part of Indiana, according to an Indianapolis newspaper.

The Indianapolis Star and The Indianapolis News have published their investigation into the Lafayette Diocese detailing a pattern of sexual abuse and charging that the Catholic church has largely covered up the problem.

According to the report, the Rev. Ken Boldinger, who was accused of sexual misconduct while in Baltimore in Arizona. The Rev. Ron Voss, who sexually abused male teens, moved to Haiti. Monsignor Arthur Sego, who fondled girls, was retired to the Ozarks.

Other priests of the Lafayette Diocese are back in their pulpits after they were accused of sexually exploiting vulnerable adults. Some priests pursued relations with parishioners or fellow priests. A few have been accused of alcohol and pornography.

One priest had sexual relations with a teen who went on to become a priest himself. After denouncing the college, Ron Voss also became a sexual predator, abusing male adolescents.

An investigation by The Indianapolis Star and The Indianapolis News revealed that at least 16 current and former priests have been accused of sexual abuse or misconduct during the past 25 years. Diocese officials have admitted to 12 troubled priests and as many as 40 victims in the past dozen years alone.

All this in a diocese with just 75 active priests.

Yet the 63-year-old Sego keeps mum about molestors in his diocese until forced to acknowledge them.

By Higi’s silence, parents do not know enough to ask their children whether a priest has ever touched them sexually, and some perpetrators are allowed to slip out of town quietly and begin new lives.

Predators of children and teens avoided prison. Even priests who confessed to molestation were allowed to skip out of town quietly and begin new lives.

Whatever its failings and excesses may be, I have never heard even the hardest critics of the Notre Dame Football pro­gram accuse it of paying a player to attend the University. Many of our on­field rivals can not make the same claim. Rather than coming to this school based on the "Mond­dome" program, some high school football player for Phillips Academy isn't nearly as elite in football as the Notre Dame Football program 's Class of 2001 — an undersized lineman who has next to no ability to play football here; naturally, the father dearly loves both his son and the Civil War. Following the Jordan precedent, how much would one have to do with what is in the new College of Business Admission (COBA) build­ing than it has to do with anything that will transpire on the field in Notre Dame Stadium. At the center of COBA lies the Jordan Armour which is, of course, named in honor of John Jordan II, a major University donor and prominent alumnus. The football player of the same name who will be joining the Irish in the fall is his son.

In light of this, it is hard to interpret young Jordan's questionable football scholarship as anything but a simple and direct quid pro quo. The University seems to be sending his father a fourth year, $100,000 plus "thank you" note for his continuing generosity. And while not in violation of any NCAA rule or reg­ulation, this incident is certainly not in the spirit of the "higher standard," to which this University claims to aspire. The de facto selling of scholarships is really not that far removed from bribing which this de facto selling of scholarships is really not that far removed from bribing one's father to give to be named an associate professor at the University for the "right" reasons; they may value the education and the career-enhancing power of the media that they will receive here, realize the possible to secure a scholarship for your reason; they may value the education and the career-enhancing power of the media that they will receive here, realize the possible to secure a scholarship for your

Excitement Erupts in ‘Dante’s Peak’

Directed by: Roger Donaldson
Starring: Pierce Brosnan and Linda Hamilton

Accent Movie Critic

One might think to make a thriller about a volcano as menacing as it is supposed to be on screen? For the answer to that, ask the producers of “Dante’s Peak”. When Mount St. Helen’s erupted in 1980, all that was really caught on tape were some composite photos put together to show what the eruption looked like. One might think making a volcano explode in a movie would not look as realistic due to computer-generated effects. As has been the trend throughout the recent history of high-budget movie blockbusters, the producers and computer experts worked together to make sure it was. Making a volcano explode in a movie would not look as realistic through the recent history of special effects, and all the other views of it besides the special effects, of course, were completely computer-generated.

