Bush sworn in, calls for compassion, civility in government

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

George W. Bush offered his "solemn pledge" on Saturday to govern compassionately and "work to build a single nation of justice and opportunity," addressing the nation after one of the closest elections in American history.

In his inaugural speech, Bush outlined his priorities, promoting what had been major campaign themes: educational reform, overhauling Social Security and Medicare, a stronger defense and a tax cut "to recover the momentum of our economy."

Bush's remarks lasted 15 minutes in a light drizzle, interrupted 14 times by applause, usually brief but accompanied by cheers when he spoke of taxes and defense.

There was just one minor slip of the tongue: after a campaign in which he occasionally was derided for tortured syntax and double-talk lines.

"I always wanted the Rock to be better because it's so convenient and now they have good machines, " Kristin Wunder, also a junior, agreed.

"I think it's really nice," she said. "Especially in the winter, because now we don't have to go all the way to Rolfs just to use nice stuff."

That nice stuff was paid for with some of the University's general funds.

"I always wanted the Rock to be better," said Caroline Craft, a junior and resident of Pangborn Hall. Craft, who used to work out at Rolfs, now goes to the Rock consistently "because it's so convenient and now they have good machines.

New weights at Rockne bring old gym into new century

It is a long, cold walk to the Rockne Sports Center from the dorms on South Quad. Until recently, students living in these dorms had few options when it came to exercising: face the weather and the lines for machines, or go to the state-of-the-art equipment, or go to the Rockne Memorial and use ancient machinery.

Inconvenience and out-of-date machinery are no longer valid excuses. The Rockne Memorial now has the latest weight lifting equipment in the upstairs weight room and the downstairs exercise room.

"I always wanted the Rock to be better because it's so convenient and now they have good machines," Caroline Craft said.

Senior words of wisdom

Many say that I should be sad and scared. A college student who will soon graduate. How could I be sad? I’m not going to work in Chicago. The only thing I know is that I plan to have a family, a nice house and a job, let alone an idea of what I want to do in life? With my life?

When we look ahead, we often look at the best years of our lives. Both told me that they did not want to end. They wanted this to last forever. You see this is our last semester as undergraduates. After May we go our separate ways and begin our lives. One is going to Med school, Congratulations! I’m surprised and angry. Another is going to work in Chicago. I’m the big loser of the group. I don’t have a job, let alone an idea of what I want to do in the future. But even then, I’m ready to go on.

Someone told me some time ago that these are the best years of my life. How do they know? I plan to have a family, a nice house and a job. Why keep living if these are the best years? When the going gets rougher after is downhill? When we look ahead, we often look at the next best thing. We say: ‘I’ll agree with you then. I’m not that worried about where I’m going to be.’ I’m more worried about my health and where I’ll be in five years. Will I be happy with my job?

I know that leaving this place will be hard, it’s hard enough during breaks. This place really grows on you. After three and half years of living here one ends up calling it home. My sisters give me a hard time when I do call it home.

When I do go home, home home, I’ll call some of my friends and hang out with them. When I’m home, it feels that time stood still for us. Not so much stood still as froze entirely. It’s like we never left and that graduation was a couple of days ago. I’m sure that this has happened to you.

So to all of you that are still reading and I commend you for that know that after you leave, your friends will always be there. Five years can pass before you run into a friend. Time rules our lives, there is no way of getting that back. Many have told me that they would never see some of my friends and hang out with them. Time rules our lives, there is no way of getting that back. Many have told me that they would never see...

U. Houston faces sexual harassment lawsuits

HOUSTON

A federal judge has ordered the parties involved in a University of Houston-related sexual harassment lawsuit to attempt to reach a settlement through arbitration.

Susan Septimus, a former attorney in the Office of the General Counsel at UH, filed a federal lawsuit in September claiming she was denied a promotion based on her gender and was "constructively discharged" in retaliation for complaining about the discrimination.

Septimus is one of three women who made official complaints that General Counsel Dennis Duffy created a "hostile and abusive" work environment for female employees in the office. A study conducted in early 1998 by attorney Deborah McEwaney concluded that "women in the OGC had been subjected to discrimination, hostile environment," and that Septimus was indeed denied the promotion based on her gender.

Despite that report and multiple findings from the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, the only official action taken against Duffy was a suggestion that he undergo sensitivity training.

In a ruling on the September lawsuit, federal District Judge Vanessa Gilmore ordered that Septimus and the University participate in "non-binding mediation... where the parties will attempt to resolve their differences."

Gilmore appointed San Antonio attorney Phil Pfeiffer of the firm Fulbright & Jaworski to be the mediator. The mediation is to be conducted within 90 days of the ruling, and the results will be reported within 10 days of its conclusion.

Nursing group witnesses quake

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va.
The earthquake that rocked El Salvador on Saturday created aftershocks felt as far as Charlottesville.

Eleven members of the University of Virginia community finally arrived home safely on Tuesday, after being trapped in the South American nation while awaiting a flight to the United States. The group, which included seven nursing students, a medical student, an undergraduate history student, a sociology graduate student and a faculty member, was in El Salvador representing the University in Nursing Students Without Borders, a program dedicated to improving health care in impoverished nations.

The group arrived at the airport near San Salvador, El Salvador’s capital, on Jan. 3 and to their base of operations in San Sebastian, a small village two hours drive from the capital. While in San Sebastian, the group educated local teachers on issues including reproductive health and personal hygiene, according to fourth-year nursing student Esther Miller.

University of Michigan

Trial continues, diversity stressed

DETROIT

In what he later called a "rare" appearance on the witness stand, University of Michigan President Lee Bollinger stressed the educational value of diversity for the student body as he testified Thursday to defend the use of race in admissions in the University’s Law School. He said that "law is so interwoven in life" that the law school classroom needs to reflect as many diverse experiences as possible.

This, he said, is crucial to the breadth and depth of a law student’s education. Bollinger, who served as dean of the University’s Law School from 1987 to 1994, was the University’s first witness in its defense against the Center for Individual Rights’ attack on the University's race-sensitive admissions policy. The Washington, D.C.-based law firm filed the case against the University on behalf of Barbara Grutter, a white applicant who was rejected from the Law School in 1997. Bollinger said while he was dean he charged a committee to develop a policy which would bring together a class of students that represented a variety of perspectives.

