University welcomes 3 provosts

By TERESA FRALISH
Assistant News Editor

The University named replacements this summer for its three departing associate provosts, all of whom are assuming greater administrative responsibilities at either Notre Dame or Saint Mary's. Two of the new associate provosts, Jean Ann Linney and Christine Maziar, come from outside the University, and the third, Dennis Jacobs, served previously as a chemistry professor at Notre Dame. "It's a challenge, but it also adds new insight and vitality," Provost Nathan Hatch said of the changes occurring in his office. A search process began after Carol Ann Mooney, former associate provost, was named University president on May 9. She will serve as celebrant and homilist.

Decision bars Muslim scholar from teaching at Notre Dame

By CLAIRE HEININGER

Drawing a national spotlight to the University and dealing a painful blow to the Kroc Institute for Peace Studies, the State Department has revoked the visa of Tariq Ramadan, a prominent but controversial Muslim scholar scheduled to begin teaching at Notre Dame Tuesday. Hired last spring to raise the profile and diversify the curriculum of the Kroc Institute, Ramadan was initially granted a visa after passing a thorough investigation by both the Department of Homeland Security and the State Department. However, his permission to work in the United States was revoked July 28 for reasons not revealed to the University.

Homeland Security spokesman Dean Boyd would not comment on the specifics of the decision to bar Ramadan, a Swiss citizen who had been scheduled to teach Islamic philosophy and ethics beginning this fall at Notre Dame. But Boyd said visas are typically revoked when a non-citizen poses a potential national security threat or a public safety risk — two suggestions that the University immediately denied. "We know of no reason why he shouldn't be allowed in," Notre Dame spokesman Matt Storin said. "If we did, we wouldn't have hired him." According to State Department officials, Ramadan's visa was revoked after he failed to provide the University additional information about his work and travel history.

Seniors gathered Tuesday morning to purchase football tickets at Notre Dame Stadium for the second time in two days. Some students expressed concern over the process and cost of tickets. Among the concerns: methods of ticket distribution have been discussed, such as completing applications online and through the mail, the lottery ticket system allows students to choose their neighbors in the stands, and some students were turned away when they arrived too late.

Hospital tests reveal female student was not sexually attacked

Medical tests conducted on a female Notre Dame student who awoke naked near an abandoned home Saturday morning — leading Notre Dame SecurityPolice to issue a campus-wide e-mail alert that afternoon — revealed no evidence of sexual assault. St. Joseph County Police Department spokeswoman Jaimee Thirion said Tuesday: "The incident" was originally investigated as a potential rape but was not. "There was no evidence that she was attacked," Thirion said.

Malloy celebrates opening mass

By TRICIA DeGROOT
News Writer

Seated by dorum to demonstrate the unity of the Notre Dame family, students celebrated the start of the 2004-05 academic year in an opening mass held in the Joyce Center Tuesday evening. Father Edward Malloy, who presided over his final opening mass as University President, served as celebrant and homilist. He began his sermon by describing the ambitions of Father Edward Sorin and his fellow founding Holy Cross members — even sharing one of Sorin’s own letters with those in attendance. Malloy read part of a letter that Sorin wrote to Father Basil Moreau, founder of the Congregation of Holy Cross, about his dream for the future of Notre Dame du Lac.
INSIDE COLUMN

Home at last

There are some that say you can’t go home again, but I beg to differ. Going home is easy—it being home that’s the test.

During my freshman year, I did a lot of growing-up. After my tense and structured high school experience it was inevitable that college would change me, but I didn’t realize by how much until I tried my best to go back into the world I left behind.

I think I know what it means now, to be a square peg in a round hole.

The air in my room felt stale; the scraps of paper and memory plastering its walls seemed to be yellowing prematurely. Catching up with many of my old friends was like being introduced to a group of strangers, as I was stuffed into a model that I had shelved long before. Sulkling in the back-door mews of a former life, I saw no possibility of repayment in the summer ahead, and no purpose at all to the hard-won changes. And then, a post office burnt down.

A literal trial by fire, the day the Warrendale Post Office went up in flames was the first time I was able to fully appreciate the work freshman year had done on me. I was an intern at the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, mainly relegated to writing fluffy features for the weekly Suburban Living section, when I was sent out to report breaking news. It was a consequence of being in the right place at the right time under the only editor who would trust a newly-minted freshman with a front page article, and it petrified me.

Putting on a brave front, I made my way to the scene, feeling smaller and younger than ever as I clutched a notebook and pen in one hand, and a cell phone for desperate calls for help to my editor in the other. The area was swarming with reporters, many of whom I had watched on the nightly news for as long as I could remember, and hose water from the 10 fire trucks on the scene was flooding the street.

Wet up to my knees, I sloshed around searching for a lead. Expecting everyone to ignore the teenager playing grown-up, I was shocked to find that people actually talked to me and treated me as an equal. Of course, some of the firemen were more inclined to give me a comment than the middle-aged male reporters, but other than that I was treated no differently.

My confidence grew as I continued to blanket the scene, and during each interview I inwardly thanked every person at all times. We do not write from experience, but we will make mistakes. If we have made a mistake, please contact us at obsnews@nd.edu so we can correct our error.

Woman attempts scorpion record

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia — A Malaysian woman who’s trying to reclaim a world record by living in a locked glass box with more than 6,000 scorpions has been stung once, is suffering a fever and scarcely sleeps because the creatures keep crawling over her.

Nur Malena Hassan, 27, said Wednesday she has a “50/50 chance” of reaching her target of being copped up with the poisonous arachnids for 36 consecutive days to set a new record for the longest stay in a room full of scorpions.

“I’m feeling so much tension,” said Nur Malena told The Associated Press by telephone from the specially built glass room that she moved into Saturday in a shopping mall in Kuantan, a city about 160 miles northeast of Kuala Lumpur.

“Nighttime is the worst,” she said. “I can only sleep two or three hours, since I’ve been stung once, and the creatures keep crawling over her."

ND, SMC continue campus construction over summer

By KATE ANTONACCI
News Writer

 Though most of the Notre Dame student body was absent, campus was all but silent over the summer as construction crews busily worked to prepare for the 2004 school year.

While the most visible fruit of these labors is the new Marie P. DeBartolo Center for the Performing Arts, other developments also took shape.

James Lyphout, vice president for business operations, said the 150,000 square foot performing arts building, which first broke ground in Oct. 2001 and cost an estimated $62.6 million, was finished earlier this summer.

"Faculty moved in on July 1 and everything is on time and on schedule," he said, adding that there will be an official ceremonial dedication in late September or early October.

Though the new performing arts building houses many offices and classrooms, the main venues include a concert hall, a center theatre, an organ and choral concert hall, a cinema and a stadium.

Construction continued this summer on the new security and post office building, located near Stepan Center, which will be finished in late December or early January.

Also underway is the Guglielmino Family Athletics Center, located east of Rolfs Sports Recreation Center. This 100,000 square foot building will house a variety of facilities for varsity athletes, notably a 25,000 square foot strength and conditioning center, according to the University Architect Web site.

Lyphout added that the new Jordan Hall of Science, which will contain lab space for undergraduates, as well as an observatory, greenhouse and herbarium, should be finished by the summer of 2006.

The completion of the performing arts center and the developments made on other construction projects represent the first significant progress since budget cuts and a decreased endowment forced the University to cut back on all construction projects, with the exception of Legends, in recent years.

"These buildings are primarily funded, with the exception of the security/post office building, by benefactors and those gifts have allowed these buildings to move forward," Lyphout said.

Students at Saint Mary's also returned to campus to find completed student apartments, which were finished less than a year after the College broke ground.

"The Opus Hall apartments at Saint Mary's were finished the first week of August and all 72 beds are filled," said Nick Farmer, the director of marketing communications at St. Mary's. "This new apartments offer the independence of off-campus living to senior students.

Construction is also underway on the new Student Center at the College, which, if all goes as planned, will be ready for use by mid-March, said Farmer. He added that Saint Mary's is also considering building a new academic facility, though construction will not begin until fundraising is finalized.

stadium, Gagnon said.

"Students have always wanted to choose who they sit with, and then compete in some way to get there early for tickets," he said, recalling the tradition of students camping out in line for tickets — a process that changed in 1999 because of problems with safety, litter and alcohol consumption.

"We transferred something that's a lot cleaner and a heck of a lot more time-efficient," Gagnon said.

Berlo said due to student reaction, the University has explored the feasibility of transitioning to an online ticket distribution system.

"It's something that we definitely want to do," Berlo said of online ticket distribution. "We just want to support the students and see that their needs are met."

Students expressed overall satisfaction with the speed of the process.

"I thought it was pretty decent," said senior Jamillie Feltault. "The orders were great in getting people along." Her classmate Spencer McSorley concurred, saying that the process "went smoothly.

"We waited outside about eight minutes and once we were in the stadium and through the ticket line, we had about 15 minutes after that," he said. "It was fairly quick." A larger source of student grumbling was the price of season tickets, which was increased to $159 and $322 for Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students respectively by Beth Gagnon and Berlo.

"One of the means to fully fund our budget was to raise the ticket prices," Gagnon said.

