Two Years Later

Security doubts remain

By LUKE BUSAM
News Writer

Exactly two years after the Notre Dame community woke up to the living nightmare that was Sept. 11, 2001, the fear has not totally vanished. Time has begun to heal the wounds of that day, and for many on campus, the apprehension and tense feelings are beginning to dissipate.

For others, the time for caution is not gone.

Professor of Political Science and fellow of the Institute for International Peace Studies Daniel Lindley said, "Notre Dame is a high value target, especially football games. Notre Dame is a core symbol of Catholic identity and collegiate sports are a symbol of national identity. But I feel much safer in South Bend than a lot of other places I can think of. Keep in mind that there are thousands of other high value targets in the [United States]. For example, there are 132 chemical plants which, if attacked, could cause over a million casualties each.

Many Notre Dame students have little concern about an attack on campus.

"I don’t feel at risk for an attack in South Bend or on campus. It’s not exactly a huge target," said Matt Storl, a senior accounting major.

Turtle Creek bust leads to 26 charges, 5 arrests

By KEVIN ALLEN

The Sept. 6 alcohol bust at the Turtle Creek apartment complex, which broke up several tailgate parties prior to Notre Dame’s first football game of the 2003 season, has led to 26 people being charged with a variety of offenses, including minor in consumption, resisting arrest, and inducing minors to possess alcoholic beverages.

The crackdown was organized by the Indiana State Excise Police and assisted by the South Bend Police Department and the Notre Dame Security Police.

Lt. Greg Deitchley of the Indiana State Excise Police said most offenders were ticketed at the scene. Five were arrested and taken to the St. Joseph County jail.

Since tailgating had gone on unopposed for years at Turtle Creek, the crackdown came as a surprise to some students. Deitchley said the Excise Police were motivated to organize the bust because of what he called "problems in the past."

"The city attorney's office got involved because they got complaints," he said. "[The excise police] worked in conjunction with the South Bend Police Department and the city attorney's office." According to Deitchley, the excise police intended to make a strong statement with Saturday's operation, and there are tentative plans for the excise police to return to Turtle Creek on future weekends.

"I don't know what weekends we'll be there, but there's a strong possibility we'll be back," said Deitchley.

Turtle Creek bust appears to have been a one-time event.

9/11 memorial construction appears unlikely

By MEGHAN DOWNES

A year and a half after a design was selected for the Sept. 11 memorial competition, it appears as though the memorial will not be constructed.

University spokesman Matt Storl said the University never committed to build the memorial even though the School of Architecture sponsored a competition to design it in spring 2002.

"Since 9/11 there have been wars in Afghanistan and Iraq and it is uncertain what lies ahead in the way of fall out from the tragic events of that day two years ago," Storl said. "I think the administration feels it would be best to wait a few years before determining the most appropriate way to honor those who have lost their lives in the period."

Kara Kelly, director of communications for the School of Architecture, said Notre Dame never promised a memorial. However, the architecture school hoped the winning design would be considered for construction.

Then fifth-year architecture students Kevin Clark and Meg Kroener designed the winning entry which was a horseshoe shaped memorial surrounding the South Quad flagpole where the Sept. 11, 2001 Mass was held.

The jolt will never fade

There is a store near Rockefeller Center that sells only FNLY paraphernalia. Long boxes in its narrow store — the small storefront is dwarfed by surrounding buildings. A glimpse of red through the glass, though, attracts passers-by, revealing a huge model of the 9/11 monument on the display floor. Managed by off-duty firefighters and other fire department employees, the store is a popular destination for classic trips, which come for informational sessions on fire safety. Proceeds are used for firefighter education on the subject.

It's a little store, but I hadn't visited it before Sept. 11. I don't even know if it existed then; it probably did, but the first time I stepped through the doors was several months after the tragedy. I was on a gift-buying mission and spotted that I might as well support the FNLY — like the rest of New York, I had newfound respect and estimations for the fire department. So I selected a few presents and, predictably, didn't make it out without buying something for myself.

The all-girls high school graduating class was wrapping, I leafed through the pages. Each store is dwarfed by surrounding buildings. The jolt is good; we happened to our country, our neighbors and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Column are those of the author and respects, not just to the firefighters lost but to our world in general. The jolt is good; we have made it out without buying something for myself.

Seattle steamed over coffee tax

Seattle — This city's devotion to the almighty coffee bean will run smack into its equally famous liberal conscience as a proposed tax on espresso drinks goes to voters next week.

On Tuesday, Seattle residents will face a ballot question asking them to add a dime-a-cup tax to their espresso drinks. This "luxury" tax, as Initiative 77 calls it, would pay for preschool and day care programs.

But for many espresso lovers in a city that helped push the gourmet coffee revolution, the proposal is nothing short of heresy.

"This is not a luxury," 34-year-old tech support worker Rob Marker said solemnly, hoisting his ice vanilla mocha on the side—walk outside the hip cafe Coffee Meath.

Security guard C. J. Lessig, between sips of his iced coconut mocha, agreed: "It's a way of life, man!"

Seattle has earned a reputation as a tree-hugging, whale-saving, WTO-protesting, tax-friendly bastion of liberalism. But scratch a lefty espresso drink on this issue, and you might get Rusch Limsbaugh.

"Here I am, forced to pay more for my basic necessity to fund irresponsibility," said Marker, warning to the topic: "I believe people have kids without considering it. I take issue with the greater issue of public funding for child care. Yes, it's needed, but it also feels irresponsible."

Antique car traverses two continents

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — After a 60,000-mile drive from Argentina to Alaska, a couple's dream to reach the Arctic Ocean in their antique car stalled with their goal in sight. The oil fields separating them from the ocean had closed to visitors for the season.

But now, Herman Zapp and his wife, Candelaria, will be allowed to continue the 230 miles to Prudhoe Bay after getting the green light from the BP oil company.

