South Bend police
fight rise in crime

By MICHELLE KRUPA

SOUTH BEND

During the past two weeks, the city of South Bend has been stunned by an unusually high number of acts of "senseless violence," and as a result, the police department has increased uniformed and investigative officers presence throughout the city.

According to Sgt. John Williams of the South Bend police department, the increase comes in response to a call from Mayor Stephen Loree and police administrators after 13 violent crimes, including homicides, were reported in 14 consecutive days earlier this month.

"They [Loree and others] called us to increase officers assigned to the neighborhoods where the crimes have occurred," Williams said.

All crimes took place on the west side of the city, just a few miles from the University, and law enforcement officials cannot find any connections between any of the crimes. As a result, the police staff has reorganized, placing more officers near the crime scenes over the past 10 days, but no new officers have been hired as a result of the occurcences.

"Plain-clothes officers who normally have follow-up work to do are now in unmarked cars on the west side," Williams said.

He noted that 12 officers are presently at the police academy in "rookie school," and that they will be hired upon their completion of studies to augment the present police force.

In theime, citizens must carry on with their normal lives and trust the efforts of the police in trying to alleviate the crime situation, according to Williams.

"I'm sure that a lot of people in the community are scared to go out of their houses, but they should know that the police are doing all they can to keep them safe," he said.

Sgt. Ken Horvath noted in a recent press release the difficulties the police are now facing in combating these crimes.

No more Core: Trick or treat?

Yesterday, my friend told me he has decided to organize a community service project that will help those of The Observer. As a part of the "Are No Children Here," he felt compelled to do more than just prattle about urban decay. Of course, his latent political and social responsibilities are largely inspired by the Arts and Letters Core Course.

I am already more than half way through my Notre Dame education, and I can honestly say that core course is the most valuable class I've taken. It forces students to examine their relationships with society, God, and most importantly, themselves.

Moreover, students must then articulate their stances on the aforementioned topics to name only a few of the plethora of topics covered through the course of a year.

When confronted with the well thought out opinions of their peers, many students have been forced to change their own beliefs, or examine them more closely.

Recently, I have heard rumors that Core is going to be discontinued. I cannot understand how such an accursed decision could possibly be made. Aside from the self-discovery many students experience, Core provides one of the most unique learning experiences available at this university.

When you take a year long class, with the same friends, and a profes­ sor who will actually know your name in two years, Core provides a sample, social, moral, and ethical category. It forces students to examine and re-examine their beliefs. It is also a result of counter-culture students and celebs rally to free Tibet

Boulder Pagan Alliance offers alternatives for Halloween

BOULDER, Colo. A Barbie doll and Bullwinkle the moose, the goddess and god of the ceme­tery, sit on the altar amid candles, a chalice, wine, plate of cookies and a sword. Subtract the sword, the Barbie, the moose and the light-hearted pagan laughter that fills the room and something could easily pass as a Catholic altar.

Warren Stott, priest and co-founder of the Boulder Pagan Alliance, took part in this ritual and says that the levity and joy in the funny side of the human experience is one of the appeals of paganism. Stott describes paganism as a natural, pre-Christian religion that has adapted itself to the fastest growing religions in the country.

The Boulder Pagan Alliance hosts monthly drum gatherings, which Stott says draw 80 to 200 followers. Colorado has a large pagan population, which Stott estimates at 2,500.

According to the New York Times, the reason for the increase in neo-pagans in Colorado rests in the state's traditional tolerance for unorthodox religion. It is also a result of counter-culture migrants who were attracted to Colorado in the '60s by its cheap land, relative isolation and rich cultural mys­tique.

On Friday, many pagans will host ritu­als celebrating Samhain, a Celtic word meaning "summer's end." This day is the end of the Celtic year. Historically past, priests celebrated a festival of the Goddess of Summer and God of Winter, marking the year's transition. Druid priests built protective boundaries, believ­ing those who crossed them would be punished on Samhain. Priests also made sacrifices of animals, crops, livestock, people, seeking to appease the sun god.

Samhain is the day when the veil between the world of the living and the dead is the thinnest, and pagans honor those who have passed away. Stott said. According to a Samhain Web Site www.ohio.net/~jestes/samhain.html pagans once believed that ghosts, many of whom were evil, could be seen walk­ ing through graveyards on Samhain.

McGovern shares personal tragedy

By DAVID FREDDOSO
Assistant News Editor

Senator George McGovern is well known for his career in Congress and for his unsuccessful attempt at the presidency in 1972. But when he came to Notre Dame last night, it was not to speak about politics.

Instead, he came to speak about an issue much closer to his heart. In December of 1994, his daughter Terry, 45, was found frozen to death in a snowbank in Madison, Wis. after an episode of heavy drinking. Terry had suffered from alcoholism for over 25 years and finally became one of the disease's countless victims. Last night, in his speech to several hundred at the Joyce Center, McGovern stressed the fact that alcoholism is a disease, and that it is an addiction to which some people have an acute vulnerability.

