The winds of change are in the air for Saint Mary’s Pride Day. The celebration of pride, established three years ago, has this year become Saint Mary’s Pride Week. When Marilou Elliott became president of the College three years ago, the mayors of Mishawaka, South Bend and Elkhart declared Oct. 6 an pride day for the College.

Pro-Life group celebrates Respect Life week

Recognizing national Respect Life Week, the Notre Dame/Saint Mary’s Right to Life organization will sponsor campus-wide activities that celebrate all stages of life.

"We want to call attention to the fact that there are plenty of ways to support and promote the sanctity of life in every stage each and every day right on campus," said Right to Life co-president John Linn.

Activities began Sunday morning with the Life Chain in South Bend which took place on Ironwood Street and was sponsored by the local chapter of Right to Life.

A Pro-Life Rosary at the Grotto will take place tonight at 8:30, and will be geared toward prayer for death row prisoners. On Tuesday, a short prayer service led by Father Michael Baxter will take place at Stonebroke.

"It's about every stage of life and the fact that there are so many ways to support every stage on a daily basis."

John Linn, co-president, ND/SMC Right to Life

On Tuesday's events will focus on academics and "promoting students to show pride in their majors," said senior Angie Little.

Presentations sponsored by Students Independent Study and Research Grants (SISTAR) will be given at 7 p.m.

University opens new institute

By MAUREEN SMITH
News Writer

Notre Dame has established a new Institute for Latino Studies and appointed Gilberto Cárdenas to serve as an assistan provost and director of the Institute.

"The rapidly growing Latino population in the United States, and its vibrant and expanding presence in the Catholic Church, make the establishment of a Latino studies institute at Notre Dame a natural fit," Hatch said, adding that he considers the institute vital to the growth of Notre Dame.

"We are delighted that Gilberto Cárdenas has accepted the challenge to build this institute and we believe his appointment immediately places Notre Dame at the forefront of an intellectually and culturally important discipline," Hatch said.

Cárdenas, who said he is "happy to see that there is an inviting and open environment for Latino studies," said Notre Dame needs the Latino institute to "bring teaching and research programs to the University that are needed."

In addition, he said the institute will offer service opportunities connected with academic programs.

"This institute is distinctive compared to other centers at major graduate research institutions because it is the only one that focuses on the diversity of Latino and Hispanic populations," Cárdenas said.

Both Cárdenas and Hatch said they have many expectations for the institute, includ-

OuLaKe State Student builds explosives

STILLWATER, Okla. The Oklahoma State University freshman charged with having explosives in his dorm room refused to withdraw from the university Monday and pleaded innocent to the felony Friday.

Erk Gonzales, 18, of Sulphur, Okla., said he was just making firecrackers out of an interest in science.

"To me it’s not meant to be destructive," Gonzales told The Daily O’Collegian Thursday.

Gonzales was arrested early Sept. 12. He was charged with the manufacturing and possessing of explosives and released on $1,000 bond. His preliminary hearing is scheduled for Oct. 11, if convicted, he faces three to 10 years in prison, a $10,000 fine, or both.

Gonzales had been constructing an explosive device in a plastic tube. He Frank Incropera, McCloskey dean of Notre Dame's College of Engineering will be the keynote speaker at the annual President's Luncheon for Michiana Business Leaders Wednesday.

Hosted by University president, Father Edward Malloy, the 12th annual event is scheduled from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the concourse of the Joyce Center. Some 300 area corporate leaders are expected to attend.

Incropera's talk is entitled "Technology and Society: Past, Present, and Future." It will discuss how innovation and technology shape lives.

Incropera was named the McCloskey dean of Notre Dame's College of Engineering in 1998. Also the Brossey professor mechanical engineering, he came to Notre Dame from Purdue University, where he headed the mechanical engineering department.

Incropera has been honored by the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation, receiving its Senior Scientist Award in 1988. Also in 1988, as a fellow of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers (ASME), he received the society's Heat Transfer Memorial Award for 20 years of research accomplishments. He has also received ASME's Melville Medal for best original paper and Worcester Reed Warner Medal for his contributions to the fundamental literature of heat transfer, including his textbooks on the subject.

Incropera has been a visiting professor and researcher at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's (NASA) Ames Research Center, the University of California at Berkeley, and universities in Munich, Germany, and Pisa, Italy.

Incropera has received four major Purdue teaching awards, as well as the 1982 American Society of Engineering Education (ASEE) Ralph Coats Roe Award for teaching excellence and the 1983 ASEE George Westinghouse Award for teaching and research achievement.

A member of the National Academy of Engineering, Incropera has directed numerous sponsored programs and is the author or co-author of eight books and more than 190 archival journal articles. His research includes free and mixed convection, double-diffuse convection, boiling and two-phase flow, materials processing and electronic cooling.

A native of Lawrence, Mass., Incropera received his bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He earned his master's and doctoral degrees, also in mechanical engineering, from Stanford University.

Tapscott addresses COBA conference on info technology

By LAURA SEGURA

The future of technology and the economy were the focus of this weekend's College of Business Administration Advisory council conference, featuring keynote presentations by author and Internet guru Don Tapscott and Michael Mazaar, former director of the New Millennium Project.

"Technology is changing the paradigm that we know," Tapscott said Thursday.

The key to change lies in the hands of the children, he said. "For the first time in history, children are an authority in the paradigm that we know," Tapscott said.

Government panel bans anti-rape ads

Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG

South African activists on Sunday slammed a decision to ban an anti-rape television advertisement some men thought was anti-male. The country has one of the world's highest rape rates.

The Advertising Standards Authority of South Africa quashed the ad after about 30 men complained the ad implied half of South Africa's men are rapists, Sunday newspapers reported.

"Basically, this ad was saying that half of South Africa's men are rapists and the other half condone rape," Peter Vundla, the committee chairman, was quoted as saying in the Sunday Times. "That is not supported by evidence and is discriminatory, even sexist."

Miranda Friedman, a leader of Women Against Child Abuse, said women would contest the decision and start challenging ads that were demeaning to females.

"We sent 250,000 signatures for stiffer rape sentences and they still haven't been implemented," Friedman said. The decision to ban the anti-rape ad "shows us, and shows the international community, exactly where the balance of power is in this country."

In the commercial, South African actress Charlene Theron, who has starred in Hollywood movies like Devil's Advocate, says: "Many people ask me what South African men are like."

She then cites rape statistics. About 64,000 women and girls are raped each year in South Africa, and South African women are nearly three times as likely to be raped as women in the United States, police say. About 14,000 of the victims are under 18, who are often raped by HIV-infected men who believe they will be cured by having sex with a virgin.

"We named youth ages 1 to 22 the Net Generation, the first generation to grow up immersed in the Internet," Tapscott said.

Children are no longer watching 24 hours of television like their baby-boomer parents did at their age, rather they are interactively stimulated, learning in a whole new realm, said Tapscott.

These vast developments, in what Tapscott called the "digital economy," led to discussion of business webs, disintermediation, virtualization, marketing in an interactive world, transformation of education and the revolution's dissonance.

He discussed the Internet economy as "infrastructure for all sectors" and users as "investors of intellectual capital.

Tapscott stressed that every adult and child must work together to forge this new economy with values in mind and that only then can society deal issues of privacy, censorship, intellectual property, employment, access, equity and democracy in light of new technologies.

Mazaar, who served as editor of "The Washington Quarterly," spoke about general trends in society in the coming century. He has worked in a range of foreign relations jobs, including serving as a congressional staffer, teaching at Georgetown University and authoring two books.

Four members of the Advisory Council — Gary Gitig, Robert Heckmann, Clark Krouch and Tom Quinn — gave presentations on emerging issues in the global economy after Mazaar's talk.

Father Oliver Williams, director of Notre Dame's Center for Ethics and Religious Values in Business, concluded the presentations with a discussion of dominant ethical issues in business today.

Report questions Gore 2000 chair

Tony Coelho, Vice President Al Gore's campaign chairman, approved questionable contractor payments, hired his niece for a job and made the government liable for a $300,000 personal loan while directing the U.S. ambassador to Portugal and had the government reimburse $26,000 in questionable expenses to a consultant who worked in Coelho's New York City office. Coelho's rental of a chauffeur-driven Mercedes "was especially troublesome" because the cost exceeded a $500 ceiling while a fleet of six vans for the embassy were underused.

The inspector general's report was released by the Center for Public Integrity, a nonprofit organization that tracks government fraud, waste and abuse and ethical conflicts involving public officials.

