Notre Dame loses law student to heart failure

By HEATHER COCKS

A third-year Notre Dame law student died yesterday afternoon following his collapse in LaFortune Student Center.

Joseph Cirao, 25, went into cardiac arrest while seated in a corner of The Huddle. Witnesses reported that he slumped out of his motorized wheelchair and seemed to stop breathing as he lay on the floor.

A nearby student called for medical help at approximately 5 p.m. and two fire trucks responded shortly thereafter. Paramedics treated Cirao on site, administering CPR for 20 to 25 minutes before an ambulance carried him to St. Joseph's Medical Center, where he was pronounced dead.

"It's real sad," murmured a Huddle employee as Cirao was carried out. "He was a real sweet kid."

David Link, Dean of the Notre Dame Law School, knew Cirao well, having taught him over the three years of study.

"He was a great guy. He loved studying law, and he loved being at Notre Dame," Link said. "It was kind of his dream to be here."

Cirao suffered from soft-bone disease, which was a catalyst for his continuous physical difficulties. Link confirmed that medical problems were a frequent occurrence throughout Cirao's life.

"His heart gave him problems a year ago," Link reported, "and he took a short leave of absence. But he came back and kept fighting hard, kept working."

A resident of Fisker Residence Hall, Cirao was a member of the College Democrats, is expected to focus on student relations and a decision by the College Democrats to include sexual orientation in the University's non-discrimination clause.

Their announcement came in advance of a rally scheduled for today at 12:30 p.m. on the steps of the Main Building. The rally, partly sponsored by the College Democrats, is expected to focus on student rights as well as the non-discrimination clause.

"Welcome to South Bend" reads the sign at the city limits. This sign marks the boundary between South Bend and the rest of St. Joseph County, and it is a full mile from Notre Dame, Ind., which houses the campuses of the University of Notre Dame, Saint Mary's College and Holy Cross College.

Constant expansion of both communities has resulted in almost no physical distance between them. Even though, in the eyes of some students, proximity has done little to bridge the psychological gap between the residents of the two areas, both have always had close administrative ties.

"We have always had a good relationship with the governing people of the area," said Father Edward Malloy, current president of Notre Dame. "There is a cooperative spirit in our dealings with the county commissioners and city councils. We have also been fortunate to have good mayors in both South Bend and Mishawaka for a long time."

Both use these ties to try to bind themselves together in other ways for the mutual benefit of both entities.

"We have played an instrumental role in the community," said Malloy, who was appointed to the post upon Father Theodore Hesburgh's resignation in 1987. "Many of our officers have served on the St. Joseph Hospital Board, the Mishawaka Hospital Board and the board of directors for the Chapin Street Health Center for the St. Joseph's Medical Center."

It was during Hesburgh's 35-year term as president that the Studebaker plant, which provided a large portion of the employment for the community, went under. Hesburgh sees the resulting economic shift toward the University as evidence that South Bend has equally depended on the presence of Notre Dame's administration.

"Ever since the exit of Studebaker, we have been the largest employer in the area," he said. "We have worked for economic development within the community. A broad base of small businesses has replaced and even surpassed the large business that disappeared."

Notre Dame employs 3,901

That [employment] is the single most important relationship that we have with the community.

Father Edward Malloy

Members of the community have also played a role in the financial situation of the University. "Our first drive to build the original wing of the University [in 1928] brought in $20,000 from the community of the $1 million needed to complete the project," Hesburgh said. The Joyce Athletic and Convocation Center, built in 1968 and named for Father Edmund Joyce, executive vice-president during the Hesburgh administration, cost $8.6 million to build, more than $1.8 million of which was raised from the St. Joseph Valley Alumni Club and from the areas around the University.

Notre Dame, with its network television exposure and its nationally-ranked sports teams bringing a large amount of tourist money to the South Bend community. The Notre Dame ranks as the number one tourist attraction in South Bend, followed by the College Football Hall of Fame and the Studebaker Museum.

"Our relationship with the leaders in the business community has always been good, especially with the amount of visitors that come for the football games," said Malloy.

the clause would be a key step in reducing the level of homophobia at Notre Dame.

"The atmosphere for gay, lesbians, bisexuals and bisexuals on this campus is slowly improving but still has a long way to go," Griffin said. "An important step in this process is for the officers of the University to make a stand and say, 'It is wrong for students, faculty or staff to discriminate against any individual simply because of their sexual orientation.'"

Nass said his decision to take a stand on the issue resulted from hearing the concerns of the students.

"It [homophobia] is a real problem on campus," he said. "We're interested in taking steps to alleviate the problem." Nass also pointed to the nature of the campus community as a reason to endorse the push to include sexual orientation in the clause.

"The Notre Dame family is about inclusion, not exclusion," he said. "Not including sexual orientation in the clause alienates certain members of our community.

"Statements by the University that it doesn't condone homophobia really don't mean much unless it takes concrete and visible actions to attack the problem," Nass continued.

"The clause is the perfect example of where the University can take such action."

At the Campus Life Council meeting April 14, Morrissey Hall senator Matt Szabo introduced a resolution that called for the Office of Student Affairs to establish a deadline to make a decision on the clause.

In discussing the resolution, the council agreed to have Griffin, who chairs the council, send a letter to Professor Patricia O'Hara, vice president of Student Affairs, that asked for a timetable on the issue and offered the council's support in the decision-making process.

The resolution, which can be voted upon at the council's next meeting Monday, would be sent only if O'Hara does not respond to the letter.

Student Senate, which is chaired by Nass, will address and vote on two resolutions regarding the clause at its meeting next Tuesday.

The resolutions would encourage the University's officers to provide a timeline for their decision and would announce the senate's support for including sexual orientation in the non-discrimination clause.

Sociology 101: The Internet

Norris outlines impact of Web on interactions

By SARAH CORRKEAN

Saint Mary's News Editor

Gone are the days of writing pen pals and sending pictures back and forth to one another. With the advancement of communications and the Internet, Jim Norris, an adjunct professor of sociology at RSIH, noted communicating with pen pals in the future will be done via live computer screen while conversing with one another.

