Rumors of the lice infection started spreading around Wednesday of this past week when students began hearing of head-lice cases in McGlinn Hall. Since then, gossip has stirred on the campus and there are more rumors about lice than actual cases themselves. Father John Conley of Siegfried Hall has said that no cases of lice have been reported at Siegfried, even though rumors to the contrary have scattered across campus. According to Conley, students from McGlinn to Siegfried the night the lice broke out and started rumors of the dorm's infection. "God knows what would happen if the plague hit this campus," said Karen Dubay, assistant rector of McGlinn, who believes the lice gossip, asked to speak at the University on another occasion, according to Megan Fitzpatrick, member of PSA and the Women's Resource Center. He is volunteering his time at the rally because he strongly believes in the issue. The speakout, sponsored by Notre Dame's Progressive Student Alliance, will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. at Squiry Center. The purpose of this rally is to show the administration that there is great faculty, staff and student support for the inclusion of sexual orientation in the existing non-discrimination clause," Fitzpatrick said. "We believe that the absence of this clause affects both campus life and the quality of our education here. PSA feels that any kind of discrimination is wrong." Donahue will serve as main speaker and emcee of the event. Other speakers will include Glenn Hendler and Barbara Green, both professors of English and law professor Teresa Phelps. Seniors Karen Uhlmeyer, Mark Massoud and representatives from the Notre Dame College Democrats Club will speak, as well. PSA hopes this wide show of support from the faculty, student body and campus groups will influence the outcome of Tuesday's vote, said David Hartwig, a member of PSA, referring to the planned Faculty Senate referendum on whether or not to include sexual orientation.

The Lice Girls

Lice

The very word makes your head itch, doesn't it? You don't think anything of it at first, that small itch feeling at the back of your head. You scratch it, thinking it's an omen. “Lice on campus?” you think. “No problem, I'm clean! I tell you! I live near those natty girls in McGlinn. They all have it, but if I stay away from them for the rest of the semester, I won't get infested. I can't. I told you, I'm clean.”

Then you start hearing about people in the dorm and you're getting the lice. The people next door. Last you heard, your rector and his grandmother had it. Why wasn't Pappy in her office on Friday? She must have it, too. Your head starts to itch more, and you start missing classes because between looking at your scalp closely in the mirror for little nits and itches, you can't do anything as unclean as STUDYING.

You can't take any chances. This is the plague!

Give me a freakin' break. I've heard things this weekend that make my skin crawl even more than a lice infestation.

One of our girls was wardsmith tested for tuberculosis. She didn't have it. On the same day, it was revealed that the girl down the hall from her had lice?

We've all heard enough.

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

PROVIDENCE, R.I.

A Brown University graduate student has been charged with supplying radioactive medical chemical to poison two other students—a claim made by one of his former girlfriend, authorities said Sunday.

Neither of the poisoned students was harmed, said university spokesman Mark Nielson.

Cheng Gu, 24, placed a radioactive isotope of iodine in a dish of vegetables and chicken he gave to Yanuyun Xiao, a female student in molecular pharmacology.

Lt. Stephen Campbell, Xiao's roommate, undergraduate James A. Brown, in August and the tainted food Gu was arrested Friday and charged with poisoning, assault and larceny. He was freed on personal recognizance until his next court date.

The attack apparently was motivated by "some kind of love interest," said police Capt. John Ryan. Xiao told police she had been Gu's girlfriend in her native China and, for a time, in the United States. The isotope, Iodine-125, is used to diagnose and treat thyroid disorders, and the amount Xiao and O'Brien received was about the same as that given in such diagnoses.

The contamination was discovered Wednesday when Xiao arrived at Brown's pharmacology laboratory, where students are routinely tested.

A Geiger counter showed that Xiao was "hot," Campbell said.

Finding nothing amiss in the lab, safety personnel went to Xiao's home and found hundreds of explicit photos of children. Gu was arrested Friday.

With the possibility of a combination of the two, Campbell said.

Iodine-125 has a half-life of six months, and half of its radiation dissipates every six months.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.

One week after FBI agents searched Antonio Lasaga's Saybrook rooms, the former master has not been arrested and no charges have been filed against him as Yale administrators and six unnamed officials maintain their silence about the nature of the investigation, information about the case is shedding light on other sources.

The New Haven Register, citing unnamed sources, reported that Lasaga is the subject of a child pornography investigation and that among the evidence seized in last Friday's raid were hundreds of explicit photos of children.

Although Lasaga's Cheleshe, Conn., residence was occupied on Tuesday night, it is unknown whether he or members of his family are inside. Lt. Robert Elliot, commander of the detective bureau of the Cheshire police, said Cheleshe police had been contacted by "an agency" on Tuesday. He did not specify whether the agency was local, state, or federal.

The naivete around campus concerning this issue amazes me.

Residence Life Director Jim Van Arsdell said students with a clean record are not expelled after being caught with marijuana the first time. "Marijuana is fairly common in our society," Van Arsdell said. "If a student is in possession of a hard drug like cocaine, heroin or LSD, the typical consequence is removal from the residence hall altogether on first contact." But for marijuana, the consequences aren't as severe," he said. Jason Koch was the one student expelled from his hall after three allegedly marijuana-related arrests in dorms. He continued to live in Coronado Residence Hall after a pot violation and was sent to the Dean of Student's Diversion Program.

One bit is not enough. During the past six months, only one of 16 University of Arizona students who was caught and formally reprimanded for using marijuana in the dorms was expelled, according to UA police statistics.

SMC social work awaits accreditation notice

By COLLEEN McCARTHY
Saint Mary's News Editor

The month of February could bring good news and the recognition the social work department at Saint Mary's has sought for some time.

After trying to gain program accreditation from the National Association of Social Workers (NASW) for at least 10 years, the department thinks it has made the necessary adjustments to earn recognition and is anticipating notification of the NASW's decision.

Maureen Donovan, a junior social work major, has witnessed the changes the department has made since her arrival at Saint Mary's.

"When I came freshman year, I was told the program was not accredited," said Donovan. "It is pretty much a new program now. The College has realized that accreditation is beyond necessary."

Changes made have included adjustments to course material, adding faculty with advanced degrees in social work and other internal changes.

Twenty years ago, it was not necessary for social work programs to be accredited, said Donovan, who admitted that times seem to have changed.

With the calling for social work majors to pursue advanced degrees, graduating from an undergraduate institution with an accredited program is to the degree-seeker's advantage.

"Instead of a Bachelor of Arts degree, if you graduate from an accredited institution, you receive a Bachelor of Social Work," said Donovan. "The difference in degrees is that with a Bachelor of Social Work, you can come into a graduate program in social work with advanced standing."

Getting a jump on graduate studies allows students to shave one to two years off of their graduate work, she said.

With the revamped social work program at Saint Mary's, students are now taking core requirements that were formerly left for first year graduate students.

From Nov. 3-5, representatives from the NASW traveled to Saint Mary's for a site visit. The event allowed the visitors to gather information about the program and to ascertain whether the accreditation information Saint Mary's provided was being put into practice.

The representatives also met with the president of the College and the dean of social work, said Donovan. "Our faculty are unbelievable," said Donovan. "They are there for us 24 hours a day and work with local agencies, utilizing skills they have learned in their classes. In effect, the students are practicing their Bachelor of Social Work, said Donovan.

Suggestions the visiting representatives offered the College for the program included linking the social work program with the social justice and women's studies programs.

