National leaders debate immigration

Speakers collaborate, differ on reform proposals, economic impact, social justice

By KAITLYNN REILY

Four leading voices in the national debate about immigration reform spoke to the Notre Dame community Monday about showing compassion for the illegal aliens living within American borders while enforcing immigration laws.

Ray Suarez, a senior correspondent for The NewsHour with Jim Lehrer and the moderator for the third annual Notre Dame Forum, opened the event in the Joyce Center with a film that provided a face for one of the roughly 12 million immigrants who have come to the U.S. illegally.

The Mexican immigrant knew she was breaking the law but entered the U.S. any way she could so she could pay for her daughters' educations. But the immigrant, the video showed, was caught, and is certain she will face deportation.

In the film, Notre Dame theology professor Father Daniel Groody spoke about Catholic social teaching on immigration.

"A nation has a right to control borders," he said. "But it's not an absolute right. In controlling its borders, it must respect human rights. Balance between the humanitarian aspects of the immigration debate and the economic, political and legal implications should not be taken literally. It's not an absolute right. In understanding the reasons for the nation's border control, it's worth to have the common sense.""}

Professor lectures on Aquinas

Scholar encourages a skeptical reading

By MANDI STRONE

A professor from Boston College said St. Aquinas' writings should not be taken literally and should be read skeptically in the opening of the Philosophy Lecture Series at Saint Mary's Monday.

Eileen Sweeney spoke on "Reading Thomas Aquinas: Myths, Dangers and Virtues" to about thirty audience members in Haggard Hall.

"Aquinas is still, among Catholics, a weapon in the culture wars," she said, adding that, because his writings aren't Scripture, "we should be even more skeptical of him."

Sweeney's lecture focused on Aquinas' theories and writings—especially his ideas on faith and theology. She compared her lecture idea to a "top-10 list."

Sweeney presented three top-six lists—one each on the myths, dangers and virtues of Aquinas' teachings.

Throughout the lecture, she made various references to Jesus' idea of a verbal examination, referencing her father, who underwent such an examination during his youth. She said she thought her father would be proud since, while teaching at Marymount, she "served on a board of examiners for young Jesuits."

Sweeney also analyzed Aquinas' views on humanity before and after the "fall" from the Garden of Eden.

Board of Governance

Self-defense class discussed

By ASHLEY CHARNLEY

Saint Mary's Board of Governance (BOG) Monday began a co-sponsor of an upcoming self-defense workshop for women.

Maura Clougherty, a member of the Residence Hall Association, introduced plans to host Erin Weed, the founder of Girls Fight Back, a safety and self-defense group for women. Weed founded Girls Fight Back in 2001 after her friend was murdered. Clougherty said she is in a business suit and heels. "Weed's classes are somewhat unconventional," Clougherty said. "It's different from other self defense classes," she said. "She is in a business suit and heels."

The program will be held on Nov. 6 in Carroll Auditorium at 7 p.m. and is open to all students. Barry Bowles, general manager of dining facilities, also spoke. BOG has answered some of the board's questions about nutritional and portion control for meals in Noble Family Dining Hall.

"If you are looking for a nutritional source, it's there," Bowles said, referring to the Dining Hall's Web site.

The site includes nutrition facts and allergy and information for all the meals at Saint Mary's, he said.
INSIDE COLUMN

I want my sweatshirt back

When I was first told last February that I was required to write an Inside Column at some point during the semester to receive a paycheck from this newspaper, our former news editor told me that the easiest thing to write about is something I care about.

So naturally, I decided to write about skydiving.

That might have been a good choice if I had ever actually gone skydiving, but since I hadn’t, it was slightly sketchy.

So today, I’m going to actually follow my editor’s advice and write about the baseball playoffs.

For those of us who view football season as a filter from the World Series to Spring Training, the baseball playoffs are the greatest thing to hit America since the Declaration of Independence. And this year’s playoffs are looking pretty good so far.

At least better than the latest chia pet alarm clock that some spammer tried to sell me last week.

Even someone who was in my room for the Yankees-Indians series—which was a great pitchers’ duel (Fausto Carmona is a baller) and gave us two innings of bonus baseball—are any baseball fan’s dream.

We’ve been treated to some great games so far, if not necessarily great series. Games like Game 2 of the Yankees-Indians series—which was a great pitchers’ duel (Fausto Carmona is a baller) and gave us two innings of bonus baseball—are any baseball fan’s dream.

Best of all, it ended with a bunch of angry New Yorkers wondering about the angry bugs swarming the field and conspiring to fix the game, as if ghosts were NBA refs or something.

Games like Game 3 of the Cubs-Diamondbacks series turn on too. Especially since I’m a D-Backs fan. And we won. When Livan Hernandez got Mark DeRosa to hit into a DP in the bottom of the fifth, someone who was in my room to watch the ND-UCLA game and who was a self-described “very small Twins fan” got excited about it.

While we’re talking about the D-Backs, I’d like everyone to know that Stephen Drew is a future Hall of Famer.

You heard it here first. He’s a great defensive shortstop, and if this series was any indication, he’s putting it together offensively and if this series was any indication, it’s going to be a DP in the bottom of the fifth, even someone who was in my room to watch the ND-UCLA game and who was a self-described “very small Twins fan” got excited about it.

Golden retriever nurses stray kitten

STEPHENS CITY, Va. — A stray kitten has found a new mother in a golden retriever, who began producing milk for the gray tabby after hearing its cries.

The hungry kitten, found in an old tire at a concrete plant, refused to drink from a bottle and her rescuers feared she would die. That’s when Honey, the family dog who hadn’t given birth in 18 months, stepped in with her motherly instincts.

“She started licking her and loving her. Within a couple of days, Honey started naturally lactating,” said Kathy Martin, whose husband, Jimmy, brought the kitten home six weeks ago. “The kitten took right to her.”

Initially, the family worried such a big dog would be too rough for the tiny feline named Precious.

Man faces prison for doughnut theft

FARMINGTON, Mo. — It’s a hefty price for a pastry. A man accused of stealing a 52-cent doughnut could face time in jail. Authorities said Scott A. Masters, 41, slipped the doughnut into his sweatshirt without paying, then pushed away a clerk who tried to stop him as he fled the store.

The push is being treated as minor assault, which transforms a misdemeanor shoplifting charge to a strong-armed robbery with a potential prison term of five to 15 years. Because he has a criminal history, prosecutors say they could seek 30 years.

“Strong-arm robbery? Over a doughnut? That’s impossible,” Masters told the St. Louis Post-Dispatch from jail. He admitted that he took the pastry but denied touching the employee. “There’s no way I would’ve pushed a woman over a doughnut.”

Symposium focuses on energy

Event to highlight environmental research during green week

Special to The Observer

The sixth annual symposium on Notre Dame Environmental Education and Research (NDEER) will be held Wednesday from 8:15 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. in the McKenna Hall auditorium.

Sponsored by the Notre Dame Energy Center, the Office of Research, the Sewing Foundation Endowment for Market Based Programs and Catholic Values, and Institute for Scholarship in the Liberal Arts, NDEER 2007 will focus on energy and the environment.

Since its inception in 2001, the purpose of NDEER has been to highlight the depth and diversity of environmental research occurring throughout the University and to develop closer ties among the large, multidisciplinary groups of faculty on campus.

Plenary speakers for the 2007 program include John Ledyard, Allen and Lenabelle Davis Professor of Economics and Social Sciences at the California Institute of Technology and Rodney Ewing, Donald B. Fruehan Collegiate Professor of the Department of Geological Sciences at the University of Michigan.

Michael J. Mudd, chief executive officer of FutureGen Alliance, a public-private partnership working to build the world's first coal-fueled power plant, was originally scheduled to be a plenary speaker, but will be unable to attend due to an unexpected conflict. Frank Incropera, H. Clifford and Evelyn A. Rosey Professor of Mechanical Engineering and Matthew H. McCloskey Emeritus Dean of the College of Engineering, will deliver Mudd's talk.

