Members approve change in Shirt Project funding cap

The Campus Life Council kicked off its year Monday by discussing new du Lac revisions, debating the addition of an ATM on North Quad and voting to increase the earning potential of The Shirt Project.

Members supported a resolution from the Student Senate to eliminate the cap on profits from The Shirt in order to increase funding for the Student Union.

Proponents of the measure saw it as a win-win proposition.

"It's a great way for the Student Union to fund more non-alcoholic activities, which is exactly what this campus needs," said Student Union treasurer James Jesse. "Charities are benefiting, and the Student Union is benefiting."

Currently, the Shirt Project is under a $200,000 cap, with half of the profits going to charity, and the other half going to the Student Union. Jesse proposed at the meeting that any money raised over the initial $200,000 be split, with 50 percent going to charity and 50 percent to Student Union, respectively.

Between $118,000 and $225,000 is raised annually, Jesse said. This would give the Student Union additional funds of between $7,000 and $10,000 per year.

The $200,000 cap was originally placed on the project to restrict the amount of money invested in it. Although the Student Union has grown in the ten years since The Shirt project began, some are still concerned that the approval of this proposal will shift the focus more to moneymaking than charity.

However, Keough Hall senator Brian O'Donoghue said, "We will be giving more money to charity."

After discussion, the proposal was approved unanimously and will be sent to vice president for Student Affairs Father Mark Pooman for approval.

The Student Senate passed the resolution in a online vote Friday, sending it on to the CLC.

In other CLC news:

♦ Members discussed revisions to du Lac which were made as a result of last year's debate over the Women's Resource Center probation. The student handbook now contains specific information concerning how student organizations on probation can have their status reviewed.

♦ It's a different type of issue, and it's better dealt with in this type of manner than by a student disciplinary hearing," said Bill Kirk, assistant vice president for Residence Life.

The WRC was placed on probation in May 1998 for making available information in its LaFortune office on where to get an abortion. Some students opposed this action.

OUTSIDE THE DOME

UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH FLORIDA

South Florida University's students and faculty are voicing their support for or dissent from a new university policy that limits free speech to two specific areas. And now even the American Civil Liberties Union may add its input, according to local members.

Mike Pheneger, who works in Educational Outreach at USF, said he was perused by the policy that he called the Office of General Counsel to get his own copy.

And now Pheneger, a member of the ACLU boards of directors for both Hillsborough County and the state of Florida, wants the union's opinion on the policy.

Pheneger said he forwarded a copy of the policy to the chairman of the state board, and he is awaiting a reply.

"The university has some reasonable rights to turn around and regulate about time, place and manner."

Mike Pheneger
member of ACLU board of directors

Pheneger said he is unsure of what might happen, except that the ACLU will watch closely the university's application of the policy—which restricts campus speakers to two speakers squares. The policy was made to push speakers away from areas where classes are in session and may be disturbed.

"We are going to see how the implementation of it is going to go."

Pheneger said. "The university has some reasonable rights to turn around and regulate about time, place and manner. But, for example, if they were to permit political groups to act there, it then would seem to me it would be difficult for them to impose the same restrictions on other kinds of speech. We have to watch if we are concerned neutral!"

The local board won't formally meet until September 15, but its members have been communicating via e-mail, according to Rodrick Colbert, a local ACLU member and USF student.

Colbert said he expects the ACLU board to give a legal opinion of the policy.

But an opinion doesn't necessarily mean the board will condemn the policy. Colbert, for example, said he is in favor of the speakers squares.

OSU tightens code of conduct

OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

Ohio State's Code of Student Conduct may soon get a face lift—and in the process, solidify the university's ability to discipline illegal student activities off-campus.

According to the current code, the university can discipline students who commit crimes on university premises, students involved in registered student organization activities, students on internships and students involved in required class activities. Under the proposed code, disciplinary actions can be taken against individual students who commit serious offenses off-campus.

Disciplinary actions range from expulsion to a lecture by OSU Student Judicial Affairs. Patrick Hall, director of student judicial affairs, said the university would be interested in student acts committed off-campus that result in felony charges. But that might not be all. "There may be an instance where an act may be pretty serious, but not be a felony. These things are determined on a case-by-case basis.

Pheneger said. Under the new code, the university can look at any act committed by students that "seriously and adversely affects the university or other members of the university community."

MIT fraternity faces penalties

MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

MIT's Delta Kappa Epsilon is facing a number of sanctions including a year long ban on alcohol after an Interfraternity student was found intoxicated at the fraternity house late last month. The student, a member of the class of 2003 enrolled in the summer program for minority students, was found intoxicated in the DKE house on the morning of July 25 by Campus Police, after drinking at a party held the previous night at the fraternity. Police and administrative officials declined to release the student's name or any information regarding disciplinary action taken against him.

