Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president emeritus, kicked off a discussion series that will begin the celebration of Earth Month 2000 at Notre Dame. He stressed the importance of younger generations in maintaining a delicate balance. "Our generation, I think, has finally gotten the message that the environment is something we need to take care of," said Hesburgh. The preservation of the environment, Hesburgh said, is an immediate, important, definitive decision.

Hesburgh discusses environment

By KIFLIN TURNER

Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president emeritus, kicked off a discussion series that will begin the celebration of Earth Month 2000 at Notre Dame. The series addresses the problems and solutions concerning environmental protection.

"The environment is such an enormous thing — it is the envelope in which we live," said Hesburgh.

He said, "the three great blessings we have are human life and existence" as water, land and air.

Together with the temperate climate, the water supply and the tilt to the sun, Hesburgh stated, "If you set down and planned out a perfect planet, you could not do better." Hesburgh noted that "these conditions do not exist anywhere else as far as we know."

Society poses an increasing threat to clean air, water, and land, said Hesburgh.

"The gift God gave us is a world in equilibrium (eutro), which we are destroying," he said.

According to Hesburgh, if this imbalance persists, and if we do not do something about the greenhouse-effect, we are going to deplete the Earth of its oxygen.

Air, one of the first necessities that Hesburgh mentioned, has come under heavy pressure and is suffering in quality.

"There are so many places on Earth where the air is unbreatheably," Hesburgh said.

The pollution of water sources is the second factor that Hesburgh listed as fundamental to environmental protection.

"We have taken the second biggest requirement on Earth and managed to pollute 97 percent of it," he said.

Preservation of land resources is another essential in maintaining the stability of the environment. The U.S. provides a great proportion of the world's agricultural supply, he said.

"We have the most beautiful farmland on the planet and yet we are constantly taking land out of the agricultural production," said Hesburgh.

Hesburgh identified the rising population as the first in recognizing the importance of environmental awareness and consciousness.

Your generation, I think, has finally gotten the message that the Earth is something we need to take care of," said Hesburgh. The preservation of the environment, Hesburgh said, is an immediate, important, definitive decision.

"There is no single, one item solution to these environmental problems," he said.

"Fortunately this year there were no major controversies where I would have had to make an immediate, important, definitive decision."

Micah Murphy outgoing student body president

"To help the transition go smoothly we have appointed a transition chair," O'Donoghue said. "It's been a fairly smooth process.

Also, Murphy has met with O'Donoghue to answer questions and advise him of people who could help his platform materialize.

"I feel this is where most problems lie — communication among people in the office, with people from administration, and among students in general. We probably could have done a better job up and down the whole communication chain to keep people more informed and receive more information from people."

By LAURA ROMPF

Transition time for student government began April 1 at midnight when Micah Murphy's term as student body president ended and Brian Murphy took over.

Murphy said his term had been both rewarding and educational.

"Personally this year there were no major controversies where I would have had to make an immediate, important, definitive decision," he said. "However, I hope that we made improvements in the quality of the student experience here on campus."

Murphy also hopes several programs his administration constructed, such as SafeHill, have improved the lives of Notre Dame students.

"We made several positive changes such as the extension of SafeHill's hours, and based on the rider-ship this past weekend, these hours suit the students better," Murphy said.

Murphy said his administration also helped to increase student involvement in sporting activities.

"We worked on athletics, especially with Midnight Madness and the basketball student section. Once again, the student section is now back up and running. Also student season tickets for hockey are now available.

Another goal of the Murphy administration was to increase the voice of the students.

"Finally we have helped to get more student representation on University committees such as CUC, First Year of Studies and the Student Disability committee," Murphy said. "This is also the focus of the Board of Trustee's report in May. We looked at several committees where students were either not represented at all or were underrepresented.

Although O'Donoghue has been in office less than a week, his administration has laid groundwork to work for the same fulfillment of campaign promises that Murphy's strove for.

"There is no single, one item which is first on our agenda. We are launching several different projects at once to ensure they go into effect as soon as possible."

O'Donoghue said, "Structurally we have just finished selecting our staff and setting the budget. Now it is time to go forward and start working."

The current transition period between the two administrations should be smooth because both parties are working together.

"To help the transition go smoothly we have appointed a transition chair," O'Donoghue said. "It's been a fairly smooth process."

Also, Murphy has met with O'Donoghue to answer questions and advise him of people who could help his platform materialize.

BOG to sponsor O’Laughlin seat in memory of Kristi Morris

By SARAH RYKOWSKI
Saint Mary’s News Editor

Nancy Midden, outgoing student body president, came to the Board of Governance meeting for one last time Tuesday to request a sponsorship.

"In memory of Kristi Morris, I was thinking of purchasing a seat (in her name) in O’Laughlin, sponsored by Saint Mary’s student government,” Midden said.

Morris, a senior at Saint Mary’s, died in a car accident last March 11. BOG approved the motion unanimously.

Student body president Crissie Berman announced at the meeting that Molly Kahn would be the new student trustee for Saint Mary’s. Amanda Spira will replace Kahn as the incoming Executive Board secretary, leaving her position as mission commissioner open.

Michelle Nagle, student body vice president, reviewed the situation surrounding the projected constitutional oversight committee.

"Angie Little, the outgoing executive vice president and SAB president and I have been discussing the constitutional oversight committee. The meeting will be delayed for a couple of weeks," Nagle said.

She said the delay was needed to raise awareness about the committee.

Meredith Sonnycalb, the incoming Saint Mary’s representative, introduced the actions of last week’s Senate meeting. She said the biggest issue under consideration was the revision of Notre Dame’s Student Union constitution.

"The Senate is discussing the creation of a permanent seat for SMC in the constitution," Sonnycalb said. "Hopefully it passes."

Kahn explained Convergence 2000 to the Board, an event set for April 28-30, which is the same weekend that many groups will be on campus, including the Madalena Society, Parents Council and prospective students for Spring Day on Fairyhill.

"I wish I had the words to express what and phenomenal event this is," Kahn said. "People around the globe are actually coming to this. It will really be an opportunity to get a global perspective."

Sixteen noted female theologians have each given a Madalena lecture in past years, including Saint Mary’s own Gail Mandell. The scholars will gather at the College in honor of the jubilee to lecture, teach and discuss issues with students.

In other BOG news:

• Residence Hall Council elections are set for April 13 in Saint Mary’s dining hall. There will be another informational meeting today at 8:30 p.m. in 303 Haggar.

• Interviews for the Diversity Board will be Wednesday and Thursday. Appointments will be made next week.

SMC appoints 2000-01 student body trustee

By NELLIE WILLIAMS
News Writer

Molly Kahn was recently appointed the Saint Mary’s student trustee for the 2000-2001 year.

"This is a very unique opportunity," Kahn said. "Very few colleges have this position. It’s a lot of fun. We’re lucky as a college."