Ledyard pioneered work on the theoretical foundations and applications of mechanism design and contributed greatly to the understanding of the roles of incentives and information in markets and organizations. His more applied work has included the development of computer-assisted markets for trading pollution rights, managing resources for spacecraft and instrument design, acquiring logistics contracts, and swing portfolios of thinly traded securities and decision markets.

Ewing's research involves testing reduced-emission waste disposal. He also is an emeritus regents' professor at the University of New Mexico, where he was a member of the faculty from 1974 through 1997. He will present a featured lecture focusing on nuclear energy issues in the 21st century.

Each guest speaker also will participate in a special break-out session facilitated by Notre Dame faculty and in a moderated panel discussion at the end of the conference.

NDEER 2007 occurs during the University's first ever Energy and Social Sciences Week. The event sponsored event promoting responsible energy use and highlighting the energy research occurring on campus. The week's theme is "Get Your Green On."

According to Joan F. Brennecke, the Keating-Crawford Professor of Chemical and Biomolecular Engineering and Director of the Energy Center, it is vital that students understand and participate in finding solutions for the energy challenges they will face. Activities focused on energy education and awareness continue throughout the fall term, and include a display of electric cars and hybrid motorcy­cles, solar charge stations for students to power small electron­ical devices, a calories-to­kilowatts display, carbon dioxide footprint calculators that students will use to measure their impact on climate change, a wind turbine display constructed by students, informa­tion on renewable energy sources, tours of the Notre Dame power plant, and show­ings of documentaries and energy focused movies such as "A Crude Awakening: The Oil Crash," "Kilowatt Ours" and "An Inconvenient Truth."

In the ladder system, you start off in a smaller room your freshman year, but the longer you stay in the hall, the bigger and better your room will get," Shoup said.

"We feel that we've lost touch with that concept in the newer, more cookie-cutter dorms in Mod Quad or West Quad over the past few years, and we're happy to say that we are able to accomplish that with Duncan."

By accommodating 234 male residents at four class levels, Duncan will also help eliminate some of the overcrowding in male dorms. The group of Notre Dame freshmen who will be living in Duncan next year, O'Hill is still finalizing how upperclassmen will also have an exercise room, large kitchen, elevator and laundry site," says the month's theme. According to Jim Oliver, assistant director of residence life, there will be air-conditioned and heated dorms to determine how the Resident Assistant will also have an exercise room, large kitchen, elevator and laundry facilities to create a sense of community, there will be large, social common areas on each floor. Also in St. Edward's Hall, the dorm chapel will be located on the second floor. "When you look at the way (West Quad) is set up, it seems more separated from the community," said Shoup. "But we want it to be more of a centerpiece for the community experience. If you talk to people at St. Edward's, they like how the chapel is located on the second floor. By incorpo­rating a feature of these little things we've heard about into designing Duncan, we're going to have it reach out into the greater community."

As the building is being built, ResLife will continue to make progress in the upcoming months to determine how the Resident Assistants and Hall Government Council will be selected. A mascot has yet to be determined.

considerations was a topic the panelists debated — with much disagreement — for nearly two hours.

The panel members were Louis Barletta, the mayor of Hazleton, Pa., Cardinal Roger Mahony, the archbishop of Los Angeles, Sen. Mel Martinez, R-Fla., and Gov. Janet Napolitano, D-Ariz.

Napolitano said she confronts the issue of immigration daily in Arizona where, she said, 4,000 illegal immigrants are apprehended daily.

Napolitano said the U.S. needs better border security and better documentation, but also must provide more visas to keep up with demand.

The hard part of the debate, Napolitano said, is to decide what to do with the millions of illegal immigrants already in the country.

"Dealing with those 12 million who are already here and have already raised their families here... is a very difficult issue to confront," she said.

It is an issue that Barletta has already tried to address.

In 2006, Barletta signed an ordinance, which has not yet gone into effect, that would punish businesses and landlords in Hazleton that knowingly hired or harbored illegal immigrants.

The city is currently fighting in court challenges to the constitutionality of the ordinance, which has not yet gone into effect.

Hazleton’s greatest asset is “the quality of life that we enjoy,” Barletta said. Criminal activities committed by illegal immigrants motivated him to enact the ordinance to discourage illegal aliens from living in the town, he said.

Barletta offered several examples of violent crime committed in Hazleton by illegal immigrants, including a domestic stabbing incident and murder.

“It’s unfortunate because not everyone who is here is working hard and a nice person,” he said.

Martinez, who is the only immigrant in the U.S. Senate and the first Cuban-American to hold a Senate seat, disagreed with Barletta’s claims about criminal tendencies of illegal immigrants.

"I realize that in any group there are going to be those who are here to work hard and those who are here to make trouble," he said.

The problem, he said, is that the U.S. Congress failed to pass comprehensive immigration reform this summer.

Congress needs to sign a bill, Martinez said, that secures the country’s borders while recognizing U.S. labor needs. The bill should also confront the problem of the millions of illegal immigrants living within U.S. borders, Martinez said.

"One of the sad legacies of our failure to act is that cities across America will do what Hazleton has done and the other cities will become sanctuaries."

Mel Martinez, U.S. senator

The Catholic Church has "walked with every single wave of immigrants" — both legal and illegal — since the 1700s, said Mahony, the archbishop of Los Angeles.

"We have a moral responsibility to deal with the 12 million people that are here," he said. "I’m saddened and disappointed at the inability of our Congress to pass meaningful legislation."

The division created by the issue of immigration was evident in several exchanges between panelists. Mahony listened to Barletta describe his city’s ordinance, told him the ordinance and others like it — are creating fear among immigrant groups across the country.

The Catholic Church, Mahony said, would not issue similar dictums.

"We will serve anybody who is here legally, he said. "We will never be asking for documents for our church, our parishes, our sacraments, whatever. We are just not going there."

When Suarez asked if the Catholic Church could take an acta carte view toward the civil code, Mahony responded that if a law restricts the right of the Church to minister to the people, the Church has a "higher law that supersedes it."

Mahony’s statements garnered applause. Suarez then asked the audience to stop clapping for the remainder of the two-hour forum and "do moral reasoning on a somewhat higher level than ‘Yeah, hoo.’"

Some audience members spoke toward the forum’s end, when Suarez allowed several Notre Dame students to ask prepared questions.

Michelle Saucedo, a sophomore from Arizona, described how her father was deported to Mexico seven years ago, which left her mother in charge of supporting and raising four children.

"Family separation was a familiar experience for Martinez, who said he was away from his family for four years when he first arrived in the United States. He agreed with Napolitano’s earlier assessment that the government must issue more visas to keep up with the demand.

"Why show them a disproportionate amount of compassion?" he asked.

The simple answer to the question, Napolitano said, is if you are here illegally, you should not get the commensurate amount of compassion, she said, that the U.S. government can’t just deport 12 million people.

The real answer must be a compromise through which the government prohibits illegal aliens from gaining citizenship unless they fulfill specific requirements, such as paying a fine, waiting in line behind those going through the process legally and learning English, she said.

The system must allow illegal immigrants to "get out of the shadows," Napolitano said.

The federal government has failed to reform the immigration system, Napolitano said, so state and city officials like she and Barletta have had to move forward independently.

Martinez said he recognized the stress the federal government’s failure to enact reform would put on state legislators.

"One of the sad legacies of our failure to act is that cities across America will do what Hazleton has done and the other cities will become sanctuaries," he said.

Barletta said that his town’s proposed ordinance has created a ripple effect, as many of the illegal immigrants in Hazleton have moved down the road to neighboring communities.

According to a News and Information article, about 3,000 people attended Monday’s forum.

The forum was the third since Father John Jenkins was inaugurated as University president. The 2006 forum addressed the global health crisis, and in 2005 forum participants discussed the role of religion and faith in a pluralistic world.

Young deputy kills six in Wisconsin

Associated Press

CRANDON, Wis. — The young sheriff’s deputy who opened fire at a town meeting Monday and killed six people reportedly flew into a rage when he was rebuffed by his ex-girlfriend, and others at the meeting called him a “worthless pig.”

A longtime friend told the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel on Monday that 20-year-old Tyler Peterson came to his door in the hours after the rampage and calmly explained what he had done.

“I wasn’t running around crying or anything. I was very, very sorry for what he did,” Mike Kegley told the newspaper, adding that he gave Peterson coffee and food and later called 911.