The Zaps left Buenos Aires on Jan. 25, 2000, in a dark blue 1928 Graham-Paige automobile with "Driving from Argentina to Alaska" painted on its side.

At their second official meeting, the Student Senate laid out their plans for the coming year.

Howard senator Brin Anderson said that her committee, Residence Life, plans to look into the recent issue regarding RA’s and their training policies. Anderson, along with the rest of her committee, plans to meet with associate vice president of student affairs Bill Kerk sometime next week to discuss the issue.

Judicial Council President Elliot PoinDEXTER informed the Senate that Freshman Class Council elections will be held Sept. 22. Any freshman considering running for a position needs to present the Student Government with a petition signed by 20 percent of their dorm’s freshman class. Petitions are due on Monday by 6 p.m.

A candidate must win 50 percent of the vote in order to be elected, and if no one achieves this amount, the top two candidates will participate in a run-off election on Wednesday, September 24. The elections will be held in each dorm.

Chief of staff Emily Chin reminded senators to inform their dorms of the events that will be taking place today in memory of the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks. Chin said there will be a rosary held at the Grotto at noon and a Mass in the Basilica at 5:15 p.m.

Judge seals victim's medical records

By MEGHANNE DOWNES
News Editor

During Donald Dykes's trial Tuesday, a St. Joseph County judge sealed the medical records of the woman who accused four former Notre Dame football players of sexually assaulting her.

Judge Jerome Freese ordered both the woman's medical and psychological records to be sealed during the defense's cross-examination of her when it was discovered she was never told she had the right to refuse their release.

During Alemi's trial, the first of the four former players trials, both the defense and prosecution used records to present their cases.

Freese blamed the legal mistake on former St. Joseph County Prosecutor Chris Toth and said it was "as close as you can come to malpractice."

The charges against the four former players were filed by Toth's office before he lost his election to current St. Joseph County Prosecutor Michael Dyrvak. The four cases were then transferred to a special prosecutor, Hendricks County Prosecutor Maureen Devlin, because two of Dyrvak's deputy prosecutors either worked with or served as an attorney for one of the players.

Dykes is the second of the former players to be tried and is charged with rape, conspiracy to commit rape and sexual battery.

Last month, Elam was convicted of sexual battery but acquitted of criminal deviate conduct and conspiracy to commit rape.

Lorenzo Dyrvak, a freshman from Florida, is scheduled to be tried and is an attorney for one of the players.

The four former players testified at Elam's trial that the sexual acts were consensual and maintained their innocence, while the woman said she was gang raped.

Storin said the University's decision to wait to build the memorial is not unprecedented. The Clarke Memorial Fountain located in front of LaFortune honors those who died in the Vietnam War and was built in 1986, 11 years after the war's conclusion.

"A memorial hopefully lasts forever and is permanent," Storin said. "You want to have the proper perspective when you come to building one."

Storin did not rule out the possibility of the winning design being used in the future, though he did say if the memorial was built, it would be smaller than originally envisioned. Storin also said the proposed location of a memorial on South Quad would be a radical step, as the expansive space has no structures in its interior, except for the flagpole.

Doubts
Klein, a senior from Long Island, N.Y. Klein, who spent his summer working in New York City, said that although he may feel safe at Notre Dame, the unease that descended on the city two years ago has still not faded. This summer's electrical blackout, he said, only proved his assumptions.

"When I was in the blackout you could tell people were thinking there was more to come than a blackout. Obviously, though, I feel more at risk in this city than at home in the house in the suburb. Terrorists aren't going to attack something incongruous like Floral Park," he said.

Freshman Sarah Teshwet of Wayne, a town in northern New Jersey, said she didn't think Notre Dame could be a target of attack. "I feel safer here than at home and I feel quite safe at home," she said.

Students from other parts of the country further removed from the direct effects of the terrorist acts said they have begun to feel relatively safer at home, due to increased security and safety measures that have been taken across the nation.

Sarah Cancaliero, a junior from El Paso, TX, said she had specific reasons for her feelings of security while at home. "I do feel safe at home," she said.

While students were mostly united in their lack of concern for their safety on campus or at home, they expressed differing views regarding the "War on Terror" and the Department of Homeland Security's Terror Alert System.

A number said they believed the "War on Terror" has increased American awareness and security. Galmarini said she had different beliefs.

"We haven't found Saddam, we haven't found Osama. I think it's made us look pretty vulnerable actually. It's very obvious that we haven't accomplished what we set out to do," she said.

Cynicism over the Terror Alert System was generally expressed. Students said it was unreliable, of little impact and colorful, but mean­less.

Cancela said the system had its merits, saying, "I think anything we do in that respect can make us safer. Focusing any intelligent group on one goal is a step in the right direction. We are making a concerted effort on something we weren't making an effort on before. The system definitely makes people more aware of the status of terrorism and the potential threats on the horizon."

While many students expressed a strong hope that the government's efforts to combat terrorism activity will prove successful, they did not express the belief that another attack is impossible.

"More than likely another attack will occur. I feel it will be difficult for it to be on the same scale as 9/11. It's not out of the question," said Klein.

Bust

Deitchley
Although officers of the Notre Dame Security Department were present at Turtle Creek on Saturday, the University did not take any action in planning the crackdown.

Deitchley said NDPD was called, and we've made progress with the border patrol we have always had. There's always been increased awareness in El Paso because of illegal immigrants and drugs. They've added weapons of mass destruction to their plate now and further increased awareness.

Far removed from both borders and major cities, Colin Pugno, a junior from Iowa, said he feels relatively safe in his hometown of Des Moines.

"I realize that the nation at large is still in danger but I also realize that Des Moines is probably not a hot spot for terrorism," he said.

