'77 All-American killed en route to LSU game

Dave Huffman, Nat'l Championship center, dies in toll road crash

By NOREN GILLESPIE

Blood samples that could indicate whether alcohol was the cause of the car accident that killed former Irish center Dave Huffman, '78, have not yet returned, Indiana State Police said Sunday.

Huffman was pronounced dead at the scene early Saturday morning when his '97 Ford Taurus left the road and traveled 1,000 yards on the median before crashing into a guardrail and road sign. Huffman and passenger Stephen Leary, 30, were headed eastbound on the Indiana Toll Road before the accident occurred at the 20.8 mile marker, approximately one mile north of the Lake County corporate limits.

Leary, who was asleep at the time of the accident, told police that he and Huffman had left a bar in Chicago and were traveling to Notre Dame for Saturday's Notre Dame-LSU game.

"Alcohol is a probable factor in the crash," police said.

Leary was taken to Northlake Methodist Hospital for treatment of cuts and bruises to his face and upper torso, and was reported in stable condition in the intensive care unit Sunday night.

Huffman, who was a starting center for the Irish from 1976-78, played with quarterback Joe Montana of the '77 All-American team.

"The nature of the curriculum and the schedule are traditional, making it especially difficult for students who want to take evening classes. And those are the kinds of classes that the non-traditional students are looking for," she said.

Those students who do take classes at Saint Mary's said they like the schedule.

"The schedule is perfect for me. I love it. I am a full-time mom and the classes work out great," said non-traditional student Melissa Westgard.

Many of the non-traditional students enrolled this semester in classes are also employed at Saint Mary's. One of the benefits of having a job with the College is being able to take one class per semester.

A non-traditional student like Lynn Timmons takes full advantage of that. She works as a director of high school plays in addition to working at Saint Mary's and has taken theater classes on and off since 1989.

It is not a matter of chasing after great aspirations, though. Sometimes, as is the case with Timmons, students want to expand on a hobby or interest.

"I am now getting formal training for what I have done all my life. I have been doing theater since I was four," Timmons said.

But being an employee is not the only reason students come back to the classroom. Wingard, a graduate of Holy Cross College, is in her second...
Once upon a time a farmer's only horse ran away. The neighbor came to console the farmer, but the farmer merely replied, "Oh, it is what it is, good or bad?"

The next day the horse returned, bringing with it a herd of wild horses. This time the neighbor came over to congratulate the farmer, but again the farmer replied, "Who knows what is good or bad?"

On the third day, the farmer's son mounted one of the wild horses to break it and instead broke his leg when he was thrown. Upon hearing of the son's misfortune, the neighbor wished to share in the gladness. Butt seeing that he had a broken leg, they deferred him. The neighbor, upon hearing the news, wanted to share in the gladness. But the farmer, in his ultimate position, again replied, "Who knows what is good or bad?"

This story helps illustrate one of my views on life. Many not only think in terms of only a duality, of black and white, of good and bad, of light and dark. We sometimes can find ourselves too quick and fail to see the good in those that are bad, or even the bad in the good. We forget the interaction between these two forces and only see one over the other. Example of one how the good and bad are not clearly defined happened over the weekend. I was asked to attend a 24 hour retreat by a friend from Friday night to Saturday night. At first I reluctantly did attend this retreat. At first I did keep an open mind about what could happen. By the end of the retreat, I admitted that I really did not have a good idea of what was真心ing to occur. I enjoyed the retreats, I wasn't surprised. Despite the fact that I didn't enjoy myself, I would not say it was a waste of my time. What is good? What is bad? For what I was asked to bring a candle for one of the rituals that were planned. Because I didn't ask a candle myself, I had to ask one of my friends at Welsh Family Hall to hook me up. After the retreat I was feeling a little disappointed, but I decided that I should just return the candle to my friend in Welsh. After I managed to get past the doors and sneak into the dorm, I noticed that some of the areas were decorated. As I arrived at my friend's room, I asked her what the decorations were for. She confirmed my suspicions by saying that Welsh would be having their SYR that night. After checking out the decorations and saying "Wsup" to some of my lady friends, I proceeded to go back to my dorm. Before I left, however, I was stopped by one of my friends who didn't have a date yet. As I turned to talk to her, I noticed that I was in a different area of the dorm. I would say that was an excellent night after an unpleasant day. The question of good and bad has no real answers to my mind. Despite my disagreeable time at the retreat, how can I say that it was bad? If it wasn't for the retreat, then I wouldn't be asked to bring a candle, then I wouldn't need to ask for a candle from my friend in Welsh, then I wouldn't need to bring it back, then I wouldn't be asked to go to the SYR from another girl at Welsh, then I wouldn't have had a hiding place for a restful evening. But keeping in mind that I cannot truly say what is good and what is bad, I had to acknowledge that I couldn't judge if that night was indeed good for me. MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

Bar may face charges in student death

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. - A student who was being charged with the alleged beating death of a kitten has been dropped from the rolls, according to an official. Michael James Vega, of Madison, Wisc., was charged with cruelty to animals, disorderly conduct and underage consumption of alcohol stemming from an incident occurring Nov. 13. Vega, accompanied by his father, attended a hearing in E. Moore Hall by the Office of Student Life on Thursday to present his disciplinary action by the University. Since the possibility of suspension or expulsion, the student informed the panel he planned to withdraw from the course. The associate professor expressed "full responsibility and remorse" for his actions and plans to undergo alcohol counseling, according to a dean of students Tom Sloane. The 18-year-old pre-political science student was expected to leave the University for at least the next academic year.

Despite explosive applause that erupted every time a Florida & University representative stood and railed against the classification system, they called "legalization and inequality," the Board of Regents passed it unanimously Thursday evening.

The tier plan, which divides the state's 10 public universities into three levels with corresponding educational mission, has been vehemently opposed by some universitarians that would fall in the third-tier.

Remarks flung loudly from the crowd of about 200, echoing the message of speakers denouncing the plan.

"We've gained national recognition on our own," said FAMU student body president Kristin Tucker, whose comment was followed by a shout of "say it again.

