Puljic receives ND award for service

By FINN PRESSLY

The University conferred one of its highest honors, the Notre Dame Award for international humanitarian service, on Archbishop of Sarajevo Vinko Cardinal Puljic Wednesday.

This is an expression of admiration and respect for the contributions of the Catholic Church in Bosnia and Herzegovina, said University President Father Edward Malloy in his opening address. "You preach as your predecessor Paul did, that God made us of one blood, all nations of the earth."

Puljic was appointed Archbishop of Sarajevo in 1991, and in 1994 he became the youngest cardinal in the Catholic Church. During the recent civil war in the former Yugoslavia, he made frequent appeals to the international community for "decisive and credible action" to end the violence in his homeland. Recently, Puljic met with the leaders of Bosnia's Muslim, Jewish and Serbian Orthodox communities, and established the Inter-Religious Council, which is moving towards its goal of "practical programs of cooperation."

"I am honored and deeply moved to receive the 1998 Notre Dame Award for international humanitarian service, especially when I consider the scope of the good work represented and the stature of previous winners," said Cardinal Puljic, speaking through an interpreter.

In 1992, the same year the Notre Dame award was established, Bosnia-Herzegovina declared its independence; the ensuing war led to the forty-two month siege of Sarajevo. The ethnic cleansing that ensued had devastating effects on the Catholic Church in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The award ceremony coincided with the Catholic feast of the Holy Rosary, and Puljic explained that the people of Sarajevo have become all too familiar with the "sorrowful mysteries."

"At the time of the war, the Archdiocese of Sarajevo had 320,000 Catholics in 144 parishes," Puljic said. "Now the number is around 200,000, but many of them no longer live in their own house."

"Economic exploitation of poor people, a greedy quest for land, a hate-filled nationalism — these are just a few examples of the unjust motives that lead nations to war," he continued.

Puljic also addressed the mascot of the University, the Fighting Irish.

"I am intrigued because, in the nick of time, an ethnic group — the Irish — is associated with fighting," he said. "Presumably the fighting refers to the spirit of athletic competition against other universities. Of course, in my country, ethnic groups are also associated with fighting, but this has much different meaning."

"The fighting has been so deadly and so serious that we may never be able to call our sports teams the "Fighting Croats" or the "Fighting Bosniaks," Puljic continued. "Tonight, I invite the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame to renew your commitment in the ongoing fight for peace and justice in the world."

Puljic also discussed the impact of globalization on diplomacy in areas of the world most prone to conflict.

"Globalization may enhance the creation of new business partnerships, it may give greater access to information and the material things of this world, but it does not automatically result in the formation of committed neighbors."

The ceremony took place in the Hesburgh Center auditorium, and featured a selection of hymns sung by the Notre Dame Liturgical Choir, which concluded the ceremony with "the Prayer of St. Francis."

ND students rally to voice support for change

Crowd advocates inclusion of sexual orientation in non-discrimination clause

By TIM LOGAN
News Writer

Approximately 200 people turned out Wednesday at Fieldhouse Mall to rally in support of adding of sexual orientation to the University's legal non-discrimination clause.

Nearly 20 students and faculty members spoke, urging passage of the amendment which will be debated by the Academic Council this afternoon.

Speakers criticized the University's current stance on homosexuality from a number of angles, including the ineffectiveness of the Spirit of Inclusion statement and the current policy's lack of basic equality for all students.

"I can think of no good reason why this change should not be made," said sophomore Madolyn Orr, who noted that some other Catholic universities — including San Francisco University and Georgetown — include sexual orientation in their nondiscrimination clauses.

"On Thursday, I expect change," she said.

Orr joined other speakers in disputing the notion that the University should not change the clause because it would become more vulnerable to frivolous lawsuits. Such legal action, and the legal nature of the non-discrimination clause, has been one reason why the change has been opposed.

"The more we turn out and say this is wrong ... the more likely it is that Notre Dame will change the non-discrimination clause," said associate professor of history Gail Bederman at yesterday's rally.
Compromising Pride

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.

For the next two decades, administrators will be held accountable for whatever strides or lapses IU makes toward diversity. A report released last week recommends reconfiguration of how the university promotes diversity. Among the changes is the removal of advocacy deans, creation of a vice chancellor and the accountability of key IU administrators for the success of the new structure.

For vice chancellor of academic affairs Edwardo Rhodes, the culpability of administrators for the role diversity plays at IU is the report's most important aspect.

Improving a racial climate the report calls "chilly at best" will fall under the responsibility of the administration. "If you have a consistent problem with teaching or research, you should announce it and that's what we're talking about here," Rhodes said.

The report, "20/20: A Vision for Achieving Equity and Excellence," was written by Charlie Neims, special assistant to the president, and a six-member investigative committee. It states that the creation of the new vice chancellor position will improve rapport among students. After receiving feedback, Neims will release a more detailed plan in December.

President to be Internet spokesperson

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.

In a proposal submitted Friday, Rareffie President Linda Wilson was named one of nine people who may head the sole governing body of the Internet. If accepted by the U.S. Department of Commerce, the proposal would give the board power over assigning Internet names, such as www.harvard.edu, to the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN), of which Wilson would be a member. The House Technology Subcommittee held hearings yesterday, and the Commerce Department is allowing 10 days for public comment before evaluating a number of private-sector proposals. Critics have alleged the board would have too little power and that gaining access to ICANN board members are inadequate. The Commerce Department announced its intention to turn administration of domain names over to a not-for-profit corporation in June.

University reforms financial aid policy

STANFORD, Calif.

By the time of her high school graduation, freshman Vinda Teper knew she was Stanford-bound. "The only big question was how I was going to pay for it." Luckily for Teper, the university's recent changes in financial aid, allowing students to use the full value of outside scholarships to reduce loans, meant that the awards she won at graduation could be applied to her entire four years in the program. "I worked very hard in high school and was pleasantly surprised to win five to six awards at the end of my senior year," Teper said. The university also lessened the amount students have to keep their university aid and use scholarships to reduce their need for work-study commitments.

When the plan is implemented, Rhodes' position will involve coordination of academic support and diversity. But Rhodes will not pursue the job, as he plans to return to teaching after July 1. Kenneth Gros Louis, IU vice president and dean of students, who plans the university plans a nationwide search to fill the position but would not rule someone already at IU. Richards said the new administrator would report directly to Gros Louis, as do the other vice chancellors. Under the umbrella of the new vice chancellor, three associate vice chancellor positions would be created: vice chancellor and director of the Human Resources Division, vice chancellor of multicultural affairs and an associate vice chancellor of academic support services.

"The job is about people who reflect the constituencies they serve," Gros Louis said. "In other words, they are not to be three white males."

The Office of Women's Affairs and Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgendered Student Support Services were not included in the plan. Also, the report does not mention the Office of Diversity Programs, which is headed by Steve Birdine. Birdine, who runs the University for racial dis­ crimination, supports changing IU's diversity structure.
ND gets 'webcast' capability

By ANNE MARIE MATTLINGLY
Assistant News Editor

Students spending the semester in London watched Saturday’s Stanford game live, thanks to a new type of media provided by the Office of Information Technologies.

Webcasting, which is also used by CNN, sends a digital picture signal through an Internet connection to computers. The video is played using special software on a screen which is approximately two inches square.

“This is a technology that sends video over a line to a computer that has a video player on it,” said Bob Winding, senior network analyst at OIT.

Webcasts so far have included last year’s baccalaureate mass, commencement ceremony and ROTC commissioning, as well as the Bill Bradley lecture series, according to Michael Langthorne, associate director of Educational Media.

Despite the success of early broadcasts, the system is far from achieving its full potential.

“What we’re really testing out in the pipes,” said Langthorne, who explained that the Sen. Bradley’s lectures have taken place in different buildings to test the ability to send signals from various locations.

“Right now we’re in the early stage of just live broadcast,” Winding concurred.

However, both believe the technology has many possible applications.

“In the pretty short term future... it’s likely to have more impact because of the ability to broadcast a whole variety of things into class,” he said. "If I think all graduations and ROTC commissionings are going to be broadcast from now on... There’s been a lot of interest generated. But broadcasting rights are limited, he said.

“Just like any copyrighted material, it depends on licensing,” he Winding said.

Langthorne speculated that campus groups may want to buy webcast time to broadcast various events.