"If our faculty are unbelievable," said Donovan, "they are there for us 24 hours a day and work hard to gain accreditation. We all have a good feeling that the program will be accredited."
Folk Choir sings at prison

By MARIA PEREZ
News Writer

The Notre Dame Folk Choir visited the Indiana State Prison in Michigan City yesterday where they gave a concert for an audience of 400 inmates.

The prison is an all-male, maximum security facility which currently holds about 1850 residents; approximately 40 percent of the prisoners are in lockup units and 41 are on death row. The prisoners who attended the concert were all members of the general population of the prison: those who are able to leave cells for education, work or religious purposes.

The concert was videotaped and will be shown later in the week to those in lockup.

Father Joe Ross, Catholic chaplain to the prison, spoke to the choir yesterday in preparation for their visit.

"It's a miserable, hard life there. That's why something like music and a whole crowd of young people can be so nourishing for them," said Ross, who is a former rector of Morrissey Hall.

The choir members were able to talk to the prisoners after the concert who were seemingly very receptive to the choir's ministry. Also, several choir members said that the experience dispelled their myths about what they had expected of being at a maximum security prison.

"I was impressed by how respectful and courteous they were," said junior Ryan Murray.

"I think we were worried that they would be judging us, or that they would think we were judging them, but it ended up feeling like we were all equal," said sophomore Kaileen Banner.

Director Steve Warner felt that the concert was most importantly a time of prayer and dialogue for the inmates.

"I think that the conversation and interchange is far more important than the music—if anything, the music is an invitation to the conversation," said Warner.

This was the choir's second trip to the prison. Some of the current choir members had visited the prison in May of 1997.

Warner emphasized the importance of ministry to people in the prisoners' situation.

"It's one of the most profound sacramental experiences we have as a group," said Warner. "We don't spend a lot of time nowadays talking about the corporal works of mercy, and this is one of them."

Lice

has gotten out of control. Dubay expressed her disappointment in the reactions from fellow dorms on campus, stating that nearly dorms have posted signs persuading students to stay away from McGlinn. Lice is a very curable ailment, according to Thompson. Infected students were given medication such as special shampoos and advice on washing bedding and clothing worn within 48 hours of detection. Simple screenings can detect lice and Health Services has screened more than 400 students, said Thompson.

"Lice is not a death sentence," added Thompson, who said a person can only contract lice through direct contact with an infected person. Using an infected person's hair accessories or having intimate relations with an infected person might facilitate lice contraction, according to Thompson.

Sister Kathryn Haas of McGlinn stated that the dorm has taken many measures in assuring the removal of the problem, such as extensive vacuuming and recommending that residents get screenings.

"McGlinn went beyond the call of duty," said Thompson, who said the dorm "did a great job" in cleaning up and trying to get rid of the lice.

The problem is near eradication, according to Thompson, and any student is free to take advantage of the Health Services' screenings.

Iraq claims victory in U.N. crisis

Associated Press

BAGHDAD

After backing down over U.N. weapons inspectors, Iraq declared itself the victor in the dispute.

Iraqi Vice President Taha Yassin Ramadan told state-run television that Iraq had been able "to prove to the whole world that our views are correct" and that the Americans were misguided.

"This is the foundation and the basis of our victory," he declared.

It was the first official reaction to the weekend's tumultuous events, and the rhetoric obviously reflected the local consumption in a country weary of U.N. sanctions and of being isolated, even from its Arab neighbors.

The newcast made no mention of President Clinton, who said that if Iraq does not abide by its promise to allow U.N. weapons teams to come back and work freely, it will suffer a military attack.

"Iraq has backed down," Clinton declared in a news conference at the White House. "But that is not enough. Now Iraq must live up to its obligations."

He said U.S. forces would stay in the Gulf and warned: "We remain ready to act."

Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz criticized Clinton's vow that the American president would not accept any further conditions, saying: "Iraq does not accept any further conditions." He added, but the resolution and agreement with Annan appeared to cover Clinton's demands for complete access for the inspectors and full Iraq cooperation with them.

The United States and Britain began building up their forces after Iraq suspended cooperation last month with the U.N. Special Commission, which is charged with overseeing the elimination of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

Iraq on Saturday notified Annan that it had reversed its decision. But the United States—which called off an attack at the 11th hour to study Iraq's statement—did not accept it until Sunday, when Washington was assured by the Iraqi regime that there were no conditions attached.

Washington had complained that a two-page annex to Aziz's letter to Annan amounted to conditions.

Incident raises concern over Kosovo

Associated Press

Western officials raised new concerns about the safety of peace monitors in Kosovo after Yugoslav soldiers died in a car explosion Sunday over a car containing U.N. diplomatic observers.

The incident, which caused no injuries, came at a time when hopes were rising for progress toward a settlement that could end months of violence in the restive Serbian province.

Serb authorities, attempting a new initiative, invited ethnic Albanian separatists to hold face-to-face talks this week.

Ethnic Albanian leaders, who have rejected several such invitations in the past, made no immediate response to the offer by Serbian President Milan Milutinovic, made late Saturday and reported by state media on Sunday.

But the latest invitation, following a flurry of U.S.-led diplomacy, could signal that the Serbs and ethnic Albanians are closer to direct negotiations.

A Serb crackdown on ethnic Albanian separatists that started in February has left hundreds dead, mostly Albanian civilians, and made refugees of hundreds of thousands more.

The province's ethnic Albanian majority favors independence, while Serbs consider Kosovo an integral part of Serbia, the dominant republic of Yugoslavia. Scattered violence has continued despite an Oct. 12 agreement in which Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic pledged to halt his offensive and start talks aimed at restoring Kosovo's autonomy.

The shooting incident on Sunday prompted the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe to demand an explanation from Serb and Yugoslav authorities.

A spokesman said a car from the Kosovo Diplomatic Observers Mission containing three Americans and an ethnic Albanian translator was near Dulje, 22 miles south of the provincial capital, Pristina, when it encountered an army column coming the other way.

As the car passed, an army vehicle equipped with a heavy machine gun fired a burst overhead, OSCE spokesman Duncan Bultovni said.

Serbs and Yugoslav authorities gave no immediate explanation for the incident, but Bultovni said the observers' car was clearly identifiable as belonging to the diplomatic mission. Its bright orange color and lettering are unique to vehicles of the Kosovo observer mission.

Cruise ship visits N. Korea

New York

A chartered South Korean cruise ship arrived early Sunday in North Korea on a test run for sightseeing tours of the reclusive communist nation's scenic east coast, touring observers said.

The 28,700-ton Hyundai Kumkang arrived at Jung Jon Port near Diamond Mountain on the North's eastern coast a day after leaving South Korea's Donghae port, said Seoul's Hyundia group, which is organizing the tours. Instead of taking a four-hour coastal route, the ship took a longer route, sailing out to open sea and then moving back into North Korean waters.

The route was planned in deference to North Korea's concerns about sensitive military facilities located along the coast near the border with South Korea, Hyundai officials said. The ship carried about 400 South Korean tour guides and pilots on an official two-day tour.

Notre Dame works to dispell Y2K problems

By LAURA ROMPF

In order to tackle the Y2K computer problem, Notre Dame has formed a "Year 2000 Project." The project has compiled an inventory of systems at risk, while establishing leadership and accountability programs.

