And the winner is ...

Four dorm rooms are featured as the campus’ best for neatness, atmosphere, freshmen, and overall excellence.

Scene • page 12

Grading the government

Finals may be approaching, but student government is just hitting midterms. The Observer looks at our leaders and issues a report card.

In Focus

Friday

DECEMBER 1, 2000

The Observer

The Independent Newspaper Serving Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s

VOL XXXIV NO. 63

HTTP://OBSERVER.ND.EDU

The crime she can’t remember

By COLLEEN McCARTHY

Assistant News Editor

Editor’s Note: Katie is an alias.

In recent years, rapists have a new way to overpower their victims in the form of a drug. Now commonly known as the date rape drug, Rohypnol (“roofies”) or GHB has emerged.

The drug is colorless, odorless and may be tasteless and is normally slipped into drinks where it then dissolves.

For 17-year old Katie, a visitor to Notre Dame’s campus, that horror became reality during a weekend of what was supposed to be filled with the fun of football tradition. Instead of memories of tailgating and rushing the field, she will remember the week end as the one that changed her life — the weekend that she may have been raped.

Accompanied by a friend who attends Notre Dame, Katie went with a group of college students eager to party to an off-campus apartment that was the home to several Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s students. While not a frequent drinker, the social atmosphere grabbed her, and she made the decision to drink.

“I never really drink because it isn’t worth the trouble,” Katie said. But the high school junior consumed about three beers in three hours, drinking conservatively in the new college environment.

Feeling in control and not intoxicated, Katie left her group of friends midway through the party to go to the bathroom. The group, too, followed her to the bathroom, a stranger took her cup from her and refilled it.

“I lost track of [the cup] for a minute, but then the person gave it back to me,” she said, adding that if she had been inebriated, her friends would have never left her to go to the bathroom. But in the hazy recollections of that evening, after Katie left the bathroom, she remembers nothing.

Katie says she woke up in the original apartment hours later, with a hazy, confused feeling — and a strange man lying next to her.

“I didn’t recognize where I was and there was this person who I had seen earlier the night next to me,” she said. “I asked him who he was and asked him not to leave me because I didn’t know where I was.”

But beyond the terror of not knowing where she was, more terrifying to the high school junior was that her clothes were disheveled, and some removed.

“I had more clothing off than on and this isn’t like me at all,” she said. “It was very scary because it’s not like when you go to bed at night and dream but wake up and don’t remember things ... because at least you know when you wake up nothing bad could have happened to you even if you don’t remember.”

But Katie had the feeling that something bad had happened to her, and this wasn’t a dream. But even so, her normally conscientious character abandoned her, and at no time did she say to the stranger to take her home.

Katie finally made it back to the dorm where she was staying — although she doesn’t remember how — just before sunrise. Her friend later described told Katie she was confused when she returned, still obviously under the influence of the drugs. She said she was “like nothing, she said I just sat there,” Katie said.

What confuses Katie most about the night is her whereabouts the hours after leaving the bathroom.

“What doesn’t make sense is that [my] darkness and disorientation, they are informed about elections and rules. These representatives will monitor voting stations and ensure dorm residents hear, appeals granted and appeals denied.

Because of these complications and a need to improve the overall election process, the judicial council and senate oversight committee revised the student union constitution, making several election reform amendments. The revised document was presented to the student senate for approval at Wednesday night’s meeting.

"The effort to make election reforms has been around a while,” said oversight co-chair Audra Hagan. "There were problems in the past and the changes seek to provide for unknowns in the future. We wanted to put a few more checks and balances in the whole process.”

The judicial council and oversight committee met six times starting in September to discuss possible amendments. After full break, the final revisions were decided upon and given to Hagan, who put them into constitutional format.

"It was definitely a group effort,” said Tony Wagner, judicial council president. "We wanted to work with senate instead of having two different groups working against each other.”

Structural Changes

The reform included several structural changes, including the creation of an election committee, an executive committee and executive liaisons.

"I think the most important thing we did were structural changes,” said judicial council vice president of elections, John Bauters. "This year, there is a definite process instead of handling issues as they came.”

The J-council representative from each dorm will make up the election committee, chaired by the vice president of elections. These representatives will monitor voting stations and ensure dorm residents are informed about elections and rules.

The executive committee will be made up of members from the election committee, four will be elected by the committee,
Pat Kelly

COLUMBUS, Ohio

In the wake of the early morning riots on Nov. 19 that produced fire, a stabbing and a quick reaction from Ohio State University, Ohio State President William "Brit" Kirwan has said Ohio State will consider punishing students for their crimes committed off campus during rutting that followed OSU's 14-9 victory over Michigan State.

All 10 of the OSU students who were arrested on the night of the riots have been suspended in abeyance, which means that they will be able to continue attending classes and go about their normal routine until they meet with Student Affairs.

"Recommendations will then be made for each student's status," said Bill Hall, interim vice president of Student Affairs. He has said that punishments may include probation, suspension, dismissal or even being barred from attending any school in Ohio.

The existing Code of Student Conduct makes no mention of punishing students for off-campus misconduct. However, a revised version of the code is being considered in the University Senate. If the revised code is passed, it would allow the university to discipline students for violent crime committed off campus or for destruction of property.

Elizabeth Conklin, a university spokesman, said the rules which permit Kirwan to discipline students are located outside the Student Code of Conduct.

"Put aside the code of conduct, (Kirwan) is disciplining the students by taking the faculty rules into consideration," Conklin said.

However, the possible penalties or punishments for students who are involved in off-campus misconduct are not detailed in the faculty rules.

---

Chuck Solorio

ACCUMET WEATHER SERVICES

3420 NW 23rd St.

503/221-5980

Fax 503/221-5981

www.accumet.com

FLX 00 2130 32 -14 00 24 00 36 00 48 00 52 00 56 00 60 00 64 00 68 00 72 00 76 00 80 00 84 00 88 00 92 00 96 00 99 00 102 00 105 00 108 00 111 00 114 00 117 00 120 00

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:

FRONTS:
Women's Resource Center plays educational role on campus

By LAURA ROMPF
Assistant News Editor

Diana Simpson of the Women's Resource Center told the senate Wednesday night that the center currently has three main functions: to serve as an information source, a coordinator and an awareness organization.

"We have a substantial library right now where people can come, look up information or check out books," Simpson said. "We also hope to coordinate resources for organizations both on campus and in St. Joe County. We don't offer counseling at the Center, but we can send people to the appropriate places."

Simpson told the senate that the Center sponsors events throughout the year, starting with Freshman Orientation. The center is currently planning several programs.

"We are looking to have a speaker on eating disorders, and we're currently talking to Tracy Gold of Growing Pains," Simpson said. She also said the Center is looking for service opportunities and planning a forum about women in sports.

Simpson said the Center's main concerns are its budget and reputation. "Because of our small budget, it's hard to dedicate money to our day-to-day functions," she said. "We're looking at good ways to allocate our funds."

"A lot of people have a negative reaction to the Women's Resource Center because they don't know what it's about," she said. "We just want people to see what we're doing and what's going on." On the senate that there will be mail service available in LaFortune. If students give mail to the LaFortune Information Desk, it will be mailed out the next morning.

By MIKE CONNOLLY
News Writer

Students looking for a large, quiet place to work during study days will have one more option this year. Beginning Wednesday at 10 p.m., DeBartolo Hall will be open 24 hours a day to accommodate students' studying needs. All the semi-private rooms and classrooms without computers will be unlocked and available for use by students. (Students studying in DeBartolo runs smoothly during study days, student body vice president Brooke Norton said DeBartolo might be permanently open 24 hours in the future.)

During finals week, DeBartolo will be open from 9:30 p.m. to 5 a.m. so that students can prepare for their exams. DeBartolo was chosen as the new study area because of its size, according to Jenny Menahan, assistant to the vice president of student affairs.

"It provides the most amount of space for students," she said. The auditoriums will not be available for student use during these times. Classrooms with computers will be locked but any students that wishes to use one of the computers can request that the door be unlocked. The DeBartolo computer cluster will continue its normal hours.

Some classrooms will be unavailable for student use if professors have reserved them for review sessions. The times when these classrooms are reserved will be posted outside the door to the classroom.

The Office of the Provost, Student Affairs and student government started looking into the possibility of 24-hour access to DeBartolo Hall soon after Father Mark Poorman took charge of Student Affairs last May.

The biggest concern in opening DeBartolo 24 hours was security — especially theft by non-students. "It wasn't from a student standpoint," Norton said. "But if all the doors are open to DeBartolo, that's a big building with a lot of equipment."

Locking the doors to classrooms with computers will hopefully eliminate some security concerns and will provide the need for students who really need to use the computers to request access to them. Only students who need to use the computers will be allowed into computer rooms.

"They want to make sure only students are using it and students who need to use it, like business students preparing projects, get to use it," Norton said.
Drugs continued from page 1
friends] were all looking for me," she said. "They would have me at all the apartments or where I ended up outside if I had been there because they searched the whole area.

The details that don't make sense include the trouble involving Katie. Upon returning home that weekend, Katie began to fall asleep, which was unusual of that evening.

She became more and more confused about the events that transpired during the fateful night. After talking to her parents, she decided to see the doctor.

"I've never had sex before and so I was embarrass ed because I was going to see a doctor and have tests for STDs, AIDS and a pregnancy test," said Katie. "I didn't realize anyone could have done this to me. I just thought that the time when I have an STD or AIDS or if I am pregnant? It can't be, it can't be. I have a future ahead of me with so many plans and I want to go to college."

Although she learned she was pregnant immediately, it took a week for the tests to come back. All of the tests for AIDS and STDs came back negative. Her doctor told her he couldn't be sure if she had been raped. Although the covering in the vagina that is normally broken down during intercourse was intact, the doctor said that it does not break for everyone who has intercourse.

The doctor was also unable to test to see if Katie had been given the date rape drug since it would have processed from her system by that time.

"My doctor said it was more than likely from everything I had told him. My story was very similar to another case he had seen where the girl had given the date rape drug," she said. "He said that he was 99 percent sure I had been given 'roofies' in my drink that night.

For several years Laurel Esslinger, director of South Bend's Sex Offense Services (SOS), has been hearing from women like Katie who suspect that they have been given the date rape drug – but cannot remember all the details.

"We began hearing about incidents involving the drug about five years ago," she said. "We average about one case a month where a woman thinks she has been given the drug and was raped.

"People would come in and say a chunk of time had elapsed that they had no memory of or were confused about, and we kept seeing this pattern emerge for about four years. This led us to believe that it had been drugged in some way."

However, Esslinger said there is no way to verify when one has been given the drug in some situations.

"One of the problems is that samples need to be collected quickly after ingestion of the drug so by the time the victim wakes up, realize what has happened, and want to take action, it is too late, so it is hard to conclusively prove what the person was given," she said.

And it's not just college students who are being given the drug, Esslinger said.

"This drug is being given to everyone," she said. "We need to see it as everyone's problem not just one that is specific to college campuses." GIB, con-

We averaged about one case a month where a woman thinks she has been given the drug and was raped."

Laurel Esslinger
director of South Bend's Sex Offense Services

"We need to see it as everyone's problem not just one that is specific to college campuses." GIB, contained in "roofies" acts as a depressant on the central nervous system and can even account for amnesia for a period of time after ingestion. Therefore, victims given the drug often cannot account for events that transpired to them after ingesting the drug. It can take effect as quickly as 15 minutes after ingestion. Esslinger detailed signs that might indicate whether a person has been given the date rape drug.

GIB, con-

"If you feel more intoxicated than usual from the amount of alcohol you have consumed, if you wake up and feel really hungover or can't account for some period of time, or if you feel someone has had sex with you but you can't remember any or all of the incident, these may be indications you've been given the drug," said Esslinger. She has suggestions to prevent from being given the drug.

"One of the big things to remember is not to drink a beverage that you didn't pour or open yourself," she said. "Also, don't share drinks, take drinks from a big punch bowl or a container that is being passed around and don't take drinks from strangers. If you are drinking alone, don't go to the bathroom, take the drink with you," she said.

Esslinger warns that everyone needs to be aware. "It's something that everyone should be conscious of and unfortunately, it really does exist. It's very sad," she said.

Today, Katie is still coping with the experience.

"To tell you the truth, I don't think I feel the way I should feel," she said. "I'm grateful that everything was okay and I was so relieved that the tests came back and there was nothing wrong with me. I'm looking at it as a learning experience and especially after I got the test results back, I decided I was ready to move on."

Matt Murphy president of the Arnold Air Society

R O TC reaches out to help community

\Arnold Air Society hosts Field Day for needy children\n
By SHEILA FLYNN

News Writer

Committed to both national and local service, the Arnold Air Society of Notre Dame's Air Force ROTC will host its annual Field Day, Sunday from 11:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. in St. p. Center to provide local underprivileged children with a day of Christmas activities and entertainment.

Field Day has been held on the Notre Dame campus for over a decade, winning the Benjamin D. Foulois Squadron national acclaim in both 1996 and 1999, when the project earned them a Willie B. Mays Award.

This year, over 100 children from organizations such as El BuenVecino, YWCA, Girl Scouts, South Bend Center for the Homeless, Boys and Girls Club and the Charles Martin Youth Center have been invited to campus.

"It's a great service project. The kids have a great time and so does everyone else," said Matt Murphy, president of the Arnold Air Society.

Refreshments were donated by local pizza places, sub shops and food services.

In addition, the children will be entertained by a variety of Notre Dame performance groups. Members of the marching band, the Irish Guard, Troop ND, the pom squad, Stars and Stripes and the Air Force ROTC rifle team will be appearing.

"I have a great staff working with me and we have received a lot of support from the squadron staff members and the Notre Dame ROTC," said Kim Milford, event organizer.

She said, "Pulling off an event like Field Day is really all about teamwork and using your resources."

It's fast & simple Call or fax in your order then come and get it at our special side entrance. And don't forget to pack in our reserved Go parking spaces. You'll find mouth-watering selections to choose from including Big Mouth Burgers Baby Back Ribs, Fajitas, Steaks, Saldada and more. Child's To Go is every amazing thing you can get at Chili's To go.

Mishawaka
4810 Grape Road
PH: 219.271.1330
Fax: 219.271.2197

HOURS: Monday-Thursday 11:00 a.m.-11:00 p.m. Friday-Saturday 11:00 a.m.-12:00 a.m.
Sunday-11:00 a.m.-10:00 p.m.

Visit The Observer Online.
http://observer.nd.edu

Xaverian Brothers Volunteers

Brother Bonaventure will be available on December 1st recruiting volunteers for Haiti, Kenya, and other sites. Drop in from 9am-12pm or 2-5pm.
Guerrillas kill 16 in India: Suspected separatist guerrillas killed 16 people and wounded 30 Thursday in three attacks in India's northeastern Assam state, police said. Insurgents demanding a state have killed more than 10,000 people in the last two years, and many have been killed this month — mostly Hindu-speaking minorities who settled in Assam.

Indonesia takes military action: President Abdurrahman Wahid ordered tough military action in far-flung secessionist provinces of Indonesia on Thursday, fearing that the world's fourth most populous country could break apart. In scenes uncomfortably reminiscent of the 32-year reign of former dictator Suharto, more than 1,000 troops and riot police paraded Thursday through Jayapura, capital of Irian Jaya province, on the eve of a big independence rally here.

Kindergarten killed in bus crash: A bus packed with children overturned within sight of their Kentucky elementary school Thursday, killing a 5-year-old kindergartner. State Police Trooper Chuck Robertson said the bus carrying 47 children apparently ran off the shoulder of the road and the driver overcorrected, sending the bus across both lanes before it overturned.

Soccer mom guilty of assault: A woman was found guilty of assault for her part in a brawl involving parents at a boys' soccer game. Jacqueline Lenon was ordered Tuesday to complete 20 hours of community service and to pay $1,000 in restitution to the injured girl. Dowgin also recommended that Lenon enroll in a course in anger management.

A lawsuit filed in a Marion County court seeks to have potentially thousands of criminal convictions thrown out because they resulted from unconstitutional sobriety checkpoints. The lawsuit was filed this week after the Indiana Court of Appeals ruled that the police roadblocks violated the state constitution and the U.S. Supreme Court ruled against drug roadblocks conducted by Indianapolis police. The lawsuit against the state seeks to have an Indianapolis man's public intoxication conviction expunged because it resulted from a January 1997 roadblock by Marion County police.

Mad cow disease sparks new tests

Many Europeans are anxious to calm public fears in Europe's mad cow crisis. German officials said Thursday they will introduce mandatory beef testing, check whether pastures spread the disease and possibly burn up huge stocks of animal feed in power plants. German lawmakers late Thursday approved an immediate blanket ban on meat and bone meal feed after the first German cows tested positive last week for bovine spongiform encephalopathy, as the disease is formally known. The measure is to take effect Saturday.

Feeding animal meal to cattle has been banned in Germany since 1994, but officials want to help regain public confidence by extending the ban to other animals raised for slaughter.

Contaminated bone and animal meal in cattle feed are believed to cause mad cow disease. Some scientists suspect the disease causes a similar fatal brain-destructing ailment, Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, in people who eat infected beef. Two people in France and 80 in Britain have died from the human form of the disease.

In Brussels, Belgium, a European Union veterinary panel Thursday backed proposals for further testing of all cattle over 30 months of age in all of the union's 15 countries. Illustrating the spread of the scare, non-EU countries also took new measures against the disease.

Switzerland said it will ban animal products in all livestock feed by March. The Czech Republic announced it will widen an existing ban on some beef, some none at all.

Fire kills dozens after pipe burst

The pipeline, owned by the state Nigerian National Petroleum Corp., carries refined fuel from the port to a depot where it is loaded onto trucks and taken to Nigerian cities. A state oil company official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there were many dead — people of all ages and both sexes — in the blast and fire, which he blamed on oil thieves. Company spokesman Ndu Ughamadu said the number killed may never be known because relatives were collecting bodies to avoid prosecution.

The practice of "scooping," the name for the process of vandalizing and gathering fuel from pipelines, is common among impoverished Nigerians despite the risk of fire or harsh punishment.

Some government critics have accused corrupt officials of turning a blind eye to the practice in return for a share of the profits from fuel sales. Residents said the pipeline began spouting fuel about a week before the blast, causing large pools to form on the ground.

Ughamadu said unidentified criminals were responsible for the leak.
Debt forgiveness policies changing

By EMILY ORE

News Writer

According to the Nov. 2 edition of The Chronicle of Higher Education, the Department of Education passed new regulations regarding the responsibility of family members to repay loans after a student becomes disabled or dies. These regulations were created to help the department crack down on the claims of disability or death to avoid repaying federal student loans.

Changes were made due to the large number of such claims made in the past, including a department study, which, according to The Chronicle of Higher Education, found that $73 million in student loans were forgiven under fraudulent claims between July 1994 and Dec. 1996. Under federal rules a disability refers to medical impairment, expected to continue indefinitely, that prevent a borrower from working and earning wages. A student cannot be considered totally and permanently disabled on the basis of a condition that existed at the time he applied for a loan, unless his condition substantially deteriorates.

Under the new regulations, department officials will conditionally approve a discharge for a loan borrower who becomes permanently disabled and then monitor the borrower's financial status for up to three years to ensure that the person does not begin to earn "significant" wages. If at the end of three years the borrower still meets requirements for receiving forgiveness of his loan, the department will permanently discharge the loan.

On tightening the regulation, senior Brian Dixon said it makes sense. People shouldn't be abusing the system and cheating others out of financial aid. Fellow senior Maureen Sullivan agreed with him.

"Suppose it's good because people who take advantage of it are just hurting other people, it takes away from people who really need financial aid," Sullivan said.

