The Notre Dame chapter of the Knights of Columbus, the oldest and largest of the councils in the United States, will celebrate its 90th anniversary this year. The Knights are a service-oriented club whose projects include the food share which take place every football game in front of the Basilica, on McGlinn fields. For the first time, Saturday's activities included mud wrestling.

With the Presidential election less than 40 days away, candidates George Bush and Vice President Al Gore are battling for votes as they discuss issues ranging from health care to education. However, with President Clinton's release of 30 million gallons of oil from the nation's Strategic Petroleum Reserve last week, the country's energy supply has potential to leave both candidates politically vulnerable. For Vice President Gore, who requested the release of oil early last week in an attempt to drive down prices, the question remains one of

Girls can cut it

It really shouldn't surprise me anymore, but things like this are always a little unsettling. Yes, I let it get to me. First as I agonized over verb conjugations and sentence structure on a morning French test. Then as I watched an otherwise pleasant dinner hall lunch with friends. The words I had heard earlier in the day were hard to shake.

The day had begun in French. In the minutes just prior to the start of class, three students and I had turned our attention from the test we'd be taking shortly to more promising thoughts.

"Hey, you work for The Observer, right?" a male colleague asked me, and I nodded yes.

"What's up with the chick sports editor?" No offense, but your sports department is hurting. I think you need to know how to write sports," he informed me and two female students.

I immediately looked down at my watch, at the minutes counting how long until the professor walked through the door and handed out the exams. But now that I think about it, perhaps I was too quick to make sure that I indeed was living in the year 2000, in a time and place where sentiments like my classmate's didn't quite belong.

Next, I gazed out the third-floor window of the DeBartolo Hall classroom. There was the football stadium; I was, to my dismay, certainly at Notre Dame. I was at a university where some of the world's best "beauties and brightest" stand in the glorious shadow of the Golden Dome, infected with the simple ignorance that women—even to this day—just can't hack it.

I might have told my classmate that writing and editing copy for the Paper's best-read section was no small feat. I might also have told him that you don't rise to the glorious shadow of the Golden Dome, infected with the simple ignorance that women—even to this day—just can't hack it.

In a meeting Sunday night, members of the Freshman class council determined leaders for 2000-2001 board. Freshman representatives elected Dan Maguire, Keri Osley, Tai Romero and Jason King to the council’s four executive posts.

Maguire, a Tampa native, will serve as class president. He said he knew he wanted to hold the position ever since he was elected Zahm Hall’s freshman representative last week. “I’m going to go in with my eyes open and my ears perked,” Maguire said. “I understand that there is a big responsibility on my shoulders, and there will be a lot of learning to do in the beginning.”

Maguire said that he’d like to use his time in office to emphasize the importance of class unity. “That’s my biggest goal,” he said of the issue. “You see too much dorm pride around Notre Dame and not enough pride in us as a collective whole.”

Badin Hall’s Keri Osley said she also has plans in mind for the freshman class. Osley, of Fremont, Ohio, was elected class vice president on Sunday.

“From my past experience of serving, I’ve learned that the top priorities in achieving success are creativity, unity and spirit. I hope to implement that into the Class of 2004,” Osley said.

Osley also hopes to be listening to the concerns of her classmates throughout the year. “It’s important to me to take the goals of the freshman class and make sure that they become a reality,” Osley said.

Elected class secretary Tai Romero said she plans on making this year a spirited introduction to Notre Dame for her classmates. “I want to make it as fun as possible. I hope it will be a mud blast,” said Romero.

Romero, of Baton Rouge, La., is a Walsh Hall section leader. She said she wants to keep her class informed of all involved in various opportunities throughout the year.

“There is going to be a lot going on, and I hope the class will show the same excitement in participating in these events as it does when it first comes in (to the University),” Romero said.

Jason King, elected class treasurer Sunday night, said he is excited about his new position. “It’s a big honor,” said King, a native of Houston. “Being treasurer is something I’ll be good at. I feel like it’s my place on campus,” said Morrissey Hall resident.

King said he won’t carry many ideas into office with him, but he intends to be active in class fundraising events.

“I hope to pull in a lot of cash, use the money wisely and hopefully be able to put together a lot of activities,” King said.

In addition to the executive officers, council committee chairpersons were elected Sunday. Nick Williams will serve as social committee chair. Dan Norton as fundraising chair, Jazmin Garcia as spiritual chair and Ali Peretz as service committee chair. A publicity committee chair will be determined at the council’s meeting next Sunday.

The 27-member council, including officers, committee chairs and committee members, will meet weekly throughout the year. The number reflects one representative from each of the University’s residence halls.

Republicans have been quick to criticize the Clinton Administration for inappropriately using the oil issue as a political ploy to bolster Gore's support before the election. Gore, in defense of consumers paying high gasoline and heating oil prices, argues that the release of oil will stabilize prices for Americans before the onset of the cold winter months.

Bush has stated that tapping the 570 million-barrel petroleum reserve, established in the early 1970s after the first Arab oil embargo, could have detrimental effects on national security. Republicans argue that the reserve, which was created for military emergencies, is now being used inappropriately by the Clinton administration for managing price distributions. Many Democrats equate Bush and his Vice Presidential running mate, Dick Cheney, with unrelenting oil companies.

The nation's energy has become a hot topic for politicians, economists and environmentalists who are concerned about the long-term implications of increasing oil prices. The $38 gallon price of crude oil reached last week. However, amongst Americans who have adjusted to the inflated gas prices, there has been no enormous amount of fear about the impending winter months.

"The truth is, Americans haven't really felt the effects of this yet. We saw a little bit in the summer with the higher gas prices, but very few people are paying heating bills now." Christina Wolbrecht, government professor

"I think there are a lot of people who think that Bill Clinton in particular is very concerned with his wife’s election and Al Gore's election because he sees them as kind of referendums on his legacy," said Wolbrecht.

Critics have argued that the oil release is a short-term solution to a larger problem in the more general market dynamics. Bush believes that it is the Clinton administration’s lack of energy policy for the last eight years that has contributed to the problems the United States is facing today.

Many experts see the new energy issue linked to broader economic, environmental and foreign policy.

Economically, some critics question whether dumping a larger supply of oil on the market will work to lower prices in the future.

Prices are set on limited quantites of crude oil in spot markets and many view the Clinton Administration's decision as only a temporary solution. Some economists feel that using oil reserves for price manipulation is because of volatile price fluctuations.

Other economists praise Gore's initiatives to drive down oil prices for Americans.

Gore utilized a "swap" procedure in which companies receive reserve oil to sell at current prices on the condition that the amount plus extra for the future will be returned to the reserve. The intent is to leave reserve amounts larger than before the release.

Jennifer Warlick, an Economics professor at the University of Notre Dame points out that the release will, in fact, increase the amount of oil thereby decreasing the price. Although critics claim that this provides only a temporary solution, Warlick was hesitant to believe that Gore’s motivations were ultimately political.

"We have designed our economy around low gas and oil prices," said Warlick. "Heating oil is a low elasticity of demand commodity in which means that as the price of oil rises, consumers can’t immediately cut back on their consumption," Warlick said.

One, it (the high price of oil) is certainly not a national emergency and two, it may have been economically wise," said Notre Dame Government professor, Dan Lindley, on the Clinton administration’s moves to stabilize oil prices. As of now, Lindley sees the decision as having a "legitimate market calming effect" on the price of crude oil.

