Arinze: Spread Gospel message

By ERIN PIBOUTEK
News Writer

The Gospel is a message the whole world badly needs, said Cardinal Francis Arinze, in his lecture, "Message of the Gospel to a Religiously Pluralistic World at the Threshold of the Third Millennium."

"Two-thirds of humanity do not know Christ, or do not believe in him — or at least not yet," said Arinze, noting the Church's call to evangelization.

"The Church believes the Gospel's plan of salvation includes not only Christians but Jews, Muslims, Hindus and other believers as well," Arinze said.

He emphasized that spreading the Gospel message does not include imposing belief in Jesus Christ on anyone.

No one should use force on matters of conscience, said Arinze, however, without Jesus Christ, human history remains in a relation to God.

"When people accept they must be God-oriented," he said.

Sullivan to receive Notre Dame Award

By KYLE ANDREWS
News Writer

A campus ceremony today will honor Reverend Leon Sullivan with the 1999 Notre Dame Award for international humanitarian service. Pastor emeritus of the Zion Baptist Church in Philadelphia, Sullivan is honored for his leadership in civil rights.

Sullivan has been active in civil rights movements in both New York and Philadelphia, organizing boycotts, programs and writing letters of conduct for U.S. businesses. His involvement in South Africa's apartheid struggle led him to write the Sullivan Principles in 1977, which for 10 years served as a code of conduct for U.S. companies that did business in South Africa.

"Leon Sullivan's struggle against racial prejudice and economic injustice has been lifelong, exemplary and inspiring," said University president Father Edward Malloy in a statement announcing the award. "In honoring his life and work, we hope to recommit ourselves to the same struggle."

Presently, Sullivan is president of the International Foundation for Education and Self-Help, a group that aims to encourage democracy and bring skilled workers to developing countries.

Born Oct. 16, 1922, in West Virginia, Sullivan went to West Virginia State College in 1949 on a basketball and football scholarship. After he lost the scholarship because of a foot injury, he worked his way through school, graduating in 1942.

Later, he moved to New York, and served as assistant minister in the Abyssinian Baptist Church while attending Union Theological Seminary. While receiving a master's degree from Columbia University, he participated in the civil rights movement starting in the city.

He left New York to become pastor of Philadelphia's Zion Baptist Church in 1950. There he became an influential figure in the civil rights movement, organizing boycotts against discriminating companies and starting the Opportunities Industrialization Centers, a training program that has grown internationally. In 1971, Sullivan became the first African American to join the General Motors board.

The award will be given at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Jordan Auditorium of the College of Business Administration.
INSIDE COLUMN

Club Car tragedy

Braving the biting cold last night on my way home from a class-required movie, I was joined by another girl from my dorm. I was immediately surprised that she was actually walking with me because for the past several weeks she had her own golf cart to take her from one campus spot to the next. As she struggled with her crutches I asked her what had happened to the racy Club Car she used to drive.

"It was stolen," she replied, rather matter-of-factly.

Never before had I been subjected to the secret undisclosure of golf cart theft on the Notre Dame campus, and my response was utter disbelief. Who would steal someone's golf cart from a disabled person? In my mind, it was worse than taking candy from a baby. Here is this perfectly sweet girl who happened to hurt her leg during dorm football practice. After surgery and physical therapy, she really depended on the cart to take her around campus. I failed to find the thrill in stealing something that was so necessary.

When I asked her why the Office of Student Services didn't grant her another Club Car, I was stunned yet again with her reply.

"Well, it had been stolen already once before, and I felt bad asking for another one, so I just decided to stick with my crutches," she pronounced.

Stolen once before??? Now my mind was really racing. The fact that her cart had been stolen twice meant that there was a real market on campus for these stolen rides. How could these thieves be so severely lacking in morals that they would think it was appropriate to steal a golf cart for a student who had to use crutches to walk around campus? Could these thieves be so severely lacking in morals that they would think it was appropriate to steal a golf cart for a student who had to use crutches to walk around campus? Could these thieves be so severely lacking in morals that they would think it was appropriate to steal a golf cart for a student who had to use crutches to walk around campus?

College group sues Web bookstore

The National Association of College Stores alleges that Varsitybooks.com has been misleading students about potential online savings. In the midst of its initial public stock offering, the nation's first online textbook retailer is now fighting to make sure its stock does not flatline when it hits the market. In a suit filed at 10 a.m. Monday by the National Association of College Stores, Inc., Varsitybooks.com has been accused of making false and misleading advertising claims about its discounts and on-campus stores' pricing schemes. NACS, an organization of 3,000 college bookstores, including Duke University Stores and The Book Exchange in Durham, N.C., is filing an action against the site for its insistence that it offers students a better deal. The websites' prices only rarely beat on-campus store prices by 40 percent. "We want to make students aware of the bargains available," said PSLM member senior Maureen Smith. "We're starting a movement to signal to others that this is the way things are going to be."
Incumbents reign in area mayoral elections

By JACK COLWELL
South Bend Tribune

SOUTH BEND
Mayor Stephen Luecke won big Tuesday, staying off the first serious Republican challenge to Democratic control of the mayor's office in a dozen years.

He called the victory "a positive report card" for the city, as well as for himself.

Luecke said his capture of 68 percent of the vote is an indication that South Bend residents agree with his positive view of where the city is headed, not the dismal portrayal of city conditions presented by Republican challenger Steven Bradley.

"It truly was at the way Mr. Bradley portrayed the city," Luecke said.

But he noted that Bradley always had been friendly personally after their frequent disagreements at joint appearances.

Bradley was gracious in concession.

"I think it's good for South Bend to have had a real race this year," Bradley said. He said he had brought up issues the city needed to debate.

The mayor received word of his victory at his home, surrounded by family members. Totsals directly from polling places confirmed the big win for the mayor within a few minutes after the polls closed.

The 68 percent showing was the highest percentage in a mayoral election since 1947.

"Those are percentages much smaller than Luecke achieved or even from their own party," said Dan Murphy, South Bend Tribune political writer.

Per centage still was below the record 82 percent Joe Kernan received in winning four years ago and the 76.5 percent Kernan amassed in 1991.

But Kernan, the former Democratic mayor who now is lieutenant governor, ran against hapless Republican challengers who had scant funding and little support, even from their own party.

Luecke's victory ranks at least as impressive because he faced in Bradley a challenger who waged a vigorous campaign and had more funding and party support.

The mayor said he thought he had gained momentum as the campaign headed toward the finish, in part due to getting out his own "positive" message and also because Bradley's contentions began to wear thin and be rejected.

Earlier, the mayor said, he was concerned because it had seemed that "everything that could go wrong did go wrong."

He referred in particular to something no amount of campaign planning could have ever envisioned in advance -- the June auto accident in which the police chief ran into a parked car after drinking.

Although he immediately removed the chief from the top police post, Luecke said the prosecutor's long investigation of the incident kept him from taking final action and enabled Bradley to hammer away at the situation.

Luecke agreed that Bradley was handed an opportunity to win a "fair game," and took full advantage of it.

But appointment of new Chief Larry Bennett proved popular and seems to have put the police leadership issue to rest, Luecke said.

At a joyous Democratic celebration at the MR Falcon Club, the mayor told his supporters that he was particularly happy with the way South Bend residents have been "grabbing hold of their neighborhoods."

Luecke has been stressing that he was particularly happy with the way South Bend residents have been "grabbing hold of their neighborhoods."

"This is a community that is alive and well with citizen involvement," Luecke said. "And that is what we are going to ride into the next century."

The mayor said he planned no immediate changes in his administration as he plans for his first full four-year term.

But he said he will seek ideas on new approaches, with "a brand new start for us."

KEY: bold - incumbent, - republican, - democrat

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>South Bend:</th>
<th>Mishawaka:</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>6,379 votes</td>
<td>1,934 votes</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

| Elkhart: |
| 2,016 votes |

| Goshen: |
| 917 votes |

Elkhart: Goshen: South Bend: Mishawaka: KEY: bold - incumbent, - republican, - democrat

This story was reprinted with the permission of the South Bend Tribune.

Visit the Writing Center

The Notre Dame Writing Center

The Notre Dame Writing Center is dedicated to helping all students improve their writing. Writing tutors help students with writing projects at any stage during the writing process. From understanding the assignment, to organizing the “first draft,” we are here to guide you through the process.

In helping you improve your writing, we will ask you to turn in your draft paper with you talk about your ideas.

Because our goal is to help you learn how to improve your own writing, we do not proofread, edit, or fix your grammar. But we will help teach you how to do these things, and work with you on any other concerns you may have. We do not evaluate, grade, or take the place of regular coursework. We are a resource for helping you to express your ideas more clearly and effectively.

Locations

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Location</th>
<th>Times</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Alumni Hall</td>
<td>Sun-Thurs 7-10 p.m.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Student Union Center for Social Concerns</td>
<td>Sun-Thurs 7-10 p.m.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>DeBartolo 8012 (basement)</td>
<td>Mon-Thurs 1-4 p.m.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Visit us on the web at: http://www.nd.edu/~writing

Visit us before you get overwhelmed!
Cardinal
continued from page 1
“Then we have the fundamental orientation religion should give.” The hierarchy and the Pope’s religion relates to relationships with one’s neighbor. “Christ’s injunction of brotherly love is unattainable,” said Arinze. The Christian who neglects his duties to his neighbor jeopardizes his salvation, he said. “If the whole world decided to follow the golden rule for two weeks, the world would be a small paradise the people who sell keys would be out of business,” noted Arinze with a smile.

Two world wars, the Holocaust, terrorism and ethnic cleansing are indications that humanity must find an acceptable way of trying out differences. “Forgiveness and reconciliation are signs of spiritual strength, not weakness,” said Arinze, noting the Christian doctrine of repaying evil with good. Inter-religious cooperation is best undertaken when it focuses on specific projects, said Arinze, citing respect for the dignity of human life as one example.
The “Church does not seek to impose this belief (against abortion, infanticide, and euthanasia) on others, but to share it with the people who sell keys,” added Arinze.

Arinze’s lecture was sponsored by the theology department with support from the Hendelks lecture series.

Laura Petelle contributed to this report.

GSU seeks more placement help
By CHRISTINE KRALY
Associate News Editor

Graduate Student Union (GSU) members discussed the need for more help in career placement and diversity programs in their meeting Tuesday night.

GSU president Maria Canallas told union members of a meeting she had with Russell Kitchener, associate director of Graduate Career Services, regarding the need for graduate interest in career and placement service programs. (The career and placement group provides services to help graduate students get jobs), said Jacob Heidenreich, GSU vice president. Heidenreich will sit on an ad hoc committee established to help promote graduate cooperation and interest in career and placement services.

