Air Force band makes tribute to heroes

The opening notes of John Philip Sousa's "The Stars and Stripes Forever", by the United States Air Force Band of Flight ensured the evening's emphasis on patriotism and national heritage.

The concert which was attended by local firefighters and police officers was a tribute to true American heroes. "Once we were told our heroes were sport athletes, or silver screen stars, or that they had to be on stage. In the last few weeks, we have realized who the true American hero is. They are the firefighters, policemen and rescue workers," conductor Major Alan Sierichs said.

Next, the band played "The Star Spangled Banner", which caused the crowd to stand and sing together.

The concert also featured the soloist, Staff Sgt. Lawrence Wiley, on the trumpet during the contemplative tune "Power of Saint Gregory".

The first set ended with the Russian composer Tchaikovsky's, "Overture of 1812", which is in honor of our nation's winning battle.

While the Air Force Band of Flight's programs usually include many American songs it ordinarily also includes a varied repertoire of classical symphonies, Broadway show tunes or popular contemporary music. The program was changed in light of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

The concert ended with "God Bless America" and a medley of the different military anthems, from the Coast Guard to the Marines, and ending with the Air Force medal.

The United States Air Force Band of Flight is stationed in Dayton, Ohio and is on active duty as full-time performing musicians.

WAOU, Texas

Members of Antioch Community Church in Waco, Texas, are hopeful that two church members detailed in Afghanistan will be released this week. Antioch Senior Pastor Jimmy Seibert said Monday. Baylor University graduates Danya Curry, 25, and Heathen Merer, 24, were arrested on Aug. 3 by Afghanistan's ruling Talibban government on charges that they were preparing Christian literature for distribution. That renewed hope comes after two weekend appearances by the women's lawyer before the Talibban supreme court. Said State Department spokeswoman Eliza Kranich, "Talibban society's list of acceptable activities includes preparing literature. This arrest comes in response to those activities.

Speakers dedicate Malloy Hall

By SCOTT BRODFUEHRER
Assistant News Editor

This week an academic symposium featuring four nationally known speakers will celebrate not only the new office building for the Philosophy and Theology departments, Malloy Hall, but also the excellence of the departments.

"It is important to see [Malloy Hall] not just as a building, but as a celebration of the philosophy and theology departments. The building is a symbol of the departments' academic presence," said associate provost and vice president Father John Jenkins.

The symposium will begin at 10 a.m. on Thursday with "The Prophetic Role of Theology in the Catholic University," by Father Gustavo Gutierrez, the University's John Cardinal O'Hara professor of theology. At 2 p.m., Father Ernan McMullin, who has been a Notre Dame professor since 1954, will speak about "Searching for Consonance."

On Thursday at 4:15 p.m., Has van Fraassen, Princeton University's McCosh professor of philosophy will give a talk titled "Questions I Would Like to Ask." Philosophy department chair Paul Weithman said van Fraassen is "one of the most distinguished English speaking philosophers" and a practicing Roman Catholic.

The symposium will conclude on Thursday at 2 p.m. with a talk, "University Theology in the Catholic Context," given by Cardinal Avery Dulles, the Laurence J. McGinley Professor of Religion and Society at Fordham University. All events will be held in the auditorium of McKenna Hall.

Speakers will receive an honorary Notre Dame degree at 4 p.m. on Thursday. According to Jenkins, the practice of giving symposium speakers honorary diplomas is not unusual; it was done at symposiums celebrating the dedication of Notre Dame's academic buildings in the study-abroad programs for London and Dublin.

Weithman hopes many students, faculty and community members will take advantage of the opportunity to hear the distinguished speakers.

"The talks will, I expect, be scholarly talks, but there should be something in the talks for everyone," said Weithman.

University President Father Edward Malloy will celebrate a dedication mass for the building at 4 p.m. Friday in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart and will dedicate the building at 5:45 p.m. The building was named Malloy Hall at the request of Donald Kroungh, whose $12.9-million dollar donation funded the construction of the building.

Holy Cross appoints new hall director

By NATALIE BAILEY
News Writer

After nearly a month of classes, Holy Cross Hall now has a permanent hall director. Jailene Erickson started her duties Sept. 24 after being hired to replace Dana North in early September.

North, director of Resident's Life, acted as the temporary hall director.

"So far Jailene is doing a good job. She is picking up stuff quickly and asking good questions," North said.

Erickson is a native of Atlanta, Ga. and graduated from Taylor University in May of 2001 with a degree in communication studies.

She looks forward to meeting all of the students and fulfilling her new position.

"During my college experience, residence life was a pinnacle to my growth and development as a person. In turn I wanted to become a hall director so I could give to students the same way others so freely gave to me," Erickson said.

The job description includes upkeep and maintenance of the hall, advising the resident advisors and hall councils and acting as a member of the Judicial Board and Resident Life staff. Erickson is confident about her abilities to succeed as the hall director.

"I am friendly and I truly care about students. My previous administrators and hall directors have invested in me the value of giving and serving others," she said.

Besides her normal duties, Erickson is looking to implement some new things. Although everything is still in the planning stage, she has a main goal.

"I hope to incorporate leader­ ship development into the activi­ ties that we will do," Erickson said.

Erickson invites students to come into her office and get to know her.

"I am most excited about meeting the women of this hall," she said.

coughing and serious respiratory tract illness.

"It's not a different disease to treat, except that if the spores are in the lungs by the time anthrax is diagnosed, you basically already have so much damage to the tissue, you still are going to have a very high mortality rate," said Cole.

Cole said that while anthrax poses a great threat to people who come in contact with it, there are other related organisms that can do equally as harmful damage to the body. It is not likely, however, that anyone has enough resources to develop biological warfare that could kill mass populations that can do equally as harmful damage to the body. It poses a great threat to people
who come in contact with it, said Cole. "The facts warrant concern but not panic by any means."

Incorporating a broader sense of responsibility, government professor Robert Johansen said that security against potential threats to society should be a collaborative duty of all nations.

"The U.S. cannot provide security for the people of the U.S. by itself, it requires a worldwide effort," Johansen said.

A specialist in United Nations peacekeeping, Johansen said the nation has taken for grant­ et its domestic safety, but the recent attacks and anthrax threats show that the U.S. can only protect itself if it works with other nations to en sure in ternational security.

"There have to be so me in ternational rules that everybody on e a r t h obeys," said Johansen. "We have not been working multilaterally until Sept. 11. We've assumed that we could solve the problems by ourselves."

Johansen's recommendation involve watching out for domestic problems, but also exercising international inspections.

"In the short run, we need to exert every precaution about receiving mail that might have suspicions [materials], but that will not address the problem in the long run," said Johansen.

"The collaboration is necesary even though its different because there is no way to protect against this war without having intrusive forms of international inspection."

However, even with international involvement, Johansen did say that individuals should be on guard about the serious implications of anthrax.

"I think we should exercise
every reasonable precaution because something very unusual is happening because cases of anthrax have not happened like this in recent histoy," said Johansen.

Powell arrives in India: Secretary of State Colin Powell came to India Wednesday on his tour of South Asia, which has taken on new urgency with the latest violent confrontation between India and Pakistan over their conflicting claims to the disputed land of Kashmir. Mr. Powell’s trip to South Asia opened the Bush administration’s first high-level discussions with South Asian leaders on how to help develop a new government in Afghanistan.

Imelda Marcos faces trial: The Philippines’ flamboyant former first lady, Imelda Marcos, surrendered to an anti-graft court Tuesday and was quickly given bail after it ordered her arrest on charges of stashing $28 million in illegal wealth in Swiss banks. Marcos was the second powerful political figure to be hauled up before the anti-graft court.

Letter tests positive for anthrax: Part of the Senate office building was closed today after laboratory tests confirmed the presence of anthrax spores in a letter sent last week to an employee of NBC in New York City. Not only were both postmarked in Trenton, N.J., but they bore similar markings and contained similar threatening themes.

Supreme court revisits anonymity: Six years after ruling that the Constitution protects the right to distribute anonymous campaign literature, the Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether that right extends to anonymous door-to-door advocacy for a political or religious cause. The new case is an appeal by the Jehovah’s Witnesses challenging a Stranton, Ohio, ordinance that requires a permit for door-to-door advocacy.

KABUL

U.S. strikes set Red Cross warehouses afire near Afghanistan’s capital Tuesday, sending workers scrambling to salvage desperately needed relief goods during a bombardment that could be heard 30 miles away.