Despite the incident, DKE will be allowed to rush this fall, according to senior Patrick Kemer, Interfraternity Council Judicial Committee Chair. Charges brought against the house include: violating MIT standards for registered student organizations, violating Interfraternity policies, failing to cooperate with Institute officials in an emergency situation, disregarding the personal safety of a student, engaging in an action which is detrimental to the MIT community, violating the B.Y.O.B. policy and serving alcohol to a minor.

DeLisle discusses workplace ethics

By KATIE McVOY
News Writer

Acquiring a background in values and ethics from Saint Mary's is important to enter the global marketplace, said Paula DeLisle, a 1975 graduate and Shaaswan Alumni Executive Scholar.

DeLisle is a human resources consultant for Watson Wyatt Worldwide in Hong Kong. She said Saint Mary's emphasis on values is helping her create good business ethics in Asia.

"It really did prepare me for being an international citizen," she said.

"I have the ability to work a problem out and find a solution," DeLisle has lived and worked in Hong Kong for 17 years. She said her experience in Saint Mary's Rome Program inspired her to work abroad.

"After taking part in the Rome program," DeLisle said in her speech Monday, "living outside the United States was something I really wanted to do."

The global market place is accessible to anyone who has the drive to be a part of it, she said. Although she thought grades and a choice of major are important, she explained that other qualities are necessary for successful employability.

"The driving force is the fact that there is a quest for knowledge and continued education," said DeLisle. "Make sure people know you want the international experience. You can't be a passive observer."

Self-awareness, motivation, empathy and social skill are factors in the work place, DeLisle explained. Most women, she said, already possess these qualities.

Flexibility is also essential. "The most important skill," DeLisle said, "is the ability to adapt anywhere."

DeLisle offered advice to women interested in the business world.

"Women working against women does not work," she said. "Work together and use women as your support. You build up barriers. Success comes when you tear them down."

DeLisle was a Humanistic Studies major at Saint Mary's. Her lecture covered "Opportunities and Challenges for Women in the Global Market."

Donors establish new scholarship

Special to The Observer

The University received a $250,000 commitment from two anonymous donors to establish an undergraduate scholarship in honor of the late Father J. Bernard Clark.

"The ministry of Father Bernard Clark and numerous other Holy Cross priests like him is among the distinctive benefits of a Notre Dame education," said University president Father Edward Malloy. "This gift is a heartening tribute to their work and witness."

Clark, a native of Montgomery, Ala., made first vows in the Congregation of Holy Cross in 1951 and graduated from Notre Dame in 1955. Ordained to the priesthood in Le Mans, France, in 1958, he studied medieval history at the University of California, Berkeley, and at Notre Dame. From 1970-73, he was assistant director of Notre Dame's Medieval Institute. He left Notre Dame in 1973 to serve in a variety of ministries, including director of campus ministry at California State University, Hayward; associate pastor at St. Francis Xavier Church in Burbank, Calif., and at St. Elizabeth Parish, Portland, Ore., and director of campus ministry at the University of Portland. He died of a heart attack on July 29, 1989, at the age of 56.

The commitment is a component of the University's $767 million "Generations" campaign. Announced in 1997, "Generations" is the largest fundraising campaign in the history of Catholic higher education.

An article in Monday's Observer were actually 90 incidents of treat Saturday's football game. There stated that 85 people were treated for heat-related illnesses at Notre Dame. ‘Any time you can generate research support from a nationally recognized private agency it helps raise the visibility of the research that's going on at that institution,' Hyde said.

The current funding could have future research, Hyde explained. The grant from the March of Dimes will be spent purchasing equipment and paying research assistants.

"You can pay graduates and post-docs, you also get more done; you can apply for more funding, it's a mushroom effect,' Hyde said.

While most research is undertaken by graduate students, this project is one that will enable undergrads to benefit, engaging them in laboratory research as well.

"I think that any time you can get outside funding it helps the undergrads immediately," Hyde said.

He expressed hope that once the gene is cloned, undergraduates will have the opportunity to research various aspects of the gene and the protein it encodes.

Undergraduates have already been a part of the project, which has been in progress for several years. "We had undergraduates working on the original isolation of the mutation several years ago," said Hyde, noting that such work helps broaden the education of the undergraduates.

"Even if they don't want to go on to graduate school, it allows them to gain a little more breadth in their knowledge," he said.

Hyde has been a member of the Notre Dame faculty since 1988.

Laboratory releases new LAM software library on Web site

Laboratory for Scientific Computing software allows for parallel computing

Notre Dame's Laboratory for Scientific Computing has released a new version of its Local Area Multicomputer (LAM) software library.

LAM software implements a Message Passing Interface (MPI) which allows the Central Processing Units (CPU's) of multiple computers to work in concert, thus combining and greatly increasing their power. This process is called parallel computing. The LAM software can run on many different types of computer, from desktop personal computers (PCs) to supercomputers.