Audience is endowed with a plethora of beautiful scenery shots as the setting happens to be the lovely state of Washington. The panoramic views of the volcano are the real treat as we wonder if we’re looking at it really there. Part of the movie was filmed in an actual volcano, but all the other views of it are completely computer-generated. Watch for some especially good shots of Linda Hamilton looking out her car window as the mountain erupts.

Through the rapidly growing medium of special effects, moviemakers have taken a volcano that doesn’t really exist and created a moneymaker. “Dante’s Peak” is a thrill ride in which a seemingly dead volcano reawakens to wreak havoc on a small town.

More and more in today’s movie thriller circles, natural disasters are growing into the role of the hot topic. Actually, the first real natural disaster thriller was in 1974 with “Dante’s Peak.” When Mount St. Helen’s erupted in 1980, all that was really caught on tape were some composite photos put together to show what the eruption looked like. One might think making a volcano explode in a movie would not look as realistic due to computer-generated effects. As has been the trend throughout the recent history of high-budget movie blockbusters, the producers and computer experts worked together to make sure it was. Making a volcano explode in a movie would not look as realistic through the recent history of special effects, and all the other views of it besides the special effects, of course, were completely computer-generated. Watch for some especially good shots of Linda Hamilton looking out her car window as the mountain erupts.

The only thing to dislike about this movie is the lack of originality in the script, which is painfully obvious throughout.

The movie takes place around the same area as Mount St. Helen’s, and the skepticism on the part of the volcanologists about the volcano exploding is reminiscent of the same opinion held about St. Helen’s around the turn of the decade. Also, the character of Linda Hamilton’s mother-in-law, who lives in a cabin near the mountain, is taken directly from an account of a man who went on living in his cabin even with the threat of St. Helen’s eruption. In fact, the woman uses the movie (“That mountain won’t hurt us”) to be attributed to the man on the mountain. Despite the lack of originality in the script, the movie is blessed with great acting on the part of all the major characters. Pierce Brosnan (having already had a huge action experience of “Goldeneye”), is the perfect choice for the role of the cautious volcanologist with a somber action experience of “Goldeneye,” is the perfect choice for the role of the cautious volcanologist with a somber.

Linda Hamilton, in her first big role since “Terminator 2,” is well-cast as the mayor and protective mother of two children who had their father run out on them. There is of course a relationship spurned between the two primary characters, and it is only deepened as the movie progresses through a lava-oriented climax. Again we see in the aftermath of the disaster the comfortable view of everybody pulling together to help everyone else.

The movie is no “Twister II.”, but, hey, it’s everything you could ask for in a film of this magnitude. It has plot, a beautiful setting, good acting, and a special flare for bringing the unexpected out of the expected. But the real basis for the film is the special effects, and they do not disappoint. They may even heighten our expectations for the next natural disaster film to come out in the theaters. So to catch a pre-summer blockbuster worth watching, enjoy the inferno of “Dante’s Peak.”

"I couldn't do it without those guys. That was teamwork out there on the race track at the end."

Jeff Gordon

The race was so emotional for Gordon that he pulled off the track and stood away from Victory Lane. "I didn't think I could get by Bill, but I'll tell you what, we were working him pretty bad. I bet he was a little surprised seeing those Hendricks cars back there," said Earnhardt.

After the crash, Earnhardt got himself out of his car. He fired it up, and he drove it slowly to the pits. The Chevrole, sliding back toward the wall, elicited the safety vehicle and allowed Gordon to take the lead.

Shooting for the top

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

The refs blew another one in the ACC and this time it shuddered the league standings.

North Carolina State stunned No. 2 Wake Forest when Clint Harrison was given credit for a 3-pointer at the buzzer in overtime — even though his foot was inside the arc — for a 6-59 victory Sunday.