The center said Coelho's actions may have violated federal laws governing use of federal funds for international expositions. Coelho got strong support in a statement issued by Kiki Moore, Gore's campaign press secretary. "Tony Coelho does a great job as general chair of Gore 2000," the statement said. "Day in and day out he makes a tremendous contribution. Under Tony's leadership, the campaign will continue to advance an agenda that will improve the lives of America's working families — fighting to protect Social Security and preserve Medicare, making health care available to all of our children and calling for revolutionary change in our public schools.

Stanley Brand, Coelho's personal lawyer, said his client did not violate any laws in a job that did not pay him a salary. "He devoted two years of his life and spent substantial amounts of his own money," Brand said.
Tax credit provides crucial savings for working poor

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

The tax credit for the working poor that House Republicans want to convert from a lump sum to monthly payments provides crucial annual savings for people trying to get ahead, a study finds.

Half the 1998 earned income tax credit recipients questioned in the draft Syracuse University study said they planned to save at least a portion of their annual check so they could move to a better neighborhood, pay tuition or buy or repair a car.

"The EITC appears to be our most effective federal program for leading low-income families on a path toward true economic independence," said Timothy Smeeding, director of the Center for Policy Research at Syracuse.

"The EITC is what makes these expenditures possible."

House Republicans want to spread the tax credit payment over a year, saving $8.7 billion in fiscal 2000 and pushing the cost of the credit into the following budget year. That would help balance the 2000 budget without dipping into Social Security accounts or breaking self-imposed spending caps.

President Clinton has pledged to veto appropriations bills that change the payments. GOP presidential front-runner George W. Bush has joined Democrats in questioning whether such a change might harm the working poor.

Created in 1975, the credit is intended to keep people working and to offset the payroll taxes they contribute for Social Security and Medicare. Last year, taxpayers earning between $10,000 and $31,000 were eligible, depending on number of children. The average 1998 claim was $1,459 for 19.4 million taxpayers.

Among the GOP arguments for making 12 payments over the year is that poor people actually need more help making monthly ends meet and that the single payment is more difficult for people to manage.

"I think it's something that helps families in need to get their money on a monthly basis instead of one cash drop some time in the spring," said House Speaker Dennis Hastert.

But the Syracuse study suggests otherwise. It was based on interviews with 826 Chicago-area EITC recipients who used a free tax clinic to do their returns in 1998.

About 80 percent of that group expected a refund when they came into the clinic and had definite ideas of what to do with it, the research shows. Three-quarters said they would use the money to pay bills or meet household expenses, but 49 percent of those added they would save some money for bigger purchases, tuition or moving expenses.

"These uses suggest that the EITC also plays a large role in improving social mobility, a finding we did not expect," Smeeding said. "There is a large and growing recognition of the program and the potential payoff for working households."

The study found that many working people use their annual payments to open their first checking or savings account. Without such accounts, Smeeding said working poor are "less likely to be able to effectively prioritize" how to use a large check.

The study recommends that the government consider using electronic transfers of the payments to banks.

Many East Timorese still fearful of militia

Associated Press

DILI

Militiamen nabbed Manuel Pinto’s three brothers as soon as they ventured back into East Timor’s capital, after they were killed into false sense of security by a radio report that the international peace force had arrived.

Now, two weeks into the peace mission, the skinny 25-year-old scouts Dili for his mother, father and five sisters still hiding in the mountains.

Living on mangos and cassava, they are going hungry, but playing it safe.

“They’re still afraid. There’s just a few people here,” Pinto says, gesturing at the city around him. Families line up for handouts of rice from Australian soldiers at a sports stadium, but other parts of the city remain deserted.

Thousands of people have returned to Dili since the peacekeepers arrived and established some order to the chaos of the destroyed capital. But thousands more are still waiting, refusing to believe the militia are truly gone.

The majority of East Timor’s 850,000 people are still displaced, lost for now to their families.

Indonesian soldiers and their militia allies burned and chased hundreds of thousands out of their homes into the hills; an estimated 230,000 are believed held by militia in Indonesian West Timor.

Pinto, an amiable, voluble student in animal husbandry has family scattered in all directions. Seven are with him in the mountains, so frightened that even the arrival of 6,000 soldiers can’t reassure them. The three brothers taken to West Timor are rumored to be dead.

“I last night I dreamed that it’s OK, that they’re alive,” he said. “And my heart’s not trembling. So I hope everything’s OK.”

Pinto’s own flight started several days before East Timor voted for independence from Indonesia, triggering a terror campaign by pro-Indonesian forces across the half-island territory.

Contacts in the East Timor resistance and with the United Nations confirmed to him what many East Timorese already knew — that bloodshed would follow the Aug. 30 vote.

“I tell all my friends, we have to go,” he says. “Some people, they trust me and run away. But other people, they don’t trust me, and they get taken.”

Pinto escaped to the hills days before the vote. He came down only to cast his ballot and then fled back, this time taking care to take some sacks of rice with him.

His family joined him in the mountains at Darlav, a three-hour journey by car and then by foot.

They were among hundreds of refugees hiding there, foraging for fruit and roots when the food ran out.

His three brothers came down the same day the peacekeepers arrived, as soon as they heard the news on the radio.

Technicities delay peace process

Associated Press

JERUSALEM

In the first major setback in the revived peace process, Israelis said Sunday that only technical issues delay the opening of a land link for Palestinians between the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Palestinians insisted issues of principle are at stake. The "safe passage," which had been scheduled to open Sunday, is to provide the first unrestricted route for Palestinians between the two areas, and is key to smoothing peace talks revived last month by Prime Minister Ehud Barak and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

"We consider these points degrading and humiliating toward the Palestinian people and the Palestinian Authority," Jamal Tarifi, Palestinian negotiator, told The Associated Press. "If Israel maintains their position, safe passage is unquestionable," he said.

Public Security Minister Shlomo Ben-Ami insisted that the differences were "technical," and said he was certain the Palestinians would come to understand why Israel needs to maintain the power of arrest.

"Israel's sovereignty and accessibility toward the Palestinian people and the Palestinian Authority," Jamal Tarifi, Palestinian negotiator, said Sunday. "If Israel maintains their position, safe passage is unquestionable," he said.

Barak also said that the delay was due to the Palestinian Authority's "lack of vision and commitment." He said that by displaying friendship and cooperation during the quaked opening, Turks and Greeks have "set a new standard for peace in the region." The Palestinian Authority expressed its "regret and concern" over the delay but said it was willing to continue talks to resolve the issue.

Myanmar closes border after rebels released

BANGKOK

Myanmar closed its border with Thailand and reinforced its border forces after five armed rebels, who had held diplomats and hostages at the Myanmar Embassy, were released, newspapers said Sunday.

Thailand also put its border patrol on alert as a precautionary measure after the Myanmar militants were picked up by helicopters and set free within one mile of the frontier Saturday, the Bangkok Post said.

The group, which held 38 Myanmar and foreign hostages for 26 hours, were believed to have sought sanctuary with the Karon National Union, a border-based rebel group in Myanmar. "I will accept them in my country because they have the same passion that we do to oppose the Burmese junta government," KNU leader Bo Mya told reporters at his stronghold opposite Thailand's Tak Province.

Clinton wants nuclear test-ban ratification

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

As it presses for Senate ratification of a nuclear test ban treaty, the Clinton administration must overcome Republican anxiety over the CIA's inability to verify low-level underground nuclear explosions in other countries.

The administration contends the shortcomings in the CIA's monitoring capabilities give reason to ratify the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty.

Republicans, who control the Senate, disagree. They also contend the treaty, signed by 154 countries, is flawed in other ways and would amount to unilateral disarmament by the United States.

Twice last month, U.S. intelligence saw signs of activity in Russia that could have indicated Clinton's secret testing. The CIA was unable to say with certainty exactly what was happening.

"We don't know that there was any testing going on," White House Chief of Staff John Podesta said Sunday on CNN's "Late Edition." He added: "This is really an argument for the treaty."

After the fall of the Soviet Union, President Bush signed a limited testing moratorium to take effect October 1, 1992, for nine months. President Clinton continued the moratorium — the country's last test was in September 1992 — then signed the comprehensive global treaty in 1996.

The treaty, a plank in the 1992 Democratic Party platform, went to the Senate for ratification in 1997. It languished in the Senate until last week, when Mississippi Republican Majority Leader Trent Lott unexpectedly scheduled a full Senate vote for October 12.

Struggling for the 67 votes necessary for ratification, the White House began a campaign this weekend to boost the treaty, complaining of a sneak attack by Lott in giving only 10 days to make a case.