“We’ll be working out a way to market this to the campus,” he said. "If someone at Notre Dame wanted to webcast, we would determine the cost per minute and they would have to prove they had the rights. Anyone connected to the University would be able to use the non-profit service to broadcast “just about anything that you could think of that happens at ND,” said Langthorne, who noted that the system is economical because of its large audience.

Webcast viewing software can be downloaded from http://www.nd.edu/~webcast, and students can view webcasts live from this site by providing an afs ID and password when prompted.

Domer Run supports cancer research fund

By JESSICA LOGAN
News Writer

October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month, and this Saturday the annual Domer Run will once again help raise money to fund research. For the second year in a row, the proceeds of the Domer Run will be donated to the Catherine Pearsley Foundation, Inc. for Breast Cancer Research. The foundation provides funds to researchers involved in the study of breast cancer.

While last year’s run attracted over 300 participants, coordinators are hoping for an even larger turn out this year.

“We would like to increase the numbers from last year... and still have a good race,” said Kara O’Leary, Reckers Services Coordinator.

The Run, which begins at 11 a.m., offers a three and a six mile run, as well as a two-mile walk. All three events start and finish at Stepan Center and will be immediately followed by a pancake breakfast.

The races are divided into twelve divisions, and the first place winner of each division will be awarded a trophy. Numerous groups have provided their services to help coordinate this year’s Domer Run, including Reckers, the IRIS Health Resource Center and the Alumni Association. First USA Bank has donated T-shirts which will be given to all finishers.

The registration fee is $5 before 5 p.m. on Friday and $6 on the morning of the race.

"Is it more important to protect oneself from a lawsuit than to do what is right?" asked Jay Smith of the College Democrats. "The bottom line is very simple... It is a moral imperative that this university extend support to everyone."

Participants in the rally disagreed with those who have expressed a belief that people would sue if they were not admitted or blacked out by Notre Dame.

"They obviously think that we just want to sue the University," said junior Quincy Stet. "That's not right. We just want to be free from discrimination on this campus."

Another topic brought up at the event was the Spirit of Inclusion statement, which was adopted in August 1997 as the last time University administrators considered adding sexual orientation to the non-discrimination clause.

The statement calls on members of the Notre Dame Community to "welcome all people regardless of color, gender...[and] sexual orientation.

I was surprised at the University publishing this very moving statement and then not being willing to back it up in any way," said Janet Kouran, adjunct associate professor of philosophy.

Father David Garrick, a former professor in the Communication and Theatre department, resigned last March in protest of the University's policy with regard to gay and lesbian. Garrick is openly homosexual, and some speakers pointed to his resignation as evidence that the Spirit of Inclusion has thus far failed to change the environment on campus.

"The inclusion statement" was a feeble attempt by the administration to end the fear and discrimination that still threatens homosexual Doenars," said Alyssa Hollung, co-president of Outreach ND, the group formerly known as GLNDSMU. "It didn't work, or else Father Garrick wouldn't have resigned.

Lisa Karle, a Library assistant at Saint Mary's, noted that the Spirit of Inclusion had not been communicated to alumni in any way. She stated that it has not been printed in Notre Dame Magazine or been distributed at reunions since it was published in The Observer and du Luc last fall.

"To say there is (a spirit of inclusion) and not tell anyone seems a bit hypocritical to me," said Karle.

Ultimately, many of those who addressed the crowd focused on the need to create awareness and change opinion among the student body, and for the administration to respond to that opinion.

"I think most students are still hesitant... wondering whether they dare challenge the homophobia in our community," said Aaron Kreider of the Progressive Student Alliance. He called those present to join in a "new civil rights fight," to make the student voice heard on issues such as this.

"When it comes down to it, it's got to be the students who treat [everyone] equally, with equal rights and responsibilities," said sophomore Casey McClusky.

Father Garrick, Bishop Thomas Gumbiel — the auxiliary bishop of Detroit — said, "We have seen a shift in people's views and that is encouraging."

Gumbiel said he had been encouraged to see the student body respond to the issue on campus.

The rally was successful in catching the administration's attention, and the Spirit of Inclusion will be printed in a more prominent manner for the student body to see.

during Mental Illness screening. "Women usually encounter their first experience with depression by teaching them to identify symptoms of a depressive and to help others who are struggling with it.

Depression syndrome is feeling bad; empty and discouraged," said DePauw. "It affects your appetite by eating too much or too little, your sleep pattern, energy level, it impairs your judgment and decision making. You can't concentrate or remember things and it persists for two weeks.

If you know someone that has these symptoms, they may have a manic or bi-polar depressive," explained DePauw.

"Whether it's depression symptoms or depression syndrome, we can help," said DePauw. "Depression in all forms isn't something people have to suffer with. There are many options for people to use to return themselves in a state of health and happiness. No one has to suffer with. There are many options for people to use to return themselves in a state of health and happiness. No one has to suffer with.

The different climates and geographic locations of various students can also affect mental health in this season. Seasonal Affective Disorder occurs when a person comes from a sunlit environment and then sits in a state of life that does not have as much sunlight as they are used to. The symptoms of depression will be the same and should be treated with the same respect. People often use sun lamps and sit in the window to do housework to try to avoid this seasonal disorder.
Anti-porn bill passes House

WASHINGTON

Repealed by the courts in an earlier effort to restrict Internet pornography, the House voted yesterday to require companies to verify an adult's age before showing online material "harmful to minors." There are literally thousands of sites devoted to every manner of perversion and brutality," said Rep. Michael Oxley, R-Ohio, the bill's sponsor. Unfortunately, the Web is awash in degrading stuff. Included within the bill, passed on a voice vote, was a far less controversial provision to require companies on the Internet to offer a parental element before releasing personal information from children on the Web. The anti-porn legislation requires companies to verify a customer is over 18 by asking for a credit-card number, adult across code or "any other reasonable measures" before showing "harmful" material. Violators would face fines of up to $25,000.

AIDS deaths decrease

WASHINGTON

The number of Americans dying of AIDS fell by a dramatic 47 percent last year as powerful new drugs kept the disease at bay for thousands of patients. It's the second straight year that AIDS deaths have dropped, this time nearly twice as fast as in 1996, and enough to push the disease out of the top 10 causes of death in this country for the first time since 1990, the government said yesterday. Still, last year saw some 40,000 new infections, a number that isn't dropping, meaning more people are living with and potentially spreading AIDS and the virus that causes it. And doctors worry the wonder-drug combinations that have been so successful will eventually stop working.

Serbs prepare for attacks

YUGOSLAVIA

As a U.S. envoy left after three days of talks, a defiant President Sloboda Milosevic denounced Western peacekeeping in and its apparent crackdown in Kosovo province. His government prepared people for possible NATO air strikes, sweeping out World War II-era bomb shelters. Following Milosevic's last meeting with U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke, the president's office said "airstrikes were made to overcome the differences." The Yugoslav statement also said threats of NATO air strikes "jeopardize the continuation of the political process." U.S. officials refused comment on the talks, and Holbrooke left for Brussels, Belgium, to meet Secretary of State Madeleine Albright today.

In a rally yesterday, Russians protested Boris Yeltsin and the state of their economy. Participants came from across the country. Yeltsin's government to end economic malaise drove hundreds of thousands of Russians to nationwide protests yesterday. disillusionment and pragmatism kept many away.

Miners, monarchists, students and business people took to the streets from Moscow to Vladivostok in the first major public protests since an economic crisis hit in August, but the peaceful demonstrations fell far short of organizers' predictions they would be the biggest anti-Yeltsin protest ever.

In the 10 family members and will be interviewed by U.N. war crimes investigators in The Hague, the official said. "We don't have a future." They forecasted that as many as 40 million of Russia's 148 million people would take part, while the government said just 615,000 people showed up in demonstrations in 494 cities.

Many Russians eschew politics for reasons ranging from apathy after decades of Soviet authoritarianism to a traditional Russian fatalism that people have to make the best of things. Others shunned the protests because of fear of violence or their association with the Communists, who have the support of about 20 percent of the population.

"We've got to work, to make money, I don't have time for this," said Nakasha Krasikova, a sales clerk in the GUM department store adjacent to Red Square, where tens of thousands of Muscovites rallied.

"The only people who go to these protests are the ones who don't have anything to do with themselves," said Sergei Turbin, 49, an unemployed writer in Moscow who did not take part.

While the demonstrations were spurred by the latest crisis, which has seen the ruble plummet, the markets collapse and inflation soar, most marchers were protesting over months, sometimes years, of unpaid salaries and pensions.

"We will not allow Yeltsin to destroy us," national trade union leader Mikhail Shimakov said in Moscow.