"We've gained national recognition on our own," she repeated, emphasizing that FAMU supporters feel the classification system is not necessary because FAMU — an "underfunded gem" — has remained the institution — has survived for 111 years as the state's only historically black university.

Tucker presented a tier-plan alternative developed by FAMU's student government, which called for each university to form a committee to define its own mission while abolishing the concept of university classification.

The Regents did not consider the alternative.

Some say the third-tier, or "comprehensive" status, puts schools at a disadvantage for funding and growth.

UF, classified in the top "Research I" tier with two other schools, supports the plan that further boosts it to the top of national and academic research ranks.

With the plan, UF, Florida State University and the University of South Florida will focus on research and graduate education.

The next tier, "Research II," will focus on undergraduate and graduate education.

Third-tier schools will focus on undergraduate education.

University State System Chancellor Adam Herbert modified FAMU's status Wednesday from comprehensive to "Comprehensive/Doctoral."
Office of admissions to focus on foreign students

By FINN PRESSLY

Office of admissions to focus on foreign students

Student visas, international exchange rates and customs regulations may not concern the average Notre Dame student, but for some students on campus, these are daily considerations. International students currently make up approximately two percent of the student body, and members of the Office of Undergraduate Admissions are currently in the process of forming a plan to see that percentage rise.

For over six years, the recruiting of international students on the undergraduate level has been conducted under the auspices of Stephen Grissom, director of External Operations for the Office of Undergraduate Admissions.

"A U.S. citizen whose father is a Fortune 500 executive and is living in Singapore is not an international student," Grissom explained. "What we're talking about are citizens of foreign countries who are studying abroad.

"We've expanded our admissions staff for general purposes, but a part of that was to be able to isolate a staff member to oversee the process for Latin America, one for Canada and Europe and another for Asia and Africa," said Grissom.

Felicia Johnson has been appointed to direct recruitment in Latin America, Michael Gantt for Canada and Europe, and Daniel McGinty for Africa and Asia. Operations in Latin America are also assisted by Father Jim McDonald, assistant dean of the law school. Grissom himself will remain on campus to be involved in the overall process.

Grissom has not only expanded his staff, but has also convened a committee to address initiatives aimed at increasing the number of international students on campus.

"We are now holding our second meeting with a small but larger international student group on campus to brainstorm possible future international student initiatives," said Grissom. "We anticipate that prior to Christmas break, we will have initiated a series of initiatives that we can begin to initiate with heavy student involvement early next semester.

"The overall goal many of these initiatives is to increase the number of international students on campus.

"As we look to the future, we are looking to increase our international student population from two percent to five percent of an incoming group by the fall of 2002."

Prof to publish journal on church architecture

The inaugural issue of Sacred Architecture is being published next week by Duncan Stroik, associate professor of architecture at Notre Dame.

The new journal, which will appear three times a year, will examine issues of tradition and innovation in new church design and will include critiques of new churches and Catholic buildings as well as news, theory, and book reviews.

According to Stroik, Sacred Architecture is partially a response to the numerous requests he has received from Catholic pastors and lay people for information and advice on church design and evaluations of church architects. In an introductory editorial he writes that such requests indicate a need for "an architectural publication which will draw on the riches of the Catholic patrimony and articulate the principles for a sacramental architecture."

He notes that while most major Catholic journals include criticism of contemporary church architecture by sponsoring "substantive debate about sacred architecture" in a journal "committed to the promotion of the cultural heritage of the Church," he hopes to address "a sudden awareness that what we have been praying in for the past few decades has not measured up."

Student participation in the chat rooms may also be a future development of the site, Carney added. Prospective students can also apply online, according to Carney, who noted an increased trend in the number of online applicants. Three hundred of a total 8,578 applications last year were electronic and the University has already received 340 this year from early-action applicants alone. The number of online inquiries about the University, primarily in the form of email, is up as well, according to Carney, who said that in 1998 the total number of electronic contacts was 2,224 and that so far this year that number has more than doubled to 4,702.

"We're up 11 percent as of Nov. 10," he said. "We hope to have at least 600 [online applications]." Carney attributes the trend to a number of advantages of the online system. "It's much easier for a kid to access," he said. "They don't have to set up an application — they have [one] immediately.

"There's no postage and no waiting," he continued, noting that when the student is ready to submit the application, "it's automatically there." He also pointed out that the ease of using the backspace key instead of white-out attracts students and that applicants can ask parents or guidance counselors to review their applications by providing them with a login name and password.

Although the site contains introductory pages in five other languages "to make international students feel more comfortable," Carney said that foreign students have to fill out the application in English because fluency will be necessary to succeed at Notre Dame. Recruiters expect the site to receive 35,000 hits this year, according to Carney, who said that there are an average of 362 visitors per day.

"This will be a much bigger part of our admissions process in coming years," he said. "In terms of serving the people we're interested in recruiting, it'll be a big part of what we do." Although the site is up as well, according to inquiries about the University, also apply online, according to Carney.

Irish PM: unification ‘irresistible’

The peace agreement for Northern Ireland has helped make the British province’s eventual unification with Ireland “irresistible,” Irish Prime Minister Bertie Ahern said Sunday in an interview likely to irritate many northern Protestants.

April’s accord among the British and Irish governments and eight Northern Ireland parties envisioned that the province’s Roman Catholics and majority Protestants would govern in coalition. The coalition government has yet to be formed.

Ahern said that by halting the Irish Republican Army’s 30-year campaign of violence aimed at ending British rule in Northern Ireland, the accord had removed a major factor deterring Protestants from accepting closer ties to the rest of Ireland. The IRA called a truce in July 1997, and the outlawed group’s allied Sinn Fein party backed the accord.

He speculated that a referendum in Northern Ireland within the next 20 years might show majority support for unification because the accord will likely increase cooperation between his government and the new administration in Belfast, the capital of Northern Ireland.

Ahern said this cooperation, combined with continuing cease-fires by the IRA and outlawed pro-British militant groups in Northern Ireland, would provide “an irresistible dynamic” toward forming a new all-Ireland government. He said the key was to “keep violence out of it.”

His prediction clashed with the public position of British Prime Minister Tony Blair, who has said during visits to Northern Ireland that Ireland won’t be united within the lifetimes of his teen-age children.