Anybody in our neighborhood who thought he was tough hadn’t yet played Ernest in football. Though younger than most of us by a couple years, he was strong and quick enough to shake any of us. Even if we did get hands on him, though, nobody could really tackle his hulking form alone — except maybe Leo or Tookie.

Our arena for “Ernest-ball” was a vacant lot next to his house. “Vacant” was just a matter of speaking. It was actually full of weeds, bricks and broken bottles. I suppose it was more vacant than some of the other lots. The main thing is, it suited Ernest just fine.

Jake, jujie, whump, FWAP! Nothing is as disorienting as being flipped through the air.

“Oh-ow!”

“Your wimp! Baby!”

I ignored them, trying to shake off the fall, but it’s hard when you land back first on your stomach. Besides, my pride hurt more than my back. Sure, I was on the ground, but I was the only one trying to make the tackle! Chad up another touchdown for Ernest. Guys, why couldn’t we play touch instead? Now had to be tackled. “Ernest-ball”

Tackle football it was. Being a little guy, it was hard enough for me to avoid tacklers (and, I suppose, running backsl, but rocks and broken bottles too). Still, if you wanted to play football, that “vacant” lot was where you had to play. If you found yourself going down, you just had to decide. “Should I land on a rock or broken glass?”

Picking teams was easy. First, you would pick Ernest. After that, you would always pick the ashly guys, like Tookie. Why? Ashly guys just always seemed tougher. In fact, if you ever saw a whole team of ashly guys, you could plan on losing. That’s like fighting with an ugly guy. He’s already ugly — what’s he got to lose?

My grandfather was always on “ash alert” with his brother, sister and me. We had to wear lotion, no matter what, and it was always cocoa butter. If we came over for a visit with dry elbows and knees, WHAM — out came the cocoa butter. In fact, she had this uncanny way of replenishing our home supply.

So wouldn’t we swear the last drop of lotion onto an elbow at home when Mom would say, “We got another package of cocoa butter from ‘Maw today!’ How she could be so accurate with her timing, I’ll never know.

Even my first year at Notre Dame, many years after “Ernest-ball,” my grandfather was on “ash alert.” Sure enough, every couple of months I’d get that shipment of cocoa butter from hundreds of miles away. That was good too, because my first PE rotation was swimming. Talk about your ashly! If I ever forgot to bring that cocoa butter to PE — especially in the winter. I’d almost prefer skipping class to walking around ashly blue.

Yes, my colleagues didn’t understand ashly. They just jumped in the shower, blow-dried their hair to topic for another day, got dressed and were good to go. Me? I had to get something on the elbows first. They didn’t understand the ritual. Why couldn’t I do that too? What was the heck was “ashly, anyway?"

It never dawned on me that some people didn’t know “ashly”! Often thought, what a silly question. I’d look around to share the laugh with a fellow African American, but OOPS! Once again, I was the only one around.

Silly questions. How many times have we heard the phrase: “The only silly questions are the ones not asked!” Still, sometimes, that’s more easily said than done.

Many of us in the racial or cultural minority are asked a lot of “silly questions,” perhaps with no ill-intention from the curious questioner: “How do you comb hair like yours?” “What sport do you play?” “You mean you actually get a suntan?” After dozens of such questions, even the most patient of us can get burned out. In fact, I know an African-American alumni who swears that he, as a frustrated student, presented a “bill” to then-president Father Hesburgh for all the man-hours he put in “teaching” his classmates about Black folk.

On the other hand, who doesn’t arrive to this Notre Dame community without some “silly questions” about unfamiliar others? After all, although on the verge of a new millennium, we still live in an essentially segregated country, with homogeneous school systems, neighborhoods, places of worship and the like. If this community can’t ask the questions now, then when? If we don’t answer, then who will?

How we deal with the “silly questions” can shape our definition of the “Notre Dame community.” The natural course of dorm life is not enough. Discussions in neutral settings, with trained moderators, are also necessary to facilitate forthright discussion. In such settings, where the goals and objectives are obvious, people are less likely to get defensive and real progress can be made.

Some such programs ABE available to us. They are no good if no one uses them. It is unlikely that any such program will be perfect. In our country, however, it is likely that each could be called a good beginning. By the way, the next time you go by one of those “vacant” lots with broken bricks and bottles strewn about, don’t ignore it. Clean it up!

After all, somebody might want to play a little “Ernest-ball” there with some other little, ashly kids who can’t tackle.

ABC gets hit with ‘Once and Again’

By FRAZIER MOORE

Last week’s “Once and Again” started with Lily, the 40-year-old single mother played by Sela Ward, exploding with an anxious confession: “I have NO idea what I’m doing.”

Well, what she’s doing is nothing less than picking up the pieces of her life after the breakup of her marriage. She’s rebuilding her identity and coping with guilt for what divorce has done to her two daughters. Dearest of all, she’s risking romance with Rick, a similarly dam-aged single father of two.

So that’s what Lily is doing on “Once and Again,” which airs Tuesdays at 10 p.m. EDT on ABC, then repeats Fridays on cable’s Lifetime at 11 p.m. EDT. And she must be doing something right. A critical favorite long before its debut, the series gave ABC the highest rating among adults 18-to-49 of any network’s premiering drama in four years.

What that audience encountered was a refreshingly adult drama with the very humor and bittersweet honesty befitting its creators, Edward Zwick and Marshall Herskovitz, until now best known for the age-defining “thirtysomething.”

Viewers also found a splendid cast, headed up by Billy Campbell as Rick and Ward in quite a change from her Dambovian role on the sometimes racy, sometimes wacky “Sisters.”

But could the sleekly gorgeous Sela Ward make Lily’s plight convincing? The matter was settled in the premiere episode’s first moments: “All I ever wanted. I think. was to be safe,” Lily mused. “That’s the funny thing, because I never chose the safe thing. I would try, and somehow it would always end up being unsafe.”

Reminded of that poignant speech, Ward laughs. “That,” she declares, “was the first paragraph in the script and the thing that hooked me. I went, ‘Ohmigod! This is how I feel! Everything in my life is about safety!’ And I kept reading and the writing was so good, I couldn’t get it out of my head.

“This is what’s so interesting about Lily: You get to explore her insecurities and neuroses, and then transcend that. With this role, you have somewhere to go.”

In important ways, “Once and Again” is a very grown-up drama. It dares to tilt toward being about adults who have kids, not about kids who have parents. The payoff: Everything becomes more complex. And richer.

This week, just watch Lily and Rick, laden with responsibilities, try to find a night they’re both free for a date.

And as they separately anticipate sex with each other, bear Lily fre6. in her sister. “I’ve got two kids! How can I take my clothes off?” While, elsewhere, Rick’s business partner is pressuring him portentously for a date.

“Don’t get married until I was 35. But before that, I would have serial monogamy of three, four years at a time. I feel like I’ve been divorced three times over.

I’ve never been divorced,” says Ward. Curled up on the sofa in a Manhattan hotel’s bar, she batters a sore throat with hot tea as she reflects on her series’ potentially broad appeal.

“Don’t have to look far for divorce and all the people it affects,” she notes. “And kids can totally relate to being in a family of divorce, with their parents dating.”

Even with her brown eyes a bit watery and her apologies for being a little spaced, the fluish Ward still glows. Those eyebrows arch like hootenanny. Her smile is luminous.

A native of Meridian, Miss., she first found success modeling, then moved into acting with roles in such features as “Nothing in Common,” “The Fugitive” and “Sisters,” for which she won the 1994 Emmy for Best Actress in a Drama.

And now she wants the world to know: There’s life after 40.

“I’m sort of loaded for bear,” says the 43-year-old Ward, tapping a Southernism, “because I’ve been producing this documentary for Lifetime on beauty and ageism.”

“We’re living in this youth-obsessed culture where the message we get — especially from the entertainment industry and advertising — is that our life is over at 40. And I resent it.”

With her documentary, which Lifetime will air next spring, “I’m doing my little part to give a woman, or a man, a chance to think. You know what, I can make a different choice.”

Of course, choices are what Lily faces in excess. It isn’t safe. But it’s fascinating.

Irish break away from Sooners

By BILL HAR T
Associate Sports Editor

Jackson Jackson is no stranger to come-from-behind situations. In the two years the fifth-year Irish quarterback has started for the Irish, coming back from second-half deficits has almost seemed to be the rule, rather than the exception. But this year, the patented comebacks that Jackson composed fell just short of victory. It looked to be the same case this weekend, when the Oklahoma Sooners took a 30-14 lead with 10 minutes, 1 second remaining in the third quarter.