The Office of Informational Technologies (OIT) has developed personalized software with four-digit codes so it will not be affected. The University is also bringing in external assistance to aid the leadership team on the project, said Kathleen Anthony, director of Audit and Advisory Services. "Overall the University is working hard to identify its exposure to the Year 2000 related problems," Anthony said. "I firmly believe that the entire University community is affected by the Year 2000 issues. It is critical that the entire community becomes aware of the risks and how they can assist in the effort," she said.

Anthony explained that the challenges facing Notre Dame's Year 2000 Project are not unique.

"The University of Notre Dame's concerns are similar to those faced by other large, technology-driven organizations," said Anthony. "Notre Dame's operations, both academic and administrative, are highly automated." Computer hardware, software and applications used by faculty, staff and students could work improperly or fail, as could the equipment used in research and teaching, Anthony said. Facilities and utilities will also be affected.

"I see this as the most critical," Anthony said. "Without certain operations, the campus cannot function at all."

Notre Dame depends on its own power plant and could be harshly effected by the Year 2000 problem. Utility systems such as security, fire safety and food services may also be at risk. Anthony explained. I believe the most important aid to combat this problem is communication and recognition of the significance of the issues facing our world," Anthony said. "Governments, organizations and individuals need to understand what the Year 2000 problem is and how it may impact them."

Some view the Year 2000 issue as an isolated computer problem that will never affect them, but it is probable that everyone will be affected in some way. Understanding the issue is key to minimizing the impact it will have, Anthony said.

"Because of this automation and inter-reliance, no one can accurately predict the depth and breadth of the problems the turn of the century may bring," Anthony said.

Prof studies baseball salaries

Special to The Observer

Major League Baseball teams in pursuit of Randy Johnson, Lilian Brown and other marquee free agents should avoid paying these stars significantly more than other players, according to a new study by a Notre Dame researcher.

Matt Bloom, assistant professor of management, found that baseball teams with wider pay ranges had poorer on-field and financial performances than those with relatively equal salary structures. The won-loss records, final standings, attendance, gate receipts, total income and franchise values all were worse for teams with more imbalanced pay distribution.

What the Administration Doesn't Want You to Know

I have been following The Observer's coverage of the debate over the alleged discrimination of homosexuals and gays on campus; specifically, the protection which would be secured with the inclusion of "sexual orientation" in the University's non-discrimination clause. It is important that the Academic Council is investigating allegations of discrimination in hiring practices by Dr. Woo.

What is unfortunate is that all of this research and its results are being kept a secret. Conceivably, the whole issue could have been debated behind closed doors and the campus community might never discover the findings. After all, it is the exception rather than the rule at Notre Dame that all committees which meet at the highest levels are open to the public.

"NOW YOU MAY NOT AGREE WITH THE GAY RIGHTS CASE, BUT IF CENSORSHIP AND DISCRIMINATION CAN HAPPEN TO ANYONE, IT CAN HAPPEN TO YOU."

of Malloy or Warner be sworn to secrecy. Well, I know for a fact that neither Dr. Woo's allegations nor the Big Ten decision are the only issues about which the campus community is being kept in the dark.

Last spring, the unrecognized alumni group, GALA-ND/SMC, the Gay and Lesbian Alumni of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College, 750 members strong, gave a $160,000 scholarship to then-junior Mark Massoud some of your student representatives to the Board of Trustees this year, toward his study of civil rights. Lesbiah Alumni/ae of Notre Dame and the Gay and Lesbian Alumni/ae of Notre Dame/Saint Mary's College. It does not necessarily reflect the positions of the administration of other institutions. The views are expressed in the editorial and editorial opinions, and signed articles appearing in the pages of the organization of the Gay and Lesbian Alumni Association of Notre Dame/Saint Mary's College community and in the readers. The editors express a strong desire to establish a forum for the free expression of varying opinions through letters and editorials...

The Observer's coverage has been characterized by its sources, the University of Notre Dame to the Observer. This University is supposed to be an "independent" newspaper. A newspaper which, by the way, charges you an annual fee. I am sure there is a reason given in the by GLND/SMC to buy advertising space. Not only because to do so would imply that they could not buy an ad in The Observer today, I wonder if the Feminist Collective is able to...

Did you know that this blatant censorship was taking place? Of course not... The Observer is not allowed to tell you. They have to go along with the rules or risk being threatened by the administration. Clearly this is wrong.

Unfortunately, it is only the tip of the iceberg concerning censorship on campus. Imagine how the priests in charge must deal with Notre Dame Magazine... After all, the previous alumni donors and your own parents read that. Doesn't this make you angry? Aren't you bright enough to read about issues and incidents and make decisions for yourselves? Aren't you, as future alumni, concerned that current alumni are being treated this way? The administration will deny it, but you know it's true.

This University is supposed to be the way in Christian values, human rights and sensitivity to the oppressed. If they hide what they don't want people to see, then I suppose it looks like they do.

Until this administration stops censorship and prevents discrimination, Our Lady will hang Her head in shame. Rather than being the stellar example for all, Malloy and Warner have made the current Notre Dame a disgrace to its founding father — as well as to the Father of us all.

CAPPY'S CORNER

Megan and Marnie

In between thoughts of term papers, football bowl speculation and the upcoming frozen tundra season, take some time to give thought to your parents. A dozen of my Notre Dame classmates have children in the Class of 2002, so I feel a connection, by proxy, to the student body. We old geezers may seem irrelevant and out of touch, but we are very proud of all the accomplishments of the students at Notre Dame, St. Mary's and Holy Cross, even though we may shudder at flying ounces and other occasional interperate behavior. Please realize that most of our parental concern is based upon fear that our children will regress back to the days of yesteryear.

Every father is proud of his children, but fortunately, I have a,um, "medal of honor". Megan (25) and Sarah (23) have each bit home runs as daughters. Neither has ever given me two minutes of lust sleep — I am sure I have been more on the "short list" than they have been on mine. Sorry, girls.

Megan inherited at least two traits from me. She enjoys writing and she can hit a baseball very well. She gave Little League Baseball a try, when we lived in Los Angeles, as one of our daughter's many interests. I was pressed into service as the team's first base coach, where I had the pleasure of watching the kids work to improve, as the season wore on. I particularly enjoyed watching the interaction of the several nationalities and ethnic backgrounds represented by the entire world's children could play baseball together! By the end of the year, Megan had worked herself up from 15th player (last) to the starting right fielder on the team which finished one half game out of first place.

The baseball highlight of the year came when Megan scored her first run. As she sped, glacier-like, into home plate (third infantry), tears of joy streamed down her face (and also down the cheeks of the first base coach). The humorous highlight of her diamond career came when informed Megan that she had earned an RBI, on a ground ball with a runner on third. She ran over to the bench to tell her teammates "I got an RBI!". She then ran back to me and said "What's an RBI?"

Later, while I was working in law enforcement, Megan joined a Police Explorer Post. She quickly became known as the stars, led her platoon at the State Academy and being the top performer at police special events. This was quite an accomplishment in a boy-dominated program. Megan also handled herself in a very professional manner when she inherited the task of taking visitors on a pig farm tour from the earliest days, if Marnie were offered a credit card, she would immediately ask "Can I give one to Megan?" Marnie is in high school (too credit card-free for her dad). My favorite gift from her is an audio tape she made, singing me several songs. She made the tape at a time I was traveling on business and missed the girls very much. It still means a lot to me.

My favorite humorous Marnie-story occurred when I sug­gested that she have a slumber party for her playmates. She ran to her neighbor's house saying "We're going to have a slumber party!" A few minutes later, she came back asking me "What's a slumber party?"