WNDU wins Gabriel award for community involvement

By KRISTEN FITZPATRICK
News Writer

The National Association of Catholic Communicators recently awarded local TV station WNDU-TV, the NBC affiliate for the Michiana area, the prestigious Gabriel Award, and honored the station as "Television Station of the Year." The Gabriel Award recognizes one television or radio station in the United States or Canada for its outstanding achievement in both total programming and its commitment to community service. The judges for the award review a broadcaster's work in serving the community over a 12-month period.

"It actually took the participation of every single member of our staff to make it [the Gabriel Award] happen," Lou Pierce, director of audience development and programming, WNDU-TV said. "That's saying a lot about this remarkable company. We are all very proud."

WNDU-TV was recognized for three community efforts. The first is "Toys for Tots" drive the station holds every year. The drive helps to gather toys for Michiana's less fortunate youngsters and the drive is broadcast live from the station's parking lot.

"Toys for Tots" was a big attraction. It is so peaceful here. Baxter said. "The campus itself was a big attraction. It is so peaceful here."

Baxter looks forward to his involvement with Saint Mary's. "This is an exciting time to come to Saint Mary's," he said. "The College is growing and changing, and everyone here is enthusiastic about the momentum."

Baxter served as executive director at Colorado's Creede Repertory Theatre from 1983 to 2000. During this time he produced more than 100 plays and directed more than 50 plays. Baxter is a graduate of the University of Utah and the leadership development program at the Center for Creative Leadership in Colorado Springs.

Jim Behling, president and general manager of WNDU-TV received the award on behalf of the station in a ceremony on Sept. 30, 2000 in Orlando, Fla. Individual awards were also presented to CBS's "Touched by an Angel," ABC's "20/20" and "Dateline NBC." The runner-up for "Television Station of the Year" was WCVB-TV, an ABC affiliate in Boston, Mass.

WNDU wins Gabriel award for community involvement

The awards committee looks for the ability to uplift and nourish the human spirit, the single most important criterion of a Gabriel. The judges seek those programs that affirm human dignity and impress the importance of the community. Lou Pierce, director of audience development and programming for WNDU-TV, cited the commitment to the community of all the members of the station as the reason the station stood out among all the rest.

"It actually took the participation of every single member of our staff to make it [the Gabriel Award] happen." Lou Pierce said.

The year-long project took on the task of remodeling a house in a dilapidated inner city South Bend neighborhood. The project recognized the importance of neighborhoods in a community and pooled together the resources of the staff and management of the station, as well as The Near Northwest Neighborhood Association, South Bend Heritage Foundation, the City of South Bend and many other companies, organizations and volunteers.

Finally, the station helped to raise over a quarter of a million dollars for South Bend's Life Treatment Centers through an event entitled "Toasting Fr. Ted," which honored Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president emeritus. Kinshasa honors slain president

KINSHASA

Congo's crumbling capital on Sunday received the body of its slain president, Laurent Kabila, four years after he led a rebel army to oust the late dictator Mobutu Sese Seko.

Newly installed leader Joseph Kabila, surrounded by soldiers from Congo and military ally Angola, wept as his father's casket was taken off the presidential plane and marched across the tarmac to a waiting open-top trailer. Joseph, who forsook his normal military uniform in favor of dark civilian clothes, walked behind the casket as it was carried past two rows of sobbing officials. Six military brass strained to heave the casket onto a trailer as another officer led the procession with a large portrait of the slain president.

The casket arrived in Kinshasa around midday after being flown from Kabila's southeastern home city of Lubumbashi, 1,000 miles southeast of the capital. The plane made a special low sweep over Kinshasa before landing.

Thousands of supporters grieved in the streets for their fallen leader, crying and waving palm fronds as a motorcade bearing Kabila's casket wound through the city. "We are living in misery now. It is like we are crying away our lives," said Nzimba Nsimba Lion, a civilian.

Kabila's unpopularity was broadcast live on state television. "All of Kinshasa is crying for Laurent Desire Kabila," an announcer said.

After taking power in a rebel march across this sweeping Central African nation in May 1997, Kabila was initially hailed by Kinshasa residents as a hero. But those feelings were soon replaced by resentment as his corrupt government on Saturday blamed the opposition for orchestrating four bomb attacks that left two seriously injured just weeks ahead of Jean Bertrand Aristide's inauguration. The attacks occurred Friday — two in downtown Port-au-Prince, the capital, and two in suburban Petionville. "After the bombing yesterday in Port-au-Prince we obtained very clear evidence of the participation of the opposition."

Five indicted on assassination charges

Two Ukrainians and three Bulgarians have been charged with killing Bulgaria's former Prime Minister Andrei Lukavan, who served as government head for the Socialist Party of former communists from 1989 to 1990, was shot dead in front of his Sofia home Oct. 2, 1996.

Judicial authorities released few details about their investigation, but stories published in Bulgarian newspapers in recent years suggested that Lukavan, once a member of the Moscow-trained Bulgarian communist elite, was the victim of business rivals. Ukrainians Alexander Rusov and Alexey Kichatov, Bulgarian businessman Angel Vasilev, his nephew Georgi Georgiev and Yuri Lenev, an employee of Vasilev's firm, have been charged for complicity in the killing, the agency quoted Rusov's lawyer Marin Markovski as saying.

Rusov and Kichatov are under arrest, and the Bulgarians are out on bail, the report said. The lawyer, Markovski, declined to offer information about the specific charges against each of the defendants.

Local media have speculated that Vasilev, a construction entrepreneur who apparently was at odds with Lukavan, hired Rusov and Kichatov to kill him. Ukrainian extradited Rusov and Kichatov on Bulgaria's request last year. Rusov's lawyer denied his client's involvement.

Speech

President Clinton "for service to our nation" and former rival Al Gore "for a contest conducted with spirit and ended with grace." As with most inauspicious addresses, Bush's speech was thematic and short on specifics. But he did issue what amounted to a summary of what were long-term campaign promises, beginning with educational reform. "Together, we will reclaim America's schools, before ignorance and apathy claim more young lives," Bush asserted. Bush planned to make his educational package the first legislation he sends to Congress. He would require more student testing, punish and reward states depending on pupil performance, expand public charter schools, spend $5 billion to boost literacy over five years and $8 billion over 10 years for more college scholarships and grants.

