Students confront tailgating policy

Student body president, Brooke Norton, (left) and senior Molly Norton discuss student tailgating and the University's alcohol policy at a town hall meeting Tuesday night sponsored by student government.

By SCOTT BRODFUEHRER

Three students spoke out about student tailgating and the University's alcohol policy at a town hall meeting Tuesday night sponsored by Student Government.

One student attributed the volume of students who tailgate to the fact that there are no activities geared toward students on game days and while all of the students voiced concern about students being cited who were not drinking had been cited.

"I think that a lot of the underclassmen were not drinking had been cited. "Norton said she recognized there are activities on game days, such as the College of Arts and Letters lecture series and the band's concert on the steps, but said these activities are not attractive to students. She said that instead of locking the entrances to the dorms on game days, officials should encourage activities in the dorms, such as an open house.

A junior from Carroll Hall, who did not want to be identified by name, said he was concerned by the fact that students who were not drinking had been cited.

"If you just stop by to talk to friends and a cop comes by, he could write you up. Even though you didn't organize the tailgate, provide alcohol or drink, you could still be cited," he said.

All agreed that the threat of citation would encourage underage students to stay on campus, but the dorms are pretty much all shut down and locked up, which encourages students to go to the fields and tailgate." Norton said she recognized there are activities on game days, such as the College of Arts and Letters lecture series and the band's concert on the steps, but said these activities are not attractive to students. She said that instead of locking the entrances to the dorms on game days, officials should encourage activities in the dorms, such as an open house.

A junior from Carroll Hall, who did not want to be identified by name, said he was concerned by the fact that students who were not drinking had been cited.

"If you just stop by to talk to friends and a cop comes by, he could write you up. Even though you didn't organize the tailgate, provide alcohol or drink, you could still be cited," he said.

All agreed that the threat of citation would encourage underage students to stay on campus, but the dorms are pretty much all shut down and locked up, which encourages students to go to the fields and tailgate." Norton said she recognized there are activities on game days, such as the College of Arts and Letters lecture series and the band's concert on the steps, but said these activities are not attractive to students. She said that instead of locking the entrances to the dorms on game days, officials should encourage activities in the dorms, such as an open house.

A junior from Carroll Hall, who did not want to be identified by name, said he was concerned by the fact that students who were not drinking had been cited.

"If you just stop by to talk to friends and a cop comes by, he could write you up. Even though you didn't organize the tailgate, provide alcohol or drink, you could still be cited," he said.

All agreed that the threat of citation would encourage underage students to stay on campus, but the dorms are pretty much all shut down and locked up, which encourages students to go to the fields and tailgate." Norton said she recognized there are activities on game days, such as the College of Arts and Letters lecture series and the band's concert on the steps, but said these activities are not attractive to students. She said that instead of locking the entrances to the dorms on game days, officials should encourage activities in the dorms, such as an open house.

A junior from Carroll Hall, who did not want to be identified by name, said he was concerned by the fact that students who were not drinking had been cited.

"If you just stop by to talk to friends and a cop comes by, he could write you up. Even though you didn't organize the tailgate, provide alcohol or drink, you could still be cited," he said.

All agreed that the threat of citation would encourage underage students to stay on campus, but the dorms are pretty much all shut down and locked up, which encourages students to go to the fields and tailgate." Norton said she recognized there are activities on game days, such as the College of Arts and Letters lecture series and the band's concert on the steps, but said these activities are not attractive to students. She said that instead of locking the entrances to the dorms on game days, officials should encourage activities in the dorms, such as an open house.

A junior from Carroll Hall, who did not want to be identified by name, said he was concerned by the fact that students who were not drinking had been cited.

"If you just stop by to talk to friends and a cop comes by, he could write you up. Even though you didn't organize the tailgate, provide alcohol or drink, you could still be cited," he said.

All agreed that the threat of citation would encourage underage students to stay on campus, but the dorms are pretty much all shut down and locked up, which encourages students to go to the fields and tailgate." Norton said she recognized there are activities on game days, such as the College of Arts and Letters lecture series and the band's concert on the steps, but said these activities are not attractive to students. She said that instead of locking the entrances to the dorms on game days, officials should encourage activities in the dorms, such as an open house.

A junior from Carroll Hall, who did not want to be identified by name, said he was concerned by the fact that students who were not drinking had been cited.

"If you just stop by to talk to friends and a cop comes by, he could write you up. Even though you didn't organize the tailgate, provide alcohol or drink, you could still be cited," he said.

All agreed that the threat of citation would encourage underage students to stay on campus, but the dorms are pretty much all shut down and locked up, which encourages students to go to the fields and tailgate." Norton said she recognized there are activities on game days, such as the College of Arts and Letters lecture series and the band's concert on the steps, but said these activities are not attractive to students. She said that instead of locking the entrances to the dorms on game days, officials should encourage activities in the dorms, such as an open house.

A junior from Carroll Hall, who did not want to be identified by name, said he was concerned by the fact that students who were not drinking had been cited.

"If you just stop by to talk to friends and a cop comes by, he could write you up. Even though you didn't organize the tailgate, provide alcohol or drink, you could still be cited," he said.

All agreed that the threat of citation would encourage underage students to stay on campus, but the dorms are pretty much all shut down and locked up, which encourages students to go to the fields and tailgate." Norton said she recognized there are activities on game days, such as the College of Arts and Letters lecture series and the band's concert on the steps, but said these activities are not attractive to students. She said that instead of locking the entrances to the dorms on game days, officials should encourage activities in the dorms, such as an open house.

A junior from Carroll Hall, who did not want to be identified by name, said he was concerned by the fact that students who were not drinking had been cited.

"If you just stop by to talk to friends and a cop comes by, he could write you up. Even though you didn't organize the tailgate, provide alcohol or drink, you could still be cited," he said.

All agreed that the threat of citation would encourage underage students to stay on campus, but the dorms are pretty much all shut down and locked up, which encourages students to go to the fields and tailgate." Norton said she recognized there are activities on game days, such as the College of Arts and Letters lecture series and the band's concert on the steps, but said these activities are not attractive to students. She said that instead of locking the entrances to the dorms on game days, officials should encourage activities in the dorms, such as an open house.

A junior from Carroll Hall, who did not want to be identified by name, said he was concerned by the fact that students who were not drinking had been cited.

"If you just stop by to talk to friends and a cop comes by, he could write you up. Even though you didn't organize the tailgate, provide alcohol or drink, you could still be cited," he said.

All agreed that the threat of citation would encourage underage students to stay on campus, but the dorms are pretty much all shut down and locked up, which encourages students to go to the fields and tailgate." Norton said she recognized there are activities on game days, such as the College of Arts and Letters lecture series and the band's concert on the steps, but said these activities are not attractive to students. She said that instead of locking the entrances to the dorms on game days, officials should encourage activities in the dorms, such as an open house.

A junior from Carroll Hall, who did not want to be identified by name, said he was concerned by the fact that students who were not drinking had been cited.

"If you just stop by to talk to friends and a cop comes by, he could write you up. Even though you didn't organize the tailgate, provide alcohol or drink, you could still be cited," he said.

All agreed that the threat of citation would encourage underage students to stay on campus, but the dorms are pretty much all shut down and locked up, which encourages students to go to the fields and tailgate." Norton said she recognized there are activities on game days, such as the College of Arts and Letters lecture series and the band's concert on the steps, but said these activities are not attractive to students. She said that instead of locking the entrances to the dorms on game days, officials should encourage activities in the dorms, such as an open house.
Inside Column

Comprehending a complex world

It’s that time of the year again. DARTing starts today and it’s time to make some choices. For seniors and juniors it means taking our final required classes, taking the MCATs, LSATs and GREs while looking for graduate school or a place in the workforce. For sophomores and freshmen it means making decisions that will impact the rest of your studies at Notre Dame.

Deciding on a major along with what classes to take ultimately goes hand in hand. Choosing your classes should revolve around your major, but use your interests too. For example, if you’re a history major and you need a history elective you could take Medieval Spanish: Land of 3 Religions or 20th Century German History.

Every major has its benefits, but I particularly like anthropology. Anthropology caught my eye because of its diversity and ability to encompass all aspects of humanity. There are four general areas of concentration within anthropology: archaeological, biological, cultural and linguistic. As a major, I’ve had the opportunities to study everything from making stone tools and learning about human evolution to studying religion, language, and culture. But anthropology isn’t entirely about digging up ancient bones. Anthropology looks at the social, ecological, political, religious, artistic, economic and technical dimensions of humanity.

So, as an anthropology major, you can take your interests and run with them. For me, my interest lies in languages—acquisition, development and language families. As a major, I’ve been able to take courses that relate to language, whether directly, like Intro to Linguistic Anthropology, or indirectly, as in a cultural course like Societies and Cultures of South Asia. By taking several language courses over the past two years, I’ve been able to maneuver my electives to incorporate them with my interests.

Anthropology at Notre Dame began its first academic year as an independent department in 1981 with six faculty and 12 students. At the end of the 2000-2001 academic year, the Department of Anthropology had 15 full time faculty, four faculty sharing joint appointments, two visiting research fellows and 310 students majoring or minoring in anthropology. In the last two decades the department has developed into a major academic and development unparalleded in any other university.

I’ve learned a lot as an anthropology major. I plan on taking the things I’ve learned in anthropology and applying them to my intended graduate school study in political science. Anthropology accomplished what other humanities majors could not—it offered me the opportunity to study languages for the purpose of comparative analysis. For you, maybe it could be the study of people in cities to see how population density affects the economy. Or a study of how relationships between a mother and child affect the development and growth of the child socially and physically.

Find out. Take that step. Indulge your interests.

Angela Campos
Lab Tech

This Week at Notre Dame/Saint Mary’s

Thursday

Lecture: Education on peace and war discussions, Morrissy, Keenan/Stanford, Pl.
McGilln, 7:30 - 9 p.m.

Friday

Bingo: ND room in LaFortune, 11 - 1:30 a.m.

Saturday

Open Karaoke: LaFortune Huddle, 10 - 11:30 p.m.

Sunday

Performance: ND faculty chamber music, Annenberg Auditorium in the Seile, 2 p.m.

Beyond Campus

Lecture Fund accuses paper of biased coverage

WASHINGTON D.C.

The Georgetown University Lecture Fund has submitted an editorial letter to the Washington Times in response to its article covering former President Bill Clinton’s speech at Georgetown last Wednesday. The article “both misrepresented factual aspects of the events and misrepresented Clinton’s remarks,” according to the Lecture Fund.

The Nov. 8 article, “Clinton Calls U.S. Debt to Past,” stated that the former president said America is “paying a price today” for slavery and looked at “the other way when a significant number of Native Americans were disposed and killed.” It focused on several statements by the former president that referred to America’s history of terrorism against slaves and Native Americans.

The Lecture Fund’s letter asserts that “The Times article demonstrated a different focus compared to other nationally reputed news sources such as the Associated Press and CNN. ‘I don’t think (Clinton’s) intention was to say we’re paying a price for past terrorist acts today,’” Andrew Konechusky, Lecture Fund vice president for external affairs said. Konechusky said he believed that by referring to slavery and other historical events, Clinton intended to place the events of Sept. 11 in an historical context of terrorism.