Since his daughter's death, McGovern has taken to the road to speak about alcoholism, his main concern being to stop what happened to college campuses in the country over the weekend binge vulnerability.

"If there are people here at Notre Dame who suspect they may have a problem," he said at a press conference before his presentation, "you should not delay in seeking treatment from AA (Alcoholics Anonymous) or some other group. You really need help to get over this addiction."

George McGovern spoke yesterday about his book concerning his daughter's struggle with alcoholism.

The passing years were especially difficult for McGovern, said, since she was struggling with the disease. I forgot that it hurt her more than her parents.

Her alcoholism later separated her from her husband and two children, and ended with her death. It wasn't that big a deal for Terry when she was sober because of the depression, he said.

He recalled one instance in which Terry had been drinking for three and a half hours, and then received a call from a security guard. "Three and a half hours later, I got a call from a friendly bartender who said that Terry had managed to drive herself to a car, and when she got home to pick up a few items at the drugstore."

"It wouldn't hurt once in a while to obey the law," he said.

Terry McGovern in death has wanted on an outstanding warrant.

"This one particular concern for McGovern is the disease. I forgot that it was a disease. I forgot that it hurt her more than her parents.

"Tough love is important," he said, "but you can't forget about the 'love' part... You especially need it if you are sick."

"Let your educated mind and heart be a light in the darkness of the world. Be bridge builders over the chasms that separate people, the young and old, the rich and poor, the black and white, the ignorant and the learned. Go out from here as one who knows and loves, one who has cherished wisdom and built character, and, above all, one who has learned to give of self."

Day, originally called "All Hallow Eve" before being shortened in the modern title of "Halloween," which means "holy evening." It was used as a preparatory celebration for All Saint's Day. Christians were encouraged by the Church to abandon pagan rituals in recognizing this holy day.

Why, then, do contemporary celebrations of Halloween reflect more pagan ideals?

According to Cass Sandak, author of "The History of Halloween."

"The practices of divination and dressing in disguises remained, as did the common fear of nocturnal creatures such as bats, owls and owls which were linked to the spirit of the dead."

The phrase "trick-or-treat" has several explanations. According to Sandak, the Celts left out food for the spirits, hoping that a "trick" would prevent an evil "trick." But Robert J. Myers, author of "The Complete Book of American Holidays," believes the phrase has Irish origins.

"Poor farmers would go to the homes of the rich and ask for the "treas." They stated, "If they were not given anything, they would play tricks on them during the night. In the morning, the rich would think that ghosts has played tricks on them. Eventually they learned that ghosts did not come on nights they had not given, food away."

Halloween has come to be a mostly American-celebrated holiday, and has lost almost all its religious significance in the wake of the commercialization that surrounds the celebration.

"The imagination can run wild with all the things the dead " might be up to," said Father Brian Halley, a professor of the arts at Notre Dame. "Still, it can be a time to reflect on all mortality, and a sense of Christian hope."

But within the realm of Christianity there exist many discrepancies. One person who feels that modern celebrations of Halloween are explicitly against Christian belief is the Rev. Father John B. Halley, a professor of the arts at Notre Dame. "Halloween is a holy evening," he stated.

"I think that the Church doesn't eliminate anything of the holiday by changing it from Samhain to All Saint's Day, it just emphasized a deeper Christian meaning."

Although the American culture has regained more of the pagan aspects of Halloween, the holiday does not displace Christian teaching.

"Having fun is not necessarily pagan," Hesburgh said. "You can have a good time and still do good things.

American leaders greet Jiang

Questions, doubts surround first visit since Tiananmen massacre in 1989

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Confronting some of his harshest critics, Chinese President Jiang Zemin defended Beijing’s human rights record Thursday amid blurted questions about allegations of forced abortions, religious persecution and the sale of organs from executed prisoners.

Winding up a two-day visit to Washington, Jiang told members of Congress that since China opened to the world in the 1970s, “The Chinese people have enjoyed a better life, and it has intensified efforts to improve democracy and the legal system.”

From Capitol Hill to the White House, Democrats and Republicans closed ranks to raise candid concerns about China as Washington and Beijing end eight years of diplomatic estrangement. House Speaker Newt Gingrich said Jiang was “very vigorous in defending some positions we don’t agree with.”

“He got it from the president and now he got it from Congress,” said Senate Democratic leader Tom Daschle a day after Jiang heard a lecture about human rights from President Clinton.

Jiang, the first Chinese leader welcomed in Washington since the 1989 Tiananmen Square massacre, headed from Washington to Philadelphia to visit such symbols of American democracy as the Liberty Bell and Independence Hall. On Friday, Jiang will be in New York, where he will step into the heart of American capitalism and ring the opening bell at the stock exchange.

Unlike Wednesday when hundreds protested in Lafayette Park, only a handful gathered Thursday to protest Jiang’s visit. That day, President Clinton acknowledged that relations with China were “living and working” but that “different views held by countries about democracy and the world in the 1970s, “The Chinese people have enjoyed a better life, and it has intensified efforts to improve democracy and the legal system.”