“We’re looking for a little creativity as well,” Heidenreich added, asking members for volunteer for the committee.

Human Diversity Committee chair Paige Dow told members of plans to celebrate diversity with programs such as the upcoming Martin Luther King Week and Christmas in April.

Member Beth Caigle suggested that diversity services be centered more on changes rather than on help services like Christmas in April, which is set off campus services.

She highlighted a human and gender diversity conference she helped organized a few years ago.

Canallas also updated members on the student advantage card, which offers college students discounts on services from stores and restaurants. The card, Canallas said, is “somewhat of a privacy issue” since the organization’s contract requests student home and campus addresses.

Psych society honors SMC prof
By KATIE MILLER
News Writer

The National Honor Society in psychology honored Rebecca Stoddart, professor of psychology at Saint Mary’s, as president of Psi Chi, the world’s largest national psychology honor society.

Stoddart said that Saint Mary’s will benefit from having the president of Psi Chi on staff. “I know I’ve brought more visibility to the department, more students and faculty are participating,” she said.

“The mission is to encourage excellence in psychology. Psi Chi has so much to offer students,” said Stoddart. “Fifteen students will be inducted into Psi Chi on Friday.”

Affiliated with the American Psychology Association and a member of the American Psychological Association of College Honor Societies, Psi Chi recognizes member’s achievements and offers long-term rewards. Members of Psi Chi receive publishing opportunities, participate in summer internships and projects at their schools as well as other colleges and universities, and present research projects.

Stoddart was inducted into Psi Chi as a student at Pennsylvania State where she received her bachelor’s degree in psychology. She then went on to receive a master’s degree and a doctorate from Southern Illinois University. Since 1979, Stoddart has been a professor at Saint Mary’s where she has earned the Maria Pieta Teaching Award, Lilly Faculty Open Friendship, STARS Award and many research and teaching grants.

DuBose
continued from page 1
lic sticks joined by a short chain of rope. He was rolling them in his hands like he was going to come and do damage to us, like he was going to hurt us with his hands like he was going to.

An autopsy report showed that DuBose had traces of the drug Ectasy, cocaine and alcohol in his blood at the time.

The shooting will now be reviewed by the Police Department’s internal affairs unit and San Diego’s Citizen Review Board on Police Practices, Bejarano said.

DuBose, a native of Seattle, was a linebacker for Notre Dame. After graduating, he was drafted in 1993 by the Buccaneers and played four seasons. His football career ended in 1997 and he took up beach volleyball.

DuBose yelled at me: ‘Drop the nunchakus,’ Keating told him, as he was going to hurt us with his hands like he was going to.

He took another step and I began firing at him.”

The shooting will now be considered in a civil lawsuit against the Buccaneeers and the San Diego Police Department.

Homicide investigators. “... I ended in 1997 and he took up beach volleyball.

DuBose had traces of the drug Ectasy, cocaine and alcohol in his blood at the time.

The shooting will now be reviewed by the Police Department’s internal affairs unit and San Diego’s Citizen Review Board on Police Practices, Bejarano said.

DuBose yelled at me: ‘Drop the nunchakus,’ Keating told him, as he was going to hurt us with his hands like he was going to.

He took another step and I began firing at him.”

The shooting will now be considered in a civil lawsuit against the Buccaneers and the San Diego Police Department.

Homicide investigators.

Dr. Dominic Vachon of the University Counseling Center will be giving a lecture on Test Taking Strategies for Graduate Students

Date- Sunday, November 7
Time- 4:00-5:00 pm
Where- Fischer-O’Hara Grace Community Center

Call 4-4023 for a chance to win a $25 gift certificate to Meijer
HELP THE RECYCLIN’ IRISH SOLVE A MARKETING RESEARCH PROBLEM
Police arrest activists to protect pope’s visit

NEW DELHI, India

Police on Tuesday arrested nine Hindu activists to avoid any trouble during Pope John Paul II’s visit this week, United News of India news agency said. The group belongs to Shiv Sena, an ally of governing Hindu nationalist Bharatiya Janata Party. Anti-salute milit­nants were arrested in breach of the peace charges. Among them was Jai Bhagwan Goel, the New Delhi state leader of Shiv Sena. They would be released after the pope’s visit. The pope is visiting New Delhi Friday through Monday to formally close the Asian Synod of Bishops and release a document on the status and future of the church. He will also meet with political and religious leaders and to cel­ebrate Mass.

Gillette releases revolutionary hair-removal cream

NEW YORK

They pluck, they blench, they tweeze. They use hot wax, electric current and lasers. Some even shave daily. And still the hair comes back. About one in six American women has enough facial hair that they remove it at least once a week. Now, Gillette Co., the world’s biggest manufacturer of razors and pharmaceuticals company Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. have developed the first prescription cream that stops the growth of facial hair in women. The drug could win Food and Drug Administration approval as early as next year. Vaniqua (prop­ounced van-ih-KAH) is applied to the face like a moisturizer twice a day. It works by blocking the enzyme that makes hair grow. It must be used regularly or hair growth will resume. Studies show it is most effective in the most sensitive women and has no major side effects.

Air Transport Association seeks pet air travel rights

WASHINGTON

Dogs, cats and other pets that fly in airplane cargo areas deserve stronger protections against rough handling, temperature extremes and oxygen depletion, some law­makers and animal advocates say. The airline industry says proposed new protections are unnecessary and burdensome. Michael Wacson, director of government affairs for the Air Transport Association, predicted that some airlines would “simply stop accepting the animals” rather than increase training of baggage handlers, adjust climate control on airplanes and face greater legal liability in cases something goes wrong.

Suspect found in Xerox shooting

Associated Press

HONOLULU

In the latest outburst of workplace violence, a Xerox copier repairman­shot and killed seven co-workers in his office build­ing Tuesday morning, authorities said.

He surrendered after a five-hour armed standoff with police. Police believe Byran Uesugi, a 15-year Xerox employee, shot seven fellow copier tech­nicians at about 8 a.m. (11 p.m. EST) before fleeing in a company van with a gun.

He eventually stripped several miles away in a leafy, residential neighbor­hood. Police cordoned off the neighborhood and began negotiati­ing with him about two hours later. Some five hours after the shooting began, Uesugi emerged from the van, walked to the back of the vehicle with his hands raised and then fell down on the ground. His brother had helped in the negoti­ations.

SWAT teams raced toward him with automaticic weapons drawn. No shots were heard and no injuries were reported.

"It appears as though it was a disgruntled employ­ee who snapped," Mayor Jeremy Harris said. Police would not comment on a motive though.

Uesugi, 40, was being booked for investigation of first-degree murder, which carries a mandatory penalty of life without parole.

The gunfire erupted in an industrial section of Honolulu, far from the Waikiki tourist district. Five victims were found dead in a conference room and two other bodies were found nearby.

All had been shot with a 9 mm handgun, authori­ties said.

Police found 20 9 mm shell casings at the scene. At Uesugi’s home, they found 11 hand­guns, 3 rifles and two shotguns. The victims — male Xerox employees — were shot on the second floor of the two-story building, authorities said. They ranged in age from 33 to 58.

"It’s a shock for all of us. We have such a safe com­munity with almost no vio­lent crime," Harris said.

U.S. develops atrocity-avoidance plan

WASHINGTON

The U.S. government and others want to figure out where the next atrocities might happen in the world — then try to head them off.

Two high-level officials from the State Department, Harold Hongis Koh and David Scheffer briefed reporters Tuesday on the idea of set­ting up an international system to prevent genocide, mass killings and other atrocities that keep repeating themselves around the world.

"I think what everybody is saying is that we are sick of dealing with this," Koh, assistant secretary of state for democracy, human rights and labor, also said in a separate interview. "The good news is that this is a very important starting point. Koh said the starting point was a two-day State Department confer­ence last week of diplomats, human rights workers and academics from 10 nations and the Vatican.

They talked about, though estab­lished no policies on, ways to identify signs of pending mass violence, ways of stopping it, and ways to help rebuild tattered nations after a slaughter.

"We don't have all the answers on how to stop this madness," Scheffer, ambassador at large for war crimes issues, said in an interview.

But he said more sharing of reli­able information between govern­ments is a must. So is making sure the information is presented quickly and persuasively to those who will make the decisions on whether to get involved.

And it will all cost money that the world must agree to spend. Holly Burkhalter of the Boston­based monitoring group Physicians for Human Rights disagreed, saying the problem is not lack of informa­tion but lack of will by governments to act.

"Intelligence gathering [agencies], human rights monitors and the embassies are alert to the trouble — this has been chewed to death," she said in an interview.

"The question that interests me is, What are you going to do about it?" "I think they're basically very timid about intervention, particularly when it's in Africa," she said.

World Nation

Wednesday, November 3, 1999

COMPILED FROM THE OBSERVER WIRE SERVICES

page 5
Fire destroys small Montana Main Street

Associated Press

OUTLOOK, Mont. — Colleen Smith stood at the remains of the town post office, a smoldering, rubble-filled pit. Across the way sat the smoky ruins of the general store, now a nearly empty lot. Facing it was another empty space where the Cenex gas station used to be.

"Our Main Street is kind of gone," Smith said Monday, surveying the smoking ruins of businesses in this tiny northeast Montana farming town.

As manager for more than 100 of the area's post offices, she managed to save the mail from a wind-driven fire that swept through Tuesday night, loading it into her pickup truck and driving off before the flames arrived.

"The fire, fueled by 76 mph winds, burned nearly 18 square miles of prairie. It started in gusty, high grass, dried out some 200 people. No deaths or serious injuries were reported.

"It was just a wall of flames coming. It went through town in a matter of minutes." Robert Beckers local farmer

Five of us were trapped," said Leane Birk, a senior who was helping prepare for a children's Halloween party.

"One of the women came and told us we had to get into the basement, the fire was coming," she said. "A fire-fighter came and got us out. The fire was all around us.

"It was a real eye-opener. I've never been in a fire like this before. It was all around."

Local officials say the town's 45 students will attend classes in Flaxville, 26 miles away, until the Outlook school can be cleaned of soot damage.

Local firefighters joined by crews from seven nearby towns and Minton, Saskatchewan, kept the fire away from 25 houses, said Mark Gruner, a state disaster spokesman.

In Outlook, rubble formed a 20-foot-high heap of debris by the railroad track beside a burned train engine. Thick smoke still poured from deep within the locomotive, and flames licked across the surface.

Carl Tange was trying to plow firebreaks when the flames overtook him. They swept by with such speed that he was spared injury. Even the tractor wasn't damaged.

"I'd say in seconds, it moved a quarter of a mile," he said. "The flames were just shooting.