"There's 26 varsity sports that seek to win a national championship every year," Berlo explained. "We are fully funded ... [but] with the cost of tuition going up, the cost of a scholarship is going up. Ticket revenue is a major part of the revenue that supports all of our sports."

Students will continue to receive tickets at a significant discount.

"I have not heard any discussions of changing the student discount or reducing it," said Berlo. "We want them to be affordable for the students."

The lottery system allows students to take applications to the stadium to receive a random lottery number. Applicants go in groups to receive sequential lottery numbers that ensure seating together.

After the lottery number draw, students travel to the stadium to actually buy their season ticket booklets.

The first lottery number drawn has the first pick at seating. As students reach the stadium, tickets are distributed in order of lottery numbers that are present. Seating begins with the lowest row number of one section, proceeds up to the top and then goes through the next section up to bottom.

Although Feltault observed "a lot of inconsistency on what time people could go in [so the stadium]," Gagnon insisted that the transition was in sequence.

"We check every number," said Gagnon. "If you don't come early, we'll take whomever's there. There are people whose times should have been the second half but they got in first because some people slept in ... but in the line itself was in sequence."

Students with low lottery numbers can move to the front of the line for tickets. However, it is their responsibility to make sure they are in the appropriate line position Gagnon said.

"Students are very reluctant to do this," he said. "They stand there like lumps because I guess it's not a 'cool' thing to do."

"We'd have students be behind somebody in line, and that was their choice, but we checked every number as people came in."

Berlo said that each ticket window has similar seats, so that groups going consecutively should have seats several rows apart.

SMC names Pierce new associate dean of faculty

By KELLY MEEDAN
News Writer

Saint Mary's political science professor Patrick Pierce, who spent the last year serving as director of the College's Strategic Plan, was named Associate Dean of Faculty and director of the Center for Academic Innovation.

As the associate dean, Pierce will extend his planning responsibilities to faculty and curriculum development. He said he hopes to earn further financial support for the academic life of the College by enhancing the array of grants that support faculty research, teaching, student learning and research.

"Faculty and students work very hard at Saint Mary's College," Pierce said. "As a college we need to celebrate and recognize those achievements. Additionally, we need to provide support so that faculty and students can continue to excel."

While building upon the existing programs of his predecessors, Patrick White and Marcia Berick, Pierce said he wants to engage students and faculty in intellectually stimulating discussions on topics that address relevant, timely and pressing public questions.

"I hope to encourage faculty and student participation in these areas, and to support their efforts," Pierce said. "I will also organize programming to support intellectual life."

Pierce — who also serves on several committees that address issues such as rank and tenure of faculty, curriculum, grants for faculty development and various program grants for the Center for Academic Innovation — will play a vital role in the college's accreditation process, helping to manage the flow of professors' work in required self-study projects.

Pierce has taught in the College's political science department since 1981, and served as department chair from fall 2000 until spring 2003.

Students may have missed a poster or phone call during the hectic environment of move-in weekend.

"The purpose of a timely notice was to alert students so that they could take measures to avoid further criminal activity," he said, but added that NDISP was unaware of a pattern or of any other incidents of this nature.

Though no additional security patrol was assigned over the weekend as a result of this specific report, Johnson said officers try to provide a visible presence in potentially dangerous areas such as the lakes and parking lots.

Pullout plan moves forward JERUSALEM — Israel's defense minister, undaunted by growing resistance within the ruling party to a planned pullout from the Gaza Strip, said Friday that the army's blueprint for the withdrawal will be ready next month.

Gaza settlers charged that the government is already preparing to throw them out of their homes.

Also Tuesday, Israel's attorney general urged the government to consider adopting an international convention governing the treatment of residents in occupied lands. This showed increasing pressure from international criticism, particularly in the aftermath of a world court ruling against its contentious West Bank separation barrier.

The barrier and the Gaza withdrawal are hallmarks of Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's "disengagement" plan, which he says is meant to reduce friction between Israel and the Palestinians.

Najaf Shiite insurgency weakens NAJAF, Iraq A Shiite insurgency appeared to be weakening Tuesday night as Iraqi forces moved to within 200 yards of revered Imam Ali Shrine and Iraq's defense minister once again demanded fighters loyal to a radical cleric surrender or face a violent raid.

The militant force, which once waged fierce battles with U.S. troops throughout the Old City and Najaf's vast cemetery, seemed considerably diminished in number and less aggressive after days of U.S. airstrikes and relentless artillery pounding.

InBaghdad, assailants bombed the convoys of two government ministers in separate attacks that killed five people and a suicide bomber, but left the ministers unharmed, officials said.

Senior officials faulted in abuses WASHINGTON — U.S. soldiers running the Abu Ghraib prison are mainly to blame for the inmate abuses there, but Bush also links with the Pentagon's most senior civilian and military leaders, according to a report released Tuesday by an independent panel of civilian defense experts.

Senior leaders did not establish clear guidelines on permissible techniques for interrogating various categories of prisoners held at Abu Ghraib and elsewhere in Iraq, the report said.

His top commanders failed to shift resources to an understaffed and ill-trained prison detention unit once it became apparent that the system was out of control, the report said.

Time reporter avoids jail time WASHINGTON — Avoiding potential jail time, a Time magazine reporter has given a statement to prosecutors investigating the Bush administration leak of a covert CIA officer's identity.

In a statement Tuesday, Time said reporter Matthew Cooper agreed to give a deposition after Lewis "Scooter" Libby, Vice President Dick Cheney's chief of staff, personally released Cooper from a promise of confidentiality about a conversation the two had last year.

No survivors found in crashes

Associated Press

MOSCOW — A Russian airliner carrying a dozen survivors of a jet crash last week took off from the Moscow airport Tuesday night after both planes took off from the Moscow airport, raising fears that terrorism was involved. The survivors were among the 88 people believed to be aboard the planes.

President Vladimir Putin ordered an investigation by the nation's top intelligence agency, and security was tightened in and around the airport.

Authorities were not ruling out terrorist attacks against the aircraft. A presidential election was scheduled Sunday in the breakaway republic of Chechnya, where separatist rebels have been blamed for a series of terror strikes that have claimed hundreds of lives.

Witnesses reported seeing an explosion before the first plane crashed about 125 miles south of Moscow, the agency said.

The Interfax news agency said emergency workers spotted a fire about 600 miles south of Moscow in the region where the second plane went missing.

Putin ordered the Federal Security Service to investigate, Russian news agencies reported. The service is the successor to the Soviet-era KGB.

A Tu-134 airliner that apparently had 42 people aboard crashed in the Tula region, 125 miles south of Moscow, at about 10:56 p.m. Tuesday, ITAR-Tass reported, citing the Emergency Situations Ministry. Rescuers found the jet's tail near the village of Buchalki, Interfax reported.

A Tu-134 with 46 people aboard lost contact with flight officials at about the same time near Rostov-on-Don, about 600 miles south of Moscow, ITAR-Tass quoted Emergency Situations Ministry spokeswoman Marina Bykina as saying. The jet belonged to the Russian airline Siber, which said the plane disappeared from radar screens at about 11 a.m. Tuesday, Interfax reported. There were 38 passengers and a crew of eight aboard.
In his new position, Jacobs hopes to continue work on many of these same interests. "I'm carrying the conversation on at a higher level," he said.

In particular, Jacobs intends to take a close look at the purpose of the undergraduate curriculum and evaluate its ability to meet students' needs, though not necessarily with the intent of making major revisions. "Why should a student need to take two semesters of philosophy?" Jacobs asked. "What are we hoping students will gain from that?"

In tandem with this effort, Jacobs also intends to focus on improving the quality of course information available to students. He will also place special emphasis on discerning how freshmen students choose majors and interests, and the factors that influence those decisions.

Building the Notre Dame of the future

"With responsibilities that include budget administration, academic space management and the ten-year plan, "Notre Dame 2010: Fulfilling the Promise," Maziar will help build the Notre Dame of the future, both literally and figuratively."

While being the provost at the University of Minnesota, she also served on Notre Dame's Graduate Program Advisory Council.

"That kept me abreast of what was happening at Notre Dame," she said. "It caused me to say, this might be a good time for me to be at Notre Dame.

"I was very active at the Newman Center when I was a graduate student at the University of South Carolina, where she served as graduate studies dean prior to chairing the school's psychology department. She will oversee faculty promotion, tenure and governance, in addition to diversity efforts. Linney was unavailable for comment."

Maziar replaced Mooney, who became president of Saint Mary's June 1. Maziar fills the position vacated by Affleck-Greaves and Jacobs takes over for Jenkins, who is preparing to replace University President Father Edward Malloy following the conclusion of the current school year.

This search was spearheaded by Hatch, who will now have the task of implementing a smooth leadership transition within his office.

"Keeping a focus on undergraduate education"

Undergraduates who complain that the University turns a deaf ear to their concerns stand to gain a strong advocate in Jacobs, who was named professor of the year in 2002. Jacobs will oversee undergraduate education, in addition to international study programs.

"I have tried to understand some of the challenges [undergraduates] face," said Jacobs, who will continue to teach this fall. "I could imagine moving into this role ... if I hadn't had that prior role [as a professor]."