But this time, Jackson would not be denied a win.

"I said 'we've got to get this victory,'" he said after the game, "I said if I have to put an IV in my arm after the game, we're going to get this victory."

This time, Jackson pulled out possibly the best comeback of the decade, leading a second-half charge to defeat the No. 25 Sooners 34-30.

"This was a huge win for us," head coach Bob Davie said. "I am not sure he ever saw the half coming. It looked like he had velcro on his lip. That's one we can thank (athletic department chaplain) Father Reihle on."

The offense put Lafayette's gift to good use. Thanks to an eight-play drive that included two first-down receptions by Bunker Joey Getherall, the Irish found themselves at the Sooners 1-yard line. In his first possession of the game, junior Tony Driver punched the ball in for the score.

For the day, Getherall had six receptions for 133 yards, both career highs. In addition, a 28-yard touchdown catch was the longest passing play of his career.

"The defense was lined up in a certain way," Jackson said. "Putting guys on Joey and against our receivers like linebackers. They didn't have a chance to get nickel personnel in the game. Joey ran great routes, and I just gave him the ball."

After fielding the kickoff to their own 37-yard line, the Sooners attempted to regain some breathing room and keep the team in front for good. But the visitors only got as far as the Irish 33, before two incomplete passes and one for short gain forced them to punt. The well-placed kick put the Irish on their own 2-yard line with 14:45 left in the game. Runs by Driver and Fisher opened up some space for Jackson, but the Irish defense seemed to momentarily stall, with a third-down situation at their own 13-yard line.

But Jackson again took matters into his own hands, scrambling 23 yards for the first down.

"It was a quarterback draw," Jackson said. "I was just playing it real calm, hitting the defense sort itself out, and running with it."

Two plays later, Jackson hit a wide-open Getherall to give the Irish a first-and-goal situation at the Sooners 7. Following a five-yard run by Fisher and a penalty, Driver slanted right into the end zone for the go-ahead touchdown.

"Basically they just whipped us in the second half," Oklahoma head coach Ron Stoops said about the Irish. "We did some good things early but wasn't strong enough to finish. You have to give their players credit. They fought and their will to win out did ours."

After senior Jim Sanson's field goal attempt hit the upright and bounced wide late in the fourth quarter, the Sooners took over at their own 20-yard line. With one last shot, Heupel tried to lead his team back to the Irish end zone. But four straight incompletions finished the game for the Sooners.

"It wasn't as well as Josh is capable," Stoops said of Heupel's effort. "Josh knows it and we say it all the time. He has got to have people around him. We have to get receivers open and make plays. I haven't seen us since I have been here go four straight incompletions."

While Heupel had three touchdown passes for the game, setting the new team record with 16 on the year, his 22-40 performance for 106 yards with one interception fell short of his season average.

"He's an accurate guy," Davie said about Heupel. "But when you really get nervous is when a guy like that can run with the football. We basically dared him to run with it. I think he is tremendously accurate with a good arm, but it makes it easier when you face someone who doesn't want to run the football."

Jackson combined rushing and passing to confuse the Sooners defense. He had 107 yards rushing and 276 yards in the air. Jackson completed 15 of 21 passes for the day. But for Jackson, being able to help put the team back on track is a more valuable than individual accomplishments.

"I've got to go out and play as hard as I can," he said. "That's what I wanted to do every single play. I wanted to give all my energy, and do it in the best of my ability, and I think I accomplished that.

Easy in the fourth quarter, Notre Dame quarterback Jarious Jackson stiff arms an Oklahoma defender on his way to a 23-yard gain. Four plays later, Tony Driver punched the ball into the end zone for the game-winning touchdown, as the Irish went on to a 34-30 victory over the Sooners.

B+ overall: It's amazing how good things happen when you don't turn over the ball.

B+ running backs: Jackson played like the Jackson of 1996 and the Irish won like the Irish of 1996.

A+ receivers: Gethereal's return gave the Irish another recieving threat, although losing Nelson could hurt in the long run.

A+ offensive line: The Irish came out and played smash-mouth football thanks to the line, but it did allow three sacks.

B- defensive line: Heupel's quick release made rushing him difficult, but Irons and Bryant each managed to get a sack.

A+ linebackers: The Irish played nickel and dime defenses most of the game, so the linebackers didn't play much.

F special teams: Daniels broke the Oklahoma team record for return yards by himself. Sanson missed two field goals, and Hildbold caused a safety.

B+ coaching: If Sanson is still the kicker and dime defenses most of the game, so the linebackers didn't play much.

Bobby Brown and an Irish fan celebrate Notre Dame's 34-30 win over Oklahoma that put a stop to Notre Dame's three-game losing streak and Oklahoma's five-game winning streak.

New life for fans, coaches, team

As the final seconds ticked off the clock in Notre Dame Stadium, head coach Bob Davie and receivers coach Urban Meyer could be heard shouting, "It's over! It's over!" and hugging as they jumped up and down on the Irish sidelines.

After four weeks of questions regarding his play-calling and clock management, Davie finally had a chance to enjoy a victory and the rewards of coaching.

"It's a lot easier tonight when I get home," Davie said after the game. "This will be the first night I can watch ESPN and catch the highlights. It will be fun to go home and see what other people did across the country without having to turn the volume down.

The volume on the Davie household TV may have been loud Saturday night, but it wasn't as loud as Notre Dame Stadium was on Saturday afternoon. Two weeks ago against Michigan State, the Spartans faced a critical first down late in the fourth quarter with the game still in doubt.

If the Irish could force the Spartans to punt, there was still a chance of a Notre Dame victory. With such a crucial play coming up, one would figure that the crowd would be loud — but it wasn't. Two weeks ago, the crowd was merely apathetic.

But this week was a different story. The game was still in doubt with just a little more than two minutes left on the clock. The Sooners faced third-and-10 from their own 20 yard line. Trailing by four, quarterback Josh Heupel had to lead his team 80 yards if the Sooners were to go 4-0. This week the crowd responded to the crucial situation.

The keys were out, the fans were on their feet and the stadium with shaking with noise. Two players later, the Irish had the ball back and a second victory was in hand.

"I thought our fans did a great job," Davie said. "We haven't made it easy for our fans this year. But to come out in the second half and still see that stadium sold out — you could feel the momentum swinging our way."

Irish fans have slipped to a pretty sorry state when the head coach seems surprised that people haven't left at halftime.

Davie often says that Irish fans are really put some life into this team."

And I was really proud of them."

said last week that winning would "really put some life into this team."

There was life in every player on the field. From Jarious Jackson who battled through a toe injury and the haunting turnovers of previous weeks to put together a near flaw­ less game to defensive back Lee Lafayette, who had been picked on by opposing quarterbacks in previous games, but responded to grab the interception that turned the game around for the Irish, there was a different Irish team on the field Saturday.

Trailing by 16 points in the third quarter, the Irish could have quit. They had seen previous comeback attempts fail and it would have been easy for Notre Dame to just give up and accept their fourth loss on the season.

"It was a catch for them and the kids really responded in the second half," defensive coordinator Greg Mattison said. "They have had great character all year. They have battled and battled for us. They could have quit. It would have been easier for them to say: 'I'm not going anymore.' But instead they battled and I was really proud of them."

The Irish battled back against adversity and earned the right to finally enjoy a victory.

"I'm just about enjoying the win," Davie said. "It's about the guys going home and enjoying this win. For tonight, this makes things better."

Fisher and company rush past Sooners

By TIM CASEY

This year's Notre Dame running game may not bring back memories of the Four Horsemen. They will never be confused with the Bettis/Brooks/Withers backfield of the early '90s.

But Saturday, facing an Oklahoma defense yielding 263 yards and 16.3 points per game — seventh in the nation — the Irish brought back flashes of an earlier, more-successful period of their football history.

"For us to win, we have to run the ball," Bob Davie said on Saturday. "It was a little bit cloudy and rainy in Notre Dame Stadium so we just decided it was time to get back to Notre Dame football."

And that they did.

From Tony Fisher's 55-yard scamper off-tackle on the first play from scrimmage to run out the last 1:13 of the game, the ground attack turned in its best performance of the season.

Prior to Saturday, the Irish had run the ball better in the first three games than they did for the remainder of the season.

"The Irish did not panic. Instead of showing frustration, the Irish brought back Hashes of an earlier, more successful period of their running game. But hopefully we can build on this," Davie said.