To the south, the two U.S. special forces gunships entered the air war for the first time, raking the Taliban stronghold of Kandahar with cannon and heavy machine gun fire in a pre-dawn raid.

Heavy, round-the-clock attacks and the first use of the lumbering, low-flying AC-130 gunships signaled U.S. confidence that 10 days of attacks by cruise missiles and high-flying jets have crippled the air defenses of the Taliban, the Muslim militia that rules most of Afghanistan.

U.S.-led forces have used more than 2,000 bombs and missiles since opening the attacks Oct. 7. Lt. Gen. Gregory Newbold, director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told a Pentagon news conference. The past two days’ attacks have been especially intense, putting more than 100 warplanes and five cruise missiles into the air, he said.

Tuesday’s strikes were mostly against military installations and airports around Kabul, Kandahar and the northern city of Mazar-e-Sharif, on which the Afghan opposition claims its forces are closing in.

Afternoon raids in the Kabul area were so strong that the detonations could be heard 30 miles north of the city, where Taliban forces are battling Afghan fighters for the opposition’s northern alliance.

During the afternoon raids, at least one bomb exploded in the compound of the International Committee of the Red Cross at Khair Khana near Kabul, injuring one security guard and setting two of the buildings on fire. Afghan staffers ran through thick smoke and flames to try to salvage blankets, tents and plastic tarps meant to help Afghans through the winter. The other warehouse, which was also damaged by fire, contained wheat. Red Cross workers said.

The Pentagon acknowledged that U.S. bombs accidentally hit warehouses in Kabul used by the International Committee of the Red Cross.

U.S. drops leaflets over Afghanistan

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

An American bomber on Sunday delivered Washington’s latest weapon against the Taliban leadership in Afghanistan leaflets. The Partnership of Nations is here to help,” declared one of the 385,000 slips of paper dropped from a B-52 over locations in the northwestern and northeastern regions.

One leaflet, roughly the size of a dollar bill, is available in English, Pashto and Dari. It shows a picture of an American soldier extending his hand to a man in traditional Afghan dress. A second leaflet depicts a radio tower and advises listeners when to tune to American broadcasts. The Defense Department released tonight a transcript of radio messages beamed into Afghanistan.

“We have no wish to hurt you, the innocent people of Afghanistan,” the broadcaster said. “Stay away from military installations, government buildings, terrorist camps, roads, factories or bridges. If you are near these places, then you must move away from them. With your help, this conflict can be over soon. And once again, Afghanistan will belong to you. And not to tyrants or outsiders.

The information barrage is heating up as American officials voice concern that they are losing ground in the propaganda war in Afghanistan and other Muslim nations. Loyalists to Osama bin Laden portray the bombing as an assault on Islam.

Condoleezza Rice reached out to an Arab audience in an interview with Al Jazeera, the television channel in Qatar, and said, "It is not a war against the Arab people. It is a war against evil people who would hijack the Palestinian cause."
IRELAND

Protestant leaders appeal to IRA

Associated Press

BELFAST — Protestant political and religious leaders appealed Tuesday for the Irish Republican Army to start disarming to prevent the collapse of Northern Ireland's unity government.

Ulster Unionist leader David Trimble, who triggered the crisis by resigning three months ago as the government's Protestant leader, said his party's three remaining Cabinet ministers would resign this week if the IRA didn't move. An Ulster Unionist withdrawal would force Britain to resume direct rule of Northern Ireland.

But Trimble signaled he would run again for leadership of the province's power-sharing administration if the IRA began to disarm.

"It would be my intention to take office," if disarmament began, "if I think if David Trimble is in a mood to resolve this through politics and to work with the rest of us on it, then we will resolve this because these now are political problems."

Mitchel McLaughlin national chairman of the Fein party

The IRA-linked Sinn Fein party's threethree years ago, have been rising, blamed on the largest outlawed Protestant group, the Ulster Defense Association, particularly as "first minister," Britain has once again delayed the process of decommissioning, as "first minister," Britain has encouraged by Trimble's comments.

Disarmament "will transform the situation and there will be an appropriate response," he said. "The IRA to fulfill its disarmament pledges soon.

"I believe there are grounds for hope that movement towards decommissioning is imminent," Eames told a gathering of Anglican clergy in Armagh, the ecclesiastical capital of Ireland's southeast of Belfast. "If the IRA can match this demand, I believe it will unlock an entire process." Trimble agreed in November 1999 to form a four-party government that included Sinn Fein, on condition that the IRA disarmed. Since then Trimble has battled hard-liners, inside and outside his party, to keep the coalition intact as the IRA failed to keep its promise.

Britain has stripped power from the local administration three times — first for an indefinite period in February 2000, when it appeared likely that Trimble would be ousted as a leader. The Ulster Unionists resumed power-sharing after the IRA said it intended to begin putting its weapons "completely and verifiably beyond use."

After Trimble's July resignation as "first minister," Britain has twice suspended power briefly in legal maneuvers to keep the government going without a leader.

Militant Protestant opposition to the 1998 pact has been rising, as demonstrated by sporadic riots and hundreds of pipe-bomb attacks blamed on the largest outlawed paramilitary group.

Powell backs Latin American nominee

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is pushing the Senate to confirm its pick for the State Department's top Latin American position — someone denounced by a key Democrat as unqualified for the job.

Otto Reich topped the list of 18 nominees Secretary of State Colin Powell said he would like to see confirmed before the Senate adjourns for the year. Congress' recess may begin in November.

Powell submitted the list in a letter dated Monday to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the top Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Pentagon admits to bombing Red Cross warehouses

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

The Pentagon on Tuesday acknowledged that a U.S. warplane mistakenly dropped bombs on Red Cross warehouses in Afghanistan. U.S. forces did not know the warehouses were being used by the Red Cross, and believed they were part of a complex where the Taliban militia stored military equipment, the Defense Department said in a statement. Military vehicles had been seen in the area, the statement said.

The Red Cross said a bomb crashed into its compound at Khair Khana near Kabul, injuring a guard and setting afire two warehouses containing wheat, medicine and other supplies. Officials in Pakistan said the roofs of the warehouses were marked with Red Cross insignia. The Pentagon said the Defense Department regretted any innocent casualties and tried to strike only military and terrorist targets.

The incident happened as President Bush prepared to visit Red Cross headquarters in Washington to encourage Americans to take part in community service efforts during the military strikes. Bush did not mention it in his remarks, and did not respond to questions shouted by reporters.

Bush said the White House had received 90,000 pieces of mail since Friday in response to his call for American children to each donate $1 toward relief efforts for Afghan children.

"In just a few short days, children all across our country have responded with remarkable generosity and deep compassion," Bush said.

Some children were shipping in much more than $1, Bush said. He noted that entire classes of students were pooling their contributions and personally congratulated Kristen Strickland of Philomont, Va., who raised $45 by feeding chickens.

He said he would ensure that each dollar raised by children in the United States would be spent on the needs of children in Afghanistan as that country's harsh winter approaches.

"The children need warm clothing. And they need food, and medicines," Bush said. "Thanks to the American children, fewer children in Afghanistan will suffer this winter."

WASHINGTON

President Bush personally collected $1 donations for Afghan children Tuesday, visiting the American Red Cross headquarters on a day when U.S. air strikes set Red Cross warehouses afire near Afghanistan's capital.

Bush made no mention of the raids, in which at least one bomb exploded in the compound of the International Committee of the Red Cross at Kabul, injuring one security guard and setting two of the seven buildings on fire.

The Pentagon acknowledged later that U.S. bombs accidentally hit the Red Cross warehouses. A Navy F/A-18 Hornet dropped 1,000-pound bombs on the warehouses, the statement said.

Bush said that since his call for donations, the White House has received 90,000 letters. He said the American Red Cross and the U.S. Agency for International Development are channeling the money to needy Afghan youths. The administration said it was impossible to say how much money had been sent.

"Winter arrives early in Afghanistan. It's cold, really cold, and the children need warm clothing and they need medicines," Bush said. "And thanks to the American children, fewer children in Afghanistan will suffer this winter."

Nearly 100 children stood behind Bush as he spoke, as did a placard advertising the fund. It depicted two smiling Afghan children. Bush singled out for special praise Kristen Strickland of Philomont, Va., who raised $45 by feeding chickens.

"One way to fight evil is to fight it with compassion. And the message stands in stark contrast to the message of hate that our boys and girls have seen on TV."