"We want a president who solves the concrete problems of the country and doesn't make empty promises."

"Look at the hole the Russian people have fallen into. Look at the people on their knees," Marina Rubinshtein, a 19-year-old student, told demonstrators in the eastern part of Vladivostok. "We don't have a future."

They forecasted that as many as 40 million of Russia's 148 million people would take part, while the government said just 615,000 people showed up in demonstrations in 494 cities.

Seniors receive scholarship

By LAURA ROMPI

Frederick Dow, a finance major from Burnsville, Minn., and Heather Stone, an accounting major from Mequon, Wis., have been named the 1998 recipients of the Eugene D. Fanning Scholarships at the University of Notre Dame.

Established in 1995 in honor of Gene Fanning, the scholarships are funded by donations from members of the University's advisory council for the College of Business Administration.

"Students were nominated by a professor," Stone said. "And then all the recommended students were screened by the committee, which chose six finalists. Then these finalists went through interviews, and one man and woman were chosen."

The award honors Fanning, a Chicago businessman and investor who taught business communication courses as a COBA guest instructor from 1989-95. He was a 1953 graduate and a benefactor of the University as well as a advisory council member.

"I was totally shocked, yet pleasantly surprised to receive the scholarship," Stone said. "Not only was it nice to get the $2000 award, but it was nice to be recognized and know your professor thinks highly of you.

"It is pleasant to be recognized for qualities that are often is seen as intangible," Stone said. "Such as communication skills that are often overlooked, yet so important in today's business world. It feels good to be appreciated."

EVEHRYONE WELCOME!
Performance seeks to capture spirit of 1600s

By M. Shannon Ryan
Saint Mary’s Editor

As far as anyone in the Saint Mary’s theater department knows, “A Secret Love” will make history when it opens tonight.

Thought to be the American debut of a play more than 330 years old, the cast, crew and directors have gone all out for the occasion.

Audience members will likely feel all of the charm, romance, history and comedy of the 1660s as they are immersed in the experience of “intrigue, spying, wooing and wenching,” said Katie Sullivan, director and assistant professor of communication, dance and theatre.

Fifteen minutes before the John Dryden show of unrequited and assistant professor of English Thomas Bunnell.

“The Queen is not a mother, but she does not believe that she must marry someone of her own rank when she actually holds a secret love for a simple commoner.”

She has elevated the man to a higher rank, but even he does not know that their love can survive.

The two share a breathing, but it makes you get more aware,” DeDecker said.

The intertwining love stories are often short, but the plot should be easily identifiable with the audience, according to Sullivan.

“One is touching and poignant, the other is just hilarious,” Sullivan said.

The five-act play centers around the Queen of Sicily, played by freshman Beth Gervain, struggling with the combination of her status and the object of her love. The people of the kingdom believe it is time for the Queen to marry in order to protect them from vulnerability of attack.

“Whether the Queen, however, resents that she must marry someone of her own rank when she actually holds a secret love for a simple commoner.”

As the Queen tries to keep her secret safe, the plot becomes thicker. Gervain has the difficult task of playing the role of royalty at its worst — love sick.

“Her voice is not at her best,” Sullivan said. “She’s had no experience with love and she’s impatient and snappy. Beth has done a terrifically great job with such a hard role.”

The play also revolves around the comedy of Florimell, an irrepressible troubadour to the Queen played by sophomore Janelle Dombrowski, and her love interest.

“She’s a chronic womanizer and she tries to tame him.”

The intertwining love stories do not come easy.

The play will extend its run to October 10, 1998.

Auditions were held the first week of the semester, and rehearsals began immediately. But this play did evolve simply memorizing lines and stage-directions; the actors had to learn the life of the 1600s.

Sullivan worked with the actors on language, dialects, customs, history and mannerisms of the era.

"I guess I have a midwestern accent," said sophomore Kara DeDecker, who plays the running ward of the Queen, Flavia.

"My vowels sound very midwestern and I had to work with using a straight dialect," she said.

Sullivan has had the students, who number 26, warm up with vocal exercises and longue twiddlers every night.

"It makes you much more aware," DeDecker said.

The actors have not only had to adjust to the proper language, but to bulky, elaborate costumes as well.

Long fluffly dresses will be worn by the women, while the men will adjust to the layered costumes of the time period.

The females have learned the construits of corsets first hand as well. One actor even experienced a few bruises from the tight, being pulled too tight.

"They are definitely a challenge," DeDecker said.

"There’s not much room for breathing, but it makes you get into character more. You sit up a lot straighter and feel more like the part.”

Tonight through Saturday the lights will go up at 8 p.m., with the preformance beginning 15 minutes prior. Show time for the Sunday and Monday performances is 2:30 p.m.

"I am so proud of how they have all worked," Sullivan said of the cast and crew. "The way they all came together was terrific.”

Justice Dept. files suit against credit card giants

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Visa and MasterCard, the nation’s biggest credit card networks, are limiting customer choice and inhibiting competition by preventing banks from offering other cards, the government alleged Wednesday in an antitrust lawsuit.

The two, which account for 75 percent of credit card sales in the United States, “really control of the credit card industry,” Assistant Attorney General Joel Klein, who heads the Justice Department’s antitrust division.

“And since the same banks issue both cards, they won’t allow Visa and MasterCard to engage in head-to-head competition to develop new and better products and services,” Klein said.

Closest rival American Express covers only 18.4 percent of the market, and the Discover card has 5.6 percent, the government said.

In its lawsuit filed in federal court in New York City, the government challenged the joint control of the credit card networks by a single group of large banks.

The government also challenged rules imposed by Visa USA and MasterCard International that bars banks from issuing cards to customers doing business with smaller competing credit card networks.

“These exclusionary rules deny consumers the ability to choose among a maximum variety of card products,” Attorney General Janet Reno said. “American’s consumers have lost out.

In denying the allegations, Visa and MasterCard insisted the industry is the nation’s most competitive.

It was unclear whether President Clinton seeks to allow the suit to proceed because the government believes the laws are ambiguous.

Citing the length of time it took to introduce secure Internet credit card transactions, Klein quoted a Visa executive as saying in 1995 that Visa and MasterCard had no plans to develop Internet products.

In 1992, MasterCard’s executive vice president and general counsel wrote the Justice Department that “MasterCard and Visa have the potential to compete in any conventional business sense,” according to the lawsuit.

Klein said such problems had not arisen in Europe and South America where antitrust authorities have questioned such practices and the networks have backed off.

The government asked the court to remove the exclusionary rules from the networks’ bylaws and to require that banks governing an association be dedicated to one particular network.

Shares of credit card issuers for the most part dropped in trading Wednesday. On the NYSE, Capital One Financial Corp. suffered a 21 percent decline, dropping $18 to $67, while Household International, dropped $1.43, or 2 percent, to $28.56 1/4. Advanta Corp. fell $1.92 3/4, or 2 percent, to $8.56 1/4 on the Nasdaq Stock Market.

The government asked the court to remove the exclusionary rules from the networks’ bylaws and to require that banks governing an association be dedicated to one particular network.

Shares of credit card issuers for the most part dropped in trading Wednesday. On the NYSE, Capital One Financial Corp. suffered a 21 percent decline, dropping $18 to $67, while Household International, dropped $1.43, or 2 percent, to $28.56 1/4. Advanta Corp. fell $1.92 3/4, or 2 percent, to $8.56 1/4 on the Nasdaq Stock Market.
WASHINGTON

The Senate voted without dissent Wednesday night to send President Clinton legislation providing up to $97 million in military and political support for the Iraqi opposition to develop defense services, military equipment and training.

The bill, which also gives $2 million to Radio Free Iraq, passed the House on Monday and cleared the Senate on a voice vote. It awaits the president's signature to become law.

Senate majority leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said the bill would usher in a new effort by the United States to replace the Iraqi president "through military and political support for the Iraqi opposition." "Passage of this bill is a major step forward in the final elimination of the Persian Gulf war," Lott said. "In 1991, White House officials have expressed some concern about the bill, including how to figure out which opposition groups would qualify, but they support the intent. Lott specifically mentioned one group, the Iraqi National Congress, as having been "effective in the past." He said some group definitely should never qualify, such as the Iraq Communist Party.

Clinton would determine the actual total that would go to the rebels, up to $97 million. The money, to come from other programs, could go to defense services, military equipment and training.

The CIA aided Iraqi resistance groups after the Gulf War in 1991 and Congress earlier approved some humanitarian and political support for Kurdish opposition groups operating outside Iran.