Agin Galmarini, a freshman from Florida, echoed Pugno's sentiments.

"I don't think there's anything there that's worth striking it Fl. Myers," she said, adding "I feel safe at ND. I can't explain it, but I do."

Not all members of the Notre Dame community agree that the United States' efforts to combat terrorism have resulted in complete confidence in personal safety.

"I do not feel that the war on terrorism has made me safe. Safes, yes, safe no. 9/11 was a wake-up call, and we've made progress with some degree of emergency preparedness, drug checkpoints, and disrupting al-Qaeda, but the Department of Homeland Security needs to get its act together and the funds for airport security are woefully short, among other problems," Lindley said.

While students were mostly united in their lack of concern for their safety on campus or at home, they expressed differing views regarding the "War on Terror" and the Department of Homeland Security's Terror Alert System.

Those receiving citations on Saturday will be processed through the St. Joseph County court system. Deitchley said most offenders will be offered pre-trial diversion for a $250 fine. If they complete the program then their police record will be expunged.

Saudis declare Barbie immoral

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — Saudi Arabia's religious police have declared Barbie dolls a threat to morality, complaining that the revealing clothes of the "Jewish" toy — allegedly from the kingdom — are offensive to Islam.

The Committee for the Propagation of Virtue and Prevention of Vice, as the religious police are officially known, lists the dolls on a so-called black list of items deemed offensive to the conservative Saudi interpretation of Islam.

"Jewish Barbie dolls, with their revealing clothes and shameful accessories, are a symbol of decadence to the perverted West. Let us beware of her dangers and be careful," said a message posted on the site.

Bush calls for more police powers

WASHINGTON — President Bush told Congress on Wednesday to "amend the law enforcement officials and arm them with stronger legal powers to fight terrorism," saying that groups, such as the Sept. 11 attacks, are evolving and that new laws are needed.

The president's announcement came in a speech at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va., as he sought to expand the federal death penalty, toughen tools they have to fight terror that "the American people," Bush said, "have said they want to see more police powers.

He specifically called for expanded use of the death penalty, tougher bail restrictions and greater subpoena powers that he said are available for other crimes, such as drug trafficking and embezzlement, but can't be used against terrorism. "This disparity in the law makes no sense," Bush said in a speech at the FBI Academy in nearby Quantico, Va. Bush's appeal threw the White House into a growing debate over the anti-terrorism USA Patriot Act enacted after the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001. Critics say the law is too intrusive and a threat to civil liberties and fear that the administration is trying to pass a second version of the measure in piece meal fashion. Even some House and Senate Republicans have talked about rolling back portions of the Patriot Act.

"For the sake of the American people," Bush said, "Congress should change the law and give law enforcement officials the same tools they have to fight other crime."

Bush acknowledged that not all members of Congress agree with the need to tighten the law but said a lot of them do. The White House indicated Bush supports tougher laws in other areas beyond the three instances he cited.

The American Civil Liberties Union said that "further erasures of judicial oversight and the basic checks and balances are far the wrong path to take."

Osama bin Laden appears in this image from a recent video aired Wednesday on al-Jazeera TV. Bin Laden declared the Sept. 11 attacks "only the first skirmishes" in a larger campaign against the Western world.

Texas executes 21st killer of '03

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — A man convicted of killing his wife and a convenience store clerk in a 1999 shooting spree was executed Wednesday — a punishment he had requested.

A repentant Larry Allen Hayes said there was "no good answer" for the murders and repeated again that he hoped for forgiveness.

"I'm genuinely sorry for what I did," he said before the lethal injection was administered. "I ask you to reach down in your heart and forgive me. There's no excuse for what I did."

Hayes, 54, was the 21st inmate executed this year, which matched the nation in carrying out capital punishment.

Dioecese to borrow for settlement

BOSTON — The Boston Archdiocese will take out loans and try to collect from its insurance companies to pay its $85 million settlement with victims of child-molesting priests, the archbishop said Wednesday.

Archbishop Sean O'Malley said the archdiocese also considering selling more of its real estate holdings, but he would not give specifics.

He reiterated the church's pledge not to use parish collection money to cover the settlement with 552 victims.

FACULTY SENATE

Group amends Academic Articles

BY BETH ERICKSON

Newspaper

The Faculty Senate convened Wednesday evening, passing a resolution to amend the Academic Articles to create provisions for better representation of not tenured faculty members.

Chairman of the Academic Council and the Faculty Senate under the leadership of Professor John Robinson, the amendment was passed unanimously by University President Father Edward Malloy.

The amendment currently has no provisions regarding severe sanctions for not tenured faculty members. According to senators, hearings are held at the whims of department chairpersons and that members of the faculty are rarely offered hearings.

Instead, private conferences, in which their sanctions are agreed upon, are held. A resolution to establish faculty grievance procedures was sent to the Senate by a vote of 14 to 12. An illustrative list of specific grievances will be added to the proposed amendment.

Professor Robinson, Senate chair, expressed approval of these amendments at the beginning of the meeting. He said that he hoped the Senate could agree upon a new procedure to protect faculty publication of such documents in the event of not tenured faculty members.

Robinson also laid out the goals of the Faculty Senate in better representation and the protection of the rights of all faculty members.

In other Faculty Senate news:

- The Academic Affairs committee discussed shrinking library resources. They are seeking to develop a better process for faculty input.
- The Benefits committee, however, heard from the University about some of the strengths and even perhaps some of the things that might have been done differently.
- The conference, which will include a collaboration of some of the most respected individuals, will focus on the event of the Nobel Committee twelve years ago.

Today, the Joan Kroo Institute's Research Initiative on the Resolution of Ethnic Conflict will host Tutu as the keynote speaker for its "Peacebuilding After Peace Accords" conference. The conference, determining the success of BHRC's research has been countries whose political conflict has been resolved on an official level, but still have a great deal of social and cultural healing to do before peace is restored.