"Packages like LAM have made parallel computing much more available to users of PCs because the computers themselves are economical and much of the software, including the Linux operating system, is free," said Jeff Squyres, a Notre Dame graduate student in computer science and engineering and one of the LAM package developers.

"The result is that clusters of PCs have replaced supercomputers for some applications, and often with tremendous cost savings," he added.

According to Squyres, the increasing popularity of these clusters, or "poor man's supercomputers," has spawned a nickname, "Beowulf." He said that LAM is the most widely used version of MPI for Beowulf clusters around the world.

More information on LAM may be obtained from the LAM Web site at http://www.mpi.nd.edu/index.html. The complete LAM software package may be downloaded from the Web site free of charge.

Toilet paper thieves make clean getaway

Thieves hot wired a truck packed with thousands of dollars worth of toilet paper, police said Monday. The silver truck was taken from a yard in southeast Melbourne, between Sunday afternoon and Monday morning, a spokesman said on customary condition of anonymity. The truck was parked there overnight and the driver reported it missing Monday morning when he returned to the place it was parked. The truck’s load of toilet rolls was valued at $18,900. No arrests were immediately reported.

Turkey’s military maintains its clout

Associated Press

ISTANBUL

In normal times, August 30 is the day that Turkey’s powerful army salutes itself, rolling tanks down city boulevards and sending sleek fighter jets streaking overhead to commemorate Victory Day, the country’s main military holiday.

This year was different — no big parades, no mass rallies, no flowery speeches. All but a few low-key celebrations were called off, in deference to the more than 14,000 people who died in Turkey’s devastating earthquake on August 17.

But just because the military passed up its annual display of muscle-flexing and firepower doesn’t mean its clout has vanished. Though humbled in some ways by the quake catastrophe, the military’s role in Turkish society remains dominant.

At 750,000 strong, the army is NATO’s second-largest. With seats on Turkey’s national security council, the military plays a key role in both foreign and domestic policy, and senior officers make up a highly respected elite class.

Despite its far-reaching influence, the army likes to avoid appearing too overbearing.

In the chaotic hours after the 7.4-magnitude trembler leveled a wide swath of northwestern Turkey, top generals said were ready to enforce martial law if the government declared it.

But Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit, mindful of sensitivities over Turkey’s three military coups since 1960, balked.

The reluctance to turn matters over to the army might actually have been a relief to the military brass, said political analyst Hiter Tiran of Istanbul Bilge University.

“It’s not my impression that there was a great deal of enthusiasm among the generals about martial law — I think they offered more as a courtesy,” he said. “And when the government said no, it saved the army from responsibility for a rescue effort that was generally viewed as somewhat incompetent.”

So anyway, the best years of my life have now circled down the drain. What’s new with YOU? At least, that’s what everyone indicated when I picked up my $30.00 piece of paper in May. Apparently, I peaked somewhere around age 21, and it whizzed right past me. This was somehow bothersome, as I wasn’t ready to accept that the pinnacle of my entire existence was, essentially, the night I spent peeling a classmate’s hair away from her face as she re-routed seven gin and tonics from her digestive system to the depths of Luka Marian. So I wrestled with this question all summer in a Steel Cage Match of self-actualization: Despite all the challenges, joys and freedom that the Real World offers, are dining hall turkey past the point of sharing my best years with Obi-Wan? And the answer is: Yes. The Real World sucks. You should stay out of it at all costs. It’s nothing but was built-up, car insurance and old people demanding their senior citizen discounts.

I’m stuck here. I have no choice but to face reality, begin contributing to society, and put my degree in political science to work by marrying Obi-Wan Kenobi.

Mr. Kenobi, noted Jedi Knight, previously held his claim to fame within the Star Wars community as the mentor of Luke Skywalker, noted Jedi Whiner. After sudden death forced Obi-Wan’s retirement from active duty, he mostly held his time popping up every now and then in a translucent manner to issue an incidental aside to Luke. (Um, you know how you totally made out with Princess Leia in the last movie? She’s your SISTER, you dip-wad. Just so you know.) With the arrival of Episode I, however, we are privy to a vital and stunning new aspect of Obi-Wan’s character: He was, in his youth, fully hot. This is indeed an important revelation. There simply aren’t a lot of men to lust after in the Star Wars universe. Han Solo is taken. The aforementioned Luke is a sister-kissing wuss until the last 15 seconds of “Return of the Jedi.” And the rest of the men are either consumed by evil, quick to be exploded or a curious shade of green.