“The speech had a progression of terrorism and it’s a history, we have always gotten through it, we will pull through this and we can’t be paralyzed by fear,” Konechusky said.

The Times, a traditionally conservative paper, published the Lecture Fund’s editorial letter Tuesday.

George Washington University’s newspaper The Hatchet has also submitted an editorial letter to The Times criticizing what it saw to be the reporter’s personal bias and misinterpretation of the former president’s remarks.

Yale University

Online alliance reaches crossroads

NEW HAVEN, Conn.

The announcement last September seemed innocuous enough: Oxford, Princeton, Stanford and Yale Universities wanted to offer each other $3 million to develop online courses for alumni, with vague promises of expanding the number of courses for the public. But the plan has generated mixed reactions from everyone involved, leading to questions about the future of the project.

The plan was announced last year by President Richard Levin, who said the schools wanted to use the Web to offer courses more efficiently. The schools saw the project as a way to attract more students while saving money on traditional classrooms.

The schools have sent letters to alumni asking them to consider paying $300 to enroll in a course. But some alumni have been hesitant, saying they would rather pay for materials and tests instead of paying for the courses.

As the project enters its second year, questions about the future of the online alliance have been raised. Some members have expressed concerns about the project’s sustainability and its impact on traditional classroom instruction.

Yale University has said it will continue to offer courses online, but it is unsure of the long-term viability of the project.

Dartmouth University

Authorities continue investigation

HANOVER, N.H.

While heightened tension remains on Dartmouth College’s campus following last Saturday’s attacks on two female students, tight-lipped Hanover Police Department officials said the investigation is progressing.

The Department has not released any details about the attack in front of Streetier Hall, according to Capt. Chris O’Connor, “because it may prejudice the investigation.” Lt. Fred Pion said the Department’s detective division is heading the case, which is being treated as an assault investigation. According to O’Connor, Moran’s interviews have been fruitful. “I think he feels right now, after each interview or after information is learned, it leads him down another road.” When asked if the Department suspected the assailant to be a Dartmouth student, O’Connor said, “We have no reason to believe it is or is not.” Student records have not been requested to aid in identifying suspects.

O’Connor said it is “pretty hard to say,” whether the Department will need to request records from the College.

Local Weather

5 Day South Bend Forecast

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Day</th>
<th>High</th>
<th>Low</th>
<th>Chance of Rain</th>
<th>Precipitation</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Thursday</td>
<td>66</td>
<td>50</td>
<td>20%</td>
<td>.33</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Friday</td>
<td>65</td>
<td>45</td>
<td>30%</td>
<td>.46</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Saturday</td>
<td>66</td>
<td>46</td>
<td>40%</td>
<td>.36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sunday</td>
<td>64</td>
<td>41</td>
<td>20%</td>
<td>.22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Monday</td>
<td>57</td>
<td>35</td>
<td>10%</td>
<td>.13</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

National Weather

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>City</th>
<th>High</th>
<th>Low</th>
<th>Chance of Rain</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Athens</td>
<td>71</td>
<td>46</td>
<td>30%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baltimore</td>
<td>76</td>
<td>44</td>
<td>20%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boston</td>
<td>67</td>
<td>46</td>
<td>10%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chicago</td>
<td>64</td>
<td>46</td>
<td>30%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Houston</td>
<td>77</td>
<td>42</td>
<td>10%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The Observer • INSIDE

Wednesday, November 14, 2001

page 2

The Observer (USPS 599 2-4000) is published Monday through Friday except during exam and vacation periods. The Observer is a member of the Associated Press. All reproductions are owned.
Christianity and Islam endorse "of justice," he said. "A life in Print," which he published in 2001 and discussed in a lecture in McKenna Hall Tuesday afternoon.

"He was a genius," Ciccone said of Royko, who wrote humorous columns for the Chicago Daily News, the Chicago Sun-Times and the Chicago Tribune. Royko was syndicated in more than 600 newspapers. He began his journalism career in the 1950s and wrote until his death in 1997.

"We have a lot of geniuses running around newsrooms, but not many of them have the impact Royko did," Ciccone said.

Ciccone highlighted Royko's ability to tell a story that distinguished him from all other columnists, said Ciccone.

"That was the kind of perspective you didn't get anywhere else and you don't get today," said Ciccone.

Most of all, Ciccone praised Royko's "view on the role of newspapers. He said the columnist "started to write about what the political system does to little people." Royko, Ciccone said, frequently warned that "A newspaper does not have to worry about taking care of Chicago" (or Richard Daley) or other politicians. Trust me, they'll do well on their own. What a newspaper does have to worry about is the guy getting screwed." Royko: A Life in Print" is published in 2001.

Contact Sheila Flynn at Sflynn2@nd.edu.

Call 259-1000 for more details.

Molti Bene
2 minutes
from Campus
Cold Weather Experts
Call 359-1000 for more details
Policy

continued from page 1

Brooke Norton and chief of staff Jonathan Jorissen attribute the low turnout to the lack of free time students have along with poor publicity of the event.

"It's really hard to get students at activities and events, even ones like these where they can give their opinion," said Norton.

"A lot of it was our fault. The date jumped around a lot and thus was a busy night, but we didn't want to push it back past the last home game," said Brooke Norton.

The meeting opened with Brooke Norton describing why the University has decided to enforce the alcohol policy more strictly on game days, including extreme drunkenness, students vomiting, public urination, and complaints from alumni and other visitors about student behavior.

"The hard part is to know exactly where the line (of enforcement) is drawn every game and it is our responsibility to get feedback from students," Brooke Norton said.

She said the feedback would be given to assistant vice president for Student Life Bill Kirk and vice president for Student Affairs Father Mark Poorman.

"They are always looking for student feedback. We told them we were going to hold a town hall meeting and they said they were interested in receiving the minutes from the meeting," said Brooke Norton.

Jorissen said he hoped the feedback would help to improve the way the alcohol policy is enforced.

"They know the tactics of enforcement aren't crystal clear, but hopefully feedback from students will help to improve that," he said.

Brooke Norton said the feedback about the need for pre-game events for students would be given to her successor and the Hall President's Council, which has some continuity from year to year.

Contact Scott Brodfuehrer at brodfuehrer.1@nd.edu.

---

Interns

continued from page 1

business. The panel suggested checking with your professors or consulting the counseling and career development center for books to guide you.

Career fairs are essential to attendees seeking an Internship.

"Boast, sell yourself," said Melissa Powell. "Show that you are in demand in the company you are interested in. Being prepared does not ensure a good interview, but the panel was encouraged by the way the alcohol policy is enforced."

"They know the tactics of enforcement aren't crystal clear, but hopefully feedback from students will help to improve that," he said.

Brooke Norton said the feedback about the need for pre-game events for students would be given to her successor and the Hall President's Council, which has some continuity from year to year.

Contact Scott Brodfuehrer at brodfuehrer.1@nd.edu.

---

Health

continued from page 1

then decided to go to the bar, which Carson said is typical of what inspectors have done in the past.

"I hope that in the future the University Club will have a hostess present so that our staff members don't have to go looking for someone just to announce their presence," said Tucker. "They are not supposed to be serving to the public will be our responsibility to get feedback from students," Brooke Norton said.

She said the feedback would be given to assistant vice president for Student Life Bill Kirk and vice president for Student Affairs Father Mark Poorman.

"A lot of it was our fault. The date jumped around a lot and thus was a busy night, but we didn't want to push it back past the last home game," said Brooke Norton.

The meeting opened with Brooke Norton describing why the University has decided to enforce the alcohol policy more strictly on game days, including extreme drunkenness, students vomiting, public urination, and complaints from alumni and other visitors about student behavior.

"The hard part is to know exactly where the line (of enforcement) is drawn every game and it is our responsibility to get feedback from students," Brooke Norton said.

She said the feedback would be given to assistant vice president for Student Life Bill Kirk and vice president for Student Affairs Father Mark Poorman.

"They are always looking for student feedback. We told them we were going to hold a town hall meeting and they said they were interested in receiving the minutes from the meeting," said Brooke Norton.

Jorissen said he hoped the feedback would help to improve the way the alcohol policy is enforced.

"They know the tactics of enforcement aren't crystal clear, but hopefully feedback from students will help to improve that," he said.

Brooke Norton said the feedback about the need for pre-game events for students would be given to her successor and the Hall President's Council, which has some continuity from year to year.

Contact Scott Brodfuehrer at brodfuehrer.1@nd.edu.

---

Interns

continued from page 1

Career fairs provide a means to obtain an interview with the company your interested in. Being prepared for questions they might ask as well as questions you have to ask them is a key part of having a successful interview. The panel gave sample interview questions and scenarios.

"They are not looking for an exact answer," said Kristie Miller. "They are looking to see how clearly you can communicate your thoughts.

Being prepared does not ensure a good interview, but the panel was encouraged by the way the alcohol policy is enforced."

"They know the tactics of enforcement aren't crystal clear, but hopefully feedback from students will help to improve that," he said.

Brooke Norton said the feedback about the need for pre-game events for students would be given to her successor and the Hall President's Council, which has some continuity from year to year.

Contact Scott Brodfuehrer at brodfuehrer.1@nd.edu.

---

Health

continued from page 1

then decided to go to the bar, which Carson said is typical of what inspectors have done in the past.

"I hope that in the future the University Club will have a hostess present so that our staff members don't have to go looking for someone just to announce their presence," said Tucker. "They are not supposed to be serving to the public will be our responsibility to get feedback from students," Brooke Norton said.

---

Feds question male foreigners

WASHINGTON

Investigators are knocking on the doors of Middle Eastern visitors to the United States and looking through the files of foreign students as part of a widening terrorism inquiry, sparking complaints about racial profiling.

State and federal agents are questioning 5,000 male foreigners from Middle Eastern and other countries, and investigators have contacted more than 200 colleges and universities seeking information about foreign students from Arab and Muslim nations.

Authorities say those sought for questioning are not suspects but are wanted for voluntary interviews because investigators believe they might have information that will help police find those who planned the Sept. 11 attacks and others planning new attacks.

They are being targeted because they fit the criteria of people who might have knowledge of foreign-based terrorists and not because of their nationality, according to a Justice Department memo.

Note will be forced to submit to interviews; those who choose to speak to investigators can have lawyers present. Civil rights groups say investigators are threatening the basic privacy rights of people from particular ethnic groups.

"We have serious concerns about what appears to be a dragnet approach rather than a targeted investigation," said Lucas Guttenberg, head of the American Civil Liberties Union's immigration rights project.

Only those who traveled from nations that have been way stations for terrorists in Osama bin Laden's al-Qaeda network were placed on the list, said Justice Department spokesman Mindy Tucker, who declined to specify which countries were targeted.

"We looked at the country they entered them from. We're not looking at their nationality," said Tucker. "As a result of our new expectations, they are simply people who want to talk to because they may have helpful information."