Under these new rules, colleges will be independently responsible for determining whether borrowers in the Perkins Loan Program, a campus-based program that provides low-cost loans to students, qualify to have their loans discharged. Due to the large number of claims that will take place for lenders, colleges and the Education Department itself, the provisions will not go into effect until July 1, 2002.

However, as a result of falsification of death certificates that families initially depend on to get the loans discharged, there is no assurance of a real death certificate or a certified copy before a loan can be forgiven as of July 1, 2000.

The policy changes are expected to significantly affect Notre Dame's policy on debt forgiveness. According to Brenda Wardlow, the loan manager for Notre Dame students, there is no specific Notre Dame policy. Instead the school follows federal regulations regarding the forgiveness of debt for students with disabilities and the families of those who die.

Wardlow said that in the 30 years she has worked for the school, maybe half a dozen cases have been brought before her. This minuscule number of students attempting to gain debt forgiveness at Notre Dame demonstrates that the new policies will indeed have very little impact upon the school. As for the policy for students who die, Wardlow said, "As far as death, death certificates are pretty final. No one is trying to scam you."
LAS CONCHAS, Guatemala

When it came time to burn the five teen-agers alive, the gasoline flew in from all directions. "I didn't know so many people had brought it," said Alfredo Coy, the self-proclaimed "president" of this sweltering Guatemalan mountain hamlet of 37 metal-roofed houses. "The public came ready to do what had to be done."

He was referring to the events of Tuesday, when 500 area men, women and children converged on this O'qech'i Indian village and did the only thing they thought would guarantee the safety of their families: They burned five suspected murderers to death, setting them on fire one by one as they begged for their lives.

Today, the charred remains of five boys between the ages of 16 and 18 lie in blood-red heaps inside morgue lockers — vile reminders both of Guatemalan's losing battle against common crime and of its horrific inclination toward vigilante violence.

The teens, whose bodies are so charred they will probably never be identified, rode a bus to this remote, mountainous corner of central Guatemala, looking to kill. What they didn't count on was that the normally peaceful villagers were just as ready for violence.

Before dawn Tuesday, police say, the teens ambushed a local man and his 8-year-old son, shooting the man to death and stealing the 400 quetzales — $52 — he was carrying to buy meat and salt at a local market. The killers disappeared into the mountains.

"The peasants were not going to rest until those responsible were dead," said Julia Sr. 21, owner of the shop, who watched the burnings from her store. "There was no excitement. There was calm and there was planning."

When the mob found the boys in a nearby forest, they beat them, confiscated their two pistols and three plastic toy guns and escorted them back to this village, 200 miles northeast of Guatemala City.

The locals sat their captives in a circle and staged a public "trial" during which each of the teens fingered another for the killing.

When it became clear that the public saw no room for clemency, the locals doused the five boys with gasolina. Seconds later, matches were lit. "I didn't feel anything. I wasn't happy, I wasn't sad," said Francisco Can, a 36-year-old corn farmer who said he only watched. "But lots of people applauded as the criminals died. About 500 of us understood that this was necessary because these men committed such a terrible crime."

A barely day later, life was back to normal in this valley of banana trees, rare tropical orchids and head-high cornfields. Barefoot children chased chickens through tall weeds, and roosters — confused by the highlands altitude — crossed all day long.

The red-clay ravine where the locals burned their victims might be a nice place to picnic under different circumstances. But today, huge yellow-and-black butterflies drift listlessly over piles of ash evidence of death.

A blood-soaked collar lies beside a charred shirt with a traditional Mayan stripe pattern. A melted phone card sits beneath a melted phone card. A blood-soaked collar lies beside a charred shirt with a traditional Mayan stripe pattern. A melted phone card sits beneath a charred shirt with a traditional Mayan stripe pattern.

It's time to get your ACE application! Stop by 108 Badin or go to www.nd.edu/ace.

For Guatemalan Mayans, mob killings were only answer from dozens of nearby villages congested outside a small shop of mudcaked wooden walls and plotted what would soon become a murderous manhunt.

"The peasants were not going to rest until those responsible were dead," said Julia Sr. 21, owner of the shop, who watched the burnings from her store. "There was no excitement. There was calm and there was planning."

When the mob found the boys in a nearby forest, they beat them, confiscated their two pistols and three plastic toy guns and escorted them back to this village, 200 miles northeast of Guatemala City.

The locals sat their captives in a circle and staged a public "trial" during which each of the teens fingered another for the killing.

When it became clear that the public saw no room for clemency, the locals doused the five boys with gasolina. Seconds later, matches were lit. "I didn't feel anything. I wasn't happy, I wasn't sad," said Francisco Can, a 36-year-old corn farmer who said he only watched. "But lots of people applauded as the criminals died. About 500 of us understood that this was necessary because these men committed such a terrible crime."

A barely day later, life was back to normal in this valley of banana trees, rare tropical orchids and head-high cornfields. Barefoot children chased chickens through tall weeds, and roosters — confused by the highlands altitude — crossed all day long.

The red-clay ravine where the locals burned their victims might be a nice place to picnic under different circumstances. But today, huge yellow-and-black butterflies drift listlessly over piles of ash evidence of death.

A blood-soaked collar lies beside a charred shirt with a traditional Mayan stripe pattern. A melted phone card sits beneath a charred shirt with a traditional Mayan stripe pattern. A melted phone card sits beneath a charred shirt with a traditional Mayan stripe pattern. A melted phone card sits beneath a charred shirt with a traditional Mayan stripe pattern.
Anthrax vaccine program to dwindle, supplies running out

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Because of dwindling vaccine supplies, the Pentagon will cut back further on its plan to immunize all troops against the deadly anthrax virus, officials announced Thursday.

Under the change, only troops that will serve in the Persian Gulf for at least 30 days will receive the shots, said spokesman Kenneth Bacon. Forces deployed in South Korea, the only others currently receiving the vaccine under a program curtailed to preserve scarce supplies, no longer will be vaccinated.

"Given the fact that Saddam Hussein has used chemical weapons in the past against Iran and against the Kurdish minority in his own country, we assess the risk to be greater in Iraq than we do right now in the Korean Peninsula," Bacon said.

"This is in order to conserve supplies while continuing to protect the people going to the highest-threat area," he said.

The Defense Department's only vaccine supplier, Bioport of Lansing, Mich., has experienced delays in obtaining certification and starting up its new manufacturing plant, which may not be operational for another year.

The Pentagon at first wanted to vaccinate all service members but cut back in the summer to only those serving in the Persian Gulf area and in Korea. Usage is running at about 17,000 doses a month. The supply has since fallen to about 60,000 doses, meaning there is enough to give 5,000 shots a month to Gulf troops for a year, Bacon said. He said officials hope Bioport will have approval and be producing more vaccine by the third or fourth quarter of next year, and the Pentagon is working to find an alternate supplier as well.

Bacon said the military will save some 12,000 doses a month by temporarily discontinuing the program in South Korea, where the United States has helped maintain an armistice with North Korea since the end of the 1950-53 Korean conflict.

He also asserted once again that the program is safe.

A relatively small, but vocal, number of military members have refused to take the vaccine, saying they fear potentially damaging side effects.

"We continue to believe that the anthrax vaccine is the best protection against a biological threat that is 99 percent lethal. It is safe," Bacon said. "And we will continue our program at the current level in the Gulf, and then ramp it up as soon as we can."

---

Happy Birthday, Laura Januzik!

You're FINALLY 21!!!

love,
Mom, Dad, Joyce & Ken

---

NOTICE: CSC VEHICLE DRIVERS

ALL CURRENT VEHICLE REQUESTS TERMINATE AT THE END OF FALL 2000 SEMESTER!
ALL GROUPS MUST REAPPLY AT THE BEGINNING OF THE SPRING SEMESTER!

Comments or questions cscvans@nd.edu

---

Stock Market Got You Down?
Play It Safe...

7.50% APY
3-Month Certificate

Some Things You Can Count On!

NOTRE DAME FEDERAL CREDIT UNION
For People. Not for Profit.

219/239-6611
Stop by any of our eight locations, or visit us on the web at www.ndfcu.org.

*Annual Percentage Yield. $500 minimum deposit with direct deposit of net payroll or social security check. Without direct deposit, minimum is $10,000 to obtain 7.25% rate. This rate is for a limited time only, and is subject to change. Early withdrawal penalties may apply. Available for individuals only. Independent of the University.

---

Holiday Celebrations Around the World

WHEN: December 6, 2000
@ 5:30 PM
WHERE: CSC Coffee House
Please RSVP by December 1, 2000 to MSPS @ 1-6841
Friday, December 1, 2000

The Observer • ELECTION 2000

page 9

Gore seeks court-ordered recount, Bush sees flaws in system

Republicans, meanwhile, asked Sauls to order an additional 1.2 million ballots brought to Tallahassee from Volusia, Broward and Pinellas counties, said Bush campaign spokesman Scott McClellan. The judge has not yet considered the request.

"We believe there were a number of illegal votes for Gore in those counties," McClellan said. While saying the Bush campaign believes "the manual recount is fundamentally flawed," McClellan said lawyers fired the motion because "if there is to be another manual recount, it should not be another selective one designed by and for the vice president."

Unless the ballots are counted before Dec. 12, they will be too late.

"No legal judgment can correct any error found after the election is over," their appeal said. "Only the judgment of history will be left to be rendered on a system that was unable or unwilling to ascertain the will of the voters."

The 50-page legal brief repeatedly quoted from the justices' own decision that allowed vote recounts and said the right of voters to be heard was paramount.

If votes are not recounted by the time Florida's electors need to be chosen — Dec. 12 — the briefs said, "the resulting controversy about the legitimacy of the presidency would be destructive for our country."

Republican Bush's lawyers said at a news conference that county and state officials were correct in certifying election results, even though machines had rejected many ballots.

"It doesn't matter how many times somebody says everybody's ballot should be counted, said Richard. Gore's lawyers 'haven't asked for everybody's ballot to be counted in the first place,' he said.

"And in the second place, we're not talking about ballots that were not counted, other than ballots that were rejected because the machine determined they weren't properly marked.

As Gore's lawyers filed their papers, a truck loaded with ballots was zooming along Florida highways in a 400-mile trip to deliver Palm Beach County's 400,000 ballots to the state capital. It was the first of two road trips ordered by Circuit Court Judge Sanders Sauls. On Friday, Miami-Dade County officials planned to send their 400,000 ballots in another convoy.

Bush supporters mounted a noisy demonstration around the Florida Supreme Court, driving around in trucks, cars and a Batmobile with loudly beeping horns and signs such as, "Al Gore Go Home!" Helicopters whirred overhead, adding to the din. An unaffiliated prayer group gathered outside the court, singing hymns, waiting for help from Jesus and bowing their heads in prayer.

The state's high court closed down for the day without a decision.

"We're putting a lid on the Florida Supreme Court," said simply:

"This case is on an expedited track."

But he said he was willing to sign into law a bill creating a slate of electors "if the bill is acceptable."

"I don't believe it should be done unless there is uncertainty," Jeb Bush said. "If this could be cleared prior to Dec. 12 then, clearly, the Legislature doesn't have to act."

However, "I don't believe it should be done unless there is uncertainty," Jeb Bush said. "If this could be cleared prior to Dec. 12 then, clearly, the Legislature doesn't have to act."

But he said he was willing to sign into law a bill creating a slate of electors "if the bill is acceptable."

"I can't recuse myself from my constitutional duties as governor of the state and I can't recuse myself, frankly, of being my brother's brother either," Bush said. Meanwhile, both candidates turned to the U.S. Supreme Court, Republican Bush defending the lawyers' power to get involved and Gore charging it.

"It is not self-evident that direct legislative appointment is even available" under federal law, Gore's lawyers argued. But Bush's lawyers said in their filing that "the Constitution specifically assigns the power to determine the manner of appointing presidential electors to the state legislatures."

Republicans outnumber Democrats 102-58 in the Legislature and Democrats accused of changing laws "in order to prevent the possibility that Bush's 537-vote win in Florida from the possibility that Gore would be found in a legal contest to have won.

In Florida, said attorney Barry Richard, the law "has been followed. There has to be an end point."

While a truck brought 462,000 ballots — the first batch of 1.1 million ballots — to the state capital, Gore's lawyers implored the state Supreme Court to step in and get the votes recounted immediately.

Republican Sauls said at a news conference that county and state officials were correct in certifying election results, even though machines had rejected many ballots.

"It doesn't matter how many times somebody says everybody's ballot should be counted," McClellan said. "Richard Gore's lawyers 'haven't asked for everybody's ballot to be counted in the first place," he said.

"And in the second place, we're not talking about ballots that were not counted, other than ballots that were rejected because the machine determined they weren't properly marked.

As Gore's lawyers filed their papers, a truck loaded with ballots was zooming along Florida highways in a 400-mile trip to deliver Palm Beach County's 400,000 ballots to the state capital. It was the first of two road trips ordered by Circuit Court Judge Sanders Sauls. On Friday, Miami-Dade County officials planned to send their 400,000 ballots in another convoy.

Bush supporters mounted a noisy demonstration around the Florida Supreme Court, driving around in trucks, cars and a Batmobile with loudly beeping horns and signs such as, "Al Gore Go Home!" Helicopters whirred overhead, adding to the din. An unaffiliated prayer group gathered outside the court, singing hymns, waiting for help from Jesus and bowing their heads in prayer.

The state's high court closed down for the day without a decision.

"We're putting a lid on the Florida Supreme Court," said simply:

"This case is on an expedited track."

But he said he was willing to sign into law a bill creating a slate of electors "if the bill is acceptable."

"I don't believe it should be done unless there is uncertainty," Jeb Bush said. "If this could be cleared prior to Dec. 12 then, clearly, the Legislature doesn't have to act."

But he said he was willing to sign into law a bill creating a slate of electors "if the bill is acceptable."

"I can't recuse myself from my constitutional duties as governor of the state and I can't recuse myself, frankly, of being my brother's brother either," Bush said. Meanwhile, both candidates turned to the U.S. Supreme Court, Republican Bush defending the lawyers' power to get involved and Gore charging it.

"It is not self-evident that direct legislative appointment is even available" under federal law, Gore's lawyers argued. But Bush's lawyers said in their filing that "the Constitution specifically assigns the power to determine the manner of appointing presidential electors to the state legislatures."

Republicans outnumber Democrats 102-58 in the Legislature and Democrats accused of changing laws "in order to prevent the possibility that Bush's 537-vote win in Florida from the possibility that Gore would be found in a legal contest to have won.

In Florida, said attorney Barry Richard, the law "has been followed. There has to be an end point."

While a truck brought 462,000 ballots — the first batch of 1.1 million ballots — to the state capital, Gore's lawyers implored the state Supreme Court to step in and get the votes recounted immediately.

Republican Sauls said at a news conference that county and state officials were correct in certifying election results, even though machines had rejected many ballots.

"It doesn't matter how many times somebody says everybody's ballot should be counted," McClellan said. "Richard Gore's lawyers 'haven't asked for everybody's ballot to be counted in the first place," he said.

"And in the second place, we're not talking about ballots that were not counted, other than ballots that were rejected because the machine determined they weren't properly marked.

As Gore's lawyers filed their papers, a truck loaded with ballots was zooming along Florida highways in a 400-mile trip to deliver Palm Beach County's 400,000 ballots to the state capital. It was the first of two road trips ordered by Circuit Court Judge Sanders Sauls. On Friday, Miami-Dade County officials planned to send their 400,000 ballots in another convoy.

Bush supporters mounted a noisy demonstration around the Florida Supreme Court, driving around in trucks, cars and a Batmobile with loudly beeping horns and signs such as, "Al Gore Go Home!" Helicopters whirred overhead, adding to the din. An unaffiliated prayer group gathered outside the court, singing hymns, waiting for help from Jesus and bowing their heads in prayer.

The state's high court closed down for the day without a decision.

"We're putting a lid on the Florida Supreme Court," said simply:

"This case is on an expedited track."

But he said he was willing to sign into law a bill creating a slate of electors "if the bill is acceptable."

"I don't believe it should be done unless there is uncertainty," Jeb Bush said. "If this could be cleared prior to Dec. 12 then, clearly, the Legislature doesn't have to act."

But he said he was willing to sign into law a bill creating a slate of electors "if the bill is acceptable."

"I can't recuse myself from my constitutional duties as governor of the state and I can't recuse myself, frankly, of being my brother's brother either," Bush said. Meanwhile, both candidates turned to the U.S. Supreme Court, Republican Bush defending the lawyers' power to get involved and Gore charging it.

"It is not self-evident that direct legislative appointment is even available" under federal law, Gore's lawyers argued. But Bush's lawyers said in their filing that "the Constitution specifically assigns the power to determine the manner of appointing presidential electors to the state legislatures."

Republicans outnumber Democrats 102-58 in the Legislature and Democrats accused of changing laws "in order to prevent the possibility that Bush's 537-vote win in Florida from the possibility that Gore would be found in a legal contest to have won.
Res Life prevents student responsibility

When minor students were cited in the Finnnigan’s bar raid in October, they faced court dates, community service, fines and the task of telling their parents what they had been accused of.

Students seemed ready to own up to the mistakes they made. However, by sending letters to the parents of cited students and automatically adding the $100 fine from their student account, the University interfered and failed to let the students take responsibility for their own mistakes.

Most student account bills are paid by the parents. Adding fines for the Finnnigan’s incident from student accounts is a near guarantee that their parents, not the students themselves, will be fielding the consequences for those violations. Students were not given any options for payment of the fines by any other option on their own.

All other fines issued by the University, from traffic tickets to jaywalking, are issued in conjunction with parking tickets, alcohol in hallways and other dueling violations, complete with payment options. The same measures should be adopted by the Office of Residence Life in regard to the fines issued in the Finnnigan’s bust. Placing the responsibility for the repercussions of the Finnnigan’s incident on the students assures the students the opportunity to exercise the responsibility and judgement they were initially lacking.

Putting different spins on the election

Last night I sat a block from the White House at McPhearson Square, waiting in the rain for a friend. Two dozen homeless persons began lining up along the sidewalk waiting for a soup truck to feed them. Eventually, more than seventy men and women of all ages and races had fed, oblivious to who should win. I won the White House located just around the corner.

"A Friends Don’t Let Friends Vote Republican" sticker is still displayed next to the Gore/Lieberman sticker on the rear of my van. It was my attempt to put a little humor and create a tongue-in-cheek atmosphere around my personal involvement in the presidential campaign. In fact, I got a kick out of driving in front of Texas Senator Phil Gramm’s car in October, but the humor has since subsided.

Many Democrats believe, and every Gore official I’ve spoken with agree that on election day more voters went to the polls in Florida and cast what they thought were votes for Al Gore. Republicans obviously believe that the total and the George W. Bush won. But it is the nasty turn of rhetorical rancor that has poisoned the post presidential contest.

Initially, the Republican T-shirts with “Enough is Enough” and “The Count is the Count” adequately summarized their opinions. Some other cute phrases included, “My child is an honor student at the Electoral College,” “Don’t blame me, I voted for Gore twice” and “Thank me, I meant to vote for Gore.”

How the tone quickly changed with such signs and bumper stickers that personally attacked Democrats.

For example, “Daley Like Daddy,” a Wheaties cereal box with Gore’s picture and the word “Cheaters” on it and “Sore Lesmman” signs with the Gore/Lieberman logo on it clearly implied that Democrats were less than honorable. Disrespect for the elderly and certain counties in Florida were evident in “Eye graduated from Paum Beech Elementary,” and “Vote for Gore for least three times.”

The bitterness escalated when House Majority Whip Tom Delay and Republican Conference Chairm an J.C. Watts both flatly said that Democrats were trying to steal the election. The rancor continued to rise when a mob of Republican protestors stormed the Miami-Dade County room where the recount board was meeting.