The responsibility of a student trustee is to be a liaison between the student body, Saint Mary’s and the Board of Trustees. All juniors are invited to apply for the position. A committee reviews the applications, interviews and then makes a recommendation. Marcella Eldred, Saint Mary’s president, helps make the final decision of who is chosen.

"Very few students are interested in the Board of Trustees. Most schools, including Notre Dame, do not have the position," Kahn said.

Kahn feels it is important for the Trustees to be aware of the needs of the student body. "I think there needs to be a continued education between the Board and students," she said. "It’s important to get students involved and let them know what is going on with decisions that will affect them and their institution."

With the College’s Master Plan just getting started, Kahn said she feels it is important to be able to communicate effectively to the Board what student life is really like.

As a freshman, Kahn was on the freshman class board and as a sophomore, chairs sophomore parents week. She is also an orientation counselor coordinator, served on the judicial board and a chairwoman in VISA (Volunteer in Service of America). Kahn also served as Board of Governance mission commissioner.

"I’m really honored. I think it’s a wonderful opportunity to serve the student body," she said. "Communication is the most important aspect and I’ll be an open line to voice student concerns."

Kahn is inheriting the position from Manuela Hernandez.

"requires a study, a dedication, and requires a virtue of stewardship."

Despite current problems, the future of environmental awareness looks bright, according to Hesburgh.

"Somehow, we can create a whole generation of people like yourselves to become models and send out leaders that face the enormous prob­lem of the human race."

Hesburgh said. Containing twenty lakes, rivers and ancient forest, 13 chosen lake-dwelling tribes will have the opportunity to study the environment.

"We have a wonderful lab with all the latest technology," said Hesburgh. As a member of the National Science Foundation Board, Hesburgh helped to establish the atmospheric research lab in Boulder, Colorado, but noted that the immediate sur­roundings of the facility were highly polluted.

Hesburgh noted that the facility has "every kind of flora and fauna," and that together with the Wisconsin Conservation, the program can continue to preserve the research station.

"It is a wonderful atmosphere—the clean air and the fresh rain," Hesburgh said.

"When recalling his own personal retreats at Land O' Lakes, Hesburgh spoke of the peace the region offers."

"I talk with great enthusiasm because it is what has kept me sane. When worse comes to worse, I can speak up to the cabin."

Hesburgh also elaborated on his involvement in the Search for Extra-Terrestrial Intelligence (SETI). Hesburgh summarized the vastness of the universe, which may include possible life forms.

"It represents God's material creation. If God created that much material creation, who is to tell God, who created that much beauty in the world, that there are only two kinds of spiritual creation?" he said.

Hesburgh listed the existence of the soul and angels as the two types of spiritual creation.

"God is omnipotent—he can do anything," added Hesburgh.

keep the image that you can still be a regular person and be involved in student government. Ideally there can be a balance between academics, extra-curric­ular activities and a social life."

Murphy said.

"Remember that you are a student; do not take yourself or your job too seriously. This will be the best year of your life—you get to meet many new, great people. You are given many privileges, but with these privileges comes responsibilities. Remember why you are here and who you are serving. Most of all, have fun!"

O'Donoghue said he has learned from the Murphy admin­istration and will use the lessons during his term as stu­dent president. Keeping the current programs and making some changes.

"Michael and Micah started a lot of great programs which we will continue," O'Donoghue said.

"However, we have unique initia­tives we'd like to see performed for the students."

"We are striving for a rebirth of the Student Union," he said. "The Notre Dame student body has always had the ability to change the world. Next April it will no longer be a possibility but a prob­ability."

Although Murphy's term is over and he is reflecting on the past year, his words echo O'Donoghue's thoughts as he looks toward the future year.

"I'd like to be remembered as someone who could identify with the students and was able to make this place a little better from when I inherited it," Murphy said. "I hope I served other students and hopefully made a few small changes that will last decades here on campus for the benefit of the student body."

"I wouldn't trade this experience for anything," he said.

O'Donoghue's said he anticip­ates the same sentiments as Murphy.

"Hopefully life will be better for us having been here," he said. "Our goals are to build community, to serve the students in any way possible, and give them the opportunity to do great things and they will. We believe in the students and we're just here to help them realize their full poten­tial."
Scientists: Volcano dangerous, close to eruption

DATE: JAPAN

As sun set Tuesday on Mount Usu, clouds of thick black smoke poured from one of its gaping craters, and scientists warned that a massive eruption could be brewing.

Hokkaido, Japan's fourth largest island, broke its 22-year spell of quiet when a huge ash plume belched from its flanks, and magma is straining upward against the mountain's skin. Hokkaido University geologist Tadahide Ui said he and other experts have seen signs of a developing "lava dome" — a cone-shaped mass of magma that nudges its way through the Earth's crust.

"We will have another eruption," Ui said. "I think it is only a matter of time."

Love Canal demolition razes elementary school

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y.

Demolition began Tuesday of the final concrete reminder of one of the nation's worst disasters, the toxic Love Canal neighborhood in western New York.

With the outbreak of construction crews this week, all that will remain of the 150 homes razed will be a hollow site along the Niagara River.

Right to prayer in Capitol upheld by judge

WASHINGTON

A federal judge upheld a Maryland preacher's First Amendment right to pray inside the U.S. Capitol as a "job" and education will plunge the country back into the hyperinflation of the 1980s.

"We will continue these [aid] programs while we begin to generate jobs," Toledo promised the crowd of 3,000 supporters and curious onlookers.

Shaken by the rejection of its people's power, Serbia and NATO peacekeepers since a tense situation to U.S. peacekeepers.

"Send El Chino back to Japan," his supporters in Cajamarca chanted, using Fujimori's nickname, which means "the Chinaman," and referring to his Asian features and Japanese ancestry.

For months a clear favorite to win, was still leading in late March with 37 percent, according to the survey, which had a margin of error of 2.5 percentage points.

But Toledo's recent surge in popularity has shaken the 61-year-old's chances for an outright majority and pollsters are suddenly talking about a showdown between the candidates in a second round runoff.

"Toledo's campaign has capitalized on his dark, Indian features and his background as one of 16 children born in a humble Indian bricklayer and his wife in a remote Andean village.

"We've already seen in the last 10 years what Fujimori's government can do. Now we need someone new," the 33-year-old said, peering over the crowd.

Adjacent of charges of government-sponsored harassment and political sabotage, Toledo has made a recent, surprising break from the policies of his previous contender, rushing in the single digits in election polls.

According to a poll released March 24 by the private firm Apoyo, Toledo was in second place with 27 percent — up 10 percent a month earlier.

Soldiers, Serbs hurt in Kosovo melee

Kosovo Serb attack on the arrest of a Serb for allegedly throwing stones at NATO peacekeepers, leading to a clash on Tuesday in a southeastern mountain region near the Macedonian border.

At the Pentagon, the Department of Defense was asked whether U.S. military personnel had been injured.

Witzins said the most serious injury to U.S. troops was a broken hand. A U.S. military spokesman in Kosovo, Capt. Russell Berg, said the other injuries were contusions and abrasions.