They will be asked whether they have heard anyone advocating terrorism or violence, according to a Justice Department memo. Tucker said they would not be questioned about their religious beliefs and practices.

Law enforcement sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said over 20 countries are targeted, including Middle Eastern and European countries. The 19 hijackers and their accomplices are believed to have plotted the attacks in Germany and England and suspected ring leader Mohammed Atta traveled to Spain and the Czech Republic. Some of the hijackers entered the United States from Europe and some obtained visas in Saudi Arabia.

Late last week, the Justice Department began distributing names of male foreigners to federal and state anti-terrorism task forces around the country.

Contact Helena Payne at payne.30@nd.edu.

---

Latino Studies

presents

Leadership from a Latino(a) Perspective: Preliminary Findings of the National Latino Leadership Survey Project

Reverend Andrew Hernandez

St. Mary's University, San Antonio TX

7 PM November 14, 2001

141 DeBartolo Hall

reception to follow
World News Briefs

Egypt defies U.S. order: Egypt's foreign minister said his country is not obliged to follow U.S. directives to freeze assets of suspected terrorist groups. In an interview published on Tuesday, Ahmed Maher said the United States alone is bound by lists it has produced to single out groups or individuals as being linked to terrorism.

Scottish official admits affair: The sole candidate for Scotland's top political post acknowledged Tuesday that he's had an extramarital affair. Education Minister Jack McConnell, who appears certain to succeed Henry McLeish as head of the Scottish parliament, said he had been unfaithful to his wife Bridget seven years ago. "It caused significant hurt to a number of people and I regret that very much to this day," McConnell said.

National News Briefs

AA 587 engine deemed 'unsafe': Federal safety officials concluded a month ago there was an unsafe condition in the type of engine that powered an airliner that crashed in New York City. Investigators were treating Monday's crash of American Airlines Flight 587 as an accident. The chief reason, said George Black, an investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board, is the plane's cockpit voice recorder. "It is absent of any extraneous noises or acts that we would not associate with a normal aviation environment," Black said.

Jury meets in tobacco case: Jurors began deliberating a class-action lawsuit aimed at forcing four of the nation's largest tobacco companies to pay for a medical monitoring program for 250,000 healthy West Virginia smokers. The lawsuit is set up as a product liability case with the medical monitoring as the proposed remedy.

Indiana News Briefs

Skeleton found in Ft. Wayne park: A hiker found a human skeleton in a densely wooded area of a city park and authorities are working to determine its age range, ethnicity, sex, body weight and other specifics, Allen County coroner Jon Brandenberger said. "It is absent of any extraneous noises or acts that we would not associate with a normal aviation environment," Black said.

Jury meets in tobacco case: Jurors began deliberating a class-action lawsuit aimed at forcing four of the nation's largest tobacco companies to pay for a medical monitoring program for 250,000 healthy West Virginia smokers. The lawsuit is set up as a product liability case with the medical monitoring as the proposed remedy.

Market Watch November 13

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Dow Jones</th>
<th>9,750.95</th>
<th>+196.58</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Up</td>
<td>2,221</td>
<td>+192</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Same</td>
<td>917</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dow + NASDAQ + AMEX + NDX + S&amp;P 500</td>
<td>13,830</td>
<td>1,139</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Top 5 Volume Leaders

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Company/Security</th>
<th>% Change</th>
<th>$ Gain</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>CISCO Systems (CSCO)</td>
<td>+1.55</td>
<td>+33 19.38</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Microsoft (MSFT)</td>
<td>+5.18</td>
<td>+153 49.58</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oracle Corp (ORCL)</td>
<td>-3.71</td>
<td>-6.94 14.53</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Intel Corp (INTC)</td>
<td>+1.88</td>
<td>+3.67 18.88</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>JDS Uniphase (JDSU)</td>
<td>+9.76</td>
<td>+9.94 10.47</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Military courts will try terrorists

President Bush signed an order Tuesday that would allow the government to try people accused of terrorism in front of a special military commission instead of in civilian court.

"This is a new tool to use against terrorism," Gonzales said in a telephone interview. He said there were precedents in World War II and the Civil War.

Gonzales, a former Texas Supreme Court judge who is the president's top lawyer, said a military commission could have several advantages over a civilian court. It is easier to protect the sources and methods of investigators in military proceedings, for example, and a military trial can be held overseas.

"There may not be a need for this and the president may make a determination that he does not want to use this tool, but he felt it appropriate that he have this tool available to him," the lawyer said.

After the Sept. 11 attacks, the administration pushed through Congress an anti-terrorism bill that Bush said was vital but civil liberties groups said went too far, violating Americans' constitutional rights. It expands the FBI's wiretapping and electronic surveillance authority and imposes steeper penalties for harboring or financing terrorists. The measure also increases the number of crimes considered terrorist acts and toughens the punishments for committing them.
A Week of Peace and War Education

a series of talks and panel discussions that goes beyond the media’s portrayal of the events and aftermath of September 11th

Sunday Nov. 11
Collections in Basilica and Hall Masses to benefit Catholic Relief Services Refugee Camps

Monday Nov. 12
4:00 pm, Hesburgh Center Auditorium
“War, Peace, and Imperatives of Justice: An Islamic Perspective” lecture by John Kray, Florida State University
7:30 - 9:00 pm, Quad Panel Discussions
Kemmy Stanford, “Battles in War and After War Is U.S. Foreign Policy Ethical?”
McGill, “Students Take a Stand: A Call to Action”
Morrison, “Seeing through the Media”
Pasquella East, “Refugees and Displacement”

Tuesday Nov. 13
4:00 - 5:30 pm, 117 Hayes-Healy Hall
“The Aftermaths of Terrorism: Understanding the Psychological Impact of ‘Trauma’”
(Sean Hickman, Wendy Settle, Suheyh Nour)
7:00 pm, 103 DeBartolo
“Appalachia, Sept. 11, and Broader Implications” presentation to Appalachian Seminar by George Lopez, Kroc Institute
7:30 - 9:00 pm, Quad Panel Discussions
Kemmy Stanford, “Religious Dimensions of the Conflict”
McGill, “Civil and Human Rights”
Morrison, “Justice in War and After War Is U.S. Foreign Policy Ethical?”
Pasquella East, “Refugees and Terrorism”
9:15 pm, Hesburgh Library Auditorium
Italian Film: “Jung (War) in the Land of the Mushheeddin”
introduction by Jill Goddow

Wednesday Nov. 14
7:30 - 9:00 pm, Quad Panel Discussions
Kemmy Stanford, “The Historical Roots of Anti-Americanism”
McGill, “Seeing through the Media”
Morrison, “Students Take a Stand: A Call to Action”
Pasquella East, “Civil and Human Rights”
9:15 pm, Hesburgh Library Auditorium
Italian Film: “Jung (War) in the Land of the Mushheeddin”
introduction by Jill Goddow
10:00 pm, Morrissey Manor Chapel
Interfaith Prayer Service
Muslim-Christian Prayer for Peace

Thursday Nov. 15
7:00 pm, McKenna Hall (CCS)
lecture by Benedict Anderson, Cornell University
7:30 - 9:00 pm, Quad Panel Discussions
Kemmy Stanford, “Refugees and Terrorism”
McGill, “Religious Dimensions of the Conflict”
Morrison, “Refugees and Displacement”
Pasquella East, “The Historical Roots of Anti-Americanism”

Friday Nov. 16
12:00 Noon - 1:30 pm
Hesburgh Center Auditorium
“What We Have Learned”
Concluding Panel of Students, Faculty, Staff, and Administration

Sponsors include: Kroc Institute, Center for Social Concerns, East Asian Languages & Literatures, University Counseling Center, Gender Studies, Office of the Provost, Office of Student Affairs, College of Arts and Letters, Campus Ministry, Student Government, Kroc Institute for Irish Studies, Theology Department

For more details, updates on events, and a complete listing of sponsors, faculty and students panelists, see www.nd.edu/~gender/9-11.html
Church bishops appoint first black president

The Observer ♦ NEWS

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

The nation's Roman Catholic Bishops chose their first black president Tuesday, electing a powerful orator who speaks bluntly about racism in the church and society at large.

Bishop Wilton Gregory, of Belleville, Ill., said he would continue to speak about racism as a violation of Christ's teaching and an evil that Catholics must work to end. "It is a sin," he declared.

He said he hoped his election as president of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops would send a "message of love" to blacks of all faiths. "I hope it says something positive," he said.

Black Catholics see Gregory's election as recognition they have long sought from church leaders. Estimates of the number of black Catholics range from 2 million to 3.5 million, out of 63.7 million Catholics nationwide.

Gregory succeeds Bishop Joseph Fiorenza of Galveston-Houston, Texas, who is finishing his three-year term. The 53-year-old prelate takes over as the bishops review their position on the war on terrorism; they will vote on a formal statement Thursday.

He is an expert on liturgy and has written extensively on Catholic opposition to physician-assisted suicide and the death penalty. Friends say he is able to reach Catholics of all races.

Monsignor Richard Duncanson recalled a Thanksgiving years ago when the two were in graduate school. A prayer was offered noting how the early Americans came full of hope, prompting Gregory to make one of his trademark straightforward observations.

"He said, 'Some didn't come. Some were brought over as slaves,'" Duncanson said. "It was a memorable moment. He makes us aware without a sense of resentment."

Gregory was in sixth grade when he first considered becoming a priest. His parents, Christians without a denomination, had sent him to St. Carthage Catholic School on the South Side of Chicago, where his family lived. He was drawn by the warmth and intelligence of the two parish priests and wanted to follow their example.

He was ordained in 1973 and later earned a doctorate in sacred liturgy from the Pontifical Liturgical Institute in Rome. He soon was in demand as a public speaker.

"He can have a crowd absolutely waiting on every word," said Father Charles Rubey, director of Catholic Charities of Chicago. Gregory became a bishop in 1983, serving for 10 years as auxiliary bishop to the late Cardinal Joseph Bernardin in Chicago, whom Gregory admired for remaining approachable despite his high rank in the church.

The Keough Institute For Irish Studies presents:

BENEDICT ANDERSON

Author of Imagined Communities

and Distinguished O'Donnell Professor in Irish Studies

Holy Lands and the End of Conquest:
The High Price of Nations Today

MCKENNA HALL

7:00 PM Thursday, November 15, 2001

IRISH VOLLEYBALL

Senior Night vs. Illinois St.
Wednesday, Nov. 14 @ 7:00pm

FREE Outpost Sports t-shirts to 1st 100 fans!!

FREE set of Notre Dame Senior trading cards to 1st 500 fans!!

Come out to support our 3 seniors as we say goodbye:
Marcie Bomhack, Kristy Kreher, & Malinda Goralski

Congratulations to the Notre Dame Volleyball Team. Winners of the regular season Big East Title!!

Columbia Sportswear

Columbia Sportswear presents: Happy Birthday Perry

From 12 to 21...

