CLC members expressed concern that CLC, a body that discusses student academic and residential life on campus, was not included in the group. The concern provoked the proposal to include CLC members on the council.

"We need to look at our­ selves beyond the constrains of a representative body that speaks to Poorman. Perhaps we are not seen as a University committee?" CLC member Brian O'Donoghue said.

According to O'Donoghue, the CLC, not the Academic Council, is responsible for student life. The new members of the ad-hoc committee from CLC are Sister Patricia Thomas, senior Ross Kerr and senior Michael Perraio. Student body vice presi­ dent Michael Palumbo, already serves as a student representative to this com­ mittee.

"It shouldn't be an inconve­ nience," Dennis said. "The only thing that students will see while they are here are materi­ als moving in, maybe some vans."

Renovations to Madeleva classrooms will begin in July 2000. Specific renovations are still unclear, and the College is waiting for recommendations from Matthew, Precker and Anella Inc. and an engineering firm.

"In Madeleva, we need to look specifically at safety code viola­ tions in the building," Dennis said. "We have a number of dead-end hallways, and if the building is filled with smoke, we don't want people turning down those hallways. The building is a lot of potential code. Madeleva is scheduled to be completed in March 2001, meaning construction will take place during classes.

"We can be in construction while students are in class. What will not be is that by have to take a section out of the building and block it off," Dennis said.

The construction timeline for Madeleva will have to be more flexible than Regina's, due to working around class sched­ ules and keeping it open.

"That construction phase will likely be longer," Dennis said. "The bulk of our work is completed in Spring 2001, with the second phase beginning in Fall 2001. The next step is figuring out what we want out of the project."

The position of rector rep­ resentative will be filled by Sister Adrienne Piezmone. CLC committees also gave annual reports.

The Academic commit­tee reported that it is inves­ tigating honor code issues and researching the dollars per student that the University spends.

The Academic committee also is looking into the role of alcohol at SYR dances and responsible drinking in regard to binge drinking. The Saint Mary's alcohol policies are also being evaluated.

An ode to ‘Save the Bell’

Bayside was the high school that we all wished we attended. Where Belding was our principal, and Zach Morris was our friend. Jessie dated Slater; they seldom were apart. Screech was in love with Lisa, and Kelly stole his heart. Morris was our friend. Bayside was a safe haven. Time, time never’s going to change. You’ve got yourself a winner. Something great is coming in the near future. Bayside is a winner.

TO THE EDITOR:

Karen Green

I am an avid fan of the show \"Saved by the Bell\" and have been since its premiere in 1989. I have been following the cast members over the years and have been fascinated by their personal lives. The show\'s depiction of high school life is realistic and relatable. It has been a source of inspiration for me and has helped me navigate through my own teenage years. I believe that the show has done a great job of portraying the challenges and struggles that come with being a teenager and has set a positive example for young people.

Yours truly,

Karen Green

Ireland identifies with America

By BRAD RAGER
News Writer

There is an identification in Northern Ireland with the American civil rights movement, according to Brian Dooley, former head of press at Amnesty International.

From Frederick Douglass to Ted Kennedy, there have been important characters in the American civil rights movement that have identified a unique connection between the fight for basic human rights in the two nations, Dooley said.

While black Americans were held in the bonds of slavery, Catholics in Ireland were being repressed by the British government and persecuted because of their religion, Dooley said.

Advocates for an end to slavery, such as the influential abolitionist Frederick Douglass, traveled to Ireland to speak about the struggle for justice in America and to see firsthand the trials of Irish peasants.

Douglass met with Irish nationalist leaders like Daniel O'Connell and spoke at a rally in Cork that drew a crowd of 5,000, Dooley explained.

The 1960s were turbulent times for both nations as well. A movement for fair housing opportunities for women began in Northern Ireland in 1963. The movement which grew out of a "small protest by nine women angry at the government that have identified a unique connection between the fight for basic human rights in the two nations," Dooley said.

"These type of people, who were sometimes called Ulster's white Negroes would often permit their resistance after black movements in the United States," Dooley said.

Similar to slaves, Irish people would protest, singing "We will overcome." Dooley noted that boycott, a tactic used in the American civil rights movement, actually came from Ireland.

And after the notorious "Bloody Sunday" massacre in Northern Ireland in 1972, representatives from Martin Luther King's group came to protest and voice their concerns.

Brian Dooley discussed civil rights relations between the United States and Ireland.

Misiewicz takes on ombudsman role

By COLLEEN GAUGHEN
Viewpoint Editor

Appointed in July by University president Father Edward Malloy, Misiewicz, also an associate accounting professor, will provide an avenue through which students, staff and faculty can report allegations of discriminatory harassment.

"The idea is to come up with a sort of soft person outside the process to facilitate things," said Misiewicz. "We don't have any investigating powers; we want to help people be aware of what the process is to the extent they aren't, and help them further define what their options are rather than telling them what to do." Misiewicz is the University's third official ombudsman, a position created about five and a half years ago.

A member of the Notre Dame faculty since 1978, Misiewicz's accounting specialty is the uses of computers in tax practice and education, tax research tools, processes and communications; various aspects of the taxation of individuals, including estate planning; and the tax treatment of exempt organizations.

Philosophy, theology building planned

By MATTHEW SMITH
News Writer

Construction on a new building to house the philosophy and theology departments will begin after the Nov. 19 home football game.

The building will be located behind O'Shaughnessy Hall and will connect to DeCis Hall on the first two floors, according to Jim Lyphout, vice president of business operations.

"The building should resemble DeCis Hall, and we are excited about its opening," Lyphout said.

The 56,000 square-foot, L-shaped building will be four stories tall and contain offices for professors, along with some seminar rooms and a chapel.

"This is a very good thing for the philosophy department," said Paul Weithman, director of graduate studies in the philosophy department. "We are now all together, in a community of common interests. We finally have a place to call our own."

Weithman also cited the educational advantages of the building, including increased workspace for graduate students and more seminar space for discussion.

"Interaction and sharing of ideas are essential to philosophy and theology," he said. "Also, the link between the philosophy and theology departments is important in a Catholic university."