Peterson told Kegley that he had gone to his ex-girlfriend’s house early Sunday, hoping in hopes of patching up the relationship after a recent breakup. But, he said, Peterson lost control when the meeting ended in an argument and other people started ridiculing him as a “worthless pig.”

Kegley declined to comment on what prompted the shooting.

Police, who declined to provide further details of the infam­ous, said Peterson stormed out, retrieved an AR-15 rifle from his car outside and burst back into the house firing 30 shots that killed all but one of the people at the party.

“We had no idea, obviously, that anything like this would ever occur,” Crandon Police Chief John Deneen said at a news conference.

Peterson, a deputy and part-time police officer, later died after exchanging gunfire with law enforce­ment officers. Whether Peterson was shot by police or took his own life was unclear.

Some questioned the wisdom of hiring someone so young.

“Now that I have ever seen of 20 years old was responsible enough to be a police officer,” said Steve Boreck, of Oak Creek, whose nephew Bradley Schultz was killed. “It was unbelievable. You don’t have the mind to be a police officer. It takes a lot.”

But Crandon city attorney Lindsay Erickson said age doesn’t matter as long as officers do their jobs well. Peterson testified for her in several cases.

“He wrote good reports and was ‘true to his job,’” she said.

“From what I saw of him, I didn’t see any warning signs or red flags,” Erickson said.

Peterson was hired as a full-time deputy sheriff on Sept. 11, 2006, at the age of 19, according to personnel records released by the Forest County clerk. His yearlong probation ended last month.

Dr. Phil Trompeter, a police psychologist in Modesto, Calif., estimated at least 80 percent of states require psychological testing of prospective officers.

“Wisconsin must be in a very small minority of states,” he said.

The Wisconsin Department of Justice Law Enforcement Standards Board requires only that applicants be free of any emotional or mental condition that might hinder them in their duties. It does not say how that is determined.

No formal national standards exist for hiring police, although individual states are adopting requirements such as mandatory psychological tests, said Craig Zendzian, author of several guidebooks for police applicants.

Neighbors hug close to where a law enforcement employee went on a shooting rampage Sunday in Crandon, Wis., killing six people and injuring a seventh.

Government executes 15; U.N. protests

KABUL. — Ending a three-year mora­torium on the death penalty, Afghanistan executed 15 prisoners by gunfire, including a man convicted of killing three foreign journalists during an attack last month, the Afghan government announced Monday.

The executions follow a U.N. resolution protesting the executions, which could complicate relations between the government and some NATO countries with military forces here. Foreign troops often hand over captured militants to the Afghan government, raising the question of whether countries that do not use the death penalty might stop surrendering prisoners.

The Netherlands was one of the first to criticize the Afghan announcement, calling the executions “extremely unwelcome.” But it also said Dutch troops would continue to transfer mili­tants to the Afghan government, saying it had an agreement protecting those prisoners from execution.

Anger over the executions also could prove a snag for NATO’s efforts to get its member nations to send more troops to Afghanistan. NATO has some 40,000 soldiers here but commanders complain they need more helicopters, mobile troops and instructors to train the Afghan army.

Afghan Government executes 15; U.N. protests

The crimes committed by those exec­uted included murder, kidnapping and armed robbery, but officials said no Taliban or al-Qaida fighters were among the prisoners.

Until it was ousted in late 2001, Afghanistan’s hard-line Taliban regime carried out executions in public, many of them at the Kabul stadium. The new government pledged to the internation­al community it would halt executions, and had carried out only one previous­ly, in 2004.

The 15 deaths could complicate rela­tionships between the government and some NATO countries with military forces here. CMDH's Auburn Hills head tactic the union is using to squeeze more concessions from the company. But it also may be that Chrysler is just going to agree to the same terms that General Motors Corp. did 5 years just to get that's how it's traditionally done.

Chrysler's needs are different from GM's requirements, analysts said, as deals require cost cuts in different places.

The union may have set the strike deadline for its 49,000 hourly workers because of how far Chrysler wants to push for cost cuts.

"We think that they may be holding out for something more than GM got," said Aaron Bragman, an industry analyst for the consulting firm Global Automotive Research.

As negotiations continue, analysts say, Chrysler may be able to get some concessions from GM and Ford Motor Co. in 2005 that Chrysler didn't get, worth approximately $340 million a year.

A person briefed on the negotiations said the two sides have not agreed on giving the same deal to Chrysler. The person requested anonymity because the talks are private.

Higher health care costs are one big reason why Chrysler pays its workers an average of $75.86 per hour in wages, pension and health care costs, the highest among the Detroit automakers.

Several analysts also said the company and union likely are apart on setting up a Chrysler-funded union-run trust that would take on the company's roughly $18 billion in retiree health care costs. Unlike GM, Chrysler also may be against giving specific job security promises by guaranteeing new cars and trucks will be built at U.S. factories, and it wants to hire out parts transportation rather than pay full UAW wages for it, the analysts said.

Job security could be a tough issue because Chrysler and its new owner, Cerberus Capital Management LP, would be reluctant to commit to huge investments when the company is looking at potentially cutting some models, said David Cole, chairman of the Center for Automotive Research in Ann Arbor.

Detroit — if there was a script that automakers were supposed to follow for UAW contract talks, Chrysler seems to have missed it.

As negotiations continued Monday at GM's Auburn Hills headquarters, the United Auto Workers set a deadline of Wednesday morning to agree on a new contract, or else workers could strike.

The deadline may be a tactic the union is using to squeeze more concessions from the company. But it also may be that Chrysler is just going to agree to the same terms that General Motors Corp. did 5 years just to get that's how it's traditionally done.

Chrysler's needs are different from GM's requirements, analysts said, as deals require cost cuts in different places.

The union may have set the strike deadline for its 49,000 hourly workers because of how far Chrysler wants to push for cost cuts.

"We think that they may be holding out for something more than GM got," said Aaron Bragman, an industry analyst for the consulting firm Global Automotive Research.

As negotiations continue, analysts say, Chrysler may be able to get some concessions from GM and Ford Motor Co. in 2005 that Chrysler didn't get, worth approximately $340 million a year.

A person briefed on the negotiations said the two sides have not agreed on giving the same deal to Chrysler. The person requested anonymity because the talks are private.

Higher health care costs are one big reason why Chrysler pays its workers an average of $75.86 per hour in wages, pension and health care costs, the highest among the Detroit automakers.

Officials suspend search for missing aviator

Associated Press

CARSON CITY, Nev. — With winter closing in, efforts to find aviator Steve Fossett have dwindled — along with hopes that his proven ability to cheat death enabled him to survive a plane crash in the rugged desert of northern Nevada.

More than a month after he left for a short flight, no one has found any trace of him, and authorities have suspended the search, although some private efforts financed by Fossett’s friends and family continue.

“My gut feeling is that he didn’t survive the impact,” said Capt. Cynthia Ryan of the Nevada Civil Air Patrol. She said if Fossett were alive but too injured to walk, he would have tried to signal searchers in some manner.

“He’s not the kind of guy to just sit and wait for help to show up.”

Ryan added.

Lyon County Sheriff Allen Veil said Fossett’s disappearance remains under investigation as a missing-person case, and authorities are not prepared to presume the aviator is dead.

“We will try to come to a conclusion, but we’re not there yet,” Veil said.

Fossett, 63, had previously survived a nearly 30,000-foot plunge in a crippled balloon, a dangerous feat he had accomplished in 1964.

“My gut feeling tells me I want him to be alive. Sometimes realism says maybe he’s not.”

state department of public safety

Fossett’s friends are still looking for him, flying out of hotel mogel Barron Hilton’s sprawling ranch, about 80 miles southeast of Reno, that’s where Fossett and his wife had been staying on Sept. 3, when he took off alone to scout possible locations for an attempt to break a land speed record in a rocket-powered car. The cost of the private search has not been disclosed.

“Only because of Steve’s character do we hold out hope,” Hilton spokesman Barry said.

At one point, more than 40 CAP military and private planes and 200 searchers were aloft over an area that covered 20,000 square miles, and scores of searchers went on foot deep into brushy canyons looking for Fossett.