As Bush waded into the crowd of children for a group photo, many of them held up one-dollar bills. Children pressed bills into the president's hand, and he promptly passed them to Bernadine Healy, president of the American Red Cross.

Bush last week called on American children to donate $1 to Afghan children, and he used the appearance Tuesday to highlight humanitarian efforts under way alongside the U.S.-led military campaign against the Taliban in Afghanistan.

The House is working on a measure expanding the government's power to cut money flows to terrorist networks amid protests by key senators over the legislation being stripped from President Bush's anti-terrorism package.

The bill, supported by the White House, is intended to fight money laundering around the world, thwart the financing of terrorism and protect the U.S. banking system from illicit money. It would give the treasury secretary authority to require special record keeping and reporting rules for American banks and other financial institutions and would make it a crime to smuggle more than $10,000 over U.S. borders.

In the Senate, the anti-money laundering measure is attached to the counterrorism legislation sparked by the Sept. 11 attacks against the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

The House and Senate both have passed versions of the popular anti-terrorism legislation. But the House version does not contain the money laundering provisions, a separation which "could be the death warrant for strong anti-money-laundering legislation," Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., told reporters Tuesday.

There is potentially "a lot of mischief to be played" with standalone money laundering legislation in negotiations for a compromise between House and Senate lawmakers, said Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee.
Dulles airport reassigns 7 security employees

Associated Press
WASHINGTON
Seven of 20 employees who screen passengers at Washington Dulles International Airport, where one of the hijacked planes took off last month, were given other assignments after failing written examinations, government investigators said Tuesday.

The investigators tested the screeners during a probe at Dulles and 13 other airports. Teams from the Office of Inspector General and Federal Aviation Administration are looking to see whether background checks required of security employees were done.

A screener must receive 12 hours of training, pass a written test and be retested every year. The investigation began after federal prosecutors accused the company handling security at the 14 airports, Argenbright Security Inc., of failing to make background checks at Philadelphia International Airport. Government investigators were sent to Philadelphia, and separate teams went to 13 other airports staffed by Argenbright employees.

Australia will begin deploying troops and military hardware to the Persian Gulf over the next two weeks to join the U.S.-led coalition against terrorism, Prime Minister John Howard said Wednesday.

Howard said the deployment was ordered after a telephone request by overnight from President Bush.

"This marks of course a significant further stage in the involvement of Australian military personnel and the Australian people in this war against terrorism," Howard told reporters.

"Our forces will be overseas fighting in our name within a very short period of time," he said.

Howard said and exact deployment date had not been set, but the first troops and equipment could begin leaving within the next two weeks. He said the full Australian contribution would be in position by mid-November.

Howard has pledged a detachment of 150 Special Air Services troops, two B707 tanker refueling aircraft, two P3 long-range maritime planes, two navy frigates, one amphibious command ship and four F/A-18A fighter jets.

The SAS troops are Australia's elite commandos, trained to operate in small groups behind enemy lines.

The total number of personnel committed is 1,550.

Terrorist attacks affect Americans abroad

Maite Uranga
Life in Africa

Everybody knows where they saw or heard about the events of Sept. 11. I was walking back to my village after watching girls play basketball. The Peace Corps car intercepted me and the Peace Corps car straightforwardly said, "I'm sure you heard what happened in the United States today." Many possible scenarios rared through my head and sadly my imagination did not even come close to the horror of the reality. The American gave me a piece of paper Peace Corps wanted every volunteer to read first and ensure that everyone knew. A brief summary said, "Earlier today the United States experienced apparent terrorist attacks. Other attacks are possible. Peace Corps wants all volunteers to stay where they are." In retrospect, my reaction was uncharacteristic and I think that is largely due to the calmness of the Peace Corps representative.

After this five minute encounter, I continued to walk back to my village, making small talk with people and in a real hurry to find out further details. I went to my neighbor's house and played with her children for a while. Eventually I asked the boys next door if I could borrow their radio. I found the BBC frequencies, my life changed. The world as I knew it disappeared.

In utter disbelief I listened to "Bush is in Nebraska... Cheney is in the White House bunkers... the military is patrolling the East Coast... Washington is destroyed... the World Trade Center... all the airplanes are gone... the Pentagon is on fire... all airports are grounded... the Mexican and Canadian borders are closed." Bin Ladenems the very early as the main suspect. Radicalis started calling the BBC and Voice of America declaring "a war on Islam... the beginning of the next Crusades... a demand for swift and deliberate action against the Muslim countries harboring bin Laden." The sun was setting outside and I heard the call to the mosque and saw all my neighbors stop to face Mecca and pray. An unease overcome me and I asked myself how well I really knew those people. I arrived in my village only 15 days before Sept. 11. It was pitch black outside and there were no Americans. I closed my door and continued to listen for any piece of information that would tell me the answers. I desperately wanted to talk to my family and friends or any American. I wrote in my journal, I went to sleep that night without knowing what state America and the world would be in when I woke up. More importantly I did not know how my village would react to me, an American who just came into their lives.

The next morning the nightmare on the radio continued and eventually I returned to the safety of my room. People immediately started asking me if my family and friends lived in New York or Washington. They told me to call my parents and friends to tell them a while. Everyone asked the boys next door if I could borrow their radio. I found the BBC frequencies.

My life changed. The world as I knew it disappeared.

I am writing in response to Natalie Hork's letter published Monday, entitled "Right to life not about abortion." She asks why "no one ever speaks about the issue of Right to Life who bomb abortion clinics, killing people in the name of life, in the name of God." The people who kill others while claiming that they are "Right-to-Lifers" are not pro-life. "Muslim terrorists blaspheme their God, Allah, by claiming that killing those of other religions and cultures is following Allah's plan. Similarly, "Right-to-Lifers" kill those who work at abortion clinics pervert the pro-life movement. These people should not call themselves pro-life just as terrorists should not call themselves Muslims. Hork proceeded to criticize her parish priest for bringing up the issue of abortion on Respect Life Sunday. She "found it interesting, that in this time of inner compassion and strength, we could talk about issues that further divide people and manage to act as if the world isn't changing around us." Hork missed the bigger picture that Sunday morning. The American people are devastated by the over 6,000 lives lost on Sept. 11. Sadly, many Americans ignore the fact that 4,400 people lose their lives every day through abortion. This tragedy should be a wake-up call; the devastation of abortion is depleting our generation. At this time of crisis, our fixation is on life. This movement should unite us as we show the world that we respect life — all life, from conception until natural death.

Is security worth sacrificing liberty?

I have in my possession a list of 99 traitors in the highest level of the American government. Their treason is ignorant of party and political ideology, for it is founded in no core principle or belief—indeed, it is the opposite. It is a treason of emotion, of fear, and I do not believe the traitors are going to stop.

Nevertheless, this treason may provide an example to the United States of the founding fathers than any double agents, terrorists or military adversaries in the last century. Worst of all, they have performed this treason not in defiance of the people they govern, but in accordance with their expressed wishes.

This traitorous act, executed last Thursday night, was ironically titled the “Strengthening and Uniting America Act,” and its 99 cosponsors are all members of the United States Senate. Ninety-six of them voted in favor of this deliberately anti-American bill, and three abstained from voting against it. Only Wisconsin senator Russ Feingold, perhaps learning from the mistakes of his state, voted against the bill. Madison native, Turner L. Larson, found the wisdom to vote against it.

The bill is not treasonous in giving away secrets to the enemy or putting the United States in danger; it is actually designed to do the opposite. But, in this way, the treachery of the bill is so much worse. It does not directly attack American citizens but rather the founding principles under which they live. It is a betrayal of Madison, Jefferson, and Hamilton, of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. It is a betrayal of the very ideals that define our nation and that made the United States far more dangerous than it was prior to the existence of America as we know it than any terrorist act.

The bill was designed to strengthen and unite America, and yet the Constitution itself, whose authors wrote that its foundation was the idea of limitations of government power, is not the increase of it. Some constitutions rights were suspended in those wars, to be certain, but these suspensions were known to be temporary; they did not authorize the indefinite seizure of these rights by the government.

Perhaps I will call un-American in charging these 99 senators, these representatives of the American government, of treason. But I would rather live in the United States with a guarantee of liberty than live in a “Strengthened and United America” without this principle. If the government is given the power to perform intruding surveillance and abetting any citizens they subjectively believe might someday cause a problem, regardless of whether they are actually guilty or suspected of a crime, we would surely feel more secure from terrorists.