"I haven't seen a replay and I don't want to," a jubilant Harrison said. "It was a tough
call for the referees to make.
I'm sure they've got the best judgment they could." Television replays showed that Harrison launched the shot in time but that his left foot was clearly touching the line.
Officials Sam Croft, Raymie Stynes and Mike Wood looked at each other, agreed that it was a 3-pointer and ran off the floor, letting the Wolfpack players pile on each other in a wild celebration near the basket where Harrison banked in the

It marked the second Atlantic Coast Conference game in five days in which a blown late-game call by officials helped decide the outcome. Duke defeated Virginia 62-61
Tuesday night after the officials missed the clock and an attempted substitution in the closing seconds. The ACC suspended the three officials involved in that incident for one game each.

Fred Barakat, the ACC's head officials, had a courtside seat in the first nine minutes but stayed in and wound up playing 44 minutes. The Demon Deacons had lost nine games this year to top 10 teams, including seven to those in the Top 10.

Odom said he had not seen a replay of Harrison's basket.
"It wouldn't make any difference if I had," he said.

Harrison finished with 21 points for the Wolfpack, which had lost nine games this year to ranked teams, including seven
to those in the Top 10.

Tuesday night’s officials drilled and launched a 15-footer that went in for a three-pointer.

Same result.

Harrison also got 15 points from Tony Rutland.

Wake Forest (20-3, 9-3) fell
upcourt, drove to the foul line and wound up playing 44 minutes. The Demon
Deacons also got 16 points from Tony Rutland.

There were four lead changes and two ties in overtime before Benjamin banked in a runner in the lane and the Wolfpack up 57-55 with 1:13 left.

Wake Forest coach Herb

(10-12, 2-11) won for the first time in nine league road games, "This team has worked very hard to get to the spot they reached today.

Wake Forest (20-3, 9-3) fell
one-half game behind league leader Duke (21-5, 10-3)

have won the last two ACC titles. "What you do is try to regroup. We have a difficult assignment going to Chapel Hill on Wednesday, but I guarantee you this team will be ready.

Sendek offered a similar perspective.

"Both sides will go back and look at the game and say, 'What if'
for many plays," he said.

On Sunday the Irish again battled back from losing the doubles point, but this time came up victorious with a win from junior Eric Enloe in the final match to give Notre Dame the upset win against the No. 8 Duke Blue Devils. Enloe came back from one set down to beat Porter Jones 6-7, 7-6, 6-1.

In No. 1 singles Sachire defeated 18th ranked Dmitry Muzyka from coming behind 6-7, 6-1, 6-4. No. 38 Sachire has been virtually unstoppable in dual matches this season. Doug Root defeated Pietrowski in two sets 6-4, 7-5 in No. 2 singles. Patterson fell to Alberto Krause 6-2, 6-3. Simme and Rothschild both won at No. 4 and 5 singles respectively.

"We are pretty excited about beating a top-10 team," Rothschild said. "We realized that since we were so close on Saturday that we could come back and win on Sunday."

In the doubles matches it was all Duke. Murzuka and Sven Koehler defeated Pietrowski and Patterson in No. 1 doubles 8-4. Root and Jordan Wile won 8-5 over Simme and Rothschild. And at No. 3 doubles Adam Gusky and Jones defeated Sachire and Miller 8-4. With the overall loss Duke fell to 1-1.

The team will take today off in order to rest after the exhausting weekend and prepare for its next match. The 7-2 Irish will face the 3-0 Indiana Hoosiers Tuesday at 4 p.m. at the Eck Tennis Pavilion.

"We're a little tired after the weekend," Rothschild said. "But we have a match on Tuesday, so we're taking a day off in order to get ready for Indiana." Although after playing two top-10 teams, Indiana might seem like a little bit of bread for the Irish, the team is not taking Tuesday's match lightly.

"We have to stay focused, and we can't get too excited about the win against Duke," Sachire said. "Indiana is going to be ready to play us, so we need to be ready to play."

McGraw's squad has scored over 80 points in a contest as they entered yesterday's contest off a 91-64 win over Boston College.

"It was a good win for us," Morgan commented. "They [Providence] are tied for first place of their side of the bracket so it was important for us to have a solid victory."

McGraw has seen her squad rebound from the disappointing UConn loss and the loss of Kari Hutchinson, who suffered a broken hand last week, to have their most prolific scoring week of the year.