Megan and Marnie have both done well in the area which scares all dads to death. They each married good guys (Jay and Donal), who treat them well. Megan has an 18 month old named Hunter (I call him "Hunter the Nose Tackle"). She has a second child (a quarterback or shortstop?) coming in April. Marnie works herself up from 15th player (last) to the starting right fielder on the team which finished one half game out of first place.

The University's role is to provide me with the means to further my education. As a Catholic institution, this school's role is to provide me with the means to further my faith if I choose it for me. They are not here to mold me into a hypocritical being incapable of living in harmony with others. There is always a common ground in this world — it's called love.

As to your proposals, do you honestly believe that anyone with any intelligence does not see that your real purpose for suggesting resignation as a form of protest is to remove all those that think or believe differently than you? It's not as permanent as Hitler's method, but the thought comes from the same kind of closed mind. No one has asked you to withdraw from the University to publicize your disapproval of the "secularism" pervading campus life. Your second suggestion is just as insightful as the first: offer money to teachers that will edit and change history or their politics, etc. until they fit your views.

Next I suppose you'll suggest lynching those that do not conform to your rules or burning books that contradict your viewpoint. This University has greater problems in need of attention. Spoon-feeding the "children" their opinions should not be its foremost concern.
Who are you, Joe Black?

V O I C E

Director: Martin Brest

Starring: Brad Pitt, Anthony Hopkins, Claire Forlani, Queen Latifah and Jeffrey Tambor

Allison is head-set on Anthony Hopkins as he approaches age 65. His oldest daughter is about to die. His only child and bearing heavy thoughts during a perfor­mance, Pat (Danny DeVito) attempts to pay gambling debts, Pat earns our sympathy immediately as well as William's. When Death leaves, of course, his daughter's death. The relationship between William and Joe is much more intriguing, as is Judith's. Judith loudly vocalizes her thoughts during a perfor­mance, and perhaps even a hint of truth.

Edith Wharton's "House of Mirth." She imagines jumping out of the win­ dow, killing herself, her ex-husband and his new wife as well as his life. At night, Judith frequ­ents an Upper east side nightclub where Liz Bailey (Queen Latifah) performs regularly. Sitting alone and drunk while attempt­ ing to drown her sorrows, Judith luidly vocalizes her thoughts during a perfor­mance, Liz consoles her and they become friends. They also comme­terize with each other on their problems with men. Liz: What kind of religious or theological message is this? I'm afraid of confusing things, so I will not, but one thing is clear. It is a film that throws him the party, and it is interesting to see the contrast between Joe and the young dasher that he was in the coffee shop. The relationship that develops between Joe and Susan is not immediately attractive to the audience. But the relationship that develops out in your kids."

Martin Brest's oddly intriguing but often unsuccessful "Meet Joe Black" takes on a lot of weight with its subject matter and presentation. It mixes death with romance, fantasy, wit and triteness with genuineness. It is particularly difficult to evaluate because it is attractive to its audience in many ways. But it may also fail due to some bad ideas that are more or less dead on arrival.

The film stars Anthony Hopkins as William Parrish, an enormously successful founder of a large communi­cations firm, who is approaching age 65. His oldest daughter is about to die. Her real-life purgatory is juxtaposed with Judith's. In a touching con­versation between two people, yet the dialogue in general lacks the kind of wit that should characterize such a film. Ultimately, "Living Out Loud" is a film that can thrive silently.

As the trailer told us all) is not really founded upon anything, and has no real motivation.

Whether playing a greedy, conniving prop­er­t­y owner or a skilled elevator opera­tor, he always remains convincing. Holly Hunter is gritty and intelligent in a role that requires her to play a fallen character in one scene and a vibrant woman in the next. Her personal trainer must be congratulated. Ms. Hunter exhib­its better biceps than Linda Hamilton in "Terminator 2."

But these strong performances do not completely make up for the slow pace. Ultimately, "Living Out Loud" is a film that pushes its performers to a level that hurts the cohesiveness of the plot and leaves the movie dying silently.
CROSSING ENEMY LINES

Notre Dame did not unleash a secret weapon on Saturday. It came out with the same artillery and caught Navy with its guards down. The Irish rushing attack shredded the Midshipmen defense, gaining 261 yards, primarily off the efforts of senior tailback Autry Denson and senior quarterback Jarious Jackson.

"We knew Navy could give us a fight because they're the type of team that goes down till the end," Jackson said. "But we definitely wanted to come out and make a statement."

Fans got a rare glimpse at the threat of Jackson's true speed and rushing capability at Jack Kent Cooke stadium in front of a record crowd. His 33-yard run in the second quarter gave Notre Dame only a few seconds of something they have been waiting for all year.

A quarterback that was not afraid to run the ball fits 71 yards on the ground came only second to the top rusher on the team and now all-time leading rusher in Notre Dame history, Denson.

The true story of the game rested with Notre Dame's rushing weapon. His quiet and relatively tame style hinted nothing at the tailback's dominance in the record books.

On first-and-ten on the Notre Dame 28-yard line, Denson took the hand-off and ran for 7 yards and into the top spot as Notre Dame's all-time leading rusher. His 107-yard performance against the Midshipmen dethroned former leader Allen Pinkett.

"Any time you can shut a team out whose offense is as prolific as Navy, it's a huge accomplishment," head coach Bob Davie said. "We're excited to be 8-1."

To the crowd, the milestone went relatively unnoticed. An unfamiliar crowd, an unfamiliar stadium but a familiar performance highlighted Saturday's win. The hoopla which surrounds the reserved Denson, he always gives credit where credit is due.

"The greatest thing about this record is that it is a team record, something we can all share," Davie said. "I'm fortunate to have a cast like I do."

Jackson racked up impressive numbers in Saturday's shutout not only on the ground but in the air as well, he completed 12 of 14 for 159 yards. His longest completion of the day came on a 25-yard pass to Bobby Brown in the second quarter.

"The defense played extremely hard," Davie said. "They also took advantage of some turnovers in the game. They created some turnovers as well."

Davie integrated a lot of Notre Dame's up-and-coming talent in the fourth quarter. Tony Fisher took a majority of the hand-off, including a 6-yard dash to the Navy 45. Backup quarterback Eric Chappell got some time in the fourth with freshman Arnoz Battle still nursing a shoulder injury.

This game went along like clockwork for the Irish player of the game

Autry Denson wrote his name into the record books, becoming the Irish's all-time leading rusher with 4,192 yards.

Defense provides capital punishment

For the second game in a row, the Irish defense turned in a dominant performance, leading to a 30-0 victory over Army on Monday in Chestnut Hill.

The Irish, giving up an average of 20.9 points per game this season, limited the Midshipmen to just seven points on the ground.

In addition, they allowed just 388 yards of total offense, marking the first time this season that the Irish defense has held a team under 400 yards.

Offensive Line: B

The Irish offensive line provided ample time for quarterback Remy Hamilton, who completed 12 of 21 passes for 159 yards and a touchdown.

Receivers: A-

Sophomore receiver John Denson had another strong game, catching seven passes for 127 yards and a touchdown.

Defensive Line: B-

Senior captain Howard led the brigade, accruing three tackles, three of which were unassisted, for a total of 30 tackles on the season.