Both departments are currently located in O'Shaughnessy Hall, which houses many Arts and Letters departments.

The new building's donor has asked to remain anonymous, but a name may appear on the building. The first floor of the building will be for location at the corner of Madeleva and Main Street, as well as discussing plans to increase enrollment.

The new building will replace the current facility, including increased parking facilities. For the first two floors, according to Jim Lyphout, vice president of business operations.

The facility is scheduled to occur in 180 days. We can't possibly get that amount of work done in that time period."

The renovation will displace 110 students. The renovation will be completed by June 2001.

Guiliani, Clinton face off in NY

Associated Press

NEW YORK

Art fused with politics Monday as an exhibit including elephant dung on a painting of the Virgin Mary became the latest issue in the duel between Mayor Rudolph Giuliani and Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Giuliani—who like the first lady is an all-but-declared candidate for the Senate from New York—has threatened to cut $7 million in funding to the Brooklyn Museum of Art if it goes ahead with the show on Saturday. He has called the exhibit, which also features bisected animals and a topless woman in the place of Jesus at the Last Supper, "sick" and offensive.

Late Monday, a City Hall source speaking on condi­tion of anonymity said the museum agreed to pull the dung-decorated painting as part of a tentative deal with the mayor. But the museum issued a statement saying no deal had been reached and that the exhibit was going to open as planned.

Earlier Monday, Clinton declared that the museum shouldn't lose its funding—money that makes up a full third of its budget.

Responding to a U.N. official's statement that the Vatican had conceded defeat on reproductive issues, a spokesman reiterated Monday the Church's opposition to abortion and the "morning-after" pill. The U.N. Population Fund's director, Naile Sadik, said Wednesday that the Vatican has "accepted that the international community has accepted that family planning is one of the human rights of women." Sadik and Vatican officials have clashed in the past over family planning and the "morning-after" pill, which it considers to be abortive.

'Memory Stick Walkman' to download MP3s

Sony Corp. said Monday it will start selling the Walkman that fits into the palm of a hand and downloads music from the Internet while protecting copyrights. The "Memory Stick Walkman" is designed to fight the proliferation of illegal music exchanges on the Internet and to create a new standard for portable audio players, a Sony spokesman said, speaking on condition of anonymity. The Walkman will cost $430 and requires a computer with Microsoft Windows 98 to transfer music. The Walkman uses technology to protect the record industry from the illegal copying and distribution of music over the Internet. Currently, music can be downloaded from the Internet for free. Memory Stick users would pay for Internet music made compatible with Sony’s encryption system, but would not be able to download songs from free Web sites, the spokesman said.

NATO urges peace in Kosovo

"The Kosovo Albanian political leaders should publicly reaffirm their commitment to build a multicultural, multiethnic society and we expect from them to turn actions in this direction," Javier Solana told reporters. Solana arrived in Kosovo's provincial capital, Pristina, on Monday night and met with Serbian representatives. Clifford offered no explanation and no one in Thaci's office answered the telephone. NATO's outgoing secretary-general called on Kosovo's ethnic Albanian leadership to stop "violence and hatred," warning Monday that Kosovo will never achieve peace without ethnic reconciliation. Keady: Nike ‘just doesn’t do it’ in sweatshop debate

Coach stands up to manufacturer, employer

By SAM DERHEIMER

At assistant soccer coach at St. John’s University, James Keady faced a tough decision. His team wore Nike uniforms, but Keady discovered severe human rights violations in Nike sweatshops through his masters research paper.

“I was told to wear Nike and drop the issue publicly or resign,” Keady said.

He lost the coaching job of his dreams.

Keady, speaking Monday during the second session of the University’s sweatshop symposium, called Nike “one of the grossest violators of human rights in the world.”

“Nike has consistently shown that they will operate in good faith toward their workers,” said Keady. “St. John’s and Notre Dame, by associating with such corporations, are giving a stamp of approval to this type of behavior.”

Keady challenged the Notre Dame community not to compromise to Catholic mission. He urged the audience to let the administration know that associations with corporations repeatedly ignoring social justice will not be tolerated.

Keady cited three main problems inherently wrong with sweatshops: corporations’ failure to pay workers sufficient “living” wages, the refusal to publicly disclose work cite locations, and the refusal to allow workers in those shops the right to organize.

Only through full disclosure and education can such problems begin to be alleviated,” Keady said. “The University must be pressed. How can we deal with Nike, and still follow our Catholic mission and the teachings of the gospels?”

“Because I protested the way student athletes and coaches were turned into walking billboards. I was silenced,” Keady said. “It is an abomination the way athletes get prostituted by universities and corporations.”

Endowment helps build campuses

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

The Lilly Endowment Inc. is donating $30 million to American Indian tribal colleges to help with construction and renovation of often shabby campuses.

The fund planned to announce the gift Tuesday as the kickoff to a $120 million campaign to raise money for improvements at 30 tribal colleges serving 26,000 students in 12 states. The drive thus far has taken in $43 million, including the Lilly gift, said Suzette Brewer, spokeswoman for the American Indian College Fund.

Most of the 30 schools are community colleges run by one or more tribes and located on reservations. Non-Indians also can take classes at the schools, but the colleges get federal per-student funding only for their Indian students.

While a few of the colleges have newer campuses, most build classes in aging government-issue buildings or prefab “portable” classrooms.

The gift from the Indianapolis-based Lilly Endowment and money raised by the fund drive will help ensure “Indian students can go to schools in facilities that are as good as their white counterparts, where they don’t have to worry about tiles falling on their heads,” said Doub.

“Things happen when individual people start calling for changes. Students who pay tuition at this University deserve a voice.”

“I could not allow myself to sit back while my university was making profit off the backs of the poor,” said Keady. “Now I challenge the community of Notre Dame also to take action, in accordance with Catholic social teaching, on this issue.”

The symposium, which can be taken for class credit, marks the continuing effort of the University to eliminate the use of sweatshop labor in the manufacturing of Notre Dame products, and is primarily organized to showcase the complex issues the University’s Task Force on Anti-Sweatshop Initiatives must deal with. Four lectures still remain in the series.