Now, there’s just one helicopter based at Hilton’s ranch, along with a plane carrying high-tech cameras that photograph potential wreck sites for later analysis.

Barry and Fossett spokesman Brian Spacht said the wealthy adventurer’s family isn’t making any public comment. “Not until we find him,” Barry said.

Gary Derks, the state Department of Public Safety official in charge of the search, said efforts have been suspended until “additional credible leads become known.”

“I have so many mixed feelings over this thing. My gut feeling tells me I want him to be alive. Sometimes realism says maybe he’s not,” he said.

Derks said costs to various government agencies involved in the hunt now total nearly $1.4 million.

With snow already falling in higher elevations, there’s not much time left for searchers.

A big storm could blanket Fossett’s single-engine plane with snow, making it undetectable until spring.

“Everything’s going to shut down until spring,” said Bill Ople, whose father disappeared on a flight over Nevada in 1964.

“I know that country, and you don’t want to mess around up there in the wintertime.”

Church abuse resurfaces

California bishop praised for handling cases becomes a suspect

Associated Press

SANTA ANA, Calif. — Bishop Ted D. Brown was lauded three years ago for quickly handling Orange County’s share of the nationwide church abuse scandal, reaching settlements totaling $100 million for some 90 victims.

But a source of nearly a fifth of those cases — two prestigious parochial high schools — continues to haunt the diocese and has new exposure Brown to old allegations of child abuse and the possibility of being held in contempt of court this week.

The Roman Catholic Diocese of Orange settled four more lawsuits Friday for just shy of $7 million. Three were filed by former students at Mater Dei and Santa Margarita high schools who said lay teachers sexually abused them.

In a deposition in one of the lawsuits, Brown acknowledged being accused of abusing a young boy more than 40 years ago when he was a priest in Bakersfield. He said the accu­ sation, reported in 1997, is false, but police said they can find no indication it was ever investigated.

Despite the settlement, Brown still faces a hearing Tuesday to determine whether he should be held in contempt of court for sending Msgr. John Urell to Canada for psychological evaluation before he could complete a deposition.

Urell, who was responsible for handling sexual abuse allega­ tions against the diocese, became distraught during a deposition in the case of a 27-year-old woman who said an assistant basketball coach had sex with her multiple times when she was a 16-year-old student at Mater Dei.

Brown told The Associated Press that he did not violate a court order and considers the hearing an assault on his good character.

“My only concern was for Msgr. Urell, who needed immediate attention,” Brown said.

Plaintiffs’ lawyers say the case involving the coach, Jeff Andrade, shows why the two schools have been a perennial problem. Warning signs were ignored and the abuse was allowed to continue.

Another teacher allegedly interrogated a note that dis­ cussed the sexual relationship between Andrade and his accuser, Christina Ruiz, but officials did nothing after interviewing Ruiz, her best friend and Andrade, she said.

Andrade later admitted to the relationship in his deposition.

“They made me believe that no one would believe me, they made me believe that it was my fault. They told me that I was the one who seduced him,” Ruiz said.

Politicians debate dividing Jerusalem

Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Two senior Israeli politicians, including the prime minister's closest ally, talked openly Monday about dividing Jerusalem, signaling a possible shift in Israeli opinion about one of the Middle East's most contentious issues.

The dispute over Jerusalem has erupted negotiations in the past, and the latest comments come at a time when Israeli and Palestinian teams are trying to agree on principles guiding future peace talks.

The ideas raised by Vice Premier Haim Ramon still fall far short of Palestinian demands to establish their capital in all of the city's eastern sector, annexed by Israel after the 1967 Mideast War. Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Olmert, meanwhile, told parliament Israelis and the Palestinian refugees — will have to give up some of their beliefs that "fed the national ethos and hardening his government's treatment of critics under Putin."

But, deepening concern abroad over the Kremlin's treatment of critics under President Vladimir Putin, while hardening his government's treatment of Russia as a nation beset by foes, Putin and his chief prosecutor have framed the killing as a security force's plot to discredit Russia, saying the investigation will lead to a mastermind abroad. The editor of Bavarkova's daily, Dmitry Muratov, says the probe will establish a story recounting the mastermind abroad. The editor of Novaya Gazeta, Dmitry Muratov, says the probe will

Journalists' slaying remains a mystery

Investigators say murder motive still unknown

Associated Press

MOSCOW — After a year and nearly a dozen arrests, the main mystery in the slaying of a Russian journalist strongly critical of the Kremlin remains unsolved. Olmert praised Mahmoud Abbas, whom he has met six times since the spring, as a trustworthy partner, but at the same time portrayed the Palestinian president, known as Abu Mazen, as weak. "I know that the gap between the honest and fair intentions of Abu Mazen and my own expectations is formidable and arouses concerns," Olmert said.

Olmert was heckled occasionally, but interruptions were mild for what Olmert called a "joy and happiness on stage" moment. Doors open at 8:30 p.m.

The Vatican joins environmentalists

JAMES DECHANT
For the Observer

The Vatican, led by Pope Benedict XVI himself, is the latest group to hitch up their carseats and jump on the environmental bandwagon. What may be a watershed year for the Church’s nascent earth-friendly message, the Pope has led several initiatives not only to green up Vatican City but also to make Catholics more eco-conscious. Last month, the Church declared one Sunday “Save Creation Day” as the Pope led a youth festival in Italy with eco-Friendliness foremost on its agenda. Earlier in the summer, the Pope announced plans to re-do the roof of the Paul VI Auditorium Hall with solar panels (imagine a roof overlooking Our Father’s Stadium).

Now the Vatican has taken on its most ambitious project yet: It plans to become the world’s first carbon-neutral state. Earlier this year, the Church accepted a donation from a Hungarian firm to create a 32-acre “Vatican Climate Forest.” Trees planted in the ancient forested area in Hungary, now denuded and abandoned, will biologically absorb an amount of carbon dioxide equal to the emissions of Vatican City throughout the year. The move sends a strong message about the “green culture” promulgated by Pope Benedict.

Audience behavior disappointing

As a Notre Dame student, I was highly disappointed in the way that the majority of the Academic Forum's audience conducted itself at the beginning of the event. Implicit in the idea of an academic forum is the understanding that the issue to be discussed is of such complexity that it does not avail itself of any easy answers or swift resolutions. Yet, from the beginning of the event, the forum audience demonstrated an unreflecting eagerness to apotheosize Senator Martinez and Cardinal Mahoney's positions, responding to their ambiguous opening calls for "comprehensive reform" with resounding applause. Conversely, the forum audience met Mayor Barletta's description of immigration's uglier side — and the reformative steps he took to combat it — with silent hostility. Later in the forum, Senator Martinez agreed that the punitive actions taken by Mayor Barletta against businesses that knowingly employ illegal immigrants is a necessary component of the comprehensive reform plan — an affirmation of the same tactics that were so coldly received at the beginning of the forum. I object not to audience members ultimately concluding that Senator Martinez's or Cardinal Mahoney's positions are correct, but to the audience's unwillingness to approach the immigration issue with a genuine spirit of good will and intellectual inquiry. What Notre Dame witnessed before moderator Ray Suarez's "yay-boo morality" chiding was a forum audience gathered together armed with emotional presuppositions, anxious to celebrate in its own self-righteousness. While such hack-slapping sanctimony might make some feel good, it does nothing to help advance that infinitely popular, infinitely non-existent immigration reform plan.

Fans show class

I was at the UCLA game on Saturday, and I don't think I was ever so proud to be a Notre Dame graduate and to have my three kids attend the University. Twenty-five thousand screaming and supportive Notre Dame fans to watch their 0-3 team play 2,000 miles from the University. Are you kidding me? I don't think I saw a single no-show! But what made me even more proud was when, during the second half, the entire Notre Dame section in the end zone where I was sitting stood and applauded, as three members of our military happened to walk by. Wow! That was truly amazing.