"We will reform Social Security and Medicare, sparing our children from struggles we have the power to prevent," Bush said. In 2001, Bush proposed allowing younger workers to put a portion of their Social Security taxes into the stock market in search of higher returns and allowing private companies to compete to provide prescription drug and other medical benefits under Medicare. And he put in a plug for his 10-year, $1.6 trillion tax-cut plan. "We will reduce taxes, to recover the momentum of our economy and reward the effort and enterprise of working Americans," Bush said. He pledged "to build our defenses beyond challenge" with a strong military and to "confront weapons of mass destruction, so that a new century is spared new horrors." The United States is engaged in the world "by history and by choice," Bush said, promising to continue to keep the nation involved in international affairs and world commerce and not to permit a retreat within its borders.

And he issued a warning that would-be adversaries: "With a single oath, we affirm old traditions and make new beginnings." The Observer

When Bush submits his budget next month, Miller's press secretary, Joan Kirchner, said Miller had campaigned on being "a tax-cutting senator like he was a tax-cutting governor. This was a great opportunity to do both." Other Democrats, meanwhile, repeated their contention that the plan is overly ambitious and that Congress' first duty is to prepare a budget that ensures fiscal discipline and reduction of the national debt.

"The one that President Bush is proposing is much too large and may spend money that we really don't have," Sen. Joe Lieberman, D-Conn., said on ABC's "This Week." White House Chief of Staff Andrew Card, on CNN's "Late Edition," said Bush would work with McCain for campaign finance legislation that is "fair across the board," and contains "paycheck protection" that gives union members the right to withhold dues going to political donations.

But Bush's priorities are education, tax cuts and military readiness, he said. Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota said on ABC that paycheck protection, strongly opposed by organized labor, was "stranger and incredibly impractical" and would face a fight. McCain, on NBC's "Meet the Press," said he was starting a grass-roots campaign in states of legislators who oppose his legislation, and he insisted that his bill must get a vote by the end of March. "I believe we can work together on this, but we know that delay is death." The Senate on Saturday quickly confirmed seven members of Bush's Cabinet, but hopes of pushing through legislative initiatives quickly could be stymied by a floor battle over the nomination of former Sen. John Ashcroft, R-Mo., to be attorney general. Daschle said Sunday he did not support a filibuster over the Ashcroft nomination, but Democrats will want floor time to explain why they think Ashcroft is too conservative for the job.

Ashcroft is expected to be confirmed eventually, with all 50 Republicans and some Democrats in support.

Bush also plans to move quickly in lay out his education package, including more school testing, holding schools more accountable for performance, boosting literacy and, most controversially, expanding school voucher programs. Card said vouchers "won't be the top priority" of the administration but will be a tool used to help children trapped in failing schools.

Pope selects 37 for College of Cardinals

Associated Press

The day's appointments mean that when the Vatican bands out the traditional red cardinal caps on Feb. 21, the number of voting members of the College of Cardinals should stand at 128.

However, birthdays and overall age mean the number of College of Cardinal members is constantly in flux.

Three of Sunday's appointees are from the United States: Monsignor Theodore E. McCarrick, archbishop of Washington, D.C., Monsignor Edward Egan, eight months into the job as New York's archbishop, and a strong opponent of birth control and abortion, and the Rev. Avery Dulles, a theology professor at New York's Fordham University.

Dulles, a staunch supporter of John Paul's conservative teachings on morality, is the son of John Foster Dulles, U.S. secretary of state during the Cold War, and nephew of Allen Welsh Dulles, CIA director during the 1950s.

Other prominent appointees include a Vietnamese, Monsignor Francois Xavier Nguyen Van Thuan, a career Vatican churchman; Communists sent him to jail and then internment camps after taking over his country in 1975.

Heavily Catholic Latin America supplied many of the new cardinals, including Sao Paulo Archbishop Claudio Hummes of Brazil, head of one of the world's largest dioceses; Buenos Aires Archbishop Jorge Mario Bergoglio of Argentina; Lima Archbishop Juan Luis Cipriani Thorne of Peru, and Francisco Javier Errazuriz Ossa, archbishop of Santiago, Chile.

The Peru archbishop is a member of Opus Dei, a secretive, conservative order favored by the pope.

One appointment,Stephanos Il Ghattas, is patriarch of Alexandria and leader of Egypt's 200,000 Catholic Copts.

There are many reasons why students should question the presence of the large ROTC program on our campus. ROTC explicitly discriminates against gays and lesbians. It trains students to violate Catholic Just War Theory. Its values conflict with those of academia. But instead I will focus on the military’s purpose and practices.

It should be clear that the role of the United States military is not, despite its name, defense. A military that is only one fourth as strong as that of America earns 100 times more, lives 26 years longer, has one fifth the chance of dying as an infant, uses 140 times more electricity and 20 times more oil than someone living in a developed country. This income gap has doubled in the past 40 years.

How do Americans manage to consume so much of the world’s resources? I propose that the function of the U.S. military is to ensure American dominance of the globe, thus guaranteeing that this disparity continues.

Economic inequality is the inevitable product of capitalism. This benefits the several percent of people who are rich, while hurting the overwhelming majority — the exploited poor. Fortunately for Americans, thanks to a powerful military, we are that several percent.

U.S. foreign policy and the military are inextricably intertwined. American diplomacy, military and economic aid as well as U.S. covert operations are all at least in part attempts to influence a situation, without resorting to direct military force. Much of their power comes from the fact that they are backed up by the world’s strongest military. Thus when questioning ROTC’s presence, one should examine not just military interventions (like Kosovo) but also the goals and actual practices of U.S. foreign policy.