"Nobody can argue that the Internet has not only sociological but also economic and political implications," Norris believes these implications are due to the fact that nobody governs the Internet. With no guidelines to abide by, Americans must use their own discretion in deciding what to allow their children to view on the Net.

Speaking to the Saint Mary's Sociology Club, Norris reviewed the historical landmarks that have advanced the world of communications and the social implications the Internet has introduced to society.

"Reviewing the history of the Internet, Norris noted that in 1964 the Internet was in its infancy stage. As computer companies uncovered more technology, more information was made available to users.

"Norris noted the most important sociological advancement was the 1992 presidential ticket of Clinton and Gore. In their campaigns they emphasized their goal of getting everyone connected to the information highway. The presidential ticket made aware the potential communication power of the Internet.

"People began buying modems and computers in '95 like they were going out of style," said Norris. "Taking into consideration the surge in computer sales, it is easy to understand why this year twenty-two million household use the Internet and by the year 2000, forty million households will be active users."

"Addressing the larger question of what social implications the Internet will have on society, Norris said if need for the right educational, entertainment, and business functions, there is an entire world of information from other parts of the world that we have only just begun to uncover. "You literally can find anything on the net," said Norris. "The danger of working with the Internet is that young children have access to pornography. But with proper proposed legislation that would ban pornography, the Internet will not hinder, but benefit society.

"If used properly, the Internet will benefit the lives of many people in ways they cannot even yet imagine," said sophomore Johna Indriolo.

In a few years, Norris believes random polls will not be taken by communication companies to ask how many people are using the net. Rather, the Internet will be considered an equal to the telephone. A communication device that everyone uses.

"In this day and age, people have to know what is going on in the world of communications," said Norris. "If one does not keep up with the latest technology, they may find themselves playing catch-up trying to do daily tasks such as grocery shopping and ordering food on the net, which will be considered normal daily activities in American lives."

"Overall, Norris noted the Internet will pull the world closer together via the picture communication screens.

"By being able to see each other on the screen with live sound, global social interaction will increase and build bridges to unchartered lands," he said.

Mental illness has warning signs, too.

Withdrawal from social activities, poor hygiene, and lack of motivation could be the first warning signs of a mental illness. Unfortunately, most of us don't recognize the signs. Which is tragic. Because mental illness can be treated. In fact, 2 out of 3 people who get help, get better.

FBI surveillance teams nab Fort Worth bombers

By CHRIS NEWTON
Associated Press Writer

Four people plotted to bomb a natural gas plant to kill police and divert attention while they robbed an armored car outside a bank, federal authorities said Wednesday.

Three men and a woman were arrested Tuesday in Fort Worth and in Boyd, 41 miles northwest in rural Wise County, U.S. Attorney Paul Coggins declared to say whether more arrests were expected.

The FBI refused to discuss the suspects' ultimate aims or comment on reports that they had ties to white supremacy groups.

FBI Agent Robert Garrity said the suspects had been under surveillance for about six weeks after officials received a tip from an informant.

According to an FBI affidavit, the group planned to blow up Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. 's natural gas processing plant, about 15 miles from Boyd. The suspects also planned "four or five" secondary explosions timed to kill law enforcement and officials responding to the initial blast, Garrity said.

They are charged with conspiracy to commit robbery affecting interstate commerce. More charges were possible.

Among the items seized during an FBI search of three properties on Tuesday were KS assault rifles, bomb fuses, grenades, gas masks, photographs and diagrams of the Mitchell gas storage tanks, and pictures of the targeted Loomis armored car and two banks.

The informant told the FBI that the suspects had exploded trial bombs at the 20,000-acre Lyndon B. Johnson National Grassland in Wise County.

Dallas television station WFAA reported that the suspects might have ties to the Ku Klux Klan. A pickup owned by one of the suspects bore a bumper sticker supporting the presidential bid of former KKK grand wizard David Duke.

Brian Engel, a spokesman for Mitchell Energy, a private company based in The Woodlands near Houston, said the plant produces gas liquids from natural gas and processes 162 million cubic feet of natural gas per day.

"As soon as we heard the story, we took measures to increase security," Engel said, referring further questions to the FBI.

NEW YORK

The police had an old leather jacket stained with a murder victim's blood. They thought it belonged to their suspect. But how to show it?

They did it with cat hair.

In one of the oddest tales of DNA evidence in the courtroom, the suspect was convicted after hairs in the jacket were genetically matched to a cat that lived with him.

The case of Snowball, the white American short Hair cat, was reported today in the journal Nature.

It was one of the few times that nonhuman DNA has been used this way in a murder trial.

The woman was 32 when she disappeared from her home on Canada's Prince Edward Island in 1994. Her body was found in a shallow grave a few months later, and police suspected her former common-law husband.

By then, the brown leather jacket had been discovered, stuffed in a plastic bag and left in the woods. Tests showed the bloodstains belonged to the woman.

The cat hairs were found in the lining. Police recalled seeing Snowball at the man's home during their investigation.

So they sent a blood sample from Snowball and hair from the jacket to Stephen J. O'Brien of the National Cancer Institute in Frederick, Md. O'Brien has studied cat genetics for 20 years.

Terror stalks rural towns nightly

Citizens live in fear of violence from militants

By RACHID KHAR

The knock on the door was supposedly from security forces protecting the sleeping village. Instead, there stood men with long beards and long knives.

Their predawn slaughter Tuesday ended with 93 villagers dead, including 43 women and young girls and three small children. The victims were mutilated and decapitated with knives, hatchets, pitchforks and hoes in one of the most savage massacres in Algeria’s five years of violence.

The attack came six weeks before June 3 legislative elections, the first since the army canceled January 1992 voting to thwart a likely victory by a Muslim fundamentalist party.

The move triggered the rebel insurgency against the military and初级的恐怖主义 now threatened the country and that such attacks showed armed groups were on their way out. In a Tuesday night television address, Prime Minister Ahmed Ouyahia echoed those comments and called on citizens to aid in the fight.

There was blood, bloody bodies everywhere. I fainted and woke up in the hospital.

Radi B.

Salah said he climbed into a tree and helplessly watched the massacre unfold.