The Chinese leader concluded his visit to the capital with a speech acknowledging that relations with the United States have been marked with “extraction and contacts, confrontation and cooperation, friction and harmony.”

“Different views held by countries on the human rights issue ought to be addressed through dialogue so confrontation could be avoided,” Jiang said.

Addressing American trade concerns, Jiang pledged to “open China still wider to the outside world.”

Jiang, in his speech, said China had improved human rights and ended slavery in Tibet, comparing Beijing’s action to “the liberation of black slaves in American history.”

After China’s intervention, the people of Tibet are “living and working in happiness and contentment,” the Chinese leader said.

Despite the strongly held views on Capitol Hill, the Chinese leader appeared to make some headway in a breakfast with about 50 members of Congress.

“I think frankly the president’s comments about democracy and the French TV show L’Affaire Michel Norton, which has become one of the country’s most-watched programs, has provided a platform for exploring the lives and struggles of ordinary people. The show has been praised for its ability to tackle sensitive issues with empathy and nuance, offering viewers a glimpse into the complex realities of daily life.

Jalaludin was a regular guest on the show, sharing his experiences as a refugee from Afghanistan and his efforts to rebuild his life in France. His appearances on L’Affaire Michel Norton helped raise awareness of the challenges faced by refugees and migrants, fostering a greater understanding and empathy among viewers.

Despite his modest circumstances, Jalaludin’s story served as a testament to resilience and hope, inspiring many to consider the human cost of conflict and displacement. His work continued to be a powerful voice for those who are often marginalized and overlooked in society.

In the wake of Jalaludin’s death, the French government and humanitarian organizations have vowed to step up efforts to support refugees and migrants, ensuring that their voices are heard and their needs are met. The legacy of Jalaludin’s work on L’Affaire Michel Norton serves as a reminder of the importance of continuing to champion the rights and dignity of all individuals, regardless of their background or circumstances.

Jalaludin’s story was a powerful reminder of the human impact of conflict, displacement, and the need for ongoing support and assistance for those affected by these tragic realities. His enduring legacy will continue to inspire empathy, understanding, and a commitment to creating a more just and inclusive world for all.

Simpson explains her Snite exhibit

By SARAH HANSEN
News Writer

In conjunction with her exhibit, "Lorna Simpson: Race, Gender, Photography," photographer Lorna Simpson presented a lecture on her work, currently on display at the Snite Museum, last night.

In addition, Simpson treated her audience to a slide enhanced chronological tour of her work. "Everyone would look from one picture to another," Simpson complained. "I always liked contrasts."

Her interest in contrasts combined with a passion for writing narratives led Simpson to developing her signature mode of creativity: a juxtaposition of visual and linguistic communication.

Simpson, in her collection of 21 intaglio prints titled "Details," presented to the Snite by Mr. and Mrs. John C. Rudolph of Seattle, matches a hand with a seemingly unrelated sentence fragment.

In trying to forge some sort of connection between the hand and the sentence fragment, the viewer is forced to create a story to make the body fragment and text fragment harmonize.

According to Robert Haywood, assistant professor of art, art history and design at Notre Dame and guest curator of the exhibition, "... Any story one 'invents,' which inevitably invokes racial and gender stereotypes, fails to cohere — fails, that is, to present itself as truth."

Simpson's art addresses the delicate subjects of race and gender, often questioning her own choice of photography as a mode of representation.

"It's not so much about history, it's more about finding and forgetting who is related to who," revealed Simpson.

Simpson's most recent endeavors have included a billboard project for "Art Against AIDS" and a video installation, a viewing of which she used to close the lecture. "In trying to create pieces, I always try to push things to their limit," said Simpson.

Simpson's exhibition will be on display in the Snite Museum of Art until November 16. The Snite is open to the public Tuesday and Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Thursday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

THINGS ARE HEATING UP AGAIN!

The Center for Social Concerns is gearing up for another successful run of Project Warmth. Last year, approximately 1600 coats were received which were later sent to sites all across the country, including the Appalachia region, reservations in the Dakotas, and places in need around the South Bend area.

Starting October 27, coats or jackets can be turned in at:
- Residence Halls
- Notre Dame Bookstore
- LaFortune Information Desk
- Alumni Association Office
- St. Michael's Laundry Distribution Center
- Center for Social Concerns
- Locations in Brownson, Hurley, and Grace Hall to be announced...

There will also be additional sites at concession trailers around the stadium during the football weekends of November 1 and 22.

Each donor will receive a 25% discount certificate to be used in purchasing a new GEAR for Sports jacket at the Notre Dame Bookstore

FACTS AND FIGURES ON POVERTY AND AMERICA'S WORKING POOR

- Fastest growing segment of homeless population: families and children.
- The growth in the number of working poor grew by 400,000 between 1980 and 1990, all of which were accounted for by the growth of female working poor.
- In 1992, 21% of all children were poor, with 46% of African-American children and 39% of Hispanic youngsters living in poverty.
- In 1993 the bottom 20% of households received only 3.6% of U.S. income while the top 20% amassed 48.2%, the widest gap since the Census Bureau started keeping track in 1947.