Todd David Whitmore, director of the task force, also spoke Monday night.

Diseases reemerge in Americas

Associated Press

SAN JUAN

Once thought virtually eradicated, the diseases have re-emerged for reasons ranging from the development of drug-resistant strains to the mushrooming of vast urban areas with poor sanitation, say the hemisphere's top health officials.

"Drug-resistant strains of microbes are having a deadly impact on the fight against tuberculosis, malaria, rhinovirus, diarrhea and pneumonia (which together kill more than 10 million people worldwide each year)," said Dr. George Alleyne, director-general of the Pan American Health Organization.

This is happening at a time when too few new drugs are being developed to replace those that have lost their effectiveness," he said.

Alleyne spoke Monday at the start of a five-day conference in San Juan, Puerto Rico, where some 30 health ministers from 35 member states are expected today to consider proposals on combating tobacco consumption in the Americas.

Alleyne said smoking is now the No. 1 killer in the region, its related diseases claiming more than 600,000 lives a year.

A draft of a report to be presented today reveals that some member countries with "economic interests" blocked PAHO — a Washington D.C.-based agency of the World Health Organization — from pursuing an ambitious plan for a regional convention against tobacco.

"Without the push of a region-wide convention, a scaled-down plan tries to educate people and promote action through workshops, conferences, and the Internet."

In a 120-page report Monday, Alleyne described the surprising reemergence of diseases like dengue — the highly debilitating and untreatable disease some call "breakbone fever" — that infected 780,000 people in the Americas last year and killed about 100.

"There was a time when a lot of this region was free of the (dengue-carrying) mosquito, but now we find virtually the whole region reinfected," Alleyne said.

He blamed excessive reliance on chemical insecticides, to which the mosquitoes have become resistant, and inadequate sanitation that provides an environment for mosquitoes to breed.

Tuberculosis, affecting 400,000 a year in the region, was another concern, "killing 137 people every day.

PAHO spokesman Daniel Epstein said increased urbanization was a factor, since people living in close quarters are more likely to infect one another.

Other diseases identified as reemerging in the last decade:

- Cholera, reintroduced to Central and South America following an absence of almost a century.
- Rhabdovirus, which has infected a rat-borne disease in the U.S. state of New Mexico.
- Drug-resistant malaria has infected a great swath of the Amazon region, attacking entire villages in Guyana.

Quayle quits presidential race

Empty-pocketed Quayle leaves eight GOP candidates

Associated Press

PHOENIX

Dan Quayle said Monday that he no longer envisioned his Republican presidential campaign ending this way, short of cash and before the first vote was cast.

But then, he said, this has been an "unprecedented" campaign.

"There's a time to stay and there's a time to fold. There's a time to know when to leave the stage. Thus today I am announcing that I will no longer be a candidate for president of the United States," Quayle said, ending a campaign that has been dogged by poor fund-raising and low poll numbers.

Quayle's departure leaves eight major Republican candidates, and is bound to increase speculation about the (financial) and political health of the remaining contenders.

Appearing at the Arizona Biltmore, near his Paradise Valley home, Quayle cited the juggernaut of GOP frontrunner George W. Bush, who has raised more than $50 million in the campaign and leads in the polls.

"It was facing a campaign when the frontrunner would have up to $100 million to spend and an unprecedented frontloading of the primary system made the task for me of winning the nomination impossible," he said.

The former vice president has raised only about $4 million, and has been unable to break out of the second tier of candidates in any of the key early states, finishing near the bottom in Iowa's nonbinding straw poll last month.

Still, Quayle remained convinced he could fare well in the New Hampshire primary, citing a recent poll that ranked him second nationally behind Bush. He told reporters in Iowa last week that his conservative message and campaign message would help him win.

But a concentrated primary calendar with 18 states voting within 30 days of New Hampshire would have given little time to raise enough money and capitalize on a strong showing in the state. It was a decision that had to be made, but my heart aches," he said. "It was a decision that had to be made, but my heart aches."

But a concentrated primary calendar with 18 states voting within 30 days of New Hampshire would have given little time to raise enough money and capitalize on a strong showing in the state. It was a decision that had to be made, but my heart aches," he said. "It was a decision that had to be made, but my heart aches."

Deciding about life after college

Most likely, if you’re a liberal arts major, you’ll make the commitment to attend graduate school somewhere around May of your senior year, and the decision-making process will cause the following reaction: “Oh, my God. I have no job. Or health insurance. Or life. And I’m out of Cheez-Its. It is too late to change my major?”

“It is? Crap. Well, there has to be a graduate school around here somewhere. More enlightenment! More knowledge! More massive, interesting, horrifying debt! And then new, pesky questions will crop up, in no particular order. I’ll try to give you a heads-up on some answers.”

1) In which subject should I obtain my Master’s degree?

Your choice of Master’s program should be contingent upon the real-world relevance of your undergraduate degree. Higher education is the only place in the solar system where Classical Greek History majors are taken seriously as human beings, so you should hang around as long as you possibly can, preferably until the point where the only job you’re qualified for is to teach younger, equally unhirable versions of yourself. Look, you’re already living in a box. You might as well go the whole nine and decorate it with a Phil. D. It can serve as insulation, if nothing else.

The more useless your Major was, the more you should strive to submerge yourself into academic oblivion. If you’re a hideous Midwestern Lawn Decoration Studies major, go right ahead and get your Masters in Law and Jockey Performance. For instance, I earned my B.A. in English and political science. Just what am I going to do with that? Advise the Bush campaign on the nation’s early Pre-Raphaelite Puppy issues? Of course not! I’m getting an MFA in creative nonfiction writing! There are only something like seven universities in the entire country that even offer such a program! My uselessness grows seemingly every minute forecasts. It’s all fun and games until nobody hires you. On the other hand, if you had the foresight to major in something useful, such as business administration, you probably already have a job and health insurance and a steady supply of Cheez-Its and therefore have no need for graduate school.

2) Are you or are you not one of the most talented, attractive people ever to graduate from this community?

I am.