April’s accord emphasized that Northern Ireland’s union with Britain will continue as long as majority opinion in the territory supports it. Opinion polls have consistently shown that more than two-thirds of its residents support their British links.

Left halfback Vagas Furgeson, ’79, who is the third all-time leading rusher for the Irish, remembered Huffman’s humor as a key component of the ’77 team. “He was a fun guy — a jokester,” said Furgeson. “You always knew when he pulled something. You could hear his laugh all through the locker room, and you hoped it wasn’t you.” He was always on [head coach Dan] Devine about something. The second [Devine] turned his back, Dave would be at him about something. But he never did anything to embarrass anybody. Serial killer charged in 52 murders goes to trial

The Associated Press

Kiev

The killer struck at night on Dec. 24, 1995; bursting into the secluded home of the Zaiuchenko family. Soon, the forester, his wife and two small sons were dead, shot from a rifle.

Their killer escaped with a pair of wedding rings, a small golden cross on a chain, earrings and a bundle of worn clothes. Their house in Garmarnia, a village in central Ukraine, was set ablaze, marking the start of a bloody trail that terrorized the country for four months.

The trial would eventually end with the arrest of Anatoly Onoprienko, a forester and sailor who confessed to the killings. On Monday, the man accused of being Ukraine’s worst serial killer goes on trial, charged with 52 counts of murder.

“IT look at it very simply. As an animal, I watched all this as an animal would stare at a sheep.” Onoprienko said of the slaughter in a videotaped 1997 police interview obtained by The Associated Press.

The charges against Onoprienko chart a remarkable ramp-up in public attention with the Zaichenko slayings.

Other killings soon followed. On the night of Dec. 30, 1995, an attacker did a dead a husband and wife and the wife’s twin sister.

Once again, the killer took gold jewelry, two passports and an old jacket, setting fire to the house and leaving no traces.

Then seven people were slaughtered. A family of five, including two children, was butchered on Jan. 30.

In western Ukraine, no village ventured outside after dark. Huddled in their homes, they listened to the whispers of the night as police patrolled deserted streets.

In the Lviv region, a report pointed to a man traveling in the region between visits to his girlfriend in Yavoriv, near the Polish border.

On April 14, armed officers followed the woman into her apartment and found the man, with a sawed-off hunting rifle inside a briefcase.

In less than four months, Onoprienko, 36 at the time of his arrest, had allegedly killed 40 people, including 18 children.

Confronted with evidence found hidden at the homes of his lover and his brother, Onoprienko confessed — not only to those 40 deaths, but to those of 12 people in 1999, authorities say.

In the former Soviet Union, the rampage is matched only by that of Andrei Chikatilo convicted in 1994 for killing and mutilating 52 women and children in neighboring Russia over a 12-year period.

The admitted killer has said he feels himself to be a robot, driven for years by a dark force, and argued he should not be tried until authorities determine the source of this force.

With a thin face, gray eyes and receding reddish hair, Onoprienko rambles endlessly about the CIA and Interpol, unknown powers and future revelations. Psychiatrists, however, have ruled him fit to stand trial.

The World Population Crisis

With current socio-demographic statistics, it is no longer possible to deny the truth about the world's population problem. Since around the year 1900, our world has been engaged in a steady demographic decline, seen most especially in the Western nations, and particularly in the third world. Most social scientists still refer to Malthus' curves when warning of the dangers of fertility trends. The only problem is, the Malthus curves have been proven wrong simply by the fact that what he predicted would happen this century did not in fact obtain. History has proven him wrong; his predictions did not come about, yet his influence remains in the way we still think and talk about world population.

The United States, in our foreign policy, still operates on this paradigm. The foreign aid given by the U.S. to third world countries always comes with strings attached, the form of commodity aid, the form of sterilization, to procure abortions. Our aid for developing countries is usually granted only on the condition that these countries establish population control methods that include forced sterilizations, or sterilizations performed without informed consent.

Take, for example, a sterilization campaign carried out last year in Peru. Public health care personnel put pressures on illiterate women to have an unexplained "operation," which was actually a sterilization performed in less than sterile clinical conditions. Because of the lack of basic hygiene, these procedures resulted in a number of deaths. The newspaper El Comercio reported that in the poorest parts of the country, the women submitted to sterilization in exchange for food and care for their younger children. Those carrying out the operations had monthly quotas to respect, which explains why, near the end of the month, the employees were eager to encourage Quechua women to go to the dispensary for "the vaccination for their baby and for a small, paint, and free operation for themselves" (N. Bonnet, Le Monde, Jan 2, 1998).

Similar sterilization campaigns are being carried out all over the world. It is obvious that the policies our country is exporting are a direct violation of the fundamental human rights. It is even more disturbing due to the fact that these ideological programs are premised on fabrication and spurious and fallacious data. The population decline of the Western nations will bring about adverse consequences for the economic and sociological infrastructures of these countries. We already see the age pyramid becoming reversed, with older, retired members of the population making up a much higher percentage of the population. While requiring more health care and providing less work, these members will be increasingly criticized for the burden they place on society, making us think and talk about world population.

Thank you to the Student Body for ‘Magic’

Notre Dame Student Body

On behalf of our entire football team and coaching staff I would like to thank your tremendous support this year. Your enthusiasm and spirit have allowed us to once again regain the magic to Notre Dame Stadium.

Because of the home field advantage you helped create, we were able to win several close games this year and go undefeated in Notre Dame Stadium for the first time since 1989. All of you can be proud of the fact that we currently have a winning streak at home.

As you know we still have some business to take care of on the west coast with USC. Even if you can’t make the trip to the Los Angeles Coliseum, we know the host student body in the country will be supporting us. Thanks again!

Sincerely,
Rob Davie

‘Zoot Suit Riots’

Nothing to Joke About

I write this letter not to accuse anybody of racism but merely to make people aware of what they’re saying. I write in reference to the University board’s introduction to their resolution of the popular song, “Zoot Suit Riot.” As the announcer described the era, he encouraged us to “get ready for a zoot suit riot” or something to that effect. I can’t exactly remember what he said. And the crowd cheered. I couldn’t help but feel a chill run through me.