"My Mother Said I Never Should"

Thursday - Saturday, November 15-17 at 8 pm
Sunday, November 18 at 2:30 pm
Little Theatre

For ticket information contact the Saint Mary's Box Office at 284-4626

Saint Mary's College Theatre presents the play

BY CHARLOTTE KETLEY

Mothers, Daughters, Secrets & the Truth

MCLAREN CENTER

NOTRE DAME, IN
Upon returning from fall break, I noticed a jarring irregularity in my room. No, the University had not removed my microwave, hot plate, toaster oven and 8.9 cubic foot refrigerator. My rug had been vacuumed and and my reeking trash can had been completed and endowed with a new plastic bag. I selected a myth and loosed an inspiration of aspiration for Zahn Hall’s housekeeping staff. Hardly writing patrons of print journalism, upon venturing out of the newspaper realm, come across a movie called “UHF.” The film, starring “Weird Al” Yankovic, contains a sub-plot about a hapless janitor named Stanley Spudalski (adorably portrayed by Michael Richards).

Stanley’s only true joy is his mop. By a whimsical turn of fate, Stanley becomes the host of a children’s variety show and proceeds to demonstrate his love and joie de vivre in front of a live studio audience. Stanley, looked down upon in the beginning of the film, is a hero by the movie’s end. He uses that same mop as a thin wooden cudgel against the bad guys.

I saw this masterpiece of modern cinema at the tender age of nine, and since then I’ve held janitors, custodians, housekeepers and all other cleaning personnel in the highest esteem.

Fast forward to high school. A favorite pastime of the lunch hour was the cataloging and nicknaming of the school’s personnel in the highest esteem. Myra McGuff, the host of a children’s variety show, is bestowed a new plastic bag. I emptied and refilled my trash can had been completed and endowed with a new plastic bag. I selected a myth and loosed an inspiration of aspiration for Zahn Hall’s housekeeping staff.

The views expressed in this article are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Sean Quigley presents a flawed and self-contradictory view about the School of the Americas Protest. Here is why.

First he states he is “100 percent for first amendment rights” and their use. Then he states that there are currently men and women in uniform “who would die for our freedom if given the chance to.” Somehow, though, he has determined that the exercise of one of those freedoms our men and women are protecting (the one he supports 100 percent) would verge on the apocalyptic.

But on top of their aforementioned duties as the keepers of sanitary conditions, they transcend their roles as custodians through extraordinarily friendly behavior to become permanent fixtures in the dorm. Oftentimes, a smiling member of the janitorial staff is the first fellow human to greet me as I emerge from my room in the morning. Small gestures such as these, seemingly insignificant in the grander scheme of things, make this University special.

Congratulations to our editing and graphics staff on a recent award! Sean Quigley finds the logic behind opposing the School of the Americas protest is not a protest on those grounds. It is not anti-military. The views expressed in this article are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Letter to the Editor

SOA protest is not anti-military

Sean Quigley presents a flawed and self-contradictory view about the School of the Americas Protest. Here is why.

First he states he is “100 percent for first amendment rights” and their use. Then he states that there are currently men and women in uniform “who would die for our freedom if given the chance to.” Somehow, though, he has determined that the exercise of one of those freedoms our men and women are protecting (the one he supports 100 percent) would verge on the apocalyptic.

But on top of their aforementioned duties as the keepers of sanitary conditions, they transcend their roles as custodians through extraordinarily friendly behavior to become permanent fixtures in the dorm. Oftentimes, a smiling member of the janitorial staff is the first fellow human to greet me as I emerge from my room in the morning. Small gestures such as these, seemingly insignificant in the grander scheme of things, make this University special.

Sean Quigley presents a flawed and self-contradictory view about the School of the Americas Protest. Here is why.

First he states he is “100 percent for first amendment rights” and their use. Then he states that there are currently men and women in uniform “who would die for our freedom if given the chance to.” Somehow, though, he has determined that the exercise of one of those freedoms our men and women are protecting (the one he supports 100 percent) would verge on the apocalyptic.

But on top of their aforementioned duties as the keepers of sanitary conditions, they transcend their roles as custodians through extraordinarily friendly behavior to become permanent fixtures in the dorm. Oftentimes, a smiling member of the janitorial staff is the first fellow human to greet me as I emerge from my room in the morning. Small gestures such as these, seemingly insignificant in the grander scheme of things, make this University special.

Sean Quigley presents a flawed and self-contradictory view about the School of the Americas Protest. Here is why.

First he states he is “100 percent for first amendment rights” and their use. Then he states that there are currently men and women in uniform “who would die for our freedom if given the chance to.” Somehow, though, he has determined that the exercise of one of those freedoms our men and women are protecting (the one he supports 100 percent) would verge on the apocalyptic.

But on top of their aforementioned duties as the keepers of sanitary conditions, they transcend their roles as custodians through extraordinarily friendly behavior to become permanent fixtures in the dorm. Oftentimes, a smiling member of the janitorial staff is the first fellow human to greet me as I emerge from my room in the morning. Small gestures such as these, seemingly insignificant in the grander scheme of things, make this University special.

Sean Quigley presents a flawed and self-contradictory view about the School of the Americas Protest. Here is why.

First he states he is “100 percent for first amendment rights” and their use. Then he states that there are currently men and women in uniform “who would die for our freedom if given the chance to.” Somehow, though, he has determined that the exercise of one of those freedoms our men and women are protecting (the one he supports 100 percent) would verge on the apocalyptic.

But on top of their aforementioned duties as the keepers of sanitary conditions, they transcend their roles as custodians through extraordinarily friendly behavior to become permanent fixtures in the dorm. Oftentimes, a smiling member of the janitorial staff is the first fellow human to greet me as I emerge from my room in the morning. Small gestures such as these, seemingly insignificant in the grander scheme of things, make this University special.

Sean Quigley presents a flawed and self-contradictory view about the School of the Americas Protest. Here is why.

First he states he is “100 percent for first amendment rights” and their use. Then he states that there are currently men and women in uniform “who would die for our freedom if given the chance to.” Somehow, though, he has determined that the exercise of one of those freedoms our men and women are protecting (the one he supports 100 percent) would verge on the apocalyptic.

But on top of their aforementioned duties as the keepers of sanitary conditions, they transcend their roles as custodians through extraordinarily friendly behavior to become permanent fixtures in the dorm. Oftentimes, a smiling member of the janitorial staff is the first fellow human to greet me as I emerge from my room in the morning. Small gestures such as these, seemingly insignificant in the grander scheme of things, make this University special.
Imagine another America

Imagine living in the rural part of the southwest with no running water or electricity.

Imagine living in a one room, octagonal-shaped home with an outhouse located fifty yards away.

Imagine living in a two-bedroom, federally-funded house with a mother who works at McDonald's.

Imagine having alcoholic parents who spend countless nights at local, run-down taverns and being awoken in the middle of the night, hungry and crying, because they are engaging in a physical fight.

Imagine yourself as an 11-year-old, preparing supper for your 6-year-old brother and 4-year-old sister while your mom races to the hospital with an ailing grandmother.

Imagine the disappointment you feel when you see your mother walk out of the post office with no government check or food stamps in hand.

Imagine having a Vietnam veteran as an uncle who is unemployed and constantly drunk and how much you love him no matter what he says to you because you just know why he walks the way he does.

Imagine hitch-hiking to the nearest trading post, which could be 20-100 miles away, to pawn a cherished, silver and turquoise concho belt that's been in the family for four generations in order to feed your children.

Imagine being told by a high school counselor that you're not capable of going to college and the only job you could ever have is scraping roadkill off of the roads.

Imagine going to school and being laughed at when you speak the only language you know.

Imagine reading about the Battle of Wounded Knee, The Trail of Tears and The Long Walk and feeling the pain rip through your heart.

Imagine inditing your grandmother's famous frybread after months of South Dining Hall food.

Imagine running into another Indian - Sioux, Cherokee, Pueblo, Apache, Cree.

Laura M. Mike
What's Your Shade?

Laura M. Mike is a member of the Navajo Nation and Native American student Association of Notre Dame. The Multicultural Students Programs and Services column appears every other Wednesday.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Demand justice for migrant workers

As human beings who support the rights of others, we have a responsibility to be moral consumers. The way in which we spend our money indicates our values. As the recent campaign against sweatshops has shown, consumers have real power to affect the policies of large corporations.

In this spirit, the Community Alliance to Serve Hispanics (CASH), the Progressive Student Alliance (PSA) and the Notre Dame Student/Farmworker Alliance is calling on the Notre Dame family to help give voice to the voiceless. Migrant farmworkers provide us with a bounty of fruits and vegetables while working under deplorable conditions. Denied the right to a living wage, to any benefits or to bargain collectively, these workers toil in a "sweatshop in the middle of the United States." (Pope John Paul II, Laborem Exercens, "On Human Work", #21, 1981)

Since 1978, migrant workers picking tomatoes for Six L's Packing Company have been paid the same per-bucket rate: 40 cents. The average farmworker makes $7,500 per year. Meanwhile, Six L's and their buyers have become rich off their labor for sub-poverty wages. One of Six L's largest buyers, Taco Bell, made $5 billion in 1999. In order to put pressure on Six L's, the Coalition of Immokalee Workers, a farmworker activist group, is organizing a boycott of Taco Bell. Taco Bell deliberately targets college-aged students with its advertising, therefore our voice as students can become a powerful one for the rights of these workers.

Imagine the pride you feel when you finally sell that piece of pottery or basket that you've worked hard on for hours.

Imagine giving your nephew a Navajo Code Talker G.I. Joe action figure for Christmas and how he exclaims that it looks just like your grandfather.

Imagine yourself waking up early in the morning before the sun rises to pray in silence as the sun rises. Imagine how important it is to believe in something.

Imagine the pride you feel when a niece has her first laugh.

Imagine being a Navajo Code Talker who is unemployed and committed to each other. Marriage is a very powerful commitment to a person but not something that needs to be a prerequisite in order to have sex in a loving and compassionate manner.

Lastly, if God does exist, who is to say how "God intended" people to have sex? I don't remember reading about any people to have sex in a loving and compassionate manner.

I cannot say that I was surprised to read Mary Blazewicz's letter on sex in The Observer on Monday. After all, I am at a Catholic institution. But what disturbed me is her rationale behind her argument. I disagree with her. Her argument is based solely on Christian values. While using Christianity to mold one's own beliefs is fine, using it to try to argue whether or not premarital sex is wrong is not fine.

Belief in an organized religion can be and has been used to justify almost anything. During the Spanish Inquisition, the Catholic Church used Catholicism in order to inflict tremendous amounts of pain and murder upon innocent people. Even worse, the Church nominated Pius XII for sainthood despite the Concordat he signed with Hitler, which allowed for compliance in the extermination of millions of innocent people. This said, should we really take what the Church says at face value? To do so would turn people into nothing more than puppets of the Pope.

I don't think that agreeing with one's religion is a fact; it is an idea or a concept of values that people choose to organize around. Plus, who is to say which religion is right and which ones are wrong? Some Mormon groups still practice polygamy. What makes that religion inferior to Catholicism? Do their multiple marriages wipe out the "purity and complete expression of love" that occurs in sex when married? After all, they are married and are most likely committed to each other.

