While the eyes of Notre Dame fans nationwide will be on Saturday's football game in San Antonio, Mobile, Ala., a contest tonight right here in South Bend may very well provide an equally important perspective on Irish athletics.

Where the women's soccer team takes the field against North Carolina, it will wind up another chapter in one of the fiercest rivalries in college sports, and take another step in the ascent of women's athletics at Notre Dame.

Over the past 10 years, Notre Dame has become a major player in the world of women's intercollegiate athletics. Soccer, basketball and volleyball have all climbed to levels of national prominence, and with the recent additions of women's rowing and lacrosse, the University is nearing gender equality in scholarships and funding.

All of this has combined to create a sense of pride in women's sports at Notre Dame. "I think when I first got here in 1998, quality women's athletics was more of a dream instead of a reality," said Chris Petrucci, who coached Notre Dame's soccer from 1993 to 1998. "When I left it was a reality. Almost every team was competing on a national level."

From better facilities to more funds, there are a number of factors to which coaches attribute the improved state of women's sports. Perhaps the most important one is Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, which bans gender discrimination in institutions that receive federal funds.

However, the fundamental reason, many say, lies in a basic commitment by Notre Dame to developing and funding women's programs beyond the bare requirements of Title IX. "I'm really pleased with the way Notre Dame has treated us and rewarded us for our success," said Muffett McGraw, head women's basketball coach. "I don't think you can be successful without support from the administration."

That support has largely come in the form of dramatic financial aid and budgetary funding increases. In 1987, Notre Dame gave out 27 full scholarships for women's sports. This year the University gave out 95. In 12 years, the University has also added six women's sports, including the soccer program, which has become a national powerhouse.

These gains, however, have come at a price. In 1992, after 37 years of competition, the wrestling program was disbanded. Dick Bauer, who served as athletic director for two years, said Bucknell is a Division 1 university where she was also the head coach of women's swimming for 17 years and student liaison for female athletes. Kachmariak graduated from Slippery Rock University with a degree in education in 1979. She then went on to get her master's degree in education from Slippery Rock with a concentration in the physiology of exercise in 1980.

Cook said she believes that it was a good decision. "I think the University was making a conscious decision to focus our resources on those programs that could achieve the most success."

Kachmariak was hired on August 30th from a pool of more than 20 applicants. She was offered the position by the Bucknell University athletic director for two years. Bucknell is a Division 1 university where she was also the head coach of women's swimming for 17 years and student liaison for female athletes.

Kachmariak said she believes that it was a good decision. "I think they made the right decision."

Women's soccer is just one of the varsity sports programs that has benefitted from Title IX legislation over the past 10 years.

This year in Saint Mary's athletics, it seems that the only consistent is change. Adding to the list of changes this year is Saint Mary's. Lynn Kachmariak began on Thursday as the Belles' new athletic director.

She takes over for Jan Travis, who left the position at the end of last year. Jimi Cook, former assistant athletic director, has been acting athletic director in the interim and was instrumental in the hiring process.

"What sold me on her, and what made her standout, was her personality," Cook said. "I feel comfortable leaving now. I know Saint Mary's is in good hands and I won't have to worry."

Jump Around

Who cares? Who cares if I'm behind? I care very much about going to class and learning. I care about listening to my professors and being moved, being educated, being motivated. What I do not care to do is stress out. Two years ago, I have shown that too much of that goes on here. One thing we shouldn't forget is that this mix of success and failure, pep rallies and hangovers, is a gift.

It's this big, gold jumping rope we whisper around enthusiastically. We jump and jump, get tired and sometimes forget why we started jumping. We take for granted our legs and feet proprietor-owners of our bodies, and our hands, tightly gripping the handles.

We lose sight of the jump, the push that made us decide, "Yes, this is where I want to be! This is what I want to be doing!" We lose that kindergarten zeal - the need to jump as high and as fast as we can. We end up just jumping.

Yes, getting into a good grad school is key. But we're not ready to battle depression is not stressed to incoming freshmen, as the need to study or the dangers of drinking, said University of Iowa lawman Amanda Ball.

"I never thought of depression as a college statistic," she said. "If a lot of women do become depressed in college, you think that - like parrying too hard - it would come up." After puberty, women are twice as likely to develop depression than men, Rao said.

The shift from high school to college is usually the first considerable change in a young adult's life. Whether it's a good or bad experience, it's enough to spark bouts of depression, said Dr. Uma Rao, UCLA professor.

"Women tend to focus heavily on their problems and are often times unable to look past them," Rao said. "The introspective nature of women can lead to the behavior and ultimately depression."

Though freshmen seem caught up in the excitement of their first week of college, Ball said, she can see why depression is prevalent.

UCLA study: College makes girls depressed

LAS VEGAS

Almost half of all women making the transition from high school to college will experience depression, a recent UCLA study says.

"We did find a high rate of depression, but we were not very surprised at our findings," Rao said. "Overall, we knew that women entering college are at a high-risk period of developing depression."

Rao's procedure - in which 150 women were followed for five years after high school graduation - and findings were published in the July issue of the Journal of the Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry.

"One-third of the women we studied developed depression as a new phenomenon," Rao said. "However, people who already had depression were more likely to become depressed."

The idea of coming to college ready to battle depression is not stressed to incoming freshmen, as the need to study or the dangers of drinking, said University of Iowa lawman Amanda Ball.

"I never thought of depression as a class statistic," she said. "If a lot of women do become depressed in college, you think that - like parrying too hard - it would come up."

North Quad hopes to see ATM in future

By KATE WALTER
Staff Writer

North Quad residents soon might have an ATM machine close to home. Student government and administration representatives currently are working with Notre Dame Federal Credit Union to get a 24-hour money machine installed at an undeveloped North Quad location. Michael Fierro, Coalition Council representative, said he believes students on North Quad should have access to an ATM.

"We want an ATM that is more convenient for those living on North Quad and also that is safe," Fierro said. An NDFCU-supported machine is preferred because, unlike a keybank ATM, users are not issued a monthly surcharge, Fierro said. Though Fierro has not met with bank officials, NDFCU President Leo Ditchcreek said he will consider a proposal.

"If it makes sense, we'll be very interested in looking into it," Ditchcreek said. Fierro, Hall President's Council co-president Brian Bigney and assistant vice president for Residence Life Bill Kirk plan to meet with NDFCU representatives next week.

Currently, NDFCU supports ATMs in the Hesburgh Library and at bookstore. These machines are only accessible during those locations' hours of operations. NDFCU also has a 24-hour ATM outside Beckers.

BLACK BELT INSTRUCTORS

Exciting children's self-defense program needs an experienced, mature, responsible black belt who is interested in instructing a class once a week in South Bend or Goshen for the fall semester. Interested instructors please call Sheri at 765-423-4821.

The Office for Students with Disabilities is looking to hire the following positions.

Student Assistant: This person will help a Notre Dame student with a physical disability travel to events on campus. Evening hours, approximately 8-10 hours a week. $10.00 per hour.

Student Aide: The aide will assist a Notre Dame student with a physical disability with dressing and moderate personal care. Morning and evening hours approximately 8-10 hours a week. $10.00 per hour. Preferable male students or Saint Mary's nursing students. Training will be provided.

Academic Aide: This position will assist a student with a disability by acting as a reader, scribe, and note taker for CSE 571: Artificial Intelligence. Aide must be knowledgeable in computer science and engineering or math to be able to successfully communicate the material in this course. Approximately 5-7 hours per week. $9.00 per hour.

If you are interested in these positions, please call the Office for Students with Disabilities at 631-7157.

A Notre Dame-Michigan football game long has been associated with fierce competition, and this Saturday ESPN will celebrate the college rivalry as it highlights the match on College Game Day at Michigan Stadium. College Game Day, a 21-year Saturday tradition, takes place every weekend as ESPN goes on the road to film pre-game college football commentaries. Every Saturday at 11 a.m. EST, a one-hour live show is dedicated to the big college football games of the weekend. The crew consists of host Chris Fowler, an employee of ESPN since 1989 who specializes in college football and basketball, and analysts Lee Corso and Kirk Herbstreit. Corso, a 1957 graduate of Florida State University with 28 years of coaching experience, and Herbstreit, a 1993 graduate of Ohio State University with three years as OSU's quarterback, will focus on Notre Dame's past as well as predictions for the upcoming game.

"College Game Day will present great features, including features on Notre Dame and other star performances of the weekend," Mack Nwulu ESPN spokesman said. "University is looking to hire the following positions.

Rowndahl, Athletic Director at the time, and the decision was made because of the University's continuing recruitment and realignment of its athletic programs. The sport's funding and 11 scholarships were given towards women's teams and its coach of eight years, Frau McCann, was given a job teaching physical education at Notre Dame.

"It wasn't a happy situation," McCann said earlier this week. "It was a difficult time."

Nor were administrators pleased about dropping wrestling. Associate director of Athletics Missy Conboy was involved in the decision and said she wishes the move had not been necessary.

"It was a hard choice," she said. "After we did it, we said we didn't want to do this again. If we can, let's not do this again."

Existing men's sports are hamstrung by gender equity efforts in other ways, too. The 85 scholarships devoted to the football team each year make it difficult for Notre Dame to achieve balance between men's and women's teams, so men's Olympic sports (all but football and basketball) suffer, Conboy said. The men's lacrosse team has no scholarships, while men's swimming receives none. These numbers are lower than many of their competitors, especially those without Division I football programs.

At present, Title IX does not require a school to have a male-to-female ratio in athletics equal to that in its overall student body, but simply that the school be consistently moving towards that equality, according to Conboy. While Notre Dame did not admit women until 1972, 45 percent of its student body is female.

Notre Dame—where 45 percent of students are female but only 33 percent of whom played varsity sports in 1997—"did not admit women until 1972. The University has started women's rowing and lacrosse teams in the last three years and plans to add 25 scholarships for women by 2005. Thus far, it has met the criteria for consistent improvement. While there are no plans at present for new women's sports, administrators will continue to increase female participation in the current ones.

"At this point, we're not sure we need to add any sports," Conboy said. "We could get to 45 percent with the sports we have."

Other Title IX stipulations include equality in facilities, coaching and equipment, which the University has worked towards over the past decade, Conboy said. This effort has been aided by general physical plant improvements such as the Rolfs Sports Recreation Center, Lauflin Sports Center, Eck Tennis Pavilion and the expansion of Notre Dame Stadium, with its enlarged training room. These scholarships and facilities, and the commitment to women's athletics they demonstrate, also has big schools to Notre Dame, coaches say.

"Recruits now see us as big time," McGraw said. "Before they didn't really see us that way."

Volleyball coach Debbie Brown argues, noting that the ability to offer recruits a scholarship makes a big difference in the quality of players a program can attract.

"The teams that are fully funded with scholarships are the teams that are at the top," she said.

La Keysia Boone captain, woman's soccer

Ultimately, greater opportunities for women to take part in the tradition of collegiate athletics are the end result of gender equity efforts and Title IX legislation, and today's stars express their appreciation for that.

"Title IX is one thing that has really helped (women's athletics)," said La Keysia Boone, captain of the women's soccer team. "It has definitely been better than in the past. Our parents never got a chance to play."

Man receives gene therapy injection

COLUMBUS A 36-year-old traffic controller from South Dakota received a gene therapy injection for muscular dystrophy Thursday, the first to receive the injection. Dr. Jerry Mendell, chairman of the Department of Neurology at the Ohio State University Medical Center, injected Donavan Decker’s foot with genes for a muscle protein missing because of a genetic flaw. Decker suffers from limb-girdle muscular dystrophy, a disease that he has had for more than 20 years. Muscular Dystrophy Association spokesman Tim Brown said. Decker is the first of an expected six participants to receive the injection in the FDA-funded trial. “We’re cautiously optimistic about what this may mean for the future,” Brown said.

Scientists celebrate Internet’s birthday

LOS ANGELES The computer scientists who pioneered the Internet and entrepreneurs who are profiting from it celebrated the 30th anniversary Thursday of the global network’s first primitive connection. Three decades ago, on Sept. 2, 1969, a small crowd gathered inside a lab at the University of California, Los Angeles, where two bulky computers with flashing white lights were linked in a 12-foot cable. Silently, meaninglessly bits of information flowed between the computers. It was a test of the technology that remains the foundation of the Internet. “In those early days, Len Kleinrock and his colleagues couldn’t possibly have foreseen that they were on the ground floor of one of the most life-altering innovations of this century,” UCLA Chancellor Albert Carnesale said.

Canada to test-burn U.S. nuke waste

WASHINGTON The Energy Department will ship a truckload of plutonium-blend reactor fuel from the Los Alamos lab in New Mexico to Canada later this year to test whether Canada’s reactors can be used to dispose of weapons-grade plutonium. U.S. and Canadian officials announced agreement Thursday on the shipment. The experiment at the CANRE reactor in Bruce Power, Ontario, 100 miles west of Ottawa also will involve a separate shipment of similar mixed-oxide fuel from Russia. The fuel is a mixture of plutonium oxide and uranium oxide. The Energy Department previously announced that about 36 tons of plutonium from the U.S. weapons program will be burned as a mixed-oxide fuel at three U.S. civilian reactors.