The Irish never looked back from Fisher's 55-yard scamper off-tackle on the first play from scrimmage. After getting a two-hour pep talk from former teammate Austin Allison on Thursday night, Fisher responded with a game-high 140 yards on 26 carries. Fisher gained 66 of his yards on the first five-down, 76-yard touchdown march. Following a couple of play-action passes that failed, Fisher took the ball to the 10-yard line. After being stuffed on two plays of the game to put the Irish at five-play, 76-yard touchdown march, Fisher ran the ball on the last 1:13 of the game, literally ran out the clock.

"We were going to try to run the football today," said offensive coordinator Kevin Rogers following Saturday's game. "Every question that's been asked to me is "Why can't we run the football?" Probably some of that reason is that I'm too impatient. But today we stuck with the plan.

Coinciding with the sudden emergence of the running game, Oklahoma's defense continued to be a problem for the Sooners. The Irish rushed for 287 yards in the previous four games.

"We knew we had to establish a run game and control the ball," Fisher said. "That was pretty much our main objective during the bye week. We executed our fundamentals in this game."

Notre Dame wasted no time establishing the run, beginning the day with a five-play, 76-yard touchdown march. Fisher gained 66 of his yards on the first two plays of the game to put the Irish at the 10-yard line. After being stuffed on an option run to the nose, Fisher scrambled out of the pocket for a 10-yard touchdown run to provide the early lead.

Down 14 early in the third quarter, the Irish did not panic. Instead of showing frustration, they stuck to their game plan and ran the football. In the second half alone, they rushed for 162 yards on 34 attempts.

"You have to stay in your offense and do what you can do," Dan Davie said.

We couldn't all of a sudden change our offense.

Driver's first touchdown was also his first carry of the day, as he reduced the Oklahoma lead to 30-28 with less than three minutes remaining in the third quarter.

The best was yet to come for Fisher, Driver, Jackson and company.

Starting at their own 2-yard line with 14:45 left in the game, Jackson drove the Irish down the field in Elway-esque fashion. Facing third-and-2 from the Oklahoma 33-yard line and unable to find a target, Jackson took off up the middle for a 23-yard gain and the first down. Of 11 total plays in the series, eight were rushes, culminating in another one-yard touchdown run for Driver. Ahead for the first time since early in the first quarter, the Irish never looked back. Notre Dame ran the ball on each of its last 10 plays from scrimmage, as it literally ran out the clock.

"We were going to try to run the football today," said offensive coordinator Kevin Rogers following Saturday's game. "Every question that's been asked to me is "Why can't we run the football?" Probably some of that reason is that I'm too impatient. But today we stuck with the plan.

Coinciding with the sudden emergence of the running game, the offensive line turned in a solid performance. The guys in the trenches cleared holes for the backs, enabling Fisher, Driver and Jackson room to operate.

"If you are going to be an offensive lineman at Notre Dame, you have to be able to run the ball," said offensive tackle Jordan Black. "For years that has been our bread and butter."

"You can put anybody in the backfield and if we don't do what we are supposed to, then the back isn't going to look good," Black continued. "This week we did our jobs and you get to see the potential and talent."

After starting with three losses in four games, any sense of confidence can help the Irish. According to Davie, Saturday's running performance could be a confidence booster for his team.

"I think those backs had a lot to do with our confidence because they were running hard," Davie said. "That was what got us in trouble early in the year because we haven't had confidence in our running game. But hopefully we can build on this."

Jarious Jackson runs over Oklahoma cornerback Pee Wee Woods for a few of his 107 yards rushing on Saturday. The Irish quarterback's rushing total was his highest of the season and the third 100-yard rushing game by an Irish player this season.

Back to winning ways

There were no boos or bowed Irish heads after Notre Dame's 34-30 win over Oklahoma Saturday at Notre Dame Stadium. The return of Joey Getherall to the line-up and Jarious Jackson's return to his 1998 form led the Irish to a thrilling, come-from-behind victory over the No. 25 Sooners. A 98-yard touchdown drive capped off by Tony Driver's second touchdown of the day gave Notre Dame the victory that finally snapped its three-game losing streak and returned the Irish to their usual winning ways.

That really is disgusting

By BRIAN McLAUGHLIN
Scene Writer

Have you ever wondered what a suctionist is? Have you ever contemplated how much you really can accomplish with a strip of raw liver and a few rubber bands? Do you want to know how one would go about eating a monkey's brain?

Well, most certainly a person would probably answer these questions with a resounding "NO!" However, those intrigued by what was just written... well, they're sickos. But they're also in luck, because their little box has finally been written.

"That's Disgusting," written by Greta Garbage, bills itself as "an adult guide to what's gross, tasteless, rude, crude and lewd." Yet, this foreboding disclaimer does not even begin to describe how far beyond the bounds of decency the book goes.

When first reading the book for review, I could figure, "How bad can it be?" It was published by a legitimate publishing company and approved indirectly through the University.

However, these doubts are quickly swept away by the first page of the book, which gives a comprehensive list of the most bizarre proctological experiences.

They are shocking, sickening and delightful to tell the truth. After being blown away by how over-the-top the book's contents are, a reader finds himself reading out loud over and over again with each turn of the page. It is also quickly realized how difficult reviewing it would be since even a description of what is written in "That's Disgusting" would probably be deemed unprintable any newspaper.

The book is really a series of short anecdotes and lists which cover the most disgusting aspects of human behaviour and characteristics. It is a world record of the gross, recounting the most nauseating things people have done throughout history, as well as the most sickening details of the human body and its workings.

The quick stories and lists are separated by category, so one can go right to whatever sparks one's sick fancy. Whether those interests lean more towards castration or defecation, there's something for everyone in this book.

Well, maybe not everyone. In fact, most people would probably find "That's Disgusting" to be disturbing, obscene and outright offensive — even this reviewer had to wrinkle his nose and give a displeased groan at a few of the more extreme passages.

The author probably realized this when writing the book, as Greta Garbage is obviously a person who's straddled to protect the true author from excessive amounts of hate mail and vitriol from associates in the writing world.

Indeed, in this modern, civilized nation, Garbage's work caters to an extremely small audience. But despite its size, this audience will be delightedly entertained by the book with furious passion, due to the book's direct, in-your-face approach.

However, even as a work in tastelessness, it is more than 5 million copies, says the rumor which bothered her for a while.

"That's Disgusting" is far from perfect. As mentioned before, the book is in the format of a world-record book, with short passages describing the events behind each disgusting wonder. While normal world-record books are usually written in a deadpan, straightforward and factual style, Garbage likes to spice up the anecdotes with tons of sarcasm and wisecracks.

This is the book's largest failing for a number of reasons. First of all, Garbage's use of sarcasm seems strained and reminds one of over-the-top adults attempting to appear "hip" — attempts that everyone knows almost always fail.

Secondly, the wisecracks can be so painfully corny that they are sometimes more embarrassing than the content of the book itself.

And finally, at times, the author concentrates so hard on being funny that she becomes negligent to the facts supporting the matter that she is relating. After all, the facts are really the most fascinating part.

Overall, the use of informal humor in this book seems entirely out of place, since the real emphasis should be on the true events. If Garbage were to fully focus on the topic matter with a completely straight face and dry tone, the effect would be much more humorous due to the contrast between the simple relation of facts and the absurdity of the subject matter that those facts are relating.

Although "That's Disgusting" is not very well-written, its content is truly fascinating, and this alone makes the book worth reading. It is more than certain that most people who try will throw the book down in horror. But for those who can stomach it, they will find themselves mesmerized for hours, laughing at mankind in its most disgusting form.

So bring along the barbells and pick up a copy today.

Pop star Britney Spears claims nature helped her bosom grow.

Spears denies breast implants rumor

NEW YORK

Singer Britney Spears says that a growth spur, not breast implants, have contributed to her increased proportions.

"When I first signed with the record label, we took a lot of photos, and those were the pictures that got used. I weighed 105 pounds. I weigh 130 now. I went through a major growth spur," Spears, 17, tells the Oct. 9 issue of TV Guide.

Spears, whose "Baby One More Time" album has sold more than 5 million copies, says the rumors bothered her for a while.

"In some interviews I would just start crying," she says. "I'd be like, 'Why are you being so rude to me?' After a while people stopped saying stuff. But for a while it got really tough."

Allman Brothers' graves cause trouble

MACON, Ga.

Duane Allman's and his brother Berry Oakley's relatives are so adamant about protecting their grave sites, they fought the land immediately surrounding them and claim it's private — no trespassing.