Republicans have criticized the administration as shifting its policy toward Iraq. Last winter, the administration threatened to use military action, if needed, to assure United Nations weapons inspectors access to suspected weapons sites. Critics claim the administration has recently focused its efforts on keeping sanctions against Iraq in place and avoiding a direct confrontation.

Lower satellite TV rates also get House OK

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

The House passed a bill Wednesday to combat what lawmakers say is one of the fastest growing crimes in the country — the theft of personal identifying information such as a name, date of birth or Social Security number.

The House also agreed to roll back for 18 months an increase in royalty fees that satellite carriers pay for TV programming. The increase took effect in January.

Identity theft would be punishable by up to 15 years in prison, or up to 20 years if committed during a violent crime or up to 20 years if committing a crime in the state where the crime occurred until bill collectors start calling about the unpaid debt.

Lawmakers argued that the increase was consumer-unfriendly and could increase rates and reduce competition for the cable industry, where rates have grown faster than inflation.

"At a time when we need more, not less, competition in the video marketplace, we shouldn't be burdening the (satellite) industry and its consumers with arbitrary and additional costs," said Tauzin, chairman of the House Commerce Telecommunications, trade and consumer protection subcommittee.

By voice vote, the House also passed legislation to:
  * Authorize Customs officials to block Mexican-registered, commuter vehicles that do not meet California vehicle emission standards from entering the state. The bill, an attempt to improve southern California air quality, advanced to the White House.
  * Direct the attorney general to study, collect and report to Congress information about crimes against people with developmental disabilities. The measure, which the Senate passed in July, advanced to the White House.
  * Aid the Irish peace process by offering up to 4,000 three-year visas annually to qualified applicants from Ireland, their spouses and children. The bill passed in July, advanced to the Senate.

The bill, which advanced to the Senate, would restore the fees for satellite companies to the level they were before the increase until Dec. 31, 1999.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates the bill will reduce copyright collections by about $120 million during the period.

140 feared dead after landslide

Associated Press

PORT MORESBY

Up to 140 people are feared dead after a landslide buried a church congregation in Papua New Guinea's remote mountainous highlands, reports said this morning.

The National newspaper said the congregation was buried alive in the northern part of Enga province last Friday. Eight bodies had been recovered and a 9-year-old girl was the sole survivor of the disaster, it said.

Papua New Guinea consists of half of the Pacific Ocean island of New Guinea as well as several surrounding archipelagos.

The landslide reportedly occurred a few miles east of Maramuni Station during heavy rain early Friday morning, said Teata Poko, a spokesman for the National Broadcasting Commission in the Enga provincial capital of Wabag.

"The landslide is believed to have killed up to 140 people," Poko said.

But confirmation of details was difficult because Maramuni Station is in a very remote area with no road or telephone links, he said.

The National Disaster and Emergency Services said it was still awaiting confirmation of the disaster from state emergency authorities, who were flying by helicopter to the area this morning.

The National reported that the victims were sleeping after a prayer meeting, and included eight people from one family.

On the occasion of National Coming Out Day, October 11, 1998, we, the Standing Committee on Gay and Lesbian Student Needs, join Notre Dame's Gay and Lesbian students in gratitude for the love and support they have received from family and friends.

As a Committee, we recommit ourselves to providing educational opportunities for the entire Notre Dame community. We will continue the NETWORK initiative begun last year. NETWORK prepares and educates individuals on campus who are willing to offer a confidential and respectful place of dialogue and encouragement regarding gay and lesbian issues. The next cycle of preparation sessions for those who would like to become part of the NETWORK initiative will take place in November. Other educational initiatives will include speakers and opportunities for discussion on issues related to sexual orientation.

We urge all members of our community to redouble our efforts to make our campus a safe and welcoming place free from harassment of any kind.

Hair and Family

Nakasha Ahmad

I know the smell of a hot curling iron on Sundays. You see, there was always an aunt who "knew how to get her hair done." You would see that aunt any other time, but if you saw that certain aunt on Tuesday, you knew somebody would be getting their hair done on Saturday or Sunday.

For driving you two blocks, they [cabbies] will very civiliy, and in a very cultured manner, take your four dollars for the privilege of driving you five minutes.

During the five designated rush hours (7-9:30 a.m. and 4-6:30 p.m.), they will take civilly, but if your trip is more than a distance.

However, all truly civilized, and sophisticated cities provide another amenity for those too poor to own a car or take a taxi or good to sit in traffic like some. For every mile of one dollar and thirty cents, you can hop onto an underground Metro train and ride from American University to Dupont Circle or Farragut North Metro stops. Or for a little more, make the round to Union Station with its shops and cafes. Or leave Union Station and walk a few blocks to the Senate building. Where they'll ask you to put your bags on a conveyor belt and go through a security gate. Or get off at Judiciary Square, enter the Department of Labor, and sign in your name, organization, and destination, and show some ID. Again, the hallmark of a real city is how light its security is. Culture is measured not just by the number of coffee bars, but by the number of conveyer belts and x-ray machines. It's got capital, not culture.

Oh, there are a few other minor indicators of culture and sophistication: the Van Gogh exhibit at the National Gallery of Art, the 17 departments of the Smithsonian Museum, the Portal Museum, the Kennedy Center... and keep in mind Washington, D.C. is home of such truly civilized and cultured people and institutions such as Bill "Sticks will stick" Stallworth and Barry Stark. The "All-Scandal, All-the-Time" Washington Post, the "all-black" Eaton's, etc. And keep in mind Washington, D.C. is home of such truly civilized and cultured people and institutions such as Bill "Sticks will stick" Stallworth and Barry Stark. For my sister, but it sounded like a "She's getting her hair pressed." Dad would say, "She's getting her hair pressed," and I'd say, "she about to get her hair done!!!" See, I know the smell. For all the world, you could have a perm, you know, of course, the proper vernacular is "do" would always come out looking alright... well, as fine as pigtailes can. Always, there'd be the silhouette, hair of careless orgasms among the Joint Chiefs, signified by one or two small burns to the upper forehead or neck. Fortunately, just so we wouldn't feel left out, my dad would always bring a brother and put our hair into the next room and we'd have our hair cut, too. "You know your daddy paid his way through Xavier by cutting hair," my mom always said. All I know now, I hate haircuts. For one, I loved my hair long — yes, as in Afroo!!! Second, I didn't have a smoking gun. Moreover, every time I went to church, when you visited our house to do the hair, but I think I know now. That dang curling iron smell could linger in the house for a whole week! Why should a woman put up with that in her own house? On Sunday morning, the hair curlers would come out of the woman's hair, and everything pulled together, with once again, that smoking gun. Moreover, every time you went that day, they'd smell the curling iron. When you went to church, when you visited the relatives who didn't go to church, when you went to the grocery store, they'd smell it. Even if a woman walked up past you on the sidewalk, once you got a whiff of that hair, sight unseen, you could safely exclaim, "Oh! Got your hair done recently??" All said, though, we just wanted to feel good about ourselves, in the way that we saw the smell of family... And sometimes, you need your hair when you get to have your hair done.

Hatred not welcome at Cavanaugh Hall

Hatred not welcome at Cavanaugh Hall

Monday night at around 1:00 a.m. I was awakened by several male voices chancing outside my window. Living in Cavanaugh I have come to realize that the guys in Zahn love to cheer outside their beloved dorm and thought nothing of it. That is, until I realized these were not the men of Zahn Hall. What I heard coming from my window was the chanting of, "Faggots live in Zahn, faggots live in Zahn." I would like to remind these men that the word faggot is as hateful as nigger or gordo or kyke and the use of it is thoroughly unChristian and against everything Notre Dame stands for. I have written to President in Monday's mail and I am attempting to be as polite and I beg you to stop the practice now. You are perpetuating hatred.

And, to the woman in my section who had the courage to yell out the window, "How dare you use that word??" I say thank you. You have done Notre Dame proud.
Non-Catholic students find alternative worship

By Laura Rempf

When one thinks of the University of Notre Dame, certain words come to mind — academics, legacy, and of course, football. Another term associated with Notre Dame is Catholic. The University was founded on Catholic ideals and beliefs and to try and separate the two would be impossible. However, this leaves one unanswered problem: What is done to make non-Catholic students feel incorporated into the University?

There are many programs offered on campus that are non-denominational and are designed to incorporate non-Catholics. However, no other religious services are offered on campus and Campus Ministry has tried to supplement this.