Secondary: B

Senior safety Bob Davie said. "We've worked so hard to turn into a factor in the up front. That's going to be a factor in the up front. That's going to be a factor in the up front. That's going to be a factor in the up front.

Irish keep streaks alive, Denson shatters records

By BRIAN KESSLER Associate Sports Editor

Prior to Saturday, senior tailback Autry Denson had only formed former Irish star Allen Pinkett in an elevator last year at LSU. Three and a half hours and 107 rushing yards later, he received a phone call from the man whose school rushing record he just broke.

"He gave me a call right after the game," Denson said. "He just told me congratulations. He said he didn't think it could have happened to a better person and just encouraged me to keep going for the rest of the year.

"Allen Pinkett was one of the most exciting people I've ever seen in an elevator last year," head coach Bob Davie said. "I couldn't just throw it every down to keep Autry from breaking that record. It's a special moment. Being the all-time leading scorer is a heck of a thing."

Denson has now rushed for 4,192 yards in his career, placing him 15th in NCAA history.

"I'm proud of him," Davie said. "I gave him a game ball after the game. I told our team to let it sink in for a second after I say this guy just became the all-time leading scorer in Notre Dame history. That's a pretty strong statement."

The modest Denson, however, downplayed the accomplishment and proceeded to make wealth. "I would just like to congratulate my linemen there, the offensive line, all the way down to the scout team, because those are the guys that get up there and make it happen," Denson said. "The greatest thing about getting this record is that it's a team record, something we can all share. I'm fortunate to have a cast like I do."

Davie also spoke about Denson's unselfish attitude and commitment to helping the team win.

"I think the thing that's most exciting about Autry Denson is that he broke that record, but he was most upset about fumbling that ball," Davie said. "I think that's why Autry Denson has been such a leader for us and such a competitor. As great as that record is, Autry feels bad about that fumble."

For Davie, it's all business.

"Coach Strong asked me if I had anything special planned once I broke the record," Denson said. "I said, "What are you going to do after you break the record and I told him I'm just going to keep playing."

Denson kept playing right after he picked up the 47 yards necessary to break the record, he racked up another 20 on route to his third consecutive 1,000-yard rushing season, tying a Pinkett record. And after that, he kept going, all the way up to 107. With that, he eclipsed the century mark for the 22nd time in his career, breaking another one of Pinkett's records.

Yet on a day when two Notre Dame rushing records fell, two other less flamboyant streaks remained intact.

With the 30-0 shutout, Notre Dame continued its dominance over the Midshipmen, winning its 35th consecutive game over the Midshipmen. That streak is the longest winning streak by one team over an opponent. The last time the Middies beat the Irish, John Kennedy was president, and Heisman trophy winner Roger Staubach was quarterback for Navy. This year's Irish team was more concerned about the game and it's importance in the 1998 season, however.

"I never mentioned that winning streak one time," Davie said. "It has no effect on me, because when we play does not mean we're still going to be try to stop that fullback, still trying to stop that quarterback and if they're in that same offense, it'll be the same problem. So I don't think it's a factor."

"We just have to come out and play," Davie said. "It was kind of like the analogy Coach Roberts used all week. Going into a fight you don't ask the person how many previous fights they have won. You just end up trying to win. So that's the approach we took.

This Saturday's game also marked the 72nd time the two teams have met, the longest continuous intersectional rivalry in the country. Notre Dame and Navy also managed to sellout Jack Kent Cooke Stadium and drew the highest attendance (78,441) in the stadium's two-year history, surpassing the Washington Redskins previous record of 78,200.

"I talked to our players about that," Davie said. "I said certainly don't take anything for granted. We're coming into Jack Kent Cooke Stadium. It's the first college football game played in here.

Navy sank courtesy of holes like this created by the Notre Dame offensive line.

We're selling this stadium out. It's a huge credit to you guys and it's also a huge responsibility to go out there and play how Notre Dame football is supposed to be played."

Davie was even a little overwhelmed.

"Coming in here and playing Navy in front of a sell-out stadium, 80,000 people, it looked to me like the whole Navy was here," Davie said. "I'm glad that the Persian Gulf situation got quieted down. We might have been behind in the race over there. Boy, I looked up in those stands and saw so many Naval people up there."

Denson and the Irish, however, stole the show.

"It's an honor for me just to be mentioned with Jerome Bettis and guys like Allen Pinkett," Denson continued. "It hasn't set in yet. It's just an honor for me."

Congratulations Autry.

GAME NOTES AND QUOTES

Autry Denson broke two of Allen Pinkett's records. He surpassed the 4,192-yard record by rushing 107 yards against Navy. Denson also tops the charts for racking up his 22nd, 100-yard rushing game.

Jack Kent Cooke Stadium, the two-year-old rock-star's stadium, was packed with 78,441 fans, breaking the record for attendance.

The sell-out marks the 106th sellout in the last 122 games involving Notre Dame.

The Irish have scored points in every quarter of their last five games (20 quarters), after failing to score in the fourth quarter against Stanford.

With 13 points in the third quarter, Notre Dame has now outscored its opponents 81-3 in that period.

Navy has dropped 35 straight games to the Irish and 28 to ranked opponents. Notre Dame was the fifth-ranked team this season to defeat the Midshipmen.

The last time Notre Dame blanked an opponent was the 62-0 win over Rutgers. The game was Lou Holtz's final game coaching in Notre Dame Stadium.

Head coach Bob Davie:

"Any time you shut out a team 30-0, especially an offense as prolific as Navy, it's a huge accomplishment."

"In the first half, our offense struggled with penalties. I never saw that many holding penalties in my career."

Quarterback Jarious Jackson:

"We know Navy would give us a fight because they're the type of team that goes down till the end. But we definitely wanted to come out and make a statement."

Navy head coach Charlie Weisberg on Notre Dame:

"They are playing with a different attitude. It used to be you would see a guy taking a down off every now and then. They didn't do that."

Navy defensive tackle Jason Snider on his last game against Notre Dame:

"They have three more years left to beat Notre Dame. It was my last shot and Jason's (Wolf) last shot, but I'm proud of these guys."

"Once again we are an 8-1 team," Davie said. "We just won a game, 49-0 last week, and all of us look ahead at the improvement we can make. Davie and Co. feel that the team still are somewhat in a recharger mode in the games. He maintains that with each week that passes the game becomes more and more excited about the forthcoming games. With each game that Notre Dame adds to its ever-growing record, the more exciting it becomes."

The question remains will Notre Dame have enough artillery to fend off the competition and regain its place at the top.

What is truth?

Do advertising agencies possess the power to confront this question?

I wish I had a career

I am talking about Will Smith. The Fresh Prince. The man who was lucky enough to marry Jada Pinkett. Can he do it?

In 1996, Smith starred in "Independence Day," as the fighter pilot who saves the world from invading alien beings.

The film ended up making more than $360 million in the U.S. Moreover, it gave Smith some box-office clout that would help him the following summer.

The summer of 1997 came, and once again, Mr. Smith

What is important is honesty in today's society?

Do advertising agencies possess the power to confront this question? Should they have this power?

In "Crazy People," Emory, played by Dudley Moore, roks his job and his sanity to advocate his answer to these pressing question.

Emory is an ad writer. For years he's been the man behind the scenes, pumping out lies in the form of spacy slogans and catchy jingles. But one day he just can't do it anymore. After experiencing an overnight revelation, much like Jerry McCarver, he realizes that he no longer wants to produce tired phrases; but instead wants to introduce a new concept into the world of advertising -- the truth.