Warlick remains concerned about the broader implications surrounding the oil shortage. Low-income families will feel the scarcity more than others. Warlick wonders what the government will do to provide assistance to these families. "Without oil, people must allocate their income and do without things which Americans consider necessities," said Warlick.

Warlick contends that the real question is whether the release of the oil is a target efficient by helping the people who will need assistance to pay the higher prices for heating oil this winter. Also, Warlick suggests that the government increase subsidies to low income families for the coming winter.

The energy issue has been set against the backdrop of the recent meeting on Wednesday of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) in Venezuela. OPEC is hesitant to increase production of crude oil to lower prices in industrial nations. Last Friday, however, Saudi Arabia promised to pump more crude oil to reduce prices.

President Clinton has suggested that if a possible solution would be to encourage prices that are substantially below the nearly $40 a barrel level that crude oil soared to last week, but well above the $12 level that made gasoline so cheap two years ago.

Notre Dame students react to released oil

By LIZ ZANONI

While students hurry to secure absentee voter ballots from their home states, the President’s supporters, Al Gore and George W. Bush are doing their best to address issues of importance to college students across the country.

The most recent controversy in the news last week commenced when the Clinton administration released 30 million gallons of oil from the Nation's Strategic Petroleum Reserve to stabilize the rising cost of heating oil for this winter.

Bush has criticized this decision as an inappropriate way to help Al Gore gain political support right before the election. "If it’s hard for students, let alone most Americans, to have a well-formulated opinion on the energy issue because it requires a knowledge of politics, economics and history," said senior Notre Dame student, Matt Wood.

Some Notre Dame students think that the Clinton Administration released oil reserves with the impending Presidential elections in mind. "Clinton’s motives for doing it are political," said senior PLS and History major, Sean Vinck. "The release is too little and too late."

Vinck also believes that Clinton is hoping that the drugging oil prices will be attributed to the Democrats when in fact it was the Democrats lack of energy policy that created the problem from the beginning. "People have short term memories when it comes to politics," Vinck said.

"I don’t know if the small amount of oil released by Clinton will meet the demands of heating oil for the oncoming winter months," said senior accounting major Meredith Roberts. "I think a lot of people believe Clinton is just trying to dig himself out of the whole he already created.

Hurricane Keith hits Yucatan:
Coastal residents of Mexico's Yucatan peninsula and northeastern Belize fled their homes Sunday as the dangerous core of Hurricane Keith brought strong wind and torrential rain. Scores of people in Chetumal, a bay-side city of 130,000, abandoned their homes. Many live in low-lying areas, in shacks made of wooden slats and cardboards. Mexican authorities evacuated 800 people from high-risk areas in the region.

Crowds wait in tribute to Trudeau:
Admirers of the late Pierre Trudeau stood in long lines Sunday to glimpse the former Canadian prime minister as his body lay in state in the parliament building. Since his death at age 80 on Thursday from prostate cancer and Parkinson's disease, the country has been wraped up in remembering Trudeau's political legacy.

Milosevic's opposition mobilizes

Associated Press

BELGRADE
Encouraged by cheering crowds, a convoy of 60 trucks blocked a key highway Sunday as opposition forces sought to gather support for a nationwide strike aimed at showing President Slobodan Milosevic he must resign.

The trucks — taking part in a "dress rehearsal" for a series of full-scale blockades planned for Monday — were greeted by jubilant supporters as they passed through the opposition stronghold Cacak in central Yugoslavia. Some people tossed flowers as the trucks headed to an important highway linking Belgrade with southern Yugoslavia.

The truckers handed banners and posters of Vojislav Kostunica, whom the opposition and Western leaders insist trounced Milosevic in Sept. 24 elections. Milosevic rejected the claim and says a run-off election is needed Oct. 5.

Workers at two major coal mines did not wait for Monday and walked off the job Saturday. However, the independent Bota news agency reported that hundreds of special police entered one mine about 25 miles south of Belgrade — and turned back local townspeople who tried to march to the site in protest.

The move was clearly aimed at keeping the mine open. It supplies coal to about a third of the country's major electric power stations. The state-run power company warned strikers they were endangering public health and safety. About 1,000 workers at another coal mine in Kostolac joined the strike Sunday.

In central Belgrade, traffic was snarled by blockades at key intersections. Drivers honked horns and pedestrians blew whistles and shook toy radars — playing on a local expression for something broken beyond repair.

"No way are we going to settle for a run-off and that is now the law for everyone in this country," said Velimir Hile, the mayor of Cacak, an industrial town of 40,000 people. Later Sunday, about 10,000 opposition supporters gathered at the main town square for a seventh consecutive night of anti-Milosevic rallies there.

"Our victory is as pure as a diamond," Hile told the crowd. "Kostunica is the elected president and we must persist in our resistance." He called for a total blockade of the country Monday.

Opposition leader Milan Protic urged people to come out into the streets Monday, stay away from their jobs and keep their children away from school.

Protic acknowledged that it would take time to build momentum among a public drained by years of conflict and economic misery.

Protic, the opposition candidate for Belgrade mayor, said the protest leaders would try to esca­late the tempo systemati­cally "until Milosevic real­izes that he is no longer president.

Palesinians, Israelis renew gun battles

Associated Press

JERUSALEM
Palestinian gunmen armed by rock-throwing riesters, fired on Israeli troops from rooftops and abandoned buildings in clashes across the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Nine Palestinians were killed when Israelis returned fire, for a total of 29 in three days of bloodstreamed over a contested Jerusalem shrine.

An Israeli border policeman was critically wounded and lay trapped for hours in a tiny Israeli enclave in the West Bank town of Nablus, as Palestinian fire blocked rescue teams from reaching the area. Medics eventual­ly got through, but the officer died Sunday night.

The latest fighting came as Israeli and Palestinian peace negotiators traded harsh accusations instead of new ideas on how to solve their dis­putes.

In an ominous sign of escalation across the West Bank and Gaza Strip, Israeli troops fired anti-tank missiles, buried grenades and shot from hel­icopter gunships. Several Israeli tanks rumbled toward the Palestinian-run towns of Nablus and Ramallah in a warning gesture, but did not cross the lines of jurisdiction.

The deadliest battle was waged in Nablus over Joseph's Tomb, a tiny Jewish-controlled enclave. An Israeli soldier shot from a lookout post. Palestinian gunmen raced up to the wall and fired into the compound where some Jews believe the biblical patriarch Joseph is buried.
Research may help cancer fertility

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Women having cancer therapy may one day be able to avoid the ovary damage that often leaves them unable to bear children, researchers report.

Scientists studying chemical and radiation damage to mice cells report promising results when the action of the chemical ceramide was blocked. But they caution that considerable work is needed before the method could be used in humans.

Blocking ceramide preserved the fertility of eggs normally destroyed in cancer treatment, researchers report in the October issue of the journal Nature Medicine.

"This holds the promise of selectively preserving ovarian function and preventing this tragic side effect of the treatment of cancer," said Dr. Richard N. Kolesnck of Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York.

"For the first time we have a promising prospect for a small molecule that could be given to women and girls undergoing cancer treatment to protect their ovaries," added Jonathan Tilly of Massachusetts General Hospital, the paper's senior author.