U.S. delegates tour south Iraq

Associated Press

BASRA U.S. congressional staffers shook hands with barefoot, emaciated Iraqi children Thursday during an inspection of a squad, low-income housing project in Basra, Iraq’s second-largest city. “The notion that children have to walk in raw sewage to get in and out of their houses is an abomination and unacceptable,” said trip organizer Phyllis Benins of the Washington-based Institute for Policy Studies.

Whatever the causes — it has to change,” she told Associated Press Television Network. “And in my view the sanctions must be lifted.”

The congressional group, on a weeklong humanitarian-assessment finding mission, arrived in Iraq on Saturday despite force opposition from the U.S. State Department, which claimed the trip would be used for propaganda by President Saddam Hussein’s regime. The Americans first toured Baghdad and then were taken by the authorities on a trip of Iraq’s buttered south.

They visited Ammara, Nasiriya and Basra — the three cities that bore most of the brunt of the country’s 1980-88 war with Iran, the 1991 Gulf War over Kuwait and the nine-year-old U.S. trade sanctions.

In Ammara, 240 miles south of Baghdad, they inspected Saddam Hospital, where mothers used manual fans to drive away flies from their malnourished babies.

In Basra, a city of 1.5 million people, Iraqi doctors told the Americans that two in 10 babies born in southern Iraq were deformed.

Official statistics showed that the number of babies with defects has increased threefold in the south, the main battlefield of Iraq’s two wars.

Columbian army kills rebel leader

Associated Press

BOGOTA The commander of the rebel unit that kidnapped three U.S. Indian-rights activists slain in March was among at least two dozen guerrillas killed in an army ambush, authorities said Thursday.

Still at large, though, were the rebel superiors who ordered the killings, U.S. and Colombian officials said.

Napoléon Carreno, alias Comandante Rogelio, was positively identified among 24 rebels slain by soldiers early Wednesday in an ambush on guerrillas fleeing from an attack on a police post in a northeastern oil-producing region, a senior judicial official said.

Comandante Rogelio led the guerrilla cadre that abducted Terence Freitas, 24, Ingrid Wissinawati, 41, and Lal’enea Gay, 39, on Feb. 25 as they were leaving the U’walitant reserve, the official said on condition of anonymity.

The three Americans, bound and shot to death, were found a week later just across the border in Venezuela. The official said Rogelio’s unit had turned to another cadre of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Columbia, or FARC, while they were still alive.

The 15,000-member FARC, the country’s main rebel force, said a rogue leader named Gildardo carried out the assassinations with consulting superiors. They said Gildardo would be disciplined.

U.S. and Colombian officials have alleged, however, that higher-ranking commanders were involved.

Comandante Rogelio’s death “doesn’t mean the FARC can avoid its responsibility at the highest level,” U.S. Ambassador Curtis W. Kamman told CNN television. Washington has demanded that the FARC turn those responsible for the Americans’ killings over to civilian authorities for prosecution. The rebels have refused.

The U.S. government severed exploratory contacts with the FARC after the killings.

Dennis destroys outer banks

Associated Press

NAGS HEAD, N.C. Tropical Storm Dennis hung off North Carolina's Outer Banks for a third day Thursday and kept pounding away at the coast with 14-foot waves and 45 mph gusts, doing more damage since early Monday. Dennis across the islands very quickly to the beach than a single coastal geologist. Although a hurricane can be deadly because it can blow down buildings, it typically "goes across the islands very quickly."

The assault on the North Carolina coast has been going on since early Monday. Dennis first battered the shoreline as a hurricane, then bunted out to sea and weakened. But within a day, it was backtracking toward the Outer Banks.
The hall was evident everywhere on Hatteras Island, where wind and waves flung beach dunes onto the main highway and chewed up the asphalt. Abandoned trucks, some overturned, were half-buried in sand near the road. The highway, N.C. 12, expected to partially reopen late Thursday, but it will be several weeks before it can be rebuilt. "It's beyond the crisis stage," state Public Safety Secretary Richard Moore said. "There are places where there are no blown beach sand."

With road crews working to clear a path through drifted sand and standing water, National Guard convoys managed to reach villages on the southern end of Hatteras with food and supplies. Power and water service were restored to much of the island, but the phones still were down. Electric power also was restored on Ocracoke Island, which had operated for days on generator power.

Bob Toney, owner of the island Inn and Restaurant on Ocracoke, said that islanders are calling this the worst flooding since Hurricane Gloria in 1985.

"It's beyond the crisis stage. There are places where there are no dunes at all, and if you try to just throw blacktop down, you're throwing your money away."

Forecaster praises El Nino for good effects

Associated Press

WASHINGTON For a while it seemed as though everything from tornadoes to heatwaves and hailstorms to hurricanes was being blamed on El Nino. Now, it turns out the periodic weather event produced a lot more good than bad.

That's the conclusion of climatologist Stanley Changnon, who calculated that while the 1997-98 El Nino can be blamed for 1,894 deaths, it also can be credited with preserving 850 lives that would have been lost in normal winter and hurricane seasons.

And its $4.2 billion to $4.5 billion in damage is far outweighed by nearly $20 billion in benefits, Changnon reports in the September issue of the Bulletin of the American Meteorological Society.

"If you treat it as an economic outcome for the country - most of the country benefited, most of the Northern states and blocked Atlantic Coast hurricanes, " Changnon said.

True, the El Nino weather phenomenon was blamed for major storms in California, and, by some, for deadly tornadoes in Pennsylvania and an ice storm in the Northeast.

But it also produced an exceptionally mild winter in most of the Northern states and blocked Atlantic Coast hurricanes.

"I figured, just watching what was happening, that it was going to be a zero-sum game but it turned out far from that," Changnon said in a telephone interview from his Mahomet, Ill., home.

Michael Glantz, an El Nino expert at the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Colorado, was skeptical.

Clintons sign million dollar estate deal for Senate run

Neighbors upset over fame in quiet neighborhood

Associated Press

CHAPPAQUA, N.Y. President Clinton and his wife signed a contract Thursday to buy a $1.7 million house in this New York City suburb, providing her the residence she needs to "run for a U.S. Senate seat next year," White House spokesman Larry Locke said the Clintons will borrow $1.3 million from Bankers Trust Co. to purchase the five-bedroom house. The loan will be guaranteed in part by Terry McAuliffe, the president's friend and one of his chief fund-raisers.

The white, three-story wood-frame home in the Westchester County town Chappaqua was built in 1889 and features a swimming pool, five bedrooms, four bathrooms and two fireplaces. The top floor contains an exercise room. The lot, just over an acre, is screened by evergreens at the end of a cut-de-sac called Old Home Lane.

"I'm very pleased about the house. It's beautiful. We like it a lot," Clinton told reporters as he left for an evening fund-raiser in Cameron, N.Y., for his wife's senatorial aspirations.

At $1.7 million, the Clintons agreed to pay slightly more than the list price of $1.605 million. They will pay about $26,000 a year in property taxes on their new residence, according to tax records.

"We appreciate everyone who helped make our search for a new home an enjoyable experience," the Clintons said in a statement issued while vacationing in upstate New York.

The area offers plenty of golf courses and a predominantly Democratic town council. The town of 17,000 is known for excellent schools and beautiful homes.

"This is putting us on the map," said Bonnie Partor, who lives a few streets away. "Other would-be neighbors worried that having a former president in residence would bring out the masses, like those in the stream of cars who stopped to look at the house this week.

"It's a disaster," said Carol Thouven, whose home is separated by a wooded area from the one the Clintons are considering. "This town is too small. This is going to destroy the intimacy of the town.

The president and first lady will close on the house Nov. 1. "The Clintons will continue to live in the White House," Locke said. "As with other presidents, this house will be their private home and they will spend as much time there as they wish.

Under terms of the mortgage, McAuliffe—a close friend of the president and the campaign fundraiser—will put up $1.35 million of his money as collateral. The Clintons will make a down payment of $500,000, drawing on money from the blind trust established at the start of their presidency.

Lockart said the house would be held in the names of both the president and first lady. They will have a five-year balloon mortgage which will adjust every six months, and after five years, they will have to pay off the loan or refinance it, he said.

Terrorist group takes claim to bombing

Associated Press

A previously unknown Islamic fundamentalist group claimed responsibility Thursday for the bombing this week of an upscale shopping mall near the Kremlin in which 41 people were injured.

The claim, made by telephone, said the bombing was connected to fighting between Russian troops and Islamic militants in the southern republic of Dagestan. But some officials dismissed the claim as a hoax.

Shards of glass and metal were blasted through a video store in the underground Makhachkala shopping complex in the Tuesday night explosion. Several of the victims remained hospitalized with serious injuries Thursday.

A man who identified himself as Khasbulatov and claimed to be a leader of the Islamic Army for the Liberation of Daguestan called journalists Thursday to say his organization was responsible for the blast. "Terrorist acts will continue on the territory of Russia until all Russian troops withdraw from Daguestan," the caller said.

The rebels in Daguestan have suffered several defeats recently in the fighting, and Russian officials fear they could resort to terrorism to persuade federal troops to back off.

A spokesman for the Federal Security Service (FSB) in Moscow said the claim seemed to support a connection between the blast and the Daguestan fighting. The FSB news agency reported. The spokesman didn't elaborate. But some authorities were skeptical of Thursday's claim.

"I think the militants are just trying to give themselves more weight. The claim doesn't ring true," said Interior Ministry spokesman in Dagestan, Yeziyraev. By authorship, the bombing sparked fears of terrorism in the Russian capital and police beefed up security around the city.

A central Moscow train station was evacuated Thursday after police found a suspicious-looking handbag they believed contained a bomb, but it turned out to be a false alarm.

The Islamic Army for the Liberation of Daguestan is not a known group in Daguestan, where scores of small Muslim fundamentalist organizations operate.

The unconfirmed Islamic militant leader named Khasbulatov was arrested in Daguestan earlier this week and was still in custody Thursday on charges of participating in this month's fighting, illegal weapons possession and inciting religious hatred, officials said.

Militia wreaks havoc in East Timor

Associated Press

DIJI Pressure built Thursday for the United Nations to deploy armed peacekeepers in East Timor, as Indonesian security forces failed to stop pro-Indonesian militia gangs from wreaking havoc on the territory.

The violence in the wake of Monday's independence referendum left two more local U.N. staffers dead Thursday and sent thousands of people fleeing their homes in the provincial capital of Dili.

Automatic gunfire echoed across Dili and houses were on fire in nearby villages.

The U.N. workers were killed in Maliana, 80 miles west of Dili, which has been the scene of recent violence by the militias. U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhardt said in New York. He had no other details.

The killings came one day after fighting between pro- and anti-independence supporters killed at least three people near the U.N. compound in Dili.

The militias, which reportedly are supported by armed Indonesian special forces, have claimed responsibility for at least 127 deaths since Monday. The government has acknowledged at least 113 victims.

Almost 99 percent of registered voters turned out despite a militia campaign of terror to keep them away.

Independence activists say they will win the ballot by a landslide when the result is announced next week.

The militias, which reportedly are backed by armed Indonesian special forces, have been fighting a campaign of terror to keep East Timorese voters from going to the polls.

The possibility is not closed for the government to allow the U.N. Nations to deploy a U.N. peacekeeping force in East Timor.

State Secretary Muladi top aide to president

"Indonesian armed forces should be withdrawn from East Timor and replaced by a U.N. peacekeeping force that must take immediate action to disarm and disband militias," the coalition said.

As calls for peacekeepers grew, Indonesia for the first time indicated it might deploy a multinational force into East Timor. "The possibility is not closed for the government to allow the U.N. Nations to deploy a U.N. peacekeeping force in East Timor," said State Secretary Muladi, President B.J. Habibie's top aide.

However, a peacekeeping force would have to be authorized by the U.N. Security Council, and Western diplomats say there is not unanimous support for such a force at the moment.

Deputy U.S. ambassador Peter Burleigh ruled out a U.N. peacekeeping mission in the near term.

"It's not a practical suggestion at this point in time," he told The Associated Press. "We are counting on the Indonesian authorities ... to create a situation of peace and security in East Timor regardless of the result of the vote."
Gore calls for stricter environmental laws

Associated Press

Vice President Al Gore announced new initiatives Thursday designed to protect the country's shorelines and oceans as a promised federal help for struggling fishermen.

Gore called for "hold steps" to protect the oceans, the Democratic presidential front-runner said. "They're not just part of the environment, but they are an engine of our economy.