The role of U.S. foreign policy is to extend capitalism to cover the entire globe so that states are dependent upon the industrialized nations, especially the U.S. The beauty of this system is that it provides the U.S. with cheap resources and markets for our manufactured goods and high-tech services. Poor nations are locked into producing primary goods (like agricultural products or minerals) that do not require processing or dead-end assembly work — while rich nations monopolize all of the highly profitable growth industries. Not surprisingly, states often try to refuse to be permanently dependent in this economic system. This is where the U.S. military comes in handy. The U.S. will use all of its might to stop any country from trying any alternative approach to economic development other than unadulterated capitalism. For any state that were to succeed, it would cause others to imitate it. Almost every U.S. intervention can be traced to this cause.

In 1954, Guatemalan’s democratically elected president Arbenz started a modern program of land reform. However as this program threatened to take uncultivated land from the United Fruit Company, the CIA organized a coup and set the scenes for 40 years of civil war, military dictatorship, death squads, torture and disappearances affecting 200,000 people.

Juan Bosch’s presidency did not last long in the Dominican Republic. Elected in 1963, he dared to propose land reform and nationalization. So he was overthrown in a military coup. Two years later, when civil war had broken out and Bosch’s supporters were threatening to win, the Marines intervened and Bosch was not to return.

In 1978, leftist Sandinistas overthrow U.S. supported Nicaraguan dictator Somoza. Within a couple years, the United States was funding the Contra guerrillas, wrecking havoc on Nicaragua’s attempts to develop along alternative socialist economic lines. The U.S. solved the Sandinistas’ “problems” in 1990, when the U.S. funded opposition party won the elections and Nicaragua returned to the capitalist path.

More recently in 1995 the U.S. restored Aristide, the democratically elected president of Haiti, to power under the condition that he rescinde his previous opposition to unregulated free market policies. In the Cold War, it is no longer publicly acceptable for the United States to support anti-communist military dictatorships. Instead we urge states to move toward “democracy.” However if you look closer at these countries, it is more critical that they follow unbalanced capitalism (the dictates of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank) — than democratic.

Israel is an excellent example. A so-called democracy, receiving billions of U.S. military and economic aid, the country’s policies of disempowering Palestinians are closer to South African apartheid.

Colombia, now the third largest recipient of U.S. military aid, is another good one. It holds regular elections, but the last time leftists formed a political party the government-subjected death squads made short work of them. Colombia has the most human rights violations of any Latin American country and the victims are primarily peasants whose crime is that they are poor.

If you believe in economic justice, human rights and real democracy then you should oppose the existence of our military and ROTC. As a first step, let us follow The Observer’s Sept. 15 editorial suggesting that “all ROTC students should be required to take a class in just war theory.”

Exceptional Celebration. Dropping the football three yards short of the goal line is a major in-game penalty. The BCS state, the BCS and all the Bowl games demonstrated an ever-increasing dichotomy in college football. That is, there are student-athletes and there are college football players. The difference in these players proved painfully evident in the Fiesta Bowl on New Year's Eve. Dennis Ericson, with his speed there are college football players. The difference in these players dichotomy in college football. That is, there are student-athletes and the BCS and all the Bowl games demonstrated an ever-increasing racial and ethnic allowance for “learning” impede the road to a promising NFL career. College basketball players have other opportunities, but college football players don’t have to kill time, waiting for their bodies to develop into NBA stardom. This thing has gotten way out of hand. This year, the National Championship (another game between teams whose zealousness has made them no stranger to the 50 yard extra point was an unqualified success. Snoop’s “Me, My Mom, and My Otto” was deprived participation in the Orange Bowl due to multiple academic failures. Dumfounded, the receiver swears to have attended eighth grade classes in it. The writer is at a loss for words that any student in these three years. How far out of whack have FSU’s priorities fallen?

I both attend and teach high school in south Florida, a hot bed football tradition. College ball takes up what is already a chronic and personal make up of Deion and Snoop (a name not to be found on the roster of a single collegiate honor roll) are the rule and not the exception. Many of the high school athletes in this area with Division thyroid and academic probation lists of junior colleges for football is an effective way to build a college football team. At Miami and now with Oregon State, Ericson was mentored by Dennis Irons. Many of these players have no more concern for their education than they do for the depleting ozone layer. If this sounds like a long-winded cry of “It’s not fair,” then it is.

It is not fair. To the fans. Not to the student-athletes. Not to the universities. Not to the players. Why should they have to go to class? Why should they have to travel to practice? The answer is that if they are allowed to take such a cheap shot at a group of student athletes that volunteer to work some of their time with these great children. Why are you complaining about a good thing? Should student athletes be released from commitments of duties to a sport?

In my many experiences, I have believed that sports can bring a smile to a child’s face, and it would be a shame to keep these things from the public. The Christmas party has been one of the most successful and enriching experiences I have been involved with in the last three years, and I have been involved here at Notre Dame. You asked, "what was the Pry coordinator thinking" when he planned this event?

Well, for your information, the party was coordinat ed not by the Pry people at Notre Dame but by the Life Skills directors at the University. LifeSkills is a program that helps to organize opportunities for student athletes to volunteer all over the South Bend area. Volunteering isn’t about Pry, Mr. Crouch — never has been, never will be. It is about giving yourself to help others.

That night at the Christmas party, I was inspired by the strength and determination of these kids who are bating a disease that a child cannot even begin to understand. I was moved by the child who sat next to me to decorate Santa Claus pictures and could not stop talking about what he wanted. I was moved by the child who sang "Silent Night" without a hitch and said "I want to grow up. He looked like he had been through chemotherapy. His smile, ear to ear, made me just smile back and laugh with him until our Santas were done. You said in your letter, "It is humane to show these children what they can’t achieve?" Are you kidding me? Who are you to tell these kids what they can’t do?

These kids are fighters and I will not let you tell them that they will not achieve that. I hope that our presence made their day. I hope that our presence made one for only one night, because that experience will live with all of us forever. We know all the Luck of the Irish and we know that Notre Dame, not only athletes, contribute their time and their hearts to many causes already. Much even do this in their spare time. You need a new year’s party to help and visit with sick children. You don’t need a golden key to go to the cancer ward at a children’s hospital or participate in community service events. You can do the same and would obviously have much more to contribute from your overall experience. I am thankful for my great health everyday and do not know if I ever would have been granted. But I don’t even tell someone else that his or her heart isn’t big enough or true enough to help.