The argument that one should marry someone if they love him or her in order to have sex is equally preposterous. I have seen relationships between unmarried people that have more love, more devotion and a better concept of "forever" than many married people. Marriage is a very powerful commitment to a person but not something that needs to be a prerequisite in order to have sex in a loving and compassionate manner.

Religion should not mold sexual beliefs

David Fulsom
senior off-campus
Nov. 12, 2001
Friends toast the new year. From left to right: Chas Grundy as Burton, Steve Hoeplinger as Larry and Tara Magnani as Anna.

Sean Nelson as Pale lunges at Chas Grundy who plays Burton. Nelson uses an intimidating physical presence in his acting.

By C. SPENCER BEGGS
Scene Editor

The moments that make life worth living are sometimes the ones that make the least sense. This paradox of what one thinks one wants and what one feels one wants is the subject of the Department of Film, Television and Theatre's Advanced Directing Final Project "Burn This." "Burn This" follows the life of a young dancer and choreographer, Anna (played by junior Tara Magnani), after she returns from the funeral of her roommate and closest friend, Robbie. Together with her remaining roommate Larry (played by freshman Steve Hoeplinger) and her science fiction writing boyfriend Burton (played by junior Chas Grundy), she is confronted by Robbie's fiery-tempered, drug abusing older brother Pale (played by sophomore Sean Nelson) who has come to collect Robbie's things.

Anna's world becomes suddenly complicated as she and Pale find a powerful attraction to each other. The show, which is set in Anna and Larry's lower Manhattan converted loft apartment, follows the course of Anna and Pale's passion that threatens to tear the fabric of all four characters' lives apart.

Much of the show's strength comes from its acting talent. Magnani does a superb job of walking the thin line between repressed emotional tension and melodrama in her portrayal of the conflicted Anna. Her reserve serves as a foundation on which the other actors can build, especially Nelson.

Nelson, who often plays slapstick and comedic roles, rises to the challenge of portraying a character originally played by John Malkovich. Nelson's physical presence is, as always, one of the strongest aspects of his acting. Nevertheless, audiences will get to see a new side of this talent in "Burn This."

The normally jovial and awkward nature of Nelson's characters is replaced by an ominous and threatening presence in "Burn This." He is delightful and terrifying to watch at the same time. The show highlights his abilities to play a range of emotions in a mentally tortured character.

"There's a lot of grief in the show... and conflict as well. But if you listen, there's also a lot of passion for life."
Kathleen Lane
director

The cast dynamic often saves the show from crossing into overdone soap opera acting. Grundy contributes a strong straight man to contrast and serve as a foil for Nelson's charging performance. Hoeplinger, who cuts his acting teeth on this show, is especially good at relieving tension with a bit of dark humor.

To bring the audience closer to "Burn This" set designer Chris Sinnott uses the space of the Lab Theatre creatively. Known for his clever set designs in shows like last month's "How the Other Half Loves," Sinnott places the audience in the center of the Lab Theatre. He designed the apartment around the audience. Even the windows and doors of the Lab Theatre are used as part of the set. The effect is very strong, the theater looks believable as a converted loft apartment.

Playing the show in 360 degrees has Directing Final Project “Burn This”

Sean Nelson as Pale is comforted by Anna, played by Tara Magnani. Both play characters dealing with internal conflict.

“You love who you love, not who you're supposed to love... There's a line at the end of the show... This isn't opera, this is life. Why does love always have to be so tragic? I believe that would be the line to capture the essence of the play.”

Steven Hoeplinger
actor

Lane feels that even though “Burn This” is extremely dramatic, its message is one of hope.

“There's a lot of grief in the show... and conflict as well. But if you listen there's also a lot of passion for life,” Lane said.

Lane thinks “Burn This” is a powerful show because it reflects the lives of both the audience and her cast members. During the rehearsal process she would have her cast members share stories of love, loss and passion to better connect to their characters.

Lane thinks that this technique allows actors to trust each other more on stage.

“You know, it’s incredibly intimate; the audience is right in front of you. We’re working around the audience instead of... in front of them,” Grundy said.

Intimacy is exactly what director Kathleen Lane wants the show to have. Lane, a senior and long time ITT veteran, feels that it is important for the audience to connect with the characters.

“I think this is definitely something people will relate to... in reality there would be a very good reason for the audience to dislike several of the characters, but the line story is so true that you walk away saying 'I can't say I wouldn't do that,'” Lane said.

Lane gave the actors a lot of freedom with their roles, allowing them to experiment with their own movements and line delivery. She only changes what the actors do when she feels they are doing something incorrectly. But that doesn't stop her from producing a strong show.

“At the same times she’s very authoritative. She knows what she wants and knows how to get it out of the actors... It's been a very powerful acting experience,” Grundy said.

Lane thinks “Burn This” is a powerful show because it reflects the lives of both the audience and her cast members. During the rehearsal process she would have her cast members share stories of love, loss and passion to better connect to their characters.

Lane thinks that this technique allows actors to trust each other more on stage.

“One of the easiest ways to act is to take something from your own life and relate it to that character and what they're going through,” Lane said.

Lane feels that even though “Burn This” is extremely dramatic, its message is one of hope.

“There's a lot of grief in the show... and conflict as well. But if you listen there's also a lot of passion for life,” Lane said.

Lane thinks that this technique allows actors to trust each other more on stage.

“You know, it’s incredibly intimate; the audience is right in front of you. We’re working around the audience instead of... in front of them,” Grundy said.

Intimacy is exactly what director Kathleen Lane wants the show to have. Lane, a senior and long time ITT veteran, feels that it is important for the audience to connect with the characters.

“I think this is definitely something people will relate to... in reality there would be a very good reason for the audience to dislike several of the characters, but the line story is so true that you walk away saying 'I can't say I wouldn't do that,'” Lane said.

Lane gave the actors a lot of freedom with their roles, allowing them to experiment with their own movements and line delivery. She only changes what the actors do when she feels they are doing something incorrectly. But that doesn't stop her from producing a strong show.

“At the same times she’s very authoritative. She knows what she wants and knows how to get it out of the actors... It's been a very powerful acting experience,” Grundy said.

Lane thinks “Burn This” is a powerful show because it reflects the lives of both the audience and her cast members. During the rehearsal process she would have her cast members share stories of love, loss and passion to better connect to their characters.

Lane thinks that this technique allows actors to trust each other more on stage.

“One of the easiest ways to act is to take something from your own life and relate it to that character and what they're going through,” Lane said.

Lane feels that even though “Burn This” is extremely dramatic, its message is one of hope.

“There's a lot of grief in the show... and conflict as well. But if you listen there's also a lot of passion for life,” Lane said.

Lane thinks that this technique allows actors to trust each other more on stage.

“You know, it’s incredibly intimate; the audience is right in front of you. We’re working around the audience instead of... in front of them,” Grundy said.

Intimacy is exactly what director Kathleen Lane wants the show to have. Lane, a senior and long time ITT veteran, feels that it is important for the audience to connect with the characters.

“I think this is definitely something people will relate to... in reality there would be a very good reason for the audience to dislike several of the characters, but the line story is so true that you walk away saying 'I can't say I wouldn't do that,'” Lane said.

Lane gave the actors a lot of freedom with their roles, allowing them to experiment with their own movements and line delivery. She only changes what the actors do when she feels they are doing something incorrectly. But that doesn't stop her from producing a strong show.

“At the same times she’s very authoritative. She knows what she wants and knows how to get it out of the actors... It's been a very powerful acting experience,” Grundy said.

Lane thinks “Burn This” is a powerful show because it reflects the lives of both the audience and her cast members. During the rehearsal process she would have her cast members share stories of love, loss and passion to better connect to their characters.

Lane thinks that this technique allows actors to trust each other more on stage.

“One of the easiest ways to act is to take something from your own life and relate it to that character and what they're going through,” Lane said.

Lane feels that even though “Burn This” is extremely dramatic, its message is one of hope.

“There's a lot of grief in the show... and conflict as well. But if you listen there's also a lot of passion for life,” Lane said.

Lane thinks that this technique allows actors to trust each other more on stage.

“You know, it’s incredibly intimate; the audience is right in front of you. We’re working around the audience instead of... in front of them,” Grundy said.

Intimacy is exactly what director Kathleen Lane wants the show to have. Lane, a senior and long time ITT veteran, feels that it is important for the audience to connect with the characters.

“I think this is definitely something people will relate to... in reality there would be a very good reason for the audience to dislike several of the characters, but the line story is so true that you walk away saying 'I can't say I wouldn't do that,'” Lane said.

Lane gave the actors a lot of freedom with their roles, allowing them to experiment with their own movements and line delivery. She only changes what the actors do when she feels they are doing something incorrectly. But that doesn't stop her from producing a strong show.

“At the same times she’s very authoritative. She knows what she wants and knows how to get it out of the actors... It's been a very powerful acting experience,” Grundy said.

Lane thinks “Burn This” is a powerful show because it reflects the lives of both the audience and her cast members. During the rehearsal process she would have her cast members share stories of love, loss and passion to better connect to their characters.

Lane thinks that this technique allows actors to trust each other more on stage.

“One of the easiest ways to act is to take something from your own life and relate it to that character and what they're going through,” Lane said.

Lane feels that even though “Burn This” is extremely dramatic, its message is one of hope.

“There's a lot of grief in the show... and conflict as well. But if you listen there's also a lot of passion for life,” Lane said.

Lane thinks that this technique allows actors to trust each other more on stage.

“You know, it’s incredibly intimate; the audience is right in front of you. We’re working around the audience instead of... in front of them,” Grundy said.

Intimacy is exactly what director Kathleen Lane wants the show to have. Lane, a senior and long time ITT veteran, feels that it is important for the audience to connect with the characters.

“I think this is definitely something people will relate to... in reality there would be a very good reason for the audience to dislike several of the characters, but the line story is so true that you walk away saying 'I can't say I wouldn't do that,'” Lane said.

Lane gave the actors a lot of freedom with their roles, allowing them to experiment with their own movements and line delivery. She only changes what the actors do when she feels they are doing something incorrectly. But that doesn't stop her from producing a strong show.

“At the same times she’s very authoritative. She knows what she wants and knows how to get it out of the actors... It's been a very powerful acting experience,” Grundy said.

Lane thinks “Burn This” is a powerful show because it reflects the lives of both the audience and her cast members. During the rehearsal process she would have her cast members share stories of love, loss and passion to better connect to their characters.

Lane thinks that this technique allows actors to trust each other more on stage.

“One of the easiest ways to act is to take something from your own life and relate it to that character and what they're going through,” Lane said.

Lane feels that even though “Burn This” is extremely dramatic, its message is one of hope.

“There's a lot of grief in the show... and conflict as well. But if you listen there's also a lot of passion for life,” Lane said.
Diamondback righthander Randy Johnson, answers a reporter's question following Arizona's World Series win against the New York Yankees. Johnson, who had a 21-6 record with a major league-leading 2.49 ERA and 372 strikeouts. He received 30 of 32 first-place votes for the National League Cy Young award.