It was throwing balls of fire and cinders at least a quarter of a mile ahead. They'd hit and explode."

Smith pointed to a blackened, 1,500-pound steel safe, which she was spared injury. Even the tractor wasn't damaged.

"The flames were just shooting.

It was throwing balls of fire and cinders at least a quarter of a mile ahead. They'd hit and explode."

Mark Gruener, a state disaster spokesman.

"It was just a wall of flames coming. It went through town in a matter of minutes." Robert Beckers local farmer

"It was a real eye-opener. I've never been in a fire like this before. It was all around."

Local officials say the town's 45 students will attend classes in Flaxville, 26 miles away, until the Outlook school can be cleaned of soot damage.

Local firefighters joined by crews from seven nearby towns and Minton, Saskatchewan, kept the fire away from 25 houses, said Mark Gruner, a state disaster spokesman.

In Outlook, rubble formed a 20-foot-high heap of debris by the railroad track beside a burned train engine. Thick smoke still poured from deep within the locomotive, and flames licked across the surface.

Carl Tange was trying to plow firebreaks when the flames overtook him. They swept by with such speed that he was spared injury. Even the tractor wasn't damaged.

"I'd say in seconds, it moved a quarter of a mile," he said. "The flames were just shooting.

It was throwing balls of fire and cinders at least a quarter of a mile ahead. They'd hit and explode."

Smith pointed to a blackened, 1,500-pound steel safe, which she was spared injury. Even the tractor wasn't damaged.
Tobacco companies begin defense in court

Associated Press

MIA M I

Now it's Big Tobacco's turn. Lawyers for the industry were scheduled to give opening statements today in a landmark lawsuit that they fear could cripple the nation's cigarette makers.

"Every day, every week, puff, puff, puff... the cigarettes caused her lung damage!" Stanley Rosenblatt attorney

On Monday, Stanley Rosenblatt, attorney for the smokers, said the tobacco companies lied and misled the public for years by glamorizing smoking and downplaying its dangers.

He noted that Ms. Farnan and Amodeo were addicted to cigarettes as children and became ill after developing an addiction with encouragement from cigarette makers, Rosenblatt said.

"What caused Mary Farnan's lung cancer?" Rosenblatt asked. "Every day, every week, puff, puff, puff... the cigarettes caused her lung damage."

Also Monday, a lawyer tried to convince the Florida counties to reconsider a $750,000 judgment for a former smoker against Brown & Williamson.

When a jury handed down the award for Grady Carter in August 1996, it was just the second time in 40 years of anti-smoking litigation that a cigarette-maker was ordered to pay damages.

The jurors must now put a price tag on Ms. Farnan's and Amodeo's actual damages. If the tobacco companies lie and misled the public, the jury may then consider whether to award punitive damages to all 500,000 sick smokers.

Lawsuits today in land-mark suits that they fear could cripple the nation's cigarette makers.

Lawsuit that they fear could cripple the nation's cigarette makers.

Mark lawsuit that they fear could cripple the nation's cigarette makers.

Wednesday, November 3, 1999

Amodeo's actual damages. If Liggett Group Inc. were ruled in July that cigarettes caused her lung damage, they will then consider whether to award punitive damages to all 500,000 sick smokers, said the tobacco companies.

They asked. "Every day, every week, puff, puff, puff... the cigarettes caused her lung damage!"

Prince Sultan bin Abdul Aziz said bin Laden, who has been stripped of his Saudi citizenship, is considered a traitor to his country and to Islam. "If the Taliban hands him over to face justice, whether in the United States or anywhere else, we believe then justice should take its way," said Sultan, speaking in Arabic at a news conference with Defense Secretary William Cohen.

The United States, now backed by a U.N. resolution authorizing limited sanctions against Afghanistan, is demanding that bin Laden be surrendered to the United States or another country in stand trial on charges that he masterminded the August 1998 bombings of U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania that killed 224 people.

When the Taliban handed him over to face justice, whether in the United States or anywhere else, we believe then justice should take its way," the prince said.

" bin Laden, who has been stripped of his Saudi citizenship, is considered a traitor to his country and to Islam. "If the Taliban hands him over to face justice, whether in the United States or anywhere else, we believe then justice should take its way," a justice, whether in the United States or anywhere else, we believe then justice should take its way," said Sultan, speaking in Arabic at a news conference with Defense Secretary William Cohen.

The United States, now backed by a U.N. resolution authorizing limited sanctions against Afghanistan, is demanding that bin Laden be surrendered to the United States or another country in stand trial on charges that he masterminded the August 1998 bombings of U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania that killed 224 people.

William Cohen Defense Secretary

Saudis support trial for bin Laden

"In view of the fact that many countries are developing chemical and biological weapons and the means to deliver them, we think that is a matter of importance."

William Cohen Defense Secretary

Cohen said it is important that people are treated and proven guilty," he said.

"We also share concern about the suffering of the Iraqi people," he added.

"But we also understand that Saddam Hussein is the person who is suffering by hoarding millions of dollars worth of medicine, weapons, clothing, other types of humanitarian assistance that should be going to the people," Cohen said.

On the investigation into the June 1996 Khobar Towers bombing in Saudi Arabia, which killed 19 American servicemen, Cohen said it is in no hurry to keep him off the streets via arrest or execution. "It's vitally important that people are not set free until proven guilty," he said.

"Phantom" threats worry high school

"Why he was doing this, what his motivations were are still only part of the investigation," Duval said. "That's still a little murky as to what he was accomplishing, other than whether he thought he was being funny and playing a practical joke."

Four police officers were being assigned to the school in addition to the usual school security officers when classes resume Tuesday. A statement issued by the school district Monday said teachers would meet before classes to discuss the threats.

Teachers had known about the chat room since last week, when the threat was reported. But it was the first time since the threat was sent.

A Florida suburban school is being shut down.

"Participants routinely send messages under nicknames. The chat room at issue was shut down Monday.

"We also share concern about the suffering of the Iraqi people," he added.

"But we also understand that Saddam Hussein is the person who is suffering by hoarding millions of dollars worth of medicine, weapons, clothing, other types of humanitarian assistance that should be going to the people," Cohen said.

On the investigation into the June 1996 Khobar Towers bombing in Saudi Arabia, which killed 19 American servicemen, Cohen said it is in no hurry to keep him off the streets via arrest or execution. "It's vitally important that people are treated and proven guilty," he said.

"We also share concern about the suffering of the Iraqi people," he added.

"But we also understand that Saddam Hussein is the person who is suffering by hoarding millions of dollars worth of medicine, weapons, clothing, other types of humanitarian assistance that should be going to the people," Cohen said.

On the investigation into the June 1996 Khobar Towers bombing in Saudi Arabia, which killed 19 American servicemen, Cohen said it is in no hurry to keep him off the streets via arrest or execution. "It's vitally important that people are treated and proven guilty," he said.

"Phantom" threats worry high school

"Why he was doing this, what his motivations were are still only part of the investigation," Duval said. "That's still a little murky as to what he was accomplishing, other than whether he thought he was being funny and playing a practical joke."

Four police officers were being assigned to the school in addition to the usual school security officers when classes resume Tuesday. A statement issued by the school district Monday said teachers would meet before classes to discuss the threats.

Teachers had known about the chat room since last week, when the threat was reported. But it was the first time since the threat was sent.

A Florida suburban school is being shut down.

"Participants routinely send messages under nicknames. The chat room at issue was shut down Monday.

"We also share concern about the suffering of the Iraqi people," he added.

"But we also understand that Saddam Hussein is the person who is suffering by hoarding millions of dollars worth of medicine, weapons, clothing, other types of humanitarian assistance that should be going to the people," Cohen said.
Clinton eyes immigration changes

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

With more than 100,000 immigrants facing possible deportation, President Clinton and his allies on Capitol Hill hope to change a policy that critics say bars courts from deciding the fates of those immigrants.

Bills are languishing in Congress to reverse a 1996 rule that courts cannot consider appeals of immigration cases.

"This is an issue that affects all immigrants -- that affects all Pakistanis, Ukrainians, Irish -- from all over the world," said George Arian, of Jersey City, N.J., whose brother of EgyptAir Flight 990.

Investigators warned them to expect another wave before boarding the doomed plane in Los Angeles.

"I came here hoping I'd get my sister out of the water. I'd like to take her back home and bury her body back in Egypt," Said Sayed Gahr, brother of EgyptAir Flight 990 crash victim.

Graham said a second signal was detected Tuesday by the Navy's "black boxes." The Navy vessel Mohawk, shortly before it was ordered to port because of bad weather.

Graham said the signals came from a field of debris located by sonar on the ocean floor about 60 miles south of Nantucket.

The chief crash investigator, Greg Phillips, said it was still not known whether large sections of the plane would be found on the seabed.

Once the storm ends, the retrieval effort will begin to try to recover at least a day and a half to load additional supplies, then the recovery team, said the Navy spokesman David Sanders.

The investigation is looking into all possibilities: human error, mechanical failure or sabotage. About 600 FBI agents have joined in the search.

Egyptian officials confirmed Tuesday that 33 Egyptian military fighters, including two brigadier generals, were on the plane, returning home after undergoing training in the United States. The officers' ranks had been kept off the passenger list for security reasons. Egyptian military officials have been key targets of attacks by Islamic fundamentalists.

Outside the Newport hotel where the relatives are staying, a tearful Sayed Gabr of Cairo, said, "It was one of the most ridiculous things I think deserves a look," said Senator Harry Reid.

A key House Republican indicated, however, that chances are slim for pushing through a change this year.

Speaking to a meeting of representatives, Republican Representative Zeliff, chairman of the House Judiciary immigration subcommittee, noted that "the same basic fairness, this is something I think deserves a look," said Senator Harry Reid.

A House Republican indicated, however, that chances are slim for pushing through a change this year.

Speaking to a meeting of representatives, Republican Representative Zeliff, chairman of the House Judiciary immigration subcommittee, noted that "the same basic fairness, this is something I think deserves a look," said Senator Harry Reid.

A House Republican indicated, however, that chances are slim for pushing through a change this year.

Speaking to a meeting of representatives, Republican Representative Zeliff, chairman of the House Judiciary immigration subcommittee, noted that "the same basic fairness, this is something I think deserves a look," said Senator Harry Reid.

A House Republican indicated, however, that chances are slim for pushing through a change this year.

Speaking to a meeting of representatives, Republican Representative Zeliff, chairman of the House Judiciary immigration subcommittee, noted that "the same basic fairness, this is something I think deserves a look," said Senator Harry Reid.

A House Republican indicated, however, that chances are slim for pushing through a change this year.