"We don't want anyone [kicked] out of Rose Hill, but don't deface the graves. Don't have sex on the graves," said Lars Anderson, an attorney for two relatives of the two Allman Brothers Band founders.

This died in separate motorcycle accidents in the early 1970s.

Macon Mayor Jim Marshall said the cemetery is public property and the hundreds of people who flock to the graves each year are welcome.

"I also had criminal trespassing charges against a Macon Telegraph photographer arrested while taking photos of the graves were dropped Friday.

Marshall said the city is considering allowing a fence around the graves and a sign to tell visitors what they may and may not do.

Davis continues strong Arista reign

NEW YORK

At 65, Clive Davis is the man with the Midas touch in America's music scene and an ear for what kids want to hear.

The Arista Records president invested millions in hip-hop in the early '90s, and claims chart-topper Puffy Daddy among his proteges. On the folk-pop front, Sarah McLachlan's album "Surfacing" has sold 7 million.

When Davis took a chance on 1970s guitarist Carlos Santana, Santana's new album "Supernatural" hit the Top 5.

And in June, Arista recorded it's most profitable year — $425 million in sales and $99 gold or platinum albums.

"An artist has to be able to fulfill in person the magic on a record," Davis told Time magazine in this week's editions.

Davis' latest addition to Arista: the Artist formerly known as Prince. The Artist's new album debuts next month.

Bush speaks mind on '20/20'

NEW YORK

Sam Donaldson got former president George Bush to admit he has "a vulgar streak" and exchanges Monica Lewinsky jokes.

The ABC newsmen interviewed Bush for "20/20."

"Although I couldn't get [Bush] to tell me the latest one he had heard, I think he is at the point in his life where he has the freedom to say exactly what is on his mind," Donaldson tells the Oct. 9 issue of TV Guide.

Book Review

That really is disgusting

By BRIAN McLAUGHLIN
Scene Writer

Have you ever wondered what a suctionist is? Have you ever contemplated how much you really can accomplish with a strip of raw liver and a few rubber bands? Do you want to know how one would go about eating a monkey's brain?

Well, most certainly a person would probably answer these questions with a resounding "NO!" However, those intrigued by what was just written... well, they're sickos. But they're also in luck, because their little box has finally been written.

"That's Disgusting," written by Greta Garbage, bills itself as "an adult guide to what's gross, tasteless, rude, crude and lewd." Yet, this foreboding disclaimer does not even begin to describe how far beyond the bounds of decency the book goes.

When first reading the book for review, I could figure, "How bad can it be?" It was published by a legitimate publishing company and approved indirectly through the University.

However, these doubts are quickly swept away by the first page of the book, which gives a comprehensive list of the most bizarre proctological experiences.

They are shocking, sickening and delightful to tell the truth. After being blown away by how over-the-top the book's contents are, a reader finds himself reading out loud over and over again with each turn of the page. It is also quickly realized how difficult reviewing it would be since even a description of what is written in "That's Disgusting" would probably be deemed unprintable any newspaper.

The book is really a series of short anecdotes and lists which cover the most disgusting aspects of human behaviour and characteristics. It is a world record of the gross, recounting the most nauseating things people have done throughout history, as well as the most sickening details of the human body and its workings.

The quick stories and lists are separated by category, so one can go right to whatever sparks one's sick fancy. Whether those interests lean more towards castration or defecation, there's something for everyone in this book.

Well, maybe not everyone. In fact, most people would probably find "That's Disgusting" to be disturbing, obscene and outright offensive — even this reviewer had to wrinkle his nose and give a displeased groan at a few of the more extreme passages.

The author probably realized this when writing the book, as Greta Garbage is obviously a person who's straddled to protect the true author from excessive amounts of hate mail and vitriol from associates in the writing world.

Indeed, in this modern, civilized nation, Garbage's work caters to an extremely small audience. But despite its size, this audience will be delightedly entertained by the book with furious passion, due to the book's direct, in-your-face approach.

However, even as a work in tastelessness, it is more than...
John Olerud to load the bases chanting "Let's go, Mets!" on the third, and hit a one-out single off Greg Jefferies in the crowd. The Mets poured out to lift the Philadelphia Phillies to a comeback victory over the Montreal Expos.

Expos starter Dustin Hermanson was lifted after seven effective innings with a 2-2 tie, retiring the last nine batters before the bullpen blew it. The Phillies avoided a season-ending sweep but finished with their 12th losing season in 13 years.

Braves 18, Marlins 0

In their largest shutout win in 114 years, the Braves pounded out 21 hits and Tom Glavine, who scattered 13 hits in 4 1/2 innings because of rain. The victory clinched 35 minutes before they called the game.

Puckeroo hit an RBI double in the first inning for Chicago and Minnesota tied it on Torii Hunter's RBI double in the seventh.

Angels 1, Rangers 0

On Saturday before a sellout crowd at Coors Field and the Rockies avoided a three-game sweep at Coors Field, Colorado Rockies pitcher Matt Karcher faced the Angels and beat the Texas Rangers.

In a typically snappy end-of-season game played in 1 hour, 56 minutes, the teams combined to strike out 22 times. It was Anaheim's quickest game since Sept. 29, 1992, a 1:44 game against Kansas City.

Rockies 9, Giants 8

The Colorado Rockies gave Jim Leyland a nice going-away present Sunday, a two-out rally in the ninth inning for a victory over San Francisco in his final game as manager.

A disappointing season for Leyland ended on a positive note when Edgardo Custodi hit a sacrifice fly with one out. The Giants avoided a three-game sweep at Coors Field and finished 72-90 in their only season under Leyland.

Serena beats Venus for Grand Slam Cup

Associated Press

MUNICH, Germany

Serena Williams beat older sister Venus for the first time in their professional careers Sunday to capture the Grand Slam Cup and a $900,000 payday.

The U.S. Open champion won 6-1, 3-6, 6-3 in a family final in which the players' mother applauded at the end.

Venus, at 19 one year older, applauded Serena and the sisters embraced at the net after much emotion during play.

"This is exciting, this is what we always wanted," Serena said during the awards ceremony.

"Congratulations, Serena, the U.S. Open champion," Venus said.

Venus earned $400,000, meaning the family budget grew by $1.3 million.

This was the second sister-sister final in the history of pro tennis. In the first, Venus beat Serena 6-1, 4-6, 6-4 in Key Biscayne, Fla., in March. She also won their two non title matches in 1998.

Earlier, Greg Rusedski used his big serve to overpower Tommy Haas for the first time in the men's final, taking the richest prize in tennis.

Rusedski fired 29 aces to win 6-3, 6-4, 6-7 (7-5), 7-6 (7-5) and earn $1.3 million.

"I tried everything, but he was too good for me," said Haas, who won $650,000.

The $6.7 million tournament, which pays more money per player than any other tennis event, features the 12 men and eight women with the best records in the year's four Grand Slam events.

Serena won the U.S. Open three weeks ago and now has a 16-match winning streak. Venus ended another 16-match winning streak when she beat Serena in March. Venus was the only top player Serena had never beaten.

Serena, the more muscular of the sisters, won her fifth title of the year. She was all over Venus from the outset, winning 12 of the first three points and holding Venus to three points in the first five games.

But her game deteriorated in the second set and Venus evened the score. In the third set, Serena broke serve for a 3-1 lead, missed two chances to go up 5-1 and needed three match points to win in 1 hour, 45 minutes.

Rusedski, who never got past the round of 16 in a Grand Slam tournament this year, entered the Grand Slam Cup when five qualfiers, including Pete Sampras and Patrick Rafter, withdrew because of injuries.

Carlson’s goals highlight Irish exhibition victory

The Notre Dame hockey team struggled to find the net in the early going before pulling away for a 4-1 victory over visiting Wilfrid Laurier University, in exhibition action Friday night at the Joyce Center Fieldhouse.

Notre Dame, which opens Central Collegiate Hockey Association play at the Joyce Center on Thursday versus Michigan, spent much of the night on the power play, converting twice on seven chances. Junior left wing Dan Carlson assisted on both of the power-play goals and iced the victory with a shorthanded, empty-netter.

The Irish owned a dominating 52-13 edge in shots on goal, including a 37-5 margin during the final two periods. Notre Dame’s total shots attempted nearly hit triple digits, as the Irish launched 98 total shots in the game, compared to WLU’s 31.

The Irish opened the scoring midway through the second period, cashing in their third power-play chance of the night. Junior defenseman Ryan Clark, who made his first appearance for the Irish since last December due to a shoulder injury, got things going with a pass from the right to left circle. Junior left wing Dan Carlson then fired the puck on net and senior center Ben Simon, who was filling the slot, deflected the puck out of the air and past goaltender Chad Marshall.