I took your article personally, as did many of my teammates and I resent your opinion that I am not a good role model and that instead of volunteering for things like the Christmas party, I should give way for others who are better than I am.

Student and athletes have a phenomenal dedication to service

I am outraged at the letter in Friday’s Observer, criticizing the student-athlete volunteer for the helping host a Christmas party for kids with cancer. Shame on this writer. I have been involved in many make-a-wish events at Notre Dame. Young cancer victims, in particular, enjoy visiting Notre Dame, the football stadium and the Joyce Center and meeting with Notre Dame student athletes. Hans and Jennifer Crottendorf, Eric Guerra and I, the kind and caring Notre Dame student athletes who give so freely of their time through Notre Dame’s Life Skills Program. I have spoken to nursing home residents, hospital staff members and parents, whose lives have been touched because these student athletes have visited.

I was friends with a 95-year old man, who until his dying day, raved about that day when the Notre Dame Cheer Squad visited his assisted living residence. I don’t recall him ever complaining that he couldn’t achieve the feats of Mike Brown and John Taggart, the greatest Leprechaun and cheerleader in Notre Dame history.

The mean-spirited person who blasted our student-athletes is also completely wrong about the victims. If this letter writer were not so ignorant he would know that instead of volunteering for things like the Christmas party, I should give way for others who are better than I am.

Celebrating

This week, the University honors Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. with several events. The Notre Dame community will celebrate the life and mission of one of our nation's finest leaders. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Although students spent the official holiday registering for classes and moving their things back into the dorms, the University will sponsor several events and workshops to celebrate the diversity, race relations and importance of community.

The Celebration Committee has come together with a mission. The Dr. Martin Luther King Celebration Committee has worked diligently to carry on this mission—this year’s focus is so rich and diverse. The committee was not alone in planning these events. Led by student leaders and administrators, the committee has broken ranks with an exciting new program of events. Led by student leaders for the first time, the committee has come together with new perspectives and new diversity to facilitate the planning of this year’s celebration. The committee pooled the talents and energies of its new and past members to inspire new conversations and bright futures.

Community outreach is a cornerstone movement behind this year’s theme, “It Takes a Village to Plant the Future.” In the spirit of recent university initiatives that have strengthened the bond between Notre Dame and the surrounding community, this year’s Celebration Committee has reached out to thousands of people in the planning and facilitation of these events.

With valuable support, the committee achieved new goals and exceeded expectations in planning this year’s celebration, thereby further enhancing the idea of community effort and teamwork.

Dr. Martin Luther King's important messages and meaningful insights have been a tradition at Notre Dame for many years. This year’s events will be especially powerful, and the committee welcomes all and everyone to take part in the celebration of community and human dignity.

discuss the need for everyone to become aware and respectful of the differences that bring unique individuals to our schools.

"The Church has an opportunity and duty to lift up its voice like a trumpet and declare unto the people the immortality of segregation. It must affirm that every human life is a reflection of divinity, and that every act of injustice mars and defaces the image of God in man."

Thursday evening, the Stanford-Keenan chapel will host a prayer service, entitled "Mustard Seed Faith." The service, closing the Dr. King commemoration, will be a gathering to celebrate our role as individuals living as a community of faith. University president Fr. Malloy will offer his reflection on our faith and social commitment as a university, and Rene Mulgian, a senior from Pasquerilla West, will share her ideas of Christian witness through community service.

"The prayer service reminds us that God is certainly a part of all of this. This observance is truly an illustration of all that Notre Dame represents: God, family and education," says Kate Walsh, a Student Government representative to the Dr. King celebration.

"I have a dream today."

This week's Martin Luther King, Jr. celebration is an invitation to every student to honor the greatest civil rights leader our nation's history. King not only crossed racial barriers, he broke them down. Now, it is our turn. We, as students, have the opportunity to break down our own barriers by helping the community and recognizing the importance of basic human dignity in those around us. It may takes a village to plant the future, but it is an individual's responsibility to become a part of that village.

I really hope that everyone attends these events," says Walsh. "Sometimes, people see posters, and think that this is just another Notre Dame event. However, this is a time to take action. Everyone talks about problems with diversity [on campus] and we are offering an opportunity to really talk about it. The time is now- it's here."

Notre Dame loses, ties Ohio State in weekend series

By MATT ORENCHUK
SPORTS WRITER

The hockey team proved it was going to fight its way out of the CCHA cellar on Saturday night when it sent its game with a 2-1 tie against Ohio State.

The Irish had their backs up against the wall after dropping the Friday game. They responded on Saturday, battling for a late goal that went on a power play with goals put on the board by the Buckeyes and an eventual 2-2 final.

"Riding the Rink" night at the Joyce Center. The pre-game ceremonies included introductions of all the parents of the Notre Dame team members.

Once the game started, it was a defensive battle, and the teams went into the first period tied 0-0.

In the second period, back-to-back Notre Dame penalties eight minutes into the period gave Ohio State a five-on-three opportunity, and the Buckeyes put the first goal of the game. Ohio State captain Jean-Francois Duplour fired a shot from 15 feet out that glanced off Notre Dame goalie Kyle Kolyti's stick and into the back of the net.

The teams went into the second intermission with Ohio State nursing a one-goal lead. In the third period, the Buckeyes were able to tie the game.

"Whoever scored that second goal (for Ohio State) must have made a fantastic play," said Kolyti. "I didn't see it at all, just saw the guy coming in on me."

Notre Dame was able to come back thanks to a scuffle after the whistle. With 4:55 left in the game Notre Dame's Dan Carlson and Ohio State's Jaison Freeman were each given a two-minute penalty for fighting after the whistle.

On the ensuing four-on-four situation, a tip occurred in front of this Buckeye goal. The puck bounced out to David Inman, who put it away to tie the game.

"It's been awhile," said Inman about finally scoring a goal. "It wasn't pretty, but I was just glad to be in the right place at the right time."

The game ended in a tie after a back and forth overtime that saw each team take one shot.

"We thought we played well (after Saturday)," Inman said. "We were disappointed; we would like to have a win."