The Irish, who never trailed, jumped out to a 17-9 lead five minutes into the game, but the Friars looked like they were going to give the No. 17 team in the country a game as they tied it at 20 a piece. But Notre Dame put those thoughts to rest as they went on a 14-1 run that was capped off with a Mollie Peirick three ball to give them a cushion that the hosts could not overcome.

Superstar Morgan was too much for the Friars as she was all over the court as she added 11 rebounds, six steals, and five assists to her 20 points and Gaither dominated the paint once again with 23 points and 10 rebounds.

Rohman, whose 21 points marked her career-high, scored 14 in the second half as she scored three straight buckets to give the Blue and Gold a 20 point lead with 3:02 remaining. The entire squad was hot in the second stanza as the team shot 60 percent from the field. The Irish also got solid play from their perimeter players as sophomore Jeannine Augustin had seven points and eight assists and Peirick added 14 points and seven assists.

The Irish only played eight players as all the starters were forced to play over 30 minutes. Off the bench, McGraw got twelve points as sophomore guard Sheila McMillen played only nine minutes but scored eight points on 3 of 4 shooting with two three-pointers and freshman center Julie Henderson added four.

"We don't have much of a bench right now, so every game, everyone has contributed," Morgan continued. "Rosanne had a career-high and Adrienne [Jordan] and Julie have really stepped up for us."

Forwards Kerri Chatten and Nadine Malcolm were two of the few bright spots for the Friars as they had 21 and 23 points respectively.

McGraw's squad will return home for their last two home games of the season as the Villanova Wildcats will come to the Joyce Center this Wednesday and Seton Hall will visit this Saturday. Neither of those squads provided the Durners much of challenge the last time around as the Irish beat the Wildcats and Pirates by an average of 31 points.

"We are basically undefeated, besides UConn," Morgan said.

"So right now, we are basically playing for an NCAA tournament seed," she added.

Antoni Wyche and Admore White left the Irish down one in the waning seconds. After another Wildcat miss at the line, Noree Dame had the ball down three when White was whistled for a double dribble, killing the rally.

As MacLeod said after the game, the days have passed when the Irish are merely happy just being close in a ranked team. "You don't like to lose anywhere and we just could not get control of the game," he said.

In addition to the loss, the Irish may have also lost forward Gary Bell for the season. Bell suffered a left knee injury in the first half and never returned. Following the game, MacLeod speculated that Bell tore his anterior-cruciate liga­ment and may be lost for the remainder of the season.

"It's an unfortunate injury for Gary Bell who is probably out for the year," MacLeod said. "It's the type of effort that MacLeod hopes propels his team ever to play the game, in the first half and never—" MacLeod continued to get off open screens while Thomas' perfect free throw shooting at game's end buried the Irish.

The Villanovas defense may have been the real superstar causing 31 second half Irish turnovers and 19 for the game. The Irish offensive rhythm fluctuated against the Villanovas halfcourt trap. That defense did not allow the Irish anything more than brief, controlled bursts which were not enough.

As opposed to their last meeting, however, Notre Dame kept themselves in the game reboarding right along with the quicker Wildcats. Much like the game, the Irish barely lost that battle 26-25.

For what moral victories are we worth, the Irish are one on Sunday. It's the type of effort that MacLeod hopes propels his team to victory Tuesday night against Seton Hall. That comes with the territory.

We've been trying to get everybody more involved in the offense, and Michael and Scottie did a nice job of moving the ball around," Bulls center Luc Longley said. "If we don't always isolate with Michael, it puts us in better rebounding position.

The Bulls dominated the second quarter, outrebounding the Magic 14-5, to take a 48-36 halftime lead. Chicago had as many offensive rebounds in the first half, 12, as Orlando had total boards.

Two 3-pointers by Ron Harper finished a 16-0 run that put Chicago ahead 70-52 in the third. Orlando followed with 10 consecutive points, eight by Hardaway, to close within eight. But Jordan made two 15-footers to begin a 13-3 run that gave the Bulls an 83-65 lead early in the fourth.