Carroll emphasized that priests in the 1960s were given more respect than they are today. "My father was an Air Force general when this was going on," he said. "But he was not just any general, he was the general in charge of intelligence for war. I remember sitting at the dinner table, and I got my dad so angry that he pounded his fist on the table. But I said to him, 'Phillip Barrigan is not a kook ... he is a priest.' That used to mean something."

In the course of his lecture, Carroll said that Catholic citizens had a special responsibility to protest the government involvement in Vietnam. "Everyone in the government believed that Vietnam was a Roman Catholic country," he said. "Their ignorance is really a scandal, because what drew us in, what started those conflicts on the streets of Saigon in 1961, was an Inquisition-style Catholic regime and an overwhelmingly Buddhist population."

He said that his admiration for the Barrigan brothers sprang from their courage. "As far as the chief of police is concerned, we're trying to do all we can to put a dent in this thing," Williams said.

The Devil Explains Life

Last week's episode of "King of the Hill" featured the classic struggle between the self-righteous lawyer proponent of moralistic艮alists who opposed trick or treating activities and Hank Hill, the "evil" influence who incited the kids to go trick or treating. The episode revolved around the character of the Devil and went trick or treating by himself. The Devil continued, "I, on the other hand, have the ND coaching staff to rely on. This year the fans will blame the assistant coaches, both offensive and defensive coordinators. So they will leave next year, and I'll win again because the head coach does not use the program. Hank's son and niece were frightened of devilish activities they associated with Hank. In fact, Bobby, the son, went so far as to pledge to join an angel brigade and disavow candy along with his father's activities.

After the "angel squad" convinced the town fathers to cancel Halloween, Hank dressed as the head coach trick or treat himself. As he marched down the street shouting, "Trick or treat," neighbors joined him in defiance of the law. They finally went to the "Hallelujah House" where Bobby was taken hostage at the hands of aborning citizens and the show as complex as today's society? Have my intellectual capacities. Was the simplicity of the Devil personally and ask. He was easy to spot in a crowd, for he was dressed almost entirely in a red ... not quite cherry red but more burgundy with a touch of gold here and there. I was not sure if the gold had just left for ... the White House! When I walked back home, I couldn't help to notice that of Harvard, but it is relatively high. The graduate students: Academic respect. We, with the faculty, are the heart of a research institution. A great deal of money is required, in order to attract and support graduate students. The quality of its undergraduate population is not an inscribed into the sports ledgers. Last year I was assigned a space over the bay (i.e. on complete-ly the opposite side of the campus from where I teach, the library, the bookstore and the student center). This space, which is shared by over 100 people. We are told that the towers will soon be graded-student offices. At a rumored six people per dorm-room-sized office to this is too little too late. The proposed arrangement of the philosophy department, would be to move the professors and students into the soon-to-be-vacant Hurley/Harvey/Healy complex. This would not only allow graduate students the space they deserve, it would give a natural center to the department, one that now lacks. Every department should have a similar complex. Also, I have heard a rumor that Hurley/Harvey/Healy will likely go to the math department. Not satisfied with their own building, they apparently need the extra space to give their graduate students private offices.

I began this letter with the assumption that the administration wished to keep the towers as student offices. Given their lack of effort for the most basic academic requirements such as office space, and an architectural environment which fosters interaction between faculty and graduate student which fosters an atmosphere in which research may take place. Many of us are already publishing in recognized journals. Most of us are already teaching graduate students. I myself have already held the teaching loads for a full number of faculty. And yet, to take only the most obvious example, no provision has been made to allot me a decent office, in which to do my work or meet with students. For my first four years here at Notre Dame I have shared a room in O'Shaugnessy and worked in the glorified closet which the administration calls a carrel. I hope that the administration pays attention to this letter. Greater尊敬 do we deserve? First, we deserve the respect due our students: Academic respect. We, with the faculty, are the heart of a research institution. But he must make the right decision. Now you know why major universities should always hire a head coach who has had an established program rather than one who can be over­whelmed by the entire process his first year. It seems that getting better now, I coun­tered. It took several games and different excuses to finally sink in to him that a field goal, while up 14 points means the other team must score three times just to catch you. When the bulb was on a 'Hell Mary' with only six seconds left in the half is the thing to do to see if something might happen. That was the case in the Pittsburgh game in the early and at the USC game. You talk a good game, Devil, but I don't know. I beat ND twice in a row, didn't I? I even let all those ND teams who are smart enough to watch the USC game win those tickets in the lottery before summer." Back and forth went the Devil and I.