But we would feel less secure from the zeal of a well-meaning, but ultimately totalitarian, Big Brother government.

In the last month, those who have refused to blindly trust the government in this time of fear have been accused of being unpatriotic. Those who question the government’s hand over fundamental liberties, like Feingold, have been trampled by the majority of senators and congressmen.

They might say that, in writing this column, I am not showing a love for America. But in asking our government to refrain from passing such laws, I am showing a love for America that concerned forefathers to protect. I believe I am.

With the success of reality shows like "Survivor" and "Temptation Island" networks have been scrambling to come up with wilder and even edgier fare to satisfy America's appetite for reality.

From sheep eye eating to sexed-up love cruises, the next generation of reality television is pushing the barrier in shock TV. While network executives continue to hang on to these shows as advertising cash cows, recent ratings may indicate that viewers aren't quite so eager to dip in. The second wave of reality first hit this past summer.

Seeing the successes of "Survivor" and "Big Brother" on CBS, NBC saw an opportunity. Last summer, it premiered "Fear Factor" and "Spy TV." "Fear Factor" hosted by Joe Rogan, collected six young and attractive men and women and challenged them to various tasks. The contestants that refused or were unable to complete the tasks were eliminated, leaving one winning team to take home $50,000 prize. The show, which threw people off of buildings and dashed them over ravines, became well known for its gross factor. In a few episodes, contestants were challenged to eat sheep eyes and buffalo testicles. "Spy TV," deluted as the twisted evil brother of the classic "Candid Camera," in one show, a young man was interrogated for hours as a suspected computer hacker. The interviewee was told she had destroyed the arm of the interviewee's deceased wife. After breaking down and bussing into the sober, the elaborate scheme was revealed to her.

CBS brought back 2000s modest success "Big Brother 2," heeding some of the criticism of the original, "Big Brother 2" offered a younger and more blantly Machiavellian cast. This time around, contestants voted each other out instead of having America decide via a telephone poll. FOX attempted to take a bite out of the reality pie with its "Muder in Small Town X." Contestants were investigators in a fictional New England town investigating a string of murders. In every episode, one of the contestants was eliminated while being killed, by the murderer, the results were instant. NBC saw the same moderate success this summer with "BB2" as last. While NBC managed to keep its waves rolling out "Temptation Island 2," for a few weeks. In this show, three spies were blindfolded and placed somewhere in the globe. They had to find out where they were and be the first to make it back to the Statue of Liberty. CBS introduced the more extravagant "The Amazing Race," contestants comp by two-man teams who race around the globe, from New York to Africa to Paris. "Spy TV" while receiving decent ratings, did not fare as well. CBS saw the same moderate success this summer with "BB2" as last. While WB saw an official announcement, a third installment seems likely. FOX, meanwhile, could not conjure up "Temptation"-like numbers for "Muder," which was quickly forgotten by audiences.

This fall has seen even more elaborate reality shows making their way onto the airwaves. NBC rolled out "Lost," for a few weeks. networks hope it hasn't Replacing it is an attempt to out-do one another with the bold and shocking. While some of it works, much of it doesn't. "Fear Factor" was perfect summer fare. Tuning in each week to see what people would eat in a desperate grab for money proved gleefully disgusting for the audience. "The Mole 2" continues to be the oft-overlooked gem that the first one was a fun play along game that the first season of "Survivor: Africa" also offers paranoia-driven contestants. "Survivor: Africa" also promises more of the same drama and fun that its predecessors enjoyed. Many of the other shows, however, range from the boring to the downright embarrassing.

Watching the contestants of "Lost" and "Race" mourn about foreign lands speaking loudly and gesturing ridiculously at the amused and sometimes appalled natives doesn't exactly make for interesting television. Race, in particular, seems to reduce foreign cultures to nothing more than novelties that are chewed up and quickly forgotten as the players move on to the next exotic location. Shows like "Love Crime" and "Elimidate" would work much better if they dropped the pretense of legitimacy and accepted themselves as simple, silly fun. Both shows tend to take themselves far too seriously as games and overlook the gold mine of possibilities of watching pathetic and desperate singles use sex to win cash at the price of their dignity.

While the quality of these shows is certainly mixed, the verdict that really matters may be leaving reality television in the dust. If audiences continue the current trend of tuning out, it won't be long before the plug is pulled on all of reality TV. If the next generation of reality television doesn't soon live up to expectations, it may soon find itself as a lost generation.

PITTSBURGH — Mario Lemieux's newest linemate had a big night, and it got Lemieux some praise for his initial NHL coaching victory.

Pittsburgh rookie Toly Petersen had three points in his first game on Lemieux's line and the previous day's Penguins win over Rick Kehoe's debut, beating the Ottawa Senators 5-2.

"We won the game for this new coach — and for each other," Petersen said. "The guys definitely were pretty excited with the new coach. It was pretty sweet for me, too, because never in a million years did I expect this. I just wanted to make sure I didn't embarrass myself."

Robert Lang had two goals, one scored 30 seconds into the game. When I saw him take off on a breakaway, I said to myself, 'That's a real good sign,'" Kehoe said. "We were pretty excited with the new coach — and for each other." He got his stick on the puck as it zipped past the other Flyers, who scored short-handed, and the Penguins had a 2-0 lead at 6:53 of the second period.

"It's important for us to get a lead like we did, but we're disappointed we didn't add to it in the second period," the coach said. "But Dandenault restored Detroit's two-goal lead with 3:48 left in the period when his wrist shot from the right circle beat Marc Denis high."

"We can't play minutes like Detroit and expect to beat them," he said. It was the 100th point of Kehoe's career in an NHL game, tying him with 6:27 left.

Johnson ends slump, wins battle of aces

Associated Press

PHOENIX

With icy calm and magnificent heat, Randy Johnson buried his reputation as a postseason flop.

In a matchup of pitchers who together have seven Cy Young Awards and 457 victories, Johnson threw a three-hit masterpiece as the Arizona Diamondbacks beat Greg Maddux and the Atlanta Braves 2-0 in Game 1 of the National League championship series.

Johnson struck out 11 and walked only one to snap his major league-record just two runs and six hits in seven innings, but his effort was lost in the 6-0-10 Johnson's shadow.

Johnson hadn't won in the playoffs since beating the Yankees twice in the 1995 NL division series for Seattle. He had lost his last seven decisions, including a 4-1 defeat in Game 2 of the first round against the Cardinals. Teammate Curt Schilling had been the big-game ace again against Maddux, who is 0-3 against Arizona this season and had lost his only other showdown with Johnson back in 1998.

Arizona gave Johnson a rare early lead. Counsell singled with one out in the first inning, then Gonzalez scooted under the glove of the second baseman GILES again. Maddux was no slouch. He allowed just two runs and six hits in seven innings, but his effort was lost in the 6-0-10 Johnson's shadow.

He had lost his last seven decisions, including a 4-1 defeat in Game 2 of the first round against the Cardinals. Teammate Curt Schilling had been the big-game ace against St. Louis, had two hits and scored twice — on RBI singles by Luis Gonzalez and Reggie Sanders. Maddux was no slouch. He allowed just two runs and six hits in seven innings, but his effort was lost in the 6-0-10 Johnson's shadow.

Johnson yelled "No more!" at catcher Damian Miller. He meant that pitch would never be thrown to Giles again.

A crowd of just 37,729 — 12,000 short of a sellout — watched the first postseason matchup of 200-game career winners in 23 years.

According to the Elias Sports Bureau, it happened twice in 1978 — Steve Carlton of Philadelphia against Don Sutton of Los Angeles in Game 3 of the NLCS, and Sutton against Catfish Hunter of the Yankees in New York's clinching Game 6 of the World Series.

The Diamondbacks scratched out a run in the first and another in the fifth against Maddux, who is 0-3 against Arizona this season and had lost his only other showdown with Johnson back in 1998.

Arizona gave Johnson a rare early lead. Counsell singled with one out in the first inning, then Gonzalez scooted under the glove of the second baseman GILES again.

Sanders, 7-17 in the postseason, lined a single up the middle to score Counsell and make it 1-0. The scorekeeper ruled it was an earned run.

With two outs in the fifth, Counsell doubled past the outstretched glove of a diving Andruw Jones in center.