The loss and tie keep the Irish in the CCHA basement, but leave them within striking distance of 10th place Lake Superior State. Notre Dame has 10 points and is still just two points out of the last Michigan CCHA playoff spot.

Coach Poulin feels his team is playing well, staying scrappy and refusing to quit when the puck doesn't bounce its way.

"We don't feel like we have a last place hockey team," Poulin said. "We want to see things bounce our way. I am a firm believer that those bounces all work out in the end."

Things don't get any easier for the Irish as they travel to Ann Arbor on Tuesday for a rare mid-week game against No. 9 Michigan. The Wolverines currently sit in second place in the CCHA, five points behind top-ranked Michigan State.

Belles lose fifth straight; fall to Bulldogs 59-52

By KATIE McVOY
Assistant Sports Editor

It was close, but there were no cigars for the Belles basketball team Saturday at Angela Athletic Facility.

Saint Mary's dropped its fifth straight game as the Belles lost to the Adrian Bulldogs 59-52, dropping their record to 1-5 in the MIAA.

With only 40 seconds left in the game and trailing 52-48, Anne Vincke, in a lower than average total of 39 points. But the Belles offense just couldn't get the job done.

Eight minutes into the first half, Saint Mary's had only scored five points and had not gotten one offensive rebound. The Belles continued to miss the offensive boards for the rest of the half and went into half time down 24-18.

"We were focusing on other things (than rebounds) at that time," Christiansen said.

Adrian's aggressive play kept Saint Mary's on the outside, which contributed to its rebounding woes and the team's inability to get inside shots.

"They were doing a good job inside," freshman guard Katie Miller said. "It was hard for our posts to get shots, so we passed in to them and they had to pass out to us."

In addition to Adrian's inside control, the Bulldogs scored on several Saint Mary's turnovers under the basket.

"We were thinking too much," Smith said. "We weren't focusing on what needed to get done then."

The Bulldogs came back looking to win in the second half. After falling behind by 14, Kelly Roberts, Miller, Julie Norman, Christiansen and Katie Gamache teamed together for 10 points, bringing the Belles within five at 40-35.

That's when the comeback began.

"We took control; we weren't tentative," Smith said. "We knew what we were doing."

"We pushed the ball more and attacked their press," Miller added.

With seven minutes left, the Belles were down by just five. But Adrian stepped up its play, increasing the lead to 10.

With four minutes left, the Belles threatened again on a Miller two-pointer that brought the game within four.

Blair's foul shot brought the game within three with 40 seconds left, but the Belles fell short. Miller and Norman put up 10 and nine points apiece, respectively.

Blair and Roberts led in rebounds, each with four offensive boards and six defensive boards, most of which came in the second half.

For Adrian, Vincke led with 15 points, and Morton led the Bulldogs in rebounds, racking up eight defensive boards and four offensive boards.

HESBURGH AWARD DESIGN COMPETITION ANNOUNCED

Rev. Steve Newton, C.S.C., President and Chief Executive Officer of The Wilson Foundation, has announced that all members of the Notre Dame and St. Mary's College Community are invited to participate in the design of a new award, named in honor of Notre Dame's Emeritus Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C. The award - The Hesburgh Award for International Human Development - will be given annually by the Wilson Foundation to honor lives of commitment to international human development in terms of new economic, social and political structures in the third world.

It is expected that each design submitted will incorporate the logo of the foundation, some depiction of international development and these thoughts of Fr. Hesburgh, from his Book God, Country, Notre Dame:

"One of the greatest heresies is that in our modern world one person cannot make a difference. I do not believe that for one moment. I know it factually inaccurate. One person or group of persons can make an enormous difference in our lives and our way of living. History is replete with heroic people who realized that they could make a difference and did - despite the conventional wisdom of the day."

The Wilson Foundation exists to assure the delivery of quality treatment for addictive illnesses to persons who are denied access to such, especially in areas served by the Congregation of Holy Cross. Current foundation focus is on the countries of East Africa. Locally, Life Treatment Centers is the key partner of the foundation's efforts.

The decision of The Wilson Foundation judges is final. Design samples will be returned if requested.

... personal fouls in the first half and tempers clashed when Mountaineer forward Chris Moss stepped on Irish forward Jerre Macura's face after a West Virginia offensive play. Officials awarded Moss his first of two technical fouls, as Irish players had to restrain an upset Macura.

Moss' second technical foul came midway through the second half when he fouled out and, officials, Mountaineer head coach Galen Calleat and two assistant coaches had to restrain him.

A West Virginia coach had to escort an irate Moss off the court as the junior starter spat at the Notre Dame student section, hinting an Irish cheerleader.

"He was claiming he got shoved and pushed all day," Calleat said. "He has a few personal problems —

"... the second half for reacting angrily after getting fouled will be corrected."

Macura added 15 points. Team mate Lionel Armstead, who has tallied double digits in seven out of eight West Virginia games this year, is in the starting lineup in place of Graves last Tuesday as Graves, and Swanagan's role of Super-Sub, leading Irish scorers with 17 points. Team mate Lionel Armstead added 15. Armstead was pivotal in Metropolitan League. He needed the lessons learned on the streets —

"I thought we showed a lot of poise dealing with all the distractions," Murphy said. "Before the ball was even thrown up, they were trash talking..."

Murphy and the rest of the Irish managed to avoid the manifold foul trouble, resulting in Moss' second technical foul.

But it was West Virginia's Moss that carried the play beyond just physical Big East bruising and into the unacceptable and unheard of.

"I've coached 38 years and that's never happened. It will be corrected," Mountaineer coach Galen Calleat said when informed after the game that Moss had spit on a female cheerleader.

"He was claiming all day that he'd been shoved and pushed, and the officials weren't calling it. He just laid into them," Calleat said.

Calleat had not yet decided on whether Moss would be further punished, but said the junior, who has tallied double digits seven times this year, is in the midst of some personal problems, including the fact that Moss' mother is near death.

After the game, Irish coach Mike Brey said keeping players' tempers under control is always a concern.

"You get these kids to play at a fever pitch, especially when you're on the road and the crowd's kind of on you," Brey said. "They did a great job trying to calm him down.