The visitors tied the game later in the opening period, after a turnover in the Irish zone. Left wing Jeff Ambrosio came up with the puck near the right boards and fired a pass into the slot area for center Mark Dineley, who faked a low shot before lifting the puck over the top of senior goalie Simon and freshman right wing Simon and freshman right wing Jeff Ambrosio.

Moss leads Vikings past Buccaneers

Associated Press

Watch out, NFL, the real Randy Moss is back.
The All-Pro receiver was at his finger-pointing, chest-dumping, touchdown-catchin' best Sunday, leading the Minnesota Vikings past the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 21-14.
Moss tied his career-high with a 61-yard catch for a touchdown. He added a 27-yard score and also had a 21-yard reception against triple coverage that set up Andrew Glover's TD.
"When you put up 21 points in the first quarter, that's exciting," said Moss, who earlier in the week criticized offensive coordinator Ray Sherman's game plans.
Moss had only nine catches for 120 yards heading into the game but had four for 120 against the usually stingy Tampa Bay defense.

Ravens 19, Falcons 13, OT

The NFL champions dropped to 0-4 when Sunny Case threw a 54-yard pass to Justin Armour in overtime after Falcons coach Dan Reeves passed on having Morten Andersen try a 53-yard field goal with 49 seconds left in regulation.
The Falcons went three-and-out to open overtime, then Case found Armour behind cornerback Ronnie Bradford and safety
Eugene Robinson.
The Falcons played without starting quarterback Chris Chandler. Backup Tony
in the second period. They also lost Pro Bowl cornerback Ray Buchanan, who was ejected after Case hooked up with Patrick Johnson on a 32-yard touchdown.

Johnson danced over Buchanan and as he was about to spike the ball, Buchanan jumped in his face, put Johnson in a bear hug and slammed him into the ground. Buchanan also punched Johnson in the back of the head before an official pulled him away.

Visiting Baltimore improved to 2-2.

Rams 38, Bengals 10

At Cincinnati, Az-Zahir Hakim tied a Rams record by scoring four touchdowns, three on passes from Kurt Warner, the fourth on an 84-yard punt return.
Hakim had touchdown catches of 9 and 51 yards in the first half and an 18-yarder in the third quarter.

Warner, a former Arena
Footballpasser, became the first quarterback in the last 50 years to throw three touchdown passes in each of his first three starts. He went 17-for-21 for 310 yards, improving his passer rating for the season to 125.
Isaac Bruce had six catches for 152 yards for the Rams (3-0).

The Bengals (0-4) became the first NFL franchise to lose 100 games in the 1990s, breaking their tie at 99 with the Rams.

Cowboys 35, Cardinals 7

Host Dallas got some revenge against the team that knocked it out of last season's playoffs.
Raghib Ismail's 63-yard touchdown catch sparked the Cowboys (3-0), then defensive end Greg Ellis went 98 yards with a fumble return.

Arizona (1-3) continued to struggle, falling behind 21-0 for the second time this season and committing the turnovers. Jake Plummer threw three more interceptions, increasing his league-worst total to 12. Dallas has now beaten Arizona in 17 of the last 19 meetings.

Ellis' game-sealing score was his second in two games. He also had an 87-yard interception return in a 24-7 victory over Atlanta.

Jaguars 27, Steelers 3

Jacksonville (3-1) won for the first time in five visits to Pittsburgh as its defense got two safeties to outscore Pittsburgh's stumbling offense. The Steelers (2-3) have lost four straight at home, their longest streak since 1976.

Both safeties came on hits against Kordell Stewart. Mark Bruneel also threw a short touchdown pass and Mike Holllis hit two field goals. But both offenses struggled.

Patriots 19, Browns 7

Terry Glenn overcame two costly first-half fumbles with a club-record 13 receptions for 214 yards at Cleveland. He cought a short pass from Drew Bledsoe and turned it into a 34-yard TD in the first play of the fourth quarter as New England (4-0) finally pulled away from the expansion Browns.

Cleveland (0-4) took its first lead of the season on a 64-yard hookup by rookies Tim Couch and Kevin Johnson. But they couldn't stop Bledsoe, who was 28-for-42 for 389 yards.

Bears 14, Saints 10

Shane Matthews found Curtis Conway for two touchdowns in the last 1:48. Matthews con-ected with Conway on a 7-yard pass with seven seconds left, bringing Bears fans, who had been boozing a quarter earlier, to their feet. Offensive tackle Blake Birkermeyer went to the corner of the end zone and screamed at the fans in celebration as Saints coach Mike Ditka threw his clipboard in disgust.
Brown keeps Irish defense rock solid

By MIKE CONNOLLY
Associate Sports Editor

If you look at quick look at the Irish line up, youmight look past Kara Brown. Standing just 5-foot-2, Brown is not the quickest, the strongest or the faster player on the Irish roster. But once you see her play, you quickly understand why she is such an important part of the Irish defense.

The outside defensive back challenges every ball in her area and plays physical with players who have height and weight advantages over her. Her intensity and skill have allowed her to start all 83 games she has played in a Irish uniform.

"She's one of the hardest players we have on our team," Irish head coach Randy Waldrum said. "That's something that is contagious. When they see her out there sliding and digging balls from players and when she wins head balls when she isn't the tallest player on the team, it's contagious for the rest of the players."

Brown's teammates notice her tenacity, according to freshman defender Vanessa Pruzinsky.

"She is a very aggressive player and I think it effects the whole team to see her play," she said. "I think it picks up everyone else's play and aggression.

Brown enjoys her physical reputation and thrives on her tenacity.

"I really like being intense and being tenacious out there," she said. "So I like the physical games.

Earlier in the season, injuries and inexperience kept the Irish back-line in a state of limbo. In the opening game against North Carolina, the Irish started freshmen Nancy Mikacenic and Pruzinsky along with junior captain Kelly Lindsey and Brown. Lindsey, however, injured her knee against the Tar Heels and has not returned to the lineup full time until recently.

Senior captain Jen Grubb was moved to the back line from the midfield to fill in for Grubb but the departure of midfielder Anne Makinen opened a hole in the midfield. Mikacenic moved to the midfielder to fill in for Makinen.

Throughout all the turmoil, however, Brown has stepped up her play and been a steady presence on the Irish backline.

"I felt I had to step up a little bit, but we have so many talented players that whenever we put in there, we are able to work together," she said.

"I think she has been great for us," Waldrum said. "I think she is the best outside back in the conference. I hope the other coaches recognize that. She has just been rock-solid for us.

Despite the fact that she is such a solid defensive player for the Irish, she began her collegiate career as a midfielder. She didn't move until the switch to defense until after her sophomore year, the transition to the back line was difficult for Brown.

"It was a hard transition but I do whatever I have to do for the team," she said. "If that helps us win a national championship that's what I have to do."

Brown had some difficulty adjusting to her new defensive role but with the arrival of Waldrum and his four-back defensive alignment has helped her.

"It's been hard but I have had the help of the coaches and this formation that we are running this fall lets me get forward more," she said.

Her offensive instincts are still visible in her defensive play. Against Villanova she set up a goal by Meotis Erikson and picked up a goal of her own late in the game. She now has three assists and one goal on the year for five points.

Having the offensive capabilities of a former midfielder on defense is an asset to the Irish, according to Waldrum.

"She is so good at getting forward because she is a former midfielder," he said. "She is so comfortable coming off the backline and helping with the attack."

Brown has used her skill and intensity to become a cornerstone on the Irish defense.

Sorenstam wins Albany Classic

Associated Press

NEW ALBANY, Ohio Solid with everything but her putter until the closing holes, Annika Sorenstam withstood a challenge from Mardi Lunn to shoot a final-round 66 Sunday and win the New Albany Golf Classic.

Sorenstam had just three bogeys in the tournament and birdied four of the final seven holes to finish at 19-under-par 269. Her 6-under-par final round followed rounds of 68, 69 and 66. The victory, her second of the year, was worth $150,000 from the inaugural tournament’s $1 million purse.

Last year’s player of the year parred six holes in a row after building a three-stroke lead with a birdie at the par-3 fifth hole. Lunn, playing in the same twosome, pulled even with three birdies over that span.