Rahab II, 63, said he lost his wife, his four daughters, his son and his two sisters. "They used hatchets, pitchforks and shovels to decapitate people," Rahab said.

Fourteen-year-old Radi B. hands trembling, his eyes fixed straight ahead, described how he survived by "playing dead" after being shot twice in the pelvis.

"When they left, I turned over on my back. There was blood, bloody bodies and heads everywhere," he said. "I fainted and woke up in the hospital."

Security authorities surrounded the region later Tuesday, blocking all roads in and out while the dead were buried in nearby Bougara.

Algerian authorities blamed the killings on extremists, vowing to exterminate them. In advance of the elections, however, it has been the government's plan to emphasize that the Islamist extremists are under its control.

President Lamine Zeroual has claimed that only "residual terrorism" still threatened the country and that such attacks showed armed groups were on their way out. In a Tuesday night television address, Prime Minister Ahmed Ouyahia echoed those comments and called on citizens to aid in the fight.

It remained to be seen how effective the militans would be in scaring voters away from the polls, but the attacks have persuaded many villagers in the region to leave their homes for Algeria.

The Medjda is a fertile expanse around Algiers where insurgents and government-armed militans have been stalking each other. Villages suspected of contributing to the massacres were burned.

Witnesses described the men as Islamic extremists. One of those who escaped, Salah II, 32, said the leader of the group was on horseback and "had a list of people to be killed."
Community

"Surveys have been taken that show us as being an economic engine. With the steady flow of private dollars, the investment that they have made in us will come back to benefit them for many years," Notre Dame football has an effect of inflating the South Bend economy with close to $51 million over the course of one year from out-town fans. With the recent expansion of Notre Dame Stadium to seat approximately 80,000 fans, the impact is expected to rise to $91.5 million. That figure does not even take into account the University's nationally ranked soccer, baseball, women's basketball programs, as well as other teams that draw many fans to South Bend.

"Every once in a while you will hear a complaint or concern from the community about students, or from the students about the community," Hesburgh said. "But mostly they get along much better than that."

One aspect of Notre Dame life that impedes interaction between students and residents of the surrounding communities is the isolation of the University's mostly residential campus.

"Notre Dame is an enigma of its own at times," said Malloy. "Part of this is driven by the weather and part by the residential nature of the campus.

You will always find people who are afraid to come to campus, and students who are afraid to leave it," he continued.

"But what is true is that we are working. We have worked with the local police departments to increase student security.

There have been some major bridges built," said Stephen Luke, mayor of South Bend. "The relationship between the neighborhood and the students who live in the off-campus housing is much more positive now than it was 10 years ago. Even seven years ago, no residents were afraid of living in their neighborhoods. But off-campus housing complexes have gotten better and now it is not as much of a problem.

"Sure, every so often there will be a complaint of students partying too loudly, or students falling victim to crime," said Tim McFarle, president of the St. Joseph Valley Alumni Club. "But overall, I think that you will find that a lot of residents do not mind the students being there.

"Also, I think that a lot of the complaints (about security) result from the neighborhoods that the students live in," he added. "The areas around the University have always been fringe areas, and the students just decide that they are going to live there. All that the city and University can do to help is to provide increased police patrols. They cannot change the neighborhoods."

But the University and the city are working together to make those areas less dangerous. "The University has done a good job of work with city services to prevent break-ins and muggings in the areas around student housing and in the bar zone in the Northeast section of town," Luke commented.

"We get individual students as well as student groups," he said. "They work at everything from the front desk to tutor- ing, anywhere that we need them."

The radio and television stations that are run by Notre Dame also serve to tie the University to the South Bend community.

"The South Bend/Elkhard market NBC affiliate station in WNDU Channel 16, This channel, while owned and operated by the University does directly with the community and community issues. "Being owned by the University we are asked to affect the community in positive ways," said Lou Pierce, director of audio development and television programming at WNDU. "We do this by pouring a lot of time and effort and money into public service and news programming. It is what the University expects from any that they own and we feel very fortunate to be able to play this role.

"We have described television as the most powerful medium in the history of communication, and said of the Notre Dame's control of WNDU, "We will continue to use this medium to affect the community and if we ever stopped doing that, or decided that it was not important to us, I imagine that you would see the University withdraw its obvious and dramatic example of how the University can get involved," Malloy said. "It was a response to an immediate community need. We went to the Board of Trustees in order to get approval for the purchase of the clothing store on South Michigan Street and it was a major suc-

While the Center relied heavily on interest-free funding from the University at its beginnings in 1988, recently it has received a lot of funding from private institutions and individuals both local and national. "About 80 percent of our funding now comes from those private sources," said Matt Towey, director of volunteer services for the Center. "Of that private money, only a yearly $10,000 gift is still provided by the University.

Towey estimates the number of student volunteers that serve the Center in various capacities to be in the hundreds every year.

"We depend 100 percent on volunteers from the community up there to work side by side with the students."

With a broadcast radius of 30 to 40 miles, the radio station reaches deep into Indiana in all directions and even into Michigan. WNSD gears its programming towards the community and must run during academic breaks, when most of the rest of the campus shuts down.

"We depend 100 percent on volunteers from the community to keep us running during the breaks," Rackiewicz said. "The rest of the year it is entirely managed by students and students make up nearly 70 percent of the broadcasters. The other 30 percent are community volun-

Military finds parts of missing plane

By ROBERT WELLER

The search for the plane's missing pilot continued. "I can tell you now that through the efforts of maintenance personnel at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base ..." EAGLE, Colo.

Two pieces of wreckage found on a snowy Rocky Mountain peak are from the Air Force warplane that vanished on a training mission over Arizona three weeks ago, the military confirmed Wednesday. We were told absolutely 49 feet with the markings of turbine parts made by General Electric. One piece is plastic-insulated tubing and wires, described as part of a device used to control flags, and the other is metal with the markings of turbine parts made by General Electric.

Fletcher continued. "I don't like to be critical, but our engineers said it would have been preventable." Others say there's little that could have been done to resist the power of a 500-year flood.