For Chammable, slow and steady wins the race. Two years ago, Houston produced a huge influx of music: artists like Mike Jones left the pack with his huge hit "Still Tippin." Jones, along with Paul Wall, Slim Thug and Bun B, were able to tap into this relatively new market and capitalize on their relative anonymity to achieve massive album sales. To show how marketable and successful these artists were at one point, Mike Jones had a guest spot on the TV show "Prison Break." However, one artist who was not part of this Houston revolution was Chammable.

Also from Houston, Chammable was the former rhymer partner with Jones, Wall and Slim Thug in the legendary southern faction known as the War Journal. But he graduated to own major label status and sold over 100,000 copies of his debut album "The Sound of Revenge." However, he had an unmistakable hit on his hands with the anti-crooked cop anthem "Ridin.'" The song even led to a parody by "Weird Al" Yankovic called "White and Nerdy," which is a telltale sign of crossover success.

While Wall, Jones and Slim Thug are all struggling to get their feet back in the door that was quickly closed on them, only Chammable and UGK are still representing for the third day in a row. This says a lot about Chammable's success considering that UGK became legendary following the cult statues of "Free Pimp C" and the undeniable hit with Tay-Z "Big Pimpin." Invitably, Chammable would be forced to follow up this initial success with a sophomore album, and his recent work does not disappoint at all.

Chammable's second effort "Ultimate Victory" represents a turning point in his career. In an attempt to distance himself from the posse Don Imus hip hop world, Chammable made "Ultimate Victory" without any protest — and the result is very different not only from the usual subject matter of most rap albums today. But the other difference is that this album is not what's expected from goofily-fun hip hop, which is primarily associated with Lil Romeo, Will Smith and various rap acts that lack any sort of credibility. By taking out the usual subjects of money, drugs, women and alcohol, Chammable rests his hate on more political subject matter, even going as far as to name two of his songs "The Morning News" and "The Evening News." "Hip Hop Politics," which features a guest verse from the legendary Slick Rick, is the natural successor to "Ridin'" in Chammable's take on crooked police officers. The album's songs tend to transition smoothly from one to the next, except for the totally unnecessary skit before the song "Bill Collector." Other standout tracks include "Wont Let You Down," "Pimp Mode" featuring Bun B, and "We Breakin' Up," a song about Chammable losing his love for the current state of superficial hip-hop music. Another high note of the album is the "Stuck In The Ghetto" interlude, where the featured artist Tony Henry sings about situations the average struggling person faces on a daily basis. It captures the hopelessness that society forces onto certain people, which leads perfectly into the two closing songs "Ridiculous Road" and "Ultimate Victory." Chammable's sophomore effort is certainly not "Ultimate Victory," but there are many more rights than wrongs. Hopefully he continues this winning streak and keeps supplying listeners with quality music.

Rocky Mountain men and women alike find themselves caught up in the Rocktober Craze as the Rockies surge in the playoffs.

The Rockies are finally bringing the heat, and I’m stuck in Indiana. I’ve been dealing with this for the past few weeks. This is the bump in the mail and phone calls from the Cleveland Browns fans who are in the stands without me. I bet there are thousands of Rockies fans losing their jobs because readers know Grisham by the name synonymous with thrilling legal battles, with idealistic lawyers struggling for justice against the forces of corruption. His books are best-sellers because readers know Grisham will sweep them away with tales of intrigue, and they will cheer for the protagonist, despite his flaws, as he overcomes the law to portray the right side of the story in his new book, but it’s not a page-turner like his 18 previous successes. “Piazza” still retains some Grishamisms. The book’s hero, Rick Dockery, fits the typical Grisham male character mold. He is young and attractive — an underdog with a weakness for women. Dockery becomes Cleveland’s public enemy No. 1 after single-handedly losing an AFC Championship game for the Browns. Dockery’s agent manages to find him a new team to play in. In the end, in a land of soccer, there is a Super Bowl.

Do Dockery fans to Parma, Italy, away from the Jacksonville Jaguars who kick his head into his hospital bed as he recovered from a concussion, and the Cleveland Post columnist doesn’t credit him the greatest goat in the history of professional sports.

Grisham is a bit about a football team. The same attention to detail he once used to describe the murder of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia is now turned to details about football. Parts of his book read like the sports section of a newspaper.

By placing Dockery in Italy, Grisham gets a chance to tell his readers more about the country — the food, the culture, the churches and the opera.

“The Broke,” a legal thriller Grisham published in 2005, was also set in Italy. In “Piazza,” Dockery loses his job as a stone-cold starting quarterback. When Dockery has a day off from practice, his lady friend drags him around Italy to accompany her on a quest to tour the whole country. At times, the reader feels as exhausted from traveling as Dockery does.

Instead of partners or associates in a law firm, the supporting characters in “Piazza” are Dockery’s teammates and coaches, who play football for their love of the game and, as the title indicates, for the pizza and beer they feast on after the games and practices.

A perpetual third-stringer in the NFL, Dockery finds his niche in Italy. In Italy he is a major player in a minor sport. Beek, as the Italians call him, becomes a hero for his teammates. Like most of Grisham’s characters, he has his weaknesses. He blows a game after drinking too much and makes a critical mistake. In spite of these flaws, we still cheer for Dockery when he completes a pass and when he delivers a blow to the Cleveland Post’s cruel sports columnist.

But Dockery isn’t holding for justice or defending Parma from corruption. He’s just playing football. If “Playing for Piazza” had been written in 1945, Grisham readers could close the book, satisfied that they had received from Grisham, what’s expected is suspense, more suspense than a football game in Italy could provide.

John Grisham needs to go back to writing legal thrillers. It’s not that Grisham’s new book is bad. “Playing for Piazza” is a story about a disgraced third-string quarterback for the Cleveland Browns who is forced out of the NFL and ends up playing football in Italy. Like all his books, it’s well written, with an interesting plot line and a sympathetic lead character.

But Grisham’s writing is no match with thrilling legal battles, with idealistic lawyers struggling for justice against the forces of corruption. His books are best-sellers because readers know Grisham will sweep them away with tales of intrigue, and they will cheer for the protagonist, despite his flaws, as he overcomes the law to portray the right side of the story in his new book, but it’s not a page-turner like his 18 previous successes. “Piazza” still retains some Grishamisms. The book’s hero, Rick Dockery, fits the typical Grisham male character mold. He is young and attractive — an underdog with a weakness for women. Dockery becomes Cleveland’s public enemy No. 1 after single-handedly losing an AFC Championship game for the Browns. Dockery’s agent manages to find him a new team to play in. In the end, in a land of soccer, there is a Super Bowl.

So Dockery flees to Parma, Italy, away from the Jacksonville Jaguars who kick his head into his hospital bed as he recovered from a concussion, and the Cleveland Post columnist doesn’t credit him the greatest goat in the history of professional sports.

Grisham is a bit about a football team. The same attention to detail he once used to describe the murder of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia is now turned to details about football. Parts of his book read like the sports section of a newspaper.

By placing Dockery in Italy, Grisham gets a chance to tell his readers more about the country — the food, the culture, the churches and the opera.

“The Broke,” a legal thriller Grisham published in 2005, was also set in Italy. In “Piazza,” Dockery loses his job as a stone-cold starting quarterback. When Dockery has a day off from practice, his lady friend drags him around Italy to accompany her on a quest to tour the whole country. At times, the reader feels as exhausted from traveling as Dockery does.

Instead of partners or associates in a law firm, the supporting characters in “Piazza” are Dockery’s teammates and coaches, who play football for their love of the game and, as the title indicates, for the pizza and beer they feast on after the games and practices.

A perpetual third-stringer in the NFL, Dockery finds his niche in Italy. In Italy he is a major player in a minor sport. Beek, as the Italians call him, becomes a hero for his teammates. Like most of Grisham’s characters, he has his weaknesses. He blows a game after drinking too much and makes a critical mistake. In spite of these flaws, we still cheer for Dockery when he completes a pass and when he delivers a blow to the Cleveland Post’s cruel sports columnist.

But Dockery isn’t holding for justice or defending Parma from corruption. He’s just playing football. If “Playing for Piazza” had been written in 1945, Grisham readers could close the book, satisfied that they had received from Grisham, what’s expected is suspense, more suspense than a football game in Italy could provide.