Guillen returns to Seattle infield

Associated Press

SEATTLE — Carlos Guillen’s right leg is nearly normal again, he’s feeling better than he has in four months and there’s a smile on his face.

And with Seattle’s starting shortstop expected back on the roster after a fight with tuberculosis, the Mariners feel like their true team has returned.

Manager Lou Piniella indicated he would add Guillen for the AL championship series against Cleveland, potentially starting Saturday morning, when the series begins, if he is ready to return.

“I would like to think he’s in a position to do that,” Piniella said of Guillen’s return.

Guillen, who is undergoing treatment for pulmonary tuberculosis, broke the 25-man roster limit after Guillen left the season opener against Minnesota last month. Piniella said Guillen could be back on the field by Wednesday at Safeco Field.

Guillen said he could use Guillen in the No. 2 spot in the batting order against left-handed starters and the Yankees will start Andy Pettitte.

“I will feel like the team we had all season long,” catcher Dan Wilson said.

If Guillen plays, utility man Mark McLemore could start in left. McLemore played shortstop in Guillen’s absence, while both Stan Javier and Jay Buhner have played left in the postseason.

Guillen, 26, did not make the road trip to Cleveland for the third and fourth games of the division series because of the disease, which included fluorine treatment for tuberculosis Sept. 28 and was hospitalized.

He lost 10 pounds but gained eight back. As Alex Rodriguez’s replacement, Guillen made only 10 errors in 259 games and 797 innings.

“Tough kid,” Piniella said of Guillen.

Guillen made only 10 errors in the fielding grounders over the weekend.

“I don’t worry about anything,” Guillen said after playing in an extended spring league game in Class A Everett.

“I have confidence in myself,” Guillen said after the game.

Randy Johnson, the Mariners’ new ace and Guillen’s replacement at shortstop, said he plans to welcome Guillen back into the lineup.

“He seems to be smiling a lot,” second baseman Bret Boone said of Guillen.

Gladstone said Monday that Holmoe has compiled a career record of 15-34 (.306). His record included a 2-2 record while both Stan Javier and Jay Buhner have played left in the postseason.

He said one alumnus pointed out to him that the Bears have played is ranked No. 5 Oregon Saturday, dropping the team to 0-5 for the first time ever.

Gladstone said before the season he will resign in the middle of the season.

“Tough kid,” Piniella said.

Apart from Guillen, Holmoe made no other lineup changes.

“I just want to get better and help my team win a National Championship,” Anderson said.

The team is returning every player from last year’s team, which finished with a 24-10 record and advanced to the Elite Eight of the NCAA Tournament before losing to eventual champion, Notre Dame.

“I have high expectations,” said senior forward Zuzi Klimosova. “We just have to work our way up to the top.”

The Dores are ranked fifth in the Street & Smith College Basketball Preseason poll, which has NEC rival Tennessee at second.

“In our head as a crew coach, said he is out the lack of student support for Holmoe and the program,” Gladstone said.

That’s what’s going on in this group,” Gladstone said. “I’d hope they would continue to support the team.

The Bears have only two home games left, Nov. 3 against Arizona and the following week against Cal.

Both teams are in the bottom half of the conference standings and are winnable games if that played No. 15 season tough two weeks ago.

Part of the reason for Cal’s poor start is that the team has played one of the toughest schedules in the nation.

Including UCLA, every team the Bears have played is ranked in the top-25 of the latest Associated Press poll except Illinois, which is the first unranked team in this week’s voting.

“Let’s say the team will not resign in the middle of the season.

“One thing is clear: the Bears have not had a very good start. To do something else isn’t going to help the team,” Gladstone said.

Gladstone said of the Pac-10. “Clearly we’ve played a very strong schedule. That said, our expectations were to play with these teams.”

Gladstone would not say Cal’s poor performances this season was a result of poor coaching or a lack of effort on the part of the team.

“Unless you walk in the shoes of the people in that program, you can’t make an intelligent statement,” he said. “The athletic director should not be in the business of speculating.”

Gladstone attended a weekly meeting Monday with Cal alum.

He said he plans to continue to support the team.

“Specifically, as athletic director, I don’t want to be delivering messages that make the job harder for the coach,” he said.

Gladstone would not make any statements on Holmoe’s current situation as head coach after Saturday’s game.

ABC wins Monday night ratings war

Associated Press

NEW YORK

Even the worst kind of NFL game outdraws a key baseball playoff game in head-to-head competition Monday night. ABC's telecast of two wireless teams, in which the Dallas Cowboys beat the Washington Redskins 9-7 in a sloppy, often dull game, was watched by more people than the decisive fifth game of the American League playoffs between the Yankees and Athletics.

Although its 9.9 national rating was well below the season's average for prime-time NFL telecasts, ABC beat Fox's 8.4 for baseball. ABC is averaging an 11.4 nationally for "Monday Night Football."

The NFL game got a 16 share, as opposed to baseball's 13 share.

The rating is the percentage of all homes with TVs, whether or not they are in use. Each rating point represents a little more than 1 million households.

Share is the percentage of homes with TVs in use tuned to a program.

"It's OK, because Washington and Dallas are two teams in the NFC and are Fox teams," net-a-program.

But the New York ratings for two teams in the Giants' division, the NFC East, was a 3.3. Of course, most New York sports fans were watching the Yankees beat the Athletics 5-3 into a Giants-Stadium parking lot.

The arrest took place in East Rutherford, N.J., several hours before the Jets beat the Miami Dolphins on Sunday. Robinson, a free safety, played in the game.

Police found in the trunk of Robinson's truck a Bushmaster .223 assault rifle, three high-capacity magazines that hold 20 rounds each, and two boxes of ammunition containing 100 rounds each. The rifle and the magazines are illegal under a 1990 New Jersey law that bans the sale and possession of many kinds of automatic weapons.

Robinson could face up to five years in prison if convicted. He was released Sunday night on his own recognizance, and the matter will be turned over to the county prosecutor.

"It was very innocent in that respect & he genuinely forgot (he left) it," said Jimmy Gould, Robinson's agent. "It's an innocent mistake, he made a huge mistake here. He has to deal with his family, the New York Jets organization, my teammates and the many fans of the New York Jets. I have and will continue to cooperate fully with the authorities.

Robinson was entering the players' parking lot at about 8 p.m. with his wife and two daughters when police searched his truck, a procedure in place for players, team and game officials and media since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. State Police Sgt. Al Della Fave said Tuesday. Robinson did not say what he planned to do.

"It is entirely up to the commissioner to have the last say, but they felt it was appropriate at this time," Edwards said. "At this point, they felt OK with it and that's what we planned to do."

Robinson also was arrested in September 2000 for bungling a check to the tax collector. Gould said he was merely a case of Robinson's wife closing a checking account without her husband's knowledge. Robinson subsequently wrote an $80 check against the account.

LSU reaches settlement

By HEIDI CENAC
The Observer (UC-Wa)

Baton Rouge, La.

Five former Louisiana State University athletes will receive $37,500 each from Wednesday’s settlement of a 7-year-old sexual discrimination lawsuit against the University.

The five students sued the University, claiming the LSU Athletic Department procratinated starting women’s varsity soccer and softball teams and did not provide equal treatment to female athletes.

According to court documents, former Athletic Director Joe Dean allegedly referred to one of the women as “boney,” “sweetie” and “cute” in a meeting about starting a soccer team and said the University should consider their request because the players "would look cute running around in their soccer shorts."

Dean retired after the spring 2000 semester.

In February 2000, a court of appeals ruled the University violated Title IX, a federal law that states no person should be excluded from any federally funded program or activity on the basis of gender.

As part of the settlement, the University also will pay more than $1 million to the two law firms representing the students. The attorney for the plaintiffs, Nancy Rafuse, could not be reached before press time.

The payment is a compromise based on a mandate by the federal court after a trial case in 1996. The University’s insurance, administered through the Office of Risk Management, will pay the settlement, according to LSU attorneys.

The settlement is not an admission of liability on the part of the University, but is a compromise to avoid further litigation, said David Bienvenu, an attorney for the University.

"Litigation is expensive, uncertain," he said. "Enough litigation had taken place, and the parties wanted to move forward."

The settlement requires the plaintiffs dismiss the lawsuit and any future claims against the University related to the case.

However, the plaintiffs can seek judicial enforcement if LSU’s commitment to women’s athletics and the University can contest attempts if they are deemed unwarranted.