One of the goals of the project is to answer the question of what clues from specific economic and political changes are needed to be done differently. Tutu's position as a religious leader not only set him apart from the members of the RIREC research team, but it made him particularly sensitive for participation in the conference. Omar said, "He is not an academic; he's a religious individual and a practitioner of peace," he said. "He's a very important figure in this world. Religion is often associated with conflict in this world... (Tutu) and others like Dr Martin Luther King Jr... represent wonderful icons of individual leaders who have drawn on their faith commitment and Notre Dame being a university of faith... it's a wonderful example to students that faith can help to heal the world." The lecture, which is free and open to the public, will be held in McKenna Hall today at 7:30 p.m. Omar and Kroo Institute Associate Director Hal Culbertson said they expect a large crowd at the event.

"We don't have a venue large enough for the amount excitement that we've heard on the part of many many people," Omar said. "We will transmit the speech into adjacent rooms at McKenna Hall.

Culbertson said that additional over flow audiences will be sent to DeBartolo 101 to view the speech on a closed-circuit television system.

WTO reps meet amid protests

CANCUN, Mexico — Negotiators from 146 countries sat down to throry trade negotiations Wednesday, weighed down by rich and poor nations' pressing conflicts about agricultural reform and trade, concluding that their delegates could meet mean life or death for billions of people.

Thousands of poor farmers, worried that market pressures would drive them out of business, clashed with riot police as they tried to storm past barricades blocking the site of the World Trade Organization meeting. Hours later they dispersed, vowing to try again.

Int'l Paper to ax 3,000 employees

STAMFORD, Conn. — International Paper Co. plans to cut 3,000 jobs, or about 3.5 per cent of its work force, in the next year to help improve profits, a company spokeswoman said Wednesday.

The company has been discussing the work force reductions with its employees in the past week, said Jenny Boardman, an IP spokeswoman. It employs about 86,500 people over all.

The reductions will primarily affect salaried personnel throughout the company, including cuts at the Stamford headquarters and about 45,000 employees in Memphis, Tenn.

A small portion of the job cuts will be achieved from attrition, but most will be from layoffs, she said. The company will provide severance packages and help finding new jobs, Boardman said.

Former Enron treasurer Ben Glisan Jr. arrives at the federal courthouse in Houston July 26. He was sentenced to five years in prison following his guilty plea last summer.

Glisan was fined in 2001, when an internal probe revealed he gained the $1 million from a $5,800 investment in one of several complex off-the-books deals at the heart of the Justice Department's case against the company. Prosecutors say such deals skimmed profits from Enron.

Early last year, Glisan had tried without success to strike a deal and avoid prosecution by telling what he knows about the financial details.

At Wednesday's court appearance, Glisan hugged his wife, Barbara, and appeared to be suppressing tears before joining his lawyers in front of the bench. The family and the attorneys did not comment.

Glisan arrived at the federal courthouse in Houston last Thursday, July 26, to begin serving a 57-month prison sentence on conspiracy and money laundering charges.

Dollar tumbles on forex markets

NEW YORK — Hurt by continued concerns about the stubbornly weak U.S. labor market, the dollar slid sharply against its main rivals Tuesday, New York Stock Exchange traded an additional $4.14 million in deferred contracts Monday, according to the New York Board of Trade.

Million-dollar bonuses, particularly in 2000 and 2001, accounted for much of the growth.

In the letter, H. Carl McCall, chairman of the exchange's compensation committee, answered point by point the concerns raised by Donaldson last week.

The SEC chairman, who held the top NYSE job before Grasso, questioned the payout and set a Tuesday deadline for the exchange to respond.

The NYSE, a public-private institution charged with regulating the public companies traded under its watch, has been widely criticized for its lack of accountability from its members and was instituting its own reforms. The Aug. 27 disclosure sparked protest throughout the U.S. financial world.

The SEC confirmed Tuesday that it had received McCall's response, but declined to comment further.

Grasso said Tuesday he decided to forgo the $48 million in interest earned on the SEC's case against the company. The SEC confirmed that it had received McCall's response, but declined to comment.

"When my contract was signed in '99, no one could have anticipated the events of compensation," Grasso said. "This institution should not be presuessed with talking about the compensation of its leader."

Kernan temporarily assumes role for ailing O’Bannon

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Minutes after formally transferring Gov. Frank O’Bannon’s powers to Lt. Gov. Joe Kernan on Wednesday, legislative leaders and Supreme Court justices gathered in the Statehouse for prayer.

More than 500 people joined them in the soaring, marbled rotunda for a service that was both solemn and uplifting. And during that hour — in a building that breathes politics — politics disappeared.

Woodie White, Indiana bishop of the United Methodist Church, said it was O’Bannon, a powerful man yet common man, who made that possible.

“There are these times in life when differences in political party, race, ethnicity, social and economic status are transcended, and the community finds a common bond in a shared concern in its corporate pain and grief,” White said.

At a hospital in Chicago, doctors said O’Bannon, 73, had emerged from drug-induced coma and showed some “small but significant improvements” following a Monday stroke. He remained in critical condition Wednesday.

An hour before the prayer service, legislative leaders petitioned the state Supreme Court to transfer power. Kernan already had assumed duties as acting governor, but Republican Senate President Pro Tem Robert Garton and Democratic House Speaker Patrick Bauer wanted to follow a formal process under the Indiana Constitution.

The governor’s wife, Judy, issued a statement from the governor's Chicago hospital saying she was comfortable with their decision.

“We are aware of the formal process that is occurring in Indiana, and in it we are seeing what we have always known: Our state government is a strong institution based on a constitution,” Judy O’Bannon said.