Gore announced that President Clinton had signed a proclamation Thursday giving American authorities the right to enforce environmental, customs and immigration laws at sea within 24 nautical miles from shore, up from 12 miles.

"That's going to greatly increase our ability to protect our environment," Gore, who also noted the measure would help authorities fight drug smugglers.

Prior to his speech at the aquarium, Gore greeted the barter with teenagers who showed him full of shellfish, seaweed and other marine life, helped him perform tests on the water's color and even gave him a net to catch tiny plankton. He discussed with them some of his environmental thoughts. He announced $5 million in aid to help fishermen suffering from declining fish populations and fisheries closures in the Gulf of Maine. In return for the money, fishermen must agree to work with scientists conducting research on the health of the fish stocks.

"No plan is worth anything unless it protects those working families who depend on a healthy ocean," Gore said.

Gore announced $5 million in new initiatives, steps "to fight drug smuggling, protect the oceans, assist fishermen."

Ray-Ban lays off hundreds

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO

Ray-Ban got a new owner.

DeMarco, managing director of Ray-Ban's Southwest operations, said:  "It would be inappropriate for me to communicate anything that has not been communicated to employees. It would be appropriate to wait until all decisions have been made," DeMarco said.

Some of the company's 600 workers told the newspaper they heard Thursday morning that their jobs would end at the close of shift.

"They said it didn't make sense to keep the plant open because of the deep in sales," said Genevva Serna of San Antonio, a 10-year veteran of the company.

Workers said there were rumors their jobs were in jeopardy before Thursday, when management informed them of the layoffs in small groups. The sunglasses plant in southwest San Antonio changed hands in late June when Luxottica bought Ray-Ban and its manufacturing plants for $640 million from Bausch & Lomb Inc.

Workers told the newspaper they were told to return to work at 7:30 a.m. Friday to collect their severance packages.

Mourners hold Flight 111 vigil

Associated Press

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia

With a Muslim chant and a Jewish song, gospel singing and a poem to a lost father, relatives and friends held a candlelight vigil for the 229 people who perished in the crash of Swissair Flight 111 on Tuesday.

Several thousand people—fishermen, sailors, firefighters, rescue workers, airline employees, and government officials, many of whom participated in recovery activities—joined relatives for the service at the Citadel, a historic fortress overlooking the city.

"Flight 111 was no ordinary flight. The place it had to crash was no ordinary place," Miles Greety, of Redding, Conn., whose brother Pierce died on the flight, told the gathering.

"We came to Nova Scotia in shock and in disbelief," Greety said, his voice cracking.

"In a pit of sorrow, and you reached out your hands to us and somehow in your simple decent compassionate way let us know we had love."

The group held a moment of silence at 10:31 p.m.—the moment the out-of-control jumbo jet slammed into the Atlantic with such force a seismicograph 25 miles away registered the impact.

The ceremony began with a series of prayers—gospel singing, a reading from the Koran, Islam's holy book, Hebrew chants, Salvation Army singing—reflecting the wide national and religious diversity of the victims.

Flight 111 had been nicknamed the "U.N. Express" for the many United Nations' employees who took it between New York and Geneva. When it crashed, the flight was carrying passengers from 50 different nations.

After months trying to work out an interfaith ceremony meaningful and acceptable to all, the ceremony Thursday included celebrants from Anglican, Roman Catholic, Greek Orthodox, Presbyterian, Jewish and Muslim faiths.

"Our gathering is a powerful show of international and interfaith harmony," said Dr. Jamil Badawi, an imam from the Islamic Association of the Maritime Provinces.

A negotiating deadlock Thursday forced Secretary of State Madeleine Albright to mediate details of a lingering West Bank agreement between Israel and the Palestinians rather than risk a major diplomatic setback.

The intervention appeared to be paying off as Albright flew to Jerusalem from Alexandria, Egypt, for a post-midnight meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa and a senior U.S. official both raised the possibility of a signing on Friday. A possible site is the Egyptian resort of Sharm el-Sheik.

The U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said both sides clearly wanted an accord but he could not predict "whether we will have an agreement by tomorrow."

After the three-hour meeting between Barak and Albright, Barak's office issued a statement saying the Americans "continued in their efforts" to bring about an agreement.

The statement said "answers to Israel's proposals" were expected from the Palestinians during the course of the morning.

The main sticking point was a dispute over how many Palestinian prisoners Israel would release as a goodwill gesture to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat. Some are in jail for terrorist acts.

After conferring in Alexandria with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, no stranger to the mediator's role, Albright met with Arafat for more than an hour, then flew in Brendan to see Barak.

She left her Friday schedule clear for all contingencies. "We hope very much they will come to a conclusion as soon as possible," she said.

Until now, Albright had held back, operating on the assumption the most successful agreements are the product of direct negotiations between the parties with minimal outside intervention.

But as prospects waned for a signing ceremony Thursday, Albright stepped in. "It is natural that while I am here I try to be of assistance," she said. Egypt immediately welcomed the intervention. "We believe the continuance of the United States in the peace process is very important," Foreign Minister Amr Moussa said. "We welcome the U.S. role, and we don't think the U.S. is on the sidelines."

Asked when an accord would be ready, Moussa told reporters, "It is possible such an agreement must be signed in hours or in days," he said. "Just get ready."

Moussa, who attended the Albright-Arafat meeting, said the issue of prisoners was "almost closed." He said it was possible an agreement will be signed Friday in Sharm el-Sheik, a Red Sea resort.

Barak said he was optimistic there will be progress in the peace process "in the coming weeks."

The two sides already have agreed to a new timetable for an Israeli troop pullback from an additional 11 percent of the West Bank in three stages, starting this month and ending Jan. 29. They also set a new deadline of September 2000 for a permanent peace accord on final status issues such as the fate of Palestinian refugees, Palestinian statehood and the future of Jewish settlements.

Take cold showers, save the planet

Environmentalists, members of the Green Party and Progressives take note. We should start taking cold showers. This is no joke. We have a serious pollution problem on our hands. Power plants pump thousands of pollutants into the air each year. This causes smog and acid rain that kills plants and animals. It ruins plants' immune systems, making them more susceptible to life-threatening diseases. It ruins lakes and rivers, the natural habitat of fish. Trout and salmon are being born with half developed gills. Three eyes and two tails. It might even hurt humans.

These power plants also deplete mother earth of her natural resources, using up precious reserves of coal and uranium. After two centuries of abuse, she cannot take much more. Laws have proven ineffective. The polluters have bribed Congress and State Legislatures into submission. The only real response left is the personal one. You and I are to blame, and we can do something about it.

Think about it. Sociologists working in close conjunction with officials from thousands of water department offices and the waste management workers across the country have spent years proving their hypothesis that, on average, men use twelve gallons of water and women use fifteen gallons of water per hot shower. So big deal, you say, but it is a big deal. Multiply that by 280 million and imagine the figures you end up with in this country alone. It takes a lot of coal and uranium to get that water but. And of course, in many rates, it costs energy and money to get that water to and from your shower. The plants that produce this energy are notorious for polluting the atmosphere. The hotter your shower, the more they pollute, and you let it happen.

Unlike some other problems in our society, you can do something about this one. There is no need to protest, no need to write your local congressmen, and no need to hug a tree. You can act, tomorrow morning. So tomorrow, when you step up to the plate — I mean the faucet — and the time comes to choose between the H and the C, choose C, and you will be saving mother earth from her pending doom. And as you shirk for fear, wondering if you will ever survive this flask, imagine all those pollutants you are preventing from flowing into the air at the local power plant. You have done your part, not only will you have not used any hot water, you will have used less water.

Of course, that is not all we will have to educate others. Since education is no longer about learning the truth, but teaching social skills that get one to conform to the dominant liberal ideology, we will have to convince everybody to take cold showers. To begin, we could have an advertising campaign. We could get funding from environmentalist groups to plaster, "Be Bold, Do it Cold" on billboards up and down the fruiting plain. Following the lead of anti-smokers, we could put up billboards of stupid looking people taking hot showers.

Perhaps TV advertisers could show the faces of men and women soap ing, shaming, and rinsing under cold water. The expressions would be much more interesting and captivating than the serene look prevalent in most ads these days. We could make TV shows and movies in which the guy who takes a hot shower is the bad guy, or someone taking a cold shower gets away from the bad guy. Do you think the girl in Psycho would have been done in by Norman if she was taking a cold shower? Next, we could promote scientific research that reveals the health benefits of cold showers. They increase your heart rate, which is a form of exercise, and will add years to your life. They probably are better for people with acne. They make for more efficient use of time. With a cold shower, you’re in and out. No standing around dreaming about never, never land. This means you get to work faster, and can be more efficient and productive, the two most important values in a capitalist society like ours.

They also make for a quick burst of energy in the morning to get you all the sand out of the eyes. This might also reduce the need for coffee, decreasing caffeine additions. The benefits are endless. I will leave it to scientists and nutritionists to figure them out all. In short, they will tell us that by taking cold showers, we will not only help the environment, we will help ourselves, making the sacrifice worth it.

Petty complainers lose sight of true suffering

Please forgive me for the reactionary nature of this article. Please forgive it seeming ad hominem appearance as well. It is not intended as an attack on any one individual author. Nor is it an attack on an entire student body. It simply expresses my concern for and dismay at the superficial and ungrateful nature of writing that I have often seen elitized from my own shoulder. We are so blessed to be here at this school. Though I have often been angered and even disgusted by what I have read in our school’s newspaper, I have seldom felt that an article so strongly warranted rebuke as “Who needs an Alarm Clock?” by Maureen Smith on Tuesday, August 31.

This article typifies and epitomizes everything that has disturbed me about a certain kind of narrow-minded writing in The Observer. I’m tired of hearing over-privileged college students ridicule the wonderful and pleasant women in the cafeteria for the way they look. I am tired of being threatened with the food we are all so blessed to have. And I will not stand by as an idle witness to an assault on the work of men and women making an honest living by keeping this campus the beautiful place that it is.

As to Smith, I’m sorry to hear that each morning she is torn from her cocoon of suburban luxuries by the rude grunts and groans of waking reality. Unfortunately, we on this campus live under the constant barrage of harsh realities like the beeping of concrete trucks. Much to our dismay, “slate-roofed and marble floored buildings” don’t just materialize out of thin air like a pink-ribboned Mercedes on the driveway for Sweet 16. There are good reasons for such an early start for construction work, not the least of which is to minimize the harsh effects of the “generous and abundant August heat” in which these men and women labor. Smithie and all other students should sympathize because it is the same heat in which she so loathes to sleep. Imagine spending the rest of your life doing eight minutes of sleep justifies the usage of so grave a term in her mind, then I can only hope that this was written in jest.

The attack on any one individual author. Nor is it an attack on an entire student body. It simply means that they encourage casual sex or any sex. It simply means that they teach acceptance and love, not conformity and alienation to those who don’t conform. GLND/SMC should have been. Why aren’t they? Because people are always scared by the stretch of the imagination, an outrageous claim. It doesn’t even need to be said. The world should sexuality make one bit of difference? The answer is: it doesn’t. However, until the majority accepts this as common knowledge, groups like Outreach ND/SMC are necessary. As a Catholic institution, the University of Notre Dame should set an example of love and acceptance to a world that does not always accept people who differ from the majority.

I have no air-conditioning in my home. This summer there were four different major construction sites within a single block of where I live. My windows remained open as the screams of jackhammers and concrete saws shook me from sleep each morning. While she was enjoying the “comfort of my own fluffy bed and the security of my pink painted room,” I was listening to hard working men and women making a little bit of noise in order to hold the structures of our society together. My antipathy to this slight disturbance was an understanding that we live in a world that requires constant maintenance and often times the casualty of this reality is our convenience.

Moreover, I was most grotesquely appalled by her conclusion of the whole thing in the further her message: Using it as she does, “We are suffering here,” she blasphemes the very meaning of the word and insults all those in the world who are truly in pain. If the loss of a few precious minutes of sleep justifies the usage of so grave a term in her mind, then I truly pity her. I can only hope that this was written in jest.

For too many of us, when confronted with the facts of life after two decades that have been drapped in luxuries and conveniences, we have built no immunity to them and recoil at the thin “jagged” manifestations. However, I believe the problem at hand is not so much the lack of “respect for the community and the needs within it” as a gross lack of perspective. So, to all of you past and future authors of assaults and pronouncements of grievances upon the imperfections and incoherencies of campus life at the University of Notre Dame, buy some earplugs (I’ve got plenty of extras), shut your windows, go to bed a little earlier, or put a pillow over your head. But next time you feel like haranguing your readers with the extravagations of an学生 body that is so blessed to be here, stop and consider those in the world who are truly suffering.

Roadtripping season has once again descended upon Notre Dame. Here's a look at how some students are preparing for this year's trips.