Speaking to a meeting of representatives, Republican Representative Zeliff, chairman of the House Judiciary immigration subcommittee, noted that "the same basic fairness, this is something I think deserves a look," said Senator Harry Reid.

A House Republican indicated, however, that chances are slim for pushing through a change this year.

Speaking to a meeting of representatives, Republican Representative Zeliff, chairman of the House Judiciary immigration subcommittee, noted that "the same basic fairness, this is something I think deserves a look," said Senator Harry Reid.

A House Republican indicated, however, that chances are slim for pushing through a change this year.

Speaking to a meeting of representatives, Republican Representative Zeliff, chairman of the House Judiciary immigration subcommittee, noted that "the same basic fairness, this is something I think deserves a look," said Senator Harry Reid.
CUBA

Dissidents use summit for attention

Associated Press

HAVANA

Fidel Castro launched a rare televised attack on the communist island’s dissidents early today, mocking them and accusing them of taking advantage of the upcoming Ibero-American summit to carry their “counterrevolutionary” message to foreign leaders.

He named many of the dissidents during the broadcast. He said one dissident approached him after meeting with leaders during the Nov. 15-16 gathering of heads of state from Spain, Portugal and Latin America.

“They were planning a parallel summit,” Castro said angrily.

Jorge Olivera Castillo, an independent journalist who was among the many dissidents named by the Cuban leader, denied Castro’s accusation.

“He [Castro] is accusing us of trying to destroy the Ibero-American summit.”

Jorge Olivera Castillo

Havana Press

During the broadcast today, Castro discussed the four, reading portions of their documents calling on Miami exiles to encourage relatives on the island to undertake civil disobedience.

“Are these political prisoners?” he asked.

King Juan Carlos I and Spanish Prime Minister Jose Maria Aznar have said they will attend the summit. But at least five heads of state have said they will not attend, despite vigorous efforts by Cuba’s Foreign Ministry.

Costa Rican President Miguel Angel Rodriguez says he will not be here because Castro did not guarantee him the right to meet with dissidents.

Nicaraguan President Arnoldo Aleman says he won’t go because of political differences with Castro, and El Salvador’s president, Francisco Flores, says he will not come because his country and Cuba have no diplomatic relations.

The other two no-shows — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega and outgoing Argentine President Carlos Menem — are notcoming to protest Spain’s attempt to extradite former Chilean military leader Gen. Augusto Pinochet from Britain for trial on torture charges.

During the televised appearance today, Castro focused much time on a highly publicized 40-day liquid fast by dissidents earlier this year.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Trimble’s trip leaves process hanging

Associated Press

BELFAST

Talks on salvaging Northern Ireland’s peace accord continued today, but Ulster Unionist leader David Trimble’s departure for a trip to the United States reduced hopes of a conclusion this week.

Trimble’s party represents much of the province’s British Protestant population, and he is central to resolving the dispute that has blocked the formation of a new government for Northern Ireland.

“I would have shared the 1998 Nobel Peace Prize with Catholic politician John Hume,” Trimble said during a speech at Ball State University in Muncie, Indiana.

“Trimble, who shared the 1998 Nobel Peace Prize with Catholic politician John Hume, was scheduled to speak at Ball State University on Wednesday. He was to visit the Indianapolis Humanities Council on Thursday, then brief the White House’s deputy national security adviser, Jim Steinberg, in Washington on Friday.

George Mitchell, the former U.S. Senate majority leader and Clinton’s choice four years ago to lead American diplomacy in Northern Ireland, has been overseeing negotiations in Belfast for the past two months. His spokesman rejected local reports that Mitchell had urged Trimble to cancel his U.S. appointments.

Mitchell has been trying to resolve the impasse between the Ulster Unionists and Sinn Fein, the Irish Republican Army-linked party with substantial Catholic support.

Trimble has refused to accept Sinn Fein’s right to hold office in a new Protestant-Catholic government for Northern Ireland — the central proposal within the Good Friday accord of 1998 — until the IRA promises, or actually begins, to disarm.

Trimble’s office said he would keep in touch with his senior negotiator, Rog Empey.

The two sides have said almost nothing about their talks in recent weeks after Mitchell told them that public arguments would only harm their efforts.

Meanwhile, police in Belfast and Glasgow, Scotland, arrested two men today on suspicion of trying to kill a high-profile IRA informer.

Martin McGartland was shot six times in June at his home in northeast England, where he had been living under a police-provided alias for several years. McGartland accused the IRA of seeking revenge for his role as a paid police informer.

Police declined to say whether the two men arrested had any IRA connections.

ANGERS, FRANCE

INFORMATION MEETING

With Carmen Nanni, Assistant Director

Thursday, November 4, 1999

4:45 PM

South Dining Hall-Hospitality Room

Appetizers will be served

Returning students will be on hand to answer questions
I remember being in kindergarten. I think it was the second day. A bunch of the guys were doing typical kindergarten things, playing war with the multi-colored intergalactic star ships we had each crafted out of near-LEGO's that my kindergarten had. It was all kinds of fun. Zooming and crashing the ships all over the area rug that had been designated as the intergalactic battle ground. We looked forward to a whole year of fun with multi colored near-LEGO war.

Until that one kid came over and ended our war. Not in a playful kindergarten way, he didn't defeat all the other ships in some all out plastic dog fight. No, this little kindergarten scoundrel decided he was going to start snatching ships out of other people's hands, throwing blocks all over the room and causing a big commotion. We all gave him the condescending kindergarten equivalent of, "Hey pal, why you gotta be like that?" but it was no avail. Before too long our teacher spotted the commotion, came over and ended our war. There was no inquiry into what had happened, no negotiation, no Martian prison camps built out of Lincoln Logs or real LEGO's. Just the last intergalactic skirmish of the entire year. All because of that one guy and his bad attitude.

Most people can probably relate to this story. Everyone has experienced the burning anger that all us bloodthirsty kindergartners tasted when that one kid ruined all the fun. Everyone has had to live through the illegible and irrefutable punishment doled out by parents, teachers, school bus drivers and other adults who decided the best means of solving a problem was to autocratically, and without explanation, destroy the fun and good times for everyone rather than target the real troublemaker. Being a kid is all about dealing with situations like that. Luckily, going off to college means leaving all of that behind.

At most colleges maybe. The vast majority of people on this campus are unaware of our college radio station WVFI. True, college radio everywhere isn't a tenth of what it was when four guys named REM were creating it twenty years ago in Georgia. Still, this year the hallowed body of Notre Dame information infrastructure took a big step in bringing back college radio. The station, formerly broadcasting on 660 AM, switched to an Internet format so that everyone in the world could potentially listen to the station. Beyond even the football broadcasts of Saturday afternoon, the station was able to send the shows of aspiring college DJ's to campuses and computers all over the world. Until all those kindergartners started throwing the blocks.

Allegedly in response to the childish and inappropriate actions of a few not talent mavrecks who thought they would pose as Howard Stern, the University decided to fire wall the web address that you don't want anyone to see. And if you run into that kid from my kindergarten class, ask him why he's gonna' be like that.

Paul Camara
Sophomore
December 1999

University censorship hits WVFI

There is no disputing that Notre Dame is geographically self contained. Why it must be so stubborn in the effort to remain an intellectual Biosphere, however, is beyond my comprehension. There are brilliant people on this campus, and there seems no legitimate reason that their talents not be used when such a medium exists for such. Periodically exchange some of the stagnant regurgitated philosophies and perspectives for the fresh air of the don't all scream at once) outside world.

There are always going to be a few morons who swear on the radio, and when they do. I say deal with them and be on your way. Regulate individuals, don't punish the masses. But most importantly, deal with the issue and plainly justify your actions to those who are concerned. In this case, that means not just the people who work on this station, but the entire student body, whether they listen to the radio, Internet or not. Don't sweep the issue under the rug like some bad advertisement that you don't want anyone to see. All I really needed to know about illogi­ cal punishment I learned in kinder­garten; I didn't think I'd have to revisit it. I'm still learning about the legal system...
It's our duty to donate organs

This week, as many of you are probably aware, the Chicago Bears lost one of their legends: Walter Payton, the NFL's all-time leading rusher died at the age of 45.

While the cancer that killed Payton had spread too far to be cured by a liver transplant, he still taped a Public Service Announcement urging for organ donors. I saw a picture captured from the commercial in question on the Washington Post Web site www.washingtonpost.com. There was the man whom I used to watch as he brushed off Dexter Manley and the rest of the fantastic Redskins defensive line with just a flip of his head and a couple of extra steps. You could see in his eyes that it was beyond only chemotherapy and the terrible corrosive effort of cancer had whittled away the broad shoulders and the strong arms.

Payton needed a liver transplant earlier in the year, but he waited in vain. Then, when no other chance.

Did he really have to die so soon? Could something have been done about it? Was it possible that in those months that he was waiting, someone with a perfectly healthy liver and of the same blood type could have given him the gift of a few more years? Yes it's possible.

I never checked the box on my driver's license calling for organ donation until I got to college.

My freshman year, my father went into the hospital complaining of chest pains and shortness of breath. He was diagnosed with UIP, an immune disease that uses the white blood cells to slowly turn the lungs into scar tissue. It had been working on him for 30 years and finally had done enough destruction. We work to eliminate the usefulness of one lung and severely impair that of the other.

Through sheer determination and a rigorous treatment schedule of chemotherapy, immune-suppressing steroids and physical therapy, he was able to hold the disease at bay for 30 months. Meanwhile he was waiting on lists at four different hospitals for a lung transplant that might have given him an extra few years of his life.

Then, in January 1997, five months before I was supposed to get out from Undernaught and get back to the dump and plastic and glass and paper, glass material. Where do the recycling to treat or process (used or waste material.

The view's expressed in this column are those of Random Thoughts. Loughran

Random Thoughts Matthew Loughran

Let's face it, we all go? They and plastic and glass all go? They all go into the dump behind South Dining Hall. It is more expensive to recycle, which explains why Notre Dame only pretends to, opposing the handful of environmentally conscious students and faculty members.

It figures that the light-fisted people in charge of the University budget would place a higher value on image than on true environmental concern. It is an insult to the intelligence level of every student at this school that instead of just admitting no attempt at cooperation with the Environmental Studies Program, the University continues with this ridiculous facade.

The blame does not lie on the Recker's managers. As student employees for two years, we have the utmost respect for these hardworking people. This practice stems from the University's ignorant and stingy policies. Reckers remains the most popular social spot on campus. We are sure that it engages more than enough revenue to recycle its waste. It is time the University be held accountable for its actions.