Tilly cautioned that tests have only been done in mice and that tests are under way to determine the treatment's effect on human ovary tissue that has been transplanted in mice.

"It's very difficult to put a time frame on," when the treatment could be available for humans, he said. "We will push ahead as quickly as we can."

In an accompanying news article about the findings, Robert F. Casper and Andrea J. Juriscova of the University of Toronto said the research was "an innovative and exciting potential new treatment to prevent oocyte destruction after cancer treatment."

"Oocyte is the scientific term for the egg cells of mammals. While the paper focuses on ovary damage caused by radiation, Tilly said in a telephone interview that similar protection also occurred in tests involving doxorubicin, a chemotherapy drug.

The researchers had earlier found that the death of the ovaries in response to chemotherapy sets into ceramide by an enzyme sets the stage for the destruction of eggs.

"There was absolutely no damage at all that we could see," in the ovaries with SIP, Tilly said. "The ovaries looked normal...the mice were cycling normally, they ovulated and were able to produce embryos. By criteria they were normal."

Police canvas first saints from China

Associated Press

VATICAN CITY

Pope John Paul II declared sainthood Sunday for 12 Chinese and foreign missionaries killed in the church's five-century — and ongoing struggle in China. The missionaries "evading sinners" and their canonization "an open insult." Naming of the church's first Chinese saints threatened to worsen already stiff relations with China, which at home is combattin g Vatican-allied Catholicism and other banned spiritual movements it sees as challenges to its authority.

The date of the canonizations was envisag ing to China — falling on China's National Day celebrating 51 years of communist rule. So was their chosen subject: 87 Chinese and 33 foreigners, most killed in what China still views as the rightous 1900 Boxer Rebellion against foreign imperialism and religion.

John Paul, looking wan and tired on a rainy morning in St. Peter's Square, insisted "the celebration is not the time to make judgments."

"The church only intends to recognize that those martyrs are an example of courage and coherence for all of us, and give honor to the noble Chinese people," the pope said.

Pope Paul named three other new saints as well, all from one-time socialite Katharine Drexel, who devoted her life and inheritance to founding schools for American Indians and blacks; one-time Sudanese slave Guiseppe Bahkita; and Maria Josefa del Corazon de Jesus Sancho de Guerra, the first saint of Spain's trouble-besieged people.

The solid bank of rain-slick umbrellas in the square covered tens of thousands, including ethnic Chinese from Taiwan, Hong Kong and elsewhere.

China's Communist leaders ordered Catholics to renounce loyalty to the pope in the 1950s. Religious and human rights groups regularly report challenges to the West's attempt to worship outside the state-monitored official Catholic church.

"Today is National Day, and more than ever Chinese Catholics should stand with the nation," Bishop Fu Tieshan, the state-appointed bishop in Beijing, told worshipers Sunday morning at the Chinese capital's South Cathedral.

"Choosing this date to can onize the so-called 'saints' is an open insult and humiliation against the Chinese Catholic adherents," Fu was quoted as saying by the official Xinhua News Agency.

Colleges, universities split on blocking Napster use

Associated Press

ATLANTA

As Napster's battle for survival resumes in a federal court, colleges and universities nationwide are issuing verdicts of their own on whether students will have access to the Internet music-swapping service.

On many campuses, Napster has already won. "We are an educational institution and we will err on the side of unfettered access to information," said Bob Harty, a spokesman for the Georgia Institute of Technology, which last week denied a lawyer's request on behalf of two music acts to block access to Napster.

"Once you start down that road well, we could tie up an awful lot of staff people and resources trying to evaluate Web sites' content, and we don't want to get into that," he said.

Other schools — among them Michigan, Stanford, Princeton and Duke — responded in like manner to the request from Howard King, a Los Angeles lawyer who represents Metallica and Dr. Dre.

"I think the overwhelming majority of universities are reacting the same way we have. Most are not blocking Napster," said Mike Smith, assistant chancellor for legal affairs at the University of California in Berkeley.

Metallica, Dr. Dre and the Recording Industry Association of America (RIAA) have sued Napster, claiming its file-sharing software allows people to steal music. Three universities — Yale, Indiana and Southern California — were also sued but later dropped after they agreed to block access to Napster.

U.S. District Judge Marilyn Hall Patel in San Francisco granted a preliminary injunction against Napster in July, ruling that Napster encouraged widespread copyright infringement.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals stayed her order hours before it was to take effect.

On Monday, that court is to hear arguments on whether to continue the stay pending a trial — thus allowing Napster to live on.

Napster contends that the millions of Americans who use its service — the San Mateo, Calif., company says 28 million people have downloaded the software — are violating no law. It bases its defense on the Audio Home Recording Act of 1992, which it says grants immunity when music is shared for noncommercial use.

"I think the overwhelming majority of universities are reacting the same way we have. Most are not blocking Napster," said Tom Edgar, associate vice president for academic computing at Texas. But he acknowledged that numerous Napster-like services can supply the same files, so blocking Napster won't stop online music-swapping.

Other schools have blocked Napster on the grounds that it is a tool for breaking the law. Among them is Northeastern University in Boston, where former student Shawn Fanning wrote Napster's technical underpinnings in his dorm room two years ago.

Canisius College, a private liberal arts college in Buffalo, N.Y., has blocked Napster on ethical grounds.

"It's not free for you to steal books from the public library, and it's not free to download music you haven't paid for," said Jerry Neuner, Canisius' associate vice president for academic affairs and president of the American Association of University Administrators.

"We are an educational institution and we will err on the side of unfettered access to information."

Candidates denounce Commission debate, stage minidebate

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Ralph Nader and Pat Buchanan staged a minidebate of their own Sunday and groused about being shut out of Tuesday's faceoff between George W. Bush and Al Gore. "What are they afraid of?" asked Buchanan, the Reform Party nominee. Green Party candidate Nader said he'll be in Boston for the Bush-Gore event and joked: "Maybe I'll crawl up on the stage there."

The bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates, organizer of three 90-minute debates this month between the Republican Bush and Democrat Gore, said last week that Buchanan and Nader had failed to meet its criteria for participation Tuesday. Candi- d a t e ' s names must appear on NBC's "Meet the Press," where they vehemently challenged the commission decision. They also were appearing together Monday night on CNN's "Larry King Live."

The network has allowed them to have a monopoly."

At a rally Sunday featuring Nader and his supporters, filmmaker Michael Moore criticized the Green Party candidate's exclusion from Tuesday's debate. Moore said Nader has 5 percent of the vote in one national poll — a number that would equal the combined population of 14 U.S. states.

"Can you imagine telling 14 states their desires don't matter? You'd have a revolt on your hands," Moore said.

Buchanan, whose Reform Party participated in the 1992 debates because of the early popularity of party founder Ross Perot's ideas, said he recognized parties are Republican, Democratic and Reform. Buchanan received $12.6 million in federal campaign funds this year based on Perot's 8 percent showing in the 1996 election."

The other two parties are engaged in a conspiracy basically to deny me access to the debate that's going to decide the election and the presidency...

Pat Buchanan

Reform Party candidate

"The idea that these two parties have some automatic lock on the White House is false," he said. "What are those parties afraid of? If they won't let Ralph and me in the debate because of the early involvement from foreign affairs, trade, the military and the Supreme Court, Buchanan averred. But "even if they don't, we at least should be able to hear those arguments. You're not going to be able to hear them Tuesday night," he said.