By AMBER AGUIAR
Scene Writer

With football season comes roadtrip season, and this weekend thousands of Domers and Belles will travel to Michigan for Notre Dame's first away game. This will be the first of many roadtrip opportunities this year, with the Stanford game the only away game more than a day's drive away. And students across campus are already planning for future treks.

"I can't wait to party on someone else's campus. We're always nice to visitors here, so hopefully they'll be the same way," said senior Brian Rigney.

Sophomore Matt Klooser looks forward to watching this week's game from Michigan Stadium. "I have a friend that goes to Michigan so I'll get to sit in their student section," Klooser said. "Of course I'll still be cheering for Notre Dame. But I know we wouldn't really like it if some Michigan fan decked out in Michigan Stadium."

I have a friend that goes to Michigan so I'll get to sit in their section, so hopefully I won't die. I'll be sure not to taunt anyone.

Some students like senior Jen Baltruizak are looking forward to away games just for the long drives. "Sure I want to see the games, but what I really can't wait for are the actual trips. There's nothing better than a good roadtrip," she said.

Even members of Notre Dame's band, like senior Ruth Luckas, are looking forward to the bus ride to the first away game. "I can't wait for what we call Crudwells, where we can make new freshmen do whatever we want. Anything from fetching a soda to reading very personal and risqué accounts out of magazines like Cosmo," said Luckas.

Many are already looking beyond Michigan to later games. "Purdue is the only place I know where you can get burritos the size of your head," said Baltruizak, recalling the slogan of a Mexican restaurant she passed and wanted to stop at on the way to Purdue her sophomore year.

She is among many juniors and seniors who remember roadtripping to Purdue for a game two years ago and are looking forward to going back.

"But this time we're going to beat them. There's nothing worse than a long drive home after you've had a loss. No one talks and everyone's irritable. It's terrible," said Baltruizak.

Others are waiting for the longer, overnight trip to Tennessee.

"Why Tennessee? Because Tennessee is Tennessee!" said senior Erin Orthmeyer. "It's the only place I've ever been where you can still get Sundrop Soda and candy cigarettes. And the town sheriffs double as midwives."

After an eventful fall break trip to Tennessee where she encountered a small town sheriff with a preachersman tattoo who hailed from South Bend, and now splits time delivering babies and fighting crime, Orthmeyer can't wait to go back. "You never know what will happen next," she said.

According to junior Keith Kawamoto, the trip to Knoxville will be awesome.

"Tennessee is going to be crazy! There will be over 100,000 screaming people and you'll be there in the middle of all of it with all of your friends. It's the perfect time to get away from school and just have fun." Roadtrips make an ideal getaway for any student, but personal travelling preferences vary. Many roadtrippers try to be as efficient with time as possible, stopping only when necessary.

Senior Rob Razzano, on the other hand, recommends remembering "to stop at several gas stations along the way to take advantage of all the cool, cheap stuff you can find there."

But regardless of their personal roadtripping styles, students agree that some things are always essential. "All you need are good buddies, tickets, a grill and most importantly, the 'Riggs Party Mix.' There’s nothing like jammin’ with the Rigger," said Rigney. Mixed tapes prepared before a roadtrip are popular staples, and according to students like Rigney, they are one of the most important parts of a great drive.

Razzano agrees. "Good music is definitely key. I’d recommend some good Southern Rock, or maybe some Blue Grass. But Metallica is essential in case someone in a car made for four and a half," he said.

Others suggest that snack foods are a key element of an enjoyable roadtrip. "Good food is what makes a good roadtrip," says Orthmeyer. "It wouldn’t be official without beef jerky, a burrito supreme and a slurpee. Besides, stopping for food breaks up the monotony of a trip."

Kloese agrees that especially when planning to drive to an away football game, it is important to consider food. "You have to take a grill, one small enough to fit in your trunk, that you can pull out in the parking lot when you get there. It’s an instant tailgater. Just throw on some brats and it’s glorious," he says.

But above food, legroom, and music, good company is on almost everyone’s list of roadtrip essentials. "The most important thing is the people you go with, because you won’t have a good time if you don’t get along," says Kawamoto. "Roadtrips are all about the camaraderie."

"When I was 13, my family and I went to go Old Faithful. We got stuck in a traffic jam in Montana when a family of bison decided to step in the middle of the road, backing up traffic for a mile. We had to wait so long for the bison to move, that it was dark by the time we got there. To this day, I still don’t know what Old Faithful looks like."

Katie Taft
Sophomore, Welsh Family Hall

"I was on a tour this summer for eight weeks with the Undertones. We did around 30 concerts all over the U.S., driving in a 12-passenger van with no air conditioning or FM radio."

Marcos Suarez
Sophomore, Alumni Hall

"We got lost in a really bad part of D.C., so we went to Burger King and saw a cop. We asked him for directions and he gave them to us, as well as some words of advice: ‘Lock your doors and drive really fast.’"

"Road to fun, fun, fun"

Look at roadtripping made easy and fun.
Cleveland
Richie Sexson's three-run homer capped another inning for Cleveland against Oakland, sending Charles Nagy and the Indians to a 6-5 victory Thursday night and a four-game sweep.

Sexson's third homer in three games against the Angels gave him 27 this season, and it was his second three-run shot of the series. He hit a three-run homer to close out the eighth.

Nagy (11-4) allowed one run and eight hits in seven innings. The right-hander joined against Atlanta's Greg Maddux in the ninth for his ninth victory.

Garrett Anderson and Tim Salmon hit two-run homers in the ninth for Anaheim. Mike Jackson, the Indians' third reliever in the inning, earned his 33rd save as David Justice made out of a bases-loaded jam with a lefty pop out the left-field wall.

Roberto Alomar homered for the Indians, who won for the 13th time in 14 games and reduced their magic number in the AL East to 22, 10-3 in his last 17 starts.

A two-run single by Sexson gave the Orioles a 2-0 lead in the second, and Nagy responded with four straight outs, including a two-run single by Dave Martinez, to pull even in the third.

Baltimore pulled away with a five-run, third-capped, hit by Mike Devereaux.

Ray Miller Bay give Ripken the rest of the night off.

Blue Jays 6, Twins 1
Carlos Delgado hit his career-high 39th homer and David Wells picked a fourth straight start in helping the Toronto Blue Jays over the Minnesota Twins-6-1.

Toronto moved within four games of both Boston and Tampa Bay of the AL wild-card race. The Red Sox and Athletics both lost last night.

Delgado's three-run homer, a 432-foot drive, gave the Blue Jays a 4-0 lead in the first. Delgado, who topped the 38-homer mark Thursday, leads the AL East.

Todd Walker hit an RBI single and drove in the second run, leading the Yankees beat the California Angels 7-2 rout.

Jeph Conine had three hits and scads of the Rays for 4-0 lead in the first.

Cuzzi makes difficult debut

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO

Phil Cuzzi became a full-time big league umpire Thursday, something he’s worked toward since he began his professional career 14 years ago. He was in no mood to celebrate.

"It’s difficult," he said before the Phillies-Giants’ game, which had three newcomers on its four-man crew.

"I have the plate today," Cuzzi said. "I’m going to work the best that I can. I don’t know what to expect from the other guys. We have a young guy coming up from Triple A. He’s never worked a game in the big leagues before. It’s just hard that he would have to look to me as an experienced guy," he said.

Cuzzi, 44, of Nutley, N.J., was among 25 minor league umpires hired by major league baseball in the aftermath of the umpire union’s failed strategy of mass resignations.

Cuzzi said he spent Wednesday evening with Paul Nauert, a rookie umpire who was among the 22 whose resignations were accepted. Nauert flew home Tuesday night and his plane was taken by Jim Wolf, a minor league ump who was called up for the day to work his first big league game.

"I think his head was still spinning," Cuzzi said of Nauert. "He’s hopeful, as we all are, that he’ll get his first big league game."

Cuzzi, a fill-in big league umpire for the last eight years, had similar feeling.

"My first year in the minor leagues was 1985," said Cuzzi, who began his pro career in the New York-Penn League. "You wait for this day … I never even expected when I got a chance to be a fulltime member of the staff that it would be under these circumstances. So in that sense, there is a cloud behind me."

Cuzzi said he wasn’t bitter toward union chief Richie Phillips, who promoted the failed strategy.

"I don’t think Richie Phillips was ever really the issue," Cuzzi said. "The problem was that the union started to splinter. If everyone would have stuck together, I don’t think we’d be in the situation we are in now."

Other new hire, and eight-year veteran Brian Gorman at second. Wolf is the brother of Philadelphia pitcher Randy Wolf. Nauert, senior vice president Katy Feeney said the league would make sure the umpire, who may get more fill-in work this season, doesn’t work the plate in games his brother is scheduled to start.

"I have butterflies big-time," Jim Wolf said. "I’ve got a swarm in there."

Cuzzi’s career began 14 years ago. He was in the big leagues before. It’s just a really awkward situation," he said. "It’s put a pall on the arbitration process will bring him back on the field.

Others in the crew were Alfonso Marquez at first base, also a new hire, and eight-year veteran Brian Gorman at second. Wolf is the brother of Philadelphia pitcher Randy Wolf. Nauert, senior vice president Katy Feeney said the league would make sure the umpire, who may get more fill-in work this season, doesn’t work the plate in games his brother is scheduled to start.

Holtz, Bowden make game family affair

Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C.

Bowden vs. Holtz.

It sounds like a video game, football fantasy, but it’s real, from recruits’ living rooms to “Live with Regis and Kathie Lee.”

Champs Tommy Bowden and South Carolina’s Lou Holtz have begun a rivalry that could last decades — and they don’t even play for almost three months.

Clemson opens at home Saturday against Marshall, and South Carolina travels to No. 24 North Carolina State. Holtz vs. Bowden, however, has been imprinted on fans’ minds since they both arrived in December to rescue programs in distress.

Almost immediately after they arrived:

♦ Bowden snagged Holtz’s predecessor Brad Scott to help with area recruits. Holtz recruited South Carolina’s “Mr. Football,” runner Derek Watson.

♦ Holtz created a statewide stir with an antilliter campaign. The Clemson post office was burned down.

♦ The Columbia post office announced a special envelope commemorating Holtz’s debut. The Clemson post office ended the same for Bowden.

♦ Talk show host Regina Phillin talked up his friend Holtz on the air this spring. Then Bowden’s wife, Linda, wrote Phillin to remind him there was another rising star in the state.

"She’s a true Clemson gal now," Bowden said.

"There’s a true South Carolina guy, but I can still tell when he’s a South Carolina gal," Holtz said.

Clemson-South Carolina is one of college football’s more savage, if not celebrated, matchups. The rivals have out their 1981 national championship and Atlantic Coast Conference success with then-coach Danny Ford, South Carolina backers counter with their loyal support, selling out Williams-Brice Stadium four straight years despite just one bowl victory in 106 seasons.

Two days after Bowden’s introduction at Clemson, South Carolina dipped in with Holtz, who has since used his megalomaniac charm to prop up the program and readjust its losing attitude about football.

Neither is playing it up, however.

"It’s just a really awkward situation," he said. "It’s put a pall on the arbitration process will bring him back on the field.

Cuzzi, a fill-in big league umpire for the last eight years, had similar feeling.

Agassi wins in third round play

+ '94 champ beats German Pretzsch despite bad calls

NEW YORK

Andre Agassi, a two-time U.S. Open champion, got off to a strong start this year when he defeated German Michael Pretzsch, 6-3, 7-6, 6-3, Saturday at the US Open.

Agassi, the 1994 U.S. Open men's champion, is back on the court for the first time since winning the title two years ago. He won 30 of his last 33 matches, and lost to only two players – Pete Sampras three times, Yevgeny Kafelnikov once.

With Sampras out of the U.S. Open with a back injury, and defending champion Patrick Rafter gone with a rotator cuff tear, the No. 2 Agassi knows he is the man to beat.

"I'll be disappointed if I don't win here because I want it as bad," Agassi said. "But, you come in well aware of the fact that you can't expect to win. You have to just expect to control the things you can, which is your preparation and how hard you work out there and how much you focus and how you allow yourself to execute. Those are where my expectations will be.

"Opinions don't matter a whole lot. They really don't, not when it comes down to getting it out there on the court. All it takes is for one bad match for U.S. Open dreams to be squashed. I'm not confused as to what's required to win any match, regardless of who it is that I'm playing."

Against Pretzsch, recently of the Challenger circuit and making his Open debut, Agassi didn't let his intensity waver. He built leads early and crisply, moved forward efficiently and cut off rallies away when he had the opportunity.

"I'm playing the big points well," Agassi said. "That's a reflection of confidence and playing a lot of matches. I'm also serving well in big situations. Overall, my game is right where I would like it to be."

The only players in Agassi's half of the draw who would figure to give him trouble if they meet are Nos. 3 Kafelnikov, No. 8 Carlos Moya, and No. 10 Marcelo Rios. Moya and Rios are seeded to meet each other in the fourth round.