Do not celebrate sinful tendencies

Julio Faber's recent letter to The Observer Oct. 28 bringing "clarification" to Mary Crawford on the Church's position on homosexuality succeeded in muddying the waters still further. Apparently Fabey needs as much "clarification" as Crawford does.

Fabey is absolutely right in saying that having a homosexual tendency is not immoral in itself. I missed the logic, however, when she jumps to the conclusion that "encouraging those who are homosexual to be "loud and proud" cannot be considered immoral."

Hold on just a minute. All of us are born with a general tendency toward sin. And in addition, that tendency may express itself in particular ways in particular people: some of us may be weak toward alcohol, others toward theft, others toward lying, some toward heterosexual lust, others toward homosexual desires. The fact that we have these weaknesses may be due to factors beyond our control, i.e. genetics or our childhood environment. It doesn't follow, however, that since these weaknesses aren't our fault, that we should be proud of them.

Should all Christian kleptomaniacs band together and proclaim their pride in having a disordered desire to steal? Should all Christians of alcoholic tendencies be "loud and proud" that they have an inherited tendency toward the abuse of alcohol? Why should homosexuality be singled out as the one tendency toward sinful acts which we should celebrate?

We don't celebrate our tendencies toward sin. Instead, we struggle against them, and by growing in our relationship with God, receiving the grace of the Word and Sacraments, seeking support and fellowship, and sometimes getting the help of trained professionals, we hope to attain healing and wholeness to reach a state where our desires are for the right things. And even if we don't reach that state in this life, we don't stop struggling for it. Personally, I'm far from reaching that state, and am in the need of the prayers of all who read this for the healing of my own disordered soul.

The Church's teaching walks a tightrope between condemning homosexuals for having a tendency they didn't choose, and simply saying that there is nothing disordered about homosexuality. The debate on campus, I think, is about how to walk this tightrope, and whether encourage homosexuals nor "normalize" them to do nothing more than a legitimate alternative lifestyle.

Letters to the Editor

Where was Malloy during Mass?

His Eminence, Cardinal Arinze blessed the University of Notre Dame by his offering of the Mass in our glorious Basilica Monday night.

However, something—or someone, rather—was missing. Where was Father (Edward) Malloy? As president of Notre Dame and himself a brother priest of Cardinal Arinze, I can think of no person that would have been more present at the Mass. What a poor effort on Father Malloy's part to duly welcome and honor this cardinal prince of the Church to which Notre Dame owes its existence.

Maybe there was another conflict. But I can think of nothing more important than to honor Cardinal Arinze by being present at the Mass he offered as a special blessing to this University.

But even if there were some noble cause for Malloy's absence, why too were Father Beauchamp and Father Hesburgh not present? Zero for three is a poor effort no matter what the excuse.

Jacob T. Radziski Freshman Kansas City

Are we really recycling at ND?

Recycling to treat or process (used or waste material) so as to make suitable renewed resource. Despite the high academic and moral standards at this university, Notre Dame cannot seem to grasp Webster's simple definition. The most blatant and deceiving example of this can be found at Reckers, where bins are separate according to their recyclable material. Where do the separate bins for paper, glass and plastic all go? They all go into the dump behind South Dining Hall. It is more expensive to recycle, which explains why Notre Dame only pretends to, opposing the handful of environmentally conscious students and faculty members.

It figures that the light-fisted people in charge of the University budget would place a higher value on image than on true environmental concern. It is an insult to the intelligence level of every student at this school that instead of just admitting no attempt at cooperation with the Environmental Studies Program, the University continues with this ridiculous facade.

The blame does not lie on the Recker's managers. As student employees for two years, we have the utmost respect for these hardworking people. This practice stems from the University's ignorant and stingy policies. Reckers remains the most popular social spot on campus. We are sure that it engages more than enough revenue to recycle its waste. It is time the University be held accountable for its actions.

Missy Gorris Co-editor Senior Minneapolis

Rebecca Trujillo Assistant Professor of Religion October 31, 1999

No Loughran and not necessarily those of The Observer.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.
Alumni’s notorious spirit thrives today

Editor’s note: Scene will feature the dorms of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s throughout the fall and spring semesters. Anyone interested in writing a feature of a dorm should e-mail Scene at Scene@nd.edu.

By BRIDGET M. AHONEY

Scene Writer

OK, for all the full-blooded Domers out there, it’s trivia time. Who was the Notre Dame mascot for 35 years before the Leprechaun got the job in 1965?

The correct answer is the Irish terrier, that is. Does that make it the best dorm on campus, the center of the universe? Of course, the Dorms of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s dorms come to Notre Dame. Although dorms are centered around the theme of the university, there is a special spirit associated with each dorm. Alumni Hall is no exception.

The dorm was founded in 1931 by the class of 1931. Although many changes have been made along the way, there is a sense of tradition that characterizes this historic dorm. Residents may not have air conditioning and the spacious luxuries of newer dorms, but Pierce explained, “There’s something to tradition ... I had that group of seniors when I was a freshman and so on.”

The upperclassmen emphasize their fraternal atmosphere, and a banner bearing their Greek letters — delta, omega, gamma — is brought out for special occasions. “The best thing is how much it’s like a fraternity,” said Don Pierce, Alumni’s other co-president. “It’s a really great group of guys. The older guys took care of me when I was a freshman and so on.”

The upperclassmen emphasize freshman orientation and strive to make their new arrivals feel at home. Although the freshmen live together on the first and second floors and consequently get to know each other well, that does not stop them from befriending upperclassmen.

In addition, Alumni’s rector, Father George Bowman, receives pictures of the incoming freshmen over the summer and learns their names and faces so he can greet them personally upon arrival. “He’s a big part of the hall. Anyone who lives in Alumni knows about Father George.” Pierce added. “He’s been there since 1978.”

Like Notre Dame in general, a strong sense of tradition characterizes this historic dorm. Residents may not have air conditioning and the spacious luxuries of newer dorms, but Pierce explained, “There’s something to tradition ... I had an older guy come by and knock on the door to see his old room to show his kid around.”

The chapel is another aspect of the hall’s history as most of the stained glass windows were donated by past classes, intending to immortalize their time as Alumni Dawgs. Although modern changes have been made along the way, their spirit remains.

At Sunday night Mass, that spirit persists as “the world’s most dangerous Mass choir and band” provides the music. Almost an orchestra, instruments range from guitars to a flute to an Egyptian drum, and two pews of singers mission the Mass.

The last Mass of the year, dedicated to the graduating seniors, is especially unforgettable because Father George roasts the seniors in his homily. Over the years, the tradition has grown into a full-blown Wake and got away with it until the roast,” Father George added with a laugh.

Of course, no one can ignore Alumni’s most widely known tradition, the Wake, though it’s “shrouded in mystery.” Started in 1981, the custom parodies an Irish wake as students, wearing only boxers and ties, process across campus carrying a used steel casket and singing loudly, often through the South Bend elements of rain and snow.

The Wake Dance elaborates on this theme as each section makes a different dead person and decorates appropriately. Such celebrated figures of past Wakes include Bridget Maguire’s, Chris Farley and Bernie from “Weekend at Bernie’s.” At the stroke of midnight, all the Dawgs and their dates gather down in the stuffy basement for the casket, containing Father George, to be brought in.

“The first time I went in,” said Father George, “I was a little queasy. I was shut in and there are no latches inside.” “It’s comfortable, however. It’s got a little mattress and pillow,” he added upon reflection.

Alumni men also enjoy parading their stuff across campus by continuing the informal tradition of the “Run.” For those trapped in the library during finals week, they are subject to the sight of masked Dawgs taking a break from all the studying and stress by streaking. Warning: witnesses see a completely different side of Alumni Hall.

It’s nothing too bad, though. Just proof of their laid-back nature. According to Pierce, “The Alumni are good guys. All-around, they like to have fun and are good students.”

SCENE ASKS

What’s the defining aspect of Alumni Hall?

“It’s the center of the universe.”
Justin Heberle
junior, Alumni Hall

“Ladies love us.”
Clifford Jefferson
sophomore, Alumni Hall

“Clean, good water pressure”
Scott Little and Mike Sekula
sophomores, Alumni Hall

With the relief of their dorm’s name behind them, Clifford Jefferson (left) and Justin Heberle converse in front of Alumni Hall. The Dawgs consider themselves members of one of the better dorms on campus.

Wednesday, November 3, 1999
MARY CALASH/The Observer
When people think of "college life," they think of movies. "Animal House" and "The Revenge of the Nerds" too often serve as a definition of what college is supposed to be like. That is why some people are so surprised to learn that a large university like Notre Dame has no sororities or fraternities. They cannot imagine a college without initiations and Greek letters on every dorm. They defend it. They love it.

By MOLLY MCSHANE
Scene Writer

Yes for wide hallways, breakfasting and cartwheels.

Smallish Badin shines big-time in '99

The women of Badin Hall often feel this particular irritation. Because of its small size and peculiar position facing a large construction pit rather than a quad like all the other dorms, Badin is frequently overlooked.

Those who are unaware of Badin, and even some who are aware of the dorm, are also oblivious to its rich history. Badin was one of the first residence halls, dating back to 1937. The initial use of Badin Hall was to house Notre Dame students, but to teach and house young men training to be blacksmiths, carpenters, bricklayers, tailors and farmers.

Now how many other halls can brag that their building used to be a school for manual labor? Not many, and that's for darn sure.

It wasn't until 1919 that "St. Joseph's School" became a residence hall and had its name changed to honor Father Stephen Badin, who provided the land for the University and built the original log cabin.

For the next 52 years, Badin Hall was home to young men attending the University. These men gave Badin its history, its traditions. The little quirks that make what would otherwise be a bleak old building a home. Of course, all of these special memories had been long forgotten. That is, until now.

Surprisingly enough, Badin Hall used to be a happening spot back in the day. Even before the old bookstore's demolition, the large space of open grass in front of the dorm got its name -- "Badin Bog." -- from the always-efficient draining system here at Notre Dame and its effects on the field during the rainy months. The bog was used for many intramural sport competitions, including "bog ball," as well as everyday holly-gagging and leap jinks.

During this time, the first floor of Badin was used for many different purposes, including the barber shop and the bookstore. But as the need for books and overpriced Notre Dame merchandise increased, it was decided that the bookstore be moved out of Badin and into the bog. And so it was.

From 1967 on, Badin took it upon itself to entertain those coming and going from the bookstore by taking advantage of their prestigious balcony. They would hire bands to play there as they danced on the roof. On football weekends, a banner would be hung reading "BADIN BIDS" and then an ill-wish for that week's opponent, such as "BUY THE ROLL-BLACK-EYERS.