3) Is it true that I have to take a battery of standardized tests to apply to graduate school?

You need to take the GRE, which is just like the SAT and ACT, only far more evil and way less fair. You have to take it on a computer, which — this is God’s truth — tracks your responses, and if you’re getting a lot of answers right, it makes you HARDER. It’s kind of like Bill Kirk instantly developing Jedi mind probe powers the second you step into a Student Affairs hearing. You’re not allowed to use a calculator, and in no way are you tested on anything you actually may have learned in college. For instance, there are no questions asking you to calculate the proper font and margin corrections necessary to magically transform a two-page paper into a seven-page one. If so, you are attending law school? Ask somebody else. I don’t do lawyer jokes.

5) Why didn’t I get into my first-choice graduate school?

My guess would be because you stunk.

6) But you didn’t get into YOUR first-choice school.

This was a rare instance in which the institution, not the applicant, stunk.

7) Will applying to graduate school cost anything?

My precious, precious child. Have you forgotten so much in such soggy years? Do you not recall application fees? And standardized testing fees? And, “mailing you a postcard with your name misspelled to tell you not to let the door-knobs of the admissions office hit you on your way out!” fees? All told, your bill for applying to grad schools should read like this:

GIE, TOFEL, LSAT: application, test prep books and classes, long distance phone calls, postage and “postcard-doombox...” fees: $700

Cost of undergraduate degree: $100,000

Cost of requesting an unofficial transcript for your application: $2.00 per measly piece of paper. (Thaassat’s right. Never mind the original hundred-thousand-dollar investment. You have to compensate the registrar’s office for performing the laborious task of shoving the grades YOU earned into an envelope. Forget computer programming. Major in registering. That’s where the money is.)

Too many assumptions

As a freshman here at Notre Dame, I was appalled to hear the talk of sports in such a manner, thus questioning the importance on how inconsiderate and inappropriate the student body behaves (the Notre Dame-Michigan State football game) about the current student body. Mr. Misch’s comments in his Sept. 23 letter are not reflective of the entire student body. I was raised just down the road from him and saw almost none of the behavior that he described.

Yes, a few of students engage in an inappropriate salute, but unlike the impression that he gave, it was not imitated by the vast majority of the student body. This was the opinion of many of the students left the game before the team left the field, but from my own observations, the majority of the non-student fans appeared to leave first. In fact, at least 50 people seated around me stayed until every player was off the field, showing their support for the team. Many of the so-called dedicated alumni did not even care enough to give these players the same type of respect.

However, the view I considered the most inaccurate was the pegging of the entire student body as “a pampered, spoiled, self-indulgent cluster of arrogant adolescents.” I do not dare to say how he could have concluded such a slandered and biased view of a group of people whom he does not even know and has little contact with outside of that one particular instance. I was sitting near him; does that mean I fit his description? How can he dare to make the assumption that it was anything about my life because of a rowdy minority at a football game? Do I dare to make assumptions on his life based on one letter I saw printed in the newspaper? Maybe I should, in order to apply the set of standards that he might have learned as an adolescent here.

Finally, I would like to say that while football is an integral part of student life here, it is not the sole purpose for any student to come here. We come here for more than to see a football game. We come here to study, which we think our sportsmanship deserves a $100,000 education or not, our academics do.

It's 'moe.' than just a great show

By ANDREW JONES
Kane Music Corp.

Shortly past 7 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 17, an exuberant banner filled the Vic Theater in Chicago. Chants, clapping and the click of bottles were highly audible, and the smoke in the theater was so thick one could have cut it with a knife. Tie-dyes, hemp, beads, dreads and bloodshot eyeballs were in high fashion for the buzzing crowd.

The house lights dimmed, and the audience erupted as Al Schnier, Rob Derhak, Chuck Garvey, Vinnie Amico and guest percussionist Jim Loughlin, straddled out under the stage lights. moe.'s "Quest For Ray" tour had arrived in Chicago.

Formed in 1991, moe. hails from Buffalo, N.Y., and features a highly energized, improvisational bluegrass rock sound that incorporates other genres, such as jazz and reggae. In 1997, moe. was voted one of Rolling Stone's 10 hottest underground bands and began drawing the attention of many Phish-heads.

Back at The Vic, tapers formed a row of about 10 to 15 microphones ready to capture last Friday's concert. Melodic, improvisational bluegrass and funk rhythms were highly audible, and the smoke in the theater was thick. The audience was thoroughly impressed by moe.'s performance. So if you're not an audiophile who can't listen to anything but U93, get out and groove to moe. the next time it's in the area.

The group brought the crowd to life performing "Happy Hour Hero," during which Garvey's phrasing was funky and precise, but "Vedeltido," with a segue into "Four," proved to be the climax of the show. These two songs exemplified light, lengthy jams that sustained intensity, whether the jam's tempo was mellow or fast-paced.

Lighting director Chris Ragan provided fabulously psychedelic eye-candy as swirling triangles swept across the crowd in sync with the music and sharp purple light searched every corner of the Vic. The crowd grooved through the entire second set. The night ended with a 15-minute version of "Meal," during which Amico displayed his talents as a percussionist.

For an encore, moe. did what they do best: a jam that segued into the popular "Rebubula." Featuring another bass line of incredible virtuosity that only Derhak could pull off, there could not have been a better song to end the show.

Surrender to the buzz of the performance, melt away in the lights, melt away in the jams.

CAMPUS RADIO STATIONS PROVIDE ALTERNATIVE LISTENING

By RICK SILVESTRINI  Scene Music Critic

Searching the radio dial in South Bend can be a painful process for musiclovers, particularly for alternative fans. While there is more than enough country, classic rock and bad top 40, South Bend radio has almost no outlet for alternative music. This musical void can be frustrating for Notre Dame students accustomed to hearing exclusively alternative stations at home, some get to the point where they don't bother tuning the radio on.