It was the highest number of injuries in a single incident to NATO peacekeepers since a tense situation in the enclave of Kosovska Mitrovica calmed down last month.

The NATO force is devoted largely to policing and disarming militiamen. But nine months after NATO's 78-day bombing campaign forced an end to the Serb crackdown in Kosovo, and the pullout of Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic's forces, new violence in the region has thwarted efforts to establish normality in the province.

According to the U.S. statement, the trouble started when American military police and police soldiers of the 18th Air Assault Battalion seized two hand grenades in a Serbian house in the village of Krupac, about 40 miles south of Pristina.

Gregoritch predicts tragic consequences from nuclear war

By KRISTEN FITZPATRICK
News Writer

The medical effects of worldwide nuclear warfare would bring immediate and long-lasting tragic effects, said Dr. Steven Gregoritch in a lecture Tuesday.

"Warfare has never been the same since the advent of the nuclear bomb," he said.

He stressed the harmful medical effects a nuclear war would have on the world's population. Gregoritch explained the different types of nuclear bombs and the radiation that are produced by each. In the bombing of Hiroshima, the death toll after the first day totaled 45,000 with 91,000 injured, mostly from second and third degree burns sustained from the immense radiation such bombs produce.

The statistics are even more frightening for a hypothetical worldwide nuclear war between America and another nuclear power. Conservative estimates predict between two and 20 million deaths in the U.S. in a limited nuclear war and 20 to 160 million in an all-out nuclear war. The world would experience 1-2 billion deaths in a few weeks with more than four billion in 12 months.

The immediate cause of death for those in the target area would be the 180 mph winds that throw normally harmless debris into the air at extremely high velocities, slamming and impaling those who are hit, said Gregoritch. Also, the temperature at ground zero can reach temperatures of more than 2000 degrees Celsius.

"It doesn't matter if you are in your bomb shelter or not," he said. "At that temperature, you are either going to die of asphyxiation because of the lack of oxygen or you will be cremated from the immense heat associated with this type of explosion."

He said that people even 10-15 miles away from the bomb explosion experience adverse effects the instant the bomb explodes. These include loss of eyesight from witnessing the intense light emitted when the bomb is set off and second and third degree burns that occur when clothing lights on fire and skin burns.

The even more serious effect of a nuclear bomb is the "fallout" that occurs when the explosion sends radioactive particles thousands of feet into the air, where they gradually fall to earth, sometimes thousands of miles from the blast. This radiation energy causes most of the long-term effects such as the effects on a person's DNA which cause it to mutate or prevent it from being able to be copied during replication.

Gregoritch stressed the importance of disabling nuclear bombs and ensuring that this type of catastrophe never happens.

Gregoritch graduated from the University of California-Berkeley with degrees in nuclear and electrical engineering. As a graduate student in physical chemistry at Notre Dame, he worked in the radiation laboratory and earned his doctorate in chemistry in 1984. He graduated from Indiana University Medical School in 1986 and completed his training in both internal medicine and radiation oncology.

Gregoritch currently practices radiation oncology at St. Joseph Regional Medical Center. He also serves as a physician for the Indiana National Guard.

Gregoritch's lecture, part of the South Bend Center for Medical Education's mini-medical school taking place this week, was titled "Life in a Nuclear War: Averting a Medical Catastrophe."
Bravo: Women must continue struggle for equality

By COLLEEN MCCARTHY

The Observer

Even in high-paying jobs, women earn substantially less than men. Among women executives of Fortune 500 companies, women earn only 68 percent of what their male counterparts earn, female surgeons earn 77 percent of what male surgeons earn, "education does make a difference, but among women with four-year college degrees, they were earning only 56 percent of what male college graduates with a bachelor's degree earn," said Bravo.

Bravo revealed why she believes women are paid less than men. "I'm going to tell you a secret," she said. "Women earn so little money because employers pay them so little. Why do employers do this? Because they can." In the past, women were paid less than men because it was thought that they didn't need to make as much money because they had a man to support them, Bravo said. However, she emphasized the need to revalue jobs that are traditionally held by women in order to lessen the pay gap.

"Why do child care workers earn poverty level wages?" asked Bravo. "They earn these poor wages because they are doing in the workplace what women do for free in the home.

Men are not hurt by women receiving equal pay, said Bravo. "Most men don't lose when women get equal pay," she said. "In fact, families benefit." Bravo also indicated that reports of sexual harassment to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) have tripled, but the agency's budget has not. The EEOC was set up to handle sexual harassment and discrimination claims by the 1964 Civil Rights Act. "Many women who call the "9 to 5: 800 number have said "stop" to the person who is harassing them or have reported it to management," said Bravo. "The problem is women often don't have the power to make it stop. It is up to employers to set consequences for sexual harassment."

The sexual harassment cases that make the news are anomalies because few cases actually settle for millions of dollars in favor of the plaintiff, said Bravo. "Most sexual harassment incidents aren't reported and most cases that are don't go to court or are handled internally," said Bravo. "This happens because many victims of sexual harassment can't afford an attorney. When they do go to court, they usually don't end up seeing a dime of money and it's a very upsetting, emotional process.

Bravo also advocated policies to help employees balance work and families. "There is a syndrome that I refer to called 'Those who get the good jobs better have a wife at home,'" said Bravo. "This is because if you want to advance in many companies, you have to be willing to move, travel and put in the face time."

Although she said the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 is a step in the right direction, it does not allow for paid leave, and many cannot afford to use the leave. In addition, the Act covers only half the workforce because it applies to companies with 50 or more employees and a person has to have worked at the company for one year.

"By putting in place family-friendly policies in the workplace, we have to understand that it's good for society to have people taking care of families," said Bravo. For all our family value rhetoric in this country, we really don't value families.

In order to make changes, people must organize, said Bravo.

Holtz marches against Confederate flag

Associated Press

Wells, S.C.

Two college football's best-known coaches marched Tuesday to say the Confederate flag should be lowered from South Carolina's Statehouse.

"We're trying to do our part to get their attention," said Fogler, who was one of the first coaches to speak out against the flag in the Civil War centennial, then in 1995 gave itself the sole power to lower it, has not been able to compromise on what to do with the banner.

"I felt it was important to be here. It's just one person expressing one opinion that the flag needs to come down," Fogler said.

Robert Howerth, a professor of ecology and environmental biology at Cornell University, and the panel chairman.

While nitrogen and phosphorus occur in nature and are critical to support plant life in marine environments, too much of the nutrients causes an excessive growth of phytoplankton and other organisms, which deprive fish and other marine life, including plants, of oxygen. That causes marine life to die or be driven away.

Algae blooms caused by an overabundance of nutrients — specifically, excessive nitrogen from agricultural fertilizers or poultry waste — have been linked to a decline of fisheries, the death of manatees and the loss of coral reefs and sea grasses, the panel said.