Rios, the Chilean whose baseline style resembles Agassi's, reached the third round with a 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3 victory over Swiss qualifier George Bastl.

Swann recovers from knee surgery

Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz.

Eric Swann, Arizona's standout defensive tackle, recovering from major surgery on his arthritic right knee, said Thursday he hopes to be playing football again in six to eight weeks.

Breaking his long silence, Swann spoke on a telephone conference call from his home. What he said had him disappointed in his Cardinals, who hoped the two-time Pro Bowl performer would be ready for the Sept. 12 opener at Philadelphia. But the rehabilitation is taking longer than originally expected.

"I'm not bothered by it," Swann said, "because I have to be 100 percent when I step back on the field and that's a fact. I can't go out there half-ready or be a quarter-ready, I've got to be 100 percent. The surgery was a very aggressive surgery and sometimes it takes longer than usual."

If Swann's timetable is accurate, at the earliest he wouldn't be back until the Arizona Cardinals' game against Washington, Arizona has the following week off, then plays New England at home on Oct. 31.

Swann went to San Francisco on Wednesday to be examined by Dr. Richard Steadman, the noted knee specialist who performed the surgery on Dec. 7. Tests conducted by Steadman showed the strength and flexibility of the knee had increased from 50 percent to 80 percent of normal.

Swann played in seven games last season, then had surgery performed by the Cardinals' orthopedist, Russell Chick. The team expected him back in a few weeks, but he was disabled with the results and went to Steadman, the Colorado-based doctor who performed major surgery on Olympic gold medalist skier Picabo Street and many other noted athletes.

"It was a smart decision on my behalf," he said. "It's a personal decision and it's not against anybody else. Eric Swann has to take care of Eric Swann."

Steadman performed an unusual "microfracture" surgery, designed to help regenerate cartilage growth. Swann said he had been in extreme pain and his career would have been over if he'd tried to play the remainder of last season.

"If you were to take the knee and just split it in half and look at it, there's a lot of wear and tear in the hard cartilage on the bones there," Swann said. "There were a lot of bad spots there that were actually wearing out. There were nerves hitting nerves.

"When you have a situation like that, it makes you very tender in the walking around and very tender get in the squatting position and play, because you've got a lot of give. On top of that, you add 360- plus 600-plus pounds of guys double-teaming you and cutting you and you've got a pretty heavy, spicy, oily dish, if you know what I mean."

Now, Swann said, "if things stay on course and there aren't any terrible setbacks or anything and I don't rush it, I could play another fire or six years easy."

Swann hasn't spoken to reporters about his condition since before last year's first surgery.

In his brief conference call, Swann insisted he was not bother ed by the criticism he received from fans and local sports talk show hosts who thought he should have played through the pain as the Cardinals made their postseason run.

"I'm playing the big points well. Overall, my game points would I like it to be."

Ripken connects for 400th career home run

Associated Press

BALTIMORE

Cal Ripken hit his 400th career home run Thursday night, joining an exclusive circle of sluggers whose membership now stands at 29.

Ripken connected off right-hander Rolando Arroz in the third inning of the Baltimore Orioles’ game against the Tampa Bay Devil Rays. The three-run homer, on a 1-1 pitch, landed in the left-field seats and set off a wild celebration at Camden Yards.

As Ripken rounded the bases, the scoreboard scrolled a list of all his home runs. He was greeted warmly by his teammates in the dugout, then came out and tipped his batting helmet to the standing crowd.

The crowd remained on their feet as the Devil Rays made a pitching change. Ripken used the delay to wave again to the appreciative crowd.

The shot, estimated at 372 feet, was his 16th homer of the season and first since July 25. He spent a month on the disabled list with nerve irritation in his lower back before being activated Wednesday.

Ripken returned from his second stint on the DL intent upon blocking out all thoughts about hitting No. 400 and moving closer to his 3,000th hit.

“I always try to downplay that,” he said. “The home runs, I’m tickled to death that I’m able to contribute and have that kind of success.”

“If they come, they come and I’ll be very happy about it. If they don’t come, my career won’t be any less fulfilling as a result of that.”

But he added that trying to hit one out in his last home game before going on the disabled list

“I tried to hit a home run because I thought it would be great to do it here at home,” he said.

“I was able to concentrate and get a good swing on the ball. But it seemed to make me out of my game a little bit, trying to swing hard and hit a home run every time. You can’t hit a home run by swinging for it.”

The home run gave Ripken 2,969 career hits. If he gets No. 3000, he will gain entry into an even tighter fraternity of hitters: those with 3,000 hits and 400 home runs.

The only players to accomplish the feat are Hank Aaron, Willie Mays, Eddie Murray, Stan Musial, Dave Winfield and Carl Yastrzemski. Ripken and Yastrzemski would be the only ones on the list to play their entire career in the American League.

When it comes to durability, however, Ripken stands alone. His consecutive games streak of 2,632 games, which he voluntarily ended last season, is the longest such run in baseball history.

The 39-year-old Ripken hit his first homer on April 5, 1982, against Kansas City’s Dennis Leonard. At the time, Ripken was 21.

He hit No. 100 off Texas’ Dickie Nosse on Aug. 15, 1985; No. 200 on Aug. 21, 1989, against Milwaukee’s Mark Knudson; and reached 300 with a three-run shot against Milwaukee’s Teddy Higuera on May 24, 1994, at age 33.

Ripken has hummed among five Hall of Famers: Tom Seaver (3 times); Don Sutton (3); Phil Niekro (2); and Gaylord Perry (1).

Strawberry hitless in return

Associated Press

NEW YORK

There were no majestic home runs from Darryl Strawberry in his comeback. Not even a base hit.

Just a couple of strikeouts and a walk for the New York Yankee slugger in his first game back from colon cancer and a drug suspension.

“You always look for the situation to do something dramatic,” Strawberry said Thursday after the Yankees beat the Oakland Athletics 9-3. “It just wasn’t one of those days.”

Strawberry’s fourth comeback in five years with the Yankees began with warm applause from the 33,147 fans, who remember the dramatic homers and the role Strawberry played on two World Series champions.

Strawberry’s first major league at-bat since last Sept. 27, came leading off the second inning against Cal Ripken and offered him no new memories.

Strawberry took a big cut at the first pitch, fouling it back onto the screen. After taking a called second strike and then a ball, Strawberry checked his swing on a fastball that nipped the outside corner.

John Shulock called him out and Strawberry walked back to the dugout after a brief discussion of the call.

“It’s going to take some at-bats for me to make the adjustments,” Strawberry said. “When you haven’t played at this level for this long, it takes more than one day to get back.”

A Chicago judge on Thursday upheld an NCAA rule that bars Northwestern quarterback Zachary Kustok from playing in Saturday’s opening game against Miami of Ohio.

Circuit Judge Michael Getty refused to immediately overturn the rule, which would keep Kustok from playing for the Wildcats in their first seven games this season.

But Getty did offer to hold a hearing later that might get Kustok onto the field by the season’s third or fourth game, attorneys said.

Minnesota ‘Wild’ about first general manager Risebrough

Associated Press

ST PAUL, Minn. - Minnesota Wild CEO Jack Sperling has accomplished what former Minnesota hockey coach Herb Brooks couldn’t.

He lured Doug Risebrough out of Canada.

“Life has a funny way of coming around,” said Risebrough, who was hired Thursday as the Wild’s first general manager and executive vice president.

“Twenty-eight years ago, I was recruited by a number of colleges and the only trip I made was to the University of Minnesota to see Herb Brooks.”

Risebrough decided to go straight to the pros instead.

“It worked out for both of us, long term,” Risebrough said. “Herb boasted about the fact that he was a national championship team and we would be the blemish there.”

“And the same year that he boasted about that, I was hosting the Stanley Cup over my head. It was the Montreal Canadiens.”

Risebrough, 45, who has spent 25 years in the NHL as a player, coach and executive, has been vice president of hockey operations with the Edmonton Oilers the last three years.

Sperling said he had to compensate Oilers general manager Glen Sather to sign Risebrough with that wouldn’t divulge details or other terms of the contract.

“Will just tell you that Glen didn’t get to be one of the best GMs in the league by being a roller over kind of guy,” Sperling said.

“But I want to tell you also that he is a very tough negotiator and he has trained Doug well.”

Risebrough said he is no hurry to hire a coach before next year’s expansion draft but will begin building his front office and scouting staff immediately.

“The Wild begins play in the 2000-2001 season at St. Paul, returning the NHL to Minnesota after a seven-year absence of the sport in the state, Sperling said.

Risebrough said he might bring some Oilers personnel with him to Minnesota.

“Glen has never really opposed anybody from improving positions,” Risebrough said.

“They’re a rowdy team and they have to get along with some Oiler personnel with him to Minnesota.”

Risebrough also considered several other candidates, including general managers Craig Patrick of Pittsburgh and Bobby Smith of Phoenix, but Sperling said Risebrough “was our number one choice. No other offers were extended.”

A forward, Risebrough played eight seasons in Montreal and five for Calgary. The native of Guelph, Ontario, was a first-round draft selection by Montreal in 1974. After playing for four Stanley Cup champions in Montreal, he was traded to Calgary in 1992 and retired in 1997 with 471 points in 740 games.

Brown’s abuse trial continues

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The wife of former pro football star Jim Brown pleaded with officers not to arrest him after she came to a police station and tearfully told them of a history of abuse in their two-year marriage, detectives testified Thursday.

Monique Brown was tearful, trembling but open in discussing what she described as incidents of abuse, some of which involved threats on her life, said Detective Brian Gazsparian, the first detective to interview her after she called 911 in June.

"She advised me that she didn’t want him arrested. She wanted me to just take a report in case something were to happen in the future," Gazsparian said.

Monique Brown, 25, related a long list of incidents in which Brown, 63, had given her a black eye, choked her, threatened her with a metal spear and, on the night of June 5,ashed the windows out of her car.

The detective said she told him that two days before the incident she found her husband menstruating at home.

"He told her he had to drink extra water to avoid killing the victim and her friend," Gazsparian said, referring to a college pal of Monique Brown who was visiting the Brown home. (He said he had to pray to God for strength to "not to kill the two of them.

Gazsparian, according to Monique Brown’s account, stayed at a hotel that night and believed her marriage was over.

But, the detective testified, she stayed home the next day and quoted Brown as saying, "Oh, you don’t have to leave."

Gazsparian told the jury about Monique Brown’s account of the June 15 argument in which she quoted Brown as saying that if he had not made a promise to her about not being physically abusive he would have broken her neck. Then got a baseball bat and began hitting her car.

Monique Brown then moved into a neighbor’s house and dialed 911.

During the interview, Gazsparian said, she said Brown threatened her, saying, "If she ever took him to court, he would kill her or have her killed."

Gazsparian said that during the 45 minutes they talked Monique Brown seemed "very nice" explained that "she is not a low-life hare, that she tries to make it work and be a good wife. She seemed to love her husband."

In an effort to make him happy, she said, she told him "on occasion she had brought home another woman to have a relationship — three people."

The detective appeared embarrassed at talking about the situation.

Prosecutor Grace Kim Lee prodded him with questions, asking if Monique Brown said that her husband also brought a woman home. "Yes," the detective said.

"And in what context Lee asked.

"Oh, in how she tried to make the marriage work and make it a happy marriage," Gazsparian said.

On cross-examination, lawyer William Grayson asked if there were any other witnesses to Monique Brown’s accounts of abuse.

The detective said there wasn’t.

"What will you know is what Mrs. Brown told you?" Lee asked.

"Yes," Gazsparian, who helped under Lee’s questioning, "I believed her.

Steady Hanson back for Buffalo

Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — For so long, he’s been in the shadow of Bruce Smith. He hasn’t starred in much highlight footage and his best seasons have come during Buffalo’s post-Super Bowl years.

Now, Phil Hansen, one of the NFL’s steadfast defensive ends, is ready to go after a knee injury. But will anybody notice? "I play the best I can," said Hansen. "If recognition comes, great. If it doesn’t, stay harder.

Hansen plays hard. He ranks third on the team with 90 career sacks, behind Smith and Cornelius Bennett (122.5). But more telling are Hansen’s 94 tackle career.

"No, Phil doesn’t get double digits in sacks," Smith said Thursday. "He’ll get his eight or nine. But he’ll get near 100 tackles, sometimes a lot more, and that’s a hell of an effort."

"I think my defense is a lot better based on sacks," Phillips said.

Hansen’s career high of 10 sacks came in 1995. The last three seasons he totaled 21.5 sacks and was well above or close to 100 tackles each of the last four seasons.

"Steady and reliable doesn’t win votes. But it does make people miss you when you’re gone," Hansen said.

Hansen sprained his right knee in a 17-10 loss to the Jets last December when a teammate landed on him. Hansen recalled being surprised at the severity of the injury. "I thought I could go back in and play," he said. The team doctors told him to sit.