Young, Hot Obi-Wan Kenobi — not to be confused with Aged, Non-Hot Obi-Wan Kenobi — has been dismissed as a tight-brained light-saber-up-his-butt kind of Jedi, but if you ask me, that’s just a yummy invitation to mess him up. And when Obi-Wan does get old, I already know what to expect: He’s going to turn into Alec Guinness, which is an unmistakable plus because God only knows how any of us are going to grieve out, and you could do much, much worse than a Dependent-Age Alec Guinness. When Jerry Hall hooked up with Mick Jagger, for instance, all she wound up with, eventually, was an old Mick Jagger, who is looking more and more like Moses these days, assuming Moses spent the entire Nixon administration exceeding the recommended daily allowance of the narcotics food group. Besides, just when Obi-Wan reaches an age when he appears to be on the brink of going AARP–raving mad, Darth Vader is scheduled to come along and whack him, albeit rather rudely, in half. And THEN do you know what Obi-Wan does? He DISAPPEARS! He cleans up after himself! How many men do that when they’re ALIVE? Obi-Wan is, if nothing else, a low-maintenance type of guy.

There are certain flaws to this Kenobi business, however, such as the minor issue of my current boyfriend. And I say this: My Kevin is a good man, but when was the last time I saw HIM smash five battle droids against a wall with a flick of his wrist? Not recent­ly, I’ll tell you that. Sadly, though, I am past the point of sharing my best years with Obi­­-Wan. Still, I bet he can do a mean set of crowd push-ups.

Mary Beth Ellis, a 1999 graduate of Saint Mary’s College, would like to warn the current inhabi­tant of her last dorm room (CA2 Le Mans Hall) that the lock on the bath­room door does not latch properly, but she and her roommate have probably figured that out already — most likely in a horrifically embarrassing manner. At least, that’s how Mary Beth Ellis fig­ured it out.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

The idea is to discuss, not to argue

We're here to learn, right? By engaging in free discussion, as they call it, we seek to understand the points and positions of others, which, in turn, enables us to grow in our own perspectives.

I would not say that the environment I experienced while perusing the Viewpoint Section of Monday's Observer was conducive to discussion or understanding that is worth listening to. But it is not worth listening to Jay Johnson's letter to the editor ("Plan on gay ads is outrageous, immoral," Aug. 30) the thought he chose to communicate. His graph was an insult directed at Monk and Chandra. How was I to know that the non-discrimination clause is not his priority, which is disappointing because it is a hot topic I am interested in discussing.

My admission of the University's position according to them is that the clause was rejected on legal grounds. They fear that such a statement would blackball them on court. For the languages who wish to fire a gay faculty member for academic reasons. I don't know if I believe that; why couldn't they make such a concern explicit in the clause? Then again, the word of the administration shouldn't take them on their word.

At any rate, I want to know what others think, and more importantly, why Jay feels so strongly on this issue. He must have some life experience or understanding that is worth listening to. But it is not worth listening to Jay insult our president as "bigoted and hateful," or knowing that he thinks our faculty is "sheepish." The difference between arguing and discussing is clear.

Another discussion that I enjoy participating in is that centered around women becoming priests. In her column ("Four Views and an Occasional Point," Aug. 30) Kate Littledale picks a fight with those who do not think women should be priests. I am again left to wonder why she believes she does that, but I have no inclination from her column. She compares Church to a refrigerator and priests to bottles that call her "petty and ridiculous." She in my view this as "hyper-conservatives."

The idea is discussion. I want to understand you, be understood and in the process learn about both of us and the issue involved. If anybody's interested in giving a call, we'll talk to all those who want to argue, yell at somebody else.

Don't expect others to pay for your abortion

I am appalled and at the end of my rope with this lawsuit against the state of Indiana regarding Medicaid paying for abortions.

As you already know, tax dollars are paying for them in cases of rape, incest and risk of the mother's life. Now they are trying to expand the scope of "need" by including "medically necessary" abortion that is where it will end.

First of all, pro-aborts have stated for years that we have no right to push our morality onto others. What do they think tax funded abortions are "medically necessary"? They are using the money from strong pro-life citizens to push an issue they think is wrong with this picture. It's OK to push our ideals onto you, but you want freedom from my ideals.

Second of all, "medically necessary" is a generic term used to cover a multitude of ifs—most which could not be considered life-threatening. In this day and time of modern medicine, the diseases these doctors see are being treated and cured. What they don't tell you, however, are the risks, which are both physically and emotionally very serious and, at times, life-threatening. These truths have been hidden under the table for too long.

This idea of tax-funded abortions is, once again, taking the responsibility for the pregnancy off of the ones responsible for it. This is a little baby in the womb that we are discussing here. A father and a mother are involved. I do not believe that anyone should get an abortion to cover their mistake or their changed mind. They get caught up in a situation, the mother gets pregnant and then they expect the state to take care of the cost of their "solution."

In our legal system, there is no taking responsibility for their own actions. So you get pregnant. What happened to the solid moral ideas of taking responsibility for your actions? This lawsuit is another way of providing abortions for whatever reason and at any time. Believe me, it will work out that there will be more, if you are allowed to choose out of your options.

Bottom line, do not expect others to pay for your abortion. I am sick of my tax dollars paying for things that I strongly oppose and things that I work hard to stop. Yet, each year, tax money that has come from my check is going to support the pro-abortion values.