As a Notre Dame chemistry professor for 16 years, Jacobs combined a focus on chemistry research with concern for quality undergraduate education. He also redesigned a main general chemistry course to better respond to different learning styles and student patterns.

In his new position, Jacobs hopes to continue work on many of these same challenges, and to help recruit new provosts.

"Why should a student need to take two semesters of philosophy? What are we hoping students will gain from that?"

World Bank lends Brazil $1.2B
BRASILIA, Brazil — The World Bank announced Tuesday it will lend $1.2 billion to Brazil over the next four years to help protect the environment.

Vindol Thomas, the World Bank's director for Brazil, said it was the bank's biggest single loan to date to protect the environment of a single country.

"Given the size of Brazil and the size of the problem and the quality of the government's project, it is a reasonable amount," Thomas said in a video link from Washington.

Brazil's environment minister, Marina Silva, said the money would be used to finance 10 programs ranging from protecting the Amazon rainforest to employing environmental analyses.

"For us, this is highly relevant," Silva said, adding that the loan should serve to shield environmental projects from any eventual budget cuts.

One of the new aluminum bottles introduced by the Pittsburgh-based Iron City Beer is now available to consumers for $1 more per case. The product to thousands, who might buy a case for home. Pittsburgh Brewing said it won't drop glass bottles or cans from production. Some people say they can taste the difference between beer in cans and bottles.

Lew Bryson, an author of two books on breweries, said those complaints are psychological, since the aluminum is coated. But, he said, there may be a lingering taste when the seal of an aluminum can is broken.

The aluminum bottle could eliminate that, he said. One microbrewery based in Missoula, Mont., has been using aluminum bottles. Heineken released a limited edition aluminum bottle last year.

LONDON — Thousands of disgruntled vacationers were stranded at Heathrow Airport on Tuesday after British Airways canceled scores of flights because of staff shortages and technical hitches. The airline last week headed off a strike for the Aug. 28-31 public holiday in Britain by offering baggage handlers and check-in staff more pay. Workers complain they are underpaid and overworked, particularly during the busy summer vacation periods at Heathrow.

Pittsburgh Brewing Company asks $1 more per case for beer that stays colder PITTSBURGH — How much would you pay for a bottle of beer that stays cool nearly an hour longer?

Pittsburgh Brewing Co., maker of Iron City Beer, is asking an additional $1 per case.

The brewery has partnered with Alcoa Inc., the world's largest aluminum producer, to make aluminum bottles that keep beer colder for as much as 50 minutes longer than a glass bottle, Alcoa officials said.

About 20,000 cases of the new aluminum bottle are on route to as many as 28 states and should be on shelves this week.

"This is the first time Alcoa has teamed up with the local brewery to put out a new product. In 1962, the two put the first pull-tab beer cans on shelves, freeing beer drinkers from the need to carry openers with them. "We think it's much better than a can and as good or better than glass," said Joe Pectrelli, vice chairman for Pittsburgh Brewing.

"There's no doubt in my mind that this has the same potential as the pull tab we did with Alcoa."

Iron City wants to expand sales. But the aluminum bottle may be more important to Alcoa. The aluminum giant wants to win back a share of the market it lost to beer bottles that both glass and plastic, which are now common at sporting events nationwide.

About 40 percent of all beer consumed comes out of cans, 43 percent from bottles and 8 percent from the tap, according to the Beer Institute, which tracks industry trends. Bottles, however, have gained ground over the past decade.

Plastic bottles make up only 0.5 percent of all beer sales, according to the Beer Institute. But having aluminum bottles at sporting events would introduce the product to thousands, who might buy a case for home.

Pittsburgh Brewing said it won't drop glass bottles or cans from production. Some people say they can taste the difference between beer in cans and bottles.

Lew Bryson, an author of two books on breweries, said those complaints are psychological, since the aluminum is coated. But, he said, there may be a lingering taste when the seal of an aluminum can is broken.

The aluminum bottle could eliminate that, he said. One microbrewery based in Missoula, Mont., has been using aluminum bottles. Heineken released a limited edition aluminum bottle last year.

January," he said. "Leslie and I took over the criminal case. Abramson and Marcia Morrissey said he has known Spector for a long time and had signed on as his lawyer while Abramson was hired  in February to replace Spector's boss John Gotti to defend him on charges for murder his pregnant wife. Frey's testimony, which concluded Tuesday, came after about 40 wiretapped telephone calls between Frey and Peterson, discussed in the phone calls, Peterson remained Frey while denying his involvement in the disappearance of his pregnant wife Laci, and proclaiming his love for the missing woman. Frey recorded their calls for months before police told her she could stop. "They didn't get anything incriminating on him," Geragos said. "He kept telling you specifically that he didn't have anything to do with it. " "There were times he said there were some things that he couldn't talk about," Frey replied. She told Geragos she could not remember if police told her she was not getting any useful information. Geragos played a tape on which Peterson could be heard saying "I never said anything to hide in her disappearance. And if you were to go over to the police's, "he said, "you know, fine." "He told you it was your decision, right?" Geragos asked Frey. "Correct," Frey said. Geragos suggested Peterson's evasive answers on many of the taped telephone calls came at the Cutler said three years earlier in a call played for the jury, Peterson could be heard saying of his lawyer: "He said, "You should not be talking to her." And he said, "You're going to try to make a case against you." Frey testified Peterson never told her he loved her: "Not in those words." Frey's attorneys claimed it was Peterson's love for Amber that drove him to murder her. "I have a defense that has taught me to portray Frey as a calculated seducer, obsessed with Peterson than he was with her," Geragos said. At the end of the day, her testimony may not make or break their case," former prosecutor Chuck Smith said of Frey's testimony. Trial observer Jim Hammer, a former prosecutor, said the tapes demonstrated Peterson's inexperience in the courtroom and the case was more of a "flying than an obsession and a motive for murder." Later Tuesday, Stanislaus County district attorney's office investigator Steven Jacobson testified he set up wiretaps on Peterson's cell phones and received authorization to tap Peterson's mother's phone — and he is due back on the stand Wednesday. Prosecutors allege Peterson killed his wife in their Modesto home around Dec. 24, 2002, then dumped her weighted body from a boat into San Francisco Bay. The remains of Laci Peterson and the couple's unborn son washed up a few months later, not far from where Peterson claimed he had gone fishing the day he reported her missing.

Grainy images show civil rights lawyer conversations with convicted terrorist

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Prosecutors on Tuesday presented the core of their terrorism case against a civil rights lawyer in grainy video of her meetings with a jailed Egyptian sheik she allegedly helped to communicate with. A hidden camera at a federal prison in Rochester, Minn., recorded conversations of lawyer Lynne Stewart, Arabic interpreter Mohamed Youssry and Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, who is serving a life sentence. Prosecutors contend the videotaped conversations prove a conspiracy among the three to aid terrorists. Stewart was convicted in 1993 of masterminding the 1993 World Trade Center bombing, which killed six people and injured more than 1,000 others. Stewart responds: "Good for them. I didn't read that, either." Later, Stewart asks if the group was still holding hostages. When told it was, Stewart's lawyer retorted, "You go to jail, the jury got two versions in a transcript. The government version has Stewart saying, "That was a very very stupid thing done by unintelligible remarks." The defense version has her saying, "That's so sad." There was "a very very stupid thing done by unintelligible remarks." Stewart reiterated the sheik at a 1995 trial in which he was convicted of conspiring to assassinate Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and to bomb five New York landmarks including the United Nations. "I think that the whole thing is so stupid I thought that from the first day, was politically ulterior motive," Stewart says on a videotape. In another spot, Youssry tells the sheik about a group in the Philippines that took hostages. He says a newspaper story failed to mention the group wanted to free the sheik. "And Ramzi Yousef," the sheik replies. "I thought the man now imprisoned for life in the United States after he was convicted of masterminding the 1993 World Trade Center bombing, which killed six people and injured more than 1,000 others." Stewart responds: "Good for them. I didn't read that, either."

Lawyers sue to block deportation
Japanese will not immediately deport Fischer

Associated Press

TOKYO — Japan will not immediately deport former world chess champion Bobby Fischer to the United States, where he is wanted for violating international sanctions, Japanese officials said Wednesday. Justice Minister Daizo Nosawa rejected Fischer's application for political asylum Tuesday and issued an order to deport him, but the chess legend's lawyers immediately sued to block deportation, winning him a temporary reprieve.

"It should take a little while," immigration office spokesman Itsuo Noto said about the deportation.

Fischer was detained on immigration violations July 13 after allegedly trying to board a plane for the Philippines with an invalid U.S. passport. He is wanted by the United States for violating international sanctions against Yugoslavia in 1992. He claims the charges against him are politically motivated and has tried a number of steps to thwart his deportation, such as saying he would renounce his U.S. citizenship and getting engaged to a Japanese woman. He also has demanded to meet with U.S. embassy officials.

Fischer's supporters said they were confident he will not be sent to the United States.

"Once we get this battle onto a level playing field, then Bobby Fischer should prevail," said John Bosnitch, a Tokyo-based adviser to Fischer. "We are going to hang on and we are going to fight."