Of course, the immediate consequence of such a statement is the loss of his job. His boss just can't understand why people would want to buy a Volvo after reading, "They're black, but good," or why Americans would wish to fly with an airline that advertises, "Fly with us -- most of our passengers arrive at their destinations alive."

Thus, Emory not only finds himself unemployed, but placed in a mental institution by his close friend, played by Paul Reiser.

The plot takes a sharp turn when the faithful ads are accidentally run. They soon appear in magazines, on television and on the sides of city buses. To everyone's great surprise, they are a huge success.

As a result, Emory's greedy boss immediately attempts to extract him from the institution. But Emory has

The plot and some specific scenes of the movie are a tad off-the-wall and cheesy. This is primarily noticeable at the end, when most of the antics make way for the serious,纽带-free plot. But for the majority of the movie, it is hard to stop laughing long enough to get bored with the "crazy" plot.

But the most important lesson for Emory comes from Kathy, a beautiful fellow patient played by Daryl Hannah. She shows Emory that hoping, believing and loving are necessary aspects of life.

Without exception, this movie is extremely funny. Most of this humor is in a result of foul language or sexual allusions coming from the mouths of the mental patients. Some may find this aspect a bit offensive, but in no way does it detract from the overall humor of the movie.

WHAT more can you ask from one man?

Well, this week Smith opens "Enemy of the State," which was heavily promoted during the summer season of blockbusters as the one fall/winter film that would rival the summer box-office numbers.

But there is one thing notably missing from the film: aliens. It will be interesting to see how the special effects of his earlier successes were, and how much of that success was because of Smith's charisma and comic appeal. There is no doubt that the film will open to respectable figures at the box-office, which is really its only measure of success, because "Enemy of the State" is not a likely Oscar contender. And although the next couple of months will be loaded with studios' last attempts to make money, "Enemy of the State" is truly a unique film amidst the kid movies and depressing dramas that typify the season.

But the film does not open until November 20, so until then, speculation is pretty much the only tool we may use to discuss Smith's career. Next Monday, though, the people will have spoken. And Mr. Smith will know if his career will forever be overshadowed by little green men and earth-saving missions.

...and Friday night's season opener served as a good example.

Showing that age still beats youth, a veteran Miami of Ohio team fought off a lackluster first half and a feisty Irish squad while exploiting Notre Dame's youth in the second to defeat the Irish 76-62 at the Joyce Center Friday night.

After holding Wally Scozzieback and Damon Frieson to four points in the first half, the duo combined for 19 in the second in leading a charge that put away the Irish.

"They made some adjustments in the second half," senior guard Anton Wyche said. "As people started to wear down he was able to get into a rhythm. It's hard to start a player like him (Scozzieback) for an entire game."

But it was really the Red Hawk defense that led to the Notre Dame downfall.

"We got after them defensively and I thought that was the turning point in the game," Miami coach Charlie Coles said. "I thought ND had a great game plan in the first half and our players adapted in the second."

"They ratcheted up their defense and really came after us," MacLeod said. "We were talking about keeping composed, but it's hard to do when a guy's in your mouth."

That defense caused 11 second half Notre Dame turnovers and Miami led by as many as 15 points. It's a veteran team we have and they adjusted," Coles said. "Notre Dame played harder than we did the first half, but in the second we played tough basketball and it was pretty to watch."

"We had a good pace in the first half," said senior Phil Hickey who had 10 points. "In the second half the effort was there but we just weren't executing and we made some mistakes and they took advantage of those."

Behind 11 first-half points from freshman Troy Murphy the Irish got out to a 22-13 lead. The Redhawks got a big lift from their bench as junior Jason Nettles started. Miami dialed long distance four times in a three and a half minute span and Murphy outscored his squad a 22-24 lead and a 27-26 lead at the break.

The Irish offense stalled when the Redhawk defense picked up its intensity and Murphy only got one field goal attempt in the second half.

"You can blame me for that," MacLeod said about Murphy's lack of opportunities. "I didn't get the ball to him. That's my job as the coach. We need his offense to be productive and consistent."

Murphy certainly showed he has the ability to score on the Division One level as he scored 19 points and had six rebounds.

"It was interesting," Murphy said of his first collegiate game. "I got put up by No. 5 and that kind of hurt us. There were a lot of different situations and it was something I've never experienced before."

"I thought Troy Murphy did a good job," MacLeod said. "He got a little bit of a look and he can really score."

Midway through the second half the Irish made a mini-run behind play of Antoni Wyche who scored eight of his 16 points in an 84-second span that brought the Irish to within five and brought the crowd of 7,395 to its feet.

"Tone had a big night for us and gave us a great effort," MacLeod said.

Unfortunately, the only thing the crowd in the South dome of the Joyce was cheering about late in the game was when the public address announced the score of the Notre Dame/Bowling Green hockey game in the North dome.

"We have young players and we have a lot of work to do," MacLeod said.

Abortion, euthanasia and capital punishment demean the lives of countless individuals in our society.

Gather with us in Eucharistic Adoration to pray for an end to the culture of death.

Jesus is here with us in the Eucharist to give us answers—answers that will lead us to truth, happiness and peace. In this culture of death, it is easy for people to become weary and indifferent to God and His gift of life. People often fall short of their obligation to care for and nurture the spiritual and physical lives of themselves and others. Eucharistic Adoration gives a person the opportunity to nurture his own spiritual life, as well as the spiritual lives of others (through prayer for them.) Prayer also protects the physical lives of those endangered by abortion, euthanasia and other forms of violence. It is only through the grace which comes from prayer that others' hearts can be changed from seeking death to loving life. Christ gives us the strength to press on in our battle for life. In order to be Christ-like in our service to preserve life, we must be filled with His life through prayer.

We ask you to join us in prayer for life at Eucharistic Adoration.

What is Eucharistic Adoration?

God is present to us in many ways in our world, but He is especially present to us in the Eucharist. As Roman Catholics, we believe that Jesus Christ, who lived 2000 years ago, is truly present in the Eucharist. In Eucharistic Adoration, the Host is placed in a monstrance, in order for us to be able to come and pray. Jesus is always hidden in the tabernacle, but in adoration He is exposed so that we can come and kneel before Him, face to face, and speak with God. When Jesus is exposed like this, He can never be left alone. Thus, people sign up to be responsible to come and pray with Him for a certain amount of time (usually ½ - 1 hour) every week.

Why should I go?

If Jesus were to come to the JACC, wouldn't you come and stand in line for hours just to talk to Him for a minute? Even if you weren't Christian, wouldn't you be at least interested in this God so many people talk about? Well, Jesus is truly present here on campus—in the Eucharist. IN ADORATION YOU HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY TO GO AND SPEAK WITH GOD FACE TO FACE. You can confide in Him, plead with Him, question Him. And if you sit quietly enough, He will inspire you with answers.

What do I do when I am there?

When you enter the chapel, you should genuflect as a sign of reverence to Jesus. It is common practice during Adoration to genuflect on two knees, instead of just one (like you do whenever you enter a chapel.) You can stand, sit, or kneel—whatever helps you pray. And then you pray. There are many ways to pray: you can do spiritual reading; you can pray a rosary; you can sit in silence; you can even just talk to Jesus—like you would to a friend. The most important thing is that you love Him and allow Him to love and strengthen you.

What does the Church think?

"Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament, whether in a pyx or a monstrance, is a recognition of the wondrous Presence of Christ in the sacrament and stimulates us to unite ourselves to Him in a spiritual communion. It is, accordingly, eminent in harmony with the worship which we give Him in spirit and truth..."

ty and capitalized by stealing the wind from UCLA's sails.

"I was open, and I figured I might as well take a chance," she said. "We played to build momentum each time we came down the court."
Both players took advantage of speed against their pairings all across the court. Erica Gomez, an all-American can­di­date guard, has held in check with only six points. Her inability to score effected her floor presence as well, as Ivey and Green "continued to wreak havoc."
"I just wanted to come out there and play my game within the system," said Green about leading her team over the opposition. "I just wanted to play a smart game and stay in control.
Today, Niele and my teammates were looking for me, and I was the one today."
Even with Riley fouling out in the second half, the Bruin inside game was unable to come alive.
After Martin and Pearson combined for 28 in the first half, forwards Kelley Siemon and Diana Braendly led the switch to the zone defense that kept UCLA off target.

"They went into a 2-3 zone and they had one in front of me and one behind me," said Martin. "That contributed to the lack of scoring in the second. I was also at the high post a lot more in the second half, too."
The win is the school's 400th ever and starts the season at 1-0.
Irish keep Bulldogs on leash

For Yale head coach Dick Kuchen, returning to Notre Dame was supposed to be a form of homecoming.

Before heading eastward for his own coaching position, Kuchen was an assistant coach for the Irish basketball squad.

For three years, he helped the legendary Digger Phelps to post-season success, including the team's only Final Four berth in 1978.

Before heading eastward for his own coaching position, Kuchen was an assistant coach for the Irish basketball squad.

For three years, he helped the legendary Digger Phelps to post-season success, including the team's only Final Four berth in 1978.

It turned out to be a bitter-sweet reunion for Kuchen, however, as the Irish earned their first win of the season with a 64-62 win over Yale.

"It was good to be back," Kuchen said about his return to campus. "I haven't been back since last year's reunion. Certainly this is a great institution, and they should take pride in the way they run their athletic department."

Like Friday's season opener against Miami, the Irish began the game with a 10-0 run on route to a 12-2 lead. After calling a quick timeout, the Bulldogs stepped up their defense and closed the gap. The counter-rally was capped three-pointer by Yale's Brad Reusch, which cut Notre Dame's lead to 21-20 with 6:48 left in the half.

Despite their difficulties with perimeter defense, the Irish still found a way to answer each rally that the Bulldogs attempted. After another Reusch three-pointer by Yale's Brad Reusch, which cut Notre Dame's lead to one point, senior Antoni Wyche drove for the basket for a layup, making the basket and drawing the foul. He then completed the three-point play to help push the team to a 32-27 lead at the half.

Freshman forward Troy Murphy quickly picked up his third foul to start the second half, but, in a surprise move, did not take a seat on the bench in order to stay out of foul trouble.

As it turned out, the decision paid off, as the freshman duo of him and David Graves scored the next 16 points for the Irish en route to a seven-point lead.

"Troy and David can score," MacLeod remarked on the two freshmen. "They both have the ability to get the job done. David's got great instincts, but Troy's been getting in early foul trouble.

The Bulldog offense continued to successfully hit the perimeter shot, however, closing their way back to within striking position. Two straight treys by Reusch negated Graves and Murphy's efforts, as the three-pointer cut the lead to one point, within a basket for the seemingly unstoppable line. A three-pointer on the next possession, this time guard Onaje Woodpine, fell short, and the Irish walked away with their first victory of the season, a 64-62 win over Yale.

"This was a disappointing loss for us," Kuchen said, "because we were in a situation where we had opportunities. But I think our team, overall, left everything that they had out on the court.

Even with the positive result, MacLeod believes that it will take time for the team to gel.

"Obviously we have a while to go ... it's fairly clear," he said. "We had 17 turnovers, it's not an abnormal amount, but we started to get tentative. We're going to have to grow into that mode and understand that when they're open, they've got to shoot.

The Irish basketball squad will have a chance to add to their victory total later on this week, when they travel to Troy, Alabama, to battle Vanderbilt. The match with the Commodores is set for 7:30 p.m. this Wednesday.

ring before and we want everyone to experience what it feels like. So we're trying to help them get one.

With the half winding down the Irish looked to take comradeship, as the Irish won 3-0 in the NCAA's.

Net but had some help from her senior teammates, Sophomore Meotis Erikson couldn't find the advantage on the scoreboard as well as on the field. Boxx stepped up again as freshman Lindsey Jones took a pass from Kelly Lindsey, fought off a Wolverine defender and set up Boxx. Boxx did the rest as she lifted a ball from 20 yards out that fell over the outreached arms of Stewart and short of the cross bar. "The second goal was a real important goal because I really think that took the wind out of their sails," Petrucelli said. "In the second half they didn't seem to put up much of a fight."

Notre Dame out-shot the guests by a mark of 22-6 and junior Lakesia Beene found herself lonely in between the pipes as she made just two saves.

"I think we controlled the ball and we wanted to make sure we won every ball in the midfield," Boxx said. "We kept possession of it a lot better than the first game [against Michigan]." Petrucelli didn't see that much of a difference in the two games other than what the scoreboard read. "The difference was we scored three goals today and we scored early," Petrucelli said. "It kind of changed the complexion of the game. I bet you if you look at the stats they're pretty similar."

One difference could be that the Irish are riding a seven-game winning streak in which they have given up only two goals. The last Michigan game came on the heels of a 2-3 overtime loss to Seton Hall and a tie with Connecticut.

"Everyone is really confident with how we're playing right now," Gerardo said. "We trust each other, we're going out there and playing how we know we're capable of playing."

The Irish will look to continue to play at the top of their game as they have a date with No. 13 Nebraska Friday night in the third round of the NCAAs. Nebraska beat Texas A&M 7-0 on Sunday. "I think we're playing really well and we're doing it at the right time, at tournament time," Gerardo said. "This is when you want to be playing your best soccer. You set the goal to win the national championship at the beginning of the year and all the games leading up to the tournament are preparation for that. I think this is what we've been working for that and I think we're prepared."

made it sound easier than it really is: "It's mostly instinct; you have to judge where the puck will be when the defense shoots it and where the rebounds are going."

Bowling Green entered the third period tied 2-2 thanks to sophomore left wing Dan Carlson, when he executed a 2-on-1 with freshman center David Inman to perfection to make the score 5-2.

When the Irish took on Michigan on Saturday night, there was a glaring absence in their starting lineup. The player missing was Aniket Dhadphale, who suffered an injury late in the game at 2-2. Michigan's special teams, which managed to hold off the league's top power play three straight times through the first two periods.

But just as a lack of discipline had hurt the Irish earlier, it hurt Michigan equally later on. Sophomore defenseman Mike Van Ryan took a hooking after the whistle penalty with 1:06 to go in the second period.

Michigan managed to kill off the penalty going into intermission. However, at 26 seconds of the third period, Joe Dusbabek's soft shot seemed to rattle Blackburn, who lost control of the rebound, which Ben Simon smacked home to tie the game at 2-2.

Discipline again became an issue midway through the third, when senior Sean Ritchie earned himself a five minute major penalty (and a game misconduct) for checking from behind. Notre Dame's power play was once again shut down by Michigan's penalty-killing unit, as they failed to get off a shot through the first three and a half minutes of the power play. For a unit which has sparked so far this year, those five minutes were certainly the weakest the unit has looked, as they had trouble even gaining the blue line, let alone getting off a good shot.