We might as well have said let’s get ready to beat up some Mexicans because that’s exactly what the Zoot Suit Riots were all about. I am fully aware that NEITHER the announcer or the band meant this in any way. I bring this up only because I’m tired of seeing this era brought up as a far with anybody taking the time to make others aware of what really happened.

During the weekend of June 3, 1943, several servicemen they were attacked by a gang of Mexican pachucos (the zoot suiters). As a response, over 200 servicemen took cabs into the heart of the Mexican-American community of East Los Angeles. Their mission was to assault anyone wearing a zoot suit. The majority of these zoot suiters were Mexican-American but the violence involved other minorities as well. They stripped them of their clothing and beat them up. According to Rodolfo Acuña’s “Occupied America,” “Police arrested over 600 Chicano youths without cause and labeled the arrests ‘preventive action.’” Angeles bade all the zoot suiters and their civilian allies.” You see, the papers praised the servicemen as heroes for finally doing something to stop the “Mexican Crime Wave.” It wasn’t until June 7th that the top military officials ended the riots (something the Los Angeles city officials would not do by placing Los Angeles off-limits to military personnel).

Why did this happen? This country found itself in a dangerous state of xenophobia. What happened with the Japanese concentration camps? Mexican-Americans were another easy scapegoat. Why don’t people know about this? Because they don’t teach us history in our schools that make the US or the military look bad. It took this terrible event to once again return the “magic” to Notre Dame Stadium.

On October 23, 1998, a bullet from the pan of a sniper pierced the chest of Barnett Swor, who had just returned home with his family from synagogue. He died two hours later. Schein was an abortionist, the third to be murdered.

Maureen Kramlich

In the wake of Schein’s murder, Attorney General Janet Reno announced that she would establish the National Clinic Violence Task Force to determine whether there is a conspiracy of anti-abortion violence. It was the second time that Reno has created such a task force. The first, begun in 1994, concluded after two years of investigations that there was not a criminal plot against abortion clinics. The acts of violence committed against abortion clinics were the acts of the lawyers.

Violence committed against abortion providers and clinics is aberrant. Third year law student, Jim McCarthy, noted that “it contradicts the fundamental principle to which pro-lifers are committed: human beings do not lose their dignity because they are unwanted, economic burdens, disabled, terminally ill, undesirable.” As a wise Polish man once said, “Not even a murder loses his personal dignity.”

Violence against abortion clinics runs counter to the foundation of an activist movement that has its roots in the peace and justice movements of the Catholic left. (That’s correct, Catholic Left!) The first core of pro-life activists were drawn from the peace, civil rights, anti-war, farm workers movements. On the view of these activists, the abortion industry was an destructive one. This is why the early American clinics were compared to nuclear bombs: weapons of mass destruction. These activists considered the right to life a matter of civil rights for unborn children. And many of them who came to consider violence as a solution to unplanned pregnancies an injustice committed against their rights.

It was natural for these first pro-life activists to adopt the tactics of civil disobedience used by the other movements to which they belonged. And on, on, August 2, 1975, six pro-life women held the first sit-in at an abortion clinic in Rockville, Maryland, blocking the door to the room where abortions were performed. Described to Charles Fagger, a Quaker peace activist affiliated with this group of activists, the thought was let violence be the active guilt. The activists, deliver one of his talks about non-violent social change. The peace and justice movement of the 1960s. And so, on August 2, 1975, six pro-life women held the first sit-in at an abortion clinic in Rockville, Maryland, blocking the door to the room where abortions were performed.

“Not even a murderer loses his personal dignity.” This is the second time that Reno has created such a task force. The acts of violence committed against abortion clinics were the acts of the lawyers.

Smith and co. have no enemies

"Enemy of the State"

Director: Tony Scott
Starring: Will Smith, Gene Hackman, Jon Voight and Regina King

"It's not paranoia if they're really after you."

The government is everywhere, watching and listening to us. They have the ability to intercept our cellular phone calls, place microtransmitters into the fabric of our clothing to track us down and even use secret satellite surveillance to pinpoint a single person. No suspicious action, word or glance goes unnoticed when the eye in the sky is activated, because "big glance goes unnoticed when the eye mitters into the fabric of our clothing."

One problem: somebody videotaped one of these "negotiations" and slipped the tape to Dean, who goes goggle-eyed through most of the movie wondering innocently why he is being brought up on charges of corruption, accused of having affairs and shot at by mysterious groups of agents with spiked hair.

Enter the enigmatic Brill (Gene Hackman), a shady charlatan who seems to want to help Dean, but acts like he would rather drop him off the top of a building. Without revealing plot details, he assured that the story of a young, talented actor, McLaughlin Green (Mr. Evil's son) and Jake Busey ("Starship Troopers"), and a core of fine veterans (Smith, Hackman, and Voight), who dominate the screen time with their presence. Will Smith has come long way from the realm of acting mediocrity, acting with such maturity and feeling that seeing him on screen is difficult to believe that the same person was the Fresh Prince of Bel-air only three years ago.

As we follow the expert ARPANet, we get a fairly good job of establishing a sense of paranoia, which comes with being pursued by top agencies in the government, a difficult task. Smith, Scott and Cringely in "Enemy of the State."

Residence Life about student activities during home football games, it is actually the in-your-face documentary of "Enemy of The State."

The plot (and the government) follows Robert Dean (Will Smith), an aspiring young attorney, who has the annoying character flaw of "foot in mouth" syndrome, who plays the unwitting pawn in an effort to expose the actions of Reynolds (Jon Voight), head of the National Security Administration, who enjoys strong-arm ing and killing uncooperative Congressmen in his spare time.

Robert, the brain, the eyes can still appreciate how the shot is filmed. As we follow the expert ARPANet, we get a fairly good job of establishing a sense of paranoia, which comes with being pursued by top agencies in the government, a difficult task. Cringely, an egghead computer spirit who notes that, while 85 percent of Americans are not yet wired to the Internet, the numbers are mushrooming — Internet traffic doubles every 10 minutes of screen time.