"We are pleased the University and the plaintiffs were able to find some common ground in this case and settle the case in an amicable fashion," said Chancellor Mark Emmert in a statement Wednesday. "The University has made some significant strides in supporting women’s athletes during the past decade, and everyone connected to LSU is proud of the successes of all the University’s sports, both men’s and women’s."

Chancellor Emmert was out of town Monday and could not provide further comment.

However, Provost Daniel Fogel said the University’s main concern is moving forward.

"It appears to be a reasonable settlement, and we are focused on moving forward," he said.

One of the changes since the lawsuit was the formation of a senior women’s administrator position to oversee the progress and direction of women’s athletics.

Judy Southard, who serves as associate athletic director and senior women’s administrator, said the position also is a liaison between LSU women’s athletics and the NCAA.

"I think over time the University posture has changed dramatically and the provisions necessary to run a top notch women’s athletic program," she said.

Southard said recent successes of the women’s teams show the University’s commitment to women’s sports.

For example, since its creation in 1997, the LSU softball team won five SEC division titles, three SEC championships, two SEC tournament titles and third place at the NCAA College World Series.

Athletic Director Skip Bertman, said he is glad to see the lawsuit close.

"I’m glad it’s behind us," he said. "Of late, we’ve been of pretty good compliance of Title IX.

The University hires government consultants to come to the campus for two to three weeks and interview coaches and administrators to give them advice on what they can do to improve the school’s compliance efforts. Bertman said.

Bertman said LSU has changed since the lawsuit was filed in 1994, and he would not expect a lawsuit of this type at the University now.

"Naturally, nobody should be discriminated against in any sense," he said. "From what I can see, all the ladies are satisfied."

The plaintiffs of the lawsuit were unable to be reached.

Sooners switch to sophomore White

Associated Press

Norman, Okla.

Sophomore quarterback Jason White will start Saturday when No. 2 Oklahoma plays host to Baylor, coach Bob Stoops said Monday.

Junior Nate Hybl had started all six games for the Sooners (6-0, 3-0 Big 12), but has failed to finish the past two. He was knocked out of the Texas game Oct. 6 with an injury to his left shoulder, then was removed from the Kainas game Saturday after a lackluster performance.

In both cases, White played well in Hybl's place.

"Jason has earned the opportunity to be the starter," Stoops said. "He'll be the starter in this game (Baylor) and then we'll take it from there. We have proven we can win with both of them playing." The Associated Press

Stoops tabbed Hybl the starting quarterback in August saying he had outperformed White and made fewer bad plays.

White said he never gave up hope of winning the job from Hybl.

"I wanted to push Nate to make him a better player," he said. "It just so happened that he had the opportunity first, now I'm getting an opportunity.

Horns sting Celtics

Charlotte, N.C.

The short-handed Charlotte Hornets were too much for the Boston Celtics. The Hornets, down three key players because of injury, got 22 points from David Wesley in a 99-88 pre-season victory Tuesday night.

Derrick Coleman continued his push for a starting spot with 13 points and 15 rebounds. Coleman, coming off the worst season of his career, has been in shape and productive throughout the pre-season.

"He was very, very active and very proficient in his rebounding," coach Paul Silas said. "He looked good."

Baron Davis added 13 points and eight assists and P.J. Brown and Lee Nailon each scored 12 points as all five Charlotte starters reached double figures. Jamaal Magloire had 12 points and nine rebounds in a reserve role.

With Jamal Mashburn, Elden Campbell and reserve Matt Bullard all in street clothes, the Hornets used a dominating second quarter to put the Celtics away.

Coleman subsbed for Campbell at center, getting five points and five rebounds in the quarter. Afterward, he said he was more comfortable at power forward, but would have to fill in wherever necessary.

"Guys go down and you just have to step up," Coleman said. "That's what I did, I went in there and tried to be active more than anything.

Boston shot just 2-for-15 in the decisive second quarter, falling behind by as many as 19 before halftime.

The Hornets pushed their lead to 71-47 on Davis' driving layup in the third quarter.

But the Celtics were able to cut into the lead late in the fourth quarter, when Wesley was the only Charlotte starter still on the floor.

Tony Battie's layup with 3:56 to play pulled the Celtics to 89-80, but Charlotte answered with two free throws from Wesley and a three-point play by Magloire to make it 94-82.

Antoine Walker scored 27 points and Milk Palacio added 13 for the Celts, who finished 29-for-79 from the field.

"I think this was a very valuable evening for us," Boston coach Jim O'Brien said. "It showed us what we can do if we don't play physically.

Mashburn, who has missed all four of Charlotte's pre-season games because of a sore left hamstring, is expected to practice for the first time Thursday. Campbell was out with an eye injury and Bullard, one of the Hornets' offseason acquisitions, missed the game with a sore calf.

The game was the first of the year in the Charlotte Coliseum, where several players tore tickets and greeted fans at the turnstiles to promote local interest. Even Coleman participated, stopping to sign autographs before and after his shootaround.

But it did little to entice a crowd — about 6,000 showed up at the 19,925-seat Coliseum to support what is likely a lame-duck franchise.

"It's the pre-season and I guess people are just busy with other things," Coleman said. "Hopefully they'll get their regular-season schedules out and be here to support us then."

It's a long shot, though. Hornets co-owner Ray Woolfirdige met with the mayor of Louisville, Ky., on Monday to begin exploratory negotiations to move the team there next season. The governor of Kentucky has already pledged money to build the team a new arena.

Belles return home to host rival Comets

By LINDSAY MOLLAN
Sports Writer

After two weeks on the road, the Saint Mary’s soccer team returns home on Wednesday to face Olivet College at 3 p.m. Wednesday’s match will be the team’s first home game since Sept. 30.

“I don’t think playing away has affected us,” said head coach Bobby Johnston. “But we’re definitely excited to come back.”

The last two weeks have been difficult for the Belles. They faced two of the top three teams in the league in their last four games. The Belles came away with two wins in those four games. While they do not attribute their defeats to the lack of home field advantage, they admit the weather has played a large role in their season.

The Belles have battled wind and rain in a number of their games and practices.

“The weather today [Tuesday] has sort of thrown off practice,” said Johnston. “The things that I wanted to work on in practice, we’re not being able to do.”

Despite the disruption in the Belles practice, Saint Mary’s is optimistic for Wednesday’s match against Olivet.

“We have a strong rivalry with Olivet,” said senior Katie Robinson. “This will definitely be an attainable game if we play like we know how.”

This game could be a turning point in the Belles’ season. The MIAA league ranks teams according to the points they acquire for wins and ties. Currently, the Belles are ranked sixth in the league with a record of 3-5. A victory on Wednesday afternoon, however, could push the team past fifth place Hope and fourth place Olivet.

Wednesday’s game will be the first time the Belles will go up against the Comets this season. The teams were scheduled to play earlier this season, however, rain forced them to postpone the game.

While the teams have yet to meet, it is safe to say that Wednesday’s match will be close. Both teams have defeated Hope College 1-0 and both are vying for fourth place in the league.

“It’s a game we definitely need to win to meet the goals we’ve set for ourselves,” Robinson said.

Equestrian riders bring home titles

Special to The Observer

Fourteen members of the Equestrian Club competed at Taylor University this weekend. Although the rib did not claim High Point or Reserve honors, it was a strong showing in the IHSA meet as several members claimed first place in their events.

Kristen Jones and Jennifer Pujanas each captured first place in their respective classes in open fences, while Quinn Swiney claimed first in novice fences. Kelly Gentine and Molly Kopacz both garnered firsts in intermediate flats.

Mary Barten placed second in intermediate flats and third in intermediate fences, while Meganne Hoffman took third in intermediate flats and fifth in open fences, as both women placed twice for the Irish.

Sabrina Badger, Lauren Ball, and Callie Willis all placed in the top six in their first competition, holding well for future events. Lauren White is well for taking a tough fall. It is hoped she will be back soon for the Irish.

Cycling

Sean Flynn placed 35th at the Midwest Collegiate Cycling Association Regional championships this weekend in Albany, Ohio. Flynn, the strongest cyclist on the Irish squad, the past three years in fall cross country competition, qualified for the nationals. which will be held in Plattsililk, NY in two weeks.