"Over the summer, Campus Ministry sent out a survey to all freshman, graduate and off-campus students. They responded that they would like to attend other churches and synagogues in the vicinity," said Priscilla Wong, Assistant Director for Administration at Campus Ministry.

Thus, we compiled a list of all these churches and synagogues, so that, hopefully, these students can find a church they are comfortable with — one of their own faith and tradition.

This list is now available from Campus Ministry and includes the service times, plus whether or not the church provides transportation. This list is updated yearly, and is one way Notre Dame tried to aid non-Catholic students.

"On campus, we do not have worship opportunities for other denominations because there are too many to do well and effectively. We hope this list helps non-Catholic students to find worship services that suit their faith," said Wong.

Two new programs will also help non-Catholic students to enrich their faith.

"The recently started Emmaus Program help set up small Christian faith communities, and the members certainly do not have to be Catholic," said Wong.

Another new program is Wednesday Night Prayer service that will start next semester on January 20, 1999.

"We are starting a new initiative 'Night Prayer' that will take place on Wednesday nights at 10 p.m. in the Bean Phillips chapel," said Karen Kirner, Night Prayer organizer, and Assistant Organist of Campus Ministry.

The services last no longer than 30 minutes and will have a candle light atmosphere, a residence choir, prayer, hymn singing and instrumentals. Students will pick a theme for the evening and we hope this is a quiet way for students to end their day if they are stressed out and want to spend time in prayer and praise," said Kirner.

"We welcome non-Catholic students and hope they will see this as a place where they can go to worship and praise," she added.

Do all these programs actually help non-Catholic students feel included? When asked, many of them do not feel exalted or not included because they are not Catholic.

"I do not at all feel excluded because I am not Catholic," said freshman Becky Varnum. "The only time I feel left out is when a lot of people go to mass and I am excluded. Sometimes I wish there were other services on campus I could attend."

Varnum also defended the Catholicism of the University.

"I don't believe Notre Dame needs to make any changes. People come here knowing it is a Catholic institution, and you get what you expect," she said.

Some students say being non-Catholic does cause uneasy feeling at times.

"I feel a little awkward living in such a Catholic dorm," said freshman Nina Vaughn. "But it's my personal choice whether I want to take advantage of opportunities, and there is no discrimination if I chose to participate."

"I think Notre Dame makes enough of an effort to provide programs for non-Catholics," continues Vaughn. "If I need an outlet for religious activity, I know I can find one."

It seems, then, that although Notre Dame does not offer non-Catholic campus worship services, there are activities one can participate in to enrich their faith while in college.

"I just recently discovered that Georgetown is a Catholic school," said Varnum. "However, this mistake would never be made with Notre Dame because it prides itself on its Catholic heritage. Before I even came here, I knew the emphasis would be placed on Catholicism."

The Collegiate Guide to Good Manners

By MIKE VANEGAS
Assistant Scene Editor

The college environment is a rude awakening on almost every front of one's life. Higher class expectations lead to sleepless nights, caffeine-soaked mornings and overall bad behavior. This of course breeds the poor etiquette and bad manners that flood most college campuses, including ours.

It is amazing how disappointed I was when I started college two years ago after living with a clean bedroom, a clean mouth and a polite demeanor for 17 years. But now is the time to get the word out that good behavior does exist.

The first arena for this lesson is the dorm room. This will greatly improve any sore spots that have been created with a roommate.

First of all, one should take a shower every morning, and usually every evening or night. It is understandable that one might only get one shower a day because of a busy schedule, but two should be the goal. And for those overachievers out there, 24 hours is enough time to take three or four showers. But one is the minimum. By the way, washing one's face and slapping on a layer of deo do rant is not a qualified shower.

Another tip for the college student is to throw stuff away. In particular, one should trash any uneaten food that will not be eaten at all. This includes the leftover grab 'n' go food such as hard cookies or spoiled milk. This is also a helper when it comes to refrigerator cleanliness.

For morality's sake, all cans should be eliminated the morning after they were emptied. This not only will get rid of that unpleasant smell, but it will also help you forget that previous night.

The next step in creating a friendly college environment is word substitution. This is mainly directed to those people who can not seem to finish a sentence without the obligatory four-letter word.

Take a look at this thesaurus for clean language:

Four-letter word #1: shoot, crap, poo-poo, geez
Four-letter word #2: fudge, fiddle-faddle, make love, do it
Four-letter word #3: (this one is more acceptable in its true form) darn, dang; in an extended form, one can use: goshdarnit, dangit, well golly gee willickers
Five-letter word #1: witch, gun (as in son-of-a-gun), female dog

This is a good start to cleaning up the airwaves of our college campus. If all else fails, one can always say exactly the opposite of the intention of their profanity, but add a "not." For example, one can say "You're not a nice person who can not go to heaven" or "That's a bunch of really good information that did not emanate from a bull." Take your choice. You can even make a game out of it!

Or you can simply follow the old adage, "If you don't have anything nice to say don't say anything at all." But we're in college now, so that's really no fun.

The final step to a good relationship with humanity deals with everyday interpersonal relations.

Do not trip people. Do not laugh at people for no good reason. Do not spit on people. Do not punch a guy in the face because he looks at you the wrong way. And do not look at people the wrong way.

One last piece of advice: Try not to take people seriously when they tell you how to live your life. In fact, if someone does try to tell you how to live your life, swear at them with a lot of four-letter words. Then trip them, spit on them, punch them and don't shower for two days. That will make life a lot easier for everyone.

ATLANTA

Until Wednesday night, Roben Rivero was best known as Tony Gwynn's late-inning replacement and one of the guys who joined the San Diego Padres in the Hideki Irabu trade.

Then the light-hitting rookie used some brazen baserunning to manufacture a key run in the Padres' 3-2, 10-inning win over the Atlanta Braves in the opener of the NL championship series.

Yes, it was Ken Caminiti's homer off Kerry Ligtenberg that would have ended the game had the Padres' baserunning not gotten to extra innings without Rivera.

The 24-year-old outfielder was playing only because Greg Vaughn strained his left quadriceps in the fifth inning. Rivera, who hit just .209 in the regular season with 52 strikeouts, got his first playoff hit in seven at-bats when he doubled with the go-ahead score.

The leadoff drive in the eighth chased 17-game winner John Smoltz.

Ken Caminiti lifted a fly ball off John Rocker to center field, and Rivera slid into third base headfirst, just as a great throw from first baseman Chipper Jones had probably been aimed. Rivera probably would have been out had Chipper Jones held the tag, but he didn't. Rivera even overslid, but got up.

Padres division series hero Ken Caminiti, a journeyman third baseman with astronomical salaries, hit his first career home run in the fifth. The 7000-foot-long fly ball had been hit hard.

Rivera hesitated, took a step back toward third, then broke for home, sliding across headfirst as Galarraga's throw skipped away from catcher Jay Lopez.

Galarraga was hit with a fielding error and throwing error on the play.

Rivera wowed with his defense in spring training, then was recalled from Triple-A Las Vegas on May 16 when James Mouton went on the disabled list.

Rivera, a first cousin of New York Yankees reliever Mariano Rivera, was acquired in the sixth-trade player that sent Irabu to the Yankees on April 22, 1997. The Padres had obtained Irabu's rights from his Japanese team, Chiba Lotte, but Irabu refused to negotiate with the Padres.

So Irabu fulfilled his wish to be a Yankee and Rivera joined the Padres.

During trade talks with Seattle this summer, the Mariners wanted Rivera in a deal for Randy Johnson that also would have involved San Diego pitcher Joey Hamilton. But the Padres wouldn't part with the prized outfielder.

Rivera comes often in late games for Gwynn, who has been bothered by injuries this year. He's also made 44 starts in the outfield.

Vaughn, who hit a club-record 50 homers this season, pulled up between first and second after right fielder Michael Tucker made a spectacular catch of his fly ball just before running into the wall in right.

Vaughn was clearly hurt himself running after Tucker's double. The ball bounced off the wall and Vaughn hobbled it before throwing it in.

Knoblauch defends actions

NEW YORK

T R Y  T O D A Y !

IT WAS A BAD CALL. IF I COULD DO IT ALL OVER AGAIN, I'D DO IT THE SAME WAY.

CHUCK KNOBLAUCH
YANKEES' SECOND BASEMAN

Knoblauch had made the play a thousand times, facing over from second base cover first on a sacrifice. It never turned out quite this way before.