But Notre Dame, unlike most other universities, is fortunate enough to have two student-run radio stations that offer at least some alternative programming: 88.9 FM WSND and 640 AM WVFI, which broadcasts exclusively on the Internet at http://sowfi.nd.edu/. Alternative fans have to work a little harder to hear their favorite type of music on either station. WSND only broadcasts their self-proclaimed "unique blend of college rock and modern alternative music" during its Nocturne shows from midnight to 2 a.m. Only computers equipped with a RealAudio 62 player can hear WVFI, and even then, only between the hours of 10 a.m. and 1:45 a.m.

Despite these difficulties, campus listeners have found both stations to be proverbial diamonds in the rough.

"I've actually listened to both Nocturne and some stuff on VFI," said Joe Kolf, a Zahm Hall freshman. "The music selection is definitely way better than anything else on the radio."

While WSND offers classical and fine-arts programming during most of the broadcast day, the station goes alternative when the Nocturne shift starts at midnight. It features a mix of famous bands like Lil' Len and Caroline's Spin, some lesser knowns like Robin Hitchcock and Bis, and campus bands like The Florida Evans Show Band & Review.

"We try to mix it up," said co-Nocturne director Jeremy Sony. "We definitely don't want Nocturne to be just alternative top 40 for two hours, so we make sure to add stuff that's good but that people haven't heard."

WSND, on the other hand, is back on the air after equipment failure shut it down last fall. The station offers a wide range of shows and musical types including alternative music.

"We've got a lot of good people doing all kinds of shows. Metal, ska, reggae — you name it and I bet somebody at WVFI has a show for it. And you won't hear most of it anywhere else," station manager John Forgash said.

While WSND prescribes most of the station's musical selection, WVFI gives its DJs much more freedom in selecting their own music, which results in the station's refreshing variety.

"The majority of the stuff I play is my own," said WVFI DJ Steve Martin. "I think it's great that VFI lets the DJ really run his own show. I can be more creative with the music."

That creativity is really the difference between Notre Dame student radio and the rest of the South Bend market. Instead of test-marketed and over-hyped songs in a variety of formats, WSND and WVFI provide a valuable and much-needed alternative to an otherwise dull South Bend radio dial.

ALBUM REVIEW

By JOHN HUSTON  Scene Music Critic

There's a word that should be creeping up on mass-consciousness soon: emo. Emo, for those who don't know, is indie-rock with emotional lyrics. The Promise Ring is at the head of the emo pack, propelled by the pop genius of its 1997 album Nothing Feels Good, but this album is a masterpiece. It puts them up there on the "alternative rock" pedestal along with icons such as R.E.M., Nirvana and U2. "Emergency," out of your head. It's that good. But wouldn't someone who ate 10 Werther's Originals in a row get sick to his stomach? Nope. It's very hard to get sick of The Promise Ring.

Luckily, the band serves up a variety of candy-coated emo songs for the listener to suck on. Some are happy and bouncy like "Skips a Beat."

Some are melancholy like "Things Just Getting Good" and "All of my Everything." The others are everywhere in between.

Besides tasting great, The Promise Ring is good for you too! Davey Van Bohlen, singer/guitarist, includes some thought-provoking, lyrical gems. In "Living Around," Van Bohlen reveals, "I'm losing my voice talking to you about talking to you."

"Happiness is all the rage," the album opener, he sings, "doing laundry finally, the first sign of light, still nothing to wear between us."

Almost every song contains poetic plays on words that insist there is more lyrical substance than the average group. In "Jersey Shore," Van Bohlen sings that he is "bored walking on the boardwalk..."

Their 1997 album Nothing Feels Good was good, but this album is a masterpiece. It puts them up there on the "alternative rock" pedestal alongside icons such as R.E.M., Nirvana and Pixies.

The Promise Ring's music is generally smarter, more honest and more emotional than most of the "alternative" that gets attention today. Very Emergency is an incredible album and a superb introduction to "emo."

The whole emo genre is a goldmine of incredible music that is just waiting to be thrown in front of the public's ears, and The Promise Ring is emerging as the king.

New York Yankees lose third straight, fall to Devil Rays

NEW YORK

Since clinching the division title last week, the New York Yankees have looked nothing like a playoff team.

New York made three errors and allowed 12 of Tampa Bay's runs to score with two outs as the Yankees lost their third straight game, 8-4, Monday night.

Fred McGriff and Bubba Trammell homered and Dave Martinez drove in three runs for Tampa Bay, which had lost their last 18 games in New York— including all nine at Yankee Stadium— before winning the final three games of the four-game series.

The Yankees rallied to win the opener 4-3 in 11 innings Friday on rookie Alfonso Soriano's homer, and clinched their fifth straight playoff berth when the Tampa Rays got four hits for his first career save.

Hidi rakei (17-7) was knocked out after two innings for the second time in four starts, jeopardizing his spot on the rotation. He retired the first two bat­ ters in each inning before getting into trouble. He walked in Jose Canseco with two outs in the first, and allowed all of Tampa Bay's runs in the eighth, the eighth, but Ray Durham hit into a double play.

Brock Fordyce hit a two-run home run in the ninth inning and the Chicago White Sox beat the Minnesota Twins.

Firdyce followed with a double off Mike Mohler. Bill Simas (6-3) pitched two scoreless innings for the victory.

Rangers, 3 Mariners, 2

Larry Walker hit a go­ ahead run with an eighth­ inning sacrifice fly as the AL wild-card leader Texas Rangers won their fourth straight game, 7-3, Monday.

The Rangers (93-63) moved 30 games over .500 for the first time in team history.

Juan Gonzalez doubled with one in the Texas eighth and drove in teammate Rafael Palmeiro was intentionally walked.

'98 NFC champs off to 0-3 start

Associated Press
SUWANEE, Ga.

Forget the Dirty Birds. These are the same Falcons.

Hardly resembling the team that was in the Super Bowl a mere eight months ago, the defending NFC champions have quietly recaptured a look of incompetence that's more familiar in Atlanta.

"We've got to get this thing turned around," safety Marty Carter said Monday. "If we're going to do that."

That's looking more and more unlikely after Sunday's doubleheader in St. Louis, when a team that was 4-12 a year ago routed the Falcons 35-7.

The game wasn't even as close in the first half. The defending NFC champions have never put together consecutive winning seasons during their 34-year history, nor one expected a start like this.