"I wish it was built," Grand Forks Assistant Engineer Al Grasser said the city could have done more to stem the rise. "You could have added the dike, just barely," Grasser said. "I wish it was built." Downstream, with the crest moving north toward Canada, crews rushed to top off dikes protecting deserted towns and farms in the Red River Valley. General Weather Service was already predicting record flooding in the Grand Forks area. The previous record was 48.8 feet set in 1979. The February forecast of 49 feet remained the same through the end of April. Not until April 14 it was increased to 50 feet.

"The weather on the mountain is better than we anticipated," Fletcher said, and the searchers should have no trouble staying there overnight.

Running said. "The search continues." Col. Denver Fletcher said two Army National Guard helicopcopters made trips up to the mountain's 11,500-foot level on Wednesday and dropped off four members of a search team.

"They plan to spend the night there," Fletcher continued. "Their mission is to go up and see if they can find any remains.”

On April 16th, as the first of the residents along the river began to flee, the weather service increased the crest forecast to 50 1/2 feet. Predictions increased three times over the next two days to 54 feet.

"We were dealing with an unprecedented flood and you're dealing with Mother Nature and you just have to roll with the punches," said Dean Bratst, hydrologist in charge of the weather service's North Central River Forecast Center in Minneapolis. Grand Forks Assistant Engineer Al Grasser said the city could have done more to stem the floodwaters if they had accu- rate crest numbers, but he isn't sure how effective extra dike-building and sandbagging would have been.

"You could have added the sandbags and the dikes and kept it off for a day, but the problem would be to build a dike or sand-bags that would hold up for several weeks." he said. "It's not just a question of elevation, but of duration." Heavy rain falls followed by a freeze made for a soft, muddy platform for the sandbags that have begun to sink.

When the flood hit, the city was in the midst of analyzing an Army Corps of Engineers study recommending Grand Forks ring itself with a system of dikes and flood walls. The cost: $40 mil-

One Last Consideration...

Well, this is it... the end draws nigh... for all of us. This ending means different things for different people. For the seniors it obviously means something quite different than it does to the younger folks among us. For the faculty and staff and administrators it has meaning, too. All of us are affected by it in some way. But just what do we take away with us? There was a message conveyed on the Senior Class Retreat this past weekend which is apt for us all as we end the year and move in different directions for a time... maybe forever. It's a message that has been stabbed at in this column throughout the year. It's really the question of what really matters in the end?... what's the constant that will hold us together in our separation and in our distance from one another?

I'd like to think that those of you who take the time to read this column already know. I'd like to think, actually, that it is so ingrained in the hearts and minds of every one of us in this community that it need not even be said. And yet, it would be wrong not to say it... not to proclaim it! Please God, it won't be a shock to anyone that the one constant, the one thing that matters, the one thing that will hold us all together is Jesus, and the love that God revealed in sending him to be among us as one of us. Oh, I know it sounds pious, and maybe a bit ethereal, but it doesn't make it any less true.

For those who call themselves Christian, there is nothing more... nothing else we need to cling to than that. It isn't money, or an accumulation of friends, or even "good times" that will ultimately sustain us in our search for meaning and for happiness. It is only Jesus. Our leave taking of this place has us separated for a while, for some longer than others. But in the Lord, we are not really separated. Just as we gather united around the table now, we will again. Every time we gather to celebrate the Lord's supper, wherever we are, we gather together as one family. We are forever bound in Jesus and in Notre Dame.

So whoever you are, whatever the circumstances around your departure, whether it be for a few weeks before the summer session, or the summer months or until the first home football game, Notre Dame will always be home. It is not, for you seniors, an ending, but a beginning of a life more wonderful and more blessed than you can now even ask for or imagine. Trust in the Lord's love for you and pursue God with the same fervor and hope with which you engage every pursuit. Have faith in the God who has brought you this far, and who will never leave you. As gift and prayer, we leave you with the words of Mrs. Charles Cowman and Mary Gorges:

> As our voyage we may infer from the past. Without doubt storms will come as they came in the bygone days. But we will give them firm and courageous welcome, for we have already weathered so many storms that we are unafraid of the wind and the tide, the lightning and the snow.

> And so we shall - when the Voyage is completed drop anchor where no storms come, but where the green swell is at last in the haven dumb, and we are forever out of the swing of the sea.

> We have come very safely - hitherto; And sometimes seas were calm, and skies were blue; Sometimes the wild waves rose - the tempest roared; But never barque went down with Christ on board.

> And so it shall be to the very end - Through ebb and flow, the one unchanging friend, Ruling the waves which sink at his command, Holding them in the hollow of his hand.

> There comes an hour, when, every tempest o'er The harbour lights are reached, the golden shores: Never, oh nevermore to fret or fear - Christ, give us faith to praise thee even here!

> From the staff of the Office of Campus Ministry, good luck on final exams, have a donut hole (or several!) on us. Godspeed in the days ahead.

Math and mundanity at Notre Dame

Wakeup! It’s finals time again. To celebr­ate, I went inland and put together my own little math test:

The answer? 10,281.

The result? We’re afraid to stick our heads above the sand, to speak up when we think something’s wrong, to speak out against anyone on campus who’s violating our rights.

But we may be running out of time — in three weeks approximately one quarter of the 10,281 will be gone, ejected into the outside world and out of our little community forever. And we will never have known more than a fraction of them.

The moral? Stop hiding in social convention. These members of the community are our brothers and sisters: we better our own experience by reaching out to them instead of waiting for them to come to us. We add romance and adventure to life in South Bend, Ind., by breaking social rules, violating cultural provisions. We need to break out, and we need it badly.

So let’s do it — I will if you will. Oh, yeah... and maybe you’ll better brush up on your math.

Veruca Salt proves that the little things matter

...while Bush is swallowed by its antics

Despite these slight pitfalls, the music was fairly entertaining (if not uniform), highlighted by the short but energetic "x-girlfriend," and the guitar powered instrumental "Machinehead.

Bush is a somewhat entertaining band, but by far lack any artistic merit whatsoever. Veruca Salt, the opening band, offers a strong contrast to Bush. Veruca Salt came out on stage without a pretentious attitude and put on a great show. It was quite clear that they were out there to have a good time by the way the two lead singers, the beautiful Louise Post and the lovely Nina Gorton, interacted with the crowd.