INGLEWOOD, Calif.
For Delice Schremmp, it was one of the most productive games of a steady 12-year career.

For the Los Angeles Lakers, it could be much more costly than just one loss.

Schrempp, who had more shooting opportunities because Shaw Kemp didn't play, scored 10 of his season-high 34 points in the fourth quarter Sunday as the Seattle SuperSonics used a strong finish to beat the Los Angeles Lakers 102-91.

The Lakers, already without All-Star center Shaquille O'Neal for a minimum of eight weeks, may have lost starting forward Robert Horry as well.

Horry sustained what was termed a sprained knee early in the fourth quarter, but it appeared more serious than just one loss.

Horry, who will be re-examined Monday morning, left the Forum on crutches with his leg in a large brace.

Hill’s future remains in question

By MIKE NADEL
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO
For the Chicago Bulls, it was another routine victory. For the Orlando Magic, it was another step in the freefall that has touched off reports that coach Brian Hill is on his way out.

"I think we're all disappointed with the way we've been playing," Hill said Sunday night after his team lost 110-89 to the Bulls, Orlando's fourth consecutive loss since the All-Star break.

"I think we're all disappointed with the way we've been playing," Hill said Sunday night after his team lost 110-89 to the Bulls, Orlando's fourth consecutive loss since the All-Star break.

The energy level doesn't seem to be there," said Hill, whose club reached the 1995 NBA Finals but — minus Shaquille O'Neal — is only 24-24 this season. "Every coach is responsible for the actions of his team, the wins and losses. That comes with the territory. But nobody has said anything to me."

NBC-TV reported that Hill would be fired after the game, but Magic general manager John Gabriel said Hill would coach Monday night's game at Charlotte. Still, Gabriel didn't exactly give Hill a strong vote of confidence.

"As far as Brian being fired at this moment," Gabriel said, "it's false."

At this moment?

"We're going to evaluate a lot of things, a lot of parts of our basketball operations," Gabriel said. "We're going to try to make some improvements."

The Magic have needed a lot of improvements to beat the Bulls, who have won 16 consecutive home games and have an NBA-best 45-6 overall record.

"We played very well, with balanced scoring and rebounding and a lot of assists," said Scottie Pippen, who had 22 points, 11 assists, six rebounds and six steals. "We think we're a lot better than Orlando ... so we should blow them out."

"It's been a tough year," said Jordan, who had 20 points, Michael Jordan had 19 points and 10 assists and Dennis Rodman pulled down 13 rebounds for the Bulls, who out­rebounded Orlando 53-30 and had 36 assists to the Magic's 14.

"We're going against the best team ever to play the game, in my opinion," Orlando's Nick Anderson said. "But we will back fire and I don't know why. We haven't approached the game like we should. The coach can only prepare you. He can't play the game."

Including last season's sweep of Orlando in the Eastern Conference finals, the Bulls have won nine straight against the Magic. Chicago beat Orlando by the same 110-89 score earlier in the season, when the Magic was without injured Penny Hardaway, Horace Grant and Nick Anderson. But Orlando had no answers this time.

Hardaway's 20 points weren't nearly enough to reverse the trend for the Magic, which had won 12 of 14 games heading into the All-Star break.

"It's just been a complete disaster since the break," Ron Harper finished a 10-0 run that gave Chicago an 83-65 lead early in the fourth.

"We're going against the best team ever to play the game, in my opinion," Orlando's Nick Anderson said. "But we will back fire and I don't know why. We haven't approached the game like we should. The coach can only prepare you. He can't play the game."

Refusing to give up is always a good vital sign.

It's an unfortunate injury for Gary Bell who is probably out for the year," MacLeod said. "It's the type of effort that MacLeod hopes propels his team ever to play the game, in the first half and never—" MacLeod continued to get off open screens while Thomas' perfect free throw shooting at game's end buried the Irish.