Algae blooms have been blamed for years for the so-called dead zone in the Gulf of Mexico along the Louisiana and Texas coast. Large amounts of nutrients flowing from the Farm Belt into and down the Mississippi River have caused the massive dead zone — the size of New Jersey — each spring in the Gulf of Mexico. Scientists estimated the amount of nitrogen and phosphorus in the river from the Gulf has tripled, and the amount of phosphorus doubled, in the past 40 years.

Nitrogen blooms also have been linked to a microbial called pfiesteria that has killed fish in tributaries of the Chesapeake Bay and off the Carolinas.

The report by the Academy's National Research Council said that nitrogen and phosphorus pollution is causing environmental damage among almost all of the nation's estuaries, with severe problems identified in 44 of the 139 coastal areas examined.

"Excess nitrogen in our coastal waters starts a dangerous chain of ecological events that is exacerbating harmful algal blooms such as red tides, contaminating shellfish, killing coastal wildlife, reducing biodiversity, destroying sea grass and contributing to a host of other environmental problems," warned Howerth.

Because rivers often transport chemical nutrients hundreds of miles from inland farmland and urban centers, the most severe problem areas, according to the report, are where rivers and bays feed water into the ocean.

Severe problem areas, where there were symptoms of low oxygen levels, toxic algae blooms and loss of submerged aquatic vegetation, were found along the coasts of nine states: Washington, California, Louisiana, Texas, Florida, North Carolina, Maryland, New York and Massachusetts.

The most severe problems were reported in the mid-Atlantic states and the Gulf of Mexico, the report said.

"Our nation's coastal estuaries — from excessive use of fertilizers to the burning of fossil fuels — have caused the amount of nitrogen in the environment to more than double since the 1960s. The wide use of synthetic fertilizers account for much of the growth, but other sources are animal waste, including chicken and hog manure, discharges from wastewater treatment plants and the burning of fossil fuels.

"In recent years, man has changed the environment in ways that will last a long time," said Fogler of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, a tourist boycott of South Carolina.
LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Making a difference with student support

First and foremost, we would like to extend our thanks and gratitude to Michael Palumbo, Micah Murphy and the entire 1999-2000 Office of the President staff for all of their hard work, determination and many accomplishments. Michael, Micah and the Office staff have set a precedent of excellence that we can only hope to duplicate.

We would also like to thank the students of the University of Notre Dame for supporting our campaign and granting us the opportunity to serve this University that we all hold so closely to our hearts. We are your chosen representatives, but it is only with you that we can work toward making Notre Dame a better place.

Our hope and goal is to make life a little easier for every Notre Dame student. It is our philosophy that the Office of the President exists to listen, to address and to advocate the needs of the student body. We believe that the Student Union can make a difference in the everyday life of each Notre Dame student, and it will be our mission to turn this belief into reality.

We have only two favors to ask of the student body. We need all Notre Dame students to voice their concerns to us and the Office of the President. The staffs to our office will always be open and we are ready and willing to listen to your thoughts and problems. Also, we ask you to have some confidence in our ability to develop a solution to our collective student problems. The Notre Dame family prides itself upon its togetherness. A problem that affects one student, affects us all. Knowing that the student body has confidence in our ability to affect positive change for this campus will encourage, enlighten and inspire our Office.

We work guided by a philosophy of only one word — "believe." We believe in the Notre Dame student body — the amazing people that they are and the great things that they are going to do. Father Berin believed the University of Notre Dame would "become a force for good in this country." The Student Union can and will reflect the mission of our founder during this administration.

Napster has no legitimate use

In his letter, Peter Godlewski complained about the University cutting off its access to Napster and other peer-to-peer file-sharing programs that allow people to steal intellectual property at will. Had he bothered to read the whole message the University sent out, he would have seen this for himself. Even granting that Napster doesn't pose a security risk to the network, the other deleterious effects it has are more than enough to justify banishing it.

Godlewski claimed that the University can afford to expand its bandwidth capacity, so banning Napster on that ground made sense. Let's review: what would Notre Dame do with its resources: buy more bandwidth so that Napster use fits into which we have no legitimate use? 10 percent of capacity, or ban it outright? That's a hard call. You can't honestly expect Notre Dame to subsidize copyright infringement.

Godlewski opined that Napster is a single most useful program for college students. So what? That's not illegal. Strictly speaking, that's true. Neither is beer, by itself. It's WHAT YOU DO WITH IT that matters. Copying music files without permission of the copyright holder is simply not legal. When you buy a CD, you say the rights to personally enjoy that copy of it. You DO NOT get to do whatever you want with it. This point is not only unarguable.

Those of us who use the network for legitimate reasons should not have to wait for our information to squeeze through the Napster traffic.

More education needed around acquaintance rape

Imagine my surprise when I picked up the Observer yesterday (Monday, April 3) and saw the article on the front page: "ND Police: Woman reported rape in dorms." While rapes and sexual assaults have always occurred on the campuses of Notre Dame, Saint Mary's and Holy Cross, they are never talked about — much less printed in the paper. This is a disturbing feature on our campuses — we as women are never informed when assaults occur, and so sadly, there are women walking around with a false sense of safety.

There are students who think that rape and sexual assault are just dirty words — and things that happen at other schools. This is not the case. Rapes happen at Notre Dame. Women in their mid-twenties are three and a half times more likely to be a victim of a sex crime than women in their late teens. Also, women in their late teens are three times more likely to be a victim of rape or attempted rape by the time they are in their mid-twenties. Also, victims know their assailant.

I respect the victim's feelings — there is no doubt for a reason. We as women are never informed of this risk and that these things do occur. At atrocious as such a crime remains no matter where it occurs, it is only more tragic in an environment that we strive to call "home." No less tragic, however, is the travesty with which such a crime is ignored. I respect the victim's feelings — there is no doubt for a reason. Legal measures should be pursued in rape cases

I am writing regarding the rape that occurred on campus on March 25. I am a 1998 graduate of Saint Mary's College and now work as a victim advocate for victims of domestic violence.

I am very disturbed that a student can rape or assault another student without anyone knowing his name. Unfortunately, the key to identity lies in the hands of the victim. No one can ever know the victim who has suffered, but as a victim advocate I understand the pain the victim goes through. Whatever the victim is, I hope you are reading this. I am an advocate. I feel shame, but you shouldn't. You have done nothing wrong. You just happened to be in the right place at the wrong time. That is not a crime, and you should not be ashamed, not you.

I realize that this is a hard time for you, but you should know this person will get away with this heinous crime. I am sure that you do not want anyone else to suffer the way you are suffering right now. The only way to ensure that this person does not rape someone else is to pursue criminal charges.

You may feel that this will be too hard to do at this point, but you really should for your sake and for the sake of any other women with whom this alleged rapist may have contact in the future. It is natural to be scared and just want to forget about the whole incident, but criminal charges must be pursued.

There are services to help you in the community. I hope that you are already working with the Rape Crisis and Counseling Services. You do not have to deal with this crime alone. If you press charges, you will have a victim advocate from the Rape Crisis and Counseling Services help you through the criminal justice system and you will remain anonymous.