He should know. Though he was born Mark Stephens, his alter ego Bob Cringely is recognized as a wired-in author, TV personality and weekly columnist on the PBS documentary "Nerds" which he created. When he Labs an online exercise, you get a whole page that was hard to use. But if a Web site isn't easy to use, fast-loading, and, beyond all that, attractive, people won't go to it.

The browser was the creation of a new life form in a computer biophere first populated by nerds and suits, a Cringely observed during a visit to the Fresh Prince of Bel-air only three years ago.

The browser is a new type of software built with XML that is easier to read and write than HTML. It is called "Netscape Communicator.""Instead of humdrum lines of text, what you saw on the screen was "an attractive, easy-to-use shop window," he said.

But like a good meal in a fine restaurant, what really put the Web over was its presentation. This took a giant leap with the arrival of the so-called browser.

There are so many monitoring tools and subversive techniques employed by the government agents in this film that it sparks a genuine fear in each audience member, causing them to ask themselves, "Can they really do that?"

I do not know for sure what our government is capable of, but the Internet I discuss can bring our class, speak of shadow government websites or toss a marshmallow through the cold air in the student section. I will be looking back over my shoulder, wondering just who saw what I did.

The Irish win their ninth game of the season, once again playing just well enough to scrape by. This time around, the Irish turned a two-touchdown deficit into a golden finish as Notre Dame completed just its fifth undefeated home season since 1999.

In one of the wildest games of the season, Notre Dame (5-3-1, 4-2 in the SEC) combined for seventy-five points, the most since Texas and Notre Dame battled to a 55-27 Irish win in 1995. Notre Dame also relied on linebackers Lamont Bryant and Bobbie Howard to return a fumble and an interception, respectively, back for touchdowns.

No matter how different the plays turned out, the Irish once again played their way to victory.

"This is the greatest way to go out I could ever think of," said senior Mike Rosenthal on the Irish comeback in his last game in Notre Dame Stadium. "To come back from two touchdowns and lay it all on the line to leave this place a victor. This was just a great win."

Jason Jackson had another career-best game as he passed for 276 yards and led the Irish second half comeback with two touchdowns to edge Louisiana State 39-36. But the day began and ended far from the way it developed for the Irish signal-caller.

His first pass in the opening drive was intercepted by Mark Romain and returned 53 yards to give LSU the early lead. The Tigers built that into a touchdown lead by the half and 14 points by the third quarter before Notre Dame clamped away in the closing minutes to take its only lead of the game with 1:27 left to play.

Faulk mopped up in the game in which Faulk scored most of the day in a game in which he became one of the Tigers' best all-time rushers. He broke school records for most rushing touchdowns with 45, most total touchdowns with 52, and most points scored with 312. The senior's five plays in a game and a season that have failed to go LSU's way has not been enough to scrape by. This time around, LSU's best rusher, his turnover in the second kept Notre Dame within striking distance. A hit by Deke Cooper on the Tigers' second drive of the quarter jarred the ball free for linebacker Lamont Bryant to get a handle on.

Bryant returned the fumble for a 13-yard touchdown. After the Roman interception to start the game, Notre Dame handed the ball to Autry Denson for 18 yards on three carries while Jackson threw his first of 13 completions to Bobby Brown for 44 yards. Freshman split end David Givens capped off the drive for Notre Dame's first score, taking the option pitch from Jackson down the sideline for a 22-yard touchdown rush. Denson rushed for a total of 80 yards, his least since rushing for 62 at Michigan State. Even with his limited performance, Denson rushed for a three-yard touchdown to open the second half. The rush gave the senior at least one touchdown in all 10 games this season.

After an interception by A'Jan Sanders on a Herb Tyler pass to set up Denson's run, the Tigers went to the air to control most of the quarter. LSU marched 68 yards in four plays to give them a 27-20 lead. Tyler connected with split end Abram Booty on three receptions, including the touchdown, for 77 yards.

"I don't think they did anything different," said Booty. "We threw deeper routes, we wanted to get behind and we connected." Booty and Tyler connected for another touchdown a little more than two minutes later after Roman caused Tony Driver to drop the ensuing kickoff.

The Irish pulled to within a touchdown as Malcolm Johnson pulled down a Jackson 8-yard pass to close out scoring for the third quarter.

The Tigers opened up the fourth with a drive that brought them from their own 21-yard line to Notre Dame's 17 where it looked like they would open the game up and take a two-touchdown lead. But Tyler's pass was picked off by Bobbie Howard. The linebacker returned the ball 89 yards for a touchdown, but Jim Sanson's miss on the conversion attempt left the Irish trailing by one point.

Danny Boyd missed a 42-yard field goal on LSU's next possession and

QUOTE OF THE GAME

STAT OF THE GAME

Jackson went 8-for-10 on third-down conversions, proving once again that coming through in the clutch is the key to a come-from-behind victory.
Four weeks.

Those two words sent shivers down the spines of every Irish fan across the nation, when the early prognosis on Jarious Jackson’s knee revealed that the senior quarterback would probably miss that amount of time.

“Of course, but hopefully he’ll return,” safety Tony Driver said. “Jarious has been a great quarterback and a great leader.”

“Jarious is one of my best friends off the field and to see him go down was tough. It’s tough to lose anything,” senior split end Bobby Brown said. “I ran up to him, and he was OK, so first of all emotionally and physically he’ll be OK, Jarious is a fighter. He’ll be back.”

The question is when. No one would get too specific about the injury.

“I think it’s a knee injury. I’m not going to go any further than that,” Davie said. “It’s probably a few weeks or so. It’s very similar to Jerry Wines’.”

The injury occurred on a strange play with less than 10 seconds remaining in the game. Notre Dame was trying to run out the clock, as Jackson took a knee. Davie said, “The decision was totally mine to take a knee.”

“Bob Davie said. “I didn’t want to hand the ball off and risk a fumble. LSU used each of its three timeouts during the series and forced the Irish into a difficult fourth down situation on the 10 yard line with eight seconds on the clock.

Jackson intended to run out of the back of the end zone and take a safety, but there was a breakdown in the blocking scheme and he was blindedide.

“We wanted Jarious to go to the end line and use as much time as possible and end the game. Davie said. “We didn’t execute correctly. We had someone open directly and weren’t able to do that. It wasn’t so much of the plan as it was the execution of that play.”