Gary Caruso
Grad Students Lack Administration's Respect
Noire Dame aspiris to be a Catholic research institution, but the administration has not reponed itself to the Catholic research institution. A great deal of money is required, in order to hire high quality faculty and students. Notre Dame does not fail in this department, but it has been underfunded for the past 18 years. What respect do we deserve? First, we deserve the respect due our age. Graduate students are aged anywhere from 22 to 50, or older. Many of us have families. In short, we deserve the respect due to any adult member of society. This means that our moral authority must be recognized. The administration is not in loco parents for those who themselves are of age to be parents. This respect is not coming, as any member of the graduate community knows. An example of the present O'Shaugnessy and Commons. This facility is supposedly for the use of the graduate community and for permission to hold events there of an adult nature is like pulling teeth. In this case of the event that you mention, the party was that no-one smoke in the enclosed terrace outside the building. And it's paid off nicely. As long as I was there, I saw no one smoking. The fun continues.

For a tasty treat this All Hallow’s Eve, Accent thought it would scare up a little Halloween history.

CELTIC: The ancient Celtic (Irish, Scottish, Welsh) festival called Samhain is considered by many to be a predecessor of our contemporary Halloween. Samhain was the New Year’s Day of the Celts, celebrated on Nov. 1. It was also a day of the dead, a time when it was believed that the souls of those who had died during the year were allowed access to the land of the dead. It was related to the season; by Samhain, the crops should be harvested and animals brought in from the distant fields.

Many traditional beliefs and customs associated with Samhain, most notable that night was the time of the wandering dead, the practice of leaving offerings of food and drink to masked and costumed revelers, and the lighting of bonfires, continued to be practiced on Oct. 31, known as the Eve of All Saints, the Eve of All Hallows, or Hallow Even. It is the glossing of the name Hallow Eves that has given us the name Hallow e’en.

The spirits of Samhain, once thought to be wild and powerful, were now said to be something worse: evil. The church maintained that the gods and goddesses and other spiritual beings of traditional religions were diabolical deceptions, that the spiritual forces that people had experienced were real, but they were manifestations of the Devil, the Prince of Liars, who misled people toward the worship of false idols. Thus, the customs associated with Halloween included representations of ghosts and human skeletons — symbols of the dead — and of the devil and other malevolent, evil creatures, such as witches were said to be.

ENGLAND: Guy Fawkes Day, Nov. 1, is celebrated in ways reminiscent of Halloween. Guy Fawkes was accused of attempting to blow up the Houses of Parliament on that day in 1605. He was apprehended, hung, drawn, and quartered. On Nov. 5 1606, the same Parliament declared the Fifth of November a day of public thanksgiving. The act of treason was viewed as part of a plot — that is, Roman Catholic — plot against the Protestant government. Because Halloween was associated with the Catholic church calendar, its importance diminished, but many of its traditions shifted to the annual commemoration of the death of Guy Fawkes.

Today, for weeks in advance of 5 November, English children prepare effigies of Fawkes, dummies known as Guys. They set them out on street corners and beg passers-by for “a penny for the Guy.” The eve of the fifth is known as Mischief Night, when children are free to play pranks on adults, just as Oct. 30, the night before Halloween, is known as Mischief Night in many areas of the U.S. On the night of Nov. 5, the Guys are burned in bonfires, just as the ancient Celts burned bonfires on Nov. 1.

GERMANY: Throughout the Western world, May 1, like Nov. 1, is a day of traditional significance. The 30th of April, the eve of May 1, is in areas of Germany, particularly the Harz Mountains, Walpurgisnacht, or the eve of St. Walpurgis Day. Witches are supposed to be especially active this day, as are spirits of the dead and demon creatures from the nether world.

CHINA: The care of the dead through prayers and sacrifices were part of a spring festival of purification and regeneration.

JAPAN: Bon festival, dedicated to the spirits of ancestors, for whom special foods are prepared, occurs during the middle of the summer (one of the most important festive periods of the year). Three days in length, it is a time when everyone goes home (reminiscents of the American Thanksgiving).

The first week of November is marked in many countries, especially those with a strong Catholic influence, with festivals concerned with death in a playful but serious way. In Catholic countries we often find some cognate of Halloween associated with All Saints’ or All Souls’ days.

In MEXICO and other LATIN AMERICAN countries, the first and second of November are the Days of the Dead — El Dias de los Muertos. In some regions, the evening of Oct. 31 is the beginning of the Day of the Dead Children, which is followed on Nov. 1 by the Day of the Dead Adults. Skeleton figures-candy (sugar skulls), toys, statues and decorations are seen everywhere. It is a time for great festivity, with traditional plays and food. It is a time to play with death and decorating family graves, which is preceded by religious services and followed by picnics. The human skeleton or skull is the primary symbol of the day. Unlike the American Halloween, in Mexico people build home altars, adorned with religious icons and special breads and other food for the dead. The Day of the Dead incorporates recognition of death as a concept with rituals that remember the deaths of individuals.