Abortion protestors support Catholic priest's motivation

Associated Press

ROCKFORD, Ill.

Dozens of anti-abortion protestors at an annual rally Sunday said they support the devotion — if not the alleged ax.

"I don't agree with his methods, but I appreciate his heart," said the Rev. David Broom, 25. He carried a sign that said "Adoption: The loving option" and joined a human chain of about 1,000 protestors outside a Catholic church forming the shape of a cross.

The rally had been scheduled long before Saturday's attack. Amid the singing, people could be heard along the chain talking about the Rev. John Earl, who is charged with burglary and felony criminal damage to property for the attack Saturday morning at the Northern Illinois Women's Center. He was freed after posting $10,000 bond.

"It's hard to support those kinds of actions when you stand for life, but we definitely do support him in standing up for life," Jeff O'Hara, 37, said at Sunday's rally.

Police have not disclosed a possible motive for the attack on the clinic. It came two days after government approval of the RU-486 abortion pill and was at the office of Dr. Richard Ragsdale, who successfully challenged Illinois abortion laws in the 1980s that he claimed were so strict they limited women's access to the procedure.

The Diocese of Rockford said the priest's activities have been restricted while it investigates the allegations. A message left at the church, St. Patrick's Church in Rochelle, about 50 miles south of Rockford, was not returned.

At the church's evening Mass on Saturday, the Rev. Aaron Brodeski discouraged parishioners from gossiping among themselves or with media.

"Father John has a lot of young ideas and a lot of old ideas from 40 to 50 years ago," said church member Joe Ryan. "You might believe in why he did what he did, but do you want him teaching your kids to do that?"

Gay Bruhn, president of Illinois chapter of the National Organization for Women, said Sunday that the church and anyone who supports individuals associated with acts of violence are hypocritical.

"It's a complete denial of responsibility by those in the movement that encourage people to go out and do this stuff." Bruhn said. "We've had some victories and some losses, but we've never driven a car into a building. I'm appalled by the violence."

A local restaurant owner who started a legal defense fund to assist Earl said that although he sympathizes with the priest, he wishes he would have adhered to nonviolent protest.

"It is a war," said restaurant owner Frank Giammarrese. "It is a war on our culture and our humanity."

In the next weeks and months we shall see whether our administration sticks with the tradition of control and censorship, or courageously starts opening our University to the free expression of student opinion.

Notre Dame is a private school, though it relies upon federal funding to make it possible. As a publicly-supported institution it should be responsible for upholding minimal standards regarding free speech, but I won’t focus on that argument. Rather, let us examine the role of a Catholic University. Firstly as a University, our mission is to teach critical thinking. Students must be able to openly discuss contrasting ideas, to discern what is true and what is not. Ideally teachers present a wide array of theories on a relative equal- footing, giving students the information and tools they need to make their own decisions. Thus academic freedom at the class-level is essential.

The idea that it can exist without a controversy is a freedom of expression in regular (outside of class) student life is ludicrous. University life cannot be divided into a false opposing dichotomy of “classes” and “campus life.” Studying теоретических объяснений during recreational time as students discuss ideas at meals, parties, while watching TV, e-mailing friends and many other moments. Much university learning occurs outside the classroom in discussions, lectures, the activity of student organizations and other things. Does it make sense to anyone that, for instance, students could take a course in gay-lesbian-bisexual studies (assuming it were offered and several departments are courageous enough to do it), but cannot form a student group to study the same thing? Or students could study the women’s movement (which was over- looked by the classroom in discussions, lectures, the activity of student organizations and other things. Bishops advocate economic and social stability for all U.S. citizens

The following is a statement by Bishop Members of Pax Christi USA made on March 23, 2000. Pax Christi ND will be hosting the Bread Not Stones campaign to redirect military spending on Thursday, October 5th on the South Quad at 4p.m.

In his Sermon on the Mount, Jesus emphasized the parental care of God by saying, "Take care of your little ones!" "Is it worse among you, who if your child asks for bread, will give a stone?" (Mt 7:9) Jesus makes the point that, even we win are sinful, would never give our children members of bread. And yet, in many ways, our national budget priorities do exactly that.

In a time of unprecedented economic prosperity and budget surpluses, our political leaders cannot find the resources to provide a good education and reliable health care for tens of millions of our nation's children and we are told that we cannot afford targeted tax relief for struggling families. In our country alone, 35 million people live in poverty, and 31 million people report not having enough to eat, including 12 million children. Despite these frightening statistics and the lack of a rival superpower, the U.S. spends nearly forty times more on defense than the next three countries combined. If we were to decisively reduce our military spending, the U.S. would have the resources and means of billions of dollars to create a new and reliable national energy strategy, to transform our nuclear and conventional weapon systems which have no plausible military purpose, to make the annual foreign military aid than it is doing in funding sustainable development efforts for nations experiencing widespread poverty. The social needs of our nation and world are held hostage to military spending, making our world increasingly insecure. As the Vatican II document Gaudium et Spes pointed out years ago, "The arms race is an utterly treacherous trap for humanity and one that ensnares the poor into an intolerable degree." This point was made even stronger in the Vatican's 1976 United Nations Statement on Disarmament. The United States has the highest rate of childhood poverty in the industrialized world and one of the lowest adult literacy rates. Many of our working poor are struggling in low wage jobs with no family healthcare benefits and inadequate childcare for their little ones. This is a tragic sequence of a nation which chooses to spend only six cents on education and four cents on healthcare for every 50 cents which is spent on the military. We live in the wealthiest nation on earth and yet, it is still possible for a family with a full-time worker to live in poverty. Demand at soup kitchens and food pantries is on the rise, with people being turned away at some facilities because there is not enough. Indeed, those who are poor cry but the sound of the hungry still curse them with stones of war.

Moving people toward economic and social stability is a goal that can be easily achieved if there were the public will to do so. But we cannot accomplish this goal and feed our insatiable appetite for more weapons.

Truth and security does not well in superior firepower but in a world where every person is enabled to develop their full human potential. The well-being of our nation's people holds the key to our future peace and security. We could offer all who hunger the bread they need if we were willing to drop our stones. If we eliminated even one of the F-22 fighter planes planned for production this year, we could build 31 new elementary schools. If we choose to eliminate just three new attack submarines, we could build 90,000 affordable apartment units. The United Nations Development Program estimates that the basic health and nutrition needs of the world's poorest people could be met for an additional $13 billion per year, about five percent of this year's U.S. military budget. Turning away from our addiction to costly and strategically questionable conventional and nuclear weapon systems could free up tens of billions of dollars a year to meet the needs of people living in poverty.

We view the federal budget as a moral document that must reflect our degree of compassion for those who are poor and suffering in our own society. We therefore call for a national Catholic campaign of prayer, study and action to end exorbitant military spending in order to provide for the needs of all our people. We call for a campaign in our parishes, schools and Catholic organizations which will take up the plea of Pope John Paul II for a "moral about-face" regarding our appetite for weapons of war. We call for a new budget and disarmament cycle we must maintain our resources and summon our moral courage to say "no" to a blunted military budget which robs those who are poor and vulnerable and "yes" to a budget which helps lift people out of poverty.

We must say "no" to the insatiable appetite for more and better weapons which destabilize relationships between nations and "yes" to development and new diplomatic strategies which promote lasting peace. If we can do this, then we can transform our system of funding the bread of life for those in need both at home and throughout our world.