Fischer rose to chess stardom by defeating Boris Spassky, formerly of the Soviet Union, in a series of games in 1972 to claim the world championship.

However, the chess legend became increasingly erratic and reclusive after the Spassky match and lost his title as world champion in 1977. In a 1992 rematch against Spassky, Fischer won and collected more than $5 million in prize money, violating U.N. sanctions by attending the match held in the former Yugoslavia.

In recent years, Fischer has emerged from silence in radio broadcasts and on his Web page to express anti-Semitic views and rally against the United States.

On a Web site Fischer's supporters acknowledge to be his home page, Fischer launches numerous attacks on Jews and decries the "international Jewish conspiracy" and "Jew-controlled U.S.

"which he says are behind plots to both rule the world and ruin his life. At one point, the site denies the Holocaust.

"Fischer's animosity toward his homeland is well-known, and he once praised the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks in a radio interview, saying America should be "wiped out."

Fischer has tried a number of steps to thwart his deportation since he was taken into custody. He first said he would renounce his U.S. citizenship. He then got engaged to the head of the Japan Chess Association, a Japanese woman who said they had been living together for the past four years.

Fischer also rushed to his aid, writing a letter to President Bush asking him to show Fischer mercy and not seek his extradition.

"We are going to hang on and we are going to fight."

Truck drivers strike sends prices soaring

NEW DELHI — Prices for food and essential commodities spiraled upward Tuesday as thousands of truck drivers in India ignored a government appeal to call off a four-day-old nationwide strike.

Meanwhile, in Bombay, India's financial hub, hundreds of thousands of bank employees staged a daylong strike to demand higher wages.

The prices of vegetables, fruit and other foods were up by as much as a third at markets in New Delhi, amid fears the truckers would go through with their threat to stop delivering all food items beginning Wednesday.

The truckers are protesting a new 10 percent service tax on truckers included in the government budget being considered by parliament. A truckers strike against a similar proposal in 1997 lasted 10 days until the government dropped the tax.

A fresh round of inconclusive talks Tuesday between Finance Minister Chidambaram urged truck operators to end the strike, saying it was hurting ordinary citizens.

"Innocent people should not be made a victim of a totally baseless strike," Chidambaram said. "The government is always willing to discuss issues with any section of the people."

The All India Motor Transport Congress, the largest trade group of truck owners, is tied to the government. The banks have proposed a 9.5 percent pay hike, but the unions are demanding 16 percent.

The banks have proposed a $1.5 billion pay hike, but the unions are demanding 16 percent. The Press Trust of India news agency said, quoting Lalit Nagda, joint secretary of the All India Bank Employees Association, Marshall, President Harry Truman's emissary. The Associated Press was the only foreign news organization to stay in Yan'an.

Red Cross announces massive Sudan airlift

Associated Press

AL-FASHER — The International Committee of the Red Cross said Tuesday it was mounting a major airlift of relief supplies to Sudan's troubled Darfur region, its largest such operation since the war in Iraq.

Sudan's interior minister, meanwhile, said a cease-fire with rebel factions in Darfur was violated twice on the opening day of peace talks that aim to bring an end to the crisis.

The United Nations terms Darfur the world's worst humanitarian crisis. More than 30,000 people have been killed and 1.4 million forced to flee their homes in the 18 months of fighting between African rebel groups and Arab militia known as the Janjaweed.

Interior Minister Abdel-Rahim Hussein said Monday's attacks by Sudanese Liberation Army fighters, which left several police injured, did not bode well for peace talks in Abuja, Nigeria, which opened the same day. But at Al-Fasher's military air base, two men wearing blue police uniforms, suffering apparent leg injuries, lay on stretchers in a room pockmarked with bullet holes from a rebel attack last year.

Announcing plans to launch a major airlift to the region, the Red Cross said it was planning six trips carrying trucks, other equipment and medical supplies by Sept. 5.

"The aim is to improve ICRC access to thousands of people still deprived of urgently needed humanitarian aid and to provide further supplies to meet vital health and water needs," the agency said.

The peace talks in Nigeria are a last-minute attempt for progress before Monday's U.N. Security Council deadline for Khartoum to disarm the Arab militia accused of terrorizing African farmers or face economic and diplomatic sanctions.

It still means we continue the talks because we think the only process which opened the same day. But Hamdan, who was not shackled and wore a flowing white robe, smiled occasionally as he listened to an Arabic interpreter through headphones, even after hearing charges that could bring life in prison: conspiracy to commit war crimes, including attacking civilians, murder and terrorism. He isn't charged with any specific violent act.

His lawyer, Lt. Cmdr. Charlie Swift, filed challenges against four of the five panel members, including the presiding officer, and an alternate, questioning their capacity to serve fairly.

Thepanel over its impartiality and questioned the proceeding's fairness.

Salim Ahmed Hamdan, a 34-year-old Yemeni, declined to enter a plea until motions filed by his military-appointed lawyer attacking the legality of the proceeding are decided, probably in November.

Swift raised questions on panel member Marine Col. Jack K. Sparks Jr., citing concerns over Sparks' feelings about a reservist under his command who died in the Sept. 11 terror attack on New York's World Trade Center while working as a firefighter.

He also said he was concerned that commission member Marine Col. R. Thomas Bright had said he was in charge of the logistics of moving detainees to Guantanamo; that Air Force Lt. Col. Timothy Toomey was an intelligence officer in Afghanistan; and that an alternate, Army Lt. Col. Curt Cooper, expressed strong motions about the 2001 attacks and concern for the safety of himself and his family.

"Clearly the impartiality of these panel members is a concern to us," said Anthony Romero, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union who was one of several rights activists observing the hearing.

Hamdan has said he earned a pitance for his family as bin Laden's driver before the Sept. 11 attacks, but denies involvement in terrorism. U.S. officials allege he served as the al-Qaeda leader's bodyguard and delivered weapons to his operatives.

Brownback gave Swift until Oct. 1 to file other motions and said the prosecution would have until Oct. 15 to respond.

Tribunal members and prosecutors asked the media not to use the names of the panel members, fearing possible retribution. But their names were previously made public and have been published.

Brownback is the only member of commission to have formal legal training. Asked by Swift whether he thought the proceedings were legal, Brownback said he chose not to answer.

When describing our Notre Dame student body, often the words "disengaged" and "apathetic" find their way in the conversation. The attendance of social justice activities and participation in campus demonstrations certainly support these descriptors, yet I feel this generalization may be too hasty. As people of consciousness and compassion, we all have something we care passionately about. The gamut of concern ranges from our own lives to the broader human community of this planet. While some show their passions more overtly, others hold back. Yet, we are surely a community of overachievers. To be here at this prestigious university, ingenuity and diligence had to be a part of our characters. So, with such an able student body and injustice all around us, to insinuate out of desire of moral outrage, why do Notre Dame students still get doused as uncaring automatons? The more cynical view would suggest the achievements and eminent successes of many students have hardened their hearts to the worries of the outside world. Yet, this daunting view only alienates the active crowds from everyone else. Perhaps a closer reflection may offer a better answer.

All of us, as human beings, have something we are concerned about. Whether it is family, friends, our future, or our descendants, we all have a reason to care for something beyond ourselves and beyond the present. The gap between caring and action that so many are weary of crossing then points to a sad truth. Most people do not recognize their own power to change circumstances and are overwhelmed by the wrong ways the world is. This is understandable in such an individualistic and money-driven culture. As the rubber barons and ruling classes of the present make decisions that dictate our freedoms and fortunes, it is hard to see how a group of compassionate people can influence the course of things.

Yet, all change and reform throughout history has been the result of countering power with power. Not the destructive power of violent force, for it only tears human bonds down and destroys lives. The appropriate description of power identifies two kinds in our culture — organized money and organized people. The latter — even in the legacies of the Civil Rights Movement, Women's Suffrage Movement and countless others — is the catalyst for real change of which all we can be a part.

It is important to recognize the power in a group of people organizing to change circumstances. More imperative, we must consider the influence inaction has on the course of things. Refusing to aid others in their struggle for justice does more to retard the process than the actions of their opponents.

Howard Zinn, activist, writer and historian, captures the context in which we should view our power and action in his autobiography, "You Can't Be Neutral on a Moving Train." The title comes from a phrase Zinn used often in his classes. For him, history is being made everyday. The course of things resembles a moving train, surging toward a foreseeable and sometimes negative end. The hope for preventing tragedy is inside us — also on the train. We all have the power to act, one way or another, to shift the course of history. Our success compounds when we form coalitions and organizations of concerned people to counter the power of cynicism and self-interest with hope.

These are times that require us to act. To bounty money and unemployment touch the lives of over 35 million Americans. Job growth is dangerously low, especially in this declared economic recovery. As high-paying manufacturing and technical jobs disappear from the American industrial landscape, people are fared with low paying, labor-intensive service-sector jobs. Many work full-time, yet still qualify for government financial assistance. State government budgets have cut funding to valuable social programs — especially education — to make up for ill-structured federal income and corporate tax cuts.