I know from my experience that women often feel ashamed like they are being re-victimized when they go through the system, but they also know that this must be done. Please consider pressing criminal charges for your sake. Feel free to contact me at BarbaraAnn@hotmail.com.

Community responds to alleged rape incident

Student Affairs must take action

Some people may call me a critic, but I am also a student at this University. As such, I have a responsibility to this school like I have to any other institution for which I am a part — community, church, family. There are many responsibilities one owes to oneself/himself and one's respective environment, all of which are disturbed by the rape of a Notre Dame student by an "acquaintance." I will not treat this situation like anything other than what it is — a tragedy. I cannot begin to express my sympathy for the victim who undoubtedly feels horribly violated, not just for the way she was treated, but also for the betrayal by a trusted friend.

As atrocious as such a crime remains no matter where it occurs, it is only more tragic in an environment that we strive to call "home." No less tragic, however, is the travesty with which such a crime is ignored. I respect the victim's feelings — there is no doubt for a reason. We as women are never informed of this risk and that these things do occur. In a "home," this incident involved a violation of school policy. Student Affairs were informed.

According to the U.S. Department of Justice, 1 in 4 women will be a victim of rape or attempted rape by the time they are in their mid-twenties. Also, women in their late teens are three and a half times more likely to be a victim of a sex crime than the rest of the general population.

What does this mean? The women on these three campuses are those most likely to be at risk, and we are not even being informed of this risk and that these things do occur. My heart goes out to the victim of this most recent rape. Her pain and confusion is probably at an all-time high right now — after not only knowing she and probably trusted violated her, in the most extreme way. Her situation is not uncommon — it is as disturbing feature on our campuses — we as women are never informed of this risk and that these things do occur. In a "home," this incident involved a violation of school policy. Student Affairs were informed.

"Always remember that it was not your fault. Nothing you did, said or were wearing gave anyone the right to rape you. IT WAS NOT YOUR FAULT — and don't let anyone tell you it was.

Remember that you are not alone now, and you don't have to go through this on your own. Reach out for help, and someone will be there to take your hand — someone was there to take mine.

Lewis is a special place to many Notre Dame students, both past and present. It is not unusual for alumni to return "home" to Lewis to reminisce about the days when they played intramural sports together, sat in the hallways talking till all hours of the night or celebrate mass together. Devlin put it best when she said, "I can't ever imagine leaving Lewis. That's why I don't think I'll ever will... EVER." Lewis from convent to chickens By MEG REYNERS Nov 16

In the 1960s, a convent was built on the edge of Notre Dame campus to house the Sisters of the Holy Cross who were graduate students at the University. Lewis Hall served as a convent for the nuns and their meager belongings. Yet, the introduction of female undergraduates to Notre Dame in 1972 brought about a need for increased housing. Lewis Hall was shortly thereafter transformed into a female dormitory. The home of nearly 300 undergraduate women, Lewis, as people know it today, is a far cry from the Lewis of the Sisters of the Holy Cross. Many people on campus fall to make their way to Lewis, mainly because they are unaware of exactly where it is. When asked about Lewis' location, freshmen resident Frances Devlin noted, "No other campus has a building housing 300 girls that 99 percent of the male student body can't find." In reality, there are many advantages to Lewis' placement on campus. Situated on St. Joseph's Lake, the Lewis Chickens are able to enjoy a view of campus which most dorms are not afforded. Residents find themselves close to the Grotto, the Basilica, the Health Center, North Dining Hall, St. Michael's Laundry and the Administration Building to be helpful landmark when making one's way back to the dorm after a long night. Due to its location behind the Administration Building, it is said that Lewis Hall is the only residence hall on campus on which Mary can afford to turn her back. Yet, it is not just a long walk that separates Lewis from other residence halls on campus. Lewis has been the proud recipient of the "Hall of the Year" award twice in the past four years. It is recognized as a dorm built on enthusiasm, athletic talent, leadership, generosity and a sense of dorm unity that is unsurpassed by that of other residence halls. While many dorms on campus compare themselves to fraternalities or sororities, most of the Lewis Chickens see their dorm as a home. The family-like element is what makes Lewis Hall such a special place. "I've never had a sister before. It was kind of neat to come to college and find 300 of them," said freshman Katie Logisz. Beth Willkom, a sophomore, touched on this same idea, "Sometimes when I am returning to school from breaks I tell my mom that I am going home. Gosh, sometimes that one doesn't go over too well, but it's so true!" Sister Annette George, the rector of Lewis Hall, agreed. She noted the fact that Lewis isn't located on a quad with its social space. This provides Lewisites with opportunities to bond with one another and to grow together as a community. Lewis' Hall Staff makes much of this unity possible as well, playing an active role in the lives of the residents. Lewis' residents definitely do not play a passive role on campus. Rather, they make their presence known in many different activities — in the playing fields, in student government, doing service work, participating in campus liturgies and playing in the band, to name a few. "It's all about the poultry power," said Kate Logan. Most recently, the Chicks were busy with events for Camp Lewis Week. Lewis' spirit week leading up to the well-known Lewis Crush Dance. These activities, and many of the events sponsored by Lewis, are made possible by the collaboration and effort between a strong hall council and a supportive hall staff. Co-presidents Jon Casswell and Lisa W aiter attributed much of Lewis' success this year to the participation of the freshmen class. "Lewis had more freshmen than any other hall this year and their enthusiasm and involvement really helped with everything we were able to do as a dorm," the co-presidents said. Another unique aspect of Lewis is the strong sense of Lewisites to come together and to grow further as a community. Lewis is from convent to chickens.

"Wonderland" is a compelling addition to ABC

By MATT NANNIA

Premiering last Thursday at 10 p.m., ABC's gritty "Wonderland" is a welcome addition to an otherwise lackluster season of television. The one-hour drama takes place in Riverview Hospital, a psychiatric and emergency ward in New York City. "Wonderland," which has been highly touted by its network, has been advertised as the best alternative to "ER," which it faces on a weekly basis. It's got an interesting pedigree, with show creator Peter Berg serving as both writer and director of the first episode. It also comes with a fair amount of controversy attached. A number of organizations have protested the show's depiction of mental illness, saying it emphasizes the violent and reinforces negative stereotypes. But Berg (last seen on "Chicago Hope") and his writers, who spent months researching real-life psychiatrists and their patients at similar institutions, shot in documentary style and using shaky-camera feel from "NYPD Blue," "Wonderland" is indeed a cross between "NYPD Blue" and its head-to-head competitor "ER." Shot on location in New York City, the series drives into the lives of both the staff and the patients they help. The cast is outstanding. The first episode alone contained some of the best acting in recent memory. Ted Levine ("Heat," "Silence of the Lambs"), as the head forensic psychiatrist, convincingly conveys a man both deeply involved with his patients as well as struggling to maintain custody over his two young sons. Martin Donovan ("The Opposite of Sex") is convincing as Dr. Neil Harrison, a psychiatrist who deals with patients who have committed crimes. The series also stars Billy Burke, a young, good-looking psychiatrist who is, of course, the show's commitment-phobic brooding guy — a role better played by George Clooney during his early years on "ER." Series regulars Michael Jai White ("Tyson," "Spawn"), a young trauma specialist, and Joelle Carter, the intern, did not make an appearance in the first episode — a fact indicating just what kinds of risks the series is willing to take.