Bauer and Garton said they signed the petition with heavy hearts, since they had long admired O’Bannon and began their Statehouse careers the same time he did. Garton and O’Bannon were elected to the Senate in 1970, and Bauer won his House seat that year.

And Garton said he wanted to emphasize that O’Bannon “is still the governor of Indiana, and Judy O’Bannon is still the first lady of Indiana.”

I say I'm Catholic, but am I lying? More than 90 percent of us claim Christianity, and almost all of us claim some virtues faith, but what does this mean? We have the top American and international students who are likely to join the ranks of success in fields ranging from business to science and community leadership, around the globe. But are we genuinely living what we profess? In searching our ways to cut the grain of the chaff, it must be extremely clear that actions and not individuals are defined as good or bad. The focus is on a positive, encouraged quest to fulfill the greatness we can achieve together. There are pressing questions on the conscience on these issues. Where do I spend my free time and money? Do I spend more on alcohol or in giving to those in hard, life-threatening conditions? Or is it just accepted that college is a time to party more so I can focus better on the serious work to come? Is a time to party more so I can focus better on the serious work to come? Where do I meet my friends? In the business college? Bemoan the corporate focus? But I've met and written about the dean of that college. She's felt the burn of poverty and has an unmistakable value-centered view of her college's education. So why do some students feel a disconnect? Are they simply failing at grounding idealism in necessary tangible skills, or have parts of our community become corporatized? Several questions ROTC on campus and the military it supports. John Paul II opposed the war. How do I answer his criticisms? Can Notre Dame succeed in strengthening a moral voice in the military? Can I make a difference? How do these questions relate to the community here? If Christ were to visit in person, what would he say? What do you think? and security for the American people. The wound to our country or those who inflicted to stand. He knew."

20, 2001, speech to Congress, President George W. Bush, Americans have indeed, a shining city on a hill. In his Sept. 11: "What made Todd different from many Beamer's wife, Lisa, wrote lovingly of her answered God's call that day. Aboard United the flag, 'Firemen don't run out of buildings. Firemen run into buildings.'"

Through their selfless actions, these firemen helped Americans to recapture their faith. But in the wake of these savage terrorist attacks America experienced what Ronald Reagan once said that not all cultures are equal. Some cultures were developed by the Taliban in Afghanistan: — such as those developed by the Taliban in Afghanistan and Saddam Hussein in Iraq — remind us that we should respect Muslims on campus. From the University administration's hysterical warling, one would think that a Kristallnacht against Arabs was underway in Ithaca, N.Y., with Muslim bodies strewn across Route 13. Cornell professor James Garbarino, human development, was in full psychobabble mode, making excuses for the hijackers: "Often (terrorists) have experienced personal suffering or family loss, or historical victimization and are seeking a way to give meaning to that suffering through acts of violent revenge ... It is more than a matter of our good and their evil. Dehumanization is the enemy."

Former University trustee Don Lifton called for anti-war teach-ins to oppose the administration's military efforts in Afghanistan. [On Sept. 12] the reporter of The Observer. We reflect on those who we are as a people. We rediscover the other foundational principles — self-sacrifice, faith in God, and American exceptionalism. "Self-sacrifice was on display in many corners of the United States on Sept. 11, but never more so than in New York City. In her book "A Heart, a Cross, and a Flag," Peggy Noonan captured this spirit: "On a local TV show [on Sept. 12] the reporter Dick Oliver was asked how it was that so many firemen died, couldn't they have escaped, and he said with a rough voice that had love in it, 'Firemen don't run out of buildings. Firemen run into buildings."

Though they were empathetic toward families of the deceased, they seemed to forget lies of the deceased, they seemed to forget about a military response. And finally, in order to inform our huge, worldwide network of alumni about the concerns expressed, Cornell government professor and renowned feminist Anne Marie Smith led an anti-war march, protesting the U.S. attack on Afghanistan. Apparently feminists do not oppose the Taliban if it means they will have to side with America.

Former University President Hunter R. Rawlings III sent out warnings to Cornellians, urging students not to physically protest the U.S. attack on Afghanistan: "W hile im passionate, would not stand up in court. assumption s, and I support The Observer for addressing that Dwyer's case, while impressed, would not stand up in court."

Ryan Dwyer accuses The Observer of providing immoral information to the new freshman class, citing Planned Parenthood as a place to fill birth control prescriptions since University Health Services will not. As a student in law school he should know better. Just to make sure, I checked the inaugural edition of The Observer. Yes, they refer to birth control and Planned Parenthood, but the reference is to pills. They did not recommend Planned Parenthood for condoms or help with abortions, just birth control pills. Perhaps, as a male, Dwyer is unaware of this, but there is a significant percentage of young women, myself included, who depend on birth control for non-contraceptive purposes. Today, birth control pills are commonly prescribed for a variety of medical conditions and even by dermatologists for skin care purposes. I am not naive, and I do realize that many women will seek birth control pills there for contraception. Also, I too am pro-life and am not a supporter of Planned Parenthood.

I do, however, sympathize with our young female freshmen whose resources for legitimate medical needs are restricted by incorrect religious assumptions, and I support The Observer for addressing that Dwyer's case, while impressed, would not stand up in court.

Richard Nixon once cautioned young people that higher education makes the mind strong but the backbone weak. His warning is especially appropriate when examining the contrast between our country's renewed patriotism and our campus' "Blame America First" attitude is horrifying. Birth control is needed for medical reasons

Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s offer the cast of 2003’s Into the Woods continued the trend of musicals. This year, they continue the tradition with West Side Story, presented by the CDT.

“We are quite a fun group, and it’s going to be quite a fun ride.”

Auditions are on Sept. 15 and 16, but the show itself isn’t until February. Auditions consist of both singing and dancing. Materials are available now in the Library.

PTEM Co. also sponsors a Musical Revue that is held in March at LaFortune Ballroom.