The injury ended Hansen’s team-high streak of 86 straight games starting dating to 1992.

"It was a long offseason," he said. "But I know we’re going to be good on the first day of camp, he forget about his knee.

"I wanted to be back. They says, hey, my knee is OK," Hansen said. "Hansen has been better than OK since. He and Smith combine with more tackle depth than any other unit in the NFL.

With Smith grabbin the spotlight, and gargantuan Ted Washington clogging the middle, Hansen has a way of getting lost.

"The underrated thing will always be Phil’s handle," Buffalo coach Wade Phillips said. "But Phil is poised to have a great year. You can see his play on the field was outstanding."

"I’ve enjoyed having him as my other brother," said Smith. "There are some who shine a little bit more, but I’d rather play beside Phil than about 75 percent of the defensive ends in the league."

Hansen relies on a work ethic

he learned while growing up on the family farm in North Dakota. Hansen says he’s not involved in enough high-profile plays.

But the biggest reason he hasn’t got much recognition is simple: He’s not involved in enough high-profile plays.

"I thought I could go back in and play," he said. "But I didn’t believe we could get better," he said. "I wouldn’t be here."
PGA

George Brett to lend hand on Senior Tour

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The margin of victory this time caddily on the Senior PGA Tour will be available for only one round of the TD Waterhouse Championship.

Kansas City Royals great George Brett has other commitments Saturday and Sunday, the final two rounds of the 54-hole tournament that begins Friday at Tiffany Springs Golf Club, a new course that has felt the effects of drought.

Last year on the Loch Lloyd course south of Kansas City, Brett caddied all the way for close friend Larry Ziegler, who edged Tom Shaw by one stroke for his second Senior Tour victory.

"George can only be here on Friday," Ziegler said. "Since when he was inducted into the Hall of Fame this summer, it's unbelievable how hectic his life is."

Ziegler, who had noggin-plasty surgery seven weeks ago, faces a much tougher field this year. The par-72, 6,820-yard Tiffany Greens layout is mankind from Kansas City International Airport and surrounded by hotels, making it more attractive to the seniors. Loch Lloyd was more than an hour from the airport and 20 minutes from the nearest hotel.

Last year's event had just six of the top 20 money-winners. This time there are 17 of the top 20, including five-time winner on this year's tour Bruce Fleischer, Dana Quigley, Gil Morgan, Hale Irwin and Dave Eichelberger.

One senior who will not be competing for the $150,000 first-place money is hometown favorite Tom Watson. He did not reach his 50th birthday — minimum age for Senior Tour entrants — until later in the week.

Kansas City officials were given a special exemption. They had hoped Watson's birthday could be funded by a few days, allowing him to play before what certainly would have been a larger gallery.

"When you start changing regulations for those kind of reasons, you run the risk of raising questions of credibility about the entire rules structure," PGA Tour commissioner Tim Finchem said. "From the standpoint of credibility, it didn't seem like it made a lot of sense, although we would have loved to have Tom play.""The Tiffany Springs course opened in May and has suffered in the intense heat and drought that has gripped the Midwest.

"Our agronomist looked at it in July and said it was terrible," Finchem said. "But then they've had some heat stress and drought. Heat and drought affect the new root structure more than an older, mature golf course. But everybody's been working hard. I think given the circumstances, we'll be fine. The players like the layout and we've got a great field."

Ziegler figures the winning score could be as much as 18 under par.

Reds lose sleep over Braves

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Call it a hit. Call it a tradition. No matter how hard they try — and they're trying too hard — the Cincinnati Reds just can't beat the Atlanta Braves.

In the last three years, they've played the Braves 29 times and can count their victories on one hand.

"Any time a club beats you up like they have it, it seems like they have your number," Reds third baseman Aaron Boone said.

They have the numbers:

• an 8-1 record against the Reds this season, including a pair of three-game sweeps in Atlanta; a 29-5 mark over the last three years; eight consecutive series wins since September 1996.

Atlanta's 9-7 victory Wednesday night completed their sweep of the series and left the Reds with an all-too-familiar feeling. The contending Reds are one of the major leagues' biggest sufferers, but there are no surprises when they face the NL's top team.

They just don't measure up. From where we were at the beginning of the year to where we are as a club that we've become, we felt like we were ready to climb into that elite group of teams, Boone said. "But to do that, you've got to be competitive against those teams.

"It's something of a mystery why they're not. The Reds

McEwing’s single leads Cardinals past Brewers

Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY - infielder Mike McEwing's single leads Cardinals past Brewers 4-3, the Cardinals' third-straight victory.

Mark McGwire went 0-for-4, and remained four home runs behind Sammy Sosa, who leads the major leagues with 56.

St. Louis' winning streak comes after a season-high seven straight losses.

Believer Hector Barrios (0-1) gave up a leadoff single to Craig Paquette, who advanced to second on a two-out single. After pinch-hitter Willie McGee drew an intentional walk, McEwing singled past a drawn-in infield to score Paquette.

Brewers starter Hideo Nomo couldn’t protect a 3-0 lead as the Cardinals scored two in the sixth and one in the seventh.

Nomo pitched seven innings, allowed six hits and struck out six, leaving him one shy of 1,000 in his career.

Anthony Randafoz, one of the new umpires, was at second base in his debut. His call wasn’t tested until he called out Milwaukee’s Jeremy Burnitz in the sixth inning on a stolen-base attempt.

Lance Painter (4-5) pitched a 3-2 perfect inning and struck out three and Ricky Bottalico worked the ninth for his 19th save in 24 chances.

The Brewers scored three times in the third on Brian Roberts’ two-run homer off Cardinals’ starter Darren Oliver and Jeff Cirillo’s R.B.I. groundout.

The Cardinals trimmed the lead to 3-2 in the sixth on R.B.I. doubles by Adam Kennedy and Ray Lankford. Lankford hit ruckus off third baseman Cirillo’s lower body and rolled into foul territory, allowing Kennedy to score.

One inning later, pinch-hitter Thomas Howard’s R.B.I. groundout tied the game.

Oliver allowed three runs on eight hits in six innings. He struck out four and walked one.

Giants 3, Phillies 2

Joe Nathan pitched seven strong innings and Barry Bonds had a sacrifice fly to drive in the go-ahead run as the San Francisco Giants beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 Thursday, completing a four-game sweep.

Nathan (15-3) allowed two runs on six hits while striking out four and walking three, helping the Giants to win their sixth straight and pull within six games of N.L. West-leading Arizona, which was idle. Bobb Nen worked the ninth for his 31st save in 40 opportunities. It was the season-highest straight loss for Philadelphia, which concluded a seven-game road trip. The defeat marked the Phillies’ first four-game sweep in San Francisco since 1994.

The game was officiated by a crew that included three new umpires.

Phil Cuzzi, who was behind the plate, and Alfonso Marquez were among 25 minor league umpires hired to fulltime jobs, replacing 22 umpires ousted in the aftermath of a failed resignation strategy by the umpires union in hopes of forcing early contract talks.

Jim Wolf, who was called up from the minor leagues as a fill-in for the day, worked third base. Wolf’s brother, Randy, is a pitcher for the Phillies. The lone holdover was eight-year veteran ump Brian Gorman.

Joe Grahe (20-21) allowed three runs on eight hits. He walked four and struck out three.

Mike Lieberthal connected for his 28th home run leading off the fourth, giving the Phillies a 2-1 lead while setting a club record for most homers in a season by a catcher. Darren Dalton hit 27 homers for the Phillies in 1992.

San Francisco regained command in its half of the fourth when Grahe lost his command.

Doug Mirabelli and Marvin Benard walked and Bill Mueller singled to load the bases. Grahe, making his second start for the Phillies this season after spending the previous four years in the minors, next faced Bonds and threw a wild pitch that allowed Benard to score from third with the tying run.

Bonds then hit a sacrifice fly to push San Francisco in front for a run.

Jeff Kent’s run-scoring double put San Francisco up in the first inning but the Phillies evened the score in the third when Kevin Jordan drew a bases-loaded walk off Nathan.

FAST LANSING, Mich. - amp Campbell, who broke his neck in a loss to Oregon last season, returned a fumble 82 yards in the fourth quarter to give Michigan State its first lead over Oregon and back the Ducks with a 27-20 victory Thursday night.

The Spartans, who trailed 17-7 in the opener for both teams, came back with 17 unanswered points, taking a 24-17 lead on Campbell’s return of Herman Ho-Ching’s fumble. Linebacker Julian Peterson set up the return by stripping the ball from Ho-Ching.

The game marked the return for Campbell, a cornerback who fractured his sixth and seventh vertebrae while attempting a tackle on Oregon’s second touchdown of the first-half of last season. He required spinal fusion surgery that night.

A.J. Feeley, in his first start as the replacement for the departed Skill Smith, was 27-of-49 for 343 yards and two touchdowns for Oregon, which was 9-4 last season. Bill Burton was 17-of-30 for 205 yards and two touchdowns for the Spartans.

A past interception by Oregon free safety Justin Wilcox set up a 43-yard field goal by Nathan Villegas, cutting the gap to 24-20 with 10:27 left.

Most of the 72,923 in Spartan Stadium booted the officials on the interception call. Wilcox got up with the ball, but the fans saw only a second ball which had bounced onto the field and mistook it for the one in play.

The Spartans, 6-6 and left out of the bowl picture last season, responded with a 25-yard drive for Paul Edinger’s 30-yard field goal field goal that restored the seven-point lead with 5:11 remaining.

Michigan State mistakes set up the first two Oregon scores, helping the Ducks take a 10-7 lead at the half.

The Spartans, on their first possession, stalled at their 30 and Craig Jarrett went in to punt.

The snap from Kyle Rance was high and wide and Jarrett, tried to run but was tackled at the Spartan 15 by Sonny Cook. On the first snap, Feeley found LaGory Collins over Arie Morris in the end zone for a 7-0 lead with 8:06 left in the first quarter.

Oregon, 7-5 and 4-0 in the Pac-10, lined up with Burke 4-4 for 52 yards; responded with a 24-yard, nine-play drive, tying it 7-all on Burke’s 14-yard scoring flip to Gari Scott.

Wilson had two chances early in the second quarter but Villegas missed a 43-yard field goal attempt and the Spartans later mounted a goal-line stand, dropping Oregon Droughts on fourth down for a 2-yard loss at the 5 with 9:05 to go in the half.

JOHN MAY HAVE HIS HELP JOHN KIM OBTAIN PERM CARD, "ACCORDING TO KIM'S OVERCOME ANY PROBLEMS THAT FORMER SALT LAKE BID PRESIDENT WEDNESDAY FOR IMMIGRATION IN GING COME OF THE EFFORT, A LAWYER, WHO REFUSED THURSDAY TO RELEASE A COPY OF THE LETTER

Hatch spokewoman Heather Bitton said the senator has only a vague recollection of Kim, and only advised Welch on immigration procedures. Hatch wouldn't comment himself because "he is not willing to get in the middle of this mess," she said.

Hatch only rarely introduces legislation that would exempt a person from immigration rules. In pending congressional action, Hatch is helping obtain a green card for a woman with multiple sclerosis who had been facing deportation to Iran, Harley said.

Hatch, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, never introduced special legislation for Kim and doesn't recall being asked to do it, she said.

Kim ended up getting his own green card or temporary resident visa. He was indicted Wednesday for fraudulently obtaining the document and using it 16 times to enter the United States from 1995 to 1999.

A warrant was issued for his arrest, but Kim had returned to South Korea and said last week that he surrendered his visa at the U.S. embassy there. His wife and two children remain at a residence on New York's Long Island.

Prosecutors say Kim held a "sham" job with Keystone Communications of Salt Lake City, didn't entitle him to a green card.

According to the charges, he was put on the Keystone payroll by the Salt Lake BID Committee as part of a scheme to help him obtain his green card and to influence his father to vote for Salt Lake's successful bid for the 2002 Winter Games.

Kim's lawyers said the Justice Department has a copy of Welch's letter, but Justice Department spokeswoman Carole Fiorman wouldn't confirm that.

"We don't talk about specific pieces of evidence until we get to court," she said.

Kim's indictment was the second criminal case to grow out of the Olympic scandal.

Irish have met eight times.

The series
Although Notre Dame leads the series 5-2-2, the Irish have recorded several significant bloWS to the TarHeels' started history.
In 1994, with North Carolina riding a record 92-game win-ing streak, North Dame pitched a home turf shutout to earn a win and snap the streak. Two years later, on route to a national title, the Irish dealt the TarHeels their second-ever home loss, 1-0 in the semifinals of the NCAA tournament.
The following year Notre Dame became the first team to defeat the TarHeels two consecutive years with a 2-1 overtime victory.