"We were bombs away," Marty Carter said. Atlanta safety Todd Lyght intercepted a pass from Chris Chandler, Warner capitalized on the very next play with a 46-yard scoring strike to Isaac Bruce. On the first play of St. Louis' next possession, Marshall Faulk broke over tackles on a 34-yard run to set up another TD.

Three plays in a row defensively, we had really poorperform—" Reeves said. "We just gave up too many big plays. On the road, where your defense has to play well, we just didn't get the job done."

Shore troubling, the Falcons secondary "looked like the Keystone Kops," in the words of one of their first four possessions and outgaining Atlanta 114-67 in the first half.

I thought St. Louis beat us in the first half. After falling behind 17-0 in the first half, Chandler missed one game, received a one-game suspension and has turned this matter over to the university's general counsel's office for review.

"One thing this review is complete, the university will announce its findings and, if necessary, take appropriate action," he said.

Athletic director Doug Dickey said the university also has concern for students who with the Southern Conference Commissioner Roy Kramer.

"If it is anything about football, I am glad I got to tell you," he told a dozen reporters. "We met him in spring practice. The players are not going to allow it to be a distraction.

ESPN reported Sunday that内饰ious charges show high-level administrators in the athletics department were told of four violations that may have done us more harm than good.

"It's difficult to come into a situation where the team did as well as this team did a year ago, to come into a situation where expectations are high, and then collectively produce something," he said.

"Maybe it's something we didn't have to do. Maybe we didn't have to work as hard as we did."

The AP reported that Tennessee's athletic department was told by Doug Dickey — in which she herself had gone to his department, said she had admitted she had used a university phone card. She was arrested in a case involving the possibility of academic fraud among its athletes.

"We really have not done any academic problems that might be out there," athletic coordinator for academic performance, is now investigating possible rules violations, he said.

School investigators will want to determine how many great players the new allegations were involved, the "failure to report" charges.

Carl Asp, Tennessee coach, said Monday that the investigation is focusing on whether any of the football players violated NCAA rules.

NCAA football officials are seeking comment Monday.

Have you heard? The Career Resource Center located in Room 114 — Flanner Hall, has evening hours Monday through Wednesday from 5:00 — 8:00 p.m.

Yeah, I'm making my way to the Career Center after classes.

I know they have staff available to view your resume and answer quick questions. There's even a computer lab to log on to Go IRISH. And don't forget the great books and resource materials. Looks like the Career Center's the place to be.
Miami's Underwood stabs himself

Associated Press

LANSING, Mich. — Dimitrius Underwood, the first-round draft pick who left the Minnesota Vikings after one day in training camp, apparently slashed his neck with a knife, police said Monday.

Police found the defensive end, who later changed his mind and signed with the Miami Dolphins, Sunday afternoon after getting calls that a man was yelling.

Underwood was covered with blood as officers approached.

"He was somewhat dissipative," police spokesman Lt. Ray Hall said. "He was upset, physically upset." Hall said Underwood apparently cut his neck at the home of the mother of his twin 17-month-old children. No one in the home saw him cut himself, but several people in the neighborhood saw him running down the street afterward.

Police took Underwood to Sparrow Hospital, where he was listed in fair condition.

"There has been an event of this magnitude," said Patrick Moscaritolo, president of the Greater Boston Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Local merchants have yet to tally up exact figures, but Moscaritolo estimated the Ryder Cup generated $150 million in spending in the area, as golf fans — many of them spending corporate money — packed local hotels, restaurants and shops.

Yesterdays' event played in a great way for those who shape it.

What does the Bible's Book of Revelation tell us about the coming of the Millennium?

We need not suppose the author had nor was given by God knowledge of the distant future. Therefore, readers are all speculations about how long the earth is to last, or how long it will be before Christ comes back, or when the end of the world will come. Speculations inspired by the Book of Revelation. Neverthees, these speculations have been refused for 2,000 years, as in the course of time various individuals have jumped up with the Book of Revelation in their hand and announced that they now understand the numerical message and the end of the year is at hand. Thus for all our interpretations have been wrong, the world is still here.

The basic message of the Apocalypse is one of hope in a time of persecution. Using symbols language, such as that of Messiahs, angels, fire, etc., the author describes his time as one of severe affliction and suffering produced by evil. Against this, he seeks to reassure the readers that God has a control of all things, thus his imagery of a heavenly book in which all things are written down, or a period of time in which the various events that happen have a set limit, and angel that can overcome the powers of evil, or even of good things that can overcome the bad things. It is a vision of the persecuted and suffering person that says not to despair, for God will bring all this to an end and be victorious.

The Book of Revelation does indeed have something to say to us as Catholic Christians. It is not the end of anything, but a chance to make a new beginning. It is not a time of despair, but a time of great hope and trust in the goodness of God and the power of God's love and for all people. We celebrate the year 2000 as a Year of Jubilee, and we are challenged to let the spirit of joy and hope that springs from the knowledge that God does triumph permeate our lives and our world.

St. Ed’s failed conversion gives Sorin 7-6 victory

Sorin’s duo of Luke Beuerlein and Greg Carney started right where they left off last week. Carney hauled in a long pass downfield from Beuerlein on the opening play of the game. Receiver Antoine Tobias, however, put the points on the board this time, allowing Sorin to squeak by St. Ed’s 7-6.

“I just drilled it in between the two defenders,” said Tobias. “It was a great throw.”

Carney kicked the extra point, which proved to seal the win in the tight game against the men of St. Ed’s, who now tumbled to a record of 0-2.

Solid defensive play by Ernesto Lacayo set up St. Ed’s only score in the fourth quarter. Lacayo intercepted a pass intended for Carney, allowing quarterback Tim Greene to hit Mike Pontius for the six points.

Receiver Antoine Tobias, however, put the points on the board this time, allowing Sorin to squeak by St. Ed’s 7-6.

St. Ed’s was squelched in the second half, where they left off last week. The defense in Sunday’s game highlighted the play of the two teams.

“It was a well fought game,” said Tobias. “And I ran up and picked it off.”