Kolzig’s 30 saves helps Washington stay perfect

Senators dispatch of Devils for fourth straight win; Hasek stops 18 shots in Red Wings’ victory over Oilers

Associated Press

UNIONDALE, N.Y. - Olé Kolzig did what he usually does for the New York Islanders. For the Washington Capitals, that is simply Kolzig stopped 30 shots against his favorite opponent and carried the Capitals to a 2-1 comeback victory over the Islanders on Monday night. Laich spoiled the party at 2:58 with his first goal in 21 games, dating to Feb. 27.

"I know my role is to be a dependable forward," Laich said.

He was that, but this win became possible because of the 37-year-old Kolzig’s effort. The Capitals won their first two games by outshooting Atlanta and Carolina a combined 37-32.

"We’ve done a pretty good job the first couple of games of not relying on our goalie to be the star," said Caps coach Glen Hanlon, a understudy for 14 NHL seasons. "We know that he is back there and this was a good reminder."

"If you give him the opportunity where he’s played enough games — then in these types of games he’ll come through for us," said Capitals coach Peter Laviolette.

Richard Park scored for the Islanders.

Kolzig finished off the winning sports of the Islanders 3-1.

"We had more consistency this year," said Gerber, who struggled last season before losing the starting job to Emery in mid-November.

Red Wings, Oilers 2

The Detroit Red Wings survived their defensive breakdowns.

Mikael Samuelsson had a goal and an assist to lift Detroit to a win over the Edmonton Oilers on Monday night.

Chris Chelios, Tomas Holmstrom and Kris Draper also scored for Detroit. Nicklas Lidstrom and Henrik Zetterberg each had two assists.

Chelios, the NHL’s oldest player at 45, skated in his 1,550th game, breaking a tie with Hall of Famer Alex Delvecchio to move into eighth place on the career list.

The Red Wings, who had 35 shots, dominated the play most of the game, but allowed both goals in rushes in which two Detroit skaters went to the same area of the ice in their own end and left the eventual goal scorer wide open.

"Defensively, we have to do a better job of sorting out our own end," said Lidstrom, the team’s captain.

Shawn Horcoff and Andrew Cogliano scored Edmonton’s goals.

Dan smoked Hasek made 18 saves for the Red Wings.

Bounce Robinson stopped 31 shots.

"Against a team like that, that’s a puck control team, they’re going to possess the puck," said Horcoff. "That’s okay when you know you’re going to keep them to the outside. When we got in trouble, that was when we let them inside."

Cugliano’s goal, with 10 seconds left in the second period, cut the Red Wings’ lead to 3-2.

"We were in pretty good shape after two periods," said Oilers’ coach Craig MacTavish. "But Detroit held off the Oilers and added an empty-net goal with 33 seconds left.

The Red Wings blew a third period lead in Saturday night’s 4-3 shootout loss at Chicago, so they were especially determined to not let it happen again on Monday night.

"We didn’t give them the neutral zone, didn’t give them too many chances," said Horcoff.

Holmstrom gave Detroit a 3-1 lead with a power-play goal 27 seconds into the second period.

He shoved in a loose puck from a goal-mouth scramble for his third goal in three games.

Senators forward Jason Spezza was at and misses the puck during Ottawa’s 4-2 loss to New Jersey Monday.

Panthers quarterback out for season

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Jake Delhomme last week called surgery on his strained right elbow "a last resort."

After experiencing pain trying to throw on Monday, the Carolina Panthers quarterback decided the worst-case scenario couldn’t be avoided.

Delhomme will have season-ending ligament-replacement surgery on his elbow next week, leaving the Panthers without their leader on offense and scrambling to find another quarterback.

"Anytime you lose your starting quarterback it’s a blow," coach John Fox said.

Originally injured two weeks ago, Delhomme didn’t show any improvement when trying to throw Monday. A day earlier he threw briefly on the side while sitting out Carolina’s win over the Saints.

Toronto’s Blake has treatable form of leukemia

TORONTO — Maple Leafs forward Jason Blake has a rare form of leukemia that he says is highly treatable.

The 34-year-old player said Monday he has begun treatment and will still be able to perform at a high level. He announced his condition after talking to teammates at practice. He said he has started taking a pill daily that "has proven to be very effective in controlling this cancer."

"The prognosis, and certainly the expectations of my physician, myself and my family, is that I will live a long, full and normal life," he said in a statement on the team’s Web site.

Team doctor Noah Forman said Monday that Blake underwent treatment in the second instance.

Marion Jones relinquishes gold medals

Marion Jones has given up the five medals she won at the Sydney Olympics, days after admitting she used performance-enhancing drugs.

It wasn’t immediately clear where the medals are now. Jones’ lawyer, Henry DiPippo, said Monday that she had relinquished them, but declined to say who had possession of them. The normal protocol would be for Jones to give them to the U.S. Olympic Committee, which then would return them to the International Olympic Committee, said Giselle Davies, IOC spokeswoman.

“The IOC wants to move forward as quickly as possible in getting the facts and sorting out all the issues from the BALCO case,” Davies said.

A call to the USOC was not immediately returned, but the group has scheduled a 7 p.m. EDT news conference.

Torre era in NY possibly over after Yanks’ loss

Yankees’ starter gives up four runs in two innings; Indians will play Boston in Cleveland’s first ALCS since 1998

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Once Grady Sizemore hit a leadoff home run, the Cleveland Indians were headed to the AL championship series while the New York Yankees were headed for a showdown with their loath.

Paul Byrd and the Indians bullpen closed out New York 6-4 in Game 4 Monday night, completing the third straight first-round defeat for the Yankees, one that might cost manager Joe Torre his job.

“The team hasn’t had a championship in Cleveland for a long time,” said Kenny Lofton, the Indians’ veteran leader. “This is just an unbelievable feeling to be able just to start this process again.”

The Yankees came in streaking, overcoming a 21-29 start to win the AL wild card. But they were done in by poor pitching, an insect invasion and the latest October vanishing act by Alex Rodriguez, whose bat was quiet until a solo home run in the seventh inning.

The pesky Indians, who wasted three-run leads in Game 3, clouted Chien-Ming Wang in the second and burst ahead 4-0. Byrd kept wigging out of trouble, and Kurt Martinez’ two-run single made it 6-1 in the fourth against reliever Mike Mussina.

A day after avenging a swift, New York put runners on in every inning except the eighth. But when it counted, its high-octane offense fell flat once again, with late solo homers by Rodriguez, Robinson Cano and Bobby Abreu not enough.

“I got some big outs with guys on base,” said Byrd, who stranded two runners in the first and three in the second.

Cleveland moves on to its first ALCS since 1998, opening Friday night at Boston. The Indians were only 2-5 against the Red Sox this season, but will have ace C.C. Sabathia and Fausto Carmona fully rested for Fenway Park.

The Indians, 0-6 against the Yankees during the regular season, are seeking their first World Series title since 1948. The NL championship series starts Thursday night with Colorado at Arizona.

Bewildered New York opens yet another offseason of turmoil, another October over nearly as soon as it began. All eyes will be on owner George Steinbrenner, who said over the weekend that he didn’t think he’d keep Torre as manager if New York bowed with another early exit. While the Indians celebrated in the infiel, A-Rod stood alongside teammates, one on top of the dugout, the other a step below.

Steinbrenner, looking grim, didn’t speak as he left the ball park.

“Hopefully there will be some reconsideration, but the Boss does what he wants,” Johnny Damon said.

Torre managed the Yankees to four World Series titles in his first five years and reached the play­offs in all 12 of his seasons. Yet, that might not be enough for Steinbrenner, impatient his team of multimillionaires has lost 13 of its last 17 postseason games and gone seven years in a row with no championships. If Torre does depart, Don Mattingly and Joe Girardi are the leading candidates to replace him.

“This has been a great 12 years,” Rodriguez said. “Whatever the hell happens, I’ll look back on these 12 years with great, great pleasure.”

Fans chanted Torre’s name when he made two trips to the mound in the eighth inning, handing the ball to Mariano Rivera for perhaps the final time in an era that brought the Yankees success they had not enjoyed since the 1950s.

“One fan was very special,” Torre said. “You can feel their heartbeat.”