With strong history between the two teams, the Irish bring major changes to this year's chapter.
Head coach Randy Waldrum, formerly head coach at Baylor, replaces Chris Petruzzelli, who became head coach at the University of Texas last spring.
Waldrum has made one significant alteration: a defensive changeover from four midfielders and three defenders back to three midfielders and four defensive backs.

Tough veterans
The Irish have three very good reasons to think they have the nation's best midfield: Anne Makinen, Jen Grubh and Jenny Sreffler.
All three were named first team All-Americans by College
Soccer Online. Grubh and Sreffler played for the Nordic Cup-winning U.S. under-21 national team. Sreffler lead the team in goals.
Makinen has lead the Finnish National team for several years and played in the women's World Cup.

Experienced players allow the Irish to implement drastic tactical changes smoothly, and Notre Dame returns nine starters and features six seniors this season.

That experience concerns
North Carolina head coach
Jason Dannreale.
"They have overwhelming tal-et," he said. "Most of their tal-in is seniors. I think they are going to be on a mission. That's going to be a huge challenge for us.

The team, however, doesn't place extra pressure on seniors, Linsey said.
"I think our seniors deserve it," she said. "They have been here for four years, and they are a great class. But I don't think anyone is concentrating on win-ing one for them. We are just trying to win one for Notre Dame."

Linsey said the team is adapting well to the new strategy.

"Our defense is improving everyday," she said. "I think we are going to have the strongest midfield in the country."

MEN'S SOCCER
Unbeaten team takes on Big East rival Eagles

By KERRY SMITH
Sports Writer

With one win behind them, members of the Irish men's soccer team have dispelled fears of youth and inexperience.

After defeating Northwestern
1-0 on a goal by freshman Rafael Garcia, Wednesday, Notre Dame is looking ahead to its home opener against Big East rival Boston College on Saturday.

"I was relieved to score and put us on top," said Garcia. "It boosted our team and took the other team out.

While the Irish entered Wednesday's match-up with a relatively inexperienced defensive line, it played a key role in defeating the Wildcats, as the game remained scoreless until well into the second half.

"We played very well defenscively," said Garcia. "We played like a solid team."

Captain Gerick Short proved his capability in goal, after being sidelined last year with a shoulder injury.

Making his third career start for the Irish, Short came up with two saves and recorded his first shutout.

Lead by Junior goalkeeper Chris Hamblin, a seasoned veteran, Hamblin has started in all but one contest in the last two years and boasts an impressive 1.24 goals against average.

"We're going to need to work on our quickness with the ball," said Garcia. "And we're going to have to work on finishing more of our opportunities."

The Irish have compiled a 3-2 record against Boston College since its first contest in 1987. In the most recent match-up last season, Notre Dame, led by senior forward Andrew Aris, came away with a 3-0 win.

Irish prepare to boot Tarheels in Classic

By MIKE CONNOLLY

Unlike the football team, Notre Dame’s women’s soccer team jumps into its toughest game of the year without a warm-up.

Tonight against North Carolina, the Irish put a new coach and a new defensive philosophy to the test. While an easier first game would take pressure off Notre Dame, the team is excited to kick off its season against the Tarheels.

“Every game is a test,” junior captain Kelly Lindsay said. “I don’t think we are at a disadvantage. Of course, a practice game would be nice, but I think we will be alright.”

North Carolina enters the game with the luxury of having already played a game. The Tarheels downs Tennessee 3-0 Wednesday.

When North Carolina (No. 1 in NCAA Preseason Poll, No. 2 in ESPN/Soccer Times Poll) steps onto Alumni Field to face Notre Dame (No. 7, No. 3), the best rivalry in women’s college soccer will add another exciting chapter.

The Tarheels and Notre Dame’s women’s soccer will add another exciting chapter. The Tarheels and Notre Dame’s women’s soccer will add another exciting chapter.

By MIKE CONNOLLY

In the first year the Notre Dame Victory March was publicly performed, the Irish re-wrote Michigan’s fight song.

After losing on Nov. 9, 1909, to Notre Dame, 11-3, the Wolverines no longer were “the champions of the West” — a title they’d claimed with a 69-7 record during the first eight years of the 20th century.

With the defeat went Michigan’s chances for capturing the Western Championship, the Chicago Record-Herald reported on Nov. 7, 1909. “For Notre Dame, now rated one of the most powerful machines ever assembled in the Western Country.”

Fullback Pete Vaughan and quarterback Billy Ryan each scored touchdowns — worth five points each — for the Irish. Ryan also kicked an extra point.

The Wolverines failed to cross the goal line, but halfback Dave Allerdice did manage a field goal.

Despite pregame jeering, Michigan fans and the press had nothing but praise for the Irish after the game.

“Notre Dame crippled for today’s game” was the heading over “advance dope on the game,” the Detroit Free Press wrote on Nov. 7, 1909. “If it had been a little more crippled, perhaps the score would have been 22-3 instead of only 11-3.”

Game plan

Notre Dame’s short passing game caught Michigan off-guard. The Wolverines, according to the Michigan Daily, expected a medium to long passing attack from the Irish and had difficulty adjusting to Ryan’s short, quick passes.

Like all Notre Dame-Michigan battles, field position and special teams played critical roles. Both teams pointed well, but the superior punt coverage and punt returns of the Irish proved decisive.

While Michigan gained few yards on kick returns, Harry Miller baffled the Wolverine defense with his punt returns. “Miller’s manner of running in Michigan punts was the spectroscopical of the whole contest,” the New York Sun wrote on Nov. 6, 1909.

Irish head coach Frank Longman out-coached Fielding Yost, his former mentor, calling for two on-side kicks which the Irish recovered to dominate time of possession.

“We out-played them at every turn,” Longman told Scholastic Magazine after the game. “My boys worked together in every play & blocking and tackling better than at any previous time this season.”

A legend is born

The victory propelled the Irish into the college football spotlight and opened a dark chapter in Notre Dame-Michigan history.

After playing regularly since 1887, Michigan refused to play Notre Dame for 33 years after the 1909 match-up. The stalemate arose, rumors continued, because of anti-Catholic sentiments.

Despite Michigan’s retreat from the series, Notre Dame’s emergence as a college power could not be ignored.

“It is just 21 years since Michigan taught us football,” Scholastic wrote on Nov. 13, 1909. “In attaining our majority, we showed how well we had been taught.”

 futre Dame is now rated one of the most powerful machines in the Western Country.”

1998 Irish leading scorer Jenny Heit (11) and the Notre Dame women’s soccer team kick off the 1999 season at home today in the Key Bank Classic. Battles with national powerhouse North Carolina and Duke highlight the weekend. Also appearing in the Classic are the fourth-ranked Connecticut Huskies.

Irish look for answers in Ann Arbor

By TIM CASEY
Sports Writer

With all the attention generated toward the dispute over the so-called gentlemen's agreement, it's easy to forget that there is still a game to be played on Saturday.

Question marks still remain after Notre Dame's 48-13 victory over Kansas. Can Jim Sanborn respond after missing three kicks? Can the passing game muster more than 39 yards? Can the young offensive line and cornerbacks handle the pressure of playing in front of a hostile environment? Can the team cut down on its three turnovers?

"This is a big test for our football team," Bob Davie said at Tuesday's press conference. "We all see the great tradition of this rivalry. And we are a young team. For us to make this a great game, we are going to have to show considerable improvement from last week."

Michigan, ranked seventh in the country, has a talented offense. Anthony Thomas, the Wolverines leading rusher a year ago, spearheads the running attack. At wideout, sophomore David Terrell and senior Marcus Knight have big play capabilities.

Lloyd Carr has yet to name a starter at quarterback as of Wednesday for Saturday's game. Either way, Davie does not plan to make any major defensive adjustments.

"Just looking at the two, both of them I think are pretty similar," Davie said. "Both of them are tall and have strong arms. You just felt in the game (last year) that (Drew) Henson seemed a little more mobile. But as far as change in your plans or in your approach, I don't think it will really change."

The front seven for Michigan is also a concern for the Irish. Senior linebackers Ian Gold, James Hall and Dhani Jones solidify the middle of the defense. At defensive tackle, Bob Renes and Josh Williams are both experienced.

"Carr understands the importance of this game from a historical perspective. The tradition of these two programs is outstanding," Carr said in a prepared statement. "They've arguably the two greatest traditions in college football going back over 100 years. It's the tradition knowing that every single person in this country that likes college football will be trying to watch this game. It's that kind of excitement that every kid who grows up playing football dreams of playing in."

One player who is ready for Saturday is Grant Irons. Irons older brother, Jarret was a key member of the Michigan defense earlier this decade.

"This game was good for us on the defensive end of the ball to find out what works and what doesn't," said Irons after the Kansas game. "We know that Michigan was watching the game and that they know what they need to do to beat us."
Harper plays steady in secondary

Cornerback's leadership inspires younger players

By BILL HART
Associate Sports Editor

Deveron Harper doesn't hesitate when he answers what his greatest moment in his Irish playing career is.

"My interception return this weekend," he said, "That was definitely a dream of mine. I was glad to accomplish that."

For a player that has been such a solid contributor on the Notre Dame defense for so long, one would expect it would take longer to come to a decision.

Starting games for the Irish as far back as his freshman year, it's hard to imagine a Irish secondary without him in position. It was hard even for Harper to imagine, because from the first time he stepped on campus, he was drawn to Notre Dame.

"I was really convinced by my visit," he recalled. "I had a good time, and the teammates that took me around were a big thing. Academics, athletics — those were the main factors."

As soon as he donned the blue-and-gold jersey, Harper played an immediate role on the team. Depletions in the secondary put him in the role of top reserve cornerback. He amassed experience there quickly, thanks to numerous backup appearances.

When a hamstring injury bothered starter Ivory Covington, then-freshman Harper was thrust into the starting position for the USC game. He wasted no time to contribute, breaking up passes and tackling twice for losses.

Sophomore year saw a quick return to top backup corner-back, before injuries forced him to move to a starting role at free safety by the fifth game of the season. He proved his prowess in that position as well, starting in eight of the last nine games, including the Independence Bowl.

His exceptional play that season brought national attention, as he was ranked 10th nationally among cornerbacks by Lindy's as the '98 season approached.

As a junior, Harper was the logical choice to take a starting role in the secondary with the graduation of defensive cornerstones Covington and Allen Rossum.

Once again, he stepped into the position and continued to display the same determination he showed during the first two years of his Irish career.

Michigan fans will not have to be reminded this weekend about No. 10, after a performance in last year's opener where he recorded eight tackles, three sacks and two fumble recoveries. By midseason, he was forced to the sidelines by a hamstring injury, but he recovered quickly enough to start the final games of the regular season and the Gator Bowl.

Heading into his senior year, Harper found himself thrust into the starting role again, but this time with an even greater need to contribute with Tony Driver's move to tailback.

With his 22-yard interception for a touchdown against Kansas, Harper has proven once again that he is more than ready to take on the challenge.

"Basically, we were trying to read a three-step on the Kansas quarterback," Harper recalled the play. "I was able to read it, and I broke on the ball. He threw it, and I just picked it off."

Even as a freshman, Harper has felt the need to lead the team by example. Now, as a senior, he feels the pressure upon him even more.

"I've always tried to be a leader," he said. "As far as keeping my teammates' heads in the game. But it's more important now, because the young guys who just came in look up to me as a senior."

Harper's leadership has not gone unnoticed by freshmen on the team.

"He's been like a mentor to me," he said. "I watch him in practice, looking at how he moves and turns," freshman defensive back Albert Force said. "I talk to him and he gives me advice, both on and off the field."

Harper looks at this new responsibility, to lead by seniority as well as by example, as something more than just a privilege.

"When you're a senior, it's your duty to be a leader on the team," he said. "That's exactly the responsibility that I have to handle now."

Deveron Harper (left) celebrates with Anthony Denman after his first-quarter interception return for a touchdown against Kansas in the Eddie Robinson Classic. The touchdown, the first of two scored by the Irish defense, gave the Irish a 13-0 lead.

Wolverines test Irish line

Observer Staff Report
If the Irish offense is going to move the ball at all against the vaunted Michigan defense, the offensive line must open holes for the Irish running attack and provide adequate protection for Irish quarterback Jarious Jackson. The Irish offensive line returns only one starter from last year’s line — center John Merendi. Guard Mike Gandy saw limited playing time last year when he filled in for Jerry Wone. The other three starters — tackles Jordan Black, John Teasdale and guard Jim Jones — never started a game before they took the field against Kansas. The Irish must overcome their inexperience in the Big House if the offense is going to be successful.
Brady, Henson battle for UM starting job

By BRIAN KESSLER
Sports Editor

Quarterback controversy is surrounding the Michigan football program these days and head coach Lloyd Carr is keeping his mouth shut.

After spending the last few weeks blasting Notre Dame for adding the Eddie Robinson
Classic to its schedule, Carr laughed off the media and wouldn't reveal his starter at Monday's press conference at Michigan.