Continuing the shirt discussion

This past week, the Board of Governance was presented with a challenging task in responding to a controversial T-shirt produced by the Junior Class Class. The Board of Governance, in an 18-3 vote (with one abstention), elected to revoke the distribution and sales of the junior class T-shirt. This decision was made by utilizing and upholding the Saint Mary's Student Government Association constitution as well as the mission and Saint Mary's College.

As student body president and vice president, we are official representatives of our student body and, ultimately, student representatives of this fine institution. We seek to maintain mutual respect and communication among the students, faculty and administration. The welfare of the students as members of our College community is our primary aim. We, as well as the additional members of the Board of Governance, have the right and responsibility to express ourselves on all matters affecting the student community we represent, as noted in our SCA constitution.

During Wednesday night's BOG meeting, we had an obligation to address the shirt's implications after receiving numerous complaints from members of our student body. Therefore, it was immediately entered into the evening's agenda. Both of us expressed our strong aversion towards the shirt's obvious implications. As student body president and vice president, it is indeed our responsibility to voice our concerns and opinions on matters that affect the women we represent.

According to our constitution, the "Class governments are sanctioned by the board of Governance." It is the first time that this board has had to utilize this authority. On Wednesday night, the BOG recognized its right and responsibility to "suspend, withdraw, or revoke recognition of any entity if it is determined that such action is in the best interest of the Saint Mary's community."...as enscribed by our SCA constitution.

The decision to revoke distribution of this shirt was ultimately based upon inconsistencies found between the shirt's implications and our mission statement, namely, "Saint Mary's cultivates a community life which responds to the needs of women and challenges us to fulfill our full potential..." It is the responsibility of the student government to bring together women of different nations, cultures and races. It provides a residential environment where women grow in their appreciation of the strengths and needs of others. As students attending an all-women's college, we should strive to foster and nurture relationships with all women. Perhaps the energies displayed and voiced in response to this T-shirt would be best directed toward building relationships, common goals and mutual respect with our fellow sisters who attend the University of Notre Dame. In doing so, we would like to be the first to offer our sincere apologies to the women of Notre Dame.

To the women of Saint Mary's College, we encourage you to reflect on what it truly means to be a Saint Mary's woman. Today begins our second annual Saint Mary's Pride Week. It is a time to recognize that each woman on this campus has brought something unique, something all of their own to share with the rest of us. We have the opportunity to grow in an environment of diverse and talented women and one that challenges and inspires us to grow in our knowledge.

We are honored to serve and represent such an incredible student body.

Clarifying the constitutionality

Thank you for the good laugh on a Friday afternoon.

Or am I the only one in the new politically correct and hypersensitive ND-SMC community who thinks the "controversy" over the Saint Mary's College junior class shirt is hilarious? This is almost as silly as the Captain Crunch protest of the mid-80's. After the previous day's article with no picture, which elicited a lot of speculation as to what the shirt would be like "offensive," I was delighted to see such a cute day's article with no picture, which elicited a lot of speculation as to what the shirt would be like "offensive," I was delighted to see such a cute day's article with no picture, which elicited a lot of speculation as to what the shirt would be like "offensive." It may surprise or even "offend" many people. It can be quite humorous if not used in a mean spirited way, assuming one still has a sense of humor. To those offended by the shirt, please lighten up. To the junior class at SMC, you should not let the shirt's existence destroy the beautiful fabric you have to work with. I would love to have one as a gift for my niece, who is a member of the class of 2006. She would enjoy the laugh. Thank you for a good laugh on a Friday afternoon.

God bless you and please forgive me if I have offended anyone. It seems increasingly easy to do so around here.

Popular musical comes to South Bend for three-night show

By MERIDETH PIERCE

The incredibly popular musical "Rent" will be performed at the Morris Performing Arts Center this week. The highly acclaimed rock musical has already completed many times start to moo even before the show. The show premiered off-Broadway at New York Theatre Workshop on Feb. 13, 1996, receiving enthusiastic reviews and continued to sell out.

Inspired by Puccini's "La Boheme," the story takes place in New York's East Village with the major characters striving to make ends meet to pay the rent. The factor is compounded by drag usage and the fact that nearly all the characters are HIV positive.

The plot centers around a musician named Bugger who has just recently discovered he has the virus. His roommate, Mark, a filmmaker, narrates the story through video taping the action as well as commenting on the situations. The rest of the cast is composed of friends, lovers, and ex-lovers of the two men.

The plot centers around how these people live with the knowledge of their inevitable untimely deaths and how life itself can be measured in love.

The fact of "Rent" deals with these issues in a realistic and entertaining manner while capturing the culture of the time, one reason why popularity has grown to form "Rent groupies." A Rent groupie is a person who has been inspired by the story and many of the characters.

A groupie can easily be spotted at any of the shows, especially where the performance artist, Maureen, asks the audience to moo while she artistically interprets her life. A Rent groupie will many times start to moo even before she asks, and generally thees wildly when she first appears on stage via motorcycle.

Maureen is not the only character that has inspired the groupies. Angel, a transvestite drummer, generally causes wild cheers from the crowd as well. Especially when she shows up in a candy-cane striped dress with glitter lipstick. However, it is not just the characters that cause much of the music to be an instant hit. "Light My Candle," "La Vie Boheme" and especially "Seasons of Love" are among the best.

When the creator Jonathan Larson said in regards to living life in the song "Another Day" that there was "no day but today" he was right. Larson never got to see "Rent" performed on, or off-Broadway. On the morning of Jan. 25, 1996, hours after the final dress rehearsal off-Broadway, 10 days before his 36th birthday, Larson died unexpectedly of an aortic aneurism.

But Larson lives on in "Rent" to this day. In his character, the audience can measure--in love--his story and the audience they touch.

The voices are extremely important in casting as well. Each character in Rent has just as distinct a vocal sound as his or her looks.

For most characters this vocal sound is much different from any other sound a theatre fan would hear on Broadway. In addition to the dozen of awards for the controversial "Rent," Larson has also scored and wrote songs for "Sesame Street," created music for children's book-cassettes including "An American Tail" and "Land Before Time," and conceived, directed and wrote four original songs for "Away We Go!," a musical video for children.

The incredibly popular musical "Rent" will be performed at the Morris Performing Arts Center this week. The highly acclaimed rock musical has already completed many things. However, with the nature of traveling companies, group to group certain things change.

One thing that will not change are the looks of the characters from company to company. Unusual casting traditions ensure that the characters remain similar from company to company.

Auditions for the cast are open auditions. It is also not unknown for someone who is already involved in the show to see someone who fits the look for another character and stop them in the street to tell them to audition.

The year 2000 marks many milestones, not the least of which is a United States Presidential election that will impact countries far beyond the U.S. geographic borders. Yet, finds us in its encyclical "On Social Concerns" that Life and the Dignity of the Human Person lie at the heart of Catholic Social Teaching and that all people must be respected in society. Thus, the example of our leaders must be our guide to a just society.

One could realistically argue that despite the national scope of the elections, we have, in fact, already become global citizens in many ways. Our pattern of travel, communication, education, and communication bring us together now more than ever before in our world. New words are being created every day, it seems, to describe the enormous reach of technology and capital that have enveloped our globe, and which have evaded local or national structures meant to limit capitalism's predictable excesses.