"This is a new season. All the records are thrown out the window," said Knott on Saturday night. "And the Keough Kangaroos, couldn't have summed it up any better. This year we're going to be back!"

This Sunday, No. 3 Dillon (3-0) will face off against No. 6 Keough (2-2) on Spaght South at 1 p.m. The Big Red will be trying to keep their 1-7 victory over Keough in week three of the regular season.

"If we come out and play our game in the first half, we've got a great chance," said Knott.

Knott vs. Sorin

When Knott and Sorin last met on September 21, it was not enough to determine the better team as the game ended in a scoreless tie. This Sunday, however, these two teams will face each other again in the first round of the interhall playoffs.

Sorin captain Anthony Netto believes that the game against Knott will be much different because both teams have improved since week one. Both teams are prepared to prove that there will be a major upset.

The Knott/Keough game will be televised on Fox Sports Network.

Siegfried vs. Keenan

Sunday's matchup between seventh-ranked Siegfried (2-1), and second-ranked Keenan (4-0), in the first round of the playoffs should prove to be quite exciting.

The teams have yet to face each other this season, or another team with a similar style of play. Siegfried's defense will face a new style of offense. Keenan's offense, a strong passing game.

The Knott/Keough hope that history won't repeat itself this Sunday as they lost in the first round last year.

Zhahm vs. Morrissey

Top-ranked Zhahm and eight-seeded Morrissey will square off this weekend.

Both teams look to a balanced attack and a strong defensive effort, as a key to going home with a victory.

Zhahm capped off a 4-0 regular season with a 1-6 victory over Morrissey.

Morrissey went 2-2 in the regular season, with two wins coming against Stanford and Off-Campus. Morrissey lost only top-10 team to a 4-0 team that was disqualified from tournament play for using an ineligible player.

The offense is led by quarterback Bob Corby, fullback Brian Tilley, tailback Harrell, quarterback Danny Sullivan, and wide receiver Brownie Browne.

Undefeated Pyros face eighth-ranked Chaos

By ALISON WELTNER

This Sunday, the undefeated P.E. Pyros will face the Cavanaugh Chaos (2-3-1) in the first round of playoffs. On both sides, morale and excitement are high. P.E. had a fantastic season, finishing in first place. Cavanaugh, ranked eighth, is looking to continue their high level of performance.

"We have a lot of good leadership and a lot of athletic ability," he said. "The thing we need to do is execute. We're going to score a lot." Lewis vs. PW

Sunday's game between Lewis and Pasquerilla West is a rematch of their first ever game. Last year, the Pyros won 12-0, but knows that the playoffs are a whole new ballgame. "Lewis has a lot of good defensive players," said coach Martin Marxuach.

"We haven't looked rusty at all after fall break, and we're ready to play-if we stick to what we've been doing all season long, we'll be in good shape," said coach Martin Marxuach.

Sixth-ranked Lewis is coming off a solid 3-3 regular season, and looking for revenge after its last loss to PW.

Swimming

Irish ‘monsters’ going strong

By LAURA PETELLE
Sports Writer

While most Notre Dame students were home relaxing over fall break, the Irish swimmers were busy making waves.

On Oct. 24, the Notre Dame women traveled to the Collegiate Aquatic Sports Championships in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Over two days of competition, the Irish swimmers had a strong showing, winning the 4x100-meter freestyle relay in 3:40.36. The team of senior captain Linda Gallo, freshman Kristin Van Saun, and all-American sophomore Alison Newell set a new collegiate record in the 3x500-meter relays as they swam to victory in that race.

The Notre Dame men faced Western Ontario on Oct. 23 at home to open its dual meet season with a win, dunking Western Ontario, 133-63. The Irish took first in all but two events. Senior Ron Royer won both the 200-meter freestyle and the 500-meter freestyle.

“I thought that [the Collegiate Aquatic Sports Championships] was a really good meet for us, particularly this time of the year,” said women’s head coach Bailey Weathers. “I think it was a pretty good indication of how training’s gone.”

“I think the freshmen have brought a lot to the program. They have a lot of experience at the national level, and they’re all very competitive individuals, and that really adds some depth and flavor to our program. It’s still very early,” Weathers cautioned. “We need to stay healthy and continue to train well, but I think we’ll have a good year.”

Irish strive to leave mark at Big East meet

Special to the Observer

The Notre Dame cross country teams travel to Bronx, N.Y. today to compete in the Big East cross country championships. Providence is the defending champion in both men's and women's. This will be a highly competitive meet as four women's and two men's teams are currently ranked in the top 25.

On the men's side, Notre Dame will look to improve on last year's fourth place finish. The Irish, ranked ninth nationally, will look to lead the Irish to their first-ever Big East championship after finishing third in 1995 and fourth in 1996.

On the women's side, the Irish hope to surpass last year's fifth-place finish. Sophomore all-American JoAnna Deeter is the top returning finisher from last year's championships. Shay have consistently been the two top runners for the Irish women's and two men's teams are currently ranked in the top 100.