"I was a little bewildered and a little angry at being involved in the game-turning goof that helped Cleveland score the tie-breaking run in Wednesday's 4-1 victory over the New York Yankees in Game 2 of the American League championship series.

Fryman dropped the boot and Knoblauch was covering first when Tino Martinez's throw struck the runner in the bark and glanced about 30 feet away. Instead of going after the ball, Knoblauch started howling at the umpire, complaining that Fryman had interfered with the throw by running in fair territory.

"He was running on grass," the second baseman said. "It be allowed to run on grass."

Actually, the answer is yes. According to umpiring chief Jim Evans, a runner can take any route he pleases to the base. And because the base is in fair territory, he has to be in fair territory to reach it.

So don't blame me for this.

Meanwhile, Knoblauch ignored the baseball as pitcher Randy Johnson crouched to center field. Fryman waved with his arms and circled the bases and Evans wound up at third.

"I didn't know where the ball was," Knoblauch repeated over and over. "It was a bad call. If I could do it all again, I'd do it the same way.

"That wouldn't please manager Joe Torre, who said that although the call was wrong, so was his second baseman.

"He was yelling at the umpire and you can't do that," Torre said. "You've got to make the play and then go back and argue with the umpire. But I think he was just shocked that they didn't make the call."

Commissioner mad at Yanks

NEW YORK

Angry at repeated violations of the rules by the New York Yankees, the commissioner's office intends to start a series of meetings this week with the team.

The Associated Press

Officials of the commissioner's office and the American League's New York Yankees and owner George Steinbrenner have been at odds for years.

Under the rules developed last winter by Paul Beeston, baseball's chief operating officer, postseason teams are required to hold workouts prior to Games 1 and 3.

Al vice president Phyllis Merhigo was clearly exasperated with the Yankees, and members of baseball's brass said the team was routinely ignoring directives from the commissioner's office.

The baseball Writers Association of America sent Beeston a letter Wednesday protesting his team's violations.

Beeston's rules were prompted by the Florida Marlins' refusal to come to the interview room after the seventh game of the World Series last year.

During meetings with the commissioner's office last winter, he promised teams would be fined if they violated the rules.
Hey, You Seniors: It's Not Over Yet!

Jim Lies, C.S.C.

This missive, though quite obviously directed to our seniors, welcomes the interest of all who have read thus far. It is intended to appeal primarily, however, to those whose days among us are numbered, but, please God, has something to say to us all. During each mid-semester break, we tend to take stock and marvel at how quickly the semester has gone. I have little doubt that most of you seniors are gasping in horror at the speed with which these days, not only this semester but throughout your years here, have passed. My intention is to assure you, as I intended to in the title, that it's not over yet!

There is more time than you think as long as you choose to use it well. The danger in these days is that you might think that it's too late to try something new; or, especially for you off-campus folks, too late to get involved in something on campus that you haven't up to now. The great danger for all of you is that you might deny yourself an opportunity to enter into some of the experiences that make this place unique in all the world. Oh, I know, you've heard it all before, but the fact of the matter is there's a difference between hearing and listening, which is learning and experiencing.

Some of the most important experiences with which Notre Dame graduates walk away from this place happen in the waning days of their senior year. Some of them happen in the classroom, in moments of discovery and of genuine enlightenment. Some happen among friends as you begin to realize the significance of the relationships you've formed here and the fleeting opportunities that you may have with them. Some happen because we dare to step out of the ordinary course of our established routine and take on the extraordinary. As to what that is, I suspect you would get a different answer depending on who you ask, and since this is my column, you're getting my answer! The area of life at this university that deeply engages a good portion of our campus, though not nearly all, are those opportunities we have to pray, retreat, and serve together. The time has come for many of you to decide who you are and who you want to become. The end of one's college career engenders a deep reflection on just what matters most. We are who we are, however, in large part, because of the choices we make: for classes; for friends; for service; for worship and prayer; for employment; and, ultimately, for vocation.

It is not too late to begin asking questions and considering options. It's not too late to get involved in experiences through Campus Ministry and the Center for Social Concerns which could ultimately affect the direction of your life, and certainly your character. It would be a great shame if we walked away from this place without getting at the most important questions of life. The opportunities are all around us; the choice is ours. Not only because such a choice would most assuredly enhance your days here, but because of its potential to greatly transform the life that you will live beyond this place.

Please God, that which you have the opportunity to engage in here, will inform the deepest questions of faith and of justice and of social responsibility. Please God, the opportunities that you have and will yet experience here will enlighten your discernment over some of the most important decisions of your young lives. I only encourage you to do two things: first, join us in the respective missions of Campus Ministry and of the Center for Social Concerns. There are ample opportunities to get involved even now, whether it be in areas of local service, or the urban plunge, or the Appalachian, Washington or migrant worker seminars through the Center for Social Concerns, or through Campus Ministry and the areas of faith and community through hall Masses, bible studies, EMMAUS small faith sharing groups, retreats such as the NDE, or the two upcoming Senior Retreats in the spring semester. It's not over yet.

The second thing that I would encourage you to do is to throw wide the possibilities for your future. As you discern the next year or two of your life, you have the luxury of considering opportunities that will, later, probably not be available to you. The opportunities for a year or two of service are many. You will find many valuable resources on this campus: the Center for Social Concerns, the Alliance for Catholic Education (ACE), Holy Cross Associates, and even Campus Ministry which will again offer a year-long internship for a recent Notre Dame graduate. Even beyond a year of service, this is the time for those of you who have long considered, if only casually, religious life or priesthood to consider a year to try it out and to enter into structured discernment about one of the most important decisions of your life.

For all of you, whether you choose to step outside of the normal course or not, it is the time to engage in conversation with trusted friends and mentors, to pray, and to revel in the opportunities that this place and these days afford you. So that when you are long beyond these days you can be confident that you took full advantage of all the opportunities that Our Lady's University had to offer.

Caminiti's 10th inning blast powers Padres past Braves

Associated Press

ATLANTA

This time, the San Diego Padres saved Trevor Hoffman.

Ken Caminiti hit a solo home run in the 10th inning and the Padres overcame a rare lapse by baseball's premier closer to beat the Atlanta Braves 3-2 Wednesday night in a rain-delayed Game 1 of the NL championship series.

On an evening when daring running sent the game into extra innings, Caminiti trotted around the bases after connecting with one out in the 10th off Kerry Ligtenberg.

It was the fourth postseason homer of Caminiti's career, and helped him atone for failing to come up with a key throw that let the Braves tie it.

Ruben Rivera's double and dash home on Jim Leyritz's dribbler gave the Padres a 2-1 lead in the eighth. But in the ninth, Hoffman, who converted 53 of 54 save chances this season, could not protect the edge and gave up Andruw Jones' tying sacrifice fly.

In fact, Hoffman could not even close out the game. With two outs in the 10th, he walked Chipper Jones before retiring Andres Galarraga on a long fly to center.

Hoffman pitched two innings and wound up with the win. The game ended at 1:43 a.m., pushed back by a two-hour, one-minute rain delay at the start.

The win was a good omen for the underdog Padres. The last four teams to win the opener of the NLCS have gone on to win the World Series.

San Diego sustained a loss, however, when 50-homer man Greg Vaughn limped off in the fifth inning because of a strained left quadriceps. His status was day-to-day, and Rivera replaced him.

Game 2 will be Thursday night, with Braves nemesis Kevin Brown pitching against Glavine. Last fall, Brown beat Atlanta twice at Turner Field in the NLCS for Florida.

Steady rain, lightning and thunder threatened to cause the first rainout in the two-year history of Turner Field.

After a delay of 2 hours, 1 minute, the field was ready and the game began, though it started raining lightly in the last two innings.

The bad weather might have helped hold the crowd down to 42,117 — about 9,000 short of a sellout and the smallest in Atlanta postseason history. But even before the storm came, the game was not expected to be sold out.

Padres starter Andy Ashby and Atlanta ace John Smoltz dueled evenly into the seventh-inning stretch. At 1-1, Rivera, usually Tony Gwynn's late replacement, opened the eighth with a double off Smoltz. Caminiti followed it with a fly to medium right-center, and Rivera tagged up and tested Andruw Jones' strong arm.

Rivera's head-first slide barely beat the throw, though his momentum carried him a couple of feet off the bag. But third baseman Chipper Jones was busy raising his glove to show the umpire that he'd made the tag, and Rivera scrambled back to safety.

That brought up pinch-hitter Leyritz, whose six postseason home runs included three in the first-round win over Houston.