Torre spoke to the team after the game and said he was proud of the way players battled.

“I love Mr. T,” said Derek Jeter, whose Yankees career paralleled Torre’s. “This is by far his best year. It goes without saying that I support him.”

A disappointed crowd of 56,315 also might have seen Rodriguez in pinstripes for the final time. A likely MVP during the regular season, A-Rod was largely AWOL in the postseason for the third straight year, strik­ ing out with two on in the first and again leading off the third.

Rodriguez, who can opt of his record $252 million, 10-year contract next month, did hit a solo homer off Rafael Perez in the seventh — ending a streak of 57 consecutive postseason at­ bats without an RBI since 2004. He finished 4-for-15 in the series.

Yankees pitcher Chien-Ming Wang, center, is surrounded by teammates as he waits for New York manager Joe Torre to relieve him from the game. Wang gave up four runs in the Yankees’ 6-4 loss Monday.

Cowboys shock Bills on last-second field goal

Last-minute touchdown and ensuing onside-kick recovery help Dallas overcome five Tony Romo interceptions

Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Tony Romo is nothing if not resilient. And because he didn’t let four interceptions in the first half, two returned for touchdowns, destroy his night, the Dallas Cowboys pulled off a stunning comeback victory.

The Cowboys scored nine points in the final 20 seconds Monday night, with Nick Folk’s 53-yard field goal as time expired giving them an improbable 25-24 win over the Buffalo Bills.

“Oh, it’s great,” Folk said. “It shows you how good we can be and what we can do if we don’t make mistakes. And even if we do make mistakes and we stick together as a team, we still stay in the game,”

Romo, after being intercepted five times and also losing a fumble, drove Dallas (5-0-1) for a 103-yard kickoff return by Terence McGee. In position to clinch it, Trent Edwards’ pass from the Dallas 11 was tipped by DeMarcus Ware and returned 70 yards by Terence Newman. Romo looked for tight end Jason Witten, his favorite receiver. Instead, he found linebacker John DiGiorgio at the goal line and DiGiorgio returned his first career pickoff 38 yards.

It was the third time a pass intended for Witten was stolen by Buffalo.

Yet the Cowboys didn’t go away. And after their long drive to Crayton’s touchdown, Sam Hurd deflected the onside kick ahead to Curtis. Immediately, Romo hit Owens, but he couldn’t hold onto a 20-yard pass to the Buffalo 25; officials needed a replay review to overturn the original call.

Romo completed two more passes and Folk, after having his first try from 53 yards negated by a Bills timeout, won it.

Folk also made field goals of 47, 29 and 37 yards.

Buffalo built its lead on huge plays.

Wilson spent most of last season on the practice squad before being converted to safety this year. He started in the injury-depleted secondary and his first NFL touch came when Romo badly overthrow Witten from the end zone.

Wilson scooted in untouched for a 25-yard score.

And when Romo went for Witten on his next pass attempt, Angelo Crowell intercepted.

Bills safety George Wilson returns an interception for a touchdown in the first quarter of Buffalo’s 25-24 loss to Dallas Monday. Buffalo had two defensive touchdowns in the game.

But Dallas held, stopping Marshawn Lynch’s fourth- and 1 run. Then Romo recovered nicely, throwing three straight completions to Witten and a 14-yarder to Owens before completing a 70-yard drive with a floater to the tight end for a 22-yard score early in the second period.

It was a temporary reprieve. After Buffalo staged a superb 15-play, 73-yard drive to Rian Lindell’s 24-yard field goal, Kelsey made his spectacular solo effort to give Buffalo a 17-7 lead.

The defensive end deflected Romo’s pass high into the air at the Dallas 2, then caught it in the end zone.

“Now one is going to care when it’s all said and done how you won the game.”

Tulowitzki leads Rockies’ avalanche

Colorado shortstop is leading candidate for rookie of year award

Associated Press

DENVER — Troy Tulowitzki could be collecting some serious hardware this fall.

The Rockies’ 21-year-old star shortstop meets fellow major leaguers, he’s just like any other wide-eyed youngster coming face-to-face with a childhood hero he writes on autographs for. Tulowitzki has already signed for three games in late April.

"I probably have 20 or 30 in my locker," Tulowitzki said. "I think it’s a pleasure for all of us to be a part of it." Tulowitzki said.

"You can’t teach what he has inside of him, and it’s just been a pleasure for all of us to be a part of it." Garrett Atkins, Rockies third baseman

Indianapolis — The Colts (5-0) could put almost anyone in the backfield and have a 100-yard rusher, and there is a hint of truth to that. Mungro, who ran for 93 yards in his first five games before being benched, figures he’ll be back during his five seasons with the Colts, ran for 114 yards and a touchdown in his starting debut against Philadelphia in 2002 and Rhodes ran for more than 1,164 yards in 10 games — an NFL record for undrafted rookies — in 2001. Yet the Colts insist there’s more to playing the position than impressive stats.

"Most of the backs that come into this league can run," Dunn said. "It’s the other things where experience comes into play, things like pass protection, audibles and route-running. We weren’t really on the lookout for an experienced guy once we saw the guys in the pre-season. We felt they’d be fine."

Now Keith is the toast of his native Omaha, Neb., and Indianapolis. He had 87 missed calls by the time he made it back to the locker room Sunday, and heard tales of Omaha hangouts being filled with old fans watching the Colts game.

"I’m pretty sure if they go with me or with me and Joe, yesterday gave them the confidence I can do it." Kenton Keith Colts running back Kenton Keith, top, leads over Buccaneers safety Jermaine Phillips during Indianapolis’ 33-14 win Sunday over Tampa Bay. Keith ran for 121 yards and had 2 touchdowns.

"At the time, I didn’t know how good he was," Hurdle said. "But things have changed a little bit. Now Keith is the toast of his native Omaha, Neb., and Indianapolis."

"I’d not really had a chance to pass the ball so much in college," Tulowitzki said. "I met him at the beginning of the year."

Belles top the field in 21 squad event

Megan Gray wins individual title as team deals with heat

By MATT GAMBER
Sports Writer

Going into Friday’s Eagle Invitational at Benedictine University in Lisle, Ill., Saint Mary’s was just hoping to gauge how well it was prepared for a longer, six kilometer race.

Coming out, the Belles have to be ecstatic after finishing first among the meet’s 21 teams. Senior captain Megan Gray also claimed the individual title by finishing in 23:59.2 in 87-degree heat.

“The girls were just amazing,” coach Jackie Bauters said. “Despite the heat, they ran very well. This is the toughest course [Benedictine’s coach Jon Welcutt] has ever made for the invite, with two big hills in the first mile … so the girls ran very well. Though Bauters had expressed some curiosity, if not concerns, about the Belles prospects in the longer race (most races are 5K), they certainly answered any doubts that might have been by edging second-place St. Joseph’s by 10 points.

The Belles had seven runners finish in the top 20; freshman Sam Wiczerzak (fifth, 25:21:2), freshman Catie Salter (ninth, 26:00), sophomore Megan McClowry (11th, 26:10), senior Olenka Bilyk (26:21), freshman Stephanie Waite (26:44) and freshman Clare McVey (26:51).

The significance of Friday’s performance is not lost on Bauters, since the Belles’ conference championship race on Oct. 27 will also be a 6K.

“The girls responded pretty well to both the heat and the course length,” Bauters said. “It was hard to tell if the slower times were the heat, the course or the longer race, but I’m thinking they can handle the race length adjustment.”

Saint Mary’s prepares to face last-place Olivet

GREG ARBOGAST
Sports Writer

Coming off a 3-0 loss to Hope College, Saint Mary’s will return to MIAA play today when the Belles face last-place Olivet in Olivet, Mich.

The Belles are 7-11 overall, and their 4-6 conference mark puts them in fifth place in the MIAA.

Given that Saint Mary’s is currently 2 1/2 games behind fourth-place Tri-State with only six conference matches remaining in the season, the contest with Olivet is close to a must-win.

“We need even more desire to play up to our ability,” Saint Mary’s coach Julie Schroeder-Blek said. “We need to bring our game. We need to get excited about our successes and build on those rather than let our errors be our focus.”