As a result, evidence continues to mount describing the disparity in the distribution of wealth caused by the globalization of economies. The poor are becoming poorer, and the rich, richer.

One final point: Catholic Social Tradition teaches us that we are born into solidarity with our brothers and sisters across the world because we have all been endowed with Dignity by our Creator. In the choices we make in an election season. Which candidates will lead TOGETHER FOR THE FULL DEVELOPMENT OF OTHERS: DEVELOPMENT FOR THE WHOLE HUMAN BEING AND OF ALL THE PEOPLE [THROUGHOUT THE WORLD]."

VOTE: In this election year, the United States Catholic Conference of Bishops reminds us that the measure of every human institution is whether or not it enhances the life and dignity of the human person. The USCCB claims that Life and the Dignity of the Human Person lie at the heart of Catholic Social Teaching and that all people must be respected in society. Thus, the example of our leaders must be our guide to a just society.

The album switches back to the cast ponders how to make a 20-second piece of stage direction song by screenwriter Mark, that Roger's been in withdrawal for the past six months because his girlfriend and her roommates are all singing the same part at the end of the song leaves the listeners: it introduces them to the listener discovers that the singer's going through withdrawal, having not played his beloved guitar in half a year and that Mark's girlfriend just left him for a new lover named Joanne. The two roommates are also a year behind on rent. This provides the lead in for a great rock song, "Rent," in which Roger and Mark burn things for warmth and try to think of how they're going to pay an entire year's rent. "Rent" is the first of many songs that on the soundtrack that can not only stand alone, independent of the film, but also appeal to even sworn haters of musicals. It has an actual rhythm and backed as it is with an electric guitar riff, sounding like a song that could conceivably be released on a modern rock station.

From here, the soundtrack throws several major events at listeners: it introduces them to Collins, shows Collins's first meeting with his future lover Angel, and reveals that both men have AIDS (in a song called "You Okay Honey?"). Then, for good measure, it also reveals, in a frightening 20-second piece of stage direction song by screenwriter Mark, that Roger's been in withdrawal for the past six months because his girlfriend and his roommates are all singing the same part at different times throughout the song.

It's an emotional piece, but it's bittersweet and great song before he dies ("One Song Glory"). Rak, Welsh Family shut out Pangborn 35-0

By MARIAH QUINN and LIA MILLHORN
Sports Writers

Welsh Family won the inter-head-championships last year and judging from their 35-0 drubbing of Pangborn Hall this past Thursday, they may well be setting up for a repeat.

Welsh was no joke, scoring on the first possession as quarterback Katie Lichon threw a 60-yard touchdown pass and returned it for a two-point conversion.

With the victory Cavanaugh improved to 3-0 on the season while Howard drops to 2-2 overall.

Cavanaugh quarterback Lynn Olizow threw to Megan Laird to lead the Chiefs a 6-0 lead.

Howard made a strong start into Cavanaugh territory but was unable to convert on fourth down due to strong Cavanaugh pressure.

With under a minute remaining, Lynn Olizow threw a 40-yard pass to Melissa Marcotte who ran the ball in for a touchdown.

Although held scoreless, Howard wide receiver Elizabeth Klimek was steady all game and quarterback Jill Welsh scrambled for yards and led a steady offensive effort.

Megan Myers and Briggs Agel both baulked in interceptions for Cavanaugh, which has had interceptions in all three games.

Although the offense has come through with big plays, the defense remains unscathed upon this so far this season.

“Our offensive line played great,” coach Bart Bruckert said. “We have a solid defense and we’re looking forward to playing Welsh.”

they'll need to get used too. “Everyone is going to do this,” Waldrum said. “Teams are just going to be that way. We just need to have some patience.” The relatively easy nature of both victories allowed Waldrum to rest some players and get others some valuable playing time. “We needed to rest some players,” Waldrum said. Perhaps the only sour note in an otherwise sweet weekend for the Irish was an injury sustained by freshman sensation Amy Warner. Warner injured her knee in the first half against Seton Hall but continued playing Waldrum held her out Sunday as a precautionary measure. The true extent of the injury will not be known until later today when Warner will be examined by specialists. Warner was moving gingerly on the her heavy-wrapped leg after the Rutgers game, and speculated that the injury might be her ACL. Losing Warner for any significant period of time would be detrimental to an offense that relies heavily on her speed. “We'll know more tomorrow,” Waldrum said. “To me it didn't seem too serious.” Any serious injury to Warner could be a serious blow to a team that has already demonstrated itself as a serious contender for the national title.

Irish

Rather than continuing the solid defensive play that allowed the Irish to outshoot ranked Bradley and Connecticut, the defense gave up three goals for only the second time this season. Apple feels that the performance was a step away from the defensive mentality that has been successful for the Irish this season. “I was a little frustrated with those guys. I felt like our defense took a step backwards against Pittsburgh,” said Apple. “We let in soft goals in my opinion. Those guys have to be better; they have to be more mature. They can't take backwards and expect us to win.”

The game was played in front of a significantly larger crowd than previous home games, partly due to a promotion the team put on earlier in the day for the fans. Taint and fellow goalkeeper Cole Straub manned a goal in front of South Dining Hall during the afternoon, allowing fans to take shots on the two goalies. Raffle tickets and schedules were passed out, with prizes given out during halftime.

Also during halftime, children competed in a goal-kick contest. After the children's contest, two Notre Dame students competed in a "long-kick" competition, with Keough Hall sophomore Dan Reissel claiming a $25 Chili's gift certificate for his punt that sailed past the mid-field.

"The promotion was awesome," said Apple. "The students seemed to have a lot of fun. Our guys had a lot of fun. Knott Hall came out in force."

Blue defeats Gold 3-2 in cancer fund raiser

By MATT ORENCHUK

The good goal-tending of Jeremy Kimento led the Blue to the victory.

"Everyone has had someone who had cancer, and these players put a lot of thought into selecting who they would be playing for," Irish head coach Dave Poulin said.

The game started off quickly as senior Chad Chipchase put one past Kyle Kolquist, who replaced Zasowski in the second period, to give Blue a 3-0 lead.

"I saw an opening on the near side, did a little toe drag move, and put it past Kyle (Kolquist)," Harris said.

The Gold was not about to be embarrassed by its Blue squad counterparts. Brett Henning and Aaron Gill both scored on penalty shots three minutes apart to pull the Gold squad within a goal. The last 10 minutes saw the game return to the stiff defensive play of the first period, and the Blue squad prevailed.

"I was looking for individual parts of the system that we could put in place, especially from our freshmen," Poulin said. "The game was a valuable experience for the goalies since they hadn't seen a lot of shots in practice."

The BlueGold game replaces the hockey team's annual 5k run, which took place the past three years. This year the hockey team decided to go back to doing what they do best in order to raise the money. The players also got the benefits of having to face some game situations before their first game next weekend, and work on their conditioning.

"It beats running," Kimento said.

Oakland clinches AL West with 3-0 victory

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif.

Jason Giambi had three words for the New York Yankees.

"Bring them on!" he exclaimed in the champagne-drenched Oakland clubhouse after the Athletics clinched the AL West title and a first-round playoff series against the two-time World Series champions.

Tim Hudson earned his 20th victory, beating the Texas Rangers 3-0 Sunday in the regular-season finale.