Interestingly, a staff member from Tom Delay’s office was in the second row chanting and firing up the troops. Most Democrats absolutely believed that Republicans suggested that Democrats were against the military’s rights to vote by trying to void overseas ballots. One high ranking Democrat pointed out that the bitterness has exceeded the level during the President’s impeachment in 1999. He pointed out that Republicans first quoted statistics that indicated that more than 4 percent of Broward County’s absentee ballots were rejected by the Democratic courts in Florida and then implied that all of those were military ballots. The fact was that only six military ballots were rejected—two because they were postmarked after election day, which is a clear violation of the law.

Democrats believe that the fiasco with the so-called “butterfly” ballot was a fate that went against them, but was not the decisive factor. The discourse could have gone on about how ballots could be counted and have remained somewhat civil. However, when the Bush team challenged the validity of hand counts, and portrayed the Florida Supreme Court as a parti­san Democratic tool, they focused their rhetoric not on the rule of law, but at the attempt of stealing the election.

As a result, the old scrath-earth approach to politics we thought had ended with New Gingrich’s departure was the business as usual. Should Bush become president, the Bush and Eisenhower Congress would instantly try to divide the country as it did to bring about a civil war. If the Bush administration redeems itself, the country will be unified with one president.

Regardless of who eventually wins the contest, public opinion is not the deciding factor. The law is. Soon we will know the outcome of Florida according to the law, and half of us will feel like the devils of the other side.

The next couple of years are going to be difficult for everyone.

Gary J. Caruso, Notre Dame ‘73, is currently serving in President Clinton’s administration as a Congressional and Public Affairs Director and worked at the U.S. House of Representatives for 17 years. His columns appear every other Friday, and his Internet address is Hotline@aol.com.

The opinions expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.
Curtailing domestic disputes

Living with someone can often be difficult. After freshman year, there were numerous roommates problems. After all, when you pick your roommates, what can go wrong? Right? Well, somehow, squabbles manage to surface even among the closest of friends. That is, unless you follow my manual.

You see, I cringe whenever I see someone introduce one thing to fight over in a dorm room or any other co-existing relationship. That's because more people under the same roof should translate into less work but it never does. Psychologists have come up with an explanation to this phenomenon. It is called "social loafing."

According to this theory, every member of the living unit believes that he gets the mail, cleans the dorm, and takes out the garbage every single day, but the place is never clean, the mail is never gotten, and the garbage piles up to unsanitary levels.

After a recent argument with my roommate over trash procedures, I decided to consult the Constitution. Nowhere in this "all-encompassing" document is there a reference to private trash removal. Frustrated and helpless, I decided to make my own Constitution. What follows is a step by step explanation of the policy for which the garbage is emptied. If used correctly, this document should settle all trash disputes forever, for all non-financial roommate disputes from now until the end of time.

Step one: recognition. The key is to recognize that the garbage needs to be taken out. This is very important, as there are varying degrees of "need." The first stage of need is when the highest level of refuse reaches above the rim of the can.

Step two: notification. At this point, the person who realizes the trash situation has reached level one, must, in a voice that is loud and intelligent enough for at least one other resident to hear, call out, "The garbage needs to be taken out." This accomplishes two things. First, it moves the process from the recognition to the notification stage. Second, it absolves the "notifier" from any further obligation in the trash-removal procedure. Previously, all fault was placed on the notifier. For that one person to do the whole job himself would undermine the character and fabric of communal living.

Step three: cornering. Post-notification, the pile of juice boxes, banana peels and Ramen wrappers will reach a point where it becomes untenable. To stabilize the heap, a person must slowly and logically drag the floor into the nearest corner.

The two walls will serve as a crutch, buying the time necessary to get the garbage out. In later stages of compaction, it may become important to step on the bag as well. Using your body weight as a compaction device.

Step four: compaction. After a knot is tied with the bag, the refrecorder sets the sealed bag down, where no person can walk into or out of the front door without tripping over it. In doing so, he is exempt from any further role in the trash removal procedure. This also serves as a message to others, to tell, to do something. I'm not really sure what I think that's what the argument was about. But, anyway, the next person knows what to do, and it goes somewhere from there. I think that this is where the cycle repeats itself.

Disclaimer: This manual will only prevent disputes in all man-environment. Female disputes tend to be more arbitrary and difficult to pinpoint.

Josh Kirley is a '99 graduate of the University. He currently lives and teaches in Coral, Florida. He can be reached at MKirleyG@comcast.net.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

---

Debating the possible ordination of women

I am writing in response to Carolyn Torson's letter in Thursday's Observer ("Keep the Pasts Faith").

I cringe whenever I see someone introduce papal writings into a dialogue as if they are fact rather than interpretation. Ms. Torson's letter has come up with an explanation to this phenomenon. It is called "social loafing."

According to this theory, every member of the living unit believes that he gets the mail, cleans the dorm, and takes out the garbage every single day, but the place is never clean, the mail is never gotten, and the garbage piles up to unsanitary levels.

After a recent argument with my roommate over trash procedures, I decided to consult the Constitution. Nowhere in this "all-encompassing" document is there a reference to private trash removal. Frustrated and helpless, I decided to make my own Constitution. What follows is a step by step explanation of the policy for which the garbage is emptied. If used correctly, this document should settle all trash disputes forever, for all non-financial roommate disputes from now until the end of time.

Step one: recognition. The key is to recognize that the garbage needs to be taken out. This is very important, as there are varying degrees of "need." The first stage of need is when the highest level of refuse reaches above the rim of the can.

Step two: notification. At this point, the person who realizes the trash situation has reached level one, must, in a voice that is loud and intelligent enough for at least one other resident to hear, call out, "The garbage needs to be taken out." This accomplishes two things. First, it moves the process from the recognition to the notification stage. Second, it absolves the "notifier" from any further obligation in the trash-removal procedure. Previously, all fault was placed on the notifier. For that one person to do the whole job himself would undermine the character and fabric of communal living.

Step three: cornering. Post-notification, the pile of juice boxes, banana peels and Ramen wrappers will reach a point where it becomes untenable. To stabilize the heap, a person must slowly and logically drag the floor into the nearest corner.

The two walls will serve as a crutch, buying the time necessary to get the garbage out. In later stages of compaction, it may become important to step on the bag as well. Using your body weight as a compaction device.

Step four: compaction. After a knot is tied with the bag, the refrecorder sets the sealed bag down, where no person can walk into or out of the front door without tripping over it. In doing so, he is exempt from any further role in the trash removal procedure. This also serves as a message to others, to tell, to do something. I'm not really sure what I think that's what the argument was about. But, anyway, the next person knows what to do, and it goes somewhere from there. I think that this is where the cycle repeats itself.

Disclaimer: This manual will only prevent disputes in all man-environment. Female disputes tend to be more arbitrary and difficult to pinpoint.

Josh Kirley is a '99 graduate of the University. He currently lives and teaches in Coral, Florida. He can be reached at MKirleyG@comcast.net.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

---

(approaching)

(Learning)
Best Room on Campus

Beyond a shadow of a doubt, this room takes the cake. Nominations for this room came from both Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s students. Scene even received an e-mail from a student at Hope College who was so impressed with this room that, upon hearing of the fierce competition taking place, felt she had to let us know how unique this room is.

Juniors Ed Marks, Joe Feehan, Will Bruckert, Joseph Dwyer, Anhtuan Do and Shane McIlheny, the men of 457 Keough, were intent on impressing the judges, and success is theirs. The focal point of their six-man arrangement culminates in their social room.

Upon first approach, one sees a regular West Quad door framed by garland, with a standard issue bulletin board on either side of US 31. Here they are, some of the top rooms on campus.

The men never stray from their theme of blue plush and panel. From the posters on the wall, to the classic cabinet-encased dart board, to a bar, to the music system — complete with DVD and CD player, two VCRs and several video game systems. They hold the two keys issued for room 457. Each of the six men who take credit for the room has his own key to allow access to the lock box.

Open the door and it is hard to see what separates this room from any other. Yes with the push of a button, insta-Christmas is beheld. All powered by a remote control, Christmas lights around the doorway and ceiling — along with two small Christmas trees and candles in the window — begin to glow. With the help of a satellite dish, a never-ending supply of holiday music is channeled through the speakers.

The floors of this room are covered in the same blue carpeting seen on the lock box. Floors, you ask? Yes. Floors. They are, in all, three levels in 457 Keough and what some might consider a basement.

On the first floor sits two couches and one heck of an impressive entertainment center. Equipped with a 36-inch television, DVD player, two VCRs, satellite television, several video game systems and a five-disc compact disc changer, it’s easy to see why there are remote controls on the table — a table the boys built themselves to match the rest of the room.

In the corner stand two refrigerators built into their own cubby with cabinets on top, a counter and a built-in terrarium housing a chameleon above it all.

The mini blinds were hand painted by the residents of 457 to display a blue “ND” outlined in gold, surrounded by green shamrocks.

All of the additions in this room — cabinets, table, separations between floors — were hand-built by the residents using a lovely color of wood paneling.

The second level is separated from the rest of the floor by a mobile staircase, featuring the signature blue carpet and wood paneling that gives the room its class. This level is perhaps the most ingenious display of carpentry seen in any dorm room.

Comprised of several sections that allow for easy disassembly, the floor of the second level disguises what the men estimate to be 150 square feet of storage. Lift the center section of the floor or move the stairs and open the paneling and one will see the “basement” feature — arguably one of the most practical facets of this room. Here, the residents store golf clubs, boxes, suitcases and a subwoofer for their entertainment system.

Atop this floor rests yet another couch. Next to this couch stands another hand-built cabinet net center with a built-in aquarium, home to five fish and a crab.

Set in the paneling on either side of the aquarium are two of the seven speakers comprising the massive, theatre quality sound system showcased in the room.

Above the aquarium sits a projector that displays DVDs or videos on a 94-inch screen hanging in the opposite corner of the room. This screen can be raised or lowered by the spin of a boat steering wheel hanging on the wall.

The multi-level lights beneath the aquarium provide entertainment for the men as they challenge their guests to turn them on. With no visible switches, the lights, function may seem an enigma. All one has to do, however, is touch the screws in the paneling beside the lights to turn them on.

This same lighting feature is seen on the bunk futon that also sits on the second level. The underside of the top bunk houses four of these lights, one for each person seated on the lower level. The futon is fully functional as a bed, as most futons are, but being a bunk-futon, it also creates the third level in the room.

The top level of the futon, accessible by ladder, has been equipped with paneling and carpet and holds a beanbag, throw pillows and the cushion from a circular chair. There is not a bad seat in the house for viewing movies, and rumor has it that as many as 31 people have fit “comfortably” in this double.

One cannot overlook the beauty of their room. The men never stray from their theme of blue plush and panel. From the posters on the wall, to the classic cabinet-encased dart board, to the six blue and gold stockings — one for each resident — hand-made by Joe’s mom, to the lava and bubble lamps and fiber optic light displays — this room is a designer’s dream come true.

The men of 457 worked hard through the first weeks of school to create their masterpiece. The initial unveiling took place for the viewing of the first away football game in late September. However, it is a continual process of improvement as they strive to create their own Nirvana.

Having constructed the most high-tech, classy and comfortable yet practical space in any dormitory, it is with honor that we bestow the title of Best on Campus.
Inside

continued from page 1

sponsoring a Christian rock concert in the spring, but the scale and cost of the even have proven too much for the group to handle. University funds are often not great enough for government to afford bigger venues to visit campus, said Jay Smith, student government chief of staff. The group has since reformed its concert planning and downsized the program to ensure its production.

Student government plays a game of political hokey-pokey, pus, said Jay Smith, student government advisor, according to Edgington, early July. The director of Student Government, has usually been that advisor. Edgington tries to meet with O'Donoghue and Norton in person at least once a month, but keeps in casual contact with them on a regular basis through e-mails and phone calls. She also sees Norton every week when she oversees Student Senate meetings. Whether it's getting a thumbs-up on a new diversity panel or an OK on Gravitron in front of Rolfs, the group heads to Edgington and Norton and O'Donoghue also have met with the Office of Student Affairs and students will now for the first time be allowed in the Board of Trustees winter meeting in Washington.

Student Senate serves as the most visible mediator between student concerns and the main branch of government. According to Smith, there is not a great deal of interaction between the Senate and the Office of the President. While there is a weekly report from the office at every meeting, Smith says that the branches run independent of each other.

"It seems that Senate has had its own agenda," he said, and the same is true for the Office of the President. Because of this, he added, there can be a great deal of overlap between the two groups. Some topics do reach both avenues, including the University alcohol policy, an issue the government hopes the Board of Trustees will address at their winter meeting. The Senate offered help and support after the Board approved student involvement in the spring semester Student Senate serves as the most visible mediator between student concerns and the main branch of government. According to Smith, there is not a great deal of interaction between the Senate and the Office of the President. While there is a weekly report from the office at every meeting, Smith says that the branches run independent of each other.

"It seems that Senate has had its own agenda," he said, and the same is true for the Office of the President. Because of this, he added, there can be a great deal of overlap between the two groups. Some topics do reach both avenues, including the University alcohol policy, an issue the government hopes the Board of Trustees will address at their winter meeting. The Senate offered help and support after the Board approved student involvement in the spring semester. Edgington, though, disagrees. There is "a lot of communication between the two bodies," she said. If there are disagreements between the Senate and the Office of the President, they aren't aired at Senate meetings, Edgington said, advising that the Office of Student Affairs and the Office of the President are "working to improve."

Edgington, though, disagrees. There is "a lot of communication between the two bodies," she said. If there are disagreements between the Senate and the Office of the President, they aren't aired at Senate meetings, Edgington said, advising that the Office of Student Affairs and the Office of the President are "working to improve."

According to Smith, about 500 students like Romero and Rothrauff, who go straight to the top to "shake it all about." She added that one advantage to being involved with student government was that she knew what was going on, but at the same time, she said that perpetuated an "inside group.

There definitely is the select group ... especially when you go beyond freshman year, you're kind of in it until you graduate," said Rothrauff, who decided to leave student government after her first year. Sophomore Christine Bryant never had an interest in getting involved in student government, but said student government makes a good effort to appeal to students who do want to become involved. "I think [student government does] a good job since there are so many students that you never can please all of them," said Bryant. Bryant has joined clubs that target a more specific interest group such as the Society of Women Engineers, Asian American Association and the Texas Club. Bryant also volunteers.

Because of these other time commitments, Bryant, like Romero and Rothrauff, cannot fit the events into her schedule.

"Another reason I don't attend student government events is sometimes they are just at bad times," said Bryant. However, Bryant also said student government could work on making it more known to the students what it actually does. "I can't think of many student government events even though I know there are a lot ... they need to distinguish themselves more. Bryant did attend an event that involved movies and dinner and said that was a more effective way to catch her interest.

"I don't enjoy or don't care for some of what they do, so I don't show up. I like food and movies, so I showed up for that ... and I was free that night," said Bryant.

On the Notre Dame campus there are a variety of student organizations to join, including student government. Students like Romero and Bryant by choice or lack of information about student government decided to commit their time to other organizations. If students are interested, for these three, at least, time constraints form the main roadblock to student government involvement.

Point. Click. Get Tickets.

It really is that easy. Free, too.

Observer Online Classifieds

http://www.nd.edu/~observer

Observer Online Classifieds

http://www.nd.edu/~observer
Committees see successes, hope for future

By LAURA ROMPF
In Focus Writer

At the halfway mark of their term, student senators have completed a handful of projects and now have their hands full with new ones. The creation of a sexual assault program and the passing of a 24-hour space policy in all residence halls, to honor code reform and food service changes, were the first two positive steps to making Notre Dame a better place for the students, said Zahm senator Ryan Becker. "And I promise, there is a lot more to come. We're not done yet." While some senate committees have been more active - others, each of the seven outlined ambitions in August and have been working to accomplish these goals throughout the year.

Committee on Gender Issues
In the past, the senate's Committee on Gender Issues rarely brought forth resolutions, but this year the bill has been very active.

"Gender issues used to be an idea and issues-oriented committee, but now we're focused on projects," said co-chair, Maggie Clarke. Lyons senator.

In August, the committee said its main goals were to address 24-hour space for all students and passed resolutions in the dorms, creating freshman orientation focus groups to study the weekend, researching a new student center and parietals and meeting with Campus Ministry, and researching the gay and lesbian community on campus.

"We set seven goals at the beginning of the year and we've achieved all seven," said Clarke. "Now we're deciding what to work on next."

Committee on Residence Life
In August, the committee on Residence Life set five main goals to examine dining hall issues, provide more 24-hour space, deal with maintenance and security issues, and improve LaFortune Student Center.

"Two of those projects have been completed and the other three have been researched and are on the way to completion," said Zahm Hall senator and co-chair Ryan Becker.

The committee co-sponsored a resolution to ensure 24-hour space for all students and passed resolutions in the dining halls, creating new discounted meal packages. "The 24-hour space resolution was far by the most ground-breaking thing senators have done all year," said committee co-chair Kevin Berchou, Sorin senator.

Berchou said the committee met with food services to work on LaFortune improvements. "We're trying to find that there be better lighting in the basement," Berchou said. We also suggested putting a snack bar down there.

Finally the committee met with maintenance to inquire about putting clocks in O'Shaughnessy Hall, but were informed clocks were stolen frequently in the past, and it is not practical to replace them.

Becker said the committee will turn its efforts towards dorm improvement and maintenance issues for the second half of the term. The committee also hopes to lower the meal plan rate for students staying over fall and spring break.

Committee on Oversight
The committee on Oversight said its main goals were to address International Student Orientation, to distribute a survey to determine student diversity on campus, and research why a students' ethnic background is questioned on TEaching Course Evaluations (TCE's). The committee also hopes to examine dining hall issues, to honor the gay and lesbian community on campus, and to make it as user friendly as possible and the best documentation for all students to use," said co-chair, Audrey Higgins, Pasquelli West senator.

The committee recently completed a study of election reform. After several violations occurred in last year's student body elections, the committee looked to revamp the entire process.

"The election reform is a big deal and has been our prominent focus," said co-chair Jessie Flores, Carroll senator. "We definitely want to avoid what happened last year."

Committee on Diversity
The committee on Diversity said its three main goals were to address International Student Orientation, to distribute a survey to determine student diversity on campus, and research why a students' ethnic background is questioned on TEaching Course Evaluations (TCE's). The committee also hopes to examine dining hall issues, to honor the gay and lesbian community on campus, and to make it as user friendly as possible and the best documentation for all students to use," said co-chair, Audrey Higgins, Pasquelli West senator.

The committee recently completed a study of election reform. After several violations occurred in last year's student body elections, the committee looked to revamp the entire process.

"The election reform is a big deal and has been our prominent focus," said co-chair Jessie Flores, Carroll senator. "We definitely want to avoid what happened last year."

"Our main goal this year has been planning the Celebrating Diversity week," said McGinn senator and co-chair Melissa Rauch. "It wasn't part of our original plan because we weren't made aware of it until a few weeks into the semester, but it has taken over as the primary objective."

Because the committee focused on this resolution, their projects outlined in August included on-line DARTing, having out-of-class assignments included in the DART book and creating faculty mentoring are not completed.

Rauch said DART is currently in the hands of Office of Information Technology (OIT) and research is being conducted about guidance for upperclassmen.

Rauch said the committee is working on a new project of consolidating all scholarship and grant information into one office where students could find information.

"We did a little research and found out that the Academic Council had made suggestions to do this years ago, but no one ever picked up the ball," Rauch said. "I would expect some legislation in the next couple weeks regarding implementing this new office."

Committee on Academic Affairs
When the new senators took office last April, the University Affairs Committee elected Phil Dittmar and Chris Clement as co-chair. Around a month later, Gimont resigned because he was accepted into the London program, and then in September, Dittmar resigned for personal reasons.