ABC's new series, "Wonderland," examines the lives of doctors in a New York hospital. The show stars (from the left) Billy Burke, Ted Levine, Michael Jai White, Joelle Carter, Michelle Forbes and Martin Donovan. Though competing with the popular "ER," "Wonderland" promises a solid show that delivers great acting.

RecSports "Champion Student Award" recipients are selected by the Office of Recreational Sports. Honorees are chosen for their involvement in RecSports, including excellence in sportsmanship, leadership and participation.

Michael Rizzo, a native of Lyndhurst, NJ, lettered in football, basketball and baseball at Lyndhurst High School. Rizzo, a senior finance major, currently resides off-campus. While at Notre Dame, he has participated in several different RecSports events. Most notably he was a member of the Morrissey IH baseball team that won back to back championships in 1998 & 1999. He was also a key performer on the Manor’s basketball and softball teams. He did more than just "play" during his four years here at Notre Dame. He has been an extremely valuable asset as a baseball umpire, a men's "A" league basketball official and a quality flag football official. His knowledge, hustle, confidence and genuine love for competitive sports enabled him to excel in this capacity.

Hamilton stays with winning Miami team

Associated Press

Leonard Hamilton led the Miami Hurricanes to their third consecutive NCAA tournament and their first appearance in the round of 16 this season.

Now the Hurricanes want more, and they're willing to pay for it.

Hamilton signed a seven-year contract Tuesday, keeping him at Miami at least through the 2006-07 season. He is expected to nearly double the $400,000 he made last season.

"He's doing all right," Miami athletic director Paul Dee said. "He's doing a lot better now than he was before."

The 51-year-old Hamilton had been mentioned as a candidate for coaching vacancies at Georgia Tech and Nebraska.

"I've never had any other intentions of doing anything else other than coaching at the University of Miami," he said. "It's always been my dream, and I'm excited about this opportunity."

Miami is trying to break ground on the $40 million Ryder Center, a 9,000-seat arena that Hamilton hopes will help build tradition, improve recruiting and increase student and community interest.

School administrators foresee construction starting as soon as the summer.

"I would like very much to have an opportunity to be the coach when we move into the new arena," Hamilton said. "I want to really look back 10 or 15 years from now and be able to say with some level of pride that I was able to contribute to helping build something special."

This is more than having a good basketball team and winning games.

Hamilton began coaching as a graduate assistant at Austin Peay in 1971. He took an assistant job at Kentucky in 1974 and became the associate head coach there in 1980.

He got his first head coaching job at Oklahoma State six years later and spent four years with the Cowboys before coming to Miami in 1990.

The Hurricanes won a share of the Big East regular-season title this season, their first in school history. Hamilton's accomplishments are remarkable considering he has done that with little support and even less talent.

In 10 years at Miami, Hamilton has one player in the NBA (tradecode Tim James of the Miami Heat), has had two players drafted (James and Constantion Popa) and has had only four All Big East-Conference selections (James, Popa, Johnny Hemsley and Martin Ibiand).

"Our goal is to bring a program to Coral Gables that will be a national power and contend for the national title on a consistent basis," Hamilton said. "How far away are we from that? I don't know. That's the direction we're trying to move in."

The Northwestern University College Preparation Program is looking for Counselors to work this summer. We're installing "Big Sites" to help guide high school students from around the nation through a summer of learning and fun at Northwestern.

Woods regards attention lightly, not intimidated in tour

Associated Press

If anyone in the Masters is intimidated by Tiger Woods, take heart. There was a time when even Woods, the No. 1 player in the world, found himself in awe of another player and wondered whether he was good enough to win.

"I was 11 years old," he said Tuesday.

Woods said he was paired with a 12-year-old in a junior tournament when they came to a 290-yard par 4. The big kid drove the green, and tiny Tiger took a gulp.

"I was taken back by that and felt there was no way I could compete," he said. He wound up beating him that day, and came away with a valuable lesson.

"There's no point being intimidated on the golf course," Woods said. "I know what I can accomplish. I know what I can do on the golf course. I know the shots I can pull off, and I've got to believe I can do it." Woods has made a believer out of just about everyone lately.

He arrived at Augusta National as a heavy favorite to win his second green jacket in four years, and for good reason.

Woods has won 10 times since the last Masters. No one else has won more than twice, while David Duval, Ernie Els and Davis Love III have combined to win nothing.

And the most daunting performance of all is that Woods has finished first or second in 10 of his 11 events.

Perhaps that's why Woods didn't even blink when someone asked him how it affected his preparation for the Masters knowing he was the guy everyone was watching.

"People are talking about that every week I play," he said. "That hasn't changed. You become the center of attention when you're playing well." One thing that has changed is the course.

They moved a couple of tee boxes back 25 yards and grew rough for the first time last year, which looks more like peach fuzz compared to the U.S. Open but is still enough of a nuisance to lower the scoring.

"You can't go out there and take driving for granted like you used to around here," Woods said. "You have different angles. It's going to be quite a challenge." That was never more evident than late Tuesday afternoon, when six-time Masters champion Jack Nicklaus and Greg Norman, playing in his 20th Masters, stood on the 11th tee and tried to figure out where to hit their drives.

Showing them the way was 19-year-old Aaron Baddeley, the Australian amateur who has been coming to Augusta for, oh, about a week now.

"The changes might not look important from the outside, but when you're playing the course, it's quite different," said defending champion Jose Maria Olazabal.

Among the harshest critics is Phil Mickelson, who is coming off a playoff victory over Gary Nicklaus in Atlanta.

"I don't think it's the place of anybody who can't break 90 to be changing the golf course from those original designs," he said.

Woods has made a believer that Tiger can do it.

Finley, Dallas squeak past Webber-less Sacramento

Associated Press

Tuesday night. Points and converted two key free throws with 15.4 seconds left as the Dallas Mavericks beat the Sacramento Kings 105-102. Finley, Dallas squeak past Webber-less Sacramento.

The Kings were without leading scorer and rebounder Chris Webber, held out as he rested a strained left hamstring. Webber suffered the injury in the second half of Tuesday's victory over Philadelphia and is listed as day-to-day.

Carlos Williams' 20 points paced the Kings, who won six of their previous nine. Vlade Divac added 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Erick Strickland had 21 points and Dirk Nowitzki added 13 for the Mavericks.

The Kings rallied from a 17-point third-quarter deficit and were within 103-102 with 19.8 seconds left on Jason Williams' layup.

But Finley made two free throws and converted a left-handed lift to extend Dallas' advantage to 105-102.