If you care about the well being of your peers and fellow citizens, you must be a part of a movement to change the course of our moving train. Without action, our collective fortunes will feature more people living without hope and the necessities for survival. We will never be the greatest society if the majority of our citizens struggle to gain the basic needs for life. We will never live up to our charter of freedom if we continue to stifle the voices of our citizens and declare their messages of hope to be unpatriotic. We will never be free from fear if we continue to be a dominating and unwelcome force throughout the world. We cannot secure the future for our descendants if we continue to exploit and pollute this planet.

From now to November, and for the rest of our lives, we must be on the side of active pursuit of justice. The activist in you exists where the concern of your heart meet the injustice of the world. Do something.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"What we become depends on what we read after all of the professors have finished with us. The greatest university of all is a collection of books."

— Thomas Carlyle

British historian
Politics more than petitions

I know what you’re thinking. “It’s the season, it’s the season, and the last thing I want to do is read a column about politics.” We’ve been on campus for a little over a day now, and who knows how many times you’ve been asked to sign a petition for candidate A, so-and-so or sign up for political group X. Couple those inquiries with a summer that boasted an unprecedented volume of political ads, and just about everyone of us are on political overload. But that’s the joy of being a college student, right? We are the purportedly apathetic section of voters coveted by every political body imaginable.

Walking around campus like a political refugee, there’s always someone with a clipboard waiting to give you an earful. Yes, indeed, we are truly the chosen people of the political recruiting process. The frenzy is only amplified in an election year when so many states will be decided by a couple hundred votes. We all have our strategies for avoiding the petition-recruiting army: Wearing headphones even if they don’t happen to be playing any music, pretending to be in a big hurry and the ever-popular strategy of not making eye contact at any cost. The phone calls are even easier to avoid. Just hang up.

After perfecting one of these methods, it gets pretty easy to start dismissing these political canvassers. The trouble is, all too often the entire political process gets lumped in with them. It’s pretty easy to start filling the role of a “apathetic young voter.” We shut off the clipboarders, we change the channel and we assume issues don’t apply to us yet because we’re still in school. Tax cuts don’t mean too much when you’re living on Ramen noodles and Social Security is a million years away. The direction of U.S. foreign policy can’t be a few beat-classroom or coffeehouse discussions, but how often do we really care about these issues? All too often, the answer turns out to be: Not enough to vote.

In the last presidential election, only about one-third of college-age voters went to the polls. Translate that to UNM’s student population, and you have roughly 20,000 students not voting — 20,000 votes just from UNM students.

The turnout for all voters across the board is even lower in non-presidential elections. What kinds of issues are decided by elections college students are notoriously absent from? The Republican-controlled White House has had quite an impact on our lives even though we are just college students. Congress failed to enact Pell Grant funding allowing those recipients to receive almost $5,000 a year in additional funds. Congress failed to amend the Child Left Behind Act to include a measure to increase funding to programs for Hispanic students. Including English as a second language programs, migrant education and funding for Hispanic-serving institutions.

The last election cycle, it’s even though young people often choose to ignore issues such as rising federal deficits and the demise of Social Security, those are the types of issues that will plague our generation and our children’s generation unless they are kept in check.

Although we may not always have the time or the desire to talk to every person who approaches us with the familiar, “Hi my name is ...” that does not mean we can safely dismiss the political process as a whole.

The people we vote for and the people who get elected when we fail to vote change our lives and the ways.

From a Republican Congress failing to allocate proper funding to our schools, to Heather Wilson’s crusade to save Social Security, those of the FCC, we are greatly affected by the political process.

There is meaningful political presence on campus. Candidates will be visiting the University throughout the election season, and it is important to note candidates who make a point to prioritize students.

College students have allowed themselves to be ignored by the White House and the Republican-controlled Congress. The only way to change that is to make our voices heard on Election Day.

ND election parallels presidential race

After a summer spent exploring the political spectrum — the left-wing Die-ins and the conservative “Fahrenheit 9/11,” to the Democratic National Convention, to NBC’s Olympic coverage featuring inspirational Iraq — I feel confident in offering some early election advice to Notre Dame students as November approaches.

When people like Bill O’Reilly get in your face with their “issues” and start yelling about this “the most important election of our time,” don’t fret, balk or even gambl — you will find that we’ve already been through this election, if on a lesser scale.

George W. Bush, who, with his father and Lyndon B. Johnson, has proven again that the only things to come out of Texas are steers and weak presidencies, is up for a long campaign haul against Senator John Kerry.

If Kerry’s appeal is his platform that will galvanize this likely photo-finish? No. It’s because no one likes George W. Bush.

Now think back six long months to the all-important student body elections where Adam Istvan defeated Charlie Eberle.

You’ll notice some shocking parallels: on one side we have the gangly orator with a foil running mate (yeah Karla Bell) who “reported for duty” when called to serve (indulge me here), while the opposition boasts a tepid environmental record (read: Hummer) and whose father got him into the coast guard.

So was it Istvan’s platform that sunk Eberle? I think you will see my point.

But really folks, the issues are for wories — see Bill O’Reilly.

My America features me waking up in the morning knowing full well that the U.S. dollar has little tangible backing though it continually loses ground to foreign currency and the national debt, but then recall that my President is a pretty swanky guy and so not care.

Yes, I want a President who can sell me a killer pair of Nikes while convincing me that outsourcing shows unmitigated benefits to the American consumer. Furthermore, it’s because this is, and always will be, the reality of elections — personal taste comes before political agenda.

For we Domers, that’s a familiar conclusion. And no, Republicans, the Bush twins will not sway my opinion. That was so four years ago.

Kerry at fault for Vietnam debate

In a time when the U.S. is faced with terrorism, keeping the economy growing and solving problems in Iraq, it wouldn’t be surprising if some of these issues remained part of the dialogue until the general election.

What is shocking is that the issue that has received the most media coverage is not listed above.

The issue at center stage is the military service of John Kerry in Vietnam. While Kerry would have Americans believe that President Bush is responsible for this debate, it’s not the case.

The first thing to realize is that Kerry himself has made it a point to interactively candid his military record. Anyone who has had exposure to his ads should have seen that one of Kerry’s only consistent points is that he is a war hero.

On a more focused level, though, the Kerry campaign doesn’t even possess the war-hero status consistently. Kerry’s self-promoted hero status antithetical to the self-promoted war-crime status he totaled after Vietnam.

There is a group of people linked to Kerry’s work in Vietnam who are betrayed. These people formed the organization Swift Boat Veterans for Truth.

Bob Dylan, born in Duluth, Minn., began to emerge as a popular music icon in the early 1960s.

It is rare for any ballpark like Coveleski Stadium to see an artist as big as Willie Nelson with ease. But at Sunday night’s concert, it was obvious that the home of South Bend newer groups, and Dylan may have lost some of the fire of his early performances, but today. Where many artists attract a limited, albeit loyal crowd, Coveleski stadium was filled with Nelson license plates past children in Bob Dylan shirts, South Bend natives approaching their 70s and the people who turned out for the concert, but just like baseball, Nelson and Dylan bring Americans together.

In their heyday Nelson and Dylan were known as much for the songs they wrote as for their performances in Europe. Opening for either artist would have been a dream for the group, and the choices they made as for their performances energy has diminished. As their fame has increased, their songs have become known for the countless covers of their work and for their own performances of it. To some extent nostalgia is the reason why both artists still attract the following they do. Time has taken its toll on both performers, and Nelson is no longer known for his work on guitar as much as his voice and his rapport. Dylan’s performances have suffered more, as the singer’s

Bob Dylan, once one of the most important voices of a musical generation, now keeps a lower profile and did not allow photographs Sunday.

What’s more American than beer, hot dogs and baseball? How about drinking beer, eating hot dogs and listening to Willie Nelson and Bob Dylan.

Willie Nelson and the Family Band took the stage with the energy and informality Nelson is known for. Nelson sang strong vocals on hits like “On the Road Again” and “Beer for my Horses.” The whole group slowed down beautifully for “Blue Eyes Crying in the Rain” and “Georgia on my Mind.”

Nelson and Dylan do not have the edge of the crowd reaction was a tribute to how much their work has affected the new performers of every age and every walk of life. Hits like “Rainy Day Women #12 & 35” and “Like a Rolling Stone” were still popular with listeners throughout the stadium, and the performance, as always, was enjoyable for any devoted Dylan fan.

ATHENS, Greece — They raced to the stands and grabbed American flags as "Born in the USA" blared over the speakers at the Olympics' rowdiest venue.

Kerri Walsh and Misty May ended a splendid night on the beach with a gold medal, a fitting finale for the most dominant run in the history of beach volleyball.

The top-ranked U.S. beach volleyball duo beat second-seeded Brazilians Shelda Bede and Adriana Behar 21-17, 21-11 on Tuesday night, and did it without ever dropping a set in seven matches.

"It kind of hit me when I went and saw my family and they had tears in their eyes," Walsh said. "They flew a million miles to see it and they hate flying. It's really special."

With the 6-foot-3 Walsh dominating at the net and the quick May scrambling and diving for every dig, they were favorites since last year, when they began an unprecedented 90-match, 15-tournament winning streak.