"We were definitely set back at the beginning," said current co-chair Bethany Barker, Welch Family hall senator. "But we are still trying to pick up from where the senator committee had its main goals were to investigate the surplus of the Generations Campaign, establish centralized tutoring, determine the quality of long-distance telephone service and investigate Health Services.

Besides researching tutoring, the committee focused on resolutions from last fall rather than those new projects.

The committee worked with Sophomore Class Council to create a sophomore signature event, keep contact with last year's student government to ensure revamping of The Beacon Memorial and worked with student government to provide funds for Transfer Orientation.

The committee also combined with the committee on gender affairs to form an Honor Code committee that has been working with faculty members and researched other school's honor codes.

"Students should know what to expect when they go into an Honor Code hearing," said Bregan. "We want to create a log of past cases and document all the policies. Overall, we want consistency."
Groups try to change with new task force structure.

By HELENA PAYNE
In Focus Writer

Under the direction of a reform-minded chair, the CLC has abolished committees and set up a new task force structure to increase productivity.

"This year my personal goals for the CLC were to see the formation of a new structure which would raise the quality of work being done by that body, while at the same time quelling concerns by those within the membership and outside about the quality of work being done by that body," said student body president Brian O'Donoghue.

The CLC, which usually meets every other week, is a resolution-drafting body of 23 students, rectors, and faculty and an administrator who discuss campus from alcohol to academics.

Eighteen of the 23 members have voted stance, the other five fill advisory capacities.

In years past, the CLC has written many resolutions to the Office of Student Affairs to address concerns about drivers parking on outdoor basketball courts or the installation of an ATM machine at North Dining Hall, among other issues. These issues were addressed by committees that met in cases infrequently to create surveys or write resolutions for the entire CLC approval.

This year, though, the group has directed itself towards more sweeping reforms.

"Whereas past bodies would pass resolutions that made small incremental changes," O'Donoghue said, "this body is much more directed toward sweeping reforms. This is what I feel the duty of the CLC should be."

However, O'Donoghue, along with student body vice president Brooke Norton and other CLC members, agreed to change the committee structure because of the attendance problems and lack of interest in some committees.

These difficulties hindered output from the group.

"I know in the past they had problems with committee meeting attendance and having people being excited about it," said Norton. "CLC has changed for the better this year and has become a more productive body.

"The committees have been replaced by task forces, which O'Donoghue and Norton said have more explicit, narrow goals. One, for example is the Task Force for Consistent Residence Hall Policies recently changed from the task force for the disparity between male and female residence halls. Last year, this topic was covered under a Gender Relations Committee with less tightly-defined purposes. The new task force system, however, encourages more in-depth research to get to the root of campus issues.

"The task force system as a general whole has helped the members of the body. Many of the Task Forces are meeting more often than their committees ever did. I have heard of certain Task Forces meeting up to three times in a given week. That never used to happen," said O'Donoghue. "Furthermore, inside those groups good hard research is being done to make sure that they are certain about their facts.

"The Task Force for Campus Relations Policies, along with the Student Senate, was responsible for surveying dorms regarding their 24-hour space policies. Thus far, this task force has not passed any resolutions as last year's, but O'Donoghue claimed they have been working just to have some time for thorough analysis of campus issues.

"Currently, the Task Forces are reviewing the majority of the most controversial issues ever seen by the CLC at one time," Norton said. "We simply cannot afford to make a mistake."

Norton said the CLC plans to examine issues such as the Honor Code and students moving off campus. She said that the new task force system has boosted the CLC's output, but she would like to see some improvements.

"I just hope that we can kind of speed up the process a little bit," said Norton. "Even with fewer CLC resolutions, the new body functions well and is committed to serving the University.

"Before, it seemed like folks were working just to have something done for the next meeting. As a result the product sometimes lacked the full research it could have had. The result of such past half-hearted efforts was a body which was losing respectability and frustration among student government.

"There are disagreements on the floor, but that, to me, just shows a passion on the part of the membership to see the best possible product. The student body cares about how it represents itself to the University Community, a concern which used to not be given such high priority. The result is better work being done for the Notre Dame community."

The uninvolved say they weren't hooked early enough.

By HELENA PAYNE
In Focus Writer

While student body president Brianna Norton urged students to "Believe" in student government, some students don't have time to believe and others have found interests elsewhere.

Sophomore Kevin Romero was once highly active in student government during his high school years at Las Cruces, New Mexico. Romero was elected as a class president for three consecutive years and became the student president his senior year. Like Notre Dame, the student government in Romero's high school sponsored service projects and other student events and activities.

The one difference is that in Romero's school, the student government was also a class that offered elective credit.

"As a freshman at Notre Dame, however, Romero opted not to get involved in student government because he didn't realize the value of it until he felt it was too late.

"When the freshmen elections come up I don't think it's very clear that in order to run for a class officer, you have to be elected in your hall," Romero said. "Freshmen elections, which occur at the beginning of the school year, determine the freshmen council, which consists of freshmen representatives from each residence hall.

"Generally the people who get involved early ... those are people who will probably be involved actively their entire career here," said Romero. "The system is not really clear to those who aren't directly involved in it."

Since freshmen year, Romero has joined three vocal groups at the University including the Glee Club, the Undertones, and Voices of Faith Gospel Choir. He is also a student manager for Becker's.

"I just pursued things that interested me and things that I felt I had enough time to involve myself in," said Romero.

Now, Romero said he doesn't have a clear definition of the purpose of student government.

"To be honest, I can't tell you exactly what student government does," said Romero.

When he deos hear about events, he usually unable to attend because of conflicting activities.

"Generally it's not because I don't want to [attend] student government-sponsored events but it's because I already have something to do," Romero said.

Like Romero, junior Rachel Rothrauff also had an initial interest as a freshman in student government, but unlike Romero, she heard about freshman representative elections soon after enrolling at the University.

"I did a lot of stuff in high school, way more than done OPINION/page 8

TONY FLOYD/The Observer

Students play carnival games at Founder's Day in October.

The uninvolved saying they weren't hooked early enough by student government to entertain campus, and to recruit new members.

The new task force structure encourages forces a adjustment to the new structure, they speed up production in the spring.
Bouncing Back

After a controversial election, Crissie Renner and Michelle Nagle had to deal with a fractured student body. What they didn’t know was that it would take another controversy to actually do it.

By NOREEN GILLIESpie
In Focus Writer

The presidential election of 2000 was not Board of Governance’s shining moment. Crissie Renner and Michelle Nagle won an election that is reminiscent of the current presidential campaign. After failing to secure a majority of votes in the initial election, the race went to a run-off, where the votes came in a first-ever tie. After another revote declared their opponents, Emily Koelsch and Rachelle Rodarte the winners, it was announced that the Renner/Nagle ticket had won.

But the newly-elected duo did not have time to celebrate their victory last February, as a greater task lay ahead: the presidential election. After failing to secure a majority of votes in the initial election, the race went to a run-off, where the votes came in a first-ever tie. After another revote declared their opponents, Emily Koelsch and Rachelle Rodarte the winners, it was announced that the Renner/Nagle ticket had won.

But the newly-elected duo did not have time to celebrate their victory last February, as a greater task lay ahead: the presidential election. After failing to secure a majority of votes in the initial election, the race went to a run-off, where the votes came in a first-ever tie. After another revote declared their opponents, Emily Koelsch and Rachelle Rodarte the winners, it was announced that the Renner/Nagle ticket had won.

But the newly-elected duo did not have time to celebrate their victory last February, as a greater task lay ahead: the presidential election. After failing to secure a majority of votes in the initial election, the race went to a run-off, where the votes came in a first-ever tie. After another revote declared their opponents, Emily Koelsch and Rachelle Rodarte the winners, it was announced that the Renner/Nagle ticket had won.

The ticket held on to its open door policies, the opinion of the student body has never been more important. Renner and Nagle admitted they would have to enter their offices.

"I never thought we would assume office after the complaint was filed," Nagle said. "It makes me doubt how much I can represent the students' needs."

The ticket not only lost its open door on campus, but also after a year that has produced both successes and challenges for the Board of Governance, the ticket that once sat in a corner of the student body has emerged as a brilliant example of what student government can be.

"Our platform was a student government," Nagle said. "We are not running for office to be leaders in the student body. We are running to be leaders in the student body."

The Renner/Nagle administration has proven itself as strong leaders in trying times, including the 2000 election debacle, the Junior Class T-Shirt and the Keenan Revue debate. The year of trials has produced two student leaders who exemplify what student leaders should be.

Renner and Nagle are proof that anyone can make a difference. They are proof that students can make a difference. They are proof that students can make a difference. They are proof that students can make a difference. They are proof that students can make a difference. They are proof that students can make a difference.

"In Focus Writer"
Kahn bridges gap between students and trustees

By MOLLY McVOY
In Focus Writer

The opportunity to directly influence what the Board of Trustees decides is a unique one afforded to the student trustee at Saint Mary’s. The student trustee is a full member of the Board, a situation not found at many other schools.

"Most of the major decisions on campus happen on the Board, and the student body does not have a voice in a really important situation and a sadly unusual one," said Molly Kahn, this year’s student trustee.

Because of the unusual role the student trustee plays in the College’s decision-making process, the trustee’s primary responsibility is to serve as a voice for the student body on the Board of Trustees.

"I think the purpose of the trustee is really to be a voice of the students to the Board of Trustees," said College president Marilou Eldred. "Their job is to bring in the student voice to the Board.”

Part of the job of the trustee is to have an understanding of the issues that concern the student body. Kahn hopes that a reinitialization of "office hours" this year will allow students to approach her with their concerns.

"I want to be really accessible and open," Kahn said. "Sometimes people come to me with problems and concerns they have. A lot of students came to me telling me about Dallaway’s or security. This allowed me to go to the Board and direct the next steps.

At the fall meeting, aside from the welcome talk, the Board approved new additions to campus, Dallaway’s and the Welcome Center, many student issues were on the agenda. Kahn also plans to bring more such topics to the next meeting.

"The Board discussed the issues with new facilities, athletics, personal safety and student diversity board," Kahn said. "In February, I’m looking to talk to the Board about what Saint Mary’s does to help seniors with plans after graduation.”

Aside from bringing student concerns to the Board, the trustee often acts as the student voice in any questions the Board has about issues at the College. Molly clearly brought an important perspective when we (the Board) talked about Master Plan and the student center dining hall project," Eldred said. "She was able to be very articulate as to why that was so important to the community life of the students and college in general.

The student trustee is appointed by a committee of faculty, administrators and students. When asked whether an elected trustee would more accurately represent the student body’s needs and opinions, Eldred said she feels that the current system of appointment is the most suitable method.

"I like the process as it is now," Eldred said. "I think an appointed position is appropriate. The faculty and administration have a broader view of the college. We want to choose the student who we think will best represent the student body.

Linda Tinn, vice president for Student Affairs, supervises the selection of the student trustee. Tinn explained that the appointment process looks specifically for a person who will accurately represent the student population.

"We’re looking for a student who has a sense of what the student voice in the Board of Trustees would be, someone who has given thought to the major agenda items for students," Tinn said. "She also needs to have a plan for how to solicit student input so she is not just representing student government views and her views, but the student body’s views.

In addition to being a student voice to the Board, the trustee acts as a representative of the Board to the student body. Both Eldred and Kahn felt that both responsibilities were equally important; the trustee not only represents the student’s interests, but the Board’s as well.

"As a student on the Board of Trustees, it is my responsibility to express student concerns, ideas, questions and comments, but it is also my responsibility to educate students about the Board of Trustees," Kahn said.

The part of her job that involves informing the students about the Board’s activities is one that Kahn is constantly working on, she explained. Aside from the e-mail sent to the student body, Kahn is looking for ways to communicate the Board’s plans to the students.

"There’s a lot of interest in what the Board does," Kahn said. "Right now, I’m at the point of trying to hammer out how best to inform everyone.”

And of providing a bridge between both sides.

Molly Kahn, Saint Mary’s student trustee, serves in a variety of capacities and works on a range of issues representing Saint Mary’s students. One topic she has worked on is the Master Plan, giving student input on development and construction project at the College.

"I really want to be an accessible open. Sometimes people come to me with problems and concerns they have." Molly Kahn student trustee

Board of Governance

Renner/Nagle focus on opening up communication

Duo works with administrators and student leaders

By AMY GREENE
In Focus Writer

When Crissie Renner and Michelle Nagle ran for student body president last spring, the main focus of their platform was to increase communication between the administration, student government, and the student body.

"Since being elected, that’s what they’ve spent most of their energies on that effort," Renner said.

Renner and Nagle worked with the administration to develop the new Dallaway’s and also collaborated with the Strategic Planning Committee in their planning.

"I think what impressed me about the staff for approaching the Board of Governance and extracting the students’ input. We now have students sit on all the planning committees," Renner said.

The Board of Governance also distributed a survey to all students for their input for the strategic planning.

"To increase communication between the five different governing boards, Renner and Nagle encouraged the co-sponsorship of events. According to Renner, the co-sponsored events, such as the Athletic Recognition Pep Rally, are bigger and better attended than they were before.

Both women believe that this synergy between the boards is their greatest success.

Renner and Nagle also focused on communication between students and the Board of Governance. BOG newsletters have been available in certain areas on campus in the past, but not all students knew about the newsletters existed. Renner and Nagle ensured that the newsletter was distributed to all students in their personal mailboxes each month.

The newsletter allows students to become aware how the Board of Governance votes on certain issues and also what events are being planned on campus.

The Board grew when Callie Kusco was named as the first Programming Commissioner. She assists in organizing Pride Week, Midnight Madness, Winter Carnival, and assists the Communication Commissioner.

Renner and Nagle also attempted to extend hours at the library and post office. Both Renner and Nagle approached the Library Committee, as well as the post office, but administrators decided not to keep those offices open longer.

Renner and Nagle also were unable to increase the amount of Munch Money for students, but complimentary guest passes to the dining hall were made available.

see RENNER/next page
NOTRE DAME STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT

Working for the future

O'Donoghue and Norton focus on a mix of student services and new programs

By LAURA ROMPF

Although students may not realize the impact of the current office of the student body president, several programs it has implemented are designed to benefit students for years to come.

Student body president Brian O'Donoghue said the Rector's Endowment Fund was a campaign promise and a great accomplishment for the office. One-third of the profits from The Shirt sales goes into a separate fund, available for students to use for medical school applications, football tickets, section dinners or other onmy items. Although only $906 of the fund's allotted $34,000 had been used as of Nov. 15, O'Donoghue said he expected the slow start.

"We've established the fund for the '94-'95 year," O'Donoghue said. "What's important is there is money out there to help students. It's early and it's not going to develop. These things need time to develop. People need to be aware of it's out there."

O'Donoghue, student body vice president Brooke Norton and chief of staff Jay Smith said the fund has not been highly publicized because of its personal nature. "We want to recognize the dignity of the program," Smith said. "It's-young."

The three things accomplished this office completed is sending students to the Board of Trustees winter meeting. "This has never happened before," Smith said. "Students will be going to the meeting in Washington, D.C., in February."

The office played a large role in the report to the Board of Trustees in the fall focusing on alcohol use and sexual assault. "We got a great response from the Board," Smith said. "The issues were taken very seriously. They are often not talked about and we felt they needed to be addressed."

The office contributed to organizing the sale of The Shirt for Basketball and hopes to finish a project called the Greatness Grant, which will provide funds for students who want to do service or other works of ministry. Hoping students would become active in Election 2000, the office planned debate and election watches in LaFortune which were well attended. They also helped register 1000 voters, gave away 1500 absentee ballots and helped plan a Congressional debate in South Bend.

"The students' voice in elections is absolutely necessary. A lot of folks say students are apathetic, but we proved them wrong beyond a doubt," O'Donoghue said.

During the campaign, O'Donoghue and Norton said they would work for student discounts at local businesses and a scholarship service. O'Donoghue said they have communicated with local businesses and soon will have a discount card available, primarily for use at restaurants. The scholarship search is currently available online.

The office said they are also proud of the Founder's Day celebration, even though rainy weather caused a low turnout for the event. Smith said he hopes the next office will build on Founder's Day so it will become an annual event. "It was the first for that type of operation," Smith said. "Next year, hopefully, it will continue. We've paved the way, did the work and proved it can be done."

"We got 30 different groups involved instead of normal events that are just planned by one body," Norton said. "The students who did go said they liked it and were happy with it."

The third significant accomplishment the office completed is sending students to the Board of Trustees winter meeting. "This has never happened before," Smith said. "Students need time to develop. People need to be aware of it's out there."

Student body president Brian O'Donoghue works the phone in his office. O'Donoghue has spent much of his term thus far trying to advance his major campaign priorities. The office is also helping to plan a celebration of Martin Luther King week, including a forum for students, and Blessing Unto Others, a Christian rock concert whose proceeds will go to an orphanage in Chile. All these endeavors, plus several other projects, have kept the office busy, and enthused, even after the midway break in their term.

"Last year at this time, we had 12 people tops in this office working hard," Smith said. "This year we still have 50 to 60 people who are dedicated towards their goals."

O'Donoghue, Smith and Norton said they still want to hear students' suggestions for new projects they could work on until April. "Every person who has made a suggestion to our office, we follow through with it," O'Donoghue said. "We determine the feasibility and try to make it work." "I have a lot of friends who fit into the 'critical of student government' group," Norton said. "It helps to reassure what we should be doing here. We want to know what would make the most students happy. We still want suggestions."
ONE PERSON'S VIEW
Let's open the doors

For the first time in recent memory, the Notre Dame student body has a leader. Brian O'Donoghue, recently elected as student body president, is looking to take the talents and potential of the students of Notre Dame and realize a vision of a greater University. But the students he wants to lead don't know that. And that is a problem.

In preparing this special section, Observer staffers talked to hundreds of students about their government. And the most frequent thing they were told about it was "I don't know." Students don't know what their government is doing. They don't know because they don't hear about it. And they don't hear about it because so much of what O'Donoghue's administration does is done behind closed doors.

Student government has always had a reputation as something of an insider's club. This year that reputation is deserved. While small sections of the student body are consulted when major leaders are deciding what to do, too many decisions are made with not enough consultation.

And once the decision has been made, and our student leaders sit down to talk with each other and the administration, to hammer proposals into reality, everyday students are even more removed. They aren't told what's going on; often they're not even told when something is accomplished.

Student government is not the only side to blame for this, however. If our representatives are insiders, most of the represented are indifferent. Students must their senate and they ignore their president. And they don't give them a chance.

Student government held open forums about the alcohol policy at the start of the year, and attendance was low. Last December, the Student Union Board had a forum about campus concerts, and just a few people showed up. If we expect student leaders to act as our spokespeople to the administration, we need to tell them that.

Granted, student government has an image problem. Some past presidents have seemed to do little more than talk a lot and throw barbecues, attended mostly by other student government members and their friends. O'Donoghue wants to do more than that. He wants to use his office to make life better for Notre Dame students (and not just by supplying them with occasional free hamburgers). But, at the same time, he and his staff have a problem communicating with those students, to find out how they want their life bettered and to tell them what's going on.

Effective student government requires steps in two directions. It requires the governors to take a step towards the students, and it requires the governed to take a step towards the leaders. Let's take those steps. Let's talk to each other. Let's open the doors.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

IN FOCUS STAFF
Editor: Tim Logan
Photography: Tony Floyd
Graphics: Katie Annis

Student Opinion

Notre Dame Students

Do you think student government is effective?

85% of ND freshmen said yes but just 63% of ND seniors said that.

Saint Mary's Students

Do you think student government represents your concerns?

83% of SMC sophomores said yes but just 27% of SMC seniors.