The final five minutes of the third period, along with the five minute overtime, were tense and physical on both sides. Overall, the game was played much more evenly than the shots on goal might indicate. Notre Dame outshot Michigan 36-25, but quality chances were about even on the night.

"To come back against that team in that manner, to score a third period goal for a three point weekend against a top-ten team, was great," Pulino said.

MANHATTAN, Kan. After 29 years of losing to Nebraska, top-ranked Kansas State finally got a break for the biggest win in school history.

Kansas State linebacker Travis Ochs sacked Eric Crouch on fourth down by as much as his face mask with 2:32 left, but the officials missed the call and Kansas State pulled away for a 30-24 victory over nemesis Nebraska.

The Wildcats, who a 1-18 game winning streak is one behind UCLA for the best in the nation. The win clinched the Big 12 Conference title for the Wildcats (10-0, 7-0 Big 12 North), who defeated Nebraska for the first time since a 12-0 triumph in 1968.

It was their first win over the No. 11 Cornhuskers (8-2, 4-3) since a 29-14 triumph in 1959.

"It's starting to sink in right now," said Kansas State senior tight end Justin Swift. "To break the streak is exciting for our program.".

Ochs, who rushed the field twice prematurely, 30 seconds to finally tear down the goalposts.

I'm happy, I can't believe what you guys are saying about this, I'm humbled by it, in all honesty, because of how long it took. I'm so happy for those people tearing the goalposts down over there. It means so much to them, for those people who stuck through it, it's a great feeling and thin."

Ochs came untouched around the left side and Crouch spun and ducked to avoid him. Ochs grabbed Crouch's facemask and never let go, twisting his helmet nearly all the way around and throwing him to the turf at the Nebraska 20.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. The name Clint Steermon will go down in Tennessee lore and Arkansas infamy.

Steermon's inexplicable fumble with 1:43 remaining led to the winning touchdown as top-ranked Tennessee survived, 28-21, against No. 9 Arkansas in a battle of Southeastern Conference unbeaten.

The Razorbacks (8-1, 5-1 SEC West) appeared to have the game in hand, attempting to kill the clock at midfield with a two-point lead after stopping Tennessee on four straight downs. But Steermon, as he was rolling away from pressure, fumbled and tried to brace his fall by placing the football on the ground. The ball hit a player, and was recovered by defensive tackle Billy Raffield on the Arkansas 45-yard line.

"It was a sprintout pass and I was going to keep it and somehow I dropped it," said Steermon. "I went to the ground and put one hand down to catch myself and with the other one I just lost it. I don't know what happened.

Tennessee (9-9, 4-0 East) then handed the ball to Travis Henry on five consecutive plays, the last of which resulted in a one-yard touchdown run with 28 seconds to play. After a 15-yard penalty for excessive celebration, the Volunteers took a knee on the extra-point snap and moments later celebrated one of the biggest victories in school history.

"That was a great finish. I'm tremendously proud of the way our guys kept fighting," said Volunteers coach Phillip Fulmer. "This ranks right up there with the all-time best backfields. This was the most incredible crowd I can remember. They (the fans) were the 12th man in this game.

Henry, a sophomore, carried 32 times for 197 yards, including all 43 yards on the winning drive with runs of 15, 15, 11, one and one.

"We huddled up and Tee (Martin) and the offensive line told me to take it to the promised land," said Henry. "Coming into the game, I was more motivated since I got my first start. Arkansas has been a good defense. Once we figured out their scheme, we ran very well."

The Volunteers' stirring comeback lasted just moments after fellow No. 1 Kansas State kicked the winning field goal with 15 seconds to play.

"We've got a big game coming up in our last game of the season," said Steermon. "We've got a big game coming up in our last game of the season."

Icers hold CCHA lead with three-point weekend
By TED BASSANI
Sports Writer

The sixth-ranked Notre Dame hockey team maintained their first-place standing in the CCHA with a 6-2 win over Bowling Green on Friday, followed by a tense 2-2 tie against No. 7 Michigan on Saturday.

Notre Dame's record now stands at 8-1-2 (6-1-1), and their 12 points in conference have them in first place, one point ahead of Michigan State.

The team's 6-2 win over Bowling Green Friday was highlighted by senior Anket Dhadphale's first career hat trick. After Alain Kung gave the Falcons the early lead, Dhadphale got the Irish on the board when he one-timed a drop pass from Dan Carlson under the crossbar to tie the game at 1-1. His other two goals came in typi­cal fashion, on rebounds. With the team trailing 2-1 late in the second period, Dhadphale went to the net and scored on a rebound of Brian Erick's shot to tie the game. His third goal of the game came 9:05 of the third when he calmly lifted a rebound over a sprawled-out Mike Savard to make the score 4-2.

"The key was the timing of the goals," said coach Dave Puckin. "The first one got us back in 1-1. The second one came late in the second to tie it at two. The third one gave us breathing room at 4-2, so each goal was big for us."

The key to Dhadphale's game is how he uses his 6-foot-3 frame to get in over the other team in front of the net and under the crossbar. "I think they were a lot of intensity and we did not want to let them out of the zone," said head coach Muffet McGraw. "We came out with a lot of intensity."

Both scored career highs, Ivey 19 and Green with 23. "I was really pleased with our effort," said head coach Muffet McGraw. "We came out with a lot of intensity."

As to how he manages to get in over the other team in front of the net and under the crossbar, Dhadphale said, "I use my face to stop them."

Starting the season with a No. 6 win over Bowling Green and a 2-2 tie against Michigan, Chad Chipchase saw his first career action in the NCAA tournament. "I think early on the excitement of where you're at is a factor and for them it certainly was," Petrucelli said. "As time went on we got more control of the game."

Midway through the first half Wolverine netminder Carina Stewart was living on the edge as Anne Makinen hit the cross bar and she used her face to stop Gerardo from point-blank range.

Gerardo didn't miss her next opportunity. Boxx headed a Jen Grubb corner kick Gerardo's way who finshed it to put the Irish up 3-0 in the second round of the NCAA Tournament.

The No. 18 Wolverines, 3-0 seniors Monica Gerardo and Shannon Boxx came through as they lead fourth-seeded Notre Dame to a 3-0 win over Michigan in the second round of the NCAA Tournament.

Seniors Monica Gerardo and Shannon Boxx came through as they lead fourth-seeded Notre Dame to a 3-0 win over Michigan in the second round of the NCAA Tournament.

Gerardo scored two goals and Boxx added a goal and two assists as the Irish dominated most of the action.

"Before the game I said to the team that you seniors this is the time of year when you guys have got to step up and make it," Petrucelli said. "Those [Gerardo, Boxx and Laura Vanderberg] are the only three players on the team that have won a national championship and knows what it takes to win. This is the time of year when they have to step up and they obviously did. Those three had great games."

The No. 18 Wolverines came out looking for an upset as they had some of the better scoring chances in the early going. Michigan lost to Notre Dame 1-0 in double overtime three weeks ago and played with some extra adrenaline at the second round is the farthest a Michigan team has ever gone into the NCAA Tournament.

"I think that we stepped up as a team," Boxx said. "We had some opportunities early on but we got tired and Notre Dame is tournament experience.

"I think that we stepped up a little bit," Boxx said. "We know that we have to help our team win a national championship. We're the only ones that have had a