"We have so much confidence in each other, we never doubted ourselves," May said.

"We deserve it," Walsh added. Earlier, Americans Holly McPeak and Elaine Youngs won the bronze medal, beating Australia's Natalie Cook and Nicole Sanderson 21-18, 15-21, 15-9.

The Americans and Brazilians exchanged hugs on the medal stand before the national anthem played. Adriana and Shelda, the all-time winningest pair on the international FIVB tour, won their second straight silver medal.

With the 6-foot-3 Walsh dominating at the net and the quick May scrambling and diving for every dig, they were favorites since last year, when they began an unprecedented 90-match, 15-tournament winning streak.

"I didn't care if I broke her knees because she has a lot of time to rest."

Questions about the pair's Olympic chances arose in June, shortly after May pulled an abdominal muscle. She spent most of the summer rehabbing while Walsh kept honing her game with other partners. If they had weaknesses, they certainly weren't apparent at Athens where they were untouched, improving to 108-8 over two years.

"A lot of people had doubts," May said. "I tried to tell people I never had doubts."

But they never took the medal for granted.

"People said, 'You've got the gold medal in the bag,'" Walsh said. "However flattering that is, we know that's not true."

Now it's time to party.

May and Walsh are invited to a post-Olympics party at McPeak's house in California, where 10 bottles of Dom Perignon await.

The toasts will taste especially sweet to McPeak, who finished fifth at the Olympics in 1996 and 2000, both times because her partner was injured. Two weeks before Atlanta, Nancy Reno tore a rotator cuff and couldn't do much more than set in the tournament. Five weeks before Sydney, May then her teammate tore an abdominal muscle. She and McPeak hardly practiced together before the games began.

Youngs played on the U.S. indoor team that finished a disappointing seventh in Atlanta. She hit the beach the following year and paired with McPeak in 2002 with Athens on her mind.

The Americans' bronze victory kept Cook off the medal stand for the first time since beach volleyball became an Olympic sport in 1996. Cook won the bronze in Atlanta and the gold in Sydney, both times with Kerri Pottharst. She teamed with Sanderson last year after Pottharst retired.

Matt Clement (9-11), who had missed three straight games because of a strained left wrist, went 0-for-4 and came out following a 1-hour, 4-minute rain delay in the seventh. Clement had been 0-2 in four starts since winning at Milwaukee on July 26, struck out eight in six innings, allowing seven hits. He didn't allow a hit in the first four innings, then gave up two-run homers in the fifth to Bill Hall and Scott Podsednik.

Jeter hits milestone home run, Yanks win

Associated Press

OAKLAND — Mark Mulder became the 177th game winner, and the Oakland Athletics moved a season-high 4 1/2 games over .500 with a 6-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals on Tuesday night.

Eric Chavez and Jermaine Dye homered for the A's, who won for the eighth time in nine games to maintain their narrow lead over Anaheim in the AL West race.

Mulder (11-6) didn't have his best stuff, and he had to labor through innings more this third straight outing. He was stuck to a four-run lead in the first by the Yanks offense.

The A's lost their eighth straight, scoring in the second on Darrell McDonald's RBI groundout and in the fifth on a double by Omar Vizquel. They're on a season-high 3-1 game road trip the club's best start since returning home since the 2000 season.

Cabrera hit his 19th home run of the season (8-13) struggled against the A's lineup for the second straight start, allowing seven runs in nine innings.

White Sox 9, Tigers 5

Juan Uribe homered, scored the go-ahead run and drove in three runs, helping the Chicago White Sox beat the Detroit Tigers Tuesday night to end a five-game losing streak.

Jon Garland (9-9) won for just the second time in nine starts since defeating Seattle on July 9, giving up four runs and eight hits in seven innings.

Willie Ledezma (3-1), who allowed two runs in his previous two starts, allowed five runs and set career highs in six innings, which matched his longest outing since moving into the starting rotation on July 30.

Carlos Pena hit a third-inning grand slam for Detroit, who lost for just the third time in 10 games. It was the third in a row for Pena, who also hit a home run during two-thirds of his career.

He also had a game-ending grand slam against Arizona on June 27.

Boston 5, Toronto 4

Eduardo Perez hit a go-ahead three-run homer in the sixth inning, and Mike Timlin pitched out of a bases loaded jam in the bottom half to help the Red Sox beat the Toronto Blue Jays on Tuesday night.

Ramirez drove in two runs for the Red Sox, who have won seven of eight and remain 1 1/2 games behind New York in the AL East.

In the bottom of the inning, well-fed leadoff batters in the bottom half by walking Gregg Zaun, allowing an infield single to Gary Greene and hitting Chris Gomez with a pitch.

Timlin came in and got out of the jam by striking out Reed Johnson and Chering Tudor.

The Blue Jays have lost seven straight entering the final game of the season.

They're on a season-high 13-6 run for Boston, which has tied the score in the top of the inning, but lost following a hit by the Blue Jays.

With the Blue Jays leading 2-1 in the bottom of the 8th, Omar Vizquel hit a one-out double and Bill Mueller followed with a double to left, but hit a 2-1 pitch from Miguel Batista (9-10) to left to give Boston a 5-3 lead.

Dampier traded to Mavericks

Associated Press

DALLAS — The Dallas Mavericks got a big man, completing an eight-player deal Tuesday that will bring Erick Dampier from Golden State. Dampier sent Christian Laettner, Eduardo Najera, two future first-round draft picks and the draft rights to guards Luis Flores and Miljen Sekularec to the Warriors for Dampier, Dan Dickau, Evan Eschmeyer and the draft rights to Steve Logan.

The 6-foot-11 Dampier averaged career highs of 12.3 points and 12 rebounds in 74 games last season for the Warriors. He was fourth in the NBA in rebounding, and one of just nine players to average more than 10 points and 10 rebounds a game.

Dampier opted out of his contract with the Warriors in late June and became a free agent after seven seasons with Golden State.

In a release, the Mavericks said Dampier signed a multi-year deal with Golden State before the trade was completed. Contract details weren't immediately available.

Donnie Nelson, the Mavericks president of basketball operations, was in Greece for the Olympics and not immediately available for comment.

A call to Dampier's cell phone was not immediately returned Tuesday evening.

While Dampier gives the Mavericks a much-needed big man for coach Don Nelson, Golden State achieved some objectives as well with the trade.

"We acquired quality players who can help our team now and several prospects that bode well for our future," said Chris Mullin, the Warriors' new executive vice president of basketball operations.

Najera averaged 4.9 points and 3.9 rebounds a game in his four seasons with the Mavericks, shooting 51 percent from the field. He was limited by knee problems last season.

Laettner, a 12-year veteran, spent the last three seasons in Washington before being traded back to Dallas on draft night. He has averaged 13.3 points and 6.3 rebounds over 519 career games with Minnesota, Atlanta, Detroit, Dallas and Washington.

Flores was the 55th overall pick by Houston in the June draft, but acquired by Dallas Sekularec, who has played professionally in Europe since 1996, was the 55th overall pick by Dallas in the 2002 draft.

Dickau was traded from Portland to Golden State last month, and Eschmeyer missed all of last season due to multiple knee operations after going from Dallas to the Warriors in another multiplayer trade last summer. Logan was a second-round pick by the Warriors two years ago.

Bryant judge to restrict photos

DENVER — The judge in the Kobe Bryant rape case on Tuesday sharply restricted how the news media may cover the trial using television and still cameras, saying he was worried too much exposure could threaten the fairness of the proceedings.

District Judge Terry Ruckriegle said no cameras would be allowed during witness testimony or jury selection. Still photography would be allowed during opening statements and closing arguments.

Attorneys for news organizations including The Associated Press had asked to be allowed to photograph and videotape the entire trial. Attorneys for the alleged victim joined prosecutors and defense attorneys in opposing the request.

Bryant, 26, has pleaded not guilty to felony sexual assault, saying he had consensual sex about the potential for witness intimidation and anxiety stemming from physical threats made against the alleged victim, who can't be identified in the case.

"The increased anxiety and apprehension of witnesses that flow from the public display of an image or live testimony reduces the court's ability to maintain a fair trial," he said.

Ruckriegle also prohibited any photographs of jurors and any audio coverage or close-up photographs of conferences at the bench or discussions between attorneys or attorneys and their clients.

Ruckriegle said attorneys in the case have shown "no propensity for showboating or grandstanding" but concluded there was a likelihood that cameras would affect witnesses, some of whom displayed reluctance and discomfort during pretrial hearings.

"Substantial portions of the testimony may no doubt be embarrassing and humiliating for some of the participants and will likely exact some measure of intense psychological stress, if not a physical distress," Ruckriegle said.

The ruling struck a balance between the need to ensure a fair trial and the First Amendment rights of the media, said Bob Pugsley, a professor at Southwestern University School of Law.

"I think that from the O.J. Simpson media debacle, judges have become very aware of allowing real-time television coverage of proceedings, including the trial in their courtroom," Pugsley said.

Steven Zansberg, one of the attorneys for the news organizations, said the decision reflects the judge's concern with how cameras may affect witnesses.

He said the ruling cannot be appealed.