Statistics vs. Reality

Study Notre Dame on a purely statistical level, and it appears to be an institution on the rise. The endowment is reaching levels never seen before. Enrollment remains steady. The University is holding the line at an increase of five percent annually (seemingly a dubious boast, but in light of the massive inflation in college costs, certainly a reasonable number). Faculty salaries remain comparatively high, making Notre Dame a competitive place of employment in the world of academia. The aggregate scores and academic ratings of the incoming freshman class are high, with each year's class breaking the previous year's record. Notre Dame is world-renowned in their fields of study. The theology department is known nationally. One theology department faculty member has a syndicated column, is sought routinely for commentary by "Time" and "Newsweek" and has written several best-selling books. Other professors are also accomplished authors, lecturers, teachers and thinkers.

On a statistical level, Notre Dame appears to be an institution on the rise. But the problem has never been statistics.

On a given day, the Notre Dame student can wake up early to attend a class dedicated to the study of the latest material on "Gender Studies." Later that day, he might read columns in the newspaper denouncing "speciesism" or witness drunken debauchery among his neighbors. He could walk past a row of malicious self-described "progressives" protesting with their willing accomplices in the faculty. He might return to his room to read articles demanding ordination of women or arguing for the use of artificial contraception as an assignment for a class. He could then return to his bed and dream of Richard McBrien.

In its incarnation, Catholic education was conceived as a liberal education in the truest sense of the term—giving the student a universal, liberating education that would prepare him for a meaningful life in the world. This universal conception of education, once common to all institutions of higher learning, is untied inoperable to religiously pious in the unique context of the Catholic university. Yet the ideal of liberating, universal education coupled with religious formation seems to have been lost. Indeed, instead of viewing religious faith and academic inquiry as complementary endeavors, the prevailing opinion in the American academy, and indeed, in some quarters at Notre Dame, is that the two stand in stark contrast to one another. This, I suppose, why such intense philosophical and political battles now occur in our journals of opinion, in our daily discourse and in the conflicting public pronouncements of student groups ranging from the Progressive Student Alliance to Right Reason.

Indeed, ours is a spiritual conflict—waging a war based on a philosophy that believes in the necessity of the orthodox exercise of the Catholic religion in Catholic higher education and those who do not. The philosophical underpinnings of Catholic doctrine must be the fundamental dispositions of the Catholic academies.

The mission of the the Catholic university is beautifully enshrined in the Apostolic Constitution Ex Corde Ecclesiae, first issued in 1990. Let us pray for its faithful implementation in order that the University may achieve its divinely ordained mission. For, as Ex Corde says, "It is the honor and responsibility of a Catholic university to converse itself without reserve to the cause of truth."

ALBUM REVIEW

At this Woodstock, the only 'Fire' was onstage

By JAMES SCHUYLER

This summer commemorated the 30th anniversary of the most memorable rock festival, the Woodstock Art & Music Fair. On July 6, Experience Hendrix and MCA records released Jimi Hendrix Live at Woodstock. This is not the first time that the performance of "Gypsy Sun & Rainbows," a.k.a. Jimi Hendrix and those other guys, was released. As part of the continuing effort of the Hendrix family to correct mistakes of the past, Experience Hendrix has released a double CD set including almost all of the band's performance.

Hendrix's performance wasn't originally released in its entirety due to the difference between perception and fact. Perception: Jimi Hendrix at Woodstock was the single greatest moment of rock and roll history and the greatest performance of the most legendary guitarist in rock 'n' roll history. The Woodstock patrons who survived the three days before were treated to an indescribable event. Only about one-sixteenth of the original Woodstock audience was left to hear Hendrix's headlining performance.

The reunited foursome stormed back onto the airwaves this summer with "California where everyone ends up minus the sugar or "magik" left?" In addition to "Around the World," there are some other songs that resemble the funk days of the Chili Peppers. Everything that Hendrix is not to say. Hendrix's growth as a musician in the middle of the record and they might actually be the two worst songs ever released on a Chili Peppers record. The band has written some great slow, depressing songs such as "Under the Bridge" and "Scar Tissue" which dealt with inner turmoil and demise. "Porcelain," a song about a fading movie star, is a horrible attempt to regain the sentiment found in other Peppers classics. Everything that Hendrix has experienced a Chili Peppers

There was only one thing that I really wanted to do this summer, and that was see Springsteen and the E Street Band in concert. The reunion tour that began in Barcelona in April was scheduled to arrive in New Jersey in June. As a Jersey boy and a Bruce fan, I had dreamed about seeing an encore at a local club. For the 15 New Jersey shows sold out in a matter of hours, making Springsteen the top-seller in the history of the Meadowlands Sport Complex. I was lucky enough to get tickets to two of these shows, one on New Jersey show on June 27 and another on August 2.