The popularity of Badin increased. Slips that had to be filled out whenever a student was planning on staying out for the night began to consistently read "Badin Hall" in the space provided for destination. Badin was known, officially, as "where it's at." There were two turntables and a microphone, or so the stories say.

And then, in 1972, there was a drastic change. Badin and Walsh Halls were offered up as sacrifice to the incoming Saint Mary's women. It was a sad, sad day for many Badinites. A wreath was hung on the front door in mourning, and a letter was written to The Observer expressing their disappointment and sadness. But what was done was done, and the Badinites moved on.

On Feb. 14, 1972, a new tradition was started for the new residents of Badin Hall: complaining and moaning. On that day, incoming Saint Mary's women. It was known as "where it's at." The day before Valentine's Day was Saint Valentine's Day, and that was no more uncertainties as to where they live. During freshmen orientation, the first-year women of Badin could be seen marching around campus cheering for their hall just like any dorm with sinks that stay in the wall.

This year, Badin's hall staff consists of resident Nancy Cook, assistant resident Gail Navarrino and resident assistants Kathy Fallon, Cheryl Asci and Loubel Cruz. The dorm presidents are Theresa Bresnanahan, Priscilla Clements and Zsazsa Holyfield. Hall council meets every Tuesday night to work on making Badin an even better place to live, and just before fall break, there was an exciting decision to get an ice machine in the laundry room.

It also seems that Badin is on the verge of a comeback. The flag football team made it to the playoffs for the first time ever.

What's the defining aspect of Badin Hall?

"I really like Badin because it's very easy to get to know everyone since it's so small."

Megan Fischer
junior, Badin Hall

Residents of Badin Hall congregate on the dorm's balcony, a trademark of the hall. Badinites consider the hall's smallness an asset to interpersonal relations throughout the dorm.
Griffey Jr. turns down Mariners' offer; asks to be traded

Associated Press

SEATTLE

Ken Griffey Jr., wanting to play closer to his home in Florida, rejected Seattle's eight-year contract offer and the player in baseball.

"This has been an extremely difficult decision for me," Griffey said in a joint statement he released with the team. "Mariners fans throughout the Pacific Northwest have been very loyal and devoted to me. I will truly miss them."

Griffey hit 48 homers this year after hitting 56 in consecutive seasons. The center fielder, who turns 30 later this month, has 396 career homers and is thought to have the best chance among current players of breaking Hank Aaron's record of 755.

"The Mariners agreed to Ken's request and will seek to trade him during the current offseason," the joint statement said.

Griffey, who has veto power over any deal because he is a 10-year veteran who has played five years with his current team, and his agent, Brian Goldberg, met Monday in Orlando, Fla., with Mariners chairman Howard Lincoln, president Chuck Armstrong and new general manager Pat Gillick.

Lincoln told a news conference that Griffey "has clearly been agonizing over this decision for some time," and that it was a "difficult loss" for the team.

He praised Griffey, however, for wanting to spend more time with his two young children.

"This is not a decision I can quarrel with or argue with, it's only a decision that I can respect," Lincoln said.

"It's strictly has to do with family, time and geography," Goldberg said.

Gillick, hired last week to replace the retiring Woody Woodward, said the Mariners hope to get the most value they can for Griffey. He has no timetable and hopes to get "four players of quality."

"I think our goal is to obtain players that we think can help us in 2000, and I think we have to look a little bit further ahead than that," said Gillick, former general manager in Toronto and Baltimore. "In a package for Kenny, I think you're looking for a mix of players who can help you for the moment and in the future."

Gillick said he expected a backlash by Mariners' fans.

"No matter who you get, the fans and the media are not going to think you got equal value," he said, adding, "We're not going to move to please them, unless we think we will get value."

Goldberg did not say where Griffey prefers to play and did not come out against the new owner returning to play for Seattle, saying, "You never know."

"The Mariners have done everything humanly possible to keep Ken Griffey Jr. a Seattle Mariner," Lincoln said. "While we are disappointed, we deeply respect Ken's decision to put his family ahead of everything else."

Griffey and Seattle's other star, shortstop Alex Rodriguez, are eligible for free agency after next season.

"We are leaving it up to them to explore what they need to, Gigles said from his Cincinnati office. "I think we're confident this is going to work out for everybody."

Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr. flings his bat after a home run against the Red Sox at Fenway Park. The center fielder hit 48 round trippers this season.

The Observer accepts classifieds every business day from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Notre Dame office, 624 South Dixieland Hall. Deadline for next-day classifieds is 3 p.m. All classifieds must be prepaid. The charge is $5.50 per character per line, including space. The Observer reserves the right to edit all classifieds for content without issuing refunds.
The University of Notre Dame cordially invites you to attend a special evening celebrating the life and ministry of

Reverend Leon Sullivan
1999 Notre Dame Award Recipient

7:30 p.m.
Prayer service and award ceremony
Jordan Auditorium
College of Business Administration
Reception to follow in the foyer of the auditorium

Rev. Sullivan will sign copies of his new book, "Moving Mountains," from 1-2 p.m. today at the Hammes Notre Dame Bookstore

Reverend Leon Sullivan
civil rights leader and pastor emeritus of Zion Baptist Church, Philadelphia

"Leon Sullivan’s struggle against racial prejudice and economic injustice has been lifelong, exemplary and inspiring. In honoring his life and work, we hope to recommit ourselves to the same struggle."

— Father Malloy
The Observer • SPORTS

Wednesday, November 3, 1999

NCAA FOOTBALL

Redmond: You can't trust women

♦ Sun Devil player wed ASU employee to keep eligibility

Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — J.R. Redmond isn’t talking about the details of his marriage to a part-time employee of the Arizona State athletic department or his subsequent punishment by the NCAA.

But the Sun Devils’ star tailback said he “learned some valuable lessons.”

“One, nothing is for free. Two, you can’t trust women,” Redmond said after his team’s practice Tuesday.

Redmond spoke to reporters for the first time since the bizarre tale surfaced last Friday.

The NCAA suspended him from last Saturday’s game at Oregon and ordered him to repay $418 in cellular phone bills and $173 for a Las Vegas trip he took with his new wife.

He also must do 20 hours of community service. The money is to go to charity.

“’You always feel bad missing a game,” Redmond said. “But I paid the price, and it’s over.”

The penalties stemmed from the NCAA’s finding that the help Redmond received from Francine Arthur amounted to benefits from an improper source. Redmond has filed for divorce and has told investigators he believes Arthur was trying to take financial advantage of him by inducing him to marry her.

According to the university’s report to the NCAA, Redmond used Arthur’s cellular telephone, and later she told him that the only way he could avoid losing his eligibility to play football would be to marry her.

She told investigators she had cleaned Redmond’s apartment and filled his refrigerator with food while he was away at training camp. Arthur, a full-time student at Arizona State, resigned from her athletic department job last Friday.

The couple married at a Mesa wedding chapel on Aug. 25. He filed for divorce on Oct. 22.

Redmond told university investigators that he believed Arthur was trying to gain access to some of his future earnings, which could be considerable because he is a top NFL prospect.

Arthur and her lawyer dispute Redmond’s version.

She told The Arizona Republic that the relationship was based on “genuine love.”

Arthur, 31, said Redmond had a key to her house, came there often and became close to her two children.

Notre Dame Right to Life Presents:

Dawn Kober, Abortion Survivor

“The day I attended a pro-choice rally was the day my parents told me they tried to abort me.”

Wednesday, November 3, 1999 at 8:00 p.m.

Center for Social Concerns Classroom

All are welcomed to attend and hear this remarkable story!
Gonzalez traded to Detroit

Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas

Two-time All-MLB Juan Gonzalez was traded from the Texas Rangers to the Detroit Tigers in a nine-player deal Tuesday.

Going with Gonzalez to Detroit were pitcher Danny Patterson and catcher Gregg Zaun.

The Ranger-returned pitchers, Justin Thompson, Gabe Kapler, and the sides spoke shortly after the deal was done.

The Tigers get Gonzalez' s free agency.

Gonzalez, who turned 30 on Aug. 26. At the time he was put on the disabled list, then manager Melvin said Thompson is high-priced.

"We just weren't prepared to do that," Melvin said. "We've been working the last couple of years to acquire a franchise player.

"I guess it heated up over the last couple of days," Texas general manager Doug Melvin said. "We had talked about it a lot. Randy Smith has been on vacation in Hawaii, so it was a little bit strange, all trying to get the deal done."

Gonzalez, who turned 30 on Oct. 16, was the All-Star during his first full season in 1997, but has been slowed by injuries.

"We have worked hard to develop a farm system which Detroit to level and strong depth," Smith said, without whom "we could not have made today's deal.

Melvin said Thompson is high-priced, but he would not play in the AL Central, 27 1/2 games behind the Central, 27 1/2 games behind.

"I remember asking my mom Monday Allan Cassida Park under newly hired manager Phil Garner.

"Over the last few years, we have worked hard to develop a farm system which Detroit to level and strong depth," Smith said, without whom "we could not have made today's deal.

Melvin said Thompson is high-priced, but he would not play in the AL Central, 27 1/2 games behind.

"I remember the Chicago Bears on the original Tecmo Bowl for Nintendo and how much we had to respect its running game because a computer representation of number 34 would make you pay if you didn't."

I remember asking my mom to save a Wheaties box with a painting of Walter on it that came out just a few years ago. I couldn't put my finger on his head, but he had told me specifically his family mourn the loss of Walter. He was gone. Before I wanted to be like Mike, I wanted to be like Walter.

"Because of my young age, my memories of my favorite player are many and the ones I do have aren't crystal-clear photographs imprinted in my brain anymore."

I remember an NFL Films video with a segment on JOP jumping over the pile, a form of a touchscreen plague that Walter pioneered for goal line situations. Here, instead of pounding hard, he took the ball from the quarterback and dove head first at what seemed to be about 10 feet above the pile of linemen and linebackers into the serenity of the waiting end zone.

I remember the Chicago Bears on the original Tecmo Bowl for Nintendo and how much we had to respect its running game because a computer representation of number 34 would make you pay if you didn't.

I remember asking my mom to save a Wheaties box with a painting of Walter on it that came out just a few years ago. I couldn't put my finger on his head, but he had told me specifically his family mourn the loss of Walter. He was gone. Before I wanted to be like Mike, I wanted to be like Walter.

"Because of my young age, my memories of my favorite player are many and the ones I do have aren't crystal-clear photographs imprinted in my brain anymore."

I remember an NFL Films video with a segment on JOP jumping over the pile, a form of a touchscreen plague that Walter pioneered for goal line situations. Here, instead of pounding hard, he took the ball from the quarterback and dove head first at what seemed to be about 10 feet above the pile of linemen and linebackers into the serenity of the waiting end zone.