The Irish played dirty in their own way, one that didn't hurt their chances of victory. They responded to a post-game tantrum by a Jan. 13 loss in Lexington, Kentucky, to the Kentucky Wildcats, and started digging in on defense, scrambling for loose balls and going full-court for rebounds. "... The switch in the starting five, the Irish managed to avoid the manifold foul trouble, resulting in Moss' second technical foul.

But it was West Virginia's Moss that carried the play beyond just physical Big East bruising and into the unacceptable and unheard of.

"I've coached 38 years and that's never happened. It will be corrected," Mountaineer coach Galen Calleat said when informed after the game that Moss had spit on a female cheerleader.

"He was claiming all day that he'd been shoved and pushed, and the officials weren't calling it. He just laid into them," Calleat said.

Calleat had not yet decided on whether Moss would be further punished, but said the junior, who has tallied double digits seven times this year, is in the midst of some personal problems, including the fact that Moss' mother is near death.

After the game, Irish coach Mike Brey said keeping players' tempers under control is always a concern.

"You get these kids to play at a fever pitch, especially when you're on the road and the crowd's kind of on you," Brey said. "They did a great job trying to calm him down.

The Irish played dirty in their own way, one that didn't hurt their chances of victory. They responded to a post-game tantrum by a Jan. 13 loss in Lexington, Kentucky, to the Kentucky Wildcats, and started digging in on defense, scrambling for loose balls and going full-court for rebounds. Irish still hungry despite biggest win in program history

I think many of us had two things in common besides registering for classes last Monday: we went to the women's basketball game against Connecticut, and we expected the No. 1 Huskies to run their winning streak to 31 games.

The 92-76 Irish win surprised everyone but the women wearing the gold uniforms, a fitting color for such a big time win.

"The difference in the game was in our attitude," coach Muffett McGraw said. "We believed that we could win." Despite its 0-11 mark before Monday's win against its Big East nemesis, McGraw has seen a winning attitude all year long, especially from the older players.

"From the beginning of the year, it was like. "We're going to beat UConn this year. We're seniors, We haven't done it yet. This is it. We've got them at home, and let's take care of business.'"

Notre Dame couldn't have taken care of business much better. Consider the following:

- The starting backcourt went 5-for-7 from behind the arc, and Ivey added 10 assists to go with her 14 points.
- Ruth Riley, played all 40 minutes, and the team felt the frustrations of double and triple teams to even count.
- The one still playing on my own highlight reel came in the first half, thrown from the block around a triple team down the baseline to Ratay for a wide-open three in the corner.
- The one still playing on my own highlight reel came in the first half, thrown from the block around a triple team down the baseline to Ratay for a wide-open three in the corner.
- If that sentence sounds jumbled and confusing, then it accurately represents what trying to make that decision and pass in one second is like.

Not quite.

"We didn't really talk about it last week ago. Coach McGraw didn't appear worried that her team might let up after beating UConn. "This team's focused," the coach reflects the attitude of her team, and the team reflects the attitude of its coach.

Right from the start of her head coaching days at Notre Dame, McGraw and her teams won a lot. But the coach was never satisfied.

"We won 20 games every year almost," McGraw said, "but it just was never enough." The Irish didn't join the Big East until the 1995-96 season, and the team felt the frustrations of playing in conferences, first the North Star and then the Midwestern Collegiate, that didn't provide automatic berths into the NCAA Tournament.

"Joining the Big East Conference," McGraw said, "I think turned our whole program around." Since joining the Big East, Notre Dame has made it to the "Big Dance" every year, going all the way to the Final Four in 1997. Despite all this success, and a third-ranked national poll rating going into Monday's game with UConn, Notre Dame still wasn't even the best team in their conference.

Now, even though the Irish are still just 1-1 against the Huskies, UConn's aura of invincibility is gone. "Just finally getting over that hump and knowing we can beat this team," McGraw described it, was a big deal for the Irish.

Many observers probably still think the once defeated UConn Huskies will win the Big East Tournament. In no small part because it will be played in Storrs, Conn. on UConn's home floor. When asked what the three toughest places to play in women's college basketball are, McGraw didn't hesitate before saying "Storrs is definitely one." On her side, she has a team she describes as confident, focused, and fun to be around. Add its evident talent, and Irish women's basketball has a chance to pick up some great hardware this year.

It got a big win in that journey on Monday. But neither the players nor their coach look like they'll be happy to take their big win and leave.

That just wouldn't be enough.

Gilbert races into spotlight with strong showing

By NOAH AMSTADTER
Assistant Sports Editor

Last season as a freshman, Tom Gilbert ran in the shadow of Marshawn West, the defending Big East Outdoor champion in the 200 meters and long jump.

This season with West graduated, there is no more hiding.

Behind victories by Gilbert in the long jump and 200 meters— as well as his third-place finish in the 60 meters — the Irish men's track team won its season opening tri-meet Friday night in Loftus. Notre Dame's 125 points topped Ball State's 111 and Western Michigan's 87.

Gilbert proved to be the catalyst. His jump of 23-5 1/2 inches topped teammate Godwin Mbagwu's leap of 22-5 3/4. Field events coach Scott Winsor said Gilbert's time of 6.99 in the 60 meters was less than a tenth behind teammate Travis Davey's winning time of 6.91.

"I'm pretty good shape," said Gilbert. "I've been training for a long time, so I was pretty confident. I just took it out and I ran faster than I probably would have in the first meet."

Mbagwu, a freshman from Virginia, also helped the Irish excel in the jumps. Besides his second-place finish in the long jump, Mbagwu took first in the triple jump with a personal best leap of 49-4 3/4.

"I was very pleased. We couldn't have asked for much more than what he started out with," said Winsor. "Those are two pretty good marks for a freshman in his first meet."

In the high jump, the Irish were energized by the return of Andrew Cooper, who sat out last season. Cooper cleared the bar at 6-foot-9 1/2 inches to take second in the event.

"That's a pretty good start. Hopefully we can continue to get some more strength on him. All I'm doing right now is harping on him about speed," said Winsor. "You can't be fast enough running to the bar."

Also excelling in the jumps for the Irish was junior Quill Redwine, who captured second in the triple jump at 49-3 and third in the high jump, clearing 6-7.