“We were instructed to take a safety,” Brown said. “He got to the back of the end zone really quick, but a guy came free. He was trying to do his best to run out the time. He had planned to step out of the end zone, but the guy couldn’t quite get to him as he was trying to move and in an awkward position. It’s just one of those unfortunate things.”

Dave willingly accepted the blame for the poor execution.

“The decision was totally mine to take a knee,” head coach Bob Davie said. “I didn’t want to hand the ball off and risk a fumble.”

Jarious Jackson’s impressive outing on Saturday was cut short by a knee injury sustained late in the fourth quarter. Jackson is expected to be out for four weeks.

Bobbie Howard muscles down Kevin Faulk on one of his game-leading 31 carries of the game. Faulk picked up 127 yards and one rushing touchdown in the game.

Jackson led Irish drive to give the Irish only their second lead of the game, but Faulk ran for more than 100 yards.

He kept the ball with carriers of 14 and 12 yards and completions of 24 and 17 yards to help make game-winning drive.

Jackson was especially influential on third-down conversions, going eight-for-ten for 186 yards.

“We were basically trying to do whatever needed to be done to win the game,” Davie said. “I told Jarious, ’I think we’re a great team today, and luckily in the end we came out with the win. I just try to spark the rest of the team to do what I know they are capable of doing.”

Colin Schuman Craig Nall came off the bench to replace an injured Herb Tyker. After the Irish took the lead in the final minute of the first quarter with a 12-yard field goal, the only scoring until the fourth quarter was the Shamrock Coin.

The defensive line worked brutally to stop the run, but to only marginal success. There was a general absence of pressure on Tyler, and their uptick in tackles allowed Kevin Faulk to look like Marshall Faulk.

Linebackers: B+

Kevin Faulk was the second line of defense against Faulk’s runs. In this case, they should have been. The fourth-ranked NCAA rushing game is just over three yards a carry.

Defensive Backs: C

It’s difficult to give up 256 yards, passing and rushing, and manage to get the win. Still, this unit did manage to stop key plays to start the game.

Special Teams: F+

It’s hard to give out an F when a win is the result, but it doesn’t get much worse than this. Between the many missed field goals, the poor play turned 16-point swing in the Tigers’ favor.

Coach C

Davie’s adjustments made in the third quarter caught quickly, but the defense didn’t look quite as prepared at the start of the game as they showed. Nall’s injury was the play-calling in the final minutes that will need far better time management.

Overall: 2.6/9

A lackluster performance, but it gets the job done. The Irish went into this game with a tough schedule and even though the defense didn’t seem quite as prepared as for the start of the game, they showed their purple. Williams’ blocked extra points.

IRISH

LSU head coach Gerry DiNardo (Notre Dame ’75) is the first alumnus to coach against his alma mater at Notre Dame Stadium since Indiana’s Bernie Grimmis lost 2-0 at Notre Dame Stadium in 1956.

Kevin Faulk’s second-quarter touchdown run was the 45th rushing touchdown of his career, breaking the LSU career record of 44 set by Marion Jefferson in 1956.

Kevin Faulk’s 88-yard kickoff return for a touchdown was the first by a Notre Dame opponent in 21 since Georgia Tech’s Eddie Lee Ivory went 97 yards on Nov. 3, 1977, in the Yellow Jackets’ 69-14 loss to the Irish.

Anaty Denson moved into 32nd place on the NCAA career rushing list with 4,246 yards after entering the game 35th.

Bob Davie:

You can see that was that was a pretty remarkable forulneball game. I told our players coming into the game that we knew it was a big game. We had a chance to be 9-1 and go undefeated at home, but the biggest asset was just to see the men improve we made since, Dec. 28, in Shreveport.

LSU head coach Gerry DiNardo:

"It’s a downer. It tears your guts out. It’s football and it’s life. We just have to prepare for Arkansas."
Notre Dame seniors step up in final home game

By BILL HART

If there has been one constant in an otherwise shaky season, it has been the fact that players have stepped up to produce critical plays that can change the tide of a game.

Against Purdue, it took two interceptions in the last two minutes by Tony Driver to set up and preserve an Irish win. In the loss to USC, Jamison kicked a career-long 48-yard field goal with 30 seconds left to push the Irish over the top. Two weeks ago against Boston College, it was Deke Cooper who took over as a punt returner and carried the offense for a field-goal drive.

Heading into this game, it looked like more players would need to step up and lead the Irish to victory. In a game as unusual as this weekend's, however, it would take an entire cast and crew. And as it was, every home game of the season, it was perhaps appropriate that most of these players were members of the senior class, playing their final home game wearing the blue and gold.

Early in the first quarter, the Irish found themselves in a third-and-long situation, down a touchdown and desperate for a chance to respond. On the next play, Jackson found a wide open Bobby Brown to move the Irish 44 yards. Two plays later, freshman David Givens earned the first touchdown of the season for the Irish by making a big play. If someone had told Bobbie Howard that you could make a big play, Jackson said, "He wouldn't have believed them."

After an LSU field-goal attempt went wide, the Irish received the ball for one last shot at the lead. This time, however, it was Jackson who almost single-handedly carried the offense for a field-goal drive, capped by a 10-yard touchdown pass by Rake Nelson.

"Like we say in practice all the time," Davie remarked, "no one knows how good you are until you are going to make a big play. If someone had told me that this short little legs would carry that ball all the way, I wouldn't have believed them."

Chasing down the fumble that Deke Cooper knocked from Kevin Faulk, senior Lamont Bryant returned it for a 10-yard touchdown, putting the Irish within a point. "It was just a great place a victor. This game to make or break the season for the Irish," said Bryant. "To come back out I could ever think of," said Mike Rosenthal. "To come back from two-touchdowns down and put it all on the line to leave this place a victor. This was just a great win."

So as the Irish head westward to face the hostile Trojans, they will look yet again for someone on the roster to step up, reverse the setbacks, and end the season on a positive note.

Once a Movie Cook

One word to describe the 1998 comedy, "Big," is the simple titular adjective "big." It is not an epic. Nor is it a high-budget blockbuster. It's a film about a kid. John Hughes's latest film lies in the many layers that penetrate its fantasy plot.