Bruce outside the arena was reminiscent of the boardwalk of Asbury Park, the shore town where Springsteen and the E Street Band got their start. There were games, food vendors and even a mini beach, complete with a volleyball court. Bruce karaoke was the most popular attraction, though, as fans tried their best to imitate a man whose vocal skillings can never end. What could have been a night of focused and intense songs "Youngstown" became a night of more light and fun ones. The stark rendition of "Point Blank" was riveting. Springsteen remarked that it was won on stage, to thunderous applause. The song reminded me of his idol, Neil Young, whose trademark guitar riff has made it a favorite in Samples fan circles. Despite being stripped to two guitars, Kelly shook the building.

The song inspired me to follow the band "Pour Some Sugar On Me". The band members were incredible; they transformed into electric blasts by the entire band. On the lighter side, the audience lent their voices to "Badlands" and "Hungry Heart" thanks to Springsteen's encouragement. "Out in the Street" and "Working On the Highway" caused everyone to start dancing in the aisles. The most sentimental moment occurred during the song "If I Should Fall Behind", which became a E Street statement of purpose. Nils Lofgren, Steve Van Zandt, Clarence Clemons and Patti Scialfa each joined Springsteen at the microphone for a verse. The encore were the highlights of the show. Springsteen played "Freehold", a new acoustic song that was inspired by a visit he made to his Catholic grade school. The song was noted with sentimental and humorous reminiscences of his day as a young boy. Bruce the "rebirth and redemption of Bruce".

He sings about his own experiences. The most climactic moment of the encore was "Born To Run." I have never experienced anything like this at a concert before. The arena lights flashed on and stayed that way for the whole song. The whole arena was on its feet, singing and waving their hands. The band was on fire with Springsteen screaming the lyrics and running back and forth from one end of the stage to the next and Weinberg pounding on the drums. It was a moment you would never forget. What was to follow was my all-time favorite Springsteen song, "Thunder Road." It was as bitter-sweet and beautiful as I had imagined and hoped it would be. Both shows ended with "Land of Hope and Dreams." According to Springsteen, this tour was about the "rebirth and redemption of Bruce". The passion of these concerts assured all that were in attendance that all the memories of the past are well. I feel fortunate to have been one of the many who experienced the extreme talent of all these musicians. I have never been to a better concert and doubt that I ever will.

Sean Kelly keeps The Samples' flame alive

By EMMETT MALLOY
Assistant Scene Editor

It's amazing to witness the exciting spirit of Sean Kelly. As the frontman for the Tretraveller band, the Samples, Kelly has experienced everything that is right and wrong with the music industry. After being signed to Arista Records in the late '80s, the band was dropped from the label over a feud about how the band should "change" its music. Kelly has finally let go of the issues from the past and focused again on his music.

The Samples frontman Sean Kelly takes a break during a recording session for the band's last album, Here and Somewhere Else.

Florida State tops AP poll list

Associated Press

The Observer

The season has barely begun and Penn State is already making a move on No. 1 Florida State. The Seminoles held the top spot in The Associated Press' first regular-season Top 25 AP poll.

collegiate football poll, but the Nittany Lions moved up a notch to No. 2 — just eight points behind.

Tennessee, the defending national champions, fell from No. 2 to No. 3. The Volunteers open the season on Saturday against Wyoming.

In Sunday night's balloting by 69 of the 70 sports writers and broadcasters on the AP panel, the Seminoles — 41-7 winners over Louisiana Tech on Saturday — received 28 first-place votes and 1,671 points.

Penn State, impressive 41-7 winners over highly-regarded Arizona on Saturday, had 26 first-place votes and 1,663 points. Arizona, ranked fourth in the preseason, tumbled to No. 15.

Tennessee had 13 first-place votes and 1,610 points. Miami's 23-12 win over Ohio State in Sunday's Kickoff Classic moved the Hurricanes into the Top 10 — at No. 8. The Buckeyes fell from No. 9 to No. 13.

Notre Dame, a 48-13 winner over Kansas on Saturday, moved up two spots to No. 16.

can't use you as a sundial, half of the front side will tear apart from the cart and the wheel will pop off when you try to make a turn.

And it was all downhill from there. There was the day a still-unidentified part of the cart was dragging from the bottom and I put a nice little streak of torn-up grass all the way across a practice green. There was the day one of the bag clips on the back of a normal cart broke and my industrial-sized trash can full of freshly-picked balls spilled all over. There was the day the thing just started shooting oil all over the place and the people in the golf shop radioed down that my cart was smoking.

There was the time I was dumping balls from the bins into a trash can and some twelve year old did his best Happy Gilmore and sliced one into the tree right above me. In short, I found out why they laughed at my youthful enthusiasm that day back in May. Now I'm older, I've seen things and I've learned one simple lesson: Stay away from the range cart. It has a mind of its own.