Freshman Breca Schloss made the most of her first official college golf tournament by finishing in sixth place Saturday at the Notre Dame Invitational, held at the par-72, 6,839-yard Ronita Bay Country Club. Schloss, who competed as an individual in two earlier tournaments this fall, carried rounds of 84 and 80 on Friday before posting a 79 on Saturday for a team-best total of 243.

Notre Dame shot a final-round 312 to make up eight shots and finish in a tie for second with Rollins College, at 926. The Irish totaled rounds of 339 and 325 on Friday and used Saturday's strong finish to edge past regional rivals Michigan State by seven shots.

Florida Southern used rounds of 325-325-307 to claim the team title in the six-team tournament, outdistancing Notre Dame and Rollins by 19 shots.

Notre Dame sophomore Andrea Klee concluded a stellar showing in the fall season by tying for eighth with a three-round total of 244 (85-81-78).

Irish senior co-captains Katie King (86-85-76) and Tracy Melby (84-81-82) finished tied for 11th at 247 to remain tied atop the Notre Dame career stroke average list. King and Melby both have totaled 6,644 career strokes over the course of 81 rounds for a career average of 82.03 strokes per round.

Notre Dame closes its fall season with the following stroke averages over the course of four tournaments (12 rounds): Melby 80.83, Klee 81.00, King 81.67, Cooper 82.92, and Klein 83.25. Schloss averaged 83.22 strokes over nine rounds (six while competing as an individual).

Irish to face conference co-leader on road trip

By BILL HARTH Sptnt Wot. 1
The Notre Dame volleyball team finishes off its five-match road trip this weekend with two matches against Big East opponents. However, unlike previous trips to the east coast, the Irish will start off the weekend by facing the most difficult conference opponent of their season. On Friday, the Irish will travel eastward to face Villanova, a team which has consistently played near the top of the conference ladder. The Wildcats are currently 15-5 on the season and tied with Notre Dame for first place with a 5-0 conference record.

Three current Villanova players—senior middles Stacy Evans and Marisa Davidson and junior hitter Megan O'Brien—were named second team All-Big East in 1996. The team is also led by senior middle Melissa Tycko, who ranks second in the Big East in hitting percentage with a .317 average. Freshman setter Denise Buylan is averaging 12.07 assists per game, which would rank fourth in Notre Dame history if the trend continues.

Sophomore middle Mary Jeffers has managed to keep a .309 season hitting percentage, which would rank fifth in Notre Dame history. The Irish have had astounding success in conference play, having won 68 consecutive matches against conference opponents.

A three-game win over Providence on Oct. 12 moved Notre Dame into fourth place on the list of longest conference winning streaks in women's volleyball. The Irish are five matches away from third-place Texas, who had a 73 match streak from 1984 to 1991.

After the match against Villanova, the Irish will return to the Joyce Center for their last regular season home-stand of the season, which consists of two matches against conference foes West Virginia and Pittsburgh.

"Right now we need to head to the rest of the season," Turner said. "It's crucial that I step up for the team all season long. However, the stakes are higher this year and the competition stiffer as they near crunch time."

"I need to be a major part of the nation's highest-scoring offense, leading the nation in assists with 26. Notre Dame's squad averages a lofty 5.24 goals per game."

Senior Holly Manthei has also had a hand in the play-making for the nation's highest-scoring offense, leading the nation in assists with 26. Notre Dame's squad averages a lofty 5.24 goals per game. Manthei is a sophomore in her first season as the starting goalkeeper, continues to lead the nation with a .30 goals against average. She has built her Big East single-season record for shutouts, recording eight in 10 conference games. Beene has compiled 13 shutouts in 17 games on the year.

As the regular season draws to a close, Notre Dame will turn its attention to capturing a third consecutive Big East championship and returning to the NCAA finals to reclaim the national title.

Notre Dame hosts top pick in competitive CCHA

By CHARLEY GATES
Sport Writer

With three victories and one loss, including back-to-back triumphs over nationally-acclaimed St. Cloud State, the Notre Dame hockey team is off to a fast start.

But these previous victories came outside of Central Collegiate Hockey Association league play and thus are not counted when the league assigns post-season berths. And so when the Michigan State Spartans, members of the CCHA, roll into the Joyce Center tonight at 7 p.m., the Notre Dame hockey team is off to a fast start in the long season. The series continues on Saturday evening with a game at Michigan State.

The Spartans, however, are an excellent hockey team and the task at hand is daunting. The Spartans were overwhelmingly picked by CCHA coaches to win the competitive CCHA title this year, and, in respected national hockey pre-season polls, the Spartans were ranked as high as third in the continental United States.

Furthermore, Notre Dame's last victory against the Spartans came 14 years ago in 1983. In the 19 games since then, the Boys of Winter have mustered only three ties. Michigan State also returns its top two scorers from last year, Mike York and Sean Berens, its starting goaltender, Frank Hlavin third in the CCHA with a .932 save percentage last season); and Tyler Harlton, winner of the CCHA Most Valuable Player award last year, Mike York and Sean Berens.