Joshua Baskin (David Moscow) is the main character who begins the film as a 12-year-old adolescent who yearns to be older and physically bigger. At a carnival one night, Joshua wishes upon the magical video game "Zoltar" that he could be big. The next morning, of course, Joshua wakes up as a 30-year-old grown man, played by Tom Hanks.

The rest of the movie takes Joshua on a six-week adventure as an adult in New York City, because the Department of Consumer Affairs will not be able to find out where Josh can find another "Zoltar" machine for that amount of time.

It is during these six weeks that the audience witnesses the biggest of "Big." The initial transformation in this film is the major one. Everyone wishes during their childhood that they could be an adult already. Kids want to stop being treated as kids. Teenagers want to leave the nest and spread their wings.

Josh's desire to be big, just that same predilection that everyone confronts. Yet this time, Josh's desire becomes a reality.

Immediately, Josh realizes that life as a grown-up is not all that it is cracked up to be. Although it is situational, Josh loses the innocence of "Big." (Elizabeth Perkins) an executive with the Company, where he meets Susan, his new love interest with Josh, whose childish perspective concerning toys earns him a bit of an adult friend, Billy, who helps Josh when he is confronted with his new life. This friendship theme of the film adds to its emotional weight, as Billy becomes Josh's dose of reality when Josh wants to remain an adult. Billy is also a key to the comic excellence of "Big." He is accurately and amusingly portrayed the adolescent boy in his self-confident and arrogant glory.

But the contours of the film should be mainly attributed to Tom Hanks, whose Oscar nominated performance of a child trapped in a man's body proved to be a subtle reminder of what we all feel like children. One of the obvious tendencies of Josh's kid personality was his excessive use of the word "cool." It was neat to see how much of Josh was rubbed off onto other adult characters. This was especially clear when Susan related to a toy idea with the exclamation, "Neat!"

In the end, "Big" teaches its viewers that childhood is a good thing that must be experienced to be happy in adulthood. Also, adulthood is not meaningful without some childish experiences. Finally, something we all know - friendships, especially good friendships, should and will endure through even the most trying of circumstances.

This is the essence of life, and the simple tale that "Big" tells is a largely important pre- and take- message that everyone should try to learn.

Hollywood loves kids; but do kids love Hollywood?

By MIKE VANEGAS

August 24, 1998

Studios, start your engines. This week, the real competition begins. Disney's "A Bug's Life," opens for the five-day Thanksgiving weekend against "Babe: Pig in the City." "Babe"'s box-office top ten at number nine, earning $2.7 million. In its almost two months, "Antz," has already earned over $80 million, making it the biggest grossing non-Disney animated film. And Dreamworks' hit to outperform Disney continues well until the end of the year, as it releases the epic "Prince of Egypt" on December 18, just in time for the Christmas slanging extravaganza. Some might question, though, the attraction that the story of Moses might have to kids. But we should never discount the impact that kids have on a film's success. That is precisely how "Babe" became the biggest success that it did. The kids watched it. But it will be a big surprise if "Babe: Pig in the City" can overcome "A Bug's Life" this weekend and endure past the New Year. Plagued by production problems, "Babe II" seems to be the typical high-budget underperforming flick, in a "Waterworld." And the final threat to Disney's domination is of course that other little kid phenomenon, "Nikocoleon: The Cable Station:" the cable station ventured out into the big screen this past weekend with "The Rugrats Movie," and came out smiling with $28 million and the number one box-office spot. Good luck, Disney.

The Notre Dame hockey team held onto its first-place standing in the CCHA and remained unbeaten at home with its 9-5 win over Western Michigan last Friday night at the Joyce Center. But by the next day, a depleted Irish squad suffered its second loss of the season by a count of 1-0 at the hands of the Michigan Wolverines. After Saturday’s loss, Notre Dame dropped into a first-place tie with Michigan.

One big difference in the team’s play this season has been its level of performance at the Joyce Center. Last season, fans saw some of the team’s most mediocre games en route to a 6-8-4 mark on home ice. So more mediocre games en route of 5-0-1.

Depleted squad falls just short to Michigan Wolverines

The hockey team went 1-1 this weekend, successfully defeating Western Michigan but falling to Ben Simon at the end of the second period (19.54).

On the night, the team’s star power forward was goaleater Forrest Karr, who turned in yet another impressive performance.

A highlight of the night was his save in the third period, rubbing sophomore Josh Langfeld on a two-on-one with a brilliant stick save. Karr made 25 saves in all in a losing effort.

For just the fourth time in 13 games this season, Notre Dame was outshot, this time by a count of 26-16. However, as much as Michigan may have outplayed the Irish offensively, the lone goal of the game was a fluke.

Midway through the second period, sophomore Scott Matzka threw a shot towards the net, which ended up ricocheting off the leg of senior Sean Ritchlin and into the net.

Abortion, euthanasia and capital punishment demean the lives of countless individuals in our society.

Gather with us in Eucharistic Adoration to pray for an end to the culture of death.

Jesus is here with us in the Eucharist to give us answers—answers that will lead us to truth, happiness and peace. In this culture of death, it is easy for people to become weary and indifferent to God and His gift of life. People often fall short of their obligation to care for and nurture the spiritual and physical lives of themselves and others. Eucharistic Adoration gives a person the opportunity to nurture his own spiritual life, as well as the spiritual lives of others (through prayer for them.) Prayer also protects the physical lives of those endangered by abortion, euthanasia and other forms of violence. It is only through the grace which comes from prayer that others’ hearts can be changed from seeking death to loving life. Christ gives us the strength to press on in our battle for life. In order to be Christ-like in our service to preserve life, we must be filled with His life through prayer.

We ask you to join us in prayer for life at Eucharistic Adoration.

What is Eucharistic Adoration?
God is present to us in many ways in our world, but He is especially present to us in the Eucharist. As Roman Catholics, we believe that Jesus Christ, who lived 2000 years ago, is truly present in the Eucharist. In Eucharistic Adoration, the Host is placed in a monstrance, in order for us to be able to come and pray. Jesus is always hidden in the tabernacle, but in adoration He is exposed so that we can come and kneel before Him, face to face, and speak with God. When Jesus is exposed like this, He can never be left alone. Thus, people sign up to be responsible to come and pray with Him for a certain amount of time (usually 1/2 hour) every week.