Holtz searches for strength at USC

Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. Lou Holtz looks at his South Carolina football team and sees concerns just about everywhere.

His offensive line is small and inexperienced. His defensive secondary is without leader Arturo Freeman, who ruptured his spleen last week and will miss at least four weeks.

Late Monday, Freeman had his spleen removed in surgery in Charlotte and could be back in Columbia as early as today.

Holtz also worries about his quarterback, the running game, the kicking game.

The young Gamecocks lack depth and experience.

Holtz openly questions their physical toughness and conditioning.

"I can't honestly tell you a strength of our football team, other than the fact we've worked hard," Holtz said.

"I feel so strongly about this game and everybody is emotional about this game and the State (1-0) on Saturday in the strength of our football team, we've worked hard," Holtz said. Police charge Jones with misdemeanor

Associated Press

HIGHLAND PARK, Texas

Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones was charged Monday with a misdemeanor for driving away from police during a traffic stop.

Police considered charging Jones with fleeing the scene of a traffic stop, but decided on a charge of interference with public duties.

Both charges are Class B misdemeanors, carrying a maximum penalty of a $2,000 fine and/or 180 days in jail.

Dallas County assistant district attorney Wendy Risinger said Jones' case was to be assigned to a criminal court and that Jones would have to make a court appearance.

Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple said Monday that neither Jones nor the team would comment further.

Jones apologized in a statement Sunday night. His brush with the law began Sunday morning as he and his family drove in two vehicles to Highland Park United Methodist Church for the baptism of Jones' grandson.

Police stopped one of the vehicles, a Suburban in which family members were riding, for going 45 mph in a 30 mph zone.

The car carrying Jones also pulled over.

Jones asked the officer, who was questioning the driver of the other car, if he could drive the Suburban with his family members to the church because they were late.

Highland Park Director of Public Safety Darrell Fant said officer Jerry Remington told him to wait, adding, "It will just be a minute. I'll do this as fast as I can."

Fant said Jones took the car anyway. One of Jones' employees then drove away in the other car, leaving the Suburban driver — an employee of Jones — at the scene with Remington.

Fant said Jones clearly was agitated in his encounter with the officer, saying he had an emergency and asking to speak with a supervisor.

A video camera mounted in the patrol car recorded the traffic stop, a key piece of evidence that won't be available to the public until the case is resolved.

He was stressed because of his late schedule," Fant said. "If he'd given him [Remington] three or four minutes, it would have been done."

Another patrol car followed Jones to the church with lights flashing but Jones did not stop until he let family members out and then drove several blocks to a private driveway.

In Jones' statement Sunday, he said he didn't know police were following him until he arrived at the church.

He said he drove away to avoid further traffic congestion and confusion.

"This matter occurred because of my very sincere effort to get all of my family to the christening of our grandson," Jones said.

Fant said Jones cooperated as he was handcuffed and arrested.

He was booked into jail, arraigned on a misdemeanor charge and released about an hour later this morning.

The Suburban driver, James Gafford, was cited for speeding and failure to carry his driver's license.

Fant said the media coverage of Jones' arrest surprised him.

Mayes moves to Seahawks in exchange for draft pick

Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The Seattle Seahawks acquired wide receiver Derrick Mayes on Monday from the Green Bay Packers in exchange for an undisclosed draft choice.

The Seahawks have been unable to convince their top receiver, Joey Galloway, to report to the team. Galloway is trying to renegotiate his contract with Seattle.

The trade reunites Mayes, a fourth-year pro from Notre Dame, with Seahawks coach and general manager Mike Holmgren, who was Mayes' coach in Green Bay.

"We feel very fortunate to get a player of his caliber," Holmgren said.

Holmgren said Mayes, who will join the Seahawks on Tuesday, will be able to play in Thursday's game against the Indianapolis Colts because Seattle runs the same West Coast offense favored by the Packers.

"We were thin at wide receiver," Holmgren said. "This move, I think, could be pretty good for us."

Packers GM Ron Wolf said he and Holmgren spent the weekend working on the deal.

"We're glad we could get him to a team that suits his talents," Wolf said.

Mayes, who was in the final year of his contract, was thought to be the leading candidate to start for the Packers opposite Antonio Freeman, the league's highest-paid receiver.

Mayes said last week that he planned on being the starter and wasn't expecting to be traded. But the Packers had too many receivers vying for too few roster spots. In addition to Freeman, Green Bay has veterans Bill Schroeder, Desmond Howard and Corey Bradford, while former Pittsburgh wideout Jahine Arnold and rookie Donald Driver have been impressive during the preseason.

"We're very pleased with the emergence of our receiving corps," Wolf said. "Some people have stepped up, and some people have been huge surprises. That made this decision very simple."

Mayes is known as an outstanding possession receiver with excellent hands, who lacks the speed to be a game-breaker. He also has been injury-prone, missing 19 games during his three years with the Packers.