Sophomore Brian Thornburg took fifth with a personal-best throw of 52-feet 4 inches. Senior John Scolaro took sixth with a throw of 51-feet 3 inches, also a personal best.

Irish overcome early deficit, cruise to win

By KERRY SMITH
Sports Editor

All it took was two foul shots. Strength to wear them in a 13-point deficit midway through the first half, the Irish needed only two calmly launched free throws from forward Troy Murphy to gain the lead, a lead they would hold the rest of the game, Sunday against the Mountaineers of West Virginia.

But the 78-61 Big East win was anything but easy for the Irish.

In a heated and physical out- ing, temps flared on both sides of the court as the two conference rivals battled at the Joyce Center.

"We kept our cool in an unusual game," Irish head coach Mike Brey said. "That's league basketball." West Virginia took the crowd out of the game early, running up a 17-4 lead during the opening eight minutes before the Irish got on top of their game and their shots started falling.

"I think how we started the game," Mountaineer head coach Gale Catlett said. "Our playing was crisp and we were hitting the right people." Forward David Graves provided a much needed spark off the bench with a top all- around effort, leading the Irish with 17 points, and six offensive and seven defensive rebounds.

"As long as I'm on the floor, I'm going to do what I have to," Graves said. "You just got to quit and try to wear havoc on the defensive end." That team effort slowly let the Irish back into the game, matching the Mountaineers and then taking the lead at 24-23 on Murphy foul shots with less than eight minutes remaining in the first half.

Murphy was right on Graves' heels, adding 16 points in 37 minutes of play.

They got out to a great start," Murphy said. "We showed a lot of poise dealing with all the distractions. And getting down 17-4 was one of those minor distractions. As the game went on they started to capitalize on our fouls on the inner perimeter. The Mountaineers really hadn't seen a team that was capable of putting up a 17-point lead on us before. The team effort slowly let us back into the game." Forward Ryan Humphrey throws down two of his 12 points in Notre Dame's victory over West Virginia Sunday.

Irish go 0-1-1

Notre Dame dropped the first game of a weekend series with Ohio State, but skated to a 2-2 tie in the second game at the Joyce Center.

Playing without injured forward Kelley Siemon — who was sitting out while her injured hand heals — forward Ericka Haney stepped up her play to lead the Irish past Seton Hall 72-47 on Sunday in South Orange, N.J.

The junior forward led the Irish with 17 points and seven rebounds as the Irish (18-0, 7-0 in the Big East) won their first contest since upsetting No. 1 Connecticut on Monday. Haney absorbed some of the offensive load normally carried by her fellow forward.

"Me and [Siemon] kind of have the same role as far as going to the basket," Haney said. "I think I did a pretty good job today picking up some of the moves she has when she's in the post." Haney started out early, scoring the team's first seven points as the Irish built an 11-0 lead to start the game. The Pirates did not score until Charlene Thomas hit two free throws 11:15 remaining in the opening half.

"The first 10 minutes weren't much fun," Seton Hall coach Phyllis Mangina said to the Associated Press following the game. "We felt like the Minnesota Vikings. We just didn't play very well offensively." Irish head coach Muffet McGraw credits her team's 2-3 zone defense with the early domination.

"Our zone looked good early. It was pretty good the whole game," said McGraw. "I felt we did a nice job of containing the ball and keeping them off the baseline." Notre Dame focused on making Seton Hall attempt three-point shots, a strategy that proved successful.

"We really wanted them to shoot more threes," said McGraw. "They ended up one for 13 so I thought that was good." All-American center Ruth Riley added 15 points for Notre Dame, and contributed to Haney's successful night by drawing double-teams throughout out of the game.

"They were double-teaming me every time the ball came into the post, so I knew someone must be open so I just looked to kick the ball out to an open teammate," Riley told the Associated Press after the game.

Alicia Ratay added 11 points, hitting three shots from behind the 3-point arc. Also contributing for the Irish was guard Monique Hernandez, who scored a season high 10 points while playing 25 minutes off the bench.

"She played a great game," McGraw said of her sophomore guard. "She didn't make a lot of mistakes and just really contributed offensively." The game was played in front of 1,273 fans in the Walsh Gymnasium at Seton Hall, which seats only 2,600 fans — a far cry from the packed Joyce Center the Irish played in front of against Connecticut.

"You come out of the Connecticut game with the great crowd, the enthusiasm and the excitement," said McGraw. "Now you go to play a team that you know you're supposed to beat. It's a different mental approach to the game now." The Irish travel to take on the Mountaineers in Morgantown Wednesday. The team then has a week off before hosting Providence on Wed., Jan. 31.

Williams declares for draft

Bruck Williams confirmed on Sunday that he has declared for the National Football League draft.

The senior cornerback, who could have applied for a fifth year of eligibility, would not elaborate on his decision. Although Williams declined to comment to 'The Observer,' he said he might hold a press conference sometime this week to offer reasons for his departure.

Williams remained the NFL and on track to graduate in May with a sociology degree. Williams apparently had thought of leaving Notre Dame before Notre Dame's 41-9 loss in the Fiesta Bowl. After the Jan. 1 game, Williams told 'The Observer' he had talked to Notre Dame football administrator Nick Carparelli a few weeks earlier about the possibility of declaring for the draft.

Williams remained the NFL and was told he would likely be selected in the third or fourth round. When a player with eligibility remaining petitions the NFL, he is classified in four categories (a probable 1st or 2nd round pick, 3rd or 4th round pick, 5th to 7th round pick, or a free agent, according to an NFL official.)

During the past season, it had been announced Williams would return for a fifth year. On several occasions, coach Bob Davie mentioned Williams would be a key contributor to the 2001 squad.

The speculation that Williams would declare for the NFL draft began after the Fiesta Bowl. Williams mentioned immediately after the game that he "went from decided to undecided" in his plan to return next season. He then said, "I want to come back next year and have a good, good season."

Moments later, Williams spoke of his prior discussion with Williams.

"The coaches will probably be shocked at what I'm saying but that's the way I am feeling," Williams said. "I'll let them know." According to Carparelli, Williams and Davie were contacted by the NFL sometime between Jan. 6 and Jan. 12.