Leyritz tapped a ball to the right of Dennis Martinez, and the reliever ran to field it. Martinez looked at Rivera, but elected to throw to first baseman Galarra.

Rivera immediately broke home and again slid in headfirst, beating Galarra's wide throw. Galarra was charged with a double error, for leaving the bag early and his bad throw.

Gwynn picked on a familiar victim for an RBI single that made it 1-1 in the fifth. A leadoff single by Carlos Hernandez, a sacrifice by Ashby and a costly two-out walk to Quilvio Veras brought up Gwynn, and the eight-time NL batting champion lined the first pitch to left field.

For Gwynn, it was his second hit of the night and his now 30-for-65 (.455) lifetime against Smoltz. Atlanta averted even bigger trouble, though, when right fielder Michael Tucker followed by making the defensive play of the game, a backhanded, leaping catch as he ran into the fence on Vaughn's drive.

Atlanta went ahead in the third when Andruw Jones led off with his fourth career home run in postseason play.

Bears yet to find remedy for third-quarter blues

Associated Press

Thursday, October 8, 1998

The ball popped free, a Lions player scooped it up and the streak continued.

"Alonzo Mayes tucked the ball. It’s a good point to bring up, because we are struggling," center Casey Wiegmann said. "We’re making crucial mistakes in the third quarter, a lot of fumbles. We’ve just got to clean that up. It’s not us not moving the ball, it’s just us making mistakes."

"Lots of them. Chicago (1-4) hasn’t yet to score in the third quarter this season. In the Bears’ last 10 games, they have been outscored 95-0 in the third quarter."

They lost their first four games of the season despite leading at halftime of each game.

"I would like to believe it’s a huge coincidence," tackle Andy Heck said. "Some attention needs to be paid to it, but I don’t think much more than if we’re ready to go, which we are. We haven’t seen anybody not ready to go."

So what’s the problem? No one’s quite sure. It isn’t lack of effort, and there’s no truth to the rumor the Bears are drinking some strange flavor of Gatorade at halftime. One player suggested they just stay out on the field at half and pretend the second quarter is really, really long.

Whatever the reason, the third quarter has been troublesome for both the offense and the defense. The offense has stopped its own drives with fumbles and no gains, while the defense has given up big plays.

"Against the Lions last weekend, the offense fumbled twice in the third quarter, leading to two scores. The defense gave up a total of 17 points."

It’s just us making mistakes."

"It was like, what the heck are we doing? This thing just got away," fullback Ty Hallock said. "To our credit, we worked real hard ... and we got a win last week that we desperately needed. Hopefully that will carry over into the next few games."

The Bears followed up one of their worst quarters this season with one of their best. After giving up the two fumbles and 17 points, Chicago rebounded and scored three straight touchdowns for the 31-27 victory, its first of the season.

So much for the theory the Bears were making the wrong adjustments.

"There’s no halftime, as we all know, between the third and the fourth quarter," coach Dave Wannstedt said. "We just made plays in the fourth quarter. What can you say? And we didn’t in the third."

The Bears hope last weekend’s win will help solve their third-quarter problems. They’ve broken their streak of bad luck, so now maybe everything else will fall into place.

And if the problems persist? That depends on if they win or lose.

"The reality of it is that regardless of any circumstances, it really doesn’t matter about any individual quarter," Hallock said. "It’s the end result."

Wiegmann agreed. "We can have aves all year long," he said. "If we still get a 'W' out of it, that’s all that matters to us."

"It’s just us making mistakes."

Knoblauch miscue ignites Indian rally, ties series

NEW YORK — Chuck Knoblauch blew it cool after the umpires botched a call, and the Cleveland Indians escaped Yankee Stadium with a split.
Baseball doesn’t get much more bizarre than this. Then again, there’s nothing like Yankee Stadium in October to magnify every mishap.

“At the end, we caught a break and made the most of that opportunity,” Indians manager Mike Hargrove said Wednesday after Cleveland’s wild 4-1, 12-inning win over the Yankees.

“I started outside the line, and when I knew I could get by Tino, I tried to straighten out a little bit,” Knoblauch said. “Four batters later, Kenny Lofton hit a two-run single off Graeme Lloyd, and the Indians could finally relax.

Both teams had squandered opportunities. New York stranded 10 runners and Cleveland left seven.

Mayes injured on punt return

Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Green Bay Packers receiver Derrick Mayes will undergo an arthroscopic exam to assess damage to knee ligaments he injured on a punt return.

Coach Mike Holmgren said the exam on Mayes' injured right knee will be done Thursday.

"We know there's ligament damage," Holmgren said. "But because the situation is complicated by the fact Derrick previously had surgery on the knee in high school in 1988, we're going to do a scope in order to make a more definitive diagnosis."

Mayes injured his knee returning a punt late in Monday night's 37-24 loss to the Minnesota Vikings.

He was in for the punt because regular returner Ruell Preston had muscle cramps.

While Mayes is sidelined, Bill Schroeder will fill in as the Packers' No. 3 receiver.

Autry quits NFL after being cut by Bears

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Darnell Autry, who led Northwestern to the Rose Bowl in 1995 but never cut it in the NFL, quit football today to pursue an acting career.

Autry, 22, was cut by the Chicago Bears on Aug. 24 and signed by the Eagles on Sept. 9. He never made it off the practice squad for Philadelphia, which is 0-5 heading into Sunday's game against winless Washington.

"Darnell is interested in pursuing a film career," said his agent, Gary Wichard. "I think he's decided, rather than sit around and wait to get on the field, he wants to pursue his other love."

Autry, who studied acting at Northwestern, was selected in the fourth round by the Bears after leading the Wildcats to the Rose Bowl appearance in 1995. Northwestern lost to Southern Cal, but Autry was a finalist for the Heisman Trophy.

The Eagles signed him to the practice squad when running back Aaron Hayden was placed on injured reserve. Philadelphia signed fullback Mike Reid from the practice squad and added running back James Bostic to the practice squad to take Autry's place on the 53-man roster.

Bostic caught three passes for 31 yards in the preseason but was deactivated for the first five games. Bostic, 26, has been hampered by injuries after a stellar career at Auburn.

And for the second straight week, there was good news at Thursday. He developed some right hamstring, but on and reported he also practiced and was listed as probable for Sunday's game at Seattle.

However, he also practiced Wednesday and reported improvement in his strained right hamstring, but on Thursday he developed soreness in his lower back that lingered through the weekend. Elway didn't play in the 41-16 win over Philadelphia.

In all, Elway, 38, has missed the last two games and parts of two previous games because of his injuries.

"I've come a long way since Sunday," Elway said. "I'll try to practice and get back in the flow of things this week, but I also have to be careful with it because it's not totally gone. I'd like to do anything to set myself back.

"If I continue to make the strides that I've made, I'm hoping to be able to go Monday." Elway said his back was more of a concern than the hamstring.

"It's the two-injury theory," he said with a smile. "You can only have one thing hurt at a time.

In Elway's absence, veteran Bubby Brister has played well. Last Sunday he completed four touchdowns, and he ranks first in the AFC in passing with eight touchdowns and only two interceptions.

Coach Mike Shanahan said Elway 'scrambled a couple of times out there, I was kind of surprised. A couple of times he had some pass rush and he kind of scooted to the side and ran downfield about 15 yards. It looked like he was 22, 23 years old again. So that was a good sign.

"I'm sure there's a little tightness and soreness, but he made it through practice and he practiced well."

Tampa Bay players demand apology

The NHL has received the videotape from the game, but league officials said Wednesday some potential witnesses may yet be interviewed.

"Obviously this is a very important conclusion to be reached here," spokeswoman Bernadette Mansur said. "We take these matters very seriously. The players themselves were being very vocal. We need to make sure we get some accurate eyewitnesses."

Investigators still aim to reach a conclusion before the teams meet again Friday night in their season opener. Either player could be suspended if conclusions supports the action.

"There's a zero-tolerance policy toward racial slurs after Chris Simms and Chris Baker of the Washington Capitals were suspended in separate incidents.

"The league has told everybody we're not going to let this stuff continue," the coach said.

"The pain of battle, people react differently and sometimes say things and do things. Obviously this is a matter of what is right and what is acceptable. We have to set some guidelines."

The NHL last year undertook a "zero-tolerance" policy toward racial slurs after Chris Simms and Chris Baker of the Washington Capitals were suspended in separate incidents.
The Observer • SPORTS

The Pangborn defensive secondary rarely allowed a Walsh receiver to get open, contrasting the Walsh passing attack. Panell completed only three of 11 passes for 82 yards and was intercepted twice, including the very first play of the game.