Johnson wins third straight Cy Young award

Associated Press

NEW YORK

Randy Johnson didn't have to share this award with Curt Schilling.

The Big Unit, co-MVP of the World Series with his Arizona Diamondbacks teammate, won his third straight National League Cy Young Award on Tuesday, receiving 30 of 32 first-place votes from a panel of the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

"I know Curt's happy for me," Johnson said. "I talked to him earlier today. He was calling me today to thank me for getting him to this next level where he's at. I thought that was the most flattering comment I've received to this point in my career."

Johnson was 21-6 and led the major leagues with a 2.49 ERA and 372 strikeouts, the third most in a season behind Nolan Ryan's 381 in 1973 and Sandy Koufax's 382 in 1965. Schilling followed with 22-6 with a 2.98 ERA and 293 strikeouts.

Johnson got two second-place votes and 156 points. Schilling followed with two firsts, 29 seconds and one third for 98 points.

"This should be about Randy winning it, not me losing it," Schilling told ESPN Radio. "I feel from opening day to the finish, I was the most consistent pitcher in baseball. ... Was that good enough to win the Cy Young? Not this year."

It was the fourth Cy Young Award for Johnson, who won the AL honor while pitching for Seattle in 1995. The only other pitchers with four or more Cy Youngs are Roger Clemens, a favorite to win his sixth on Thursday when the AL voting is announced, and Steve Carlton and Greg Maddux, who won each four.

"This has been a dream season," Johnson said, "not because of the Cy Young Award but because another dream was fulfilled." Arizona beat the New York Yankees in Game 7 of the World Series on Nov. 4, and Johnson had little time to reflect.

"It's all been pretty surreal," he said. "Me and my wife had a vacation planned. We put it off a few days so we could take part in the ticker-tape parade.

The only voters who chose Schilling over Johnson were Toni Ginnetti of the Chicago Sun-Times and Joe Christensen of The Press-Enterprise in Riverside, Calif.
Volleyball
continued from page 20
opponent than the pre-game ceremonies, during which all three players' parents will be present.

"Illinois State is a really good team," Kreher said. "We've had a pretty good past record with them so I think it's pretty exciting that this is our last match at home and it's a good match."

The Irish and Redbirds have shared the court every year since 1996 and 13 times overall, with Notre Dame holding a 7-6 advantage in competition. The Missouri Valley Conference team comes in with a 14-11 overall record, but the Irish don't expect anything easy.

"It seems like it doesn't matter if we're having a great year and they aren't or vice-versa, it doesn't seem to matter," Brown said. "We always still have a great outside hitter and had their win.

"I think that's the best preparation for the players and coaches, the way they're doing things. I don't become cynical towards those people at all ... I look at the day-to-day things and have the appreciation for the players and coaches, the way they're doing things."

With the Big East Championships looming on the horizon this weekend, Brown expects more from her team than just victory tonight.

"She's looking for intensity. I think we've played some real good matches where we've played a good game and then kind of let up. We want to play solid from the first serve to the last serve."

Debbie Brown
volleyball coach

Hoops
continued from page 20
ed.

"I think we had a lot of balance today," McGraw said. "I think that's something this team has a lot of — versatility and we were able to use the bench more effectively tonight than in the last game."

The bench provided a lot of support for the Irish starting lineup. Freshman Kelsey Wicks, who missed a double-double by one point last week, came off the bench to add 10 rebounds and six points.

Joining Batteast and Wicks with a solid first-year performance, starting center Teresa Burton totaled 12 points and six rebounds.

"Teresa did a great job playing post," McGraw said. "She had some great shots. I think we're a team that's just going to wear people down."

Freshman Katy Flecky finished the game with 13 points and four rebounds, completing the Irish effort in the post position.

"All of the post players we used tonight had different strengths," McGraw said. "Some could step away from the basket; some were good on the block."

Notre Dame took an early 17-0 lead before Christian Brothers scored its first basket. The Irish never had a lead of less than 16 points and had a 29-point lead by halftime.

"I think we got out of it early," Schaefer said. "We got kind of stuck."

Following the half, junior guard Alicja Ratay scored 11 points in six minutes, finishing the evening with 20 points, 12 of which came from 3-point shots.

Except for Sarah Condra, who grabbed 12 points for the Buccaneers, no one scored more than seven points for Christian Brothers.

Every player who dressed for Tuesday's game saw playing time. Junior walk-on Karen Swanson entered the game midway through the second half and was joined shortly by freshman Hill Krause. Swanson scored four points.

Tuesday's exhibition game was the last game the Irish will play before their home opener against Valparaiso on Sunday.

The College of Arts and Letters invites you to the presentation of the REV. CHARLES E. SHEEDY, C.S.C.

AWARD FOR EXCELLENCE IN TEACHING

Honoring
PROFESSOR STEPHEN M. FALLON
Program of Liberal Studies

REV. WILSON (BILL) D. MISCAMBLE, C.S.C.
Department of History

Friday, November 16, 2001
4:00 p.m.
McKenna Hall Auditorium

Davie
continued from page 20

"I think the schedule does balance out a little bit," Davie said about a 2002 schedule that includes Florida State, Michigan and Maryland in addition to Michigan State, Purdue, Boston College, USC and Stanford.

Davie also pointed towards the continued development of Carlyle Holiday as a positive for next year.

"Certainly there's a bunch of people who look at the negatives," Davie said. "I don't become cynical towards those people at all ... I look at the day-to-day things and have the appreciation for the players and coaches, the way they're doing things. I think in the end that wins out."

Notes

- Tailback Tony Fisher and fullback Jason Murray will both miss the Navy game with injuries. Julius Jones will shoulder most of the load at tailback but he is also slowed by an injured Achilles tendon. Freshman Ryan Grant and senior Terrance Howard will split time behind Jones. With Murray out, senior Mike McNair moves up to back-up fullback.
- Flanker David Givens will also miss Saturday's game with a hamstring injury. Davie will look to freshman Carlos Campbell to take some snaps at receiver with Givens sidelined.
- The Irish secondary will also be depleted this week as both Glenn Earl and Donald Dykes will not play. Ron Israel is still listed as questionable with a hamstring injury.

Contact Mike Connolly at connolly.28@nd.edu.
Eisley scores 7 key points in first game

Associated Press

NEW YORK

Howard Eisley saw his first playing time of the season and made the most of it, scoring seven points in the fourth quarter in helping the New York Knicks over the Portland Trail Blazers on Wednesday night.

Eisley, acquired in an off-season trade for Glen Rice, sat on the bench throughout the Knicks' first seven games. He finally took his warmups off for the first time with 3:34 left in the third and played the last 1:24.

Allan Houston scored 23 points, including three clutch jumpers in the fourth, and Clarence Weatherspoon moved into the starting lineup and contributed 12 points and 13 rebounds.

Eisley and Houston scored six points apiece for the Trail Blazers, whose offense could not function down the stretch against an intense Knicks defense.

Portland took a 76-74 lead with 2:10 left, missing three of its last four shots, but Eisley and Houston scored 13 straight points to stretch the streak to 23-11, allowing them to win the game.

The Pacers were awful from the field in the fourth quarter, shooting just 8-for-23 in the fourth, with the only two points, then picked up their fourth foul less than a minute into the third quarter.

Coach Maurice Cheeks elected to leave him in, and Wallace scored on a tip-in to give Portland its first lead, 56-55 with 6:12 left.

The Knicks missed 13 of their first 14 shots in the third quarter, allowing Portland to go ahead by as many as five, then retook the lead early in the fourth as Anderson scored five straight points.

Nets 91, Pacers 82

Jason Kidd scored 20 points and had 10 assists, and Keith Van Horn added 15 points and 13 rebounds as the New Jersey Nets beat the Indiana Pacers.

The Pacers had won four straight, rallying from double-digit deficits in the last three. Indiana closed within four points midway through the third, after trailing by 16 in the first half.

But the Nets (6-1), off to their best start in the team's NBA history, went on a 12-2 run to stretch their lead to 86-72.

The Pacers were awful from the floor, making only seven of 23 attempts in the fourth quarter. They shot .35 percent overall.

Jalen Rose scored 21, Al Harrington had 16 points and 14 rebounds, and Jeff Foster had 12 points and five rebounds for the Pacers.

Kidd scored eight points in the first quarter, and the Nets shot 45 percent from the floor to build a 32-16 lead. They led 45-35 at halftime.

Reggie Miller made two 3-pointers in the third quarter, cutting the gap to seven. Jamaal Tinsley and Rose each made a pair of free throws to make it 63-58 with 2:50 left in the third.

76ers 82, Heat 76

Allen Iverson missed 22 of 30 shots but the Philadelphia 76ers won their second consecutive game since his return from elbow surgery, beating the Miami Heat.

The defending Eastern Conference champions were 0-5 without Iverson. Although Iverson scored 25 points, he went 2-for-15 in the second half, missing his final 11 attempts, and 5-for-15 in two games.

Eisley hit two driving layups and a jumper and Houston knocked down three straight corner jumpers.

The Trail Blazers were awful from the field in the fourth quarter, shooting just 8-for-23 in the fourth, with the only two points, then picked up their fourth foul less than a minute into the third quarter.

Coach Rick Adelman has asked Bibby to step up his scoring, particularly in Chris Webber's continued absence, and the point guard responded. Bibby made nine straight shots from the opening minutes of the first quarter until his layup attempt was blocked midway through the third.

The Kings won despite a terrible game from Peja Stojakovic, the NBA's seven-foot-tall scorer. Stojakovic is Sacramento's offensive focal point with Webber out because of a sprained ankle.

He missed nine of his first 11 shots, made five turnovers and finished with eight points — 15 below his average.

Kings 95, Raptors 86

Doug Christie scored 20 points as the Sacramento Kings streaked to a huge lead and survived a terrible second half to beat the Toronto Raptors.

Violence Divac added 14 points and 10 rebounds as the Kings returned from a four-game road trip with a difficult victory that kept them undefeated at Arco Arena this season.

Bobby Jackson had 13 points for Sacramento, which jumped out to a 20-point lead but struggled to the final buzzer, even though Toronto coach Len Wilkins removed all of his starters in the closing minutes.

The Kings overcame 23 points and two highlight-reel dunks by Vince Carter, who led a second-half comeback but was on the bench as Toronto made its last run.

The Raptors were within a dozen points when Wilkins emptied his bench. After the Kings shot three straight air-balls, Toronto rallied within seven in the final minute, but got no closer.

Keon Clark had 13 points and 10 rebounds for the Raptors, who lost to Sacramento for the fourth straight time.

The Kings won despite a terrible game from Peja Stojakovic, the NBA's seven-foot-tall scorer. Stojakovic is Sacramento's offensive focal point with Webber out because of a sprained ankle.

He missed nine of his first 11 shots, made five turnovers and finished with eight points — 15 below his average.
When you're a power hitter, said Tuesday. "Give me the ball, I'll do what I want with it."