Flyers complete weekend sweep of Penguins

By ALAN ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

PIZZA HOOD

The Flyers beat the Penguins without the injured Lindros for the second day in a row, rallying with six consecutive goals in the final 7:44 of the opening period, and improved to 4-1-0 lifetime against Central Division opponents and 0-10-4 when trailing after two periods.

Penguins coach Eddie Johnston said Lemieux is experiencing back pain and did not participate in Friday's practice. Johnston said Lemieux insisted on playing against Hartford.

"He's such a great player, we tend to rely on him," MacLean said of Hasek. "If we have a game like that...," Dan Bylsma said. "It was tough to come back in the league. Many teams are 2-2 when they don't score the first goal."

Panthers defenseman Robert Svehla scored power-play goals in each of the first two periods to lead Florida to a 2-1 win. His only other two-goal game came on Jan. 14 against New Jersey.

The Panthers were unable to score on a four-minute power-play and Steve Yzerman's 16th goal then tied it at 2-2. "Playing two games in less than 24 hours is unheard of," said Panthers goalie John Vanbiesbrouck. "That's a shame."

Tied at 2-2, the Red Wings took the lead for good on their second power-play goal at 17:00 of the second period when McCarty's soft backhander squibbed between the legs of Vanbiesbrouck for his 13th goal of the season. For McCarty, it was his fourth straight two-point game.

"It's not a pretty goal on the one, one of three he had in the game," said Panthers coach Don Marr. "It's not like we expect the good shots to go in and they don't," McCarty said. "I don't think I knew I had it. I found the right shot and Vanbiesbrouck hit it." The Panthers were unable to score a power-play goal at 17:00 of the second period.

Must read article: "Playing two games in less than 24 hours is unheard of," said Panthers goalie John Vanbiesbrouck. "That's a shame."

The Sabres scored four times in the first period, including both of Vanbiesbrouck's goals, and allowed Hasek to take it easy in the second, when Buffalo, 5-0-4 in its last nine games, Jeffries broke up Hasek's shutout bid with 10:06 left in the game. Owen Nolan also scored — the Sharks, who have lost four straight.

"I didn't have to rely on Dom to make save after save and give us a chance," Sharks coach Ted Nolan said. "We wanted to get a good start."
Boys of Winter lose two to big bad ‘wolves’

By CHARLEY GATES

Any time a young team travels to play the top-ranked team in the country, bad things are bound to happen.

Such was the case this weekend when the Notre Dame squad, the second-youngest in Division I hockey, took their show on the road to Yost Ice Arena in Ann Arbor, Michigan, to battle the Wolverines.

Courtesy of a 3-1 loss on Friday night and 6-1 loss on Saturday night, the Irish (8-25-1 overall, 5-18-1 CCHA) extended their losing streak to eight games and lost ground in the race for the final playoff spot in the competitive Central Collegiate Hockey Association.

"Michigan’s a great team," stated sophomore forward Aniket Dhadphale, who netted his first goal in fourteen games this weekend. "And if [Yost Ice Arena] is probably the hardest place to play in the country."

Eisler’s heroics earned him the leading goal scorer in the CCHA with a 30 percent conversion rate, to a meager 1 for 9 showing.

"We played really well on Friday night," observed Fraser. "We were with them right up until the very end. We had our opportunities but just didn’t convert on them."

"From the quotes in the paper," stated Dhadphale, "they didn’t think that we could be able to play with them, but we did on Friday night."

Saturday’s game wasn’t nearly as close. "I still think that we played well," quipped Fraser, "but we just had too many penalties. They are a tough team to stop on the power-play, they have a bunch of natural scorers."

Michigan’s power-play rowed back into action after a dismal performance on Friday night, netting four power-play goals in eight opportunities. Prior to this game, Notre Dame had only allowed more than two power-play goals only once this season, against Ferris State on Nov. 15.