The Pangborn offense, not to be outdone by its defensive counterpart, put up impressive numbers of its own. Quarterback Jill DePaul completed seven of 11 passes for 121 yards and a touchdown. DePaul also demonstrated her strong running game as she rushed for 52 yards and another touchdown.

The lone bright spot for Walsh on the afternoon was the second half play of its defensive line. Refusing to give up, Gina Morton, Sue Sweeney and Jackie Schmidt broke through the Pangborn offensive line numerous times in the second half. Schmidt alone had three tackles for losses. Thanks to the play of the Walsh defensive line, Pangborn did not score in the second half.

Pangborn's active line played tough but we just made too many mental mistakes today," Walsh coach Dan Alexander said. "We missed too many flags and didn't make the right reads. We have to cut out these mistakes before the playoffs start."

The last formal bargaining session was held Aug. 6, and owners walked out of the room after hearing the players' proposal.

Union director Billy Hunter said his side, too, will not be coming with any new concessions.

"We're prepared to address their concerns, we really are," Hunter said. "But I'm not going to bid against myself."

The owners and players have only a couple of days to come up with a deal that will save an 82-game season, and such a breakthrough seems unlikely with the sides far apart on the main economic issues.

The regular season is scheduled to begin Nov. 3.

Players and owners could decide fate of season today

Associated Press

NEW YORK — There is any hope for saving the start of the NBA's regular season.

Back at the bargaining table for only the second time in almost three and a half months, owners and players might find out the answer today.

Talks were set to resume at a midtown Manhattan hotel, and both sides were extremely pessimistic that any progress would be made to avoid the first canceled games because of a labor impasse in league history.

"We're not coming with anything," NBA deputy commissioner Russ Granik said. "We're waiting to hear what they have to say. So I don't know what to expect."

Williams continued from page 28

"I've always felt I've been ready," said Williams. "I do know I can better, but I'm not the kind of guy who's going to back down. I keep it hyped. I like to talk. I like to celebrate. Every play, you've got to play like it's fourth-and-five and they're going for it. That's my game."

So far this season, Williams has shown that he's got game.

He made five solo tackles against Stanford and has registered 15 tackles on the season, just like any other second-year player, he has some room for improvement.

"Brock played hard, didn't always play smart," said defensive backs coach Tom McMahon. "He came up with some tackles. I think this is a growing-up period for him. You grow up when you're playing in games. He's got a snap in his step and he loves a challenge. I hope it rubs off."

In the Purdue game, Williams looked like he had great position on a Drew Fries' pass to the endzone, but just when it looked like he had a sure interception, Randall Lane stripped him of the bail and turned the Williams' pick into a Purdue touchdown.

Following the play, Williams was visibly upset, but since then has bounced back in a big way.

"He's a tremendous competitor. It doesn't want to get beat," said McMahon. "When he does get beat, he doesn't believe he did."

The next test for Williams will come this weekend when he lines up against Tariq McDonald and all-American candidate Lenzie Jackson, who already has 13 receptions for 160 yards.

Despite the bobbled interception that led to a Purdue touchdown, Brock Williams' presence gave him his first start in the Irish defensive backfield a week later against Stanford.

Jordan continues to ponder NBA return

Associated Press

CHICAGO

Michael Jordan says he is not ruling out returning to the Chicago Bulls, the Chicago Tribune reported.

"What's most important right now is for me to see where the league is going, and see deep inside myself to make a clear cut decision. So for now I'm keeping my options open," Jordan said in an interview published in the Tribune's Thursday edition and on the newspaper's Internet site.

Jordan said his final decision must await the conclusion of the NBA lockout that has canceled the regular season schedule and threatens at least part of the regular season.

Jordan, 35, said he is "completely healthy, and the love I have for basketball, for the challenge of it, is still there for me."

His comments are in contrast to what the Bulls star said in July when Jordan told a news conference he was retired, but wouldn't make it official until the lockout ended.

Jordan also said he isn't opposed to playing for Tim Floyd or for an organization still run by general manager Jerry Krause.

"I played with Jerry there the last five or six seasons, and we've been successful," Jordan said. "I don't like it. But that's not going to be my final deciding factor."

Jordan had indicated last season he wouldn't play for any coach but Phil Jackson, who led the Bulls to six NBA titles in the last eight years. Jackson left this summer and the Bulls hired Floyd as coach-in-waiting.

Jordan said he thinks Jackson might return to coach him. "I think he acknowledged that the odds of Jackson coaching the Bulls this season are probably a million to one." Jordan said.

Jordan said Jackson might return to coach him. "I think he acknowledged that the odds of Jackson coaching the Bulls this season are probably a million to one." Jordan said.

Jordan had nothing critical to say about Floyd, the former Iowa State coach he and Jackson referred to last season as "Pink" Floyd.

"I don't fault him. I fault Jerry Krause for driving Jackson away," Jordan said.

Floyd said Bulls chairman Jerry Reinsdorf recently told him he still plans to do his best to sign Jordan again.

Jackson acknowledged it would be a challenge to win a title with a new coach.

"For me, if there's no challenge, I don't want to play," he said. "But the Catch-22 for me is that I don't want people saying I came back when I shouldn't have or I stayed too long."
Oakland's QB George could miss five weeks with injury

Associated Press
ALAMEDA, Calif. - The Oakland Raiders may be missing quarterback Jeff George longer than expected.

Coach Jon Gruden said Wednesday that George has a torn left groin and that it's missing quarter back Jeff.

George longer than expected. "I feel that George could play this week in injury," George said.

George was knocked out of Arizona with the groin injury, Sunday's 23-20 victory at Oakland also is banged up at right knee.

George has a muscle tear, it's more severe than we thought. We'll just have to wait and see. I don't know if it's a three-week, four-week or five-week injury. It's how ever long it takes to heal. I just have to be patient.

The Raiders (3-2) who have won consecutive games for the first time since December 1996, face San Diego at home this Sunday. Then they have a bye week after being signed to assignment at Arizona had taken only three snaps since 1992, Kaufman is bothered by a sprained left ankle that Griffin said still was swollen on Wednesday, though Kaufman said he expects to be fine by Sunday.

Kaufman's backup, Harvey Williams, has swelling in his right knee. So Calvin Branch, a defensive back who played running back in college, worked on offense Wednesday and could be used as a running back in an emergency this weekend.

Despite tough defensive effort, Belles fall to Hope College at home

DANA KIDNEY
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's volleyball team fell short of a win last night against visiting Hope College in three games: 15-11, 15-13. However, head coach Jennie Joyce was very pleased with the team's play overall. "Despite the loss, we played awesome defense at the net and on the floor," Joyce said. "We saw the level at which we need to play at in order to beat teams and be competitive in our conference." "We played a great game, and we all knew that we could've won," freshman Jolle LeBeau said. "With a little more effort, we would have pulled it off." The Belles were able to keep every close. The Belles could have won any of the games if they had converted more of the frequent set opportunities. "Hope is a great serving team, but we fought back, and our aggressiveness never died down," Joyce said. "We struggled on our offense though. Our serving could've been much better." Although the team did not serve well, freshman Suzanne Martin and junior Agnes Bill aced the Dutch, contributing four service aces a piece. The Belles defense was what kept them in the game. "I thought we played so well. It looked like we were totally there," Bill said. "We executed well, and there were lots of digs. Our poor serve was our weakness tonight, for sure." Freshman Angie Meyers and junior Joyce Osborne each contributed solid defensive efforts. Meyers had 28 digs while Osborne's 15 block touches and 15 solo blocks kept the Belles in the game. "Overall we played great defense and we came up with some awesome blocks," Meyers said. "We faced Hope earlier in the season, and this time we played much better, even though we still lost." "We played well, but we struggled with certain things," Suzanne Martin said. "Our defense was great. Hopefully that will carry over to this weekend's tournament." The Belles go into the Saint Mary's College Spectacular tournament this weekend to face several tough conference teams. "Before this weekend, we need to step it up a notch and be more aggressive," Meyers said. "We need to focus more on serves and talk more on the floor too." "If we keep up the good play at the net and our good defense this weekend," LeBeau said, "We will definitely come out on top." Joyce agrees that the Belles need to work on a few things before this weekend's tournament. "We need to get our offense clicking," Joyce said. "We also need to come with our complete game defense and offense."