I remember the Chicago Bears on the original Tecmo Bowl for Nintendo and how much we had to respect its running game because a computer representation of number 34 would make you pay if you didn't.

I remember asking my mom to save a Wheaties box with a painting of Walter on it that came out just a few years ago. I couldn't put my finger on his head, but he had told me specifically his family mourn the loss of Walter. He was gone. Before I wanted to be like Mike, I wanted to be like Walter.
VOLLEYBALL

Belles advance with quarterfinal win over Hornets

By MOLLY McVOY
Assistant Sports Editor

Persistence was the word of the day for the Saint Mary's volleyball team. After defeating Kalamazoo College Tuesday, the Belles now move on to Hope College in their drive to win the MIAA championships.

The Hornets did not let the Belles win easily, but Saint Mary's proved to be the stronger team. "Everyone pulled together as a team," head coach Randy Shields said. "They played well as a unit." The Belles defeated the Hornets in four games, 15-7, 9-15, 15-1, 15-11. Agnes Bill led the Belles with 18 kills, and Emily Nihill led with 12 digs. Jayne Ozbolt and Ann Bill both had two aces each.

Saint Mary's came out and dominated in the first game, consistently leading by seven points or more. The Bill sisters led the Belles in both serving and hitting in Game 1. Kalamazoo looked confused from the start, and the Belles had control of both the ball and the pace of the game.

"When we played (Kalamazoo) three weeks ago, we played decent, but we weren't working as a team," senior middle hitter Ozbolt said. "But today, we came out good in the first game and worked as a team." The Belles came out and scored first in the second game and took a 3-0 lead, but Kalamazoo came back and took control. Saint Mary's gave up numerous points because of fundamental mistakes. Double hits and lifting calls bumbled the Belles. The Hornets stepped up play in this game and won, 15-9.

"In the second game, we were a little frustrated with our passing," Ozbolt said. Saint Mary's completely turned it around in Game 3. Again, the Belles came out and scored first, taking a commanding 7-0 lead. Kalamazoo came back and scored their only point of the game, but Saint Mary's regained possession of the ball and finished off the game, winning 15-1.

"Instead of focusing on individuals, we played as a team," Shields said. "That was the difference from the second game."

The fourth game proved to be a test for the Belles' determination. With the score tied at four each, there were eight possession changes before either team scored again. The Belles scored and brought the score to 6-4 in favor of Saint Mary's. There were seven more possession changes before the Belles scored again. At one point, it was 14-9 Saint Mary's and it appeared the Belles had it wrapped up. Kalamazoo brought it as close as 14-11 before Saint Mary's won the game.

Saint Mary's moves on to play Hope College, ranked first in the MIAA. If they win this game, they will go on to play for the championship.

"Going into Friday, we have to focus on them being any other team, not Hope," Shields said. "We have to play our game against them."
Showdown with Pirates has postseason implications

By KERRY SMITH
Sports Writer

The playoffs are beginning early for the Notre Dame men's soccer team this year. With one regular season game left on the schedule, the Irish can't afford to lose.

The Irish take the field against Big East rival Seton Hall today, as the two teams compete for the final spot in the Big East tournament. The Irish must earn a win or tie to continue their season. If they lose the season is over.

With their future uncertain, the Irish realize the importance that rests on the match-up with the Pirates.

"We have to focus," said head coach Mike Berticelli earlier in the week. "Seton Hall will be our biggest game of the season."

Today's game will solidify the final spot in the tournament seedings.

With only eight spots in the tournament, the Irish are just beyond the boundaries of postseason play at the ninth spot. With a win over the Pirates, the Irish would jump to the seventh spot and the Providence Friars would fall to eighth place.

If Notre Dame comes away with a tie, the Irish and the Providence Friars would tie for eighth place.

"If Notre Dame can't control the game, or if the Pirates have a good game plan, we're in trouble," said Burtinelli.

The Pirates started out the season with a 3-1-0 record and in the midst of a three-game losing streak.

The Irish began to find holes in the defense early in the season.

"The Irish face a big challenge as they go up against the Pirates," said Burtinelli. "But the Irish are in better form than in earlier games."

Notre Dame travels to Seton Hall for a conference matchup with the Pirates. The Irish can secure a berth in the Big East tournament with a win.

---

AT TIAA-CREF, LOW EXPENSES ARE A HIGH PRIORİTY.

All financial companies charge operating fees and expenses — some more than others. Of course, the lower the expenses you pay, the better.

That way, more of your money goes where it should — toward building a comfortable future.

As the largest retirement system in the world,1 we have among the lowest expenses in the insurance and mutual fund industries.2

In fact, TIAA-CREF's 0.35% average fund expenses are a fraction of the expenses charged by comparable funds.3 It's one reason why Morningstar says, "TIAA-CREF sets the standard in the financial services industry."

A focus on your future

Of course, expenses are only one factor to consider when you make an investment decision. Morningstar also noted our commitment to "consumer education, service" and "solid investment performance." Because that can make a difference in the long run, too.

At TIAA-CREF, we believe people would like to spend more in retirement, not on their retirement company. Today, over two million people count on that approach to help them build financial security. So can you.

To find out more — give us a call or visit our website:
1 800 842-2776
www.tiaa-cref.org

---

ND Fans!!

WHILE IN TOWN FOR THE ND/PITT GAME, VISIT

Mullaney's
Harp and Fiddle
The Best in Irish Entertainment and Food!

- Open before and after the game
- Located at the corner of Penn and 29th in the Strip District
- Only a ten minute ride from Pitt Stadium

The squad has managed to come away with an away-game victory only once this season, while dropping five games and tying their opponents twice. A win over Seton Hall today would put Notre Dame's overall record at 9-7-2 and earn them their fourth-straight Big East tournament spot.
Shay

continued from page 24

Notre Dame in track that year due to injury, and returned particularly strongly since his sophomore campaign. Last year in cross country, Shay consistently finished first for the Irish. He was the lone Irish runner to qualify for the NCAAA cross country championships, based on his 10th-place finish at district. He won the Wolf and Kettle Invitational and the Notre Dame Invitational, as well as placing sixth in the Big East Championships.

During the 1999 track season, Shay competed at an even higher level of intensity than he had previously. Although his specialty is long distances like the 5k or 10k, Shay won the Big East Indoor Championships in the 3,000 meters in a time of 8:20.38.

In the outdoor season, he received all-Big East honors in the 5,000 meters and 10,000 meters, where he finished third and second, respectively. He also qualified for the NAACAs in the 10,000 meters based on his time of 29:01.59 at the Stanford Invitational. In the national championships, Shay placed seventh overall in the 10,000 meter run, high enough to win All-American recognition.

Leading the pack

Coming into Notre Dame, Shay wasn't used to having to come from behind. As a high school runner in Michigan, Shay became the first boy ever to capture four state titles, only losing one cross country meet during his entire high school career.

"He's really become a very patient runner," Piana said. "Where his first couple of years he was very impatient and had to lead a race every step of the way."

In track, Shay was a three-time champion in the 1,600 and 3,200 meter runs, also earning one state title in the 800-meter run. His athletic success carried over onto the national level. Outside of Michigan, Shay won several NAACAs, was the 1995 USA Track and Field 3,000 meter champion and 1996 USATF 3,000 meter champion and placed fourth at the junior nationals in the 5,000 meter run in 1997.

"I came from a very large family with four brothers and three sisters," Shay said. "Just being in a family that big, I was always competitive. You've got to be sure of yourself in anything you do when you're in that kind of environment."

All in the family

Running is something of a requirement for being in the Shay family. Shay's dad was the Irish cross country and track coach at Central Lake High School in Central Lake, Mich., where he still coaches. Five of Shay's siblings ran at the college level, and the remaining two are in eighth and ninth grades.

Nathan Shay, Ryan's younger brother, is a freshman at Notre Dame, and a member of the Notre Dame cross country and track teams. Ryan's older brother Casey is also currently training with the Irish. Casey graduated from Lubbock Christian, where he was the 1996 NAIA steeplechase champion and a nine-time All-American. He hopes to qualify for the 2000 Olympic Trials in the steeplechase. Ryan also has his sights set on the 2000 Olympics.

"That's one of the major goals by the end of the track season — to hit the qualifying time that will get me into the Olympic Trials," Shay said. "I'm pretty sure I can hit that. Right now we're just focused on cross country."

The Irish, currently ranked eighth in the nation, will be seeking an automatic berth at nationals with a high finish at districts Nov. 13. Fifth-year runner Ryan Maxwell said Shay plays an important role for the Irish.

"He's a great leader for the team," Maxwell said. "He sets a good example for the rest of the team with his work ethic. I think it's pretty important that he does well because it really sets the tone for the rest of the team and gives us someone to key off of."

If anyone can lead the Irish to victory, it is Shay. Among his accomplishments this season are a fourth-place finish at the Pre-National meet and a Big East crown, where he ran the third-fastest time ever on the course. His victory in the ad-dau/Notre Dame Invitational also blinded him as the first Notre Dame runner to win that race in more than 30 years.

HOMES FOR RENT

- Domus Properties has two, five, six, and nine bedroom student housing available
- Student neighborhoods close to campus
- Security systems provided
- Well maintained homes
- Maintenance staff on call

Available for the 2000/2001 school year

BETTER HURRY!!! ONLY 5 HOUSES LEFT

Contact Kramer (219)274-1501 or (219)234-2436 or (219)674-2572

Information Session

Wednesday, November 3rd, 1999
6:00-8:00 pm •Center for Continuing Education McKenna Hall

Food • Fun • Facts

Headquartered in Peoria, Illinois, Caterpillar Inc. is the world's largest manufacturer of construction and mining equipment, natural gas engines and industrial gas turbines, and a leading global supplier of diesel engines. We are a Fortune 50 industrial company with more than $18 billion in assets.

Representatives from Caterpillar will be on hand at the Information Session to explain how you fit into the Caterpillar organization. Caterpillar will be interviewing on campus students who have a minimum of 2.80 GPA and who are now U.S. citizens, permanent residents, refugees or asylees.

Chemical Engineers at Caterpillar:

Initially work in design, process engineering, planning, research and development, and production of rubber components, bonded, plastics, static and dynamic seals, rubber coupling technologies, paint and coatings, process oils and lubricants, and environmental engineering.

Electrical and Computer Science Engineers at Caterpillar:

Initially work in research, design, and development of controls for equipment and engines including embedded system software, microprocessor applications, electro hydraulics, sensor technology, and control system hardware and software. Caterpillar uses control technology to maintain its global leadership position. Positions also exist in Information Services.