Can you name your student senator/BOG rep.?

Can you name your student body president?

Just 26% of SMC freshmen said yes, but 100% of SMC seniors did.

Trying to make a connection

Government describes attempts to find student concerns

By FINN PRESSLY
In Focus Writer

Ferched just last week, the HuddleMart, Notre Dame student government has long been accused of keeping itself too far removed from mainstream campus life. Student body president Brian O'Donoghue claims he has worked this year to break down those barriers by maintaining the channels of communication in the dorms and around campus.

It's safe to say that Brooke, Jay and I aren't hiding up in the second floor of LaFortune," he said, referring to student body vice president Brooke Norton and chief of staff Jay Smith.

Though all three have extensive background in student government, they feel that O'Donoghue's campaign for president exposed them to the broader slice of student life.

"We went door to door and talked to every single student on this campus," O'Donoghue said.

He also credits the mix of personalities in student government for helping to expand the office's scope.

"There's no more diverse personalities on this campus," he said of himself, Norton, and Smith.

"We come from very different groups... we don't hang out together on the weekends," Smith echoed a similar sentiment.

"It's not like the three of us are inseparable and we hang out," he said.

With their term now past the halfway mark, members of student government rely mainly on the mechanisms of campus government to gather information from students.

"We go through our division heads, and the heads of our committees. They're mostly freshmen, sophomores, and juniors, with some seniors," said student government director of public relations Dave Zachry. "I assume they speak with the students in their dorms." The nexus of interaction between students and government, he said, are the hall council meetings within the residence halls.

"Hall Council is where most of the action should take place," he said. "Ideas and concerns brought up at Hall Council are then radiated to student senators, hall presidents, and then on to the Office of the President." Outside the meetings of the Hall Council, members of the student government try to make themselves available to input from their neighbors.

"In my three years, I've always tried to ask people in the dorm what's going on. Some people say 'I don't care,' and some people take me an idea, and I go with it," Zachry said.

O'Donoghue also said that dorm life heightens awareness of campus issues.

"Brooke and I both live in residence halls, so we gain input through that," he said.

Campus media also functions as a forum for suggestions and comments.

"I personally read the Viewpoint page in The Observer religiously, and I know most people in student government do too," Zachry said.

With all these avenues of input, however, some student concerns are still not addressed. According to Smith, decision making also takes into consideration those students who have not brought forth issues.

"In our thought process, we have to think about them. We can't just think about students who are active... we have to think about everybody," he said. "That's why we strive to be responsive to as many students as possible, because that's who we try to serve."

Tim Logan contributed to this report.

Describe student government in one word or phrase:

"effective"

"a sham"

"puppets"

"a voice for the students"

"they're there"

"strategery"

"dedicated"

"I don't know"

"responsible"

"effective"

"trivial"

"you can't print that word"
Rain poured down on game booths and the stuffed animal prizes afforded to the winners. The hard ground turned to mud, and the echoing sounds were not of music and laughter but of raindrops hitting dormant carnival rides.

Student government's Founder's Day carnival drew praise from government members and administration, but few everyday students. Was it just the rain, or was something amiss in the government's planning? Unlike Student Union Board (SUB), student government is a body that does not function solely to sponsor campus events and programs. Student government, though, has taken steps this year to organize such events, like the 2000 school year. Norton first brainstormed with student body president Brian O'Donoghue and fellow government members and then took the idea to advisor Mary Edgington, director of Student Activities.

"Most of all it comes down to time. You want to make it successful."

Mary Edgington
director of Student Activities

The idea was then sent to Peggy Hiattanko, head of the Financial Management Board (FMB), a division of Student Activities. Groups like student government who wish to sponsor an event or program exceeding $5,000 must send a proposal to FMB, whose funds come from student activity fees. Founder's Day was approved and government members moved to bring in the clowns.

"I wouldn't say it's necessarily easy," Edgington said of getting proposals approved. Problems occur, she said, when the group does not have the time or funding to sponsor an event. Founder's Day, for example, was produced with the help of nearly seven campus clubs, 11 dorms and 20 groups like Food Services and WVFI.

Student leaders must cooperate with administration

By CHRISTINE KRALY
In Focus Writer

Student leaders must cooperate with administration

"Most of all it comes down to time. You want to make it successful."

Mary Edgington
director of Student Activities

"I wouldn't say it's necessarily easy," Edgington said of getting proposals approved. Problems occur, she said, when the group does not have the time or funding to sponsor an event.
215 DILLON HALL

Best Atmosphere Award

What in the world is a Bootsy Hooten Flughafen anyhow? Just ask juniors Tim O'Connor, Paul Ricketts and Logan Foley in 215 Dillon. Taking its name from a small getaway in Austria that specializes in schnitzel and large containers of beer, the Bootsy Hooten (phonetic spelling, not proper German) was a restaurant the boys visited on spring break in Innsbruck.

This hole-in-the-wall favorite of the boys sits secluded atop a hill in the Austrian Alps with no roads in its door. One might assume that the men in this Dillon triple are attempting to recreate the feel of that Austrian restaurant. Flughafen, the German word meaning "to fly" comes from the bus the men rode in Austria. In honor of their trip, the men commemorated their room. For this, the men receive the Best Atmosphere award.

The coziness of the room is certainly a sentimental throwback to the Austrian venues they so fondly remember. Check full of tradition, the Bootsy Hooten transforms into the "Theatre Foley" every Thursday for movie night, when as many as 14 people — allowing for moderate stacking — can be jammed into the room.

With the accommodation of their massive DVD powered "Hooten Entertainment Center," attendance was so high that it seemed only fitting that they convert their window box to provide supplementary seating arrangements.

Most notable though is the array of posters and pictures in the room. Adorning one wall is a 40 square-foot movie poster advertising — in German — the movie "An Ideal Husband." Hardly any space on the wall is left empty in this small room. The Hooten Wall of Fame showcases pictures of the Hooten members worldwide.

The men welcome visitors to the Bootsy Hooten Flughafen, where what they lack in square footage they make up for in personality, and where nothing is on tap ... because there is no tap.

408 SIEGFRIED HALL

Neatest Boys' Room

Boys are notoriously messy. Strange odors are almost synonymous with a boy's dorm room. So it is with great honor that 408 Siegfried receives the Neatest Boy's Room award. We challenge you to find a more immaculate, spacious and well-organized double in any of the male residence halls.

Juniors Joe Gleason and especially Mike Walsh take pride in the cleanliness. Mike is responsible for finding their room unoccupied at least two to three times per week. It is doubtful that most boys, rooms even ever see a vacuum. But as Joe tells, it was a ritual in Mike's family to vacuum frequently.

Again, a rare feat for a male dorm room.

Where some families stress the importance of washing hands before dinner, Mike's family tradition was to vacuum before dinner. Every day. Some habits are hard to break.

Being on the fourth floor, this room boasts a higher ceiling than other Siegfried rooms. The extra two vertical feet facilitated the construction of the most elaborate loft system yet to be seen. The beds, rather than resting on supports that reach to the floor, are suspended from above by a series of supports on the outer walls and chains from the ceiling.

The loft also doubles as a bike rack. With a full six feet and two inches of space beneath the beds, this design leaves the floor of the room extremely spacious. Also hanging from the loft is a hammock chair to accommodate guests who may not fit on the couch or infal­table sofa.

The room is well lit with several floor and desk lamps. Books and papers are neatly stacked and desks are clear. The walls display tasteful posters. There isn't a scantly clad woman to be found in the room.

A rare feat for a male dorm room. Congratulations, 408 Siegfried.
Irish swimmers enter weekend competition in fourth place

By COLLEEN McCArTHY
Sports Writer

Although final exams are more than a week away, men’s swimming head coach Tim Welsh told his team that they should consider this weekend’s Notre Dame Invitational meet as their final test of the fall season.

“Our objective coming into this season was to look at it as the focal point of the fall semester,” said Welsh.

“The team’s focus this year has been to seek improvement in each event and swim faster,” said Welsh.

Thursday’s close competition ended with the Irish in fourth place with 305 points. Denison University was in first place with 372 points followed by Michigan State with 365 points and Western Kentucky University with 321 points. The team lost their second place standing after being disqualified in the final event of Thursday’s meet, the 400 medley relay.

Going into the rest of the meet this weekend, Welsh said he expects that Thursday’s portion of the meet is a good indicator of how the rest of the Invitational will end in a very close competition.

Besides seeing a vast improvement in times and following closely behind third place Western Kentucky in this meet as its league, the team is using the Invitational as an opportunity to acquire qualifying times in events for the Big East Championship in February, which is the first year qualifying times will be required for the Big East Championship.

The Irish fared well with six swimmers posting qualifying times in individual events.

Senior Jonathan Pierce and freshmen Matt Obernier and J.R. Teddy made qualifying times in the 100 yard freestyle event. In the 200 IM, senior Ryan Verlin and sophomore Clay Miller had qualifying times along with junior Austin Anderson posting a qualifying time in the 50 yard freestyle.

Welsh was pleased with the results.

“All the Irish swimmers dive into the water at the start of an event Thursday afternoon. The Irish are in fourth place after one day of competition.”

“I’m very pleased with the results. The Irish swimmers dive into the water at the start of an event Thursday afternoon. The Irish are in fourth place after one day of competition. Two Irish swimmers dive into the water at the start of an event Thursday afternoon. The Irish are in fourth place after one day of competition.”

“The team’s focus this year has been to seek improvement in each event and swim faster,” said Welsh.

“Across the board, person to person, we have been faster today than we have been all year,” said Welsh.

Irish swimmer enter weekend competition in fourth place

By COLLEEN McCArTHY
Sports Writer

Although final exams are more than a week away, men’s swimming head coach Tim Welsh told his team that they should consider this weekend’s Notre Dame Invitational meet as their final test of the fall season.

“Our objective coming into this season was to look at it as the focal point of the fall semester,” said Welsh.

“The team’s focus this year has been to seek improvement in each event and swim faster,” said Welsh.

Thursday’s close competition ended with the Irish in fourth place with 305 points. Denison University was in first place with 372 points followed by Michigan State with 365 points and Western Kentucky University with 321 points. The team lost their second place standing after being disqualified in the final event of Thursday’s meet, the 400 medley relay.

Going into the rest of the meet this weekend, Welsh said he expects that Thursday’s portion of the meet is a good indicator of how the rest of the Invitational will end in a very close competition.

Besides seeing a vast improvement in times and following closely behind third place Western Kentucky in this meet as its league, the team is using the Invitational as an opportunity to acquire qualifying times in events for the Big East Championship in February, which is the first year qualifying times will be required for the Big East Championship.

The Irish fared well with six swimmers posting qualifying times in individual events.

Senior Jonathan Pierce and freshmen Matt Obernier and J.R. Teddy made qualifying times in the 100 yard freestyle event. In the 200 IM, senior Ryan Verlin and sophomore Clay Miller had qualifying times along with junior Austin Anderson posting a qualifying time in the 50 yard freestyle.

Welsh was pleased with the results.

“All the Irish swimmers dive into the water at the start of an event Thursday afternoon. The Irish are in fourth place after one day of competition.”

“I’m very pleased with the results. The Irish swimmers dive into the water at the start of an event Thursday afternoon. The Irish are in fourth place after one day of competition.”

“The team’s focus this year has been to seek improvement in each event and swim faster,” said Welsh.

“Across the board, person to person, we have been faster today than we have been all year,” said Welsh.

Irish swimmer enter weekend competition in fourth place

By COLLEEN McCArTHY
Sports Writer

Although final exams are more than a week away, men’s swimming head coach Tim Welsh told his team that they should consider this weekend’s Notre Dame Invitational meet as their final test of the fall season.

“Our objective coming into this season was to look at it as the focal point of the fall semester,” said Welsh.

“The team’s focus this year has been to seek improvement in each event and swim faster,” said Welsh.

Thursday’s close competition ended with the Irish in fourth place with 305 points. Denison University was in first place with 372 points followed by Michigan State with 365 points and Western Kentucky University with 321 points. The team lost their second place standing after being disqualified in the final event of Thursday’s meet, the 400 medley relay.

Going into the rest of the meet this weekend, Welsh said he expects that Thursday’s portion of the meet is a good indicator of how the rest of the Invitational will end in a very close competition.

Besides seeing a vast improvement in times and following closely behind third place Western Kentucky in this meet as its league, the team is using the Invitational as an opportunity to acquire qualifying times in events for the Big East Championship in February, which is the first year qualifying times will be required for the Big East Championship.

The Irish fared well with six swimmers posting qualifying times in individual events.

Senior Jonathan Pierce and freshmen Matt Obernier and J.R. Teddy made qualifying times in the 100 yard freestyle event. In the 200 IM, senior Ryan Verlin and sophomore Clay Miller had qualifying times along with junior Austin Anderson posting a qualifying time in the 50 yard freestyle.

Welsh was pleased with the results.

“All the Irish swimmers dive into the water at the start of an event Thursday afternoon. The Irish are in fourth place after one day of competition.”

“I’m very pleased with the results. The Irish swimmers dive into the water at the start of an event Thursday afternoon. The Irish are in fourth place after one day of competition.”

“The team’s focus this year has been to seek improvement in each event and swim faster,” said Welsh.

“Across the board, person to person, we have been faster today than we have been all year,” said Welsh.
“What Do We Want From Story?”
Conference and Inaugural Lecture

Includes:
Margaret Ann Doody, Christopher Fox, Patrick Jehle, Teresa Phelps, Rev. Edward A. Malloy, Vilsoni Hereniko, Michael Rose, John S. Dunne Melvin Pena, Valerie Sayers, & Marina Warner

Sponsored by the office of the Provost, the Henkels Lecture Series; the Graduate School; and by the Department of Anthropology; the Department of English; The Department of Film, Television and Theatre; the Department of Romance Languages and Literatures; the Department of Music.

University of Notre Dame * November 30 - December 2
Women’s Swimming

Irish diver competes in the Notre Dame Relays. Diving takes place tomorrow at Rolfs Aquatic Center.

Irish sprinters pace team in competition

By ANDREW SOUKUP
Sports Writer

Even a stripped-down women’s swimming team was good enough to grab first place in the Notre Dame Invitational after one day of competition.

Although several Irish swimmers did not compete Thursday because of conflicts with classes, the Irish still lead the seven team field with 374 points. Denison University is in second place with 356.5 points, and Harvard University is a distant third with 269 points.

“We feel pretty comfortable right now,” said Irish women’s swimming head coach Bailey Weather. “A bunch of our swimmers didn’t go today because they had class. We don’t want to use up all our misses right away.” It didn’t seem to matter that injured sprinter Carrie Nixon wasn’t in the lineup for the Irish. Freshman Danielle Hulick turned in another strong performance in the 50-yard freestyle, finishing fourth. Junior Brooke Davey finished sixth, and Kelly Hecking won the B final to finish ninth overall.

“I thought the sprinters Kelly, Danielle, and Brooke had their best swims of the year,” Weather said.

Notre Dame also had two strong performances in both relays. In the 200-yard freestyle relay, the team of Hecking, Hulick, Sarah Bowman, and Davey won a tight battle for second place, finishing with a time of 1:37.29. Hecking and Hulick also teamed up with Allison Lloyd and Lisa Garcia to win the 400-yard medley relay in 3:52.71.

“Our relays have really put us in a good spot heading into the weekend,” Weather said.

The Irish also performed well in the 200 individual medley. Freshman Marie Labosky won in 2:04.71. Garcia finished in third place, two and a half seconds behind Labosky, and sophomore Amy Deger took ninth.

“We did a great job in the 200 IM,” Weather said. “Marie, Lisa and Amy all had great races.”

Senior Kristen Van Saun turned in a second place effort in the 500 freestyle. She finished in 5:28.42, losing to Denison’s Tamara Carty by only 11 seconds. Sophomores Lindsay Moorhead and Nicole Kohrt finished seventh and eighth, respectively.

Notre Dame’s talented freshman class stole the show once again. Of the 13 swimmers who scored points, six were freshmen.

“Our freshmen have done pretty well for us so far,” Weather said. “They’ve responded well to class and to training. They’re a very special and talented group.”

The Notre Dame Invitational resumes action today at 10:00 a.m. with preliminaries. Finals will be held later tonight, starting at 6:30 p.m. In addition, Notre Dame’s elite diving corps will begin competing on the 1-meter springboard.

“We’re going to do the same thing on Saturday that we did today. Some of our swimmers are not going to compete because they’ve got class,” Weather said. “But on Saturday, we’ll have everyone and we’ll really be ready to go.”
The Not-So-Royal Shakespeare Company presents

William Shakespeare's

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS

Directed by Christopher Beley  Stage Managed by Jessica Gibson

Hesburgh Center for International Studies
(across from the Bookstore)

Thursday Nov. 30  7:30 p.m.
Friday Dec. 1  7:30 p.m.
Saturday Dec. 2  1:00 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.
Sunday Dec. 3  2:00 p.m.

General Admission
$7
Students
$5

Tickets available at La Fortune box office 631-8128
and at the door.

Get tickets soon, last year every night sold out!

Basketball

continued from page 24

"I think our No. 1 key is going to have to be our defense in shutting down their shooters," Irish guard Matt Carroll said. "They've got a lot of big guys, and we're going to have to play consistent defense the whole game."

While the Commodores 3-point shooting percentage is well below Notre Dame's nationally leading 54 percent, the Commodores are still averaging about eight 3-pointers per game. Notre Dame sharp shooters Carroll, David Graves and Martin Ingelsby have fans expecting the ball to drop through the net every time they let one loose from behind the arc, but 3-point shooting won't be enough for an Irish victory.

"We really have to be able to defend their 3-point shots," Irish head coach Mike Brey said. "That gives them momentum and gets their building going, their home court crowd.

"I hope we just don't come down and shoot 3s on each other because we certainly want to get touches to our big guys down low, Troy [Murphy] and Ryan [Humphrey] and Harold [Swanagan]."

Vanderbilt should challenge Notre Dame on the boards with five players on its roster who are 6-foot-7 or taller. Williams averages nearly 10 boards per game and is helped by LaPointe's contributions.

Defensive rebounding in the second half against No. 17 Cincinnati last Saturday helped Notre Dame pull out the victory. Humphrey and Murphy, Notre Dame's power tandem down low, average 9.3 and 8.3 rebounds apiece, respectively.

"Rebounding and defense are the keys to winning any game," Humphrey said. "When we play defense, our offense will take care of itself."

Notre Dame fell short in its last two matches with Vanderbilt, despite Graves going for a career-high 33 points a year ago. The Irish would like nothing more than to strike back at the Commodores.

"Whenever you lose to somebody the year before," Carroll said, "you always want to go out and beat them. Especially losing to them in the way that we lost to them, that makes you just want to beat them even more."

The Vandy homecourt advantage won't make the Irish search for revenge any easier.

Memorial Gymnasium is the only Division I arena that has team benches beneath the baskets instead of along the sidelines. The arena, with a seating capacity of 14,100, is a loud one that throws opposing teams off balance.

"This is going to be a tougher challenge than Cincinnati," Brey said. "People don't really understand that, but we're going to have to play on their home court. Our demeanor and our communication is going to have to be excellent, because we're not going to be able to hear."
Women's Swimming

Saint Mary's faces Calvin, Olivet in MIAA matchup

By JANEL MILLER
Sports Writer

There is a point in every season when you know that your team is ready for the competition. The Belles swimming and diving team is at that point.

Coming off a sixth place finish at the highly competitive Wabash Invitational, a win over University of Western Ontario and a slew of record-breaking swims, the Belles look to Saturday when they finally go head to head in a MIAA contest against Calvin and Olivet Colleges.