The Not-So-Royal Shakespeare Company

The NSRSC will be sharing their flair for the bard by presenting the Shakespearean comedy Much Ado About Nothing on Dec. 4 through 7. Auditions are Sept. 25 and 26 at 204 O’Shaughnessy Hall. Why should you try out for such a great show?

“Why wouldn’t you do Shakespeare?” asked Katy Kertez, who will be directing the spring NSRSC show King Lear. “I mean, who needs an excuse to perform shows by the greatest playwright ever? Like, y’know?”

Those who are auditioning are asked to prepare a short dramatic Shakespearean monologue, though cold readings from the play will be accepted.

The Saint Edward’s Hall Players

The SEHP started out as a Frisby night production, put on by St. Eds, for the entertainment of its residents and the rest of the campus. As time went on,
of PEM Co.'s strong tradition of student organized theatre.

Farley Hall Players began in 2001 with the student written production of "Chance At Love," which was so successful it proceeded to tour the Midwest. Farley has a great reputation for putting out strong shows, both musicals and plays alike. This year, they will be doing "Tazi Cabaret," directed by junior Devon Landera. "Tazi Cabaret" is a relatively undiscovered new musical about six friends living in New York after college. Lena Caligiuri says that the group is "extremely excited to be returning to our ultimate goal of producing small, intimate musical theatre after having opted to do a straight show last year. Devon is an incredibly enthusiastic and dedicated director, with a very talented team working with her to make this show a success."

Actors From the London Stage

Though the students put on fantastic shows each year, the Department of Film, Television and Theatre also sponsors shows by William Shakespeare performed by the Actors from the London Stage. Next week, the Actors grace the Washington Hall stage with Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure," performed Sept. 17-19. AFTLS actors hail from such prestigious theatre companies as the Royal Shakespeare Company, the Royal National Theatre of Great Britain and Shakespeare's Globe Theatre, among others. "Measure for Measure" is a passionate tragedy that explores sexual morality and abuse of power.

Performances begin at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are available at the LaFortune Student Center Ticket Office — $16 for adults, $14 for senior citizens and $12 students. For MasterCard, Visa and Discover Orders, call 631-8128.

The Actors will return in February with "Romeo and Juliet," offering a great romantic date for Valentine's Day. Their shows are always of exceptional professional quality and easily appreciated by first time viewers of the Bard, even though it may seem, at first, like a foreign language. The Actors make it accessible to all.

Whether a student has experience in shows in high school, local theatre or perhaps the occasional touring company, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's have many venues for performers and techies from all stages of experience. It is a great way to get involved on campus and add a great compliment to a resume. One doesn't need to be a drama major to be able to get involved in or be in the audience of a great show. All someone needs is a bit of time, a desire to learn and an interest in creating a little drama in the world.

Though considered a little "racy" by some students, "How I Learned To Drive," an FTT production directed by Dr. Wendy Aronsl, was performed in Washington Hall. This is FTT's last year in Washington Hall and they have made it the "best of" the Department's works.
Red Sox defeat Orioles 5-0 with stellar starting pitching

Associated Press

Baltimore — Kevin Millar did the math. By his calculations, giving Pedro Martinez a three-run lead before he walked to the mound added up to a victory for the Boston Red Sox.

"Pedro's got a two-something ERA, so we know we scored three we've got a good chance to win," Millar said. "And the guy's been acesinal for us."

Millar allowed three hits over eight innings and Millar had two RBI in a three-run first inning as the Red Sox defeated the Baltimore Orioles 5-0 Wednesday.

Baltimore got the only run it needed when No. 5 hitter David Ortiz drove a bases-loaded walk from Jason Johnson in the top of the first. Millar followed with a two-run single, and at that point the Red Sox might as well have started packing their bags after their trip to Detroit.

"It set the tone," Boston manager Grady Little said. "It's a big lead in a game like that and you feel like you have it pretty good there."

It was an uphill struggle the whole way, Baltimore manager Mike Hargrove said. "Once we got behind 3-0, we knew that we were going to have play great baseball the way just to have a chance."

It was Martinez who was near perfect. He allowed only five runners, none in the advanced past past second.

"He had command of his pitches throughout," Baltimore manager Jim Leyland said. "It was just outstanding," Little said.

Nhans 15-5 on Wednesday night.

Hideo Nomo homered and drove in three runs and Nick Johnson also homered, but made three of the Yankees' defensive miscues. New York won its fourth straight and remained 3.5 games ahead of Boston in the AL East.

Andy Pettitte (18-8) labored through six innings, allowing four runs — two earned — and walked three and walked three. He rebounded from a rough outing against Boston last Friday night, when he gave up eight earned runs and nine hits in 2-1-3 innings in a 9-3 loss.

Braves 4, Phillies 2

Something about losing big brings out the best in the Atlanta Braves.

Javy Lopez homered to give the Braves a franchise-record 216 homers this season, and Atlanta rebounded from a big loss against the Philadelphia Phillies 4-2.

A day earlier, Philadelphia won 18-5, the fifth time this season the Braves have lost by 10 or more runs. Each time, they've bounced back to win at least two.

Freeman happy to be back with the Pack

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Antonio Freeman and Mike Sherman are trying to work things out.
The two parted on bad terms last summer after fighting about money and other matters. They were reunited Wednesday when the injured-riddled Green Bay Packers brought back Brett Favre's all-time favorite target.
Freeman, who caught 57 touchdown passes from Favre between 1995-2001, signed a one-year, guaranteed deal and got his old No. 86 jersey back from injured rookie Carl Ford.
"Same ol' Free," offensive coordinator Tom Rossley said after a closed practice. "There are some routes he runs great. He's not going to run away from anybody. But he has some strong points and he has some weaknesses. And we're going to try to bring out the good part of him."
Freeman is slated to start at split end Sunday against the Detroit Lions with Pro Bowl receiver Donald Driver out with a neck injury.
"I never envisioned coming back," Freeman admitted. "You have to take the situation as a blessing for both of us, because I was available and they were willing to welcome me back." Sherman, who banished Freeman from the season finale in 2001 after he showed up late for practice, said he is letting bygones be bygones. "I don't hold hard feelings on one another. Fresno State placed on 4 years probation

Associated Press

FRESNO, Calif. — Fresno State was placed on NCAA probation for four years Wednesday for violations involving academic fraud, recruiting and eligibility.