Mechanical Engineers at Caterpillar:

Initially work in design, analysis, test, simulation, research and concurrent product and process design. Most opportunities are in drive trains, power systems, and electrohydraulics. Mechanical engineers also hold position in Facilities Engineering, Operations, and Marketing.

Visit our website at www.CAT.com.

An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.
By TIM CASEY
Sports Writer

Venture out to Carrier Field on an afternoon in the fall and the sounds of colliding shoulder pads, screaming coaches and chattering players resonate through the crisp autumn air.

But this week, in preparation for the 107,000 screaming Tennessee fans in Neyland Stadium, Bob Davie and staff decided to add some extra noise to the mix.

Echoing throughout Carrier Field and inside at the Loftus Sports Center are speakers installed to simulate crowd noise. The added noise caught the team's attention, particularly the coaches.

"We have got this crowd noise thing. It is the most irritating thing you have ever heard in your life," Davie said at Tuesday's press conference. "It sounds like some kind of cult type thing, where they are chanting something, so we just try to make it as irritating as we can and those coaches hate me for doing it."

"You can get it so loud that from you to I, we couldn't communicate," Davie added. "We are going to make it as loud as we can. What happens is we disrupt that campus a little bit sometimes. We get some of those professors that hear that thing in the background."

Maybe professors won't mind the added disruption if the Irish are victorious on Saturday.

Facing the defending national champions featuring an offense led by quarterback Tee Martin and tailback Jamal Lewis and a defense ranking sixth in the nation in total defense (yielding 279.3 yards per game), the Irish are in for a tough encounter.

Mix in a raucous crowd and there's no wonder why Davie is concerned.

Davie compares the crowd at Tennessee with a familiar foe from the Southeastern Conference.

"It is that LSU-type atmosphere only with 107,000 people instead of 80,000," Davie said. "Everyone is wearing orange and it is a place where the crowd takes great pride in being a factor in the game. Everyone that I have talked to that have played down there, particularly in a night game, say the people come to life at night."

A key area of concern for a visiting team in Neyland Stadium is communication. In such a hostile environment simple communication like a snap count can be misconstrued.

"The advantage goes to the home team that has won 20 home games in a row. Notre Dame has reason to be excited. But the Irish also know what the Vols have accomplished in the past few years. In addition to winning the national championship last year, Tennessee also won back-to-back SEC titles."

"There is a line of respect there as all of us have for their players and the way they coach and the way they have won and the type of environment that they create in that stadium, there is respect," Davie said. "They are going to make plays. They are going to disrupt you. The crowd is going to be on top of you. You have got to be able to come back and respond."

"But it is also a tremendous opportunity," Davie said. "Our players aren't going to be bashful. If anything, it is going to make them excited to play."
Irish
continued from page 24

We weren’t putting the ball away. We weren’t putting things away. We knew what we had to do.

Streiffer broke the Irish scoring drought in the 57th minute when she blasted a hard shot over the head of Hurricane goalkeeper Elizabeth Swinson.

Jen Grubb passed the ball forward to Meitris Erikson who lofted the ball high across the field to Streiffer. Streiffer’s hard redirection was her 15th goal of the year and 66th of her career.

After Streiffer’s goal the Irish continued their onslaught of shots but could not beat Swinson. For the game, the Irish fired 43 shots on net and Swinson made 17 saves—a new Miami record.

Waldrum was displeased with the effectiveness of his Irish offense but refused to blame the playing conditions.

“The bounce and the skip was a bit hit off but I think the field held up pretty well,” he said. “To get 40 shots on goal and only score five, I think overall we played pretty well but up front I didn’t think we were very sharp.”

The Irish finally started putting the ball in the back of the net with some consistency in the closing 20 minutes of the game.

Irish senior Jenny Heft scored her 73rd career goal in the 74th minute to put the Irish up 3-0. Makinen fired a shot toward the net that deflected off a Miami defender and ruler in front of the net. Heft followed the shot and got behind the defense to beat Swinson from point blank range.

Freshman Ali Lovelace scored the fourth goal of the game less than one minute later. Brown and Streiffer assisted on Lovelace’s first collegiate goal. Streiffer fed Lovelace at the top of the box where the freshman turned on her defender and beat Swinson.

“I am glad it finally came,” Lovelace said about her first collegiate goal. “I have been waiting for awhile.”

While Lovelace’s first goal did not come until the 19th minute of the game, she wasted no time picking up her second as she scored less than 12 minutes later.

Lovelace worked a give-and-go with senior Iris Lancaster just over midfield. After taking the pass from Lovelace, Lancaster fed her streaking toward the net with some consistency for an easy goal to close out the scoring.

Lovelace’s goals were a fitting reward for the hard work and improvement she has shown this year, according to Waldrum.

“I think she responded very well for us,” Waldrum said. “It’s good for her to do it at this time because she has spent some time out there and couldn’t quite find it, couldn’t quite find it. Then to come in here and score two in a play-off game, that was great. Hopefully confidence-wise it will help her. She has really been improving every game that we have put her in.”

Lovelace will get a chance to show more improvement this weekend when the Irish travel to Piscataway, N.J., for the semifinals of the Big East championships against Seton Hall.

The Pirates advanced to the semifinals with a 6-2 over the Orangemen of Syracuse last night.

The other semifinal will feature the Connecticut Huskies against the Boston College Eagles.
CROSS COUNTRY

Big East champ Shay sets sights on NCAA title

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN
Assistant Sports Editor

Junior cross country runner Ryan Shay's full potential as a runner is yet to be determined, but nothing short of an army will stop him from being confident about his future.

An NCAA title is not out of the question, based on his performance to date, nor is a future in the Olympics. "I think that would be a legitimate question to ask after the NCAAs," said head Notre Dame cross country coach Joe Piane about Shay's potential. "He's had a marvelous year, but I think for him the benchmark this year is how well he does at the NCAAs."

Shay finished among the top six in every race this season, bringing home the title in all but one meet, the NCAAs Pre-Nationals. He paved the way for Notre Dame's rise from unranked to No. 8 in the national standings by being the first Irish finisher in each of his meets. Yet he has his eyes on a larger goal — a national cross country championship.

"I have to have the race of my life," Shay said, in order to win the title. "Steve Fein of Oregon is being favored by some to capture the NCAA championship. Shay finished just six seconds behind Fein at Pre-Nationals on an 8K course, and was closing in on Fein toward the end of the race. The NCAA championships will be a 10K course."

"Over 10K, I think those guys are going to get tired, and I'm going to still be feeling good," Shay said. "It matches up pretty close. It's not going to be an easy race. I've got to keep in my head that I can win. I've got to have that mindset. At the worst, I should be in the top 10."

Shay has been a lethal weapon for the Irish in cross country and track throughout his career. His freshman year he won his first two collegiate cross country meets, then went on to finish among the top three Notre Dame runners the rest of the season.

"I didn't realize he was going to be that good that quick," Piane said. "He's totally focused. He lives with blinders on. Nothing's going to interfere with his desire to be an outstanding runner."

International man of running

That year Shay represented the United States at the World Junior Cross Country Championships in Marrakech, where he placed 20th out of 200 competitors. His finish was the best by an American since 1992. It helped lead the U.S. to seventh place as a team, its highest placing since 1988.

"It gave me a taste of international competition and it built my confidence," Shay said. "Whenever I need to think about a good race, I can always think back to the World Junior Championships."

Shay got more than a sample of running at an elite level. He also experienced a very different lifestyle than that of most Americans.

"I learned as much as you can in seven days about the culture," Shay said. "The first night I was there, at four or five in the morning, a siren went off. It sounded like an air raid, but it was the [mosquito] calling the people to pray. It was total culture shock."

Children also approached him following his race, wanting to trade some of their possessions for his cross country uniform, because it had USA written on it.

Shay did not compete for Notre Dame this year. "Steve Fein of Oregon is being favored by some to capture the NCAA championship. Shay finished just six seconds behind Fein at Pre-Nationals on an 8K course, and was closing in on Fein toward the end of the race. The NCAA championships will be a 10K course."

"Over 10K, I think those guys are going to get tired, and I'm going to still be feeling good," Shay said. "It matches up pretty close. It's not going to be an easy race. I've got to keep in my head that I can win. I've got to have that mindset. At the worst, I should be in the top 10."

Shay has been a lethal weapon for the Irish in cross country and track throughout his career. His freshman year he won his first two collegiate cross country meets, then went on to finish among the top three Notre Dame runners the rest of the season.

"I didn't realize he was going to be that good that quick," Piane said. "He's totally focused. He lives with blinders on. Nothing's going to interfere with his desire to be an outstanding runner."

International man of running

That year Shay represented the United States at the World Junior Cross Country Championships in Marrakech, where he placed 20th out of 200 competitors. His finish was the best by an American since 1992. It helped lead the U.S. to seventh place as a team, its highest placing since 1988.

"It gave me a taste of international competition and it built my confidence," Shay said. "Whenever I need to think about a good race, I can always think back to the World Junior Championships."

Shay got more than a sample of running at an elite level. He also experienced a very different lifestyle than that of most Americans.

"I learned as much as you can in seven days about the culture," Shay said. "The first night I was there, at four or five in the morning, a siren went off. It sounded like an air raid, but it was the [mosquito] calling the people to pray. It was total culture shock."

Children also approached him following his race, wanting to trade some of their possessions for his cross country uniform, because it had USA written on it.

Shay did not compete for Notre Dame this year.

see SHAH/page 20

WOMEN'S SOCCER

Irish shut out Hurricanes, advance to semifinals

By MIKE CONNOLLY
Assistant Sports Editor

In biting wind and swirling snow, the No. 6 Notre Dame women's soccer team made the Miami Hurricanes feel very unwelcome on Alumni Field as the Irish advanced to the semifinals of the Big East tournament with a 2-0 win last night.

Junior midfielder Anne Makinen scored the first goal of the year for the Irish in the 13th minute. The American from Helsinki, Finland, headed a corner kick from senior defender Kara Brown into the upper left corner of the net. The goal was Makinen's 12th of the year.

Makinen's goal would be the only score of first half as the Irish entered halftime with just a 1-0 lead. Despite out shooting the Hurricanes 18-4, the Irish could not find the back of the net.

Head coach Randy Waldrum was not pleased with his team's first half play.

"I just got into them," Waldrum described his half-time speech. "I was tired of us coming out in games like this and playing flat. I thought we were setting ourselves up for another game like an Indiana or a Wisconsin where we out shoot team and they only get three or four chances and they score one. I thought we were setting ourselves up for that again." The team shared Waldrum's assessment of the first half play, according to All-American Jenny Streiffer.

"We knew we were doing bad," she said. "We could see what we were doing wrong."

see IRISH/page 22