Saint Mary's caught some action against the Calvin women at the Wabash Invite and have a rough idea of the competition. "They're a tough team. It's gonna be a tough meet," said Belles head coach Gretchen Hildebrandt after the Wabash Invite. The Belles haven't seen the Olivet women as of yet.

The Belles originally planned to swim both teams at home on separate occasions. Their first conference meet was to be at Rolfs Aquatic center on Nov. 14 versus Olivet College but was cancelled. Because of the Notre Dame Invitational the schedule was changed, and the Belles sacrificed their home turf. Because of scheduling conflicts with both teams, the Belles are now on the road for their first conference meet. But instead of swimming one team, the Belles are going for two.

They're a tough team. It's going to be a tough meet."

Gretchen Hildebrandt
Saint Mary's swim coach

of their "would be fans" are gone for winter break.

Saint Mary's enters the meet with a clean conference slate. Calvin is 1-0 after a close win over Albion College in early November. The Calvin women are coming off a 1999-2000 second place finish in the MIAA and a 5-1 record.

Olivet, having faced Hope College and Kalamazoo College, reflect a 0-2 start in the conference meets. The Olivet women placed below the Belles fifth place finish in the '99-'00 Championship meet.

Freshman Chloe Lenihan competes in the 400-yard backstroke relay at the Notre Dame relays earlier this season.
By NOAH AMSTADTER
Assistant Sports Editor

The Irish are going to Disney World.
Ruth Riley and the fourth-ranked Notre Dame women's basketball team take on North Carolina at 1:30 Sunday afternoon in the first game of the Honda Elite Classic. The game will be played at the Walt Disney World Wide World of Sports facility in Orlando, Fla. The game will be televised on ESPN2.

The Irish come into the game riding high with a 5-0 record after doubling up Fordham 89-44 Monday night. Notre Dame takes on North Carolina at 1:30 Sunday afternoon. Irish forward Meghan Leahy shoots a free throw during Notre Dame's 89-44 victory over Fordham Monday night. Notre Dame takes on North Carolina at 1:30 Sunday afternoon.

North Carolina enters the weekend with a 3-2 record. After being upset by Buffalo in their season opener, the Tarheels have regrouped to record victories over Syracuse and North Carolina A&T. Hatchell utilizes a fast-paced offense that generally results in high-scoring games. "People like to see teams that get up and down the court," said Hatchell. "I don't like to play those 40 and 50 point games."

The key player for North Carolina thus far this season has been LaQuanda Barksdale, who scored 23 points and pulled down 13 rebounds to lead North Carolina to an 81-66 victory over Syracuse on Nov. 19. "Barksdale's really the key to the team right now," said McGraw. "She's played extremely well."

The matchup between the Irish and Tarheels takes place almost one year to the day after Notre Dame toppled a North Carolina team that was then ranked No. 9 in the country. Notre Dame won 99-86 in the opening round of the Wake Forest Invitational in Richmond, Va. "They were a very good team last year when we played them," said Irish head coach Muffet McGraw of North Carolina.

"They were led last year by the strong shooting of guard Alicia Ratay. Ratay scored 32 points, including six three-pointers, to lead Notre Dame. "She made every shot she took against us last year," said Tarheels coach Sylvia Hatchell. "We couldn't stop her. She was just popping shots all over the court."

Forward Ericka Haney had one of her better games of the year, scoring 18 points and pulling down 14 rebounds.

Alicia Ratay and Niele Ivey entered Monday's game as the first and third leading scorers in the country. "I think that we are really on a roll right now," said the key for the Irish thus far this season has been an inside-outside game that is very difficult to defend against. With All-American Ruth Riley down low, teams often leave guards Alicia Ratay and Niele Ivey open down low. Either Ivey or Ratay has been the leading scorer for the Irish in all but one game this season.

"They have the whole package," said Tarheels coach Sylvia Hatchell. "They have the three key things that you must have to be a final four team or a national championship team. They have a point guard, a shooter and a center. They're all as good as anybody in the country."

The Irish are going to Disney World.
Ruth Riley and the fourth-ranked Notre Dame women's basketball team take on North Carolina at 1:30 Sunday afternoon in the first game of the Honda Elite Classic. The game will be played at the Walt Disney World Wide World of Sports facility in Orlando, Fla. The game will be televised on ESPN2.

The Irish come into the game riding high with a 5-0 record after doubling up Fordham 89-44 Monday night. Notre Dame takes on North Carolina at 1:30 Sunday afternoon. Irish forward Meghan Leahy shoots a free throw during Notre Dame's 89-44 victory over Fordham Monday night. Notre Dame takes on North Carolina at 1:30 Sunday afternoon.

North Carolina enters the weekend with a 3-2 record. After being upset by Buffalo in their season opener, the Tarheels have regrouped to record victories over Syracuse and North Carolina A&T. Hatchell utilizes a fast-paced offense that generally results in high-scoring games. "People like to see teams that get up and down the court," said Hatchell. "I don't like to play those 40 and 50 point games."

The key player for North Carolina thus far this season has been LaQuanda Barksdale, who scored 23 points and pulled down 13 rebounds to lead North Carolina to an 81-66 victory over Syracuse on Nov. 19. "Barksdale's really the key to the team right now," said McGraw. "She's played extremely well."

The matchup between the Irish and Tarheels takes place almost one year to the day after Notre Dame toppled a North Carolina team that was then ranked No. 9 in the country. Notre Dame won 99-86 in the opening round of the Wake Forest Invitational in Richmond, Va. "They were a very good team last year when we played them," said Irish head coach Muffet McGraw of North Carolina.

"They were led last year by the strong shooting of guard Alicia Ratay. Ratay scored 32 points, including six three-pointers, to lead Notre Dame. "She made every shot she took against us last year," said Tarheels coach Sylvia Hatchell. "We couldn't stop her. She was just popping shots all over the court."

Forward Ericka Haney had one of her better games of the year, scoring 18 points and pulling down 14 rebounds.

Alicia Ratay and Niele Ivey entered Monday's game as the first and third leading scorers in the country. "I think that we are really on a roll right now," said the key for the Irish thus far this season has been an inside-outside game that is very difficult to defend against. With All-American Ruth Riley down low, teams often leave guards Alicia Ratay and Niele Ivey open down low. Either Ivey or Ratay has been the leading scorer for the Irish in all but one game this season.

"They have the whole package," said Tarheels coach Sylvia Hatchell. "They have the three key things that you must have to be a final four team or a national championship team. They have a point guard, a shooter and a center. They're all as good as anybody in the country."
Freshman Amy Warner penetrates the Michigan defense during NCAA tournament action earlier this season. Today, Warner will make her first start since her injury in early October.

Top ranking means little against UNC

Look carefully at the No. 1 sign at the top of Grace Hall. You may not notice at first, but at the very bottom of the sign there is a little tiny asterisk. Next to that asterisk it says, "But they haven't played the Tar Heels yet." Notre Dame's undefeated record and No. 1 has one tiny little flaw—the Irish haven't beaten the best yet.

For the first time since 1996, the Irish and Tar Heels did not face each other in the regular season. It doesn't matter what the polls say. It doesn't matter what the records are. North Carolina is the favorite to win the national title every year.

"Their history says enough, and it's no different this year," Irish head coach Randy Waldrum said. "Until someone beats them, they're the team to beat, it doesn't matter where they're ranked." The Irish should be commendable for their 23-0-1 record. Notre Dame is the only team to finish the regular season undefeated and the only team seeded in the tournament to make the final four. But that all doesn't mean squat to North Carolina—even if Tar Heels have three more losses and four fewer wins than the Irish.

The Tar Heels just know how to win when it matters. No matter what their regular season record and its usually pretty close to perfect—coach Anson Dorrance always has his team playing its best in the tournament.

He has 16 national championship trophies to his credit—15 more than the Irish who are tied for second in all-time championship with just one. In the 11 meetings between the two teams, the Irish have won just twice and managed only two ties. The latter seven meetings all ended in Tar Heels celebrations—including last year's championship game. So throw the previous 24 games out the window. They don't matter.

Ignore the 6-1 and 1-0 victories against Santa Clara. Forget about the sixth straight Big East Conference tournament title. It doesn't matter that the Irish seniors have won 88 games in their careers.

The entire season comes down to just one game. Ninety minutes decide how the 2000 Irish will be judged.

Taking nothing away from the two other semifinal teams—Portland and UCLA—but the national champion will be decided in the semifinals.

Three times in the '90s, the Irish and Tar Heels met in the final. All three times the Tar Heels won—including last year's 2-0 North Carolina win.

This will be the third time the Irish have met in the semifinals. The Irish beat the Tar Heels in 1995 to advance to the final and win their first and only national title.

Just 90 minutes stand between a very good regular season and a season to remember. Beat the Tar Heels and that No. 1 sign will blaze a little bit brighter and without that annoying little asterisk.

The views expressed in this column are solely those of the author and are not necessarily those of The Observer.

1) Believe

North Carolina's mystery is unavoidable. They've won 16 of the 19 titles contested. The Irish must avoid getting caught up in history to score a victory over a team that has had their number in the past. Notre Dame enters this game as the favorite on the field. They need to ignore the tradition and focus on just playing the game.

2) Hang in There

The Tar Heels will have their chances, their offense is potent and shots are inevitable. The Irish must keep their win early, weather any potential storms, and then find a rhythm from there. The Irish defense will have to be especially tough. Santa Clara outshot the Irish 13-4 last week. If Notre Dame wants to win, it has to cut down North Carolina's shot opportunities while at the same time taking advantage of every scoring opportunity of its own.

3) Anne Makinen

College soccer's best player can change games single-handedly. This is one she might need to alter. Makinen has been involved in 39 percent of Notre Dame's goals. She needs to use her leadership to organize the offense. Makinen doesn't want to end her collegiate career with a loss—a competitive instinct, need to take over and dominate the game.

4) Midfield to Warner Connection

With Warner starting her first game since early October, the Irish will have to get up front speed. The midfield must control play and feed Warner. She converts the opportunities she gets it's up to the Makinen-led midfield to get her the ball.

5) Liz Wagner

The Irish goalkeeper has played her best in big games this season and tonight's game is the biggest of them all. She may need to make the clutch saves. Wagner played her best game of the season against Santa Clara. Tonight, she has to play even better.

Kevin Berchou and Andrew Scopka
The Observer

5 Heels Keys to Victory

1) Stop Anne Makinen

Makinen, one of five finalists for the Hermann Trophy, has scored or assisted on 39 percent of Notre Dame's goals. She needs four assists to become just the sixth woman in Division I soccer to record 60 goals and 56 assists for her career and a goal like that is just the motivation a player of her fierce competitive nature needs for extra intensity.

2) Mind the Middle

Because the Irish play with three central midfielders, the Tar Heels will need to put each other out defensively in the middle of the field. They handled that scheme well in the final last year, but they had Lorrie Fair, Lindsay Stocek and Rebekah McDowell back then. A less experienced UNC defense could have problems.

3) Score Early

The Tar Heels have been at their best and most dominant this season when they have scored early and put goals out of reach before they barely have a chance to begin. In their three losses, they outshot their opponents 66-25 but couldn't find the back of the net when they needed to. The longer teams hang with UNC, the more confidence they build.

4) Meredith Florence, Please Stand Up

Florence's 23 goals are tops in the nation, and her 58 points place her fifth. Her 1.14 goals per game average leaves her at third in the nation. She has been UNC's most consistent and reliable scorer this season and can't afford a slump against Elizabeth Wagnner and an Irish defense that leads the nation in goals against average at 0.325 per game.

5) Keep On Rolling

Ever since the regular season ended, North Carolina has looked like a different team. The Tar Heels gave up one goal in three games in winning their 12th straight ACC title and have maintained that intensity throughout the NCAA tournament. The players have frequently said that they feel they have something to prove after being doubted following the regular season. This is certainly not the most dominant of UNC teams but it still has that extra level it can kick into in the postseason.

James Giza
The Daily Tarheel

# #
Tar Heels play, Waldrum is aware that we’re going to have to control their opportunities,” he said. “We’re going to have to work hard to win the ball, and chances.

For the Irish, Waldrum has a point. The Heels are coming off a loss against North Carolina, and though they have played well recently, they are looking to bounce back.

Waldrum said, “They’re such a high pressure team, and we’re going to have to work hard to win the ball, and chances. We’re going to have to control our opportunities.”

The Irish, on the other hand, are coming off a win against Louisville and are looking to build on their momentum. Waldrum was quick to point out that the Irish have a strong team, led by senior Ali Lovelace and sophomore Meotis Eriksson.

Eriksson is expected to create plenty of chances for the Irish, and his team will need to be patient if they want to take advantage of her skills.

Waldrum said, “Our defense will have to be tough. She’s such a high pressure team, and we’re going to have to work hard to win the ball, and chances. We’re going to have to control our opportunities.”

The game will likely be won or lost in the midfield, and it’s been good all year,” Waldrum said. “The midfield gives his squad an edge in the one thing, our record speaks for itself, I don’t think we feel any outside pressure. We know what we have to do.

The winner, or maybe the survivor of this war, will go on to play the winner of the Portland-UCLA game in the final Sunday afternoon. But Waldrum knows that this game is most important. The two best teams remaining will play each other tonight.

Friday, December 1, 2000
The Observer
page 21

Attention Men’s Boxing Club:

Anyone wishing to participate in the Spring Bengal Bouts MUST attend an informational meeting

Tuesday at 4:00pm
Boxing Room, JACC

Soccer continued from page 24

Though both the offense and defense are strong and she’s got good hands so I think she’ll be tough to go up against,”

Makinen didn’t play in the second half of last year’s finals loss to the Tar Heels and her presence this year will make a world of difference in the Irish midfield.

“She’s one of the best players to ever play collegiate soccer. She’ll be their attacking midfielder, and we’ve got to somehow contain her,” UNC head coach Anson Dorrance noted.

Waldrum said, “She’s one of the best players to ever play collegiate soccer. We’ll be their attacking midfielder, and we’ve got to somehow contain her.”

UNC head coach Anson Dorrance noted.

Sunday afternoon. But Waldrum knows that this game is most important. The two best teams remaining will play each other tonight.

2000 NCAA Women’s College Cup

Friday, December 1, 2000
The Observer
page 21
Irish face Buckeyes in 1st round of NCAA tournament

By RACHAEL PROTZMAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame volleyball team heads to Ohio State this weekend as it participates in the first round of NCAA tournament play against Cincinnati on Friday. The No. 19 Irish stand at 25-6 with all six losses being to ranked teams: Nebraska, UCLA, Michigan, USC, Michigan State and Colorado State.

Notre Dame led the Big East regular-season at an undefeated 11-0 this year as well as earning the conference championship title with three-game sweeps over Connecticut and Rutgers. Senior Denyse Boylan earned the Big East Player of the Year, Senior of the Year and Championship Most Outstanding Player awards while compiling a .264 hitting percentage which ranks first in Notre Dame history. Senior co-captain Christi Girtton and Junior Kristy Kreher were also named to the all-Big East first team while junior Marcy Homack was a conference second team selection. Freshman Kim Fisher earned the all-Big East rookie of the year title. Notre Dame rounded out the awards banquet with head coach Debbie Brown earning the 2000 Big East coach of the year.

The Irish ended Big East play with the fifth of six years in which they didn't give up a game. Notre Dame will look for its second historical win over Cincinnati. The two teams have faced each other only once in 1987 when the Irish edged over the Bears in five games. Cincinnati is currently 24-9 and No. 2 in Conference USA play. Shantay Miller will look to pose a threat to Irish defense by increasing her 491 total kills in 2000 at Cincinnati's second consecutive NCAA appearance.

With a win, Notre Dame will move on to face the winner of the Ball State vs. Ohio State game to be played Friday night. Ohio State is currently 24-6 with a fourth place finish in the Big Ten and will host its seventh NCAA tournament. The Buckeyes ended Irish tournament play last year in a four-game win.

Ball State is 25-6 going into its second consecutive NCAA tournament. Megan Hammond leads Cardinal offense with 551 kills this season. Notre Dame is coming off an end to a 11-game winning streak with a five-game loss to No. 5 USC. Game five summarized the match as both teams were back and forth, neither gaining more than a three-point advantage until USC racked up a 13-9 lead which led to its victory. Kreher will look to put a stop to opposing offense this weekend by increasing her team lead of 256 digs while Girtton will hope to execute a stellar offensive performance, leading the Irish with 418 kills in 2000.

The Irish will look to edge over their 500 NCAA tournament history, a 9-9 record in their ninth consecutive appearance.

Seminoles' season ends at ACC Tourney

By DAN WESTGATE
FVNews & Paula Fambrough
TALLAHASSEE, Fla.
The No. 4 Florida State Lady Seminoles ended their season after losing in four games to the No. 5 Duke Blue Devils (14-16, 10-15, 15-4, 10-15) at the ACC Tournament in Winston-Salem, N.C.

"Duke is the Duke in the ACC tournament was a real disappointment for the team," FSU head coach Dr. Cecile Reynaud said. "Duke blocked tremendously well in the game, and we just couldn't break through.

Junior middle hitter Norisha Campbell posted 16 kills, six blocks and a .364 hitting percentage in the four matches against Duke. She was named first-team all-conference by the ACC the day prior to the match.

Senior outside hitter Jennifer Werrick contributed a match-high 25 digs and 10 kills in the match after being named second-team all-conference. The FSU offense was run by setter Jennifer Anderson. The freshman had 49 assists in the match. She was named to the ACC All-Freshman team.

And topping the list of awards was Reynaud who was awarded the ACC Coach of the Year for the second time. The last came in 1992 when she finished 10-6-1 in the regular season.

The fourth-place 'Noles finished their season with a record 21 wins and 11 losses and a conference record of nine wins and eight losses.

Reynaud hopes that the early signing of two student-athletes will improve the team and help them in the 2001-02 season. Alisha Carr, a 6-foot outside and middle hitter from Dallas, Texas and Ashley Meyer, a 6-foot middle hitter from Luling, Louisiana, will be joining the Lady Seminoles next season.

"Alisha Carr was a nationally recruited player," Reynaud said. "She is well developed with the experience of playing for a top club. Alisha is also an excellent student-athlete and a dedicated volleyball player.

"Ashley will quickly develop into a dominant force at the net. She has a competitive personality which also helps her to excel in the classroom."

Reynaud is very excited about the future of Lady Seminoles volleyball with these two additions. However, they will have some big shoes to fill with the graduation of Werrick. Reynaud is confident that the new recruits will have opportunities to perform. "Jennifer Werrick is the only player that we are losing from this year's team," Reynaud said. "These two women (Carr and Meyer) will have an opportunity to compete for a starting spot on a young returning team."

Why is TIAA-CREF the #1 choice nationwide?

The TIAA-CREF Advantage

Call us for more information package

TIAA-CREF ADVANTAGE
Investment Expertise
Low Expenses
Customized Payment Options
Expert Guidance

Year in and year out, educators at education and research institutions, have turned to TIAA-CREF. And for good reasons:

• Easy diversification among a range of experts

• A solid history of performance and exceptional pension service

• A strong commitment to low expenses

• Plus, a full range of flexible retirement income options

For decades, TIAA-CREF has helped professors and staff at over 9,000 campuses across the country invest for—and enjoy—successful retirements.

Choosing your retirement plan provider is simple. Go with the leader: TIAA-CREF.