For those of you who are familiar with the quintessential grunge band, Sonic Youth. Nina's sister Kim is the lead singer, so clearly talent is inherent in this family. They talked to the crowd and even flirted with the crowd, as their quirky pop music put a hop in the crowds' step without the violence induced by Bush's overpowering riffs.

Veruca Salt fans recognized their favorites such as the anthemic "Awesome," or their tribute to spider-man. They manage to do this and are still able to dance around the stage with so much enthusiasm as the crowd.

Veruca Salt proves that you do not need violent music or whiny lyrics ("swallowed") to maintain a following. In fact, by choosing the other route, they show a great deal of maturity.

Veruca Salt one, Bush zero.

The Cuban Five

What ever and Ever Amen

Five songs deal with shattered relationships - at least superficial ones. Folds and his friends put a hop in the crowds' step without the violence induced by Bush's overpowering riffs.

Folds and his friends put a hop in the crowds' step without the violence induced by Bush's overpowering riffs.

Each song is injected with an infectious groove that adds an extra bounce to the songs and drives the crowd crazy. I said to myself, "Hey, I might want to catch them at the Metro in Chicago next time."

The whole thing is done completely tongue-in-cheek from the outset where the vocals are described as, "created to detract from the repetitious inherent in modern instrumental pop music."

Most songs deal with shattered relationships - at least superficial ones. Folds even generalizes the lyrics from the angle of someone that doesn't relate to anyone in "Battle of Who Could Care Less." This song relates to the apathy of the generation-x crowd and gives the album its title in the third song, "Nation of Uselessness."

Altogether, this album gives the audience what they are looking for - a fun time with some good music. For a closer look at what they can do, you might want to catch them at the Metro in Chicago tonight at 7 p.m.

Am I Your World?

L ast Thursday I was shivering out by Stonehenge waiting for the Amnesty Concert to start and the PA system was playing this amazing drum-crazy song. I said to myself, "Hey, I know this song! What is this song?" Then I said to myself, "Oh yeah! It's emily's. The most under-appreciated campus band ever." Well, now Doug McEachern and Mike Larmoyeux of emily play in the Cuba Five. Doug now prefers to sing and play guitar - usually from the angle of someone that doesn't relate to anyone in "Battle of Who Could Care Less." This song relates to the apathy of the generation-x crowd and gives the album its title in the third song, "Nation of Uselessness."

Altogether, this album gives the audience what they are looking for - a fun time with some good music. For a closer look at what they can do, you might want to catch them at the Metro in Chicago tonight at 7 p.m.

Set You Free

(out of five stars)

It's come to the point when most Dumers don't even know or remember Chisel. This is sad. Let me fix that.

Chisel, AKA Ted Lou, Chris Norberg and John Brett, are the hallmarks of the band of the early 90s. Up until 1994 NAZZ, they graced us with a cast of very talented students. The past two years, they have been Mozart operas. This year, the music department is branching out.

If you like the idea of musical theater but are just unwilling to go to Chicago's Lyric Opera, here is your chance to watch high quality opera productions right here under the Dome.

This Monday and Tuesday at 8 p.m., the Notre Dame Opera Workshop will put on a double-your-pleasure feature with "London" and "The Shirt '97." You NEED this album.

Coming Up

Suede in America now require the addition of "London," due to the complaints of an irrelevant minority who also uses the same name—hence the necessity of our version of "London," due to the complaints of an irrelevant minority whose journey through the world of music will be as unencumbered as it will slow.

In stark comparison, this proper Suede's third album stands out as perhaps their best yet, and the last two were both excellent. The one change in the lineup is new drummer Neil Codling, and thankfully vocalist Brett Anderson and guitarist/sylistic Richard Oakes still remain, the former maintaining his habit of putting everything he has into every song, and it pays off handsomely. As with their previous work, the first track is the best, "Trash," an immensely catchy and energetic anthem with enough cynicism to dispel any thoughts of blandness. — or maybe, maybe its our nowhere towns, our nothing places and our cellophane sounds," warbles Brett, and he then adds by way of a chorus, "just trash, me and you. It's everything we do." Brilliant. Following is "Filmaris," a slower, funkier track with crashing guitars and a lush set of edgy vocals. With "Lazy" we find another superbly produced tune, and the remainder of the album is of similar merit. The pace varies from time to time, precluding boredom, and throughout there is the sense that Suede are determined to be written off no more as lucky journeymen (as insuit some new word-eating critics once hurled, foolishly). As with a few bands from Britain, the grand success Suede enjoy at home has not translated into popularity this side of the Atlantic, and if this situation were ever to be rectified "Coming Up" is the album to do it. In the words of two well-known amateur music critics, this doesn't just rock, it rules.

CLASSICAL COLUMN

A Double Dose of Operas

By JULIE BRUBAKER and MICHAEL ANDERSON

Any individuals around campus have wondered what fun Notre Dame doesn't put on Broadway musicals. Wouldn't it be wonderful to be able to skip the Cashing movie-of-the-week and go see your favorite actor and sing, say, Les Miserables or Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat?

Although there continues to be no musicals at ND, we do have an annual opera, which historically brought forth what we now call musicals. Each year, the Opera Workshop performs an all-scale opera at Washington Hall, with a cast of very talented students. The past two years, they have been Mozart operas. This year, the music department is branching out.

This opera also features graduate students Steve Salzgeber and Earl Perez, as well as undergraduates Megan McCormick and Jeff Clontz.

Ravel, an Impressionist composer, wrote this opera in 1924. It is a very atypical opera, according to diva Holden: "This is a good opera for people not familiar with operas to see — it is witty, entertaining, interesting ... nothing like a classical opera.

Ravel based the plot of "L'Enfant et les Sortileges" on his understanding of youth and nature, as drawn from his own relationship with his mother. The cast of characters is highly unconventional: an 8-year-old and a teapot (conjure up images of "Be Our Guest."), as well as cats, squirrels and a third silent actor. This lighthearted work is generally accepted by the child. Music is drawn from a variety of genres, including the Cushing movie-of-the-week and go see your favorite actor and sing, say, Les Miserables or Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat!