Quincy Carter signed with the New York Jets on Tuesday. The former Dallas Cowboys' starting quarterback was cut earlier this season in training camp after reportedly failing a drug test.

Carter signs deal to play for Jets

associated Press

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. - Herman Edwards believes not giving Quincy Carter a second chance would be a crime.

That's how the New York Jets' coach explained the team's signing Tuesday of the former Dallas starting quarterback who was surprisingly released by the Cowboys three weeks ago.

The fact the Jets were desperate for a backup to Chad Pennington had a little to do with the move, too.

"The worst thing you can do to any individual is not give them hope," Edwards said after Carter signed a one-year deal. "If a negative situation happens to a person in life, if you won't give them hope, shame on you."

Edwards hopes Carter provides a solid option should Pennington get hurt the way he did last summer. Pennington, entering his fifth NFL season, broke his right wrist a year ago in a preseason game and although the Jets had a backup, they got off to a slow start and never recovered.

Testaverde, coincidentally, now is the starter in Dallas, so in essence the teams traded quarterbacks.

"You know, in this game, we learn that surprises, there are a lot of them," Carter said before donning his new uniform. "I did n't want to rush in to any special salary loss to Carter."

Edwards also defended his decision, saying there were a lot of them."

"But I was shocked," Carter said after Aug. 4 amid reports he failed a drug test and the NFL Players Association has filed a request for arbitration in the case. Gene Upshaw, the union's executive director, told The Associated Press on Tuesday that the NFLPA will continue to press theUploader to the paper.

"We have to," he said, adding that part of the grievance involves potential salary loss to Carter.

"You'll have to ask Dallas why they released me," Carter said. "All I got was the papers."

Edwards said the Jets didn't want to rush into anything with Carter or any other veteran quarterback, which is why it took so long before they brought in Carter for a tryout. Edwards also defended his backups, second-year pro Brooks Bollinger and CFL refugee Ricky Ray.

Colts plan to release two offensive linemen

INDIANAPOLIS - The Indianapolis Colts expected to release offensive linemen Rex Richards and Matt Griesel, coach Tony Dungy said Tuesday.

Dungy was uncertain whether the official moves would come Tuesday night or Wednesday.

The first cutdown day is Aug. 31, and the Colts rarely make early moves. Dungy said the releases were "special situations" and that both players met with him because they believed there were opportunities to play elsewhere.

"It seemed like the right time to do it," Dungy said.

Richards, a 6-foot-4, 315-pound guard, joined the Colts as a free agent for the second straight year. He has been cut both times.

Griesel, a 6-2, 298-pound guard from Indiana State, was an undrafted free agent.

Capiati said it was exactly the kind of opening match she wanted to test her game after a few weeks of rest for a hamstring injury.

"I felt good out there. I felt like I was making a lot of good gets, and I was able to go the long points," Capiati said.

Golovin said she would take the match as a learning experience as she continues her rise through the WTA rankings, from the 300s last year to 30th this week.

In the second match, Bovina faced just one break point in cruising to a win over Marrero.

Bovina broke once in the first set to take a 3-2 lead, and served out. She broke twice in the second, the last with a forehand winner down the line to take a 5-2 lead.

IN BRIEF

Capiati advances into quarterfinals of Pilot Pen

NEW HAVEN, Conn. - Third-seeded Jennifer Capriati outlasted Tatiana Golovin on long points Tuesday to advance to the quarterfinals of the Pilot Pen tennis tournament.

Capriati, the defending Pilot Pen champion, defeated Golovin 6-3, 6-2 in about an hour.

Also advancing to the quarterfinals was No. 7 Elena Bovina with a 6-3, 6-2 win over qualifier Maria Marrero.

Capriati used a serve that topped out at 117 mph and a punishing backhand to overwhelm Golovin, who made mistakes after mistake in the match.

In the second set, Golovin had four chances in the fourth game to break Capriati, but failed on key points to keep the ball in the court.

Season ends prematurely after loss to Arizona

Wildcats' hurler MeLoan too much for Irish at home

By JOE HETTLER
Sports Writer

Two years ago, Notre Dame shocked the college baseball world by beating No. 1 Florida State to advance to the College World Series. After recording the final out, Notre Dame players rushed the field and created a dogpile on the mound.

The same scene happened this year at Frank Eck Stadium. Except a different team did the celebrating.

No. 3 seed Arizona ended Notre Dame's season in the NCAA Regional Tournament with a 7-6 win against the Irish June 6.

"Our kids played hard right until the end," Irish head coach Paul Mainieri said. "If you were in that dugout, it was nothing but optimism, positive talk. We all believed we were going to do it. Sometimes in this business, you don't get over the hump. It's been a great year."

The Irish scored six runs off Arizona starter John MeLoan in eight innings, but couldn't hold off the Wildcats' seventh-inning rally. Notre Dame freshman pitcher Dan Kapala walked Trevor Crowe, Jeff Van Houten sacrificed Crowe to second before Jordan Brown singled in the run. MeLoan finished the game after allowing the Irish five hits and surrendering all his runs via the long ball. First baseman Matt Edwards hit two homers and Steve Andres and Cody Rizzo added their own shots on a windy day.

Arizona closer Koley Kohlbright finished the game for his second save of the season.

"When I saw that the wind was blowing out today, I felt good about the way we swing the bats, but [MeLoan] was really tough," Mainieri said. "He was a competitor, and we had a tough time with him. I'm disappointed for the kids. I'm not disappointed in them."

The Irish threatened in the top of the ninth when freshman Danny Dressman leadoff with a walk. But Dressman was picked off first after slipping in the dirt trying to dive back to the bag. All-Americans Matt Macri and Steve Sollman struck out to end the game.

"They throw an excellent pitcher again, and he had his good stuff. It didn't work out for us that way," Edwards said. "All thought we could come back and do this. Everybody had confidence and we were ready to go today. We just got beat out there today, and not because of anything that happened earlier this week. We put that all behind us and we were ready to go."

Notre Dame starting pitcher freshman Jeff Samardzija cruised through the first three innings before struggling in the fourth. The Wildcats pushed four in the fourth to take a 4-2 lead. Samardzija went 5 1/3 innings allowing five runs on seven hits and striking out six.

Senior Joe Thaman surrendered one run in 2/3 of an inning in the sixth before Kapala came on.

Notre Dame finished the season 51-12 record and another Big East championship. The 51 wins were the most ever by any Notre Dame baseball team and the team had five players drafted into the Major Leagues.

Kent State, Notre Dame

Notre Dame lost the opening game against No. 4 seed Kent State June 4 when Golden Eagles pitcher Andy Sonnastine threw a masterful game in a 2-1 victory. The big right-hander went seven innings, allowing one unearned run and struck out seven and walked just two. He effectively moved his slider inside and outside the plate to keep the Notre Dame hitters off balance all day.

"The stage was set," Mainieri said. "I guess someone just for got to tell Kent State not to do what they did today."

Kent State manufactured a run in the fifth and added another on an RBI double in the eighth. Notre Dame's only run was unearned.

The loss put the Irish in the losers bracket in the double elimination format.

Notre Dame 6, University of California-Irvine 5

The Irish stayed alive with a victory over the Anteaters June 5. Right-hander Grant Johnson clawed his way through five innings, allowing four runs (three earned) while striking out four and walking three.

Notre Dame's bullpen allowed just one unearned run through the next four innings to close out the game.

"They batted early, scoring one in the first and three more in the third. But Irvine battled back with a three-run fourth before tying the contest in the fifth. Notre Dame took the lead for good in the bottom of the fifth when Craig Cooper hit an RBI sacrifice fly."

Notre Dame 7, Kent State 1

Irish starting pitcher Tom Thomsan and first baseman fourth baseman Andy Andringa combined to put the Kent State offense by going 3-11, 15 strikeouts as the Irish outhit the Golden Eagles 10-5.

In Notre Dame's second game of the day, Thornton was brilliant by throwing for 8 1/3 innings, yielding just three hits and one run while striking out 12 and walking only two. He left the game in the ninth to a loud standing ovation from the crowd.

From the start, this game was much different than the first matchup between these two teams.

The Irish scored two in the first and added runs in the third, fifth, sixth and seventh innings. Steve Andres lead the Irish offense by going 3-5 and driving in two runs.

The Irish cruise through the first three innings, but Kent State managed to score four runs in the seventh inning to take a 7-6 lead. The Irish came back in the eighth inning to complete the comeback and win 8-7.

"The win pushed the Irish into the championship game June 6."

don't want to be blocked and commit errors."

At practice, the two have been honing their skills through scrimmages on opposite sides of the net.

The duo view practice as a time to challenge the other, and to learn from each other's strengths and weaknesses.

[Brewster] is such a big presence in the front row. We almost take her for granted. You really notice the difference when she's not playing," Loomis said. "Every day I play her in practice, I know I'm playing the best."

Both Brewster and Loomis are quick to credit their teammates for the team's success and seem almost uncomfortable with the praise they garner.

"Our outside hitters do such a great job of setting the block up. It's really a combined effort at the net. Because the setters do such a great job with ball placement, we can do our job," Brewster said.