Why should I go?
If Jesus were to come to the JACC, wouldn’t you come and stand in line for hours just to talk to Him for a minute? Even if you weren’t Christian, wouldn’t you be at least interested in this God so many people talk about? Well, Jesus is truly present here on campus—in the Eucharist. IN ADORATION YOU HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY TO GO AND SPEAK WITH GOD FACE TO FACE. You can confide in Him, plead with Him, question Him. And if you sit quietly enough, He will inspire you with answers.

What do I do when I am there?
When you enter the chapel, you should genuflect as a sign of reverence to Jesus. It is common practice during Adoration to genuflect on two knees, instead of just one (like you do whenever you enter a chapel.) You can stand, sit, or kneel—whatever helps you pray. And then you pray. There are many ways to pray— you can do spiritual reading; you can pray a rosary; you can sit in silence; you can even just talk to Jesus—like you would to a friend. The most important thing is that you love Him and allow Him to love and strengthen you.

What does the Church think?
“Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament, whether in a pyx or a monstrance, is a recognition of the wonderful Presence of Christ in the sacrament and stimulates us to unite ourselves to Him in a spiritual communion. It is, accordingly, eminently in harmony with the worship which we owe Him in spirit and truth…”

Men's hoops fall to Vanderbilt 68-63 in final seconds of game By ALLISON KRILLA

Vanderbilt can be chalked up as Notre Dame men's basketball on Skylard Owens, who logged 13 minutes in the contest. Has been a really great win for us.

Notre Dame took a 9-2 lead early in the first half, and continued to lead for most of the half. The Irish stretched the lead to 12-13 with 7:27 left in the period. But Vanderbilt's ensuing 6-6 run, and Anthony Williams tip-in at the buzzer produced a 29-28 halftime advantage for the Commodores.

Notre Dame shot 37.7 percent from the field for the game, while Vanderbilt shot only 37.7.

FRESHMAN Troy Murphy contributed to the Irish with a career-high 33 points, 10 rebounds and a flawless performance from the charity stripe. Langhi put the final nails in Notre Dame's coffin, hitting two of his 11 free throws with one second left.

Until the final four minutes, the Irish stayed with the Commodores, who took just a one-point lead into the locker room at the half.

In the second period, the lead changed nine times before Vanderbilt took it for good, when Langhi drained two free throws to give the Commodores a 60-38 lead with 4:03 left.

"(Coach MacLeod) told us that we put in a pretty good effort, but came up short in the end," said Owens.

Notre Dame's best chance to rekindle the late lead in the game rested on the shoulders of veteran Anteni Wyche, who went to the line with 26 seconds left and the Commodores ahead 64-63. But on his only trip to the line, Wyche missed both free throws. Free throws by James Strong, Brady Moore and Langhi in the final 16 seconds accounted for the final tally.

The Irish came close to losing the match in game three, as they were behind 13-12 before a hitting error by Connecticut and a kill by sophomore outside hitter Christi Girton kept Notre Dame's championship hopes alive.

Four players had double-doubles (kills and digs) in the balanced attack by the Irish.

The Irish hit .217 to the Hoyas' .109, and also blocked the Hoyas' 15.5 to 5.0.

Bomhac hit .406 to lead the Irish attack. She had 15 kills and 10 digs in the match.

Junior opposite Emily Schiebout complemented Bomhac with 16 kills and nine digs. Sophomore Jo Jameson recorded 10 kills, and setter Michelle Graham came up strong with 10 digs.

Georgetown was led by Big East Player of the Year Melissa Tyiko, who hit .316, and all-Big East first team selection Kiran Gill, who had a match-high 19 kills and 13 digs.

Big East Rookie of the Year and all-Big East first team choice Yuliia Vyturina was not up to her usual performance, with 12 errors in the match.

Georgetown's head coach, Jolene Nagel, was announced as Big East Coach of the Year this weekend.

In the semi-finals, Notre Dame beat the Connecticut Huskies 9-12, 11-12, 15-13, 15-13, 15-13.

The Irish head to Alaska Wednesday, where they will compete in the Great Alaska Shootout.

The women's soccer team advanced in the NCAA tournament Friday, beating the Nebraska Cornhuskers 2-1 on Alumni Field.

The women's soccer team advanced in the NCAA tournament Friday, beating the Nebraska Cornhuskers 2-1 on Alumni Field.

Irish rally from a 1-0 deficit to beat Nebraska in tournament

Kelly Siemon capped off the drive with a turn-around jumper from the left side, giving the Irish a 1-0 lead. Just seven minutes later she gave Notre Dame its biggest lead of the half from the foul line, making it 30-10. Ivey finished the game with 13 points and a team-leading five assists, while Siemon assisted on five scores.

The Blue Devils, trailing by 20 points with seven minutes in the half, chipped away at the lead as the half came to a close behind VanGorp's floor performance. Duke's senior center sank her team's first three buckets of the second half. But the Blue Devils never overcame the Irish, who took VanGorp out of the game on foul trouble.

With aggressive centers in the starting lineup, both teams focused on drawing the opposition into heavy foul trouble. The competition between the two centers seemed to heat up in the second on the opening Duke drive but ended in Irish victory with VanGorp getting her third personal foul and a spot on the bench.

"I thought it was interesting for Notre Dame head coach Muffet McGraw on the strategy between the team's centers. "It was one we established up from the opening drive. Our plan was to keep two of our centers on the court and not give the Irish a chance to use their height against us. Michele and Ruth were able to stay out of foul trouble and I thought her third personal foul was a sign of our match-up. Ruth won the battle of the big guys."

With VanGorp out in the second, Notre Dame went on a 21-point run in the second half. The Irish outshot the Huskers on the day 22-5.

The Irish grabbed the momentum and Gerardo sized within two minutes and that's disappointing. "Anytime you get a lead like that you want to be able to maintain it and keep that momentum. We weren't able to do that."

The Irish outshot the Huskers on the day 22-