"Not only do I lose a real good friend, I lose a pretty good teammate," Freeman said. "But I learned ... a long time ago that this is a business, and this was a business decision."

Mayes caught four passes for 40 yards and two touchdowns during Green Bay's three preseason games.

"We've got some good young guys, and the only way they're going to get better is to play," Green Bay offensive coordinator Sherm Lewis said.

Robinson leads New York to tourney finals

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New York Liberty, behind Crystal Robinson's 18 points, advanced to the WNBA Finals with a 69-54 victory over the Charlotte Sting on Monday night.

Robinson was 7-for-8 from the field to help the Liberty clinch the Eastern Conference title in the decisive game of the best-of-3 series against the Sting.

New York advanced to the WNBA Finals, which begin Thursday, for the second time in three seasons. The Liberty will meet the winner of the Houston-Los Angeles Western Conference final. They played later Monday night.

"We've got some good young guys, and the only way they're going to get better is to play," Green Bay offensive coordinator Sherm Lewis said.

At home on driving range

You know you've wanted to. You know you've wondered all about it, what it's like, how you can get to do it.

Anyone who has ever set foot on a driving range — a golfer and non-golfer alike — has that one common curiosity, that one common desire, to drive a range tractor enclosed by a big cage that picks up all the balls while people fire shot after shot right at you.

Actually, everyone starts out dreaming of hitting that slow moving beast with the perfect drive as it inches along 250 yards away. Hitting one still remains the highlight of my otherwise lackluster golf career.

At some point, this fantasy turns to the flip side of the tee box. Wouldn't it be awesome to be driving that thing around, hunkered down for battle, ready to take on the whole army of hackers who are trying to knock one right through that metal cage?

This curiosity calls to us, like a siren on some island and the desire to be part of the desolate sea of dead and overgrown driving-range grass. Yes, driving that range tractor would be the ultimate experience, at least in the limited world of range balls, tee and golf clubs.

For most people, this must remain a dream. The passport to the forbidden city of golf only remain a dream. The passport to the forbidden city of golf only remain a dream. The passport to the forbidden city of golf only remain a dream. The passport to the forbidden city of golf only remain a dream. The passport to the forbidden city of golf only remain a dream. Jefferson looks to lead Irish at Michigan

By TIM CASEY

Clifford Jefferson has the perfect idea for a birthing present. "It'd be nice to beat Michigan," said Jefferson, who will celebrate his 20th birthday Monday. "It would even be better if I made an interception and ran it for a score."

Although he did not intercept a pass against Kansas on Saturday, Jefferson had an excellent game. After being the goat in the second quarter, Jefferson recovered in fine fashion.

Early in the third quarter, on fourth-and-nine, Kansas kicker Joe Garcia lined up for a 49-yard field goal. If he connected, the Jayhawks would have been within four.

Instead, a right block was called and Jefferson took over the corner and just as the coaches designed.

Earlier in the game, Jefferson was on the other end of the spectrum. He slipped while covering receiver Termaine Fulton, who scored on the play.

"Basically I lost my footing a little bit," Jefferson said. "The thought I had was that if I had not slipped, I could have intercepted the ball or at least knocked it down. It took my though out of that when I slipped and he caught it on me.

But Jefferson wasn't about to let that mistake get him down. Making his first career start at cornerback, Jefferson stepped up his play at the most opportune time.

"I got down on myself when I tripped on the touchdown pass," Jefferson said. "I had to go out and 'levels' and think about that. I knew that somebody had to come up with a big play because the score was getting closer," he added. "Someone had to regain the momentum for our team. It just happened to be me that made the play."

The sophomore from Dallas was unexpectedly thrust into the role of starting cornerback following the summer departure of Brock Williams, suspended for a year for disciplinary reasons. Before Saturday, Jefferson had seen less than four minutes in his career.

"It was a big adjustment because I was figuring to at least play a little bit this year," said Jefferson about his

Men's Basketball

Notre Dame faces tough season schedule

The 1999-2000 Notre Dame men's basketball team will play a minimum of 12 games against teams that participated in the 1999 NCAA Championship. Two games will be against national champion Connecticut and one against Final Four participant Ohio State.

The Irish schedule, released on Monday afternoon, shows the Irish will play a minimum of four games against teams that played in the 1999 National Invitational Tournament.

Notre Dame, under the direction of first-year head coach Matt Doherty, will open the season in the 1999 Preseason NIT at 8:30 p.m. on Nov. 16 at Ohio State. The game will be televised nationally on ESPN2. Notre Dame's advancement in the Preseason NIT will determine that exact number of games played against '99 postseason teams.

The Preseason NIT continues with the second round on Nov. 18 against semifinals and finals will be held at Madison Square Garden in New York City on Nov. 24 and 26.

Notre Dame will open its fifth season as a member of the Big East Conference at 7:30 p.m. on Jan. 5, taking on Connecticut in the Hartford Civic Center.