"Heck, the last year-and-a-half I basically wasn't even in existence in baseball," McGwire said. "I feel like I've been hanging around." That said, McGwire feels he'll be a first-ballot Hall of Famer along with Cal Ripken and Tony Gwynn in five years. "It's just something that comes after you have a fantastic career," McGwire said. "And if the writers vote me in the first time with Cal and Tony, that would be total- ly awesome."

McGwire said a combination of factors led to his decision to walk away from a $30 million, two-year contract extension, including the injuries. "You can do that. This was the season, you can say it was the injury, the surgery," McGwire said. "My mind and body are worn out from playing baseball I was 12-years-old. I'm done. I've always told myself I'm not going to hang around and just be another player."

McGwire had surgery to correct patella tendinitis after spending the second half of the 2000 season on the disabled list. He lasted six games in 2001 before going back on the DL, and never felt right. "The thought of rehabbing again and going to spring training and hearing Tony's 45-minute dissertation on bunt plays is not appealing whatsoever," McGwire said. "You sit back and think about this thing and you just go, 'I have no desire to do that.' I am so ready to move on with the second half of my life."

McGwire knew something was wrong in spring training when he was hitting "lazy fly balls" instead of tape-measure home runs. "After the work I did this winter, I couldn't believe it," McGwire said. "I sat back and I just said, 'How much more can my body take?'"

Only one thing about McGwire's final seasons makes him angry, the revelation that he was taking androstenedione in 1998—the year he hit a record 70 homers. McGwire stopped taking andro in 1999. "What a waste of print, what a waste of film," McGwire said. "It has absolutely nothing to do with hitting a baseball. It helped me get through workouts after a game. Believe me, 90 percent of athletes take something to help themselves out."

Cardinals chairman Bill DeWitt Jr., one of the team's primary owners, said McGwire telephoned him Monday night. DeWitt told the St. Louis Post-Dispatch that he wasn't upset that McGwire had informed ESPN first about his retirement, adding that McGwire tried to call him Sunday night but he wasn't home. "That was his prerogative," DeWitt told the Post-Dispatch. "I made it clear that he wanted McGwire to continue in some role with the club. DeWitt said McGwire could be a spring training instructor like Bob Gibson and Lou Brock, but doubted McGwire would want to do that right away.
Lawyers meet to discuss contraction

Associated Press

NEW YORK

Lawyers for baseball players and owners hope to agree Wednesday on dates for hearing the union’s grievance to stop two major league teams from being eliminated.

The sides planned to speak by telephone with Shyam Das, baseball's arbitrator. Commissioner Bud Selig reiterated Tuesday he hopes to complete contraction by Dec. 15, with Montreal and Minnesota the most likely candidates for elimination, but the union contends the move violates its labor contract and that franchises can’t be folded without its permission.

Selig acknowledged there was a chance the elimination could be held up by a judge or arbitrator, which could create lame-duck teams.

"That happened to the Braves in 1965 and it’s happened to other clubs, but you can’t worry about that," he said. "The intention is to get it done."

In Washington, Rep. John Conyers and Sen. Paul Wellstone, both Democrats, called a Wednesday news conference to introduce legislation to attack baseball’s antitrust exemption. On Monday, Senator Majority Leader Tom Daschle asked Selig to delay any decision on folding teams for at least one year.

"I spoke with Senator Daschle," Selig said at the Hans Greenberg Sportsmanship Award dinner Tuesday night. "Any conversations I’ve had with people like that stays between us."

Florida Attorney General Rob Butterworth subpoenaed documents from Selig and the two teams in his state on Tuesday to find out if Florida and Tampa Bay are candidates for elimination.

"The people of Florida are entitled to some straight answers about the future of baseball in Florida," Butterworth said.

The subpoenas require baseball to turn over documents to Butterworth by Dec. 13 — including all studies, research or reports relating to contraction and any documents relating to the Nov. 6 meeting and the contraction vote that day.

Butterworth also wants documents relating to profits or losses by the two Florida teams and major league baseball, as well as the potential economic impact to Miami and the Tampa-St. Petersburg area of losing the teams.

"Why are they always hiding behind closed doors? They act like they are electing a pope."

Rob Butterworth
Florida attorney general

Florida’s Supreme Court ruled in 1994 that baseball’s antitrust exemption didn’t apply to franchise movement. Minnesota’s Supreme Court ruled the opposite way two years ago, saying the exemption protected the Twins and baseball from an investigation by its attorney general.

In Minneapolis, a court hearing on a lawsuit filed against the Twins by the Metropolitan Sports Facilities Commission was been delayed again after a second judge was removed from the case. Hennepin County District Court Judge Harry Crump is expected to hear the case Thursday. The lawsuit is attempting to force the Twins to play in the Metrodome through the end of their lease in 2002.

Crump replaced Judge Catherine Anderson, who was picked to hear the case last week after lawyer Roger Magnuson, who represents the Twins and Selig, filed a notice removing Judge Diana Eagon. Eagon issued a temporary restraining order barring the Twins from being eliminated.

The commission is seeking a permanent injunction.

In Montreal, Gold Glove shortstop Orlando Cabrera was selected the Expos player of the year by the Montreal chapter of the Baseball Writers’ Association of America. Cabrera, who hit .276 with 91 doubles and 94 RBIs, hopes he doesn’t become the final winner.

Evan Adams

Come take a fascinating journey into the customs, culture, and accomplishments of Native Americans. Evan Adams is an accomplished actor, writer, and dancer. Join us for a personal account of Evan’s experiences.

When: Nov. 12th, 2001 @ 7:00pm
Where: Reckers Hospitality Room

Native American Week is co-sponsored by NASAND and MSPS

Evan Adams

Come take a fascinating journey into the customs, culture, and accomplishments of Native Americans. Evan Adams is an accomplished actor, writer, and dancer. Join us for a personal account of Evan’s experiences.

When: Nov. 12th, 2001 @ 7:00pm
Where: Reckers Hospitality Room

Native American Week is co-sponsored by NASAND and MSPS

Jackie Bird

Come be a part of a wonderful experience that includes contemporary and traditional music, songs, and dances. Join us as we share this experience with Jackie Bird, a Native American who has mastered the skills necessary to preserve her culture.

When: Nov. 16th, 2001 @ 8:00pm
Where: Notre Dame Faculty Dining Room

*Native American Week is co-sponsored by NASAND and MSPS
BCS Football

Fourth-ranked Ducks in hunt despite single loss

By JEFF SMITH
Oregon Daily Emerald

EUGENE, Ore. – Nebraska is one. Miami is two. Oklahoma is three.
And the Oregon Ducks, who reside in the wacky West Coast Pac-10 Conference, are still in the hunt for the national title. Which leaves the Ducks with two weekends off to watch and wait to see how it all plays out, before worrying about Oregon State on Dec. 1.

The top two teams in the final BCS rankings on Dec. 9 will meet in the Jan. 3 Rose Bowl and play for the title. Which leaves the Ducks with two weekends off to watch and wait to see how it all plays out, before worrying about Oregon State on Dec. 1.

As of Monday, though, Oregon would rather just enjoy its 21-20 win over UCLA and not worry too much about all the peaky little details regarding the BCS standings.

"We don't worry about that," Oregon tight end Justin Peelle said. "I thought they had all written us off by now."

Just behind the Ducks (9-1, 6-1 Pac-10) at the fifth spot, with 11.98 points, is Florida, followed by Texas, Tennessee, Washington State and Stanford.

Bauman can hardly be blamed for not wanting to think about all that has to happen for the Ducks to make a return trip to Pasadena.

Apr. 24 when second-ranked Nebraska visits No. 15 Colorado.

The fourth-ranked Ducks in hunt despite single loss

The BCS standings can be quite confusing when considering that they're formulated using both the coaches and media polls, eight separate computer rankings, the strength of schedule, the teams' records and added points for 'quality wins,' which are victories over teams currently in the BCS top 15.

For Oregon, that win is against Washington State, giving the Ducks reason to root for the Cougars this week despite what a loss by their top 20 BCS points.

"It's definitely exciting to be rated that high, it's awesome, really,
but whatever happens, happens," Rashad Bauman
Oregon cornerback

Harrington
Peelle

The Copy Shop
Special on Color Copies
8.5 x 11 regular paper only .79

La Alianza
Presented by Cesar Lora

Come see the paintings of this world-renowned artist from the Dominican Republic in the Coalition lounge on the second floor of LaFun

Wednesday, November 14th
Thursday, November 15th

The Guitar Player's Association

Professors of the Blues

Don Savoie
Jams Reckers

Thursday, 11:00 PM
MVP is 22nd on the career homer list with 462.

community service and counseling.

wife in the head. He was ordered to undergo battery counseling.

his vehicle into a new car driven by his first wife. He agreed to lem."

brothers basically beat these guys up, putting them in the hospi­

and the other needed 20 stitch­ motives."

source of people with financial

this matter vigorously in court," lawyer Angel Ruiz said.

“They both feel these allega­

false and are the people with financial

matters."

one’s nose was broken and the other needed 20 stitch­

his lip, Miami Beach Police Detective Bobby Hernandez said.

and another needing 20 stitches in his lip.

The baseball star was charged with two counts of aggravated battery in a Halloween night scuffle. His twin brother, Ozzie, was charged with one count.

Canseco said he was at the club with his brother and three women when a man grabbed the player’s date inappropriately and became aggressive. Canseco said another man approached his brother, who pushed him back, touching off the fight.

“I know that my brother and myself were definitely victims and the girl I was with got sexually assaulted," Jose Canseco said.

“We got attacked. We are the victims here. We just defended ourselves."

The brothers were taken to Miami-Dade County Jail on Tuesday night and were expected to post bond.

Jose and Ozzie were both looking forward to defending this case vigorously in court," lawyer Angel Ruiz said.

“They both feel these allega­

false and are the people with financial

matters."

one’s nose was broken and the other needed 20 stitch­

his lip, Miami Beach Police Detective Bobby Hernandez said.

“This started as a verbal altercation. And then the two Canseco brothers basically beat these guys up, putting them in the hospital," Hernandez said. “Obviously this was an anger control problem."

Canseco has been in trouble with the law before.

In 1997, police arrested him on charges he smacked his second wife in the head. He was ordered to undergo battery counseling.

In 1992, he was charged with aggravated assault for ramming

his vehicle into a new car driven by his first wife. He agreed to community service and counseling.

Canseco, 37, is a free agent after hitting .258 with 16 homers

salary arbitration last winter, he insisted that

with Texas.

agreed to a record $252 million, 10-year deal

strikeouts jumped from 100 to 142.

firing of batting coach Merv Rettenmund, the heavier and saw his average slip 52 points. His back to the World Series.”

finishing last in the AL West.

able with the Braves, a team that has won 10

straight division titles.

Jones' best year was 2000, when he batted .303 with 36 homers and 104 RBIs.

Those numbers may have contributed to the firing of batting coach Merv Rettenmund, the only member of the staff who wasn't brought back for 2002.

“We got attacked. We are the victims here. We just defended ourselves.”