Fisher 0, Seigfried 0

Both offenses failed to score, causing the game to end in a 0-0 knot. Both teams fell to 1-0-1 with the tie.

The defense in Sunday’s game highlighted the play of both teams.

Yellow flags were a constant sight in the game, preventing both sides from surmounting a strong offensive drive.

“We played well on defense, but penalties kept us from putting it in the end zone,” Smith said.

Some last minute offensive sparks almost sent the Juggernauts an emotional victory.

“We were able to keep our defense, but penalties kept us from putting it in the end zone,” said Carney. “It made it fun,” said Tobias. “I was the icing on the cake when I made the touchdown.”

WOMEN'S SOCCER
Taylor's score gives Belles tie
By MOLLY McVOY
Assistant Sports Editor
Excitement continues to be the word of the day for Saint Mary's soccer.
The Belles finished Monday's game in a 1-1 tie at Beloit College, going into double overtime for the second consecutive time.
The Belles are off to their best start in the history of the program with a record of 6-1-0. "I'm really excited about this year," junior Laura Paulen said. "We have a lot of potential and we're using it."
The Belles scored early in Monday's game, and seemed to dominate play on the field. But after a goal in the first half by freshman Lynn Taylor, the Belles could not add on.

It was not until two minutes remained in the final overtime that Muth scored, with an assist by Paulen. Saint Mary's was thrilled with the victory despite the difficult time.

"It was really exciting," Muth said. "We had really good passing and it's just getting to the point where we need to finish."
The Belles' next league game is a home match against Adrian College on Oct. 6. Here the Belles are confident the home field advantage will give them the edge.

"I really appreciate the fans who come out to watch us," Paulen said. "The support really motivates us."

Albion is the MIAA leader in soccer this season. Saint Mary's tied Albion in the team's only meeting last season.

 Tradition losing its significance
As I write this, history is continuing to make a comeback. It isn't the end of the world, although some people I know, they might be signaling the approach of the apocalypse.

No, this is a conclusion to a story I've been telling over the last few days.

"It was really exciting," Muth said. "We had really good passing and it's just getting to the point where we need to finish."

Lewis looks for first win of season against Lyons

By JASON KROMPFINGER
Sports Writer

There will be a lot of intense women's interhall football action this Tuesday night, and it will start off at 7 p.m. with Lyons Hall squaring off against Lewis. The 0-2 Chicks are led by team captain Beth Wild, and are coming off a couple of tough losses which taught the team valuable lessons.

"The first game was a real learning experience, and our defense really improved in the second game," Wild said.

The young team has sophomore Rachel Mahoney at the helm and Rosemary Sage anchoring the offensive line. On defense, junior Katherine Harcourt leads the way.

"Our freshmen are doing well and helping us out a lot," said Wild of her team's newest members. "They will continue to improve as the year goes on."

Welsh Family vs. Walsh

The 1-1 Welsh Family Hall will take on the Wild Women of Walsh at Stepan on Tuesday night in is only the third interhall football game ever for the majority of the Welsh players.

The Whirlwind, coming from a dorm with 95 freshmen, are captained by Maria Felomeyer, Katie Rak and Stephanie Eden, who also splits time at wide receiver and quarterback for the team.

"We have a lot of youth," said Rak, "but a lot of the freshmen are key players."

Another first-time player is junior Allison Tullis, who Rak described as "awesome" on the defensive line. Also strong on the defensive line (which doubled as the offensive line) is Kelly Keegan.

"Our defense is playing exceptionally well," said Rak.

Besides Eden, Rak consistently throws to Sarah Ieffi, who has held strong at receiver for the past two years for the Whirlwind.

Pasquerilla East vs. Pasquerilla West

The Purple Weasels of PW jump into their intense rivalry against the powerful PE Pyros, led by Anna Bergman and Liz Plummer.

"This is really a rebuilding year for us," said PW captain and receiver Kori Yelle "We'll definitely be up for this game."

The PW offense is led by sophomore Andy Will at quarterback, who before this year had never played the position. She will have Yelle and talented sophomore Amanda Gallon in the backfield. Gallon made the switch to defense in PW's last game in 1998 and came up with an interception.

On defense the Purple Weasels are solid and are led by Kathleen Warin at middle linebacker, who will have to work hard to contain the Pyros' athletic quarterback. Still, the team's inexperience was apparent in its first game.

"We had a lot of penalties like offside and false starts," said Yelle. "The younger girls had no idea what the game was going to be like."

Yelle added, however, that the team appeared much calmer in the second game. All records will be tossed aside on Tuesday night as these two rivals face off.

PE cruises to 26-6 victory over Welsh

By Steve Dillenburger

Paspussierra East proved too much for any challenger as they knocked off Welsh, 26-6.

The Pyros' victory placed them in first place after two games.

They again started off the game by winning in the opening minutes. They put six points on the board when Elizabeth Pflummer and Melissa German for the game's first score. Medly Ross added the one-point conversion and the Pyro's never looked back.

The Whirlwind had a tough time getting its offense going as the Py's defensive line pressured the Welsh quarterback all game.

The Pyros turned the game into a rout as the first half wound down. Pflummer connected with Kerry Hanley for one touchdown and Pflummer added another as PE mounted an insurmountable 19-0 lead by the half.

PE scored another touchdown in the second half, and its defense kept up its intensity for the majority of the second half as the Pyros cruised to an easy win. Welsh was able to find a gap in the PE defense late in the second half for the final touchdown.

Lyo 0, Paspussierra East 0

The teams battled to a scoreless draw on Sunday. The game was marked by offensive futility and defensive pressure.

"The defense came up big," Lyons' Kate Yanze said. "But the offense's timing was not straight; too much confusion."

The Lyons defense was aided by the effort of Rachel Harris and Lisa Thomas who both came up with interceptions to stop the Purple Weasels.

Lyo found itself in a jam and troubles that Paspussierra West did. PW's defense was helped by Amanda Gallen, a converted wide receiver, who had an interception.

Walsh, 7 Lewis, 0

In yet another defensive battle the Wild Women of Welsh got by the Lewis Chicks 7-0.