Sacramento tried to work Predrag Stejkojive free for a 3-pointer, but Stojakovic stepped in and made a clutch jumper to put the Magic back in control.

But Amaechi made a one-handed putback to tie the game at 107-107 with 5:11 left in the third.

The Spurs, who got 30 points from David Robinson, cut their deficit to 97-91 with 1:44 left. But Amaechi made a one-handed putback to tie the game at 107-107 with 5:11 left in the third.

Robinson made his first 11 shots and finished 12-for-14. Antoine Daniels had 14 points and 10 assists.

Charlotte never trailed again after Mason's free throw broke a 96-96 tie with 4:38 left. Seven straight points from the line gave Charlotte a 103-98 advantage.

Magic 107, Spurs 97

John Amaechi scored 24 points and Darrell Armstrong had 23 Tuesday night as the Orlando Magic beat the San Antonio Spurs 107-97 for their season-high seventh straight victory.

Chucky Atkins, who had 16 points, led a fourth-quarter surge by reserves who helped Orlando pull away for good. The rookies had five points and three assists in the 13-4 run that put the Magic up 93-78 with just under six minutes to go.

The Spurs, who got 30 points from David Robinson, cut their deficit to 97-91 with 1:44 left. But Amaechi made a one-handed putback to tie the game at 107-107 with 5:11 left in the third.

Robinson made his first 11 shots and finished 12-for-14. Antoine Daniels had 14 points and Tim Duncan and Jaren Jackson each scored 13 for the Spurs, who have lost two straight after a five-game win streak.

Bucks 92, Bulls 73

Despite a poor start from All-Stars Glenn Robinson and Ray Allen, the Milwaukee Bucks got enough help from Tim Thomas and Ervin Johnson to defeat the Chicago Bulls 92-73 Tuesday night.

Mike D'Antoni (36-36) remained the last games behind Orlando for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. The Magic defeated San Antonio 107-97 for their seventh consecutive victory.

Thomas scored 11 first-quarter points and Johnson added six to help pick up the slack as Robinson missed his first five shots and Allen his first four.

Thomas, in quickly off the bench due to two fouls on his game, made all five of his shots in the third as the Bucks took a 24-18 lead. The Bucks pushed the lead to 18 points at the half and 30 in the third quarter.

Heat 111, Cavaliers 85

Tim Hardaway had 14 points and 10 assists as the Miami Heat won their fourth in a row, 111-85 over the Cleveland Cavaliers on Tuesday night. Jamal Mashburn scored 17 points and Alonzo Mourning added 15 points and 11 rebounds for the Heat, who used a 49-12 run in the second and third quarters to pull away.

The Heat, who moved within two games of Indiana for the Eastern Conference lead, completed a sweep of the three-game season series. They have beaten the Cavs eight straight times since Jan. 26, 1998.

When the Heat took a 107-73 lead with 2:15 left, it marked their largest lead of the season at any point in the game. The 26-point victory tied Miami's season-high, a 115-89 win over Boston on Jan. 26.

Cleveland shot 41.9 percent from the field in the first quarter and led 44-38 midway through the second quarter, but flurries of turnovers in 1:40 parked Miami's game-turning run that ended with a 3-pointer by Mashburn to give Miami a 76-51 lead with 5:11 left in the first.

Hardaway had five of his 14 points and six assists in the first 3-pointer and Mourning scored nine points during the spurt.

a slow start, falling behind the Kalamazoo team 4-1 early in the first set. "There were a lot of unforced errors and we just weren't focused," Knish said. "They weren't really winning the points, we were losing them." Knish and Vales made a strong comeback and won the set 6-4.

"We decided to stay in the game and see what we could do," Knish said. "And we ended up coming out on top." Vales faced another tough match, going to a tiebreaker and seeing what we could do. And we could hurt us.

It's probable that the Irish will have already clinched the match when doubles play begins, but Louderback has been pleased with the pairs success of late and sees that portion of the match as important for his team, even if victory has is already clinched.

"We'll still be looking to improve in doubles," Louderback said. "Michelle and Becky have played real well lately, and Katie [Cunha] has played well with whoever she's played with.

His thought process seems wise. While focusing on the big picture he will still hope to have his team concentrate on the little things that might someday make that big picture a masterpiece.

tournament in Boise, Idaho.

Neither team has ever made it past the regional round. That doesn’t mean they haven’t been close.

The men’s team has spent the last five years a win or two away from qualifying. The more-recently-established women’s team has, in the words of Shiel, “emerged quickly as a powerhouse in their region.”

Winning nationals by mere points in recent years.

Both squads look to advance fairly easily through the sectional round, which takes place the weekend of April 15 at Purdue. Then, the weekend of April 29, they travel back to Purdue for the tougher test at the regional tournament in Boise.

To get to Idaho, the Irish will have to get through tough teams from Oberlin,
Illinois and Michigan.

Still, despite the team’s focus and drive to win, the funda­ mentals of the game remain in the front of the player’s minds.

“Obviously, everybody wants to win,” Shiel said. “That’s not the be-all-end-all of ultimate.”

“A lot of the reason I play ultimate . . . I think it’s the people.”

“It’s founded on spirit. . . If you’re not going to obey that spirit, what’re you playing ultimate for?”

That, my friend, is a good question.

Elway rumored to want media assets

Less than a year after falling short in a bid to buy the Colorado Avalanche, buying the sports assets from could decide this week whether to buy the teams and the Pepsi Center.

Liberty is mostly interested of John Elway, who $400 million offer was rejected by Ascent stockholders last

MEN'S LACROSSE

Starter Glatzel takes GWLL weekly honor

Special to The Observer

Notre Dame junior attack Tom Glatzel has been named the Great Western Lacrosse League Player of the Week for the first time this season after scoring five goals and dishing off two assists in leading the Irish to a 13-4 victory over Ohio State on Saturday.

Glatzel becomes the second Notre Dame player to earn GWLL player of the week honors this season after goalie Kirk Howell was the league's first honoree following the team's season-opening win over Penn State.

Glatzel, who has started all six games, leads the team in scoring with 16 goals and five assists. He has 39 career goals and 19 assists in his two-plus seasons at Notre Dame.

Notre Dame is currently 4-3 on the season and ranked 13th in the STX/United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association poll.

Glatzel's first goal of Saturday's game came after an assist allowing Chris Young to score a goal. Glatzel's second goal put the Irish in front 5-0 and he increased the score to 7-1 with 40 seconds remaining in the second quarter.

Glatzel's last two goals pushed the Irish ahead in the second half and they never looked back.

Tom Glatzel, a junior attack, led Notre Dame to a 13-4 win over Ohio State, scoring five goals and tallying two assists.

Currently, Bledsoe is third on the team in multi-hit games with eight this season, including two last week.

She also has the team's longest active and second-longest hitting streak at nine games.