Jose Canseco

free agent

“T his really doesn’t change anything,”

Schuerholz said. “When we were done with the season that we would talk and we would come to an agreement.”

That’s exactly what happened. General manager John Schuerholz said the two sides met Monday and had no trouble working out a deal.

Andrew decided what he wanted to do," Schuerholz said. “When we spoke, we learned quickly that we were pretty much on the same

page.”

Jones batted only.251 and struck out 142

but he also had 34 homers, 104 RBIs

and won his fourth straight Gold Glove.

“He was still able to amass very, very strong numbers as far as run production,” Schuerholz said.

“None of that is totally happy with what

Andrew did as compared to what he is capable of doing. But we still think he’s one of the best, brightest, exciting young players in all of baseball.”

Canseco is represented by Scott Boras, who has compared the 24-year-old outfielder with another of his clients, shortstop Alex

Rodriguez. Almost a year ago, Rodriguez

agreed to a record $252 million, 10-year deal

with Texas.

White Jones won a record $82 million in salary arbitration last winter, he insisted that money was not his primary objective. He relied heavily on the counseling of his father, Henry.

“I don’t want to have more money than everybody,” Jones said. “I just want to live comfortable. In the future, I don’t want to do something else to raise my family. But I never thought about making $20 million.”

He would have been eligible for free agency

after the 2002 World Series but felt comfortable with the Braves, a team that has won 10

straight division titles.

Jones alluded to Rodriguez, who had the best season of his career while the Rangers were finishing last in the AL West. “All those people making $20 million never make the playoffs,” Jones said. “I want to stay with a team that’s going back to the playoffs,

back to the World Series.”

Jones' best year was 2000, when he batted .303 with 36 homers and 104 RBIs.

This past season, he reported to spring training a little heavier and saw his average slip 52 points.

his strikingly jumped from 100 to 142.

Those numbers may have contributed to the firing of batting coach Merv Rettenmund, the only member of the staff who wasn't brought back for 2002.

“I didn’t have the great season that everybody expected me to have,” Jones said. “This is a good chance for me to lie in for six years.

When I’m 30, I can be a free agent again and we can make decisions on the contract again.”

Jones brake in with the Braves at age 19, homering in his first two World Series at-bats at Yankee Stadium in 1996. He became a full­ time starter the following season.

The long-term signing of Jones begins what figures to be a busy offseason for the Braves, who won lost to Arizona in the NL championship series.

Closer John Smoltz, catcher Javy Lopez, All-­

Star pitcher John Burkett and nine other plays have filed for free agency.

“It really doesn’t change anything,”

Schuerholz said. “We do have some cost certainty with Andruw, which will be helpful as we move through the process. But we’ve got to be fluid and flexible.”

Before fi pm

Prize for best paper 2002

Early Bird Dinner

at great prices.

S 1.50 off for Students

Men with a Mission:

On the trail to adventure

I T COULD BE an inner-city

alley or a po lice jungle road to a remote village. Cler­ etan priests and brothers travel anywhere to bring the love of Jesus to the people who need it

most. Following the tradition

established by our founder,

most. Follow ing the tradition

priests and brothers travel

in 58 nations around the world.

On the trail to adventure,

I T COULD BE an inner-city

alley or a police jungle road to a remote village. Cler­ etan priests and brothers travel anywhere to bring the love of

Jesus to the people who need it

most. Following the tradition

established by our founder,

most. Following the tradition

priests and brothers travel

in 58 nations around the world.

MEN WITH A MISSION

Great Japanese food

at great prices.

Come join us for our lunch specials!

Early Bird Dinner

$1.50 off for Students

MIKADO

A J APANESE RESTA URANT

Lunch 11am-2pm

Dinner 5-9pm

462 US 1 S, North Bay Village

(305) 272-0356

(305) 272-0606

On the trail to adventure

I T COULD BE an inner-city

alley or a police jungle road to a remote village. Cler­

etan priests and brothers travel anywhere to bring the love of

Jesus to the people who need it

most. Following the tradition

established by our founder,

most. Following the tradition

priests and brothers travel

in 58 nations around the world.

On the trail to adventure,

I T COULD BE an inner-city

alley or a police jungle road to a remote village. Cler­

etan priests and brothers travel anywhere to bring the love of

Jesus to the people who need it

most. Following the tradition

established by our founder,

most. Following the tradition

priests and brothers travel

in 58 nations around the world.

KING FOOTBALL,

NOTRE DAME

and AMERI CAN CULTURE

A lecture by:

Professor Michael Oriard, ND ’70

Currently a Distinguished Professor of American Literature and Culture at

Oregon State University

Please join us!

When: Thursday, November 15, 2001

Time: 7:30

Where: DeBartolo 207

Sponsored by the Mendelson Center for Sport, Character and Culture and the Department of American Studies
FOXTROT

Happy Birthday! You will be in the limelight this year. Your innate ability to handle孙悟空al responsibilities will put you in an elite category. Your unique approach will be filled with perks. Your expertise will be sought. Satisfaction will be yours. Numbers 4, 23, 24, 40, 48.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will be disciplined enough to get your work done and then you may find yourself daydreaming. You may misunderstand a situation today. Don't let your emotions interfere with efficiency. You are likely to have difficulties with your expenses. GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may misinterpret a situation today. Don't let your emotions interfere with efficiency. You are likely to have difficulties with your expenses.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You must be careful not to hurt someone's feelings. You may not do it intentionally, but the ramifications will be exaggerated. Compromise is necessary if you wish to avoid verbal feuds.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can survive even the toughest opponent to think your way around. Someone you least expect may want to make you feel bad.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's time to keep a secret. Don't let your emotions interfere with efficiency. GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may misinterpret a situation today. Don't let your emotions interfere with efficiency.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's time to keep a secret. Don't let your emotions interfere with efficiency. GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may misinterpret a situation today. Don't let your emotions interfere with efficiency.

 horoscope

© 2001 Universal Press Syndicate

THE OBSERVER

Published Monday through Friday, The Observer is a vital source of information on people and events in the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's Community.

Join the more than 13,000 readers who have found The Observer an indispensable link to the two campuses. Please complete the accompanying form and mail it today to receive The Observer in your home.

THE OBSERVER

P.O. Box Q
Notre Dame, IN 46556
FOOTBALL

Davie refuses to resign

By MIKE CONNOLLY
Sports Writer

Bob Davie said there were "zero" circumstances that he could envision that might prompt him to resign as Notre Dame's head football coach. Davie said plans to stick to the terms of the five-year contract extension he signed with Notre Dame in December 2000 and remain as head coach. Davie said the terms of the contract prevent him from making a decision until the Board of Trustees meets next Tuesday night. Davie said he had no idea what the trustees would decide, but he was planning to keep his team on the field. "I totally plan on being back here next year and continue to try and get this football team to improve," he said. "In December I made a long term commitment to Notre Dame. It's a place I wanted to be and coach." Davie said he has always worked as hard as he can to make Notre Dame better and has no intentions of stopping now. "A lot of people have invested a lot in this program but to one has as much invested in it as I do," he said. "I haven't spent one minute trying to do anything on the sideline. I mean, every second of my time has gone into this football team." Davie said that no one is more frustrated about the 3-5 start to the season than he is but believes the Irish can win their last three games to finish 6-5. He also said the Irish have "a lot of positives looking ahead to next season." see DAVIE/page 13

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Irish bash Buccaneers

By KATIE McVOY
Assoc. Sports Editor

The score wasn't the only thing that looked different on Tuesday night. Last week, with four minutes left in the first half in an exhibition match with Ohio Girls' Basketball Legends, the Irish were trailing by 10. On Tuesday they were leading by more than 20 against the Christian Brothers Buccaneers. Last week freshman post player Jackie Batteast began the game with four missed shots. On Tuesday she had two points on the board less than six seconds into regulation play. It was a more confident team that took the court on Tuesday night and came home with a decisive 87-79 victory against the Christian Brothers Buccaneers. "I thought we did some really good things," head coach Muffet McGraw said. "Our effort was tremendous. I think that's one thing — this team works tremendously hard, really battling the boards." Batteast, who had a difficult opening exhibition, made a place in the starting lineup against the Ohio Girls Basketball Magazine Legends, led that effort. After going 4 for 17 from the floor last week, she opened the game with a field goal and racked up eight points by halftime. "It felt good to make a shot," she said. "I was happy to actually start off with a bucket." Batteast finished the game with 17 points, six rebounds and four steals. "I didn't realize how quick (Bazanskis) was," Buccaneers head coach Todd Schafer said. "I knew she was long and athletic, but she's got a really quick first step. Her stealing skills are a lot better than they were when I last saw her play 6 years ago." The solid Irish defense had 15 steals — a stark contrast to the team that struggled defensively in the first half of its opening exhibition. Notre Dame totaled 29 defensive rebounds and forced Christian Brothers to go 0-8 early in the game. It wasn't until the 13-minute mark that the Buccaneers got their first basket. "I was very pleased with the defense in the first half," McGraw said. "I thought we did a very good job. That's something we've been working on. I think our man-to-man is improving." With junior Amanda Barksdale still out with an injury and senior Ericka Haney sidelined for breaking a team rule, the line-up looked different. Despite the change in the Irish line-up and the varied configurations throughout the game, the Irish adjustment on defense was tremendous. see HOOPS/page 13

ND WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL

No. 24 Irish to face Illinois State

By NOAH AMSTADTER
Sports Editor

It should be both entertaining and emotional in the Joyce Center tonight when the No. 24 Notre Dame volleyball team takes on Illinois State. The team will honor its three seniors before their final career home game in a contest selected by WHME-46 and designated by the athletic department as a "Gold Game." "I'm excited and sad," said senior middle blocker Malinda Goralski. "It's been a wonderful four years and it's crazy that it went by so fast." Outside hitter Marcie Bomhack will miss playing in an arena in which Notre Dame has won 19 matches in a row dating back to a loss last fall against then-No. 7 Colorado State. "It's always fun to play at home and have your fans supporting you and play in front of people you know and you feel comfortable playing in front of here," Bomhack said. "It'll be fun to be able to do that and also be sad because it's the last time." As much as Irish head coach Debbie Brown loves her seniors, nights like tonight are ones she never looks forward to. "It's emotional for the seniors, it's emotional for the team, it's emotional for the staff," Brown said. "I guess part of it is we know the season isn't over. It's kind of one of those things where you're sad for a few minutes but you just get back into the game and you play." Kristy Kreher, the final senior in the group, is focusing more on tonight's game than on the fact that it's her last in a Notre Dame uniform. She said the "most exciting part" of tonight's game is being at home for the senior night celebration. see VOLLEYBALL/page 13

SPORTS AT A GLANCE

- National Sports
  - Baseball, p. 16
  - Oregon, p. 17
  - Braves p. 18

- SPORTS
  - Randy Johnson, p. 12
  - NBA, p. 14
  - Mark McGuire, p. 15

- Observer online edition
  - http://www.nd.edu/~observer

- Wednesday, November 13, 2001

SPORTS