TIAA-CREF
Ensuring the future for those who shape it.*

1.800.842.2776
www.tiaa-cref.org

*For more complete information on our securities products, please call 1.800.242.7383, ext. 5509, to request prospectuses. Read them carefully before you invest. TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. distributes the and TIAA Real Estate variable annuities. Teachers Personal Investors Services, Inc. distributes the Personal Advantage variable annuity, component, mutual funds and brokerage accounts. TIAA and TIAA-CREF Life Insurance Co., New York, NY, issue insurance and annuities. TIAA-CREF Trust Company, FSB provides trust services. Investment products are not FDIC insured, may lose value and are not bank guaranteed. © 2000 TIAA-CREF (08/03)
Irish must ignore Tar Heels past successes in order to advance in tourney

By KEVIN BERCHEU
Sports Writer

All season long the Notre Dame women's soccer team has known the way to San Jose. The nation's top defense, a big game goalkeeper and an offensive arsenal led by one of women's college soccer's best players have had the Irish banking on an appearance in college's soccer's final four. However, one more thing was also certain — the Irish knew that to win the title they would have to topple the Tar Heels of North Carolina, a foe that has tormented the Irish and the rest of the women's game since its inception.

North Carolina's dominance speaks for itself. The Tar Heels have advanced to the NCAA semifinals each year they have been contested — their streak of 19 consecutive appearances date back to 1982. Those annual trips to the final four have yielded 16 national titles, including wins over the Irish in 1996 and 1999. Though on paper the undefeated, top-seeded Irish may be a favorite over the Tar Heels — whose fifth seed is their lowest ever — Notre Dame head coach Randy Waldrum knows that until someone slays the giant, the giant still rules.

"Their history says enough, and it's no different this year. Until someone beating them, they're the team to beat, it doesn't matter where they're ranked," Waldrum said.

Though they have lost three times this year, the Tar Heels' mystique has not been dulled. Since the regular season ended nearly a month ago, North Carolina has been on a tear, its game-by-game improvement culminating with a 3-0 win over Connecticut — the same team that played Notre Dame to a scoreless tie earlier in the year — in the quadrfinals.

When college soccer's titans clash tonight in San Jose, it will be a battle of two teams with few discernable weaknesses.

"I think it'll be an exciting game," said North Carolina junior midfielder Jen Kehret. "They have probably one of the best defenses and I think we have one of the best offenses, so we'll see what happens. It's going to be a tough game, but we're going to do everything we can to win and be playing on Sunday. It'll be a battle.

"The Notre Dame defensive corps will be charged with containing a high octane UNC attack that is led by senior Meredith Flanagan — who has already amassed 25 goals this season. Notre Dame fans will remember Flanagan well, as she scored the game-winning goal against Notre Dame in last year's final.

Additionally, the Irish will have to be watchful of speedy freshman Alyssa Ramsey, who has 14 goals and as many assists this season. "The women are really excited to see her, and I think they would really like to play Defense," Smith said.

The Belles will be looking to step up their defense and be sure the get under the boards. They've been focusing on both of these areas all week in practice.

"Defense and rebounding have always been our focus," Smith said.

With a win this weekend, the Belles will tie their victory total from last season. The improved team is heading into the weekend planning to set some people straight.

"Everyone expects us to lose," Matha said "We are playing to win."
Student leaders must cooperate with administration

By CHRISTINE KRALY
In Focus Writer

Rain poured down on game booths and the stuffed animal prizes afforded to the winners. The hard ground turned to mud, and the echoing sounds were not of music and laughter but of raindrops hitting dormant carnival rides.

Student government's Founder's Day carnival drew praise from government members and administration, but few everyday students. Was it just the rain, or was something amiss with the event or program? E ggington said, noting that the success of large events is usually student body vice president Brooke Norton at the beginning of the 2000 school year. Norton first brainstormed with student body president Brian O'Donoghue and fellow government members and then took the idea to advisor Mary Edgington, director of Student Activities. "Most of all it comes down to time. You want to make it successful."

From Student Activities. "We wanted to do a fun thing for students ... that would be different," Norton said. She and government staff held informal talks with the Office of Student Activities and Office of Student Affairs who were "really receptive to the idea." It was then that the project planning really took off. Norton and other members wrote a proposal outlining format ideas for the event to Edgington. The idea was then sent to Peggy Hnatasko, head of the Financial Management Board (FM B), a division of Student Activities.

Groups like student government who wish to sponsor an event or program exceeding $5,000 must send a proposal to FMB, whose funds come from student activity fees. Founder's Day was approved and government members moved to bring in the clowns. "I wouldn't say it's necessarily easy," Edgington said of getting proposals approved. Problems occur, she said, when the group does not have the time or funding to sponsor an event. Founder's Day, for example, was produced with the help of nearly seven campus clubs, 11 dorms and 20 groups like Food Services and WVFI.

Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Planning events usually doesn't fall under student government jurisdiction because large events are usually SUB sponsored. "Most of all it comes down to time," Edgington said of planning campus events. "You want to make it successful." she added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. Finding the money to make the cotton candy flow is often a difficult task, Norton added, noting that the success of events like Founder's Day take months to prepare. After all the planning and all the groups involved in the production, Norton said, many people were left wondering "whose jurisdiction is it under?"

Let's open the doors

For the first time in recent memory, the Notre Dame student body has a leader. Brian O'Donoghue sincerely wants to make this University a better place; he wants to take the talent and potential of the students of Notre Dame and realize a vision of a greater University. But the students he wants to lead don't know that. And that is a problem.

In preparing this special section, Observer staffers talked with scores of students about their government. And the most frequent word they heard about it was "I don't know." Students don't know what their government is doing. They don't know that O'Donoghue and vice president Brooke Norton created a fund to help them when they need a plane ticket home in an emergency. They don't know that the Student Senate is trying to expand sexual assault education on campus.

They don't know because they don't hear about it. And they don't hear about it because so much of what O'Donoghue's administration does is done behind closed doors.

Student government has always had a reputation as a stepping stone of an inner-circle. This year that reputation is deserved. While small sections of the student body are consulted when the leaders are deciding what to do, too many decisions are made with not enough consultation.

And once the decision has been made, and our student leaders sit down to talk with each other and the administration, to hammer proposals into reality, everyday students are even more removed. They aren't told what's going on; often they're not even told when something is accomplished.

Student government is not the only side to blame for this, however. If our representatives are insiders, most of the represented are indifferent. Students mock their senate and they ignore their president. And they don't give them a chance.

Student government held open forums about the alcohol policy at the start of the year, and attendance was low. Last December, the Student Union Board had a forum about campus concerts, and just a few showed up. If we expect student leaders to act as our spokespersons to the administration, we need to tell them how to do so.

Granted, student government has an image problem. Some past presidents have seemed to do little more than talk the lotta and throw barbecues, attended mostly by other student government members and their friends. O'Donoghue wants to do more than that. He wants to use his office to make life better for Notre Dame students (and not just by supplying them with occasional free hamburgers). But, at the same time, he and his staff have a problem: communicating with those students, to find out how they want their life better and to tell them when things change.

Effective student government requires steps in two directions. It requires the governors to take a step towards the students, and it requires the governed to take a step towards the leaders.

Let's take those steps. Let's talk to each other. Let's open the doors.

---

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

---

IN FOCUS STAFF

Editor: Tim Logan
Photography: Tony Floyd
Graphics: Katie Annis

The Observer • IN FOCUS

Friday, December 1, 2000

---

Trying to make a connection

Government describes attempts to find student concerns

By Finn PRESSLY

Perched just feet above the HuddleMart, Notre Dame student government has long been accused of keeping itself too far removed from main campus life. Student body president Brian O'Donoghue claims he has worked this year to break down those barriers by maintaining the channels of communication in the dorms and around campus.

"It's safe to say that Brooke, Jay and I aren't hiding up in the second floor of LaFortune," he said, referring to student body vice president Brooke Norton and chief of staff Jay Smith.

Though all three have extensive background in student government, they feel that O'Donoghue's campaign for president exposed them to the broadest slice of student life.

"We went door to door and talked to every single student on this campus," O'Donoghue said.

He also credits the mix of personalities in student government for helping to expand the office's scope.

There's no more diverse personalities on this campus," he said of himself, Norton, and Smith. "We come from very different groups ... we don't hang out together or on the weekends." Smith echoed a similar sentiment. "It's not like the three of us are inseparable and we hang out," he said.

With their term now past the halfway mark, members of student government rely mainly on the mechanisms of campus government to gather information from students.

"We go through our division heads, and the heads of our committees. They're mostly freshmen, sophomores, and juniors, with some seniors," said student government director of public relations Dave Zachy. "I assume they speak with the students in their dorms."

The nexus of interaction between students and government, he said, are the hall council meetings within the residence halls.

"Hall Council is where most of the action should take place," he said. Ideas and concerns brought up at Hall Council are then radiated to student senators, hall presidents, and then on to the Office of the President.

Outside the meetings of the Hall Council, members of the student government try to make themselves available to input from their neighbors.

"In my three years, I've always tried to ask people in the dorm what's going on. Some people say 'I don't care,' and some people give me an idea, and I go with it," Zachy said.

O'Donoghue also said that dorm life heightens awareness of campus issues.

"Brooke and I both live in residence halls, so we gain input through that," he said.

Campus media also functions as a forum for suggestions and complaints.

"I personally read the Viewpoint page [of The Observer] religiously, and I know most people in student government do, too," Zachy said.

With all these avenues of input, however, some student concerns are still not addressed. According to Smith, decision making also takes into consideration those students who have not brought forth their issues.

"In our thought process, we have to think about them. We can't just think about students who are active we have to think about everybody," he said. "That's why we strive to be responsive to as many students as possible because that's who we try to serve."

Tim Logan contributed to this report.

---

Student Opinion

Do you think student government is effective?

Notre Dame Students 75% Yes 27% No 8% NA/Unsure

Saint Mary's Students 61% Yes 31% No 8% NA/Unsure

85% of ND freshmen said yes but just 63% of ND seniors

Description of student government in one word or phrase:

"effective" 33% of ND freshmen said but 27% of ND seniors

"a sham" 15% of ND freshmen said but 31% of ND seniors

"puppets" 7% of ND freshmen said but 31% of ND seniors

"a voice for the students" 6% of ND freshmen said but 31% of ND seniors

"they're there" 4% of ND freshmen said but 31% of ND seniors

"strategery" 2% of ND freshmen said but 31% of ND seniors

"dedicated" 2% of ND freshmen said but 31% of ND seniors

"I don't know" 1% of ND freshmen said but 31% of ND seniors

"responsible" 1% of ND freshmen said but 31% of ND seniors

"effective" 1% of ND freshmen said but 31% of ND seniors

"trivial" 1% of ND freshmen said but 31% of ND seniors

Can you name your student senator/BOG rep.?

Can you name your student body president?

Just 26% of ND freshmen said yes, but 100% of SMC seniors did

Results based on random telephone surveys of 221 Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students on Nov. 20 and 30.
NOTRE DAME STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT

Working for the future

O'Donoghue and Norton focus on a mix of student services and new programs

By LAURA ROMPF
In Focus Writer

Although students may not realize the impact of the current office of student body president, several programs it has implemented are designed to benefit them for years to come.

Student body president Brian O'Donoghue said the Rector's Endowment Fund was a campaign promise and a great accomplishment for the office. One-third of the profits from The Shirt sales goes into a separate fund, available for students to use for medical school applications, football tickets, section dinners or other costly items.

Although only $906 of the fund's allotted $34,000 had been used as of Nov. 15, O'Donoghue said he expected the slow start.

"A lot of folks say students are apathetic, but we proved them wrong beyond a doubt."

Brian O'Donoghue student body president

The Office of the President has fulfilled almost every campaign promise, said O'Donoghue. There were only a few exceptions. Compared to recent administrations, the office has gone above and beyond expectations, and students few thought possible.

The office said they are also proud of the Founder's Day campus, even though rainy weather caused a low turnout for the event. Smith said he hopes the next office will build on Founder's Day so it will become an annual event.

"It was the first for that type of operation," Smith said. "Next year, hopefully, it will continue. We've paved the way, did the work and proved it can be done."

"We got 30 different groups involved instead of normal events that are just planned by one body," Norton said. "The students who did said they liked it and were happy with it."

The third significant accomplishment the office completed is sending students to the Board of Trustees winter meeting.

"This has never happened before," Smith said. "Students will be going to the meeting in Washington, D.C., in February."

The office played a large role in the report to the Board of Trustees in the fall focusing on alcohol use and sexual assault.

"We got a great response from the Board," Smith said. "The issues were taken very seriously. They are often not talked about and we felt they needed to be addressed."

The office contributed to organizing the sale of The Shirt for Basketball and hopes to finish a project called the Greatness Grant, which will provide funds for students who want to do service or other works of ministry.

"Hoping students would become active in Election 2000, the office planned debate and election watches in LaQuinte which were well attended. They also helped register 1000 voters, gave away 1500 absentee ballots and helped plan a Congressional debate in South Bend."

"The students' voice in elections is absolutely necessary. A lot of folks say students are apathetic, but we proved them wrong beyond a doubt," O'Donoghue said.

During the campaign, O'Donoghue and Norton said they would work for student discounts at local businesses and a scholarship service. O'Donoghue said they have communicated with local businesses and soon will have a discount card available, primarily for use at restaurants. The scholarship search is currently available online.

Although the office wanted to expand the Internet book-swap, they were unable to work with some organizations, so Smith said they hope to run a book-swap at a location where students can exchange books with each other.

"There are always signs around the dorms and campus where students are trying to sell books," Smith said. "We are looking to provide a centralized location where those selling and those buying books can come together."

O'Donoghue and Norton campaigned saying they would establish a satellite Grab'n'Go site in DeBartolo and a Recker's-like cafe in North Dining Hall.

"Last year at this time, we had 12 people tops in this office working hard. This year we still have 50 to 60 people who are dedicated towards their goals."

Jay Smith chief of staff

Student body president Brian O'Donoghue works the phone in his office. O'Donoghue has spent much of his term thus far trying to advance his major campaign priorities.

The office is also helping to plan a celebration of Martin Luther King week, including a forum for students, and Blessing Into Others, a Christian rock concert whose proceeds will go to an orphanage in Chile. All these endeavors, plus several other projects, have kept the office busy, and enthused, even after the midway break in their term.

"Last year at this time, we had 12 people tops in this office working hard," Smith said. "This year we still have 50 to 60 people who are dedicated towards their goals."

"Last year at this time, we had 12 people tops in this office working hard. This year we still have 50 to 60 people who are dedicated towards their goals."

Tony Floyd/The Observer

O'Donoghue and Norton said they still want to hear students' suggestions for new projects they could work on until April.

"Every person who has made a suggestion to us, we work through with it," Norton said.

O'Donoghue said, "We determine the feasibility and try to make it work."

"I have a lot of friends who fit into the 'critical of student government' group," Norton said. "It helps to reassess what we should be doing here. We want to know what would make the most happy students. We still want suggestions."
Kahn bridges gap between students and trustees

By MOLLY McVOY
In Focus Writer

The opportunity to directly influence what the Board of Trustees decides is a unique one afforded to the student trustee at Saint Mary's. The student trustee is a voting member of the Board, a situation not found at many other schools.

"Most of the major decisions on campus happen on the Board, and the student body has a voice in an important situation," said Molly Kahn, this year's student trustee.

Because of the unusual role the student trustee plays in the Colleges, the decision-making process, the trustee's primary responsibility is to serve as a voice for the student body on the Board of Trustees.

"I think the purpose of the trustee is really to be a voice of the students to the Board of Trustees," said College president Marilù Eldred. "Their job is to bring issues of the students to the Board."

Part of the job of the trustee is to have an understanding of the issues that concern the student body. Kahn hopes that a relationship of "office hour," a year has allowed students to approach her with their concerns.

"I try to be really accessible and open," Kahn said. "Sometimes people come to me with problems and concerns they have. A lot of students came to telling me about Dallaway's security. This allowed me to go to the Board and direct the news accurately to represent the student body."

At the final meeting, aside from the dedication of the two newest additions to campus, Dallaway's and the Welcome Center, many student issues were on the agenda. Kahn also plans to bring more such topics to the next meeting in February.

"The Board discussed the issues with new facilities, athletics, personal safety and student diversity board," Kahn said. "In February, I'm looking to talk to the Board about what Saint Mary's does to help seniors with plans after graduation."

Aside from bringing student concerns to the Board, the trustee often acts as the student voice in any questions the Board has about issues at the College.

"Molly clearly brought an important perspective when we [the Board] talked about Master Plan and the student center during hall project," Eldred said.

"She was able to be very articulate for why that was so important to the community life of the students and college in general."

The student trustee is appointed by a committee of faculty, administrators and students. When asked whether an elected trustee would more accurately represent the student body's needs and opinions, Eldred said she feels that the current system of appointment is the most suitable method.

"I like the process as it is now," Eldred said. "I think an appointed position is appropriate. The faculty and administration have a broader view of the College. We want to choose the student who we think will best represent the student body." Linda Timm, vice president for Student Affairs, supervises the selection of the student trustee. Time explained that the appointment process looks specifically for a person who will accurately represent the student population.

"We're looking for a student who has a sense of what the student voice in the Board of Trustees would be, someone who has given thought to the major agenda items for students," Timm said. "She also needs to have a plan for how to solicit student input so she is not just representing the student government views and her views, but the student body's views."

In addition to being a student voice to the Board, the trustee acts as a representative of the Board to the student body. Bob Eldred and Kahn felt that both responsibilities were equally important; the trustee not only represents the student's interests, but the Board's as well.

"As a student on the Board of Trustees, it is my responsibility to express student concerns, ideas, questions and comments, but it is also my responsibility to educate students about the Board of Trustees," Kahn said.

The part of her job that involves informing the students about the Board's activities is one that Kahn is constantly working on. She explained. Aside from the e-mail sent to the student body, Kahn is looking for ways to communicate the Board's plans to the students.

"There's a lot of interest in what the Board does," Kahn said. "Right now, I'm at the point of trying to hammer out how best to inform everyone."

And of providing a bridge between both sides.

BOARD OF GOVERNANCE

Renner/Nagle focus on opening up communication

+ Duo works with administrators and student leaders

By AMY GREENE
In Focus Writer

When Crisiss Renner and Michelle Nagle ran for student body president last spring, the main focus of their platform was to increase communication between the administration, student government, and the student body.

"Since taking office, that's what they've spent most of their energies on that effort," Renner said.

Renner and Nagle have worked with the administration to develop the new Dallaway's and also collaborated with the Strategic Planning Committee in their planning.

"I was pleased with the staff for approaching the Board of Governance and establishing the students' input. We now have students sit on all the planning committees," Renner said.

The Board of Governance also distributed a survey to all students for their input for the strategic planning.

To increase communication between the five different governing boards, Renner and Nagle encouraged the co-sponsorship of events. According to Renner, the co-sponsored events, such as the Athletic Recognition Pep Rally, are bigger and better attended than they were before. Both women believe that this synergy between the boards is their greatest success.

Renner and Nagle also focused on communication between students and the Board of Governance. BOG newsletters have been available in certain areas on campus in the past, but Renner and Nagle ensured that the newsletter existed. Renner and Nagle ensured that the newsletter was distributed to all students in their personal mailboxes each month. The newsletter allows students to become aware of how the Board of Governance votes on certain issues and also what events are being planned on campus.

The Board grew when Callie Kucso was named as the first Programming Commissioner. She assists in organizing Pride Week, Midnight Madness, Winter Carnival, and assists the Communication Commissioner. The Renner/Nagle platform also attempted to extend hours at the library and the post office. Both Renner and Nagle approached the Library Committee, as well as, the post office, but administrators decided not to keep those offices open longer.

Renner and Nagle also were unable to increase the amount of One fund Money for students, but complimentary guest passes to the dining hall were made avail-

see RENNER/next page

B+

Board of Governance has successfully executed Pride Week, co-sponsored events, and streamlined communication between leaders and students. Renner and Nagle's "synergy" campaign promise has come to life.