The NCAA Infractions Committee also found a lack of institutional control.

Fresno State banned its men's basketball program from postseason play this past year after learning that a former team statistician and an academic adviser participated in a cheating scandal with three former players. The school also self-imposed a two-year probation and cut three scholarships from the men's basketball program for other violations.

The committee required the university to vacate the record of its performance in the 2000 NCAA Tournament and return 90 percent of the funds it earned for that appearance.

Fresno State President John Welty said he was pleased the NCAA chose not to impose further, more serious, sanctions. "We acknowledge there were clearly areas that needed addressing," Welty said. "Now, with our corrective measures and positive progress in these areas, we can put the problems behind us." Prohibition will end Dec. 4, 2006.

The NCAA said most of the school's violations were found in the men's basketball program, but added that some secondary infractions were uncovered in both the men's soccer and women's basketball programs.

The committee found that during the 1998-99 academic year, a men's basketball player was provided financial aid without being enrolled in a full-time course program. The player also was certified as eligible for competition even though his academic record did not meet the requirements for such status.

The committee found that during the summer of 2000, a former academic adviser and a former statistician violated the NCAA principles of ethical conduct when they arranged to prepare course work for two other students who were completing their last semesters of eligibility, as well as for a men's basketball prospective student.
Michigan quarterback John Navarre looks to hand the ball off in last year's game against the Irish. Notre Dame won 25-23.

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Maurice Clarett was suspended for the season Wednesday for violating NCAA rules, tarnishing Ohio State’s national title and clouding the future of one of the nation’s most talented running backs.

Clarett was punished because the school determined he accepted thousands of dollars in improper benefits and then lied to NCAA and school investigators.

This is a sad day,” Ohio State athletic director Andy Geiger said as he announced the penalty.

Even though the infractions date to 2002, the school is not in jeopardy of having its national title stripped. Clarett will remain on scholarship this school year.

His attorney, Scott Schiff, wouldn’t speculate if Clarett’s Ohio State career was over.

“He’s considering his options right now,” Schiff said.

Clarett had been suspended from the team while the NCAA and Ohio State investigated his finances. Ohio State has been working for more than two weeks on a response to “several pages” of allegations sent by the NCAA to the university.

Geiger said Clarett was guilty of 14 violations of the ethical-conduct bylaw and two violations of receiving preferential treatment or benefits because he is an athlete.

Geiger said before each season Ohio State players are presented a copy of NCAA Bylaw 10 which deals with ethical conduct and not lying to investigators.

“You play by the rules, you live by the rules,” Geiger said.

Geiger said Clarett would be required to make a donation to a charity of his choice equal to the amount he received in benefits, which Geiger termed as “thousands of dollars,” if he wants to be reinstated.

Ohio State can appeal for Clarett’s reinstatement after the year suspension is complete.

“We hope the NCAA considers a suspension for this season to be sufficient,” Geiger said.

“More importantly, we hope that Maurice will remain in school to pursue his degree, and that conditions will warrant our application for reinstatement to play Buckeyes football next season.”

IN BRIEF

Titans go for experience by signing Anderson

The Tennessee Titans wanted an experienced kicker, and they got one Wednesday night by agreeing to terms with Gary Anderson, the NFL’s career scoring leader and once again the league’s oldest active player.

The Titans lost kicker Joe Nedney for the season to a torn ligament in his right, non-kicking leg during their 25-20 victory Sunday over the Oakland Raiders. Nedney and punter Craig Hentrich combined to kick four field goals in the game.

“It was important to find a veteran kicker who has made all the big kicks and been in all of the situations,” general manager Floyd Reese said. “We feel like Gary is the best available kicker and that we couldn’t afford to take a chance with a younger player with the number of games in this league that come down to a final kick.”

NHL Playoff MVP Giguere agrees to four-year deal

A relieved Jean-Sebastien Giguere agreed to a four-year contract with the Anaheim Mighty Ducks on Wednesday, a day before training camp opens.

“I’m very happy to get this finally over with,” he said. “I did not want to miss any part of training camp. It’s very important to have a good training camp and a good beginning to the season.”

Giguere’s goaltending carried the Ducks to the Stanley Cup finals, and helped him get a deal worth nearly $5 million a year. He earned $900,000 last season.

“I’m expecting the same thing I did in the past, work hard and keep learning and get some experience,” he said. “There’s lots of room for me to get better.”

The deal ensures Giguere’s presence on a team that lost veteran Paul Kariya to Colorado in the offseason.

Obscene gesture costs Paniagua job

The Chicago White Sox released Jose Paniagua on Wednesday, a day after he made an obscene gesture at the plate umpire as he left the field.

“It was a decision we felt we had to make,” White Sox general manager Kenny Williams said before Chicago’s game against Minnesota.

“You have to excuse a certain amount of failures out there when you haven’t pitched in a year,” Williams added. “What’s inexcusable are the actions that happened afterward. That’s not what we stand for.”

With the White Sox leading the Twins 8-2 on Tuesday night, Paniagua came in to relieve in the ninth, his first appearance in the major leagues in a year. He gave up four runs, three hits and a walk in just one-third of an inning, and was apparently upset with some of the calls made by plate umpire Mark Carlson.