Saint Mary's College presents Tennessee Williams' play

Saint Mary's College presents Tennessee Williams' play

Saint Mary's College presents Tennessee Williams' play

The theme for Saint Mary's athletics this year seems to be refocusing the College on athletics and reasserting our pride in Belles athletics.

A recent event at Saint Mary's highlighted both the difficulty of the school is going to have doing this and the lengths to which the student body is willing to go to make the athletic department as successful as its academics.

Recently a group of Saint Mary's students showed their pride when they surprised the softball team by cleaning and repainting the dugouts. They spent an entire weekend completing the project, in order for it to be finished when the team came home from a road game.

They even attended the French Crosses on the dugouts themselves.

The first thing that came to my mind, and probably, most people's minds, is how impressed I was that students would take the time to do this. It was students' ideas and work that made the field look so much better. Senior Johna Indriolo masterminded the plan and organized it. This willingness to step in and help out even when it's not necessary is a characteristic that has stood out in Saint Mary's women since I stepped on campus.

If the dugouts needed painting and there was no one hired to do it, the students would unquestionably get it done.

As athletic director Lynn Karchmer said, "This is a unique and special place where we all support one another even if we aren't all athletes."

The second thing that occurred to me was why did the students have to paint the dugouts? How are Saint Mary's athletics going to be competitive if we do not have the resources that other schools we play against have? Right now we don't even have the resources to paint our own dugouts.

Yes, Saint Mary's is a small, Division III school, so our resources are limited. But does that mean that our goals should be limited, or should we work to increase our resources instead?

Saint Mary's is focused on academics, not athletics, so the answer will not be turning over all the available money to build a track and a pool and a more complete athletic facility right now.

However, it is acceptable that my Division III high school had a better track than my college.

Somewhere, there needs to be a commitment by more than the athletes to Saint Mary's athletics if improving this program is truly a goal of the College.

Without facilities for our teams to practice on or full-time coaches to lead those practices, the Belles can only get so far.

Saint Mary's has more pride in their students and athletics than most places I have seen. That always impresses me.

A commitment to back that pride with academics and resources, however, is something that needs to happen. If Saint Mary's could get where they needed to go based on the support of their students they could go anywhere, but they need more than support; they need resources and they deserve them.

Ultimate encourages athletic spirit

A week or two before I set out from home to become a student at Notre Dame, I placed a phone call to a Mike Shailer, my roommate to be in a Morrissey quad. Mike wasn’t home that day, but instead of getting some sort of standard response from his mom, like “He’s at a movie,” or “He’s at work,” she told me that he was playing in the Ultimate Frisbee Junior World Championships in Minnesota.

“Come again?” Here I was, playing stickball with my neighbors while this guy was at a tournament where he and his team, the lone representatives from the United States, ended up going undefeated and bringing home the gold medal. I wasn’t even sure what ultimate shorthand for ultimate frisbee, was, but I was most definitely intrigued.

The sport itself originated in the late 60’s at a high school in New Jersey. I always imagined Mike had been playing a long time to reach the level that he has, but he only started about four years ago. “I had an uncle that played that I used to go watch, not real often, but occasionally,” he said.

He saw the first of these tournaments in 1993 and was playing by his sophomore year of high school, in the spring of 1996. In his opinion, this little-known sport, a club activity at the colleges where it is played, has become a big deal. “Because there was so much added

Dasso, Varnum play top singles for Irish

By KEVIN BERCHEU

Sport Writer

Notre Dame women’s tennis team head coach Jay Louderback thinks he knows exactly how to help his squad continue their red-hot play. He speaks about it constantly, believing that it will propel the team to the top. The key to winning, the coach said, is focus, and in order to continue to succeed, Notre Dame will have to summon the ultimate power of concentration.

A string of impressive wins has the Irish focusing on the big picture. “We’re really looking at Big East and the NCAA right now,” Louderback said.

Even though their thoughts are drifting to the potential glories that lie ahead, the Irish stress finding a way to focus on each match. That task will never be looser than it will today as Notre Dame heads to West Lafayette to battle the lowly Purdue Boilermakers. Purdue, at 7-9 on the season, is not a particularly strong opponent. “If the Irish are not careful, they could get caught looking about and get blindsided from behind.”

“Only one team has won the Big East and the NCAA tourneys, and they’ve struggled at times,” Louderback said. “But we have to be careful, they do have quite a bit of talent.”

Purdue comes into the match fresh off of a win over Southern Methodist this past weekend, and will surely be looking to see justice done.

Belles crush Comets with fresh players

By KATIE MCVOY

Assistant Sports Editor

The Saint Mary’s tennis team dominated Olivet in a 9-0 win Tuesday and improved its record to 15-3 up.

The Belles fared off against the Comets Tuesday at 3 p.m. in Niles against being forced indoors due to the inclement weather. Olivet is in eighth place in the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association (MIAA) after losing the only two matches it has played. The Comets had just four players going into the match and thus lost three matches by default. Saint Mary’s coach, Dee Stevenson, took the opportunity to play a different lineup.

Stevenson chose a young lineup for Tuesday, playing freshmen Marta Zeron and Sarah Brahler, and sophomores Elizabeth Speith and Bridgid Burfiend.

“Because there was so much added depth this season, he (Stevenson) has a lot of flexibility switching around the line-up,” Zeron said. “Playing first singles was a big step up.”

“Oliver’s players are very young,” Stevenson said. “It was a great chance for me to play some of my other players. I’m lucky I inherited such great talent.”

All four women won their singles matches in two sets and the doubles teams of Zeron and Brahler, and Speith and Burfiend took both matches as well. “They did very well,” Stevenson said. “They got to play in the matches which they didn’t get to do very often.”

The Belles traveled to Spring Arbor College Saturday and brought home a 8-1 victory.

Stevenson took the opportunity to use a different roster again. Co-captain Becky Kremer, Angela Sander, Torie Cox, Zeron and Burfiend recorded victories in singles for the Belles and the doubles teams of Kremer and Leslie Ortiz, Zeron and Sander, and Burfiend and Cox claimed wins. The Belles only loss came from Ortie’s singles match. Stevenson gave most of the credit for the win to his players. “The women analyzed their opponents and what they had to do to win,” he said. “They really don’t need much coaching.”

The coach has said he has been focusing on teaching his women how to analyze opponents, find their weak spots, and take advantage.

“I think that has been helpful as far as strategies go,” Mollan said. “Being able to analyze opponents’ weaknesses has helped us win games.”

While some changes were instituted against Spring Arbor, the regular Saint Mary’s lineup trounced a surprised Kalamazoo College 9-0 Sunday.

“Kalamazoo was tougher competition as far as we’re concerned,” Mollan said. “But they don’t get to do very often.”

The Belles, with the win over Spring Arbor and the loss to Kalamazoo, have a 1-1 record, but go into Big East Conference play on a four-game winning streak.

They’re thinking about conference, however, and Steinberg said they have to keep playing doubles to win the conference.

Stevenson said he and his women are both looking for new challenges and are anxious to see what the Big East will have to offer.