Michelle Nagle (left) and Crisiss Renner (right) sit at a Board of Governance meeting. The pair has dedicated itself to keeping students up to date on BOG happenings through a monthly newsletter.
Bouncing Back

After a controversial election, Crissie Renner and Michelle Nagle had to unite a fractured student body. What they didn’t know was that it would take another controversy to actually do it.

By NOREEN GILLESPIE
In Focus Writer

The presidential election of 2000 was not Board of Governance’s shining moment. Crissie Renner and Michelle Nagle won an election that is reminiscent of the current presidential campaign. After failing to secure an majority of votes in the initial election, the race went to a run-off, where the vote count ended in a first-ever tie. After another revote declared their opponents, Emily Koelsch and Rachel Rodarte the winners, a last-minute appeal by Renner that called attention to improper runoff procedures ended in a first-ever tie. After failing to win, Renner and Nagle ticket the presidency.

But the newly-elected duo did not have time to celebrate their victory last February, as a greater task loomed ahead: the task of uniting a student body, half of whom did not support their ticket in office. As the student body stormed a Board of Governors meeting shortly after the decision was announced, a tearful Renner and Nagle admitted they had Reluctance to enter their offices.

“I never thought we would assume office after the complaint was filed,” Nagle said that evening in an interview with The Observer. “It makes me doubt how much I understand the position when I hear how adamant students are opposed to what the Elections Commission and Election Appeals Board decided.”

The ticket did assume office last spring, and after a year that has produced both successes and challenges for the Board of Governance, the ticket that once sat in BOG meeting apprehensive to lead the student body has emerged as a brilliant administration. But so much of that has to do with the circumstances under which they were elected, both women will admit.

“We heard when the election happened, that students will move on,” Renner said. “We were told that the student body would open to us as leaders, and if we led, the student body would follow.”

But finding the strength to lead had to come from inside, and after a tumultuous election, the ticket was forced to find the motivations that led them to run for office in the first place. That meant trusting their leadership abilities, Nagle said.

“(The election) had a very humanizing effect on us,” Nagle said. “We took a deep breath and were able to come into office. But if we had doubted ourselves for a minute, we would have never run for office. We know that we want to be connected to the women that we represent.”

Constructing an administration that prides itself on its open-door policies, the opinion of the student body has been an element that is central to every decision that Board of Governance has made this year. Stressing the need for communication and education among board members before decisions can be made, the interests of the student body are something that is central to every decision the board makes, Renner said.

“My mother always told me that you can’t listen with your mouth open,” Renner said. “I have learned that the student body speaks when they knock on your door — and when they’re not knocking on your door, then they’re walking up each morning knowing that I am student body president, and that I represent 1500 women who care deeply about.”

Renner’s commitment to fairly representing each student at Saint Mary’s draws a line between her role and vice president Nagle’s role on the board; however, while Nagle is a voting member in the body, Renner said that her role as president forces her to keep a more unbiased position on controversial issues to allow her to fairly represent all women’s viewpoints.

“While there is nothing in writing that says I have to remain neutral, realizing that I do represent each of these women can make me feel that way,” Renner said.

But it is not always possible for a president to remain neutral, as Renner learned when the Junior Class Board designed the infamous “Girl of Choice” T-shirt and outcry from the student body over the shirt’s inappropriate theme resulted. As the student body divided into pro-shirt and anti-shirt camps, Renner and Nagle’s role began to merge.

Announcing the decision to purchase the shirts from the board and present them for sale, it was the first time the student government had ever sanctioned a class shirt. “I don’t know if the T-shirt decision counts as one of our successes,” Renner said. “But it was a chance for BOG to shine. It truly opened the door of student government to the community — whether students were in support or not in support of the shirt, we heard so much feedback.”

After the failure in the student body caused as a result of the 2000 election, the decision presented a united picture of student government to the student body.

“It was definitely a chance for student government to demonstrate what they can actually do,” Renner said. “It was a powerful educational tool for a lot of different reasons. I think it really showed the student body that student government does have an affect on their lives, and that their vote does count.”

While both political crises have defined an atypical term for the ticket, the year has taught both Renner and Nagle how to mature as leaders. And being leaders means learning that no matter how badly they want to receive consensus among their constituents, they know that they can’t be everything to everybody.

“Everything is the chance for you to see what Saint Mary’s is as an institution, as a community, and as a family,” Nagle said. “But there is a constant pressure to be something to everybody.”

“I have personally learned that if I’m seeking to please, then I am setting myself up for failure,” Renner said. “I’ve learned not to walk out my door every morning feeling like I have to please everybody. The student body will stand behind me no matter what.”

As their term comes to a close with the onset of the campaign season again in January, the lessons and leadership learned could be enough to carry one half of the Renner/Nagle ticket into the presidency next year. But it’s too soon to make those decisions.

“Student body president is a possibility,” she admitted. “But I really try to take each day as it comes, and for now, that means living each day as vice president.”

Renner continued from previous page.

The platform that we put together was the platform for the needs of the student body. ‘

“Our platform was a student platform,” Nagle said. “We tried to put the best ticket together to meet the students’ needs.”

They agreed that they keep the platform small because they could not foresee the future concerns of the student body.

“We couldn’t foresee what the year would hold,” Renner said.

“At times we had to unbind ourselves from the platform to meet the needs of the student body.”

The Renner/Nagle term has been anything but void of controversy. However, they wrestled with the junior class T-shirt, which stirred up controversy with its suggestion of a rivalry between Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s.

The event made Renner look at her job a little differently.

“I am a student body president, and I have to please everybody. The student body got a chance to speak about their student government.”

Despite the controversy, both women believe that the shirt ordeal made them better leaders.

“It was an outlet to show what we can really do,” Nagle said. “Renner and Nagle have also progressed in security on campus throughout the year. BOG spoke with Saint Mary’s Security about students’ concerns and campus safety. BOG also organized a Security Walk,” which BOG members, security officials and other students surveyed the campus and addressed areas that were not well lit or appeared unsafe.

Next semester, Renner and Nagle will also be addressing the issues of abroad student voting, the Study Days proposal and the Keenan Revue debate.

“The Renner/Nagle platform may have been minimal, but both women have performed well and have the potential to make a big difference on campus in the future.”

“Renner/Nagle helped me have a figure for this campus and yes, it’s overwhelming at times. I would do it again in a second for our campus and for my personal character.”
The uninvolved say they weren't hooked early enough

By HELENA PAYNE
In Focus Writer

When he does hear about events, he usually unable to attend because of conflicting activities. "Generally it's not because I don't want to [attend student government-sponsored events] but it's because I already have something to do," Romero said.

Like Romero, junior Rachel Rothrauff also had an initial interest as a freshman in student government, but unlike Romero, she heard about freshmen representative elections and was able to participate in her dorm's elections. Although she won and spent her first year active in student government, she has since decided to pursue other activities as well. Currently, she teaches a step aerobics class for RecSports and she works at the phone center.

"With time constraints, you can only do so many things here and the stuff I'm doing now is stuff I enjoy more," said Rothrauff.

Rothrauff said that while in student government as a Notre Dame freshman she felt that she had done more in high school on student government, "I did a lot of stuff in high school, way more than I..."
The Observer • IN FOCUS

Friday, December 1, 2000

page 7

STUDENT SENATE

Committees see successes, hope for future

By LAURA ROMPF
In Focus Writer

At the halfway mark of their term, student senators have completed work on several projects and now have their hands full with new ones.

"From the implementation of sexual assault programs and the posing of a 24-hour space policy in all residence halls, to honor code reform and food service changes, we've really taken positive steps to making Notre Dame a better place for students," said Saimt senator Ryan Becker. "And I promise, there is a lot more to come. We're not done yet."

While some senate committees have been more active than others, each of the seven outlined ambitions in August and have been working to accomplish these goals throughout the year.

Committee on Gender issues

In past, the senate's Committee on Gender Issues rarely brought forth resolutions, but this year it has been very active.

Gender issues used to be an idea and issues-oriented committee, but now we're focused on projects and making changes," said Maggie Clarke, Lyons senator. In August, the committee stated its main goals were to address 24-hour space issues and create a packet for first-year students to introduce them to campus.

Clarke and fellow co-chair Micaela Roach, Less senator, said the 24-hour space resolution, which guarantees social space around-the-clock in all residence halls, and the packet, which will include information available to students, were large accomplishments.

"We think it in all the information is together in one large book," Clarke said. "If a freshman, they will go it is all the time. It will sit on their shelves as a reference - almost like the 'dog book,'" Clarke said.

After accomplishing both of these, the committee has moved on to several other projects including working with Student Affairs to create Sexual Assault Programs in the dorms, creating Freshman Orientation Focus groups to study the weekends, researching a new student center and parental and meeting with Campus Ministry, and researching the gay and lesbian community on campus.

"We set seven goals at the beginning of the year and we've met five of them," said Becker. "Now we're deciding what to work on next." Committee on Residence Life

In August, the committee set five main goals to examine dining hall issues, provide more 24-hour space, deal with maintenance and security issues, and improve LaFortune Student Center.

Two of these projects have been completed and the other three have been researched and are on the way to completion, said Saimt Hall senator and co-chair Ryan Becker.

The committee co-sponsored a resolution to ensure 24-hour space for all students and passed resolutions to have discounted meal packages. "The 24-hour space resolution was far, for the most ground-breaking thing senate has done all year," said committee co-chair Kevin Berchum, Serin senator.

Berchum said the committee met with food services to work on LaFortune improvements. "We recommended that there be better lighting in the basement," Berchum said. "We also suggested putting a snack bar down there."

Finally, the committee met with maintenance to inquire about putting clocks in O' Shaughnessy Hall, but were informed clocks were stolen frequently in the past, and it is not practical to replace them.

Becker said the committee will turn its efforts towards dorm improvement and maintenance issues for the second half of the term. The committee also hopes to lower the meal plan rate for students staying over fall and spring break.

Committee on Oversight

Because the Committee on Oversight's main duty is to ensure all student organizations adhere to their Constitutional statutes, the only objective the committee set in August was to make constitutional changes. The committee accomplished this goal by passing several "housekeeping" amendments.

"The constitution is not a perfect document and it is our job to make it as possible and the best document for all students to use," said co-chair, Audra Higgins, Pasquerilla West senator.

The committee recently completed a study of election reform. After several violations occurred in last year's student body elections, the committee looked to revamp the entire process.

"Election reform is a big deal and has been our prominent issue," said committee co-chair Jessie Flores, Carroll senator. "We definitely want to avoid what happened last year."

Committee on Diversity

In August, the committee on Diversity said its main goals were to investigate the International Student Orientation, to distribute a survey to determine how upperclassmen feel about current diversity on campus, and research why a student who had background is questioned on Teacher Course Evaluations (TCE's).

In August, the committee brought forth one of these goals has been accomplished, and the other two are still in the works.

"Our main goal this year was planning the Celebrating Diversity week," said Gärik McCord, co-chair and Pasquerilla East senator. "Now that we've done research internally, second semester we can go on to the entire school. We have to have yourself in the right mindset before you can go out and change other people's attitudes."

McCORD and fellow chair, Dillon senator, said the committee investigated the International Student Orientation and determined it has been successful.

McCord and Dowdall said they are working on removing the ethnic background question on TCE's. Because only one or two minority students are often in a class, identifying race on the TCE's could only identify who filled out the form, McCord said.

Dowdall said the committee is working with the Office of the President to distribute the survey about diversity, and he has evidence about campus attitudes.

"We got the administrative there are problems and you need things changed, they asked for specific projects to do," Dowdall said.

McCord said the committee now campus a feedback electoral where students could travel to local churches of different faiths. Students would be allowed to know what's available to them. Our goal is to open people's minds to different experiences," McCord said.

In Focus Writer

Tony Becker Saimt senator

Soin senator Kevin Berchum speaks at a recent Student Senate meeting. The senate has seen mixed results this year, but some committees have been effective.

Committee on Academic Affairs

The committee on Academic Affairs sponsored one of the most significant resolutions of the senate this year and last year. The committee said many reasons why students need four study days next fall, instead of the proposed three.

"Our biggest project has been the study days resolution," said McGlinn senator and co-chair Melissa Rausch. "It wasn't part of our original plan because we weren't made aware of it until a few weeks into the year, but it has taken over as the primary objective."

Because the committee focused on this resolution, their projects outlined in August of establishing on-line DARTing, having out-of­class assignments included in the DART book and creating faculty mentoring are not completed.

Rausch said DART is currently in the hands of Office of Information Technology (OIT) and research is being conducted about guidance for upperclassmen.

Rausch said the committee is working on a new project of con­solidating all scholarship into one grant information into one office where students could find information.

"We did a little research and found out that the Academic Council had made suggestions to do this years ago, but no one ever picked up the ball," Rausch said. "I would expect some consideration in the next couple weeks regarding implementing this new office."

Committee on University Affairs

When the committee on University Affairs met last April, the University Affairs Committee elected Phil Dittmar and Chris Clement as co-chairs. Around a month later, Clement resigned because he was accepted into the London College, and then in September,

Report Card

Gender issues:

A A A-

Residence Life:

A A A-

B+

Oversight:

Diversity:

Academic Affairs:

University Affairs:

Ethics:

Total Grade:

A A B+

In August, the senate seemed too ambitious, but has filled several promises, some committees have been very active, but others have done little, hurting the body's productivity. Overall, the Senate handled large issues and did things that will benefit the student body.

Dittmar resigned for personal reasons.

"We were definitely set back at the beginning," said current co-chair Bethany Barka by Welsh Family hall senator. But we are still trying to put forth efforts." In August, the committee state its main goals were to investigate the surplus of the Generations Campaign, establish centralized tutoring, determine the quality of long-distance telephone service and investigate Health Services.

Besides, researching Broadview, the committee focused on resolutions from last year rather than those new projects.

The committee worked with Sophomores Class Council to create a sophomore signature event, keep contact with Rec Sports to ensure revamping of The Focaine Memorial and worked with student government to promote funds for Transfer Orientation.

Last year, the committee combined with the committee on Academic Affairs to form and Honor Code committee that has been meeting with faculty members and researched other school's honor codes.

"Students should know what to expect when they go into an Honor Code Hearing," said Bogan. "We want to compile a list of rules and have a signature of students about all the policies. Overall, we want consistency."

Committee on Ethics

Although the Committee on Ethics main purpose is to ensure Student Union members act ethically in accordance with the constitution, they said in August they hoped to reform the election process. But the Oversight Committee took initiative and investigated election reform and brought forth an amended constitution Wednesday in senate.

Last year, the committee researched old test files and how they could give students unfair advantages, but this year the committee has not followed up on this issue, nor has it brought any new business to senate.
Inside

continued from page 1

sponsoring a Christian rock concert in the spring, but the scale and cost of the even have proven too much for the group to handle. University funds are often not great enough for government to afford bigger venues to visit campus, said Jay Smith, student government chief of staff. The group has since reformed its concert planning and downsized the program to ensure its production.

Student government plays a game of political hokey-pokey, with one hand in students’ needs and the other in administrative concerns. When students want something, it’s often government who goes straight to the top to “shake it all about.”

The group has always had an advisor, according to Edgington, who has overseen the group since early July. The director of Student Activities has usually been that advisor. Edgington tries to meet with O’Donoghue and Norton in person at least once a month, but keeps in casual contact with them on a regular basis through e-mails and phone calls. She also sees Norton every week when she oversees Senate meetings. Whether it’s getting a thumbs-up on a new diversity panel or an OK on Gravitron in front of Rolfs, the group heads to Edgington and fellow administration for advice.

"I work with government hopefully helping get things passed," said Bill Kirk, vice president of Student Affairs. Kirk, whose most visible student government role is as member of the Campus Life Council, acts as a sort of guide in getting things done.

On occasion Kirk serves as head of a smaller scale Congress, aiding government with “constituent interests” and meeting with student senators to facilitate student needs. Like Edgington, Kirk pushes the group in the right direction when it comes to planning projects and proposing new government initiatives. When there are cotton candy Founder’s Day issues, Kirk sends government to Food Services for help. Programs like the new Rector’s Endowment Fund go through many steps of administrative approval, O’Donoghue said, including those by the Office of Student Affairs.

According to Smith, Father Mark Poorman, vice president for Student Affairs, has been a big advocate for more 24-hour space on campus. Student government has engaged in talks with him to extend DeTartulo Hall hours until 4 a.m. during final week, with hopes of a future 24-hour extension.

With all this contact with administration, it makes one wonder when government has the time to talk with students. It seems their greatest input comes from familiar sources: friends.

Smith says that he likes to “pick brains” on topics like du Lac revisions and a possible weekly student e-mail of campus events. Student government members come from different backgrounds, he added, noting that this helps when getting a greater consensus of student input.

What about the students who don’t know O’Donoghue or even their hall senator? How much do they care about government? This is something Smith says the group is working to improve.

According to Smith, about 500 — 1,000 people attended the Founder’s Day event throughout the course of the day.

The event was a failure because of overestimated attendance, Smith said, but “everyone who went thought it was a great thing.” Student government, however, has not yet gathered responses from students.

There was a follow-up meeting regarding the event with administration and groups involved in the planning. There was no meeting, though, to learn student reaction. Smith says the government is also looking to form student focus groups beginning in January. Norton and O’Donoghue also have met with the Office of Student Affairs and students will now for the first time be allowed in the Board of Trustees winter meeting in Washington.

Student Senate serves as the most visible mediator between student concerns and the main branch of government. According to Smith, there is not a great deal of interaction between the Senate and the Office of the President. While there is a weekly report from the office at every meeting, Smith says that the branches run independent of each other.

“It seems that Senate has had its own agenda,” he said, and the same is true for the Office of the President. Because of this, he added, there can be a great deal of overlap between the two groups. Some topics do reach both avenues, including the University alcohol policy, an issue the government hopes the Board of Trustees will address at their winter meeting. The Senate offered help and support after the Board of Trustees decided to form a committee on students’ concerns in the spring semester.

Edgington, though, disagrees. There is “a bit of communication between the two bodies,” she said. If there are disagreements between the Senate and the Office of the President, they aren’t aired at Senate meetings, Edgington added. Other closed student government doors.

Opinion

continued from page 6

here," said Rothrauff.

However, Rothrauff said student government was making an effort to branch out to many students and provide events.

“I think they’re making a better effort to do more and to find out what students think about things but I still think it’s difficult with all the red tape in the University,” said Rothrauff. "There could always be more but I think they make a really good effort.

She added that one advantage to being involved with student government was that she knew what was going on, but at the same time, she said that perpetuated an “inside group.”

"There definitely is the select group...especially when you go beyond freshman year, you’re kind of in it until you graduate," said Rothrauff, who decided to leave student government after her first year.

Sophomore Christine Bryant never had an interest in getting involved in student government, but said student government makes a good effort to appeal to students who do want to become involved.

"I think student government does a good job since there are so many students that you never can please all of them," said Bryant.

Bryant has joined clubs that target a more specific interest group such as the Society of Women Engineers, Asian American Association and the Texas Club.

Bryant also volunteers.

"Because of these other time commitments, Bryan, like Romero and Rothrauff, cannot fit the events into her schedule.

Another reason I don’t attend student government events is sometimes they are just at bad times," said Bryant.

However, Bryant also said student government could work on making it more known to the students what it actually does.

"I can’t think of many student government events ever though I know there are a lot...they need to distinguish themselves more.

Bryant did attend an event that involved movies and dinner and said that was a more effective way to catch her interest.

"I don’t enjoy or don’t care for some of what they do, so I don’t show up. I liked the food and movies, so I showed up for that...and I was free that night," said Bryant.

On the Notre Dame campus there are a variety of student organizations to join, including student government. Students like Romero and Bryant by choice or lack of information about student government decided to commit their time to other organizations.

However, for these three, at least, time constraints form the main roadblock to student government involvement.