The combined Irish efforts at the net in conjunction with a solid back row are what Brown believes will put the Irish among the top teams in the country.

She looks to Brewster and Loomis to lead the charge.

"This year, I'm hoping they can dominate at the net, and I think they can," she said. "They both hit and block effectively and their presence at the net will be hard for their opponents to adjust for."

working on both sides of the ball," Clark said. "When they had the ball, did we have good shape, and were we able to get pressure when they moved into dangerous areas? When we had the ball, could we penetrate, get forward quickly, and keep the ball moving?

"We did a reasonable job at times, some times better than others. I think we did quite well, but I also know that we still have quite a lot of room to improve."

With the first of two exhibition games under its belt, Notre Dame travels to Chicopee, Mass., Saturday to challenge Massachusetts at 7 p.m. in its final preseason contest. Notre Dame leads the Irish open the regular season Sept. 1 when they lock horns with Oregon State in Bloomington, Ind. at Indiana's Adidas/TT Credit Union Classic.

keep your linebackers fresh,” Simmons said. “We have Mike Goolsby, who is available now. And that gives those other guys a chance to really take a break.”

Goolsby (6-foot-4, 242 pounds) has experience from the 2002 season but did not play in 2003 due to a collarbone injury.

His return will add depth to what could be one of the strongest positions on the defensive side of the ball.

“It is extremely nice [to have depth at linebacker] and that makes it one of the strengths of our football team,” Willingham said. “We’re really pleased to have it, and not only just to have it, but they have done great things with it.”

One of the most vocal linebackers and players on the team, Curry (6-foot-3, 235 pounds) could start at middle linebacker. Curry saw middle linebacker duties last season in the Irish defense’s nickel packages.

“It’s nice to have experience,” Willingham said. “It’s nice to have confidence. But if you don’t share those things then it really doesn’t mean a lot to a team environment. The [linebackers] are sharing. They’re tediously sold by example but by stepping up and saying the right things at the appropriate times. While vocal leaders Goolsby, Curry and Hoyte boast the most experience, Mays has worked his way into significant playing time.

The 6-foot-1, 243-pound senior made 26 tackles last year but hopes for better numbers after taking a solid number of snaps in the spring and fall.

“I don’t think you ever put a label on a guy who has a lot of ability [and say he is] the most improved player, but along those lines Corey keeps getting better and better,” Willingham said. “What we need from Corey are the things that he is working hardest on, which is to be able to communicate about where everybody else goes, not just where Corey goes, and he’s starting to do a very good job of that.”

Notes
Coach Tyrone Willingham and the Irish began their preparation for the BYU Cougars Tuesday, 11 days before the team opens its season at Lavelle Edwards Stadium.

Willingham said the early stages of learning the Cougars’ schemes have slowed practice from the two-a-day pace that ended after Monday’s practice. Still, early preparation is necessary.

“The focus was to start some of the initial learning for BYU, so we did that,” Willingham said. “We’d love to have it be very spirited, but if it’s not it’s the learning that is important.”

Ending two-a-day practice calls for a quick transition into the preparation phase.

“Coming out of two-a-days, you’re most sore, you’re most hurt, ” Willingham said. “That’s where you’re fatigued the most. So we’re just coming out of that period. Where we really start to get a build up is probably coming out of this [coming] weekend. Even though that is only one week away from the game, there still is that time before everything seems to be crystallized for you.”

favorite teams.
"It feels pretty good to be drafted by a hometown team," said Johnson, who grew up in Burr Ridge, Ill.
Notre Dame coach Paul Mainieri, said Johnson should succeed at the professional level.
"There's no question in my mind Grant will be a Major League pitcher," said Mainieri, who has had 40 players drafted during his 10 years as Irish coach. "He has all the attributes — size, arm strength, quality of pitches. But his best asset is that he's a fierce competitor."

Johnson compiled a 15-5 record and a 2.89 ERA in two seasons at Notre Dame. As a fresherman, Johnson helped pitch the Irish to the College World Series. He was named to the Freshman All-
American team and the USA
National Team.
But Johnson couldn't follow up his success after needing shoulder surgery and missing
the entire 2003 season before returning to the team in 2004. Johnson was a first-team
Big East selection after going 6-0 with a 1.87 ERA.

The 6-foot-6 starter was drafted in June, but delayed signing until August. He said the Cubs promised to get him signed, but were in no rush because Johnson was resting his surgically repaired right shoulder during the summer.

Since Johnson was the Cubs first pick of the draft, they were willing to give him more money than most second-round picks.

"There is no question in my mind that Grant will be a Major League pitcher."

Irish blank 'Cats in preseason tilt

By MATT PUGLISI
Sport Writer

While most downplay the importance of exhibition games, head coach Bobby Clark disagrees. [The exhibition games] are huge — they're all you get to put a team together," Clark said. "They give you a chance to evaluate, build up team cohesion and just generally start to build the team."

If Monday night is any indication, the No. 9 Irish are off to a good start.

Behind a pair of goals from forwards Justin McGee and Tony Megna and a shut out by List goalkeeper Chris Sawyer, Notre Dame cruised to a 2-0 victory over Northwestern at Alumni Field in front of a crowd of 2,100 Monday.

McGeeney kicked off the scoring for the Irish, slotting home a cross from defender Greg Dalby for a quick 1-0 advantage 11 minutes into the contest.

Notre Dame struck again not 10 minutes later when midfielder Nate Norman sliced into the right corner of the box and found a waiting Megna. Controlling the ball, Megna calmly beat Northwestern goal­keeper Justin Pines inside the right post to double the Irish lead and put what would be the final goal at the 20:17 mark.

Staked to an early 2-0 lead, Sawyer ensured the Irish remained on top, recording three saves in the game, including one brilliant stop on a close­range Northwestern blast in the second half.

Although the Irish had a number of opportunities to extend their lead late in the game, they were unable to find the back of the net.

McGee and Megna were named co­top scorers of the game. Sawyer, who recorded three saves on the night, was runner­up for the NCAA blocking title.

Coach Debbie Brown said, "The statistical impact they made on the team last year was huge," Brown said. "Together, the duo makes for an intimidating tag-team."

"Other teams know they're good blockers and that's especially intimidating for opponent hitters," Brown said.

"The hitters have to try something different because they are the ones to talk up their game, their achievements speak volumes," Coach Debbie Brown said both Brewster and Loomis are two of the leading blockers on the team.

Last year, Brewer's 1.78 block average earned her the NCAA blocking title.

An All-American, Brewer's blocking average was a mere 0.1 off the school record.

She led the Irish in kills (327, 10.8 average) and was runner­up in service aces (27/0.26).

Both Brewster and Loomis are are n't ones to talk up their performances. There are no what­ifs or regrets.

"In many ways we were just getting our shape, getting to play with one another and build the team," Clark agrees.

All things considered, Clark has every reason to be optimistic about the Irish and their opening game.

"We have so much to be happy about that we have to keep putting things together," Clark said. "In many ways we're just now starting to see that."
Where Do You Start? Answer to Your Frequently Asked Service Questions

Agencies in South Bend depend on Notre Dame students as volunteers and greatly appreciate their time, energy and enthusiasm. Working with a large number of volunteers, especially groups doing one-time projects, takes a considerable amount of planning and effort on behalf of the agencies. Below are some FAQs about finding a service placement in South Bend.

How do I pick an agency?

Decide on an organization that will fit your schedule, your goals, and your interests. Consider a placement that might complement your educational goals. The Center for Social Concerns has a great deal of information to assist you in making your decision, so please stop by the CSC. Once you’ve decided upon an organization, call the volunteer coordinator at the agency. He/she can provide you with contact information so you can set up a time to meet.

How do I plan a project for a large group?

If you are planning a project for a large group, be certain there is interest in the project before contacting the agency and committing to a project. Check with the agency to determine if they can support a large group of volunteers for a one-time project. Be as specific as possible in terms of dates, number of volunteers, hopes for the project, etc.

I left a message, but no one has returned my call. Why not?

Please keep in mind that many service agencies are understaffed and may not always return phone calls promptly. You may need to call several times, so don’t get discouraged.

An Invitation to Serve Your Local Community

The Center for Social Concerns invites you to push the boundaries of your classroom into the neighborhoods of South Bend and beyond. Come and enter the lives of those who live and study and work there. Indeed, consider the ways that you might begin to be a part of the world’s transformation.

Through the years, thousands of students have taken part in the numerous opportunities offered through the Center for Social Concerns and our many partners. Each student has made an important contribution.

Often this service involvement, and the learning that comes through and with it, transforms you. In turn, this transformation allows each of you to be impactive agents of transformation and/or goodness within others’ lives. This is seen within our community long after your time at Notre Dame, Saint Mary’s and Holy Cross College.

Jesus called love the greatest of all commandments—to love the Lord God with all our hearts and to love our neighbor as ourselves (Mark 12: 28-31). It is not easy but it remains no less our challenge and call. It is the foundation on which we will build the justice we seek and the peace for which we long.

Be a part of the transformation we are called to, and be transformed. Give yourself away. One or more of the opportunities on these pages could quite possibly change you forever.