Mason, Johnson not talking to reporters

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
Associated Press

NEW YORK
Those wanting to talk about the Larry Johnson for Anthony Mason trade will have to talk among themselves. The two are keeping their thoughts secret heading into Game 1 of the Hornets-Knicks series.

"Get away from me, you evil men of writing," Johnson told reporters in Charlotte, S.C., where the Knicks wrapped up a three-day minicamp Wednesday before flying back to New York for Thursday night's opener of the best-of-five series.

Some 180 miles away in Fort Mill, S.C., Mason was no more accommodating — although not quite as ornery — to reporters who waited for hours for him to leave the Hornets' practice facility.

"Hello and goodbye. Write what you want to write," Mason said before speeding away in his black Mercedes. "I told you I wasn't talking. I thought you were more educated than to wait around."

So much for any new comments or war of words between the players traded for each other last summer. Both seem to think that silence is the best approach before tip-off.

Mason, normally the talkative type, has been more mum over the past few months regarding the trade that ended his five-year run with the Knicks.

Back when he was speaking about it, Mason claimed the move was orchestrated by Patrick Ewing — with whom he didn't always get along.

Mason had signed a long-term contract extension just a year earlier, and he claimed general manager Ernie Grunfeld told him he would be with the Knicks for the long haul.

"I felt more or less betrayed and disappointed," Mason said. "But that's neither here nor there now. I'm with a team that wants me."

And it's a team that has afforded him the opportunity to have a breakout season.

Mason has been one of the main reasons the Hornets had the best record in franchise history. Averaging a league-best 43.2 minutes per game, Mason had four triple-doubles and averaged career-highs of 16.2 points, 11.4 rebounds and 5.7 assists while playing the power forward spot for Charlotte.

In New York, Mason played small forward because Charles Oakley was the power forward. But in Charlotte, Mason has been able to utilize his low-post strengths and stay close enough to the basket to keep within range of his 10-to-12 foot jump.

"When he's good, he's awful good," Charlotte coach Dave Cowens said Wednesday. "There's really not that many people that can deal with him at that position, especially when he takes the ball out on the floor."

Johnson, on the other hand, went from power forward to Mason's old small forward spot on the Knicks.

His scoring average dipped from 20.5 in his final season with Charlotte to 12.8 in his first year with the Knicks.

Coach Jeff Van Gundy has often kept Johnson on the bench during the fourth quarter of close games, using a three-guard alignment instead.

Rolling Irish take two from lowly Bulldogs

By ALLISON KRILLA
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame softball team continued its winning ways yesterday, sweeping a double-header against the visiting Butler Bulldogs in decisive fashion. The 8-3 and 8-1 victories improved the team's overall record to 30-19.

"Especially in the first game, we started focused, but once we knew it would be a blowout, we let up a little bit," said pitcher Kelly Nichols.

In game one, Notre Dame overcame sloppy defense with a strong offensive performance, pounding out 11 hits, including five singles in a six-run second inning. Third baseman Kara McMahon led the charge for the Irish, going 2-for-4 with two RBIs and one run scored. Pinch hitter Amy Laboe came through in the clutch again, securing the victory with a two-run single in the third to close out the scoring for the Irish.

"In the first game, we came out so strong in the beginning that it was easy to lose focus," said McMahon. "I think we played half the game with focus and the other half without." Nichols, recently plagued by tendinitis in her right arm, pitched four strong innings of one-hit ball to earn the win, her 10th of the season. "I felt good today," said Nichols. "My arm's feeling really good right now."

Angela Bessolo picked up her first save of 1997 and just the second of her career, allowing three runs on five hits after relieving Nichols to start the fifth. The Irish came out swinging in game two, scoring eight runs on 10 hits. McMahon again powered the Irish from the number two spot in the lineup, going 2-for-3 with two RBIs. Freshman Sarah Mathison went 2-for-2 with one RBI and one run scored. Four runners crossed the plate for Notre Dame in the fifth inning, highlighted by McMahon's two-run single to left.

Joy Battersby looked strong in her seven innings of work, picking up her fourth straight win, to improve to 8-6 on the season. "Joy's come on really strong," said McMahon. "Having a small staff is hard, but (Bessolo) and (Battersby) have been stepping up to give (Nichols) some time off."

Despite the relatively easy wins, the Irish felt that they reaped the benefits of the doubleheader.

"In the second game, we tried to stay focused the whole time," said Nichols. "These games were good because we need to get on the dirt as much as possible. Rutgers will probably be a team just like Butler, so it was good to have played them (yesterday)."

"Right now it's important to be consistent," said McMahon. "We can't afford even one bad inning against the teams we will be facing in the tournaments."

Brother Roger is the founder and prior of the ecumenical Taizé community in eastern France. For more than half a century, Brother Roger and his companions have borne witness to Christ in an increasingly secular society. Their joy, mercy and simplicity provide a tantalizing glimpse of what Christ's church, healed and reunited, is called to become.

The liturgies at Taizé combine elements of the Catholic, Orthodox, and Protestant traditions. Their distinctive, meditative chants of Scriptural verses are popular throughout the world.
A native of St. Stephen, S.C., Legree has bulked up considerably since coming to Notre Dame last August, adding nearly 25 pounds to his frame. Even with the increase in size, he has displayed the lateral movement necessary to contain the run.

"He can really be an asset up front because of his ability to clog the middle," said linebacker Kory Minor. "He is a younger guy playing a new position, but he looks like he's been playing there forever. He has really been there for us this spring."

What was once a deficiency has all of a sudden become a strength. When Melvin Dansby and Brad Williams return from injuries and with veterans Corey Bennett, Kurt Belisle, and Shelton Jordan in the mix, the defensive line should more than hold its own this fall.

"Lance Legree is going to be fine there," said Davie. "He's the surprise of the spring. He's the surprise of the spring, no question," said head coach Bob Davie. "We knew we had a talented player with him, but we had no idea he'd develop like this. I think he's surprised pretty much everyone."
Starks wins Sixth Man award

Associated Press

NEW YORK

John Starks of the New York Knicks won the NBA's Sixth Man award on Wednesday.