He did, however, admit that he made a decision about who will start for the Wolverines on Saturday.

The Detroit News reported
Wednesday that last year's starter, fifth-year senior Tom Brady, will get the nod on Saturday. The paper, citing team sources, also reported that sophomore sensation Drew Henson could see playing time as early as the second quarter.

Brady seems to be the more logical choice. He completed over 60 percent of his passes
last season and threw for more than 2,600 yards, while leading the Wolverines to 10 victories.

If Brady can connect on a touchdown pass Saturday, he will set the school record of 13 consecutive games with a touchdown pass.

Brady led Michigan into battle
in Notre Dame Stadium last season. He completed 23-of-36 passes for 267 yards in a losing effort.

Henson also saw action in last season's game against the Irish.
In his collegiate debut, Henson
guided the Wolverines to a touchdown in his first series at quarterback. He completed an eight-yard pass to Jerame
Tuman to cap off a 10-play, 80-yard scoring drive. Henson connected on 3-of-8 passing for 55
yards.

The sophomore finished the season 21-of-47 passing for 254
yards and three touchdowns.

Henson, however, spent the summer playing minor league
baseball for the New York Yankees and may not be as prepared as Brady.

No matter who gets the start,
the Michigan quarterback will have some big targets, as the Wolverines return five receivers
from last year's six-man rotation.

Although Tai Streets moved on to the pros, seniors Marcus Knight and D'allo Johnson are prime time players. Sophomore David Terrell, who verbally commited to the Irish out of high school, is a deep threat. Senior Kevin Bryant and sophomore
Marquise Walker round out the talent group of receivers.

Brady and Henson should get excellent pass protection, as Michigan boasts arguably the best offensive line in the country.
It returns five starters, including preseason All-American Steve
Hutchinson. Seniors Jeff Backus
and David Brandt also anchor the Michigan offensive line.

If the Michigan passing game struggles, the Wolverines will look to the run game to bail
them out.

Michigan lost Clarence Williams to graduation, but junior Anthony Thomas headlines a list of four backs who saw action last season. Thomas is the team's leading returning rusher with 1,442 yards on his career.
He has rushed for 20 touchdowns and finished the '98 season with three 100-yard performances in his four games.

Brady led Michigan into battle
in Notre Dame Stadium last sea-
son. He completed 23-of-36
passes for 267 yards in a losing
effort.

Henson also saw action in last season's game against the Irish.
In his collegiate debut, Henson
guided the Wolverines to a touchdown in his first series at quarterback. He completed an eight-yard pass to Jerame
Tuman to cap off a 10-play, 80-
yard scoring drive. Henson connected on 3-of-8 passing for 55
yards.

The sophomore finished the season 21-of-47 passing for 254
yards and three touchdowns.

Henson, however, spent the summer playing minor league
baseball for the New York Yankees and may not be as prepared as Brady.

No matter who gets the start,
the Michigan quarterback will have some big targets, as the Wolverines return five receivers
from last year's six-man rotation.

Although Tai Streets moved on to the pros, seniors Marcus Knight and D'allo Johnson are prime time players. Sophomore
David Terrell, who verbally com-
mited to the Irish out of high school, is a deep threat. Senior
Kevin Bryant and sophomore
Marquise Walker round out the
talent group of receivers.

Brady and Henson should get
excellent pass protection, as Michigan boasts arguably the
best offensive line in the country.
It returns five starters, including preseason All-American Steve
Hutchinson. Seniors Jeff Backus
and David Brandt also anchor the Michigan offensive line.

If the Michigan passing game
struggles, the Wolverines will look to the run game to bail
them out.

Michigan lost Clarence
Williams to graduation, but junior Anthony Thomas headlines a list of four backs who saw action last season. Thomas is the team's leading returning rusher
with 1,442 yards on his career.
He has rushed for 20 touchdowns and finished the '98 season with three 100-yard performances in his four games.

Brady, Henson battle for UM starting job

By BRIAN KESSLER

Quarterback controversy is surrounding the Michigan football program these days and head coach Lloyd Carr is keeping his mouth shut.

After spending the last few weeks blasting Notre Dame for
adding the Eddie Robinson
Classic to its schedule, Carr
laughed off the media and
wouldn't reveal his starter at Monday's press conference at Michigan.

He did, however, admit that he made a decision about who will start for the Wolverines on Saturday.

The Detroit News reported
Wednesday that last year's starter, fifth-year senior Tom
Brady, will get the nod on Saturday. The paper, citing team
sources, also reported that
Henson could see playing time as early as the second quarter.

Brady seems to be the more logical choice. He completed
over 60 percent of his passes
last season and threw for more than 2,600 yards, while leading the Wolverines to 10 victories.

If Brady can connect on a touchdown pass Saturday, he will set the school record of 13
consecutive games with a touchdown pass.

The start of the 1999 football season signals the return of Lou Holtz (left) and Jamal Lewis (right) to the football field. Holtz begins his tenure at South Carolina while Lewis returns from a knee injury that caused him to miss much of the Vols 1998 national championship season.

The Observer Staff Report

Peerless Price and Al Wilson are gone to the NFL but quarterback Tee Martin and tailback Jamal Lewis are back for the national champion Volunteers when they take on Wyoming Saturday.

Lewis and Price are the only Vols back for another run at the title. Tennessee returns 14 starters in the hope of improving on the best record in the last two years of any team in college football.

Even without Lewis for much of last season, the Vols succeed with replacements Travis Henry and Travis Stephens who combined to rush for over 1,400 yards. Martin, Lewis, Henry and Stephens give the Vols the deepest and most talented backfield in the country.

With all the attention focused on the Tennessee offense, it's easy to forget how good its defense is.

Despite the loss of Wilson, the Vols still have one of the best linebackers in the country. Raynor Thompson and Eric Westmoreland are returning starters who pursue well and hit hard.

Wyoming does have some talent but not enough to match Tennessee. Quarterback Jay Stoner passed for 2,373 yards and 11 touchdowns last year.

Stoner's favorite target is also back in Wendell Montgomery. Montgomery caught 57 passes for 789 yards but failed to catch a touchdown pass. Wyoming will need Montgomery to get into the end zone this season as they have lost leading rusher Marques Brigham.

The Wyoming defense is the strength of the team. Its "bend but don't break" approach gave up lots of yards last year but shut teams down in the red zone.

No. 23 Virginia at North Carolina

For the past few seasons, this has been a matchup of two of the premier teams in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The departure of Marc Brown from North Carolina to Texas, however, signaled the downfall of the Tar Heels football from the national elite. Virginia has been one of the steadiest programs in the country by posting 12 straight seven seasons with at least seven victories but has fallen behind Georgia Tech for the honor of being the second best team in the ACC — behind Florida State.

Although the game has lost some of its national luster, each team features an exciting player on offense.

Virginia features Thomas Jones, brother of Irish freshman Julius Jones, at tailback. Jones rushed for 1,303 yards last year to lead the ACC in rushing.

The Tar Heels offense is directed by two star senior Ronald Curry, Curry, who also stars for the Carolina basketball team, passed for six touchdowns and accounted for 1,394 yards passing.

Curry's play provided the spark for a team that began the season 0-3 before responding to win seven of their next nine games, including a 20-13 win over South Carolina in the Las Vegas Bowl.

The win in the Las Vegas Bowl made North Carolina the only football team to have won four straight bowl games.

South Carolina at No. 24 North Carolina State

Lou Holtz takes his South Carolina Gamecocks, who finished 1-10 last year, into Raleigh to face a team he used to coach: the Wolfpack of North Carolina State.

The Wolfpack is flying high after its upset victory over No. 17 in the Black Coaches Association Classic last weekend. NC State's special teams blocked three Longhorn punts to set up the victory.

NC State features explosive quarter- back Jamie Barnet. He is on track to become the first quarterback in ACC history to pass for more than 10,000 yards.

South Carolina has a highly touted coach, but not much else. The Gamecocks were the only SEC team to lose to Vanderbilt last year. Holtz has worked his magic before but for South Carolina to be a winner, it might take more tricks than even Holtz can muster.

Arturo Freeman, who returns to the South Carolina secondary after missing 1998 with an injury, is one of the few bright spots for Holtz.

Around the Nation

Weaver returns to the ACC for his second year with the Volunteers. Last year, Weaver completed 62.6 percent of his passes for 2,126 yards and 16 touchdowns.

IRISH EXCHANGE

ND, UM out for revenge

Despite what the sound bites tell, don’t expect Michigan to take its home field Saturday without revenge on its mind.

Notre Dame’s 36-20 win over the Wolverines in both team’s season opener a year ago grounded the defending National Champions faster than any pollster could write off the Irish. With the series back in Ann Arbor, Mich., this year, the Wolverines would like everyone to believe that they’re keeping their focus on playing their game rather than getting back at the Irish.

When asked whether revenge will play a factor, Michigan quarterback Tom Brady spat out a statement that sounded pretty well-rehearsed: “It’s not about getting them back, it’s about getting it back. It’s about going out and playing our type of football.”

Almost convincing and maybe true. That is, if the two teams weren’t playing in front of 107,501 people, not to mention a national television audience. Or if head coach Lloyd Carr and his Wolverines weren’t so humiliated by the Irish two weeks ago in a row last season.

Yes, two weeks in a row in 1998. First by Bob Davie and the Irish and a week later by the Syracuse offense led by now Irish coach Kevin Rogers. There’s no way that Jim Herrmann’s Michigan defense isn’t looking back at those two games — in which the Irish and Syracuse scored a combined 74 points — and feeling a little angry and, yes, revenge.

True, gone are Notre Dame’s experienced offensive linemen and all-time lining rushing duo Anthony Blanton and Steve Hutchinson and how tough most of the off-season renovations and rebuilding units. But the Wolverines had a chance to scout the Irish offense and defense.

JUNIOR LEPRECHAUN

Junior leprechaun Mike Brown carries the ND flag as he leads the cheerleaders onto the field before last Saturday’s Kansas game. Notre Dame will look to restore the luck of the Irish when it takes the field against Michigan on Saturday.

Notre Dame doesn’t play fair

There is nothing like the first weekend of September.

A slight chill hits the air, hinting of the autumn that is soon to come. Students are busying, reuniting with old friends and getting ready for the school year lurking around the corner.

And most important, the college football season starts.

At Michigan and Notre Dame, this means one thing: rivalry week end. The Wolverines and the Fighting Irish begin the football season with a showdown, drop-out, no-holds-barred contest which separates the contenders from the pretenders for the national championship hunt.

Well, at least Michigan does.

The Fighting — in name only — Irish felt that starting the season in Ann Arbor was just too much stress for their young team to deal with. So Notre Dame just decided to schedule a not-so-powerful歙大学 against without Danny Manning — to give itself a trial run before Michigan comes calling.

Knute Rockne must be spinning in his grave. I guess I can see what Notre Dame coach Bob Davie was thinking about when scheduling the Jayhawks. Like Michigan, Kansas has blue uniforms. But all similarities end there.

Although Notre Dame played the part of a fragile lesser in scheduling the Jayhawks, it’s one that Notre Dame has no confidence in itself. It really has no reason to feel good about its prospects.

The Irish haven’t competed for the national title in the past five years. Heck, they dropped their last two games to Michigan State, the other university in Michigan.

But that’s OK. Notre Dame has hit its bad patches before. Remember 1998? But how Notre Dame is a lackluster football team is not the reason that the Golden Dome has less than a bronze pig.

The fact is that Notre Dame isn’t quite the hotter-than-thou program that it, or NBC, will have you believe. Forget what Brady Buntz might have told you. The truth of the matter is that Kimberly Dunbar is more of what the Notre Dame program stands for.

Free plane tickets. Kickbacks totaling thousands of dollars to a child. A child! All this and more can be obtained choosing the Notre Dame football program.

As for the annoying little leprechaun who dances around the field as if he had just exited the pub, its rumored that the pot full of gold was also a gift from Dunbar; an even exchange for the luck of the Irish.

I guess Dunbar didn’t alter the Notre Dame tradition. She just brought dishonesty, kickbacks and cheating to a whole new level.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.
Irish look to take two

After a 36-20 victory over Michigan last season, Notre Dame travels to Ann Arbor for a rematch with the No. 7 Michigan Wolverines. The Irish will be searching for their first 2-0 start under Bob Davie and their first two-game winning streak over the Wolverines since the 1989 and 1990 seasons.

Senior captain Janious Jackson threw for 96 yards and rushed for 62 yards in last year’s 36-20 upset of Michigan at Notre Dame Stadium.

Tailback Terrance Howard wraps up Kansas kick returner Mitch Bowles on special teams coverage.

Junior tailback Tony Driver (25) rushed for 45 yards on 13 carries in last Saturday’s season opener against Kansas. Driver will once again split time with sophomore Tony Fisher.