"Michigan State is an excellent team, there's no doubt about that," stated sophomore forward Joe Dusbabek.

So how does Notre Dame go about slaying this Goliath? Special teams certainly will be a key for the game.

Libra: Domestic financial issues involve your day. It is difficult to be excited about an event that will leave you fundamentally unchanged. Compromise makes everyone's life much easier.

Scorpio: As the Moon moves into the Archer's house, your arrows catch fire as they fly toward their targets. You overflow with intellectual and physical passion. Expect a day of rebirth and regeneration.

 Sagittarius: A spark of spontaneity lights up a day of plodding routine. Deliberately misunderstand someone's words or actions if you think there's a good joke in it. Today's important issue may be of no consequence tomorrow.

Capricorn: Yesterday's good deed is rewarded today. You learn something about yourself that seems you already knew. Spend time and money with the people who love you the most.

Aquarius: You are disappointed by a truth that is less glorious than you had imagined. Accepting what you cannot change makes your life easier. Do something slow and spontaneous to turn your day around.

Pieces: Think big thoughts today. Speak with your hands. Throw old ideas out the window, along with anyone who still believes in them. Keep moving, or your feet will fuse to the ground.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Aries: You're ready to drive off at full speed today, but it would help if you knew where you were going. Change a plan instead of scrapping it. Open up your ears and your heart to let someone else into the picture.

Taurus: You are carried away on a moment's impulse. The word "moderation" is not in your vocabulary. Excesses of appetite, endurance, and emotion feel great today, but you might pay for it all tomorrow.

Gemini: You make yourself understood, but many are displeased by your message. Be open with your feelings, even as you keep your wallet tightly closed. Community action goes only so far today.

Cancer: A vast, comforting sense of calm fills your day. Stay home and bond with your family. Teaching with love, no matter what the lesson, enhances an educational experience.

Leo: You are easily irritated by others today. Simple conversations run the risk of turning into battles of will. You find easy excuses to spend time alone in your den, working on projects.

Virgo: Today you are the voice of reason in a cheerfully irrational world. Someone forgets you for outlasting him in a debate. Others listen to you when they realize that you have their well-being in mind.

Leading the Way

Midfielder Shannon Boxx and the Irish take on ranked Michigan and Big East foe Providence at Alumni Field in the final weekend of regular season play.

Notre Dame heads into final stretch at the top of the league

By ALLISON KRILLA
Sports Writer

According to the latest soccer power ratings, the second-ranked Notre Dame women's soccer team plays the fifth toughest schedule among teams ranked in the National Soccer Coaches Association of America's Top 25 poll.

Even more impressive is the fact that the Irish have outscored the opposition 88-5, and outshot them 490-62, en route to a 16-0-1 mark with only two regular season games remaining.

Notre Dame hopes to end its four game losing streak when it faces Boston College this Sunday at 1 p.m.

The explosive Irish battle 12th-ranked Michigan at Alumni Field. The Wolverines (15-2-1) have won six consecutive contests, and are paced by sophomore forward Amber Berendowsky's 16 goals and 16 assists. Thus far, Notre Dame holds a 3-0 advantage over Big Ten opponents in 1997. The Irish defeated Michigan State, Indiana and Wisconsin by a combined 24-0 margin.

"We can't look past our game with Michigan," said goalkeeper LaKeysia Beene. "They are supposed to have some good forwards and midfielders, so it should be a good game for our defense."

Notre Dame also puts its 30-game unbeaten streak against Big Ten con-

Eagles challenge Irish in final regular season game

By TOM STUDEBAKER and DAN LUZIETTI
Sports Writers

The Notre Dame men's soccer team plays the last game of its 1997 season on Sunday against the Boston College Eagles. It is a very big game for the Irish as they look to the postseason.

The team is currently ranked sixth in the conference with a record of 4-5-1 and an overall record of 8-8-2. Boston College is tied with Notre Dame in the rankings and has a record of 4-5-1 as well and 5-7-2 on the season.

The Irish are coming off a tough week, dropping four in a row and live straight in the Big East. All the contests were determined by just one goal. After such a strong start in the Big East, Notre Dame is looking to return to its winning ways... fast.

"We know that we could've won each of the last five Big East games," said senior co-captain Ryan Turner. "It's frustrating losing by just one goal. We were in each game, and a lot of times, we were up. Now we are in the Big East tournament, which was one of the season's goals, and from this point on, the past is in the past."

Boston College brings a tenacious defense that has played well all year. Their goals against average is 0.87, which is the third best in the Big East. The Eagles' next is also well protected by freshman goalie Chris Flamboin. He has played very solidly on the year and has recorded 51 saves in conference play.

The Irish offense will need to show the intensity displayed earlier in the season in this very important game. Notre Dame will look to Turner for a spark. Turner is second in overall scoring in the league with 11 goals and four assists.