The Wolverines jumped out to a 5-0 lead after two periods. Sophomore Brian Urick gave the Irish their only goal for the evening, when he knocked home a rebound off a Craig Hagshul shot. The goal was Eisler’s team-leading 13th of the season.

Injuries continue to plague the Irish. Freshman defenseman Tyson Fraser just returned following a five-game hiatus, freshman Sean Seyforth did not dress due to a shoulder injury, and senior captain Terry Lorenz didn’t even make the trip to Ann Arbor following an injury in practice earlier this week. Lorentz had played in 72 straight games prior to the injury. Notre Dame also played without Eisler, whom head coach Dave Poulin chose to rest. Sophomore Forest Karr made the start, his first since Jan. 5 against Miami.

The loss leaves the Irish fourth in the CCHA standings following a five-game hiatus, freshening a five-game slide or if they were gearing up for this weekend, Dhadphale replied. "We’ve always looked forward. These are winnable games this weekend; it’s just a matter of doing our thing. We have been struggling lately, but this team has the ability to break out of slumps very quickly."

Hopefully the leap will be made before this Friday.

Announcing the First Annual Awards of the Albert Ravarino Italian Studies Travel Scholarship

Thanks to a generous gift from the Albert Ravarino family, the Italian Studies Program is pleased to announce the first annual competition for travel in support of summer research and foreign study in Italy. Grants will be made in amounts not to exceed $3,000, and will not normally cover all expenses. Notre Dame graduate and undergraduate students who are planning to pursue research or a formal program of summer study in Italy are invited to apply. Students must have completed at least one year of Italian language. The course work will normally be in Italian, will involve the study of Italian language, literature, and culture, and must be applicable to a student’s degree program at the University of Notre Dame.

Recommended programs for foreign study include, but are not limited to: Loyola University in Rome, Boston University in Padua, UCLA in Pisa, Miami University in Urbino, Columbia University in Scandina. Interested students are encouraged to consult the materials on Italian foreign study in the Department of Romance Languages, 343 O’Soughnessy Hall.

Students are invited to submit a letter which should include:
1) an explanation of how the proposed research or foreign study will enhance their degree program of Notre Dame
2) a personal statement indicating their background, interests, and long-term goals
3) a description of the research project or the program they intend to follow
4) a detailed budget indicating travel and costs involved
5) the names of two references

Application Deadline:
Friday, March 7th, 1997

Albert, Ravarino, Italian, Studies, Travel, Scholarship
Happy birthday in the next year of your life! Money seems to lead to almost magical success. Trust your heart and instincts. Coming out of your shell to socialize will help you feel less isolated and relaxed. As important approaches, devote the lion’s share of time to practical matters. Changing your eating habits will help you procure your desired figure. Taurus (April 20-May 20): Paper can be signed and contracts renegotiated. Conduct business by phone and email. An authority figure will ask questions. Two health meals are better than one. Gemini (May 21-June 20): Talking over innovative ideas is exciting. Further details will show when you need to do next. Follow your heart, and any endeavors are favored over solo pursuits. Cancer (June 21-July 22): Preen and clear the cause for everything new. You receive much needed news and encouragement. Giving a pass-age the boats you chartered. Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): A great deal of an employment contract or car agreement. You come to a new investment decision after con­sulting with your accountant. Try not to be overly sensitive if others disagree with your view. Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be prepared to deal with a certain amount of resistance. Diplomacy will help you work out a compromise. Welcome a chance to go after what you really want. A friendship grows stronger. Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A de­ sire for more of your own and others’ gifts. Good public relations will please your financial backers. Role play at home before going on a vacation. Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A pleasant encounter could lead to a request for a contribution. Surprise someone close to you with a care­fully chosen gift or heartfelt compli­mentation. Romance is favored this evening. Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Seven developments convince you to revise a plan or policy. Be ready to move in a new direction. Someone as a distance emits a healthful influence. You finally know exactly what you want in life. Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A surprising twist offers a release from tension. A relationship begins or ends. Make your home for your early by giving it a facelift. A new artistic circle could boost your spirits. Buy a few plants. Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An inquiry or conversation will have you light on children’s educational plans. Give special consideration to an older person’s request. Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Family affairs could keep you on the run. The answer is found at a job interview. Someone with an insurance issue. The patient with the most information wins. Sagittarius. Your cheerful nature may be contagious.