It was scoreless until Ramon Velez and Olmedo Saez each added solo home runs in the eighth.

The A's, who will go to the playoffs for the first time since 1997, join Atlanta as the only teams with 11 division titles.

After the game, the A's spilled onto the field in celebration. Matt Stairs and some of his teammates hoisted Giambi on their shoulders and paraded him before the sellout crowd, which chanted "MVP-MVP!".

Giambi batted .300 in September, with 11 home runs and 32 RBI. The last Oakland player with that many home runs in a month was Mark McGwire in July, 1996.

Although he was hitless Sunday, Giambi had 43 home runs and 137 RBI this season. "I can't even describe this," Giambi said, soaked in champagne after the game and swarmed by the swarm of reporters and television cameras around him. There are no words for this. I mean, it's been incredible coming to the ballpark every day. My brother (Jeremy) is playing with me, it's unbelievable!"

With the victory, the Athletics avoided a trip to Tampa Bay for a makeup game Monday and got extra time to prepare for the playoffs. Oakland's game at Tampa Bay on Sept. 18 was postponed because of Hurricane Gordon.

The Cleveland Indians beat Toronto 11-4 earlier in the day, preventing the A's from clinching the wild card.

"Pound started the day with a half-game lead over Seattle in the AL West. The Mariners clinched the wild card with a 5-2.

There had been talk that manager Art Howe would hold Hudson (20-6) if Cleveland lost, but he decided Saturday night he would start his ace no matter what.

Irish make quick work of Wildcats, Hoyas

By RACHAEL PROTZMAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame volleyball team topped Villanova and Georgetown to move to an undefeated 2-0 in Big East play.

"I think it was a good start to our Big East season," said junior Marciie Bomhack. "Overall we did a good job this weekend but there's always room for improvement and with the Big East teams I think that we could beat them a little better."

The Irish, 11-4 on the season, dominated the Wildcats (15-5, 15-2, 15-9) Friday in games one and two of the match before allowing Villanova to take the lead at 6-2 in game three. The Irish came back strong to earn the win.

Notre Dame has an undefeated record against the Wildcats with eight previous wins over Villanova. The Wildcats are now at 6-10 on the 2000 season.

Notre Dame combined for a .351 hitting percentage against the Wildcats with eight previous wins over Villanova. The Wildcats are now at 6-10 on the 2000 season.

Doping scandals overshadow Olympic performances

The Olympics couldn’t have ended sooner. Not because I think the sports are stale or because they let professionals compete now. Not even because the only coverage we could watch here was of tape-delayed events that happened sometime during exams last May. In fact, I really wanted to watch Marion Jones and Maurice Greene run the finals of the 100 meters, even though I knew earlier in the day that they both had already won. But I was ready to see those Olympics go because I couldn’t take much more of the governing body of the games, the International Olympic Committee (IOC), or the media covering the events.

Going into Sydney, most people knew of Marion Jones’s well-publicized goal of winning five gold medals in track and field. Something that’s never been done before.

Shortly after she won gold number one in the 100 meters, reports surfaced that her husband and world champion shot putter, C.J. Hunter, had failed four tests for performance-enhancing drugs since July. Big news, right? It was, but only should have been if Hunter had even planned on competing in the Olympics. His only reason for going to Sydney, however, was to support his wife. He decided before the games even started not to compete due to a knee injury. And all of this, of course, assumes that he even did something wrong.

Just look at gymnast Andreea Raducan. She won the gold medal in the all-around competition before the IOC discovered her great transgression — taking an over-the-counter cold medication from the team doctor that contained traces of a banned substance.

She took something to treat a cold, and the IOC took her gold medal, even though they acknowledged the treatment gave her no advantage over the other gymnasts.

If banned substances can be found in cold medicine, and if C.J. Hunter did in fact test positive four times, doesn’t it make you wonder if he even knew he was taking them?

It’s now well documented that traces of performance-enhancing drugs can be found in anything from Raducan’s cold medicine to nutritional supplements that don’t list all their ingredients. Many expect the latter in Hunter’s situation.

Hunter himself made the point that in 10 years of throwing the shot put, his distance has increased by only six inches. That’s not exactly the mark of someone reaping the benefits of a banned substance.

He cried through his press conference, telling everyone he didn’t know how he tested positive but that he planned on figuring out how it could’ve happened.

According to the IOC, it doesn’t matter how the drugs got there, even when the circumstances of the “doping” situation are ridiculous. I use the word “doping” because that seems to be the favorite buzzword of every writer covering the Olympics.

“Doping” scandals involve people knowingly doing hard drugs, whether they be steroids or heroin. They don’t involve athletes unknowingly depositing junk in their blood streams.

If reporters aren’t buzzing about doping, they’re asking athletes still on the field of play whether or not they used a banned substance.

The public’s right to know has turned into our right to get sick. Yes, the sports world needs to be monitored to prevent abuses that not only hurt the games but, far more importantly, the athletes involved. Investigative reporting plays an invaluable role in the “doping” situation.

But no, I didn’t need to see people try to bring down Hunter’s name when he wasn’t even competing, just like I don’t need to hear about Pete Rose betting on baseball every time he’s in public.

Since it’s very possible Hunter could have tested positive for an innocent reason, why not give him a chance to prove that before hurting both him and his wife? It’s not like the shot put event was being compromised by him watching.

I also didn’t need to see a 15-year-old Raducan lose her Olympic gold medal amidst a “doping” scandal just because she had a runny nose. If that’s the standard, I would like to forget my section football team’s tie last Thursday because I played after taking, yes, cold medicine.

The public needs to be educated and not necessarily those of The Observer.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.
As a 23-year-old investment banker with Salomon Smith Barney, Paul Leung and his team were asked to compile a list of suggestions that would illustrate how the firm could improve in the eyes of its junior-level analysts. Paul wrote a blunt memo highlighting 36 different ways the firm could increase the quality of life for its analysts. Among the firm's dress code, between senior and junior we can relax when things get would have laughed in his security, Salomon Smith meeting some of the requests to dismiss any outright. To Paul's surprise, the memo was leaked around Wall Street. He soon found himself in a press storm—The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, CBS, and CNN all wanted to talk to this brash young man who had inspired the Street to adopt a casual-dress policy. Paul was asked to voice his opinion. He took that directive seriously, speaking his mind the only way he knew how, with passion and distinction. And while some of Wall Street's old-boy network might not like it, at Salomon Smith Barney, impact is not dependent upon job title.
Britons dominate Belles 7-0 in conference play

By ALICIA ORTIZ
Sports Writer

The Albion College Britons used its home field advantage to ring the Belles to the tune of a 7-0 shutout Friday.

"We came out flat today," forward Heather Muth said. "Albion is a strong team." Muth said. "They would have been beatable any other day.

The Belles began the game defending their zone, and throughout the match never really made it to the other side of the field to mount an offensive effort.

A solid start helped the Brits to an early lead with strong support from their offensive line. Breaking out early was a challenge for the Belles.

"We need to start strong," Belles head coach Jason Milligan said.

"Albion had the ball in the net at the beginning of the game.

A solid start helped the Brits, while they also had an impressive offensive line. However, the fact that Albion in top in the MIAA was just a contributing factor in the Belles loss.