At the 398-yard, par-4 12th hole — which ranked as the hardest hole on the course — Sorenstam’s middle-iron approach landed on the front of the green and rolled within 2 1/2 feet of the cup. After lipping out or narrowly missing short birdie putts on the three previous holes, she holed the putt to take the lead. Sorenstam skirted trouble on the next hole when her drive went well right of the fairway and into the trees lining the par-5 13th. She was able to salvage par by slicing a shot into the fairway, finding the green in regulation and two-putting from the front of the green.

The LPGA’s leading money winner three of the last four years, Sorenstam clinched with birdies at 14, 15 and 16. She hit a 15-footer at the 14th, coaxed in an uphill 3-footer at No. 15 and made a 5-footer at 16.

Sorenstam had torched the front nine the first three days of the tournament, playing it in 12-under while mustering just 1-under on the back nine. But in the final round, she was 2-under on the front side and 4-under on the back.

After moving into the tie with her birdie at the ninth hole, Lunn parred eight of the nine remaining holes — missing four birdie puts inside 15 feet. She shot a final-round 67 for a 16-under 272.

Emilee Klein shot 67, including a birdie on the final hole, to take third at 12 under.

Belles place fourth at Goshen College

By NELLIE WILLIAMS
Sport Writer

The cold, wet weather on Saturday afternoon did not stop the Saint Mary's cross country team from running some of their best times during their meet at Goshen College. The Belles placed fourth out of nine teams. Bethel College placed first, followed by Adrianne and Hillsdale colleges.

Bridge Nugent, who had not yet run this season, led the Belles. She placed 22nd overall with a time of 20 minutes, 49 seconds. Close behind, Genevieve Yavello placed 23rd with a time of 20:54. In 22nd place, senior Krista Hildebrand had a time of 21:02, a career best. Melissa Miller finished 24th with a time of 21:18, while freshmen Megan Tenney and Catherine Ward finished 29th and 33rd, respectively.

"I was happy with [my race]," Yavello said. "It was my best so far. [Nugent] and I ran side by side the whole race which helped a lot and was a good strategy. During my race I was thinking about staying right up with [Nugent] and moving up on the other runners one by one."

"It was a really flat course, so it was fast," Tenney remarked. "I feel the team did really well considering it was raining and cold outside. We all got our best times."

The Belles will race again on Friday, Oct. 8 at Benedictine University in Illinois.

points in taking third. Notre Dame was only five points behind co-champions Michigan and Georgetown.

"We beat a team that was ranked ahead of us, and almost beat two teams that were ranked well ahead of us," said men's head coach Joe Piane. "I think we can do significantly better. We need to beat Michigan at districts."

Junior Ryan Shay earned his second individual title of the year, becoming the first Notre Dame men's soccer team to a shutout victory, 2-0 win over Big East rival Syracuse.

Braun, the leading scorer for the Irish this season, knocked in both goals to bring his overall tally for the year to five.

With the win, the Irish move to 5-4-1 overall record and are 2-1-1 in Big East play. The win marks the second straight victory for the Irish and gives further evidence to prove that the scoring drought, which has plagued the squad for much of the first half of the season, is over.

Despite the shutout victory, the Orangemen provided some tough competition, battling the Irish to a scoreless tie in the first half. The Irish were in control for most of the game, but despite outshooting the Orangemen 8-5 in the first 45 minutes, were unable to come up with a score.

Braun and the Irish turned the heat in the opening minutes of the second half to take the lead. Midfielder Alan Lyskawa set up the goal when he fed an open Braun at the midfield. Braun took control of the ball and raced down the sideline towards the net.

Syracuse goalkeeper Kevin Bacher came out of the goal in an attempt to thwart Braun's one-on-one attempt, but Braun slipped in a shot from eight yards out to score the game-winner less than two minutes into the second half.

Braun added another goal to secure the win with four minutes remaining in the contest. Taking advantage of a loose ball in the midfield and dodging the Syracuse defenders, he took the ball down the field 25 yards untouched and delivered a shot into the back of the net for the unassisted score.

The Orangemen went on attack midway through the second half, challenging the Irish lead with a flurry of shots on goal, but came up dry.

Braun took home the game-winner less than two minutes into the second half.

Senior forward Ryan Cox and the Irish men's soccer team improved to 5-4-1 overall with Saturday's win over Syracuse.

Bacher made seven saves for the Orangemen in the losing effort, as Syracuse dropped to 3-6-0 overall and 1-3-0 in the Big East.

The win marks the first time this year that the Irish have notched back-to-back wins.

The Irish look to extend their winning streak to three on Tuesday when they host IUPUI in a non-conference match-up.

Deeter, Shay sweep up at Notre Dame Invite

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN  Associate Sports Editor

The Irish cross country squads cleaned up the competition in the adidas/Notre Dame Invitational Friday, capturing both individual titles and the women's team title, and placing third in the men's team competition.

"I think it shows we can compete with some of the best teams in the country," said women's head coach Tim Connelly. "Going in, we thought we were a pretty good team. We just wanted to find out how good.

The Notre Dame women's squad scored 37 points en route to winning the championship. The Irish were well ahead of second place Missouri, which tallied 73, and third-place Oregon, which had 115 points.

"That's what we wanted to do," said freshman Jennifer Handley. "We knew there was major competition there. It was really exciting for us to win.

Runner for runner, each of Notre Dame's top five was ahead of Missouri's top five finishers. The top five for the Irish finished first, third, sixth, 17th and 30th; while the Tigers' five best were second, fifth, seventh, 24th and 35th. Going into the meet, Notre Dame was ranked 14th in the nation, while Missouri was 13th.

Senior all-American JoAnna Deeter brought home her third individual victory in the Notre Dame Invitational of her four-year career. She completed the 5K race in 16 minutes, 52 seconds. "JoAnna's one of the best runners in the country and she keeps going out and proving that," said Connelly. "Hopefully, she'll get some good competition in the next couple weeks and we can see just how good she is.

Missouri's Anna Guillemsgard took second behind Deeter. Notre Dame senior Alison Klemmer was third overall in 17.21, and Handley finished the course in 17.26 to place sixth.

Seniors Erin Luby and Patty Rice, in her first meet after returning from a spring back injury, rounded out the top five Irish runners, and move up our sixth and seventh runners. I think it's a realistic goal.

The men's team was not far off of first place, scoring 66.

Irish shut out Big East competition over weekend

By MIKE CONNOLLY  Associate Sports Editor

The weather was cold this weekend, but it couldn't slow down the red-hot Irish offense as the women's soccer team picked up two Big East victories over Georgetown on Friday, 10-0, and Villanova on Sunday, 4-0.

The defense performed just as well as the offense, managing to hold Georgetown without a shot while allowing Villanova just four shots.

Georgetown came into the game against Notre Dame high off an offensive explosion against the Howard Bison. The Hoyas crushed their inter-city rival 8-0. The Irish, however, shut down the Hoyas attack completely, not allowing a single shot on goal. Despite the fact that the Irish have been playing well lately, Waldrum was surprised that the Irish stopped the Hoyas so completely.

"I certainly never thought that we'd come in and not allow a shot on goal," he said. "I thought we'd be in pretty good shape if we played our game, but I didn't expect to hold them like we did.

"We couldn't have asked for much more than that," senior captain Jen Grubb said. "After last weekend we were really wondering if we had turned it around or if it was just two good games."

Jenny Heft led the Irish attacks with three goals. Her sixth career hat trick moved her into first place all-time for Irish hat tricks passing Monica Gerado and Rosella Guerrero. Heft added two more goals against Villanova to give her eight goals on the season and 68 for her career. She now stands just five goals behind the Irish record for career goals held by Gerado with 73. Her shot at the 68 does not motivate her to score, though, according to Heft.

"I don't really even think about that right now," she said. "It would be nice to have it but right now I am not thinking about that."

Heft's third goal of the game came when she battled the Hoyas goalkeeper in the air for a ball. Heft got a piece of the ball and the keeper to score the seventh Irish goal on the night.

"We both just went up and challenged for it," Heft said. "I got a piece of it and she went down.

Merrick Eriksson and Grubb also tallied multiple goal games for the Irish with two a piece. Anne Makinen, Lindsey Jones and Kate Morrevi added one goal each. Waldrum was pleased with the varied sources of offense while at the same time getting production from his top players.

"It was great to see because we have had a lot of spread out scoring," he said. "It was good to see Merrick and Heft get some goals. Heft was the one who carried the load last year. We certainly don't want to have to rely on one player but it was good to see her get some goals for her confidence."

The Irish domination continued on Sunday against the Villanova Wildcats. Villanova entered the game with a 9-2 record and tied for first in Big East Mid-Atlantic Division. When the Wildcats left Alumni Field, however, the Irish had