Irish split pair of matches against top-ranked teams

By JIM ZALETA

The Notre Dame men's tennis team went 1-1 this weekend against two top-ranked opponents. On Saturday, No. 7 Texas Longhorns defeated the 29th ranked Irish 4-3. Sunday, however, the Irish upset the No. 8 Duke Blue Devils 4-2.

On Saturday it seemed as though the Irish were going to have to play catch up as the Longhorns quickly came out and won the doubles point 2-1. Senior Jakub Pietrowski and sophomore Brian Patterson won the only Irish doubles match of the weekend 9-8, against Texas' J.J. Stearns and Mark Loughran. The pair as well as the other two doubles pairs came from behind to cause the sets to go to tiebreakers.

But Pietrowski and Patterson were the only ones to win the set. Senior Ryan Simme and junior Danny Rothschild lost 9-7 to sophomores Paul Martin and Nick Crowell. Freshmen Ryan Sachire and Trent Bohman, seniors Katryna Gaither, Beth Morgan, and Rosanne Bohman the Irish cruised by from that loss with two of their highest scoring doubles.

Morgan, and Rosanne Bohman the Irish cruised by 20 points, helping their squad to improve their mark to 22-5 and 14-1 in the Big East. The doubles point turned out to be the deciding factor as the two teams split the singles matches.

Sachire, Pietrowski, and Patterson won the three singles matches for the Irish. In No. 1 singles Pietrowski came from one set down to defeat Stearns, who he faced in the doubles match, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4. Sachire beat Crowell coming from behind to win 7-6, 6-7-6 in No. 2 singles. Patterson, in No. 4 singles, defeated Brasington in two tough sets 7-6, 7-5. Simme, at No. 3, and Miller, No. 6, fell in two sets each. Rothschild was shut down in the opening set, battled back to win the second 7-6, and lost the final set 6-1.

"It was disappointing [to lose to Texas] because we thought we had the chance to beat them," Rothschild said. "Some people played really well. Some didn't. It was disappointing because we were so close."

Junior Danny Rothschild rebounded from a loss to seventh-ranked Texas on Saturday to win at No. 5 singles against Duke on Sunday. The Irish beat the No. 8 Blue Devils 4-3.

Despite leading the Irish with twenty-two points, junior Pat Garrity's efforts were not enough to clinch the victory.

Stripped of victory

By JOE CAVATO

A week ago the Notre Dame women's basketball team suffered their worst loss of the year at the hands of the Connecticut Huskies. They responded from that loss with two of their highest scoring games of the season.

Behind the play of seniors Katryna Gaither, Beth Morgan, and Rosanne Bohman the Irish cruised by the Providence Friars (12-11, 7-8) with a 97-74 triumph.

Don't get out the "Refuse to Lose" signs just yet.

Notre Dame didn't beat Villanova yesterday. The Irish scratched, clawed and threw everything they had at the No. 18 Wildcats and were never out of it until the final buzzer sounded.

The most appropriate sign the Irish might have found after the defeat was "Refuse to Accept Losing."

"This was a winnable ballgame," head coach John MacLeod said, "and we lost."

Notre Dame could not make any defensive stands down the stretch as Villanova squeaked out a 75-70 victory in front of a national television audience. Down by no more than eight in the second half, the Irish (12-10, 6-8) cut the lead to one on two occasions, but never got over the hump.

"We played in the game, but we couldn't get a grip on it," MacLeod added. "We continued to battle but could not get out in front."

Every time Villanova made a run the Irish answered to close within four or six on several occasions but never took the lead. With under a minute left, the Irish fouled on each possession in a desperate attempt at a final run. The strategy almost worked as consecutive three-pointers by