Belles maintain unbeaten streak, tie Calvin 2-2 in OT

Saint Mary’s continued its season-opening unbeaten streak Tuesday. The Belles (3-0-1) tied Calvin (0-2-1) 2-2 in an overtime conference opener. Calvin scored first with 37:00 left in the first half. A forward stole the ball from a Belles midfielder and kicked it past surprised Saint Mary’s goalie Laura Heline. Saint Mary’s was attempting to clear the ball and Calvin caught the defense in an awkward position.

The first goal was just poor communication on a poorly-played ball,” coach Peter Haring said. “Our defense was caught because they were so congested. The center-mid got her pocket picked, and our keeper was caught off guard.”

Saint Mary’s played listlessly for the first ten minutes of the half. The Belles mounted only a pair of offensive attacks and Calvin besieged Heline at the goalie’s post. But with 30:00 left in the first half, Saint Mary’s reasserted its intensity and improved. The Belles missed goals off of a couple of breakaways and Saint Mary’s intensity improved. “I’m not disappointed with the way we played at all.”

coach

Saint Mary’s defender Carrie Orr follows the ball in her team’s game against Calvin Tuesday. The Belles tied the Knights 2-2 in their conference season opener.

Kevin Cannon bounced a kick off of the crossbar which Arnak headed for a rebound goal. Arnak has one goal and two assists on the season.

“You can’t play behind all the time, and this is actually the first game where our opponent has scored against us first,” Haring said. “I give the team a lot of credit. That first half we came back and put a goal in. We don’t lose our composure once we get into a rhythm.”

Saint Mary’s attack on Calvin’s goal was just awkward. Calvin blocked several scoring threats from the 37:12 mark on.

“Defensively, that team was fast and tried to play over the top,” Haring said. “But our team won the balls in the air and we didn’t give them any really good scoring opportunities.”

Shannon Culbertson, Carrie Orr and Katie Taylor play well together. They’re a very strong core group of defenders.

Taylor stood out with her physical style of play by spending a Calvin forward with a combination shoulder tackle and head butt.

“Katie Taylor comes from her own mold,” Haring said. “Her sister Lynn was a centerback last year and basically the foundation of the team. Katie plays just as hard, if not harder and she wins every ball. She won’t be denied.”

Though the Belles were disappointed by the scoreless overtime and tie, they remained positive.

“I’m not disappointed with the way we played at all,” Haring said. “In fact I’m happy because we learned how to play back from being down. I’m not a big fan of ties; in fact I almost would rather go to a penalty kick situation just to have a final result. But that’s the conference’s format.”

Saint Mary’s plays at noon Wednesday at home versus Adrian.
Pressure forces Irish fullbacks into blocking role

Schmidt said, "We have to be equally versatile, run routes well and catch the ball out of the backfield and again run the ball if the coaches call a fullback running play.

Excited for game day
Durrell Campbell was excited after Wednesday's practice. It was just fun to tell which situation he was more excited about.

First, he told reporters how excited he was to face Michigan this weekend. "It's an extremely large rivalry. It's just going to be a war," Campbell said. "It's exciting simply because this is what we've done since high school. To go out there and play game against the competition gets better, that's what we live for. Michigan definitely raises the bar, and we have to go out there and raise it more just to have a chance. We're licking our chops." Campbell is also excited to be getting one of his defensive members back for Saturday against the Wolverines in linebacker Courtney Watson.

"Courtney's back. I don't really want to say too much because I get so excited," Campbell said. "Courtney has some of the great celebrations, and he's all over the place. The intensity he brings — it's just crazy." With all the excitement surrounding rounding Campbell, he hasn't forgotten the talent level of the looming opponent.

He would not take anything away from the Wolverines, despite the two teams they've faced this season — Central Michigan and Houston.

"You never downplay anyone's offense," Campbell said. "If they're No. 1, those are the statistics you believe in order to up your game. Great players and great teams come out and dominate, and that's what they did, and that's why they earned such a high ranking."

GameDay
ESPN's College GameDay will make its seventh trip to Ann Arbor, when it broadcasts its pregame show from Michigan Stadium. The Wolverines are 11-4 overall and 5-1 at home when GameDay is present, while the Irish are 5-6 overall and 2-3 on the road. However, Notre Dame has won its last two GameDay appearances.

Quarterback Carlyle Holiday hopes for more time in the pocket

By JOE HETTLER
Sports Writer

Notre Dame’s offense barely survived the numerous blitzing schemes Washington State threw at them last Saturday. This weekend against Michigan, the Irish will use the experience they gained from that pressure to improve an offense that gained only 312 yards in a 29-26 overtime win against the Cougars.

Washington State pressure not only caused fumbles, but also forced Holiday out of his progressions. Ideally, Holiday will have about 3.5 seconds to clear out his progression, but this week in practice has helped him in that situation.

Young Irish players look to contribute

By ANDY TROEGER

Having continued their good start by winning two games in the Notre Dame Classic, the Irish will head to New York to face St. John’s in a Big East match-up this afternoon.

The Irish, now ranked No. 2 by Soccer America and No. 3 by the NSCAA, will then return to Alumni Field to face Western Kentucky. This marked the 10th time in 11 years that the Irish have been in the top three in the NSCAA poll, with last year being the lone exception.

The Irish will look to continue their one-sidedness of their series against the Red Storm. The Irish have won the previous seven meetings by outscoring St. John’s 38-0. The Red Storm opened this year 1-3, with their lone win coming in their last game against Siena.

The Irish also look to continue their solid play from early this season. In their first four games, the Irish have scored 20 goals while conceding just one goal per game, while scoring at least three goals in every contest.

The Irish have received numerous contributions from a multitude of players. Last week, freshman Jewel Buczinski received many awards for her play, including being named offensive MVP of the Notre Dame Classic. She was also recognized on the Soccer America national team.