The New York guard received 84 of a possible 115 first-place votes in voting among media members in the United States and Canada. Toni Kukoc of the Chicago Bulls, last year's winner, was second with seven first-place votes and Chris Gasol of the New Jersey Nets finished third with six.

Starks' winning margin was the biggest since Portland's Clifford Robinson got 89 of 98 votes in 1993.

Voting, administered by the league, is done by a 115-member panel. There are 28 national members of the panel and three media members from each of the league's 29 cities.

Martinez leads Yankee win

Associated Press

NEW YORK

Tino Martinez drove in five runs as the New York Yankees stretched a winning streak to three for the first time this season, beating the Milwaukee Brewers 10-5 Wednesday. Martinez hit a three-run double in the sixth for New York, which began the day tied for first in the AL East.

Kenny Rogers won despite allowing five runs and six hits in six innings with four strikeouts and six walks. Graeme Lloyd pitched 1 2-3 innings for his first save since 1995.

Milwaukee, which lost its fourth straight, rallied from a five-run deficit to beat the Cleveland Indians 5-3 in the third on Jeff Cirillo's two-run single and John Jaha's RBI single off Manny Ramirez' run-scoring groundout and Brian Giles' RBI double. Boston starter John Wasdin allowed four runs and five hits in 5 1-3 innings.

The Northwestern Wildcats slid past the Fighting Irish handing them their second consecutive loss.

Chris Pederson singled off second baseman Braden Ust, scoring Han and allowing Dainton to move to third. Northwestern then pulled off a double steal. Pederson left from first, and when Irish catcher Mike Amrhein throw to second, Dainton scored. Ust's throw to the plate sailed to the backstop and Pederson moved to third.

After a walk to J.P. Williamson, Ollie Dunn attempted another squeeze but Irish third baseman J.J. Brock threw to Amrhein, who tagged Pederson at the plate.

After two tough losses to Michigan and Northwestern, Notre Dame plays at home again today against Toledo.

This weekend, the Irish have doubleheaders at West Virginia and Pittsburgh. But, in Mainieri's mind, the depleted pitching staff — and Schmalz's injury in particular — will not hinder Notre Dame in the five upcoming games during the next four days.

"It will have no effect," Mainieri said. "We just need to regroup. We can only take one game at a time."

The Irish offense couldn't produce much needed runs yesterday.

The Irish bats — and their .334 team batting average — stopped. Through the last eight innings of the game, only three Irish runners reached second base, and none made it any further.

"We've been hitting too many balls in the air the last two days," Mainieri said. "We're not forcing the other team to make plays. We haven't been able to force them to make any errors."

While the Notre Dame offense shut down, it appeared that starting pitcher Darin Schmalz would not need much more support. After the two runs scored in the first inning, the senior right-hander retired five of the next seven batters he faced.

But in the third inning, Wildcat first baseman Keith Haan hit a one-hop line drive that hit Schmalz above the left eye. The ball ricocheted to Jeff Felker, who made the putout at first base.

Schmalz walked off the field holding a towel to his head, and was transported to the hospital for stitches. He's the sixth Irish pitcher currently injured.

Despite all the injuries, the pitching staff has managed a 2.44 ERA over the last eight games — but 19 Irish errors have led to 16 unearned runs.

"Schmalz's injury had a huge effect on us," Mainieri said. "Our pitching is so thin now, we felt we needed a good five or six innings from our starter."

Senior Mike Balicki replaced Schmalz and kept Northwestern scoreless through the fourth inning. But in the fifth, Alex Shilliday came in to give up four runs, taking the loss for Notre Dame.

With runners on first and third, Bob Danton laid a squeeze bunt down the third base line. Patrick Thompson scored from third, Haan moved to second and Danton was safe at first.

Chris Pederson singled off second baseman Braden Ust, scoring Han and allowing Dainton to move to third. Northwestern then pulled off a double steal. Pederson left from first, and when Irish catcher Mike Amrhein throw to second, Dainton scored. Ust's throw to the plate sailed to the backstop and Pederson moved to third.

It was a real physical game," Brett Hartmann of the Bolivian Yak's said. "They were probably the first team to give us trouble inside."

Hartmann's teammate Peter Gansler commented on the solid fundamental philosophy of his team. "We just wanted to focus on good defense and rebounding," Gansler added. "We think if we can continue to do that, we have a shot at the final four."

In top five action, third seeded Malicious Prosecution continued to dominate with a 21-10 victory over No. 30 Burn 'n' Shoot. Malicious is one of the teams most highly touted as being capable of dethroning the top-seeded Corby's and with the fast-paced offense it has displayed thus far, has the potential to do so.

"We might try to move around a little," Neil Jakobe said of his team's strategy going into the Sweet Sixteen. "We definitely need to work on our shooting and step it up on defense a little bit."

The fifth seed, SFR2: We Still Can't Score, also walked away victorious, with a 21-16 defeat of Sweeter than Candy. Although SFR2 only led by one at the half, they were able to break the game open in the second half, led by solid shooting at the line by Keith Kurowski, who went two-for-two, and Steve Starck, who made a clutch free throw late in the game.

"We're playing good basketball right now," Chris Dotson of SFR2 commented. "We were able to mix up our defense tonight — both zone and man-to-man — and we found some success there, so we'll probably continue to do that and keep playing the way we have been.

DEAD EUGENIA

I have been through a difficult divorce and moving out of the house, but need to take it easy. Last night I did not want to return to video production. One of my children has already found a job, so I do not want to worry about it anymore. I do not want to make a fortune. Should I take back my claims? Will I ever have another partner in my life? I was on July 14, 1943, at 4:09 p.m.

DEAD 65:

You've made a lot of wrong choices over the past several years. However, your chart shows that you can do well as a documentarian filmmaker, but I believe that at least another daughter will also go to live with your ex in the future. Without your ex, you have no children, but if you add a children's birth date, it will be too difficult to see if you will get into a family counseling program with your family, and if you can put it to an end. As a matter of fact, you should have gone for the money and paid your bills before the house. Don't lie in the past or question what's happened. There is no time to waste. You have to get your life put together. You are in a high cycle where work, family, and health may be threatened by someone you trust. There may be a high price to pay for this. In 1946.