Lewis looked like it was going to grab an early lead on its first possession when it stalled out on the Welsh 2-yard line, but on fourth down the Chick quarterback was stopped on a sneak. This would be the Chicks' best shot at scoring all day.

The two offenses struggled through the first half without either pashing much of a threat. Lewis started the second half with the ball on third-and-long from their 23. But the Welsh defense rose up and forced an interception which they returned to the 3-yard line. Two plays later Kelly Pennington took an option pitch into the endzone. Perry also caught a one-point conversion.

Stanford. The Knights won 20-0 in a major rivalry.

Several players are knocked to the ground in an interhall football game between Keenan and Lent. Poise in evading the rush, down situation, showed excellence. The Stanford offense was eager, took no time off, as it continued to make its neighbors' afternoon a miserable one. Frustrated by its tendency to scrambeld for precious yards, Stanford turnover.

Not content with its 14-0 lead, Keenan continued to apply pressure, perhaps in an attempt to show the rest of the league that this year's Knights are in fact every bit as good as the two previous editions, both of which captured interhall titles. Captain Herb Giorgio intercepted a tipped pass as the third quarter expired, as the Keenan defense forced a sixth Stanford turnover.

"Our defense played very well," said Keenan player and coach Dong Min. "I keep telling them that they have to force turnovers and get our offense back on the field, and that's exactly what they've been able to do. We'll be in every game if they continue to play like this."

With the fourth quarter about to expire and Stanford scrambling for precious yards, Dong Min picked off a pass for his second interception of the game, and weaved his way 37 yards for a touchdown that put an exclamation on the tail end of a dominating effort.

By MATT OLIVA
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame volleyball team managed a split in this weekend's matches against Wyoming and Colorado State. The Irish 16-31 went to five games to knock off the Cowgirls 15-8, 6-15, 15-11, 15-8. They then traveled to Fort Collins, Colorado where the 17th-ranked Rams defeated the Irish in three games.

Against Wyoming the Irish totaled 65 kills, led by Christi Girton who had 21 kills in the five game match. Senior captain Mary Lefflers contributed another 12 kills and a .400 hitting percentage while teammates Kristy Kreher and sophomore outside hitter Marcie Bomhack each added 11 kills. The Cowgirls kept the match close by adding 72 kills as a team and an overall .261 hitting percentage.

Defensively for the Irish, captains Denise Boylan and Lefflers each had seven blocks, while Kreher and Keara Coughlin contributed 11 digs for the match.

"Wyoming played a lot better than we thought they were," said Kreher. "We struggled with defense and passing, but were able to pick it up."

The Irish were out as lucky against Colorado State. The Rams improved in a perfect 13-0 by defeating the Irish in straight games 12-9, 15-7, 15-7.

The Irish started out fast, taking a 7-2 lead in the first game. The Rams then went on a 13-2 run to the eventual win in the first game. They carried that momentum over to take games 2 and 3.

"After we got out to that lead, they really picked it up and played well," said Kreher.

Once again junior opposite hitter Christi Girton led the Irish with 13 kills and 11 digs. Bomhack added eight kills and Lefflers tallied seven blocks in the loss.

"They played incredible," said Kreher. "We made a lot of hitting errors and did not play like we have to in the past, but we know we will play better.

The Irish begin their Big East conference schedule this Friday against West Virginia. They take on Pittsburgh Sunday.

"Our team is pretty confident going into our Big East games," said Kreher. "We had a great practice last night and it really brought us back together. We are looking forward to playing this weekend."

Cavanaugh defeats Farley, 8-6

By STEVE KEPPEL
Sports Writer

The game Sunday between Cavanaugh and Farley wasn't decided until a flurry of events in the game's last five minutes gave Cavanaugh an 8-6 victory.

"It was a battle of the defenses," said Farley captain John Ross.

The first half was filled with defense with each team's offense struggling to move the ball consistently. The score at the end of the half was 0-0.

In the second half, Cavanaugh's "chaos defense" came out first up. During the first series Cavanaugh's Meghan Rathsam picked off a tipped Farley pass and ran it in to give the Chaos a 6-0 lead.

"It looked like both defenses were going to continue to hold each other back in their own territory for the rest of the second half. But after a big fourth-down sack, Farley got the ball back with two minutes left in the game about 50 yards from the end zone. After a few short option runs, Farley quarterback Meghan Sherehan fired a 40-yard pass that got her team down to about the 2-yard line. With less than a minute remaining, Cavanaugh's defense set in for the goal-line stand. After a 10 minute injury delay, an offside penalty, and a pass interference penalty, Farley ended up first-and-goal at the one with 50 seconds left to go.

On second down, Meghan Sherehan took the shotgun snap and lofted a pass into the middle of the field. Sherehan's pass was caught by center Ericka Freedburg who hopped her way into the end zone for the tying score.

Keenan routes Stanford, earns bragging rights

By KEVIN BERCOUR
Sports Writer

When the Keenan Knights beat their arch-rival Stanford Griffins 20-0 on Sunday, they won much more than their interhall football game. They garnered an entire year's worth of building bragging rights.

In a much-anticipated renewal of one of the league's greatest rivalries, it was only Keenan that came to play. Plagued by a rash of turnovers, the Griffins were unable to muster a sustained offensive attack.

Senior defensive back Joe Kipin pounced on a Griffin fumble in the game's opening minutes, and it was all Knights from that point on. Just five plays later, tailback Nick Costanzo scampered to pay dirt from seven yards out to put Keenan up 6-0. Kipin's successful extra-point made the score 7-0.

"My line opened up a huge hole," said Costanzo of the scoring play. "Mark Stalika [at center] and [right tackle] Mike Gallion gave me room to run all day. The whole line played awesome."

The second quarter began in the same fashion as the first, with Stanford again turning the ball over. This time it was Keenan cornerback Kevin Carney who intercepted an errant throw at midfield.

Later in the quarter, the Knights extended their lead as freshman quarterback Filly Fithwerp got the ball to senior wideout John Genine on a 22-yard scoring play.