"We have injuries, everyone is stressed, and we are losing to teams we could beat." Belles forward Shawna Jiannoni said. "We are at a point in our season where we are all a little discouraged."

There were small victories in the game. Tia Kapphahn made 9 saves after starting in goal for the Belles and freshman Laura Metzger made 11 saves.

"We are working on keeping the team moral up," Jiannoni said. "Once that happens and the chemistry goes up, we will click as a team, and we will win."

The Belles used the match against the Brits to realize their weaknesses. They hope to use the knowledge gained in this game to continue to build the 2000 Belles squad into a formidable team, said coaches and players.

"We need to work on asserting ourselves in the first half," Belles assistant coach Jared Hochstetler said. "We always seem to play better in the first half."

The squad looks to turn the tables at home later in the season, where they will face off against Albion for a second time.

"I am looking forward to playing them at home," Muth said. "I think we can definitely give them a good game."

Although they failed to gain a win, the Belles felt that the experience gained in the loss against top-ranked Albion will be helpful in the future.

"I do not think that the score reflected how we played," Belles midfielder Lynn Taylor said.

This game showed us that we are still working on playing as a team," junior midfielder Adrian Kirby said. "But we are improving in every game."

The Brits remain undefeated and at the top of the MIAA standings with a 6-0 record. The Belles now have a record of 2-3-1 in the MIAA. Their next game is at Hope College on Oct. 4.

Irish have impressive showing at Eck Classic

By STEVE KEPPEL
Sports Writer

With no Notre Dame football game this weekend the South Bend athletic focus switched temporarily to women's tennis as the Irish hosted the Eck Classic at the Courtney Tennis Center.

The Notre Dame women's tennis team played well this weekend considering they were without top players Michelle Dasso and Becky Varnum and were facing some of the top teams in the country.

"I think overall it was a good weekend for the team," freshman Emily Neighbours said. "We rose to the challenge and played pretty well."

Neighbours, who is from Indianapolis and comes from a long line of Notre Dame graduates, finished fifth in the flight B doubles and had a consolation win in the flight C singles. After having a tough match on the opening day Neighbours turned things around and won the rest of her matches on Saturday and Sunday.

"I had a little disappointment on Friday," Neighbours said. "But I feel good that I was able to rebound and finish undefeated the rest of the weekend."

The doubles teams, which seemed to be the weak spot last week in Baltimore, rose to the challenge and came out tough this weekend.

The tournament was highlighted for the Irish by the play of Nina Vaughan and freshman Alicia Salas and juniors Berica Day and Michelle Hamilton, who both advanced to the finals in their respective flights.

"The teams were a lot stronger in this tournament than last week, but we played better than we have in the past in doubles," said Michelle Hamilton, who along with partner Day defeated Shelby Lipson and Brigette Zarazer from Illinois State 9-7.

"We have been working on doubles recently and I think we can continue to improve on that in the future," Hamilton said.

Nina Vaughan and Alicia Salas beat doubles teams from Northwestern, Marquette, and Wisconsin before they took on Colville and Chinwah from Western Michigan in the final. Colville and Chinwah, who beat Notre Dame's Katie Conha and Kim Guy in the semi-finals, edged out Vaughan and Salas 8-4 in their match on Sunday.

Vaughan, who is from Corona Del Mar, CA, had an impressive tournament in singles as well. She ended up placing third in Flight A singles by defeating freshman team mate Caylan Leslie. Vaughan, a junior, is coming off a 20-win season in doubles and is looking to establish herself as one of the Irish's top players.

Freshman Alicia Salas, who advanced to the finals for the second time in her short career on Sunday, has played very well in her first collegiate tournaments. Salas, a four-time singles state champion in high school, looks to be improving each week and hopes to get her first finals victory sometime soon.

WOMEN'S SOCCER

Irish pick up weekend wins over Pirates, Knights

By KEVIN BERCHOU
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's soccer continued its strong start this weekend as it moved to 11-0-0 with conference victories over the Seton Hall Pirates and the Scarlet Knights of Rutgers. Playing perhaps its toughest Mid-Atlantic division foe in Seton Hall the Irish plundered the Pirates, out-shooting them 34-2 before the lopsided margin of 6-0. The Irish returned to battle Sunday, leaving the Scarlet Knights seeing red with an easy 34-2 to the Panthers of Pittsburgh.

After a two-week scoring drought, the goals began to spread out — we'd be able to spread our energy throughout the season. "It's frustrating for all of us to be so close in these last three games," said Irish head coach Chris Apple. "To compete at a high level against tough opponents, and then come out on the short end, everyone's a little bit frustrated."

Pittsburgh senior Spencer Barton was the thorn in Notre Dame's side, scoring all three Panther goals for his first career hat trick. Barton started off his career evening early, taking a pass from teammate Chad Portier and lofting a 20-foot shot over goalkeeper Greg Tail for the lone goal of the first half. After halftime, the momentum of the game moved towards the Irish. Sophomore Erich Braun — the leading scorer for the Irish this season — tied the game up 7:22 into the second half when senior Steve Maio found Braun open in front of the goal. Braun kicked the ball to the left of diving Pittsburgh goalkeeper Justin Gau.

"I think that's a credit to Notre Dame. You're playing for that tie, and they get that goal." Rutgers doesn't have the ability to come out and get it back. When you pack it in and you do give one away it is psychologically demoralizing."

Amanda Guettin put the Knights, who were already on life support, out of their misery with a goal just seconds later. After taking a pass from Vanessa Puszinsky, Guettin sent a perfect shot across the goalmouth and into the bottom right hand corner.

"She's about one of the only players out there who can make a shot like that," Waldrum said.

After out-shooting Rutgers 31-0 and only scoring twice, the Irish were concerned about defenders packing the box against them, but realize it's a style we'd be able to rest him a little bit more," said Apple. "As it stands he's just concerned about defenders packing the box out the there who can make a shot like that," Waldrum said. "I'm very happy with the weekend," Irish head coach Randy Waldrum said. "I thought we did a lot of things well."

"Senior All-American Anne Makinen scored a pretty early goal off a cross from junior Lindsey Jones before five different Irish players contributed tallies of their own to cap the 6-0 win. After halftime, through their hyped slowdown with Seton Hall, things became tougher for much ballyhooed No.1-ranked Notre Dame on Sunday. Though the Scarlet Knights of Rutgers were not at the same talent level as Notre Dame, they gave the Irish fits by keeping to a strict defensive style that made scoring scarce.

"We didn't plan on sitting back," Rutgers head coach Glenn Crooks said. "I think that's a credit to Notre Dame. They almost pushed us to play that way, but we came out to play." Whether or not he intended to play defensively and escape South Bend with a tie, Crooks' plan worked. Though the Irish outshout the Knights 12-0 in the game's first half, the scoreboard still read 0-0, signifying a moral victory for Rutgers.

"We were happy at the half," said Crooks. "We could have played better but we were happy to have it 0-0 and still be in the match."

A Knight defender inadvertently touched the ball in the goal box giving the grateful Irish a penalty kick. Anne Makinen buried the ensuing shot high into the left corner for her 60th career goal giving Notre Dame a lead they would never concede.

"That goal killed us," Crooks said. "We really never recovered."

Added Waldrum: "It's tough when you're playing for that tie, and they get that goal. Rutgers doesn't have the ability to come out and get it back. When you pack it in and you do give one away it is psychologically demoralizing."