Men’s rowing

First year coach Kurt Butler’s Men’s Rowing Club performed well in all events this weekend in the Head of the Rock at Rockford, Ill. The Irish entered five boats in the event, with a solid showing by both the varsity and the novice squads. The novice 8 placed third among fifteen boats, while the novice 4 finished 15th among 22 boats. In the varsity events, the lightweight 4’s claimed fifth of eight boats and the heavyweight 8’s claimed a strong fifth among nineteen entries.

The highlight of the day was the varsity heavyweight 4’s third place finish among 23 boats. The Irish crew of Brendan Mackay, Chris Szefc, Ryan Carlson and Kevin Sibbersen crossed the finish line just five seconds behind Minnesota, and two seconds behind Michigan.

Coming events

This weekend, the Men’s Rowing Club will again compete in one of the most prestigious events in all of rowing, Boston’s The Head of the Charles. The Equestrian Club will travel to Indianapolis on Saturday for the season’s second IHSA meet. Notre Dame’s Field Hockey club will play again on Nov. 4 at Richie Field, when it hosts the University of Chicago.

Jordan misses scrimmage

Associated Press

Jordan injured his foot in the Washington Wizards’ exhibition game against Miami on Thursday against the Detroit Pistons in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Jordan revealed the injury when he spoke to the MCI Center crowd at the scrimmage, which was held to honor Washington area police, fire, search and rescue, military and medical employees who assisted in the aftermath of the terrorist attacks.

"Thank you for coming out," Jordan told the crowd. "Unfortunately, I can’t play. I injured my foot on Saturday. It hasn’t gotten better. I don’t want to risk it tonight, even though I would love to play under the circumstances.

Wizards coach Doug Collins said Jordan had not practiced Monday night after complicating of irritation on the top of his foot.

Irish, Hoosiers rekindle intrastate rivalry

By CHRIS FEDERICO
Sports Writer

The lone victory for the Irish came back in 1987 when they topped the Hoosiers 4-3 in overtime in the South Bend. The following year was the only other time the Irish did not suffer a defeat in the series, hanging on to a 1-1 tie.

Tonight, the two teams will rekindle the rivalry when the Irish travel to Bloomington for a matchup with Indiana.

"I'm very happy the series has been started up again," head coach Bobby Clark said. "Indiana is one of the top teams in the country, and that's what we aim to be. There's no better preparation for that than to play teams like them on a regular basis."

The game provides a break from Big East competition for Notre Dame, and gives the team a chance to prove itself against some top-notch competition. Indiana enters tonight's matchup with a 9-0-2 record and ranked sixth in the nation.

"Going into Indiana (University) is no small task," said Clark. "We've got to play well, and we even have to be a little bit lucky. This is an opportunity that we can look at as a gauge to see where we are in terms of the top teams."

The Irish should be challenged by a stellar Indiana defense. The Hoosiers have posted four straight shutouts and have outsORED their opponents this season 26-4. Hoosier goalkeeper Colin Rogers' 8.40 goals against average this season is the lowest in the nation.

Indiana is led offensively by junior forward Pat Noonan, who is tied for first in the Big Ten this season with 24 points.

Clark, the first-year head coach of the Irish, relishes the opportunity to play such talented non-conference competition. These games give Notre Dame a chance to improve both on offense and defense against highly touted teams.

"We're in a great position," Clark said. "We've certainly got nothing to worry about, because this is a win-win situation for us."

The Irish take the field against the Hoosiers tonight at 7 p.m.

Belles display 'good energy' in loss to Adrian

By KATIE McVOY
Associate Sports Editor

It wasn't a win on Tuesday night, but for a team that has been struggling just to stay focused on the game, the Belles four-game loss (30-21, 24-30, 22-30, 20-30) to Bulldogs of Adrian was almost as good.

"We were just really here," head coach Julie Schroeder-Biek said. "We came to play, we came to win. No, we did not pull out the win but we had really good energy, good communication going."

The Belles have lost their six games due, in the most part, to poor communication skills that were allowing the ball to fall. "Before, no one was calling the ball," Schroeder-Biek said.

"The first game they couldn't catch us," Schroeder-Biek said. "We came out so strong and we stayed strong."

The last several matches, the Belles have had one solid player who has led the team. On Tuesday, they played as a whole. "What they have is a history," Schroeder-Biek said. "Elise [Bipright] and Elizabeth [Albert] in double digit kills and right behind them are Jo [Lefevre] and Alison [Shevik]."

Albert led the team with 11 kills with only five errors and 15 digs. Joining in the offensive effort were Bipright, who marked 13 kills with only three errors and Lefevre, who finished the evening with nine kills.

The mental game was key for the Belles as well.

"Mentally we were more in it," Schroeder-Biek said. "We've been talking about it and I feel like everyone came to play. They came focused and gave what they have."

Despite the Belles strong play, they still couldn't bring home the victory. The Bulldogs, who have showed remarkable improvement this season, continued their win streak. They are 8-4 this season already, compared to a 4-10 finish last year.

"What they have is a history," Schroeder-Biek said. "They're doing really well this season and I think they have the confidence, that we're just now gaining. I think that was the difference."

After winning the first game, the Belles had nothing to worry about, because this was errors that caused Saint Mary's downfall. In a reversal of the recent team history, over-aggressive play led to some hitting errors.

"Some were overaggressive errors where two people were calling the ball and neither person was backing off," Schroeder-Biek said.

With the game increasing team confidence, Saint Mary's is hoping to springboard to a strong finish to the season.

"Our goal now is to not go backwards," Schroeder-Biek said. "To build for the future."

Irish finish 9th, lose their luggage

By JOE LINDSEY
Sports Writer

The 30 mile-per-hour wind the Notre Dame women's golf team endured during practice rounds before the Marilyn Smith/Sunflower Invitational proved to be just the beginning of an odd string of events.

Monday's two rounds were not played due to torrential rain at the Alvamar Golf Course in Lawrence, Kan., the Irish almost missed their plane home, and the airline lost their luggage in Detroit.

In fact, Notre Dame did not even know that it finished in ninth place after the only round of play on Tuesday in a field of 17 teams until late Tuesday because the team was in such a rush to make their flight. The Irish finished with a 18-hole total of 325, and ended up 19 strokes behind Oklahoma, the tournament champion.

Notre Dame's best performance, an odd string of events. According to Lotta, the competition was average, and not nearly as tough as it had been during last week the Irish finished last in a field of 19.

"Everyone probably thinks they could have played better," Taibl said. "Usually if you have a bad round the Irish finish last for the Irish last week, shot a score of 84 to tie for 48th overall with sophomore teammate Rebecca Rogers.

While the Irish are not entirely pleased with their play, they are also angry about something else. "We almost missed our plane (and then) our luggage got lost in Detroit," Lotta said. "We are a little mad about that one."

According to Lotta, the tournament was average, and not nearly as tough as it had been during last week's Shoot-out at the Legends Tournament in Franklin, Ind. Last week the Irish finished last in a field of 19.

"Ninth place isn't bad," said Taibl. "We just look to improve in the next tournament."

EUGENIA LAST

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: Arthur Miller, George W. Bush, Michael McKeon, Margot Kidder

Happy Birthday! Much can be accomplished this year if you reflect on and act on your house direction. You can gain ground by being thoughtful and respectful of those you deal with on a daily basis. Your opinions are changing, and this added awareness should lead you in the right direction. Your numbers are 1, 3, 7, 8, 22, 28, 36.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): With all that nervous energy you won’t know whether to laugh or cry. You need an outlet. Join a group offering both creative and physical activity, and you'll be right back on track.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can accomplish just as much over the phone today. Being indirect about your personal life could damage your reputation. Listen to others for an enlightening discovery.

TROJAN HORSE (May 21-June 20): Your opinions are changing, and this added awareness should lead you in the right direction. Your numbers are 1, 3, 7, 8, 22, 28, 36.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Expect misunderstandings to clear up if you talk to each individual openly. For a wonderful experience and rich inner discovery, plant a tree.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Spend time sorting through the information you’ve been collecting. Travel will lead to powerful new visions and relationships. Go after your goals.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your energy level is high, and fitness activities will have good results. Don’t hesitate if a good investment opportunity unfolds. You can make money if you do your homework.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Deception is probable, especially if you're trapped in a triangle or argument. Information may be biased. You will be heard if you allow your imagination to lead you forward. The more you use your brain, the more you'll be known. Don't do it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go to the root of any problem. Misunderstandings could occur if you have been vapid or too aggressive. Prepare to set things straight. Don’t let anyone take advantage of your latest.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Think for yourself on financial matters. Don't follow a friend into a bad-deal scheme, or your friendship may dissolve as a result. 21 "waste to pass on this note."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take a break. Travel will not be your safest bet. Don't believe what a fast-talking associate tells you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone at home may try to pull you around andike advantage. Stop up for yourself before you’re too upset to be rational. State your case clearly and absolutely.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Expect problems at work. You’ll be an awkward position if someone asks you to withhold information. Be diplomatic in handling those you deal with on a daily basis.