ARIES (March 21-April 20):

This could be a mighty dry spell. Your position may be threatened by someone who is much more to learn than you first thought. You will begin to discover that there are more opportunities than you thought for you to receive recognition for your accomplishments. If you go involved behind-the-scenes activities, you will discover that there is more to know than you thought. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19):

Try to be patient with children or those younger and less experienced than you. You should organize hard and event and engage in a major way. Aries (March 21-April 19):

Get caught up on your letter-writing and reading. You need to stay in touch and leave new events of knowledge in order to advance in the field.中医

JUNE 23rd:

I love you. You should organize fund-raising events. You need to stay in touch and leave new events of knowledge in order to advance in the field. What a difference a year makes. I love you.

Assassins shot down in historical 41-39 game

By BRIAN REINTHALER
Associate Sports Editor

In what may have been the game of the Bookstore tournament, let alone the game of the decade, No. 22 Bring Out the Grimp III upset No. 11 Downtown Assassins in front of 300 plus die hard fans.

When the game began around 10:30 p.m., quite a few other contests were still not even under way, but by the time Gimp point guard Pat Brennan lay in the final basket nearly two hours later, every other game was long since over. The first break bucket gave Gimp a 41-39 victory and advanced the squad to the Sweet 16 of Bookstore Basketball XXVI. "I can't even describe it," gasped Grimp shooting guard John Tajada immediately following Brennan's clincher. "It was really one heck of a game." And that it was. The final contest in the round of 32 featured all of the elements one would expect in a typical Bookstore class, and more. There were scrap, hard fouls, disputed calls, dunks, threats of technical fouls for fan interference, travelling calls which nullified game-clinching layups, and game-saving jump shots from well beyond the three-point arc.

Early on, there appeared to be more talk than game on Stepan Court No. 6. The two squads got right at one another from the opening play, and there were a number of occasions when they were forced to take a time out.

Primetime ready for the big show

By BETSY BAKER

Up until the historical 41-39 No. 22 Bring Out the Grimp III upset of No. 11 Downtown Assassins that tied the Bookstore Basketball record for highest score in history, No. 27 Primetime had been the talk of the tournament.

And the team of three sophomores and two freshmen still might be an ever so Sweet Sixteen beat to the courts tomorrow.

After their 21-15 upset of sixth-ranked Sexual Chocolate, what had previously been whispers about the team's ability turned into full fledged speculation about the team's potential to be a giant killer. From the mouths of fans to top-ranked veterans, Primetime is cited as the team to watch to the twenty-sixth Bookstore tournament.

Many compare the team to last year's runner-up Showtime, and the comparison is uncanny—Five guys from Stanford Hall who don't boast a lot of size but over flow with team unity and heart. The one major difference that sets Primetime apart from last year's Cinderella story is its youth. While Showtime was a group of seniors with their last shot at the title, this year's group of green is composed of up-and-coming players with no pressure facing them as far as a last chance.

Still, the team doesn’t shy away from being compared to Showtime.

"We named ourselves after them," Mike Empy of Primetime said of his predecessors. "They lived right upstairs from us, and we used to practice with them and help them train."

When asked if Primetime planned on having the same kind of success that Showtime found last year, Empy answered, "Boy, do I hope so."

In other fifth-round action, the games were not decisive victories by any means. With the exception of top-seeded Corby's who rolled to a 21-7 victory over 4 Inmates and a Loose End, no surviving team won easily.

In other upset action, No. 13 The Sixth Man lost in a 21-19 to No. 9 Vanilla Thunder II. Ross Hassen, of Vanilla Thunder, attributed his team's victory to good defense inside the paint.

"Our game plan was to zone 'em up and make them shoot outside," Haussen commented. "That's what we did and fortunately they didn't shoot real well."

In another close game, BW3's Bolivian Yak defeated 848 at 17 in a hard fought physical match.

Irish suffer second home loss of season

By DAN CICHALSKI

At Turn Back the Clock Night last night at Eck Stadium, the Fighting Irish baseball team could not even turn back the Cat's, let alone the clock. The Northwestern Wildcats brought a 13-26 record into the game and scored willingly last night, pounding the Irish 12-3.

Following Tuesday's 5-3 loss to Michigan, Notre Dame has suffered consecutive losses for the first time since March 22-23 when they dropped three games at Seton Hall.

The loss was only the second at home for the Irish this season.

"We've had a few games like that (recently), where we couldn't make the plays," Irish coach Paul Mainieri said. "We've struggled defensively and no one steps up."

Wearing replica uniforms from the 1956s, Notre Dame committed only two errors, but many other hits bounced off players or slipped past outstretched gloves. All nine Northwestern starters reached base at least once.

The Wildcats scored first, putting together three straight hits — two doubles and a single — in the opening inning for a 2-0 lead.

In the bottom of the first, Justin Scholl led off after missing 24 games with rib and shoulder injuries, and was hit on the shoulder by Chris Hargan. But Scholl was thrown out trying to steal second base by Wildcats catcher Nick Franzese, and Randall Brooks grounded out.

With two outs, Mike Amirian singled and scored from first on Jeff Wagner's base hit to center field. Then, in the 2nd inning, Irish catcher Dave Northrup doubled to left field.

In the 3rd inning, Mike Amirian doubled, and scored on a wild pitch from Irish Starter Chris Hargan. After walking the bases loaded to start the 4th inning, the Irish pitcher struck out his last six batters to end the game.

When it comes to Notre Dame football, there are very few secrets.

Every tackle, touchdown, and field goal are susceptible to the slightest detail. An Irish player can't sneeze without someone not making a comment. The slightest detail makes a difference, traveling calls, and the comparison of totals for fan interference.

Every Irish player can't help but wonder about the team's ability to be a giant killer. While Showtime was a group of seniors with their last shot at the title, this year's group of green is composed of up-and-coming players with no pressure facing them as far as a last chance.

Still, the team doesn't shy away from being compared to Showtime.

"We named ourselves after them," Mike Empy of Primetime said of his predecessors. "They lived right upstairs from us, and we used to practice with them and help them train."

When asked if Primetime planned on having the same kind of success that Showtime had at the collegiate level, the team didn't even hesitate.

"Boy, do I hope so."