Birthday Baby: Your creative edge will enable you to enjoy things differently. You are destined for a very special and extremely charming. You are dedicated and devoted to your interests.

Set down in Iowa

By NOAH AMSTADTER

Facing a ranked opponent for the fourth time this season, the No. 19 Notre Dame volleyball team fell to No. 16 Northern Iowa in four games Tuesday night (30-26, 14-30, 16-30, 23-30). The game was played in front of 1,182 fans at Bettendorf High School in the Quad Cities.

The loss drops Notre Dame’s season record to 12-4 overall, 0-4 in the Big East. The Irish next take the court Oct. 23 when they take on Kentucky in the NCAA Tournament.

The one positive for the Irish was the play of senior Malinda Goralski. Goralski totaled 11 kills for the Irish to only two hitting errors for a .529 percentage while scoring only 14 points. The one positive for the Irish was the play of senior Malinda Goralski. Goralski totaled 11 kills for the Irish to only two hitting errors for a .529 percentage while scoring only 14 points.

The loss to No. 16 Northern Iowa. Goralski leads Irish with 11 kills, 8 blocks

Notre Dame started off strong in the match’s first game, winning 30-26 while holding Northern Iowa to .135 hitting. But as the match went on, the home state team regrouped, while the Irish self-destructed.

In game two, the Irish totaled only six kills while committing 12 hitting errors for a .194 percentage while scoring only 14 points. The woes continued in the third game, as the Irish fell 30-16. At match’s end, Notre Dame returned to positive hitting, pulling within seven by the end of the fourth game.

But the nation’s No. 16 team was too much for the Irish. Kim McCaffrey led the Panthers with 18 kills while Kim Kester added 16 kills.

The Irish next take the court Oct. 25 when they take on Kentucky in Lexington.

FOOTBALL

Palmer develops into Southern Cal’s leader

By MIKE CONNOLLY
Sports Writer

When Irish head coach Bob Davie looks at Southern Cal quarterback Carson Palmer, he sees what Carlyle Holiday could become.

Palmer, a third-year starter for USC, has developed into the veteran leader that Davie hopes Holiday will someday be.

“While Holiday’s best days are still ahead of him, Palmer has developed into the top quarterback that he was predicted to become when he was recruited in high school,” Davie said. “Certainly Carlyle is sitting here with four years of football. With some good fortune, he can be one heck of a player.”

Davie said. “He really has put back-to-back weeks of solid ball for us.” Although Palmer ranks third all-time in total offense and completions at USC, he is also interception prone. Last year he tied a Southern Cal single-season record with 18 interceptions. His 33 career interceptions place him second behind Rodney Peete on Southern Cal’s all-time list.

Nevertheless, he is still a candidate for the Davey O’Brien award given to the top quarterback in the country. While his arm strength and passing abilities are unquestioned, Palmer’s hidden value lies in his mobility. He won’t run the option like Holiday, but he does move around the pocket well.

The combination of his strength and mobility make him very attractive to NFL teams, according to Davie.

“I talked to [Packers head coach] Mike Sherman last night ... he said ‘People really like him in the NFL because he is mobile. He has such a strong arm,’” Davie said.

We Are Called
Acting Locally and Thinking Globally

When asked to write a reflection on “thinking globally and acting locally,” it would be hard not to focus on the events of the Tuesday in September, and the response since then. An overwhelming support of every American has swept this country. My hope for this nation, though, is that this renewed sense of patriotism will take the form of global patriotism, standing up against violence, racism, oppression and terrorism worldwide. We must work for global justice and fight oppression wherever it occurs, indiscriminate of boundaries of race, religion, nationality, or/and ethnicity. We must stand together with all victims of terrorism, bringing those responsible to justice within the standards of international law.

In my eyes, patriotism means standing up for all humanity, not only those defined by borders. We are able to practice this patriotism within our local South Bend community. Local patriotism first calls us to awareness of our immediate neighbors. My hope for our local community is that we move beyond this recognition to action, patriotism’s second step. This local, patriotic action places us deeper within the community, working with and listening to others to meet together our shared needs and concerns.

Throughout my four years at Notre Dame, I have lived with an Ecuadorian for two years and a Panamanian for a year. I am truly amazed at the amount of knowledge they possess on the United States of America, our government, our policies, our culture, our people. I, on the other hand, knew upon coming to Notre Dame that the capital of Ecuador was Quito and that Panama had a canal. It is possible that I am the only, ignorant American out there, but I don’t think that is the case. The acts on American soil have taught us to be aware of global issues. I was one of many unaware citizens in regards to the Taliban and U.S. relations with the Middle East. Over the next couple of months, in this time of war, I invite all to read up on global issues and become more educated on U.S. involvements and policies in foreign lands.

So now that we are thinking globally, how do we use this to act locally? Is it possible to integrate the two? Of course it is. Quite simply, as Catholics, as Christians, as human beings alike, our duty is to love and care for one another. The Center for Social Concerns (CSC), as stated so simply in its mission statement, is “...calling us all to action for a more just and humane world.” I encountered this calling freshman year, but to tell you the truth, I didn’t know what I was supposed to do with it. Who needs me? What should I be doing? Where should I be doing it? Am I ready for the struggles I may find? I am sure most, if not all, have questioned similarly. So, sophomore year rolled around, and I finally made my first entrance into the CSC. I decided to go to Appalachia for spring break and didn’t get enough of the action. I spent a summer at an orphanage for physically and mentally challenged children in central Mexico through the International Summer Service Learning Program, and still felt the calling. I tried my luck with a domestic Summer Service Program Internship and was still left searching for more. I have been involved with a handful of organizations in the South Bend area also, yet Jesus still wants more. No matter the deed, big or small, Jesus is present. It is important to reiterate the passage “What you do unto the least of my brothers and sisters, you do unto me.” We have all heard it one thousand times, but in serving others, you are serving God and God’s creation. It is through my faith in Jesus Christ that I am called to be present in the lives of others.

HELPING HANDS PROGRAM

The Helping Hands Program was established in 1999 to enhance the infrastructure of Notre Dame students' tutoring efforts in the South Bend community. Students who serve as lead tutors oversee other student tutors at select area schools and community centers, working directly with the site contacts to improve the quality of tutoring offered and to enhance the experience for all involved.

As a theology professor here told me, “to do good has an attraction to it, and after you do good once, you want more and more.” Trust me, you will get hooked! It will never fill you up! On the one hand, it is frustrating to never be fully satisfied in serving others. However, on the other, as Archbishop Oscar Romero in his inspiring “Prophets of a Future Not Our Own” states, “We cannot do everything, and there is a sense of liberation in realizing that. This enables us to do something, and to do it very well. It may be incomplete, but it is a beginning, a step along the way, an opportunity for the Lord’s grace to enter and do the rest.”

It does not require something huge. Although less visible, the little things are so important; they add up into something beautiful. It is singing at the nursing home, translating at the hospital, and playing ball with underprivileged kids. It is serving food at the food kitchen, opening a door for an elder, and talking to the struggling friend down the hall. All serve to better humanity! How beautiful is that!

In conclusion, in the midst of fear and violence worldwide, we as human beings are called to act locally and think globally to best love, respect, and serve others. We must work to create understanding and peace, not vengeance and hatred, in our calling for a more just and humane world. We must stand in solidarity with all of humanity—to demand the end of all forms of oppression and violence, and a beginning to true justice and peace.

Ben Powers is a senior SCPP/Spanish major in Alumni Hall. He plans on serving somebody somewhere next year before heading off to medical school. Contact him at Powers.33@nd.edu for further conversation.

WELCOME

Hospitality is an important part of the Center’s work on campus. Center hospitality includes a coffeehouse and kitchen, a large multi-purpose room, seminar rooms, a research room, a library, a reflection room, and vehicles. These facilities are available for use by approved student and community groups. Contact the Center at 631-5293 to reserve rooms for lectures, films, liturgues, meals, other gatherings, and to inquire about vehicle use.