The Belles will be looking to their seniors for some guidance, especially setter Amanda David. David has been an honorable mention for the MIAA conference player of the week every week this season.

The Comets will be far from the toughest team Saint Mary’s has played this year. Olivet enters Wednesday’s game with an overall record of 2-19, and their conference record of 1-11 is the worst in MIAA.

Furthermore, the Belles and Comets met earlier this season with Saint Mary’s walking away with a comfortable 3-0 victory on Sept. 11.

“We need to bring our game. We need to get excited about our successes and build on those rather than let our errors be our focus.”

Julie Schroeder-Blek
Belles coach

Belles won the games by scores of 30-17, 30-19 and 30-27.

kept the drive alive. Two plays later, senior quarterback Casey Bishoff threw for a touchdown pass and then converted the two-point attempt, giving the Ducks a 6-0 lead.

On the ensuing drive, the Pyros were unable to pick up yardage, giving the Ducks a 12-0 lead. The second half would not change the game for the Pyros, as the Ducks continued to play well and limit the Pyros chances. With the win, the Ducks improve to 3-2 on the season.

two-year touchdown, extending Fisher's lead to 15-0. The Green Wave focused on the running game in the second half and tried to keep the clock moving. Fisher sophomore running back Jamie Ellis, the Green Wave's featured back, finished the game with nine carries for 51 yards.

Forced to pass, the Vermillion replaced sophomore quarterback Jon Sarna with freshman Kris Kast. Kast struggled, completing only one pass and throwing two interceptions.

We finally got [the Crooked River] back last year," Donovan said. "It's our big rivalry game with Carroll, so to win and keep it at home means a lot to us. Fisher looks to continue its win streak next week when it takes on Knott. Carroll will face wireless Sorti.

Morrissey 12, O'Neill 0

Despite the absence of two-year starting quarterback Joe McBrayer, the Morrissey passing attack did not miss a beat against Rompers.

Backup quarterback Alvin Reynolds passed for two touchdowns and only one interception as he and wide receiver Carl Anderson led the Manor to its second win of the season, a victory over O'Neill.

"We played a complete game this week," sophomore fullback and defensive end John Saulitis said. "The main thing we need to work on is our conditioning," White said.

The offensive production was much better this week for Morrissey, which was held to only six points last week against Keenan. To supplement its passing attack, Morrissey went with a running back-by-committee game plan this week and split the carries between power backs Saulitis and senior captain Nick Bencomo and change-of-pace running back sophomore Mike Fletcher. This three-headed monster accounted for two-thirds of Morrissey's offensive production.

The defense played like the defense of Morrissey's touch-Downs came as a result of long drives that started deep in its own territory. Just before halftime, Reynolds drove the Morrissey offense down the field in good position to make the field goal at the half.

With just a few seconds left, Reynolds connected with junior wide receiver Chris Cugliari for the game's only offensive touchdown of the first half.

"This win feels great," Dillon captain Alex Duffy said. "However, we don't really have time to celebrate because we have defending champs Morrissey next week," said a visibly dejected Coffey.

"We played much better than we had last week and we face our playoff hopes alive," Dillon was able to come out against Keough Sunday.

In a battle between two teams that looked to keep their playoff hopes alive, Dillon was able to come out on top against Keough.

"We played much better than Keough and we have defending champs Morrissey next week," said a visibly dejected Coffey.

"The defense was great," he said. "They really came out and both defenses controlled the game in the first quarter. Dillon (1-1) was able to force Keough (0-2) into a turnover on downs as well.

Chattanooga, who finished tied at 22-under. Finishing a stroke behind Notre Dame and tying for fourth were Virginia Tech and Ohio State, who finished at six-under 858.

"I'm so thrilled with the way our guys played this week," Irish coach Jim Kubinski said. "This is the kind of performance I've been expecting from them all season long, but it's the first time we've really been able to put it all together."

Junior Josh Sandman tied Hock for the lowest individual Notre Dame score at three-under. It was Sandman's best performance this season. Senior captain Greg Rodgers also had a solid tournament for the Irish, tying for 15th at two-under par after a final-round 70.

"We started to pick up momentum late in the second round and that carried over so well into the final round." Jim Kubinski Irish coach

Sophomore Doug Fortner continued his exceptional play this season, taking his third top 20 finish in as many events. Fortner tied for 20th at one-over par, despite a tough finish Monday, when he bogeyed five of the final six holes. Senior captain Eddie P e c k e s rounded out the Irish lineup, tying for 80th at 17-over.

Notre Dame opened the tournament with a first round of one under, placing the Irish in seventh. After dropping several places midway through the second round Sunday, Notre Dame rallied into sixth place by the end of the day. The Irish passed North Carolina-Wilmington and Eastern Carolina in the last four holes, and their hot play continued in a strong finish.

The Irish will take a two-week break from competition before playing in the Mason Rudolph Intercollegiate event from Oct. 21-23 in Tennessee.

Whether it has been moving defenders such as Justine Higgins or Bridget Bonayne up top or using freshmen Corissa Hart and Julia Gragtmans' firepower to try to find the back of the net, Saint Mary's has been adjusting well this season.

"I think it is a very winnable game, but we will need to put two very solid halves together which we did not do against Hope on Saturday," MacKenzie said. "We need to step on the field and bring intensity and focus from the opening whistle. It should be a very good test for us. It will be interesting to see how we bounce back from the disappointing result on Saturday."

Fisher tops Carroll to retain Crooked Stick

By ERIC PRISTER, ALEX BARKER, LAURA MYERS and MIKE GORMAN
Sports Writer

The Crooked Stick will stay in Fisher for another year after the Green Wave defeated the Carroll Vermin 15-0 Sunday.

Fisher's defense was once again stifling, intercepting three Vermin passes.

"We've pitched two shutouts in a row," senior coach John Donovan said. "Basically, today, the defense supported the offense. Really, they just came to play. They've really been the backbone of our team so far."

After both teams were forced to punt on their first drives, the Fisher defense stopped Carroll and then blocked a punt, which was returned for a touchdown by sophomore Cameron Compton.

"That was huge," Donovan said.

Later in the first half, the Green Wave defense killed another Vermin drive. This time, Fisher stopped Carroll on fourth down and gave the offense great field position. It capitalized on the ensuing possession when senior fullback Tom Bufalino ran for a score.

Fisher's offense then put together a 12-play, 65-yard drive that culminated in a touchdown by junior quarterback Matt Abeling, giving the Fishers a 14-0 halftime lead.

Pasquerilla East gave Howard Thursday night in the red zone, threatening and to take the early lead. Both defenses dominated the first half, and the score was tied 0-0 going into the second.

"We had a good drive in the first half, but it was plagued with penalties," Rycyna said.

Junior running back Joe Leiferman made the interception with Howard in the red zone, setting up a go-ahead touchdown.

"The defense showed up today," Rycyna said. "We had a key interception in the first half and a couple of big plays to stop them in the end."}

Freshman leads team to third place

Hock's three-under tied for Notre Dame's best

By MICHAEL BRYAN
Sports Writer

On a team full of talent but short on experience, it was fitting that a freshman led the Irish to a third-place finish in the Coca-Cola Duke Golf Classic.

Notre Dame shot a four-under 284 in the final round Monday to vault past three teams in Durham, N.C., and take the bronze, thanks largely to huge contributions from freshman Tyler Hock, making his first road appearance. Hock shot a total of three-under 213 and tied for No. 11 in the 84-player field. After an opening-round 76, Hock fired rounds of 68 and 69 to play the final 36 holes in seven-under, helping the Irish make a run up the leaderboard.

The tournament title was shared by No. 13 Duke and unranked Tennessee.

Belles face Adrian in MIAA matchup

Saint Mary's prepares for forward Chitwood

By MEAGHAN VESELIK
Sports Writer

Saint Mary's (1-1-2 MIAA) hosts the Adrian Bulldogs (2-0 MIAA) today at 4 p.m. in the Belles' fifth conference match this season.

This weekend, the Bulldogs beat conference opponent Olivet 1-0 - a week after the Belles played the Comets to a double-overtime, scoreless draw - but lost to fellow conference foe Hope 3-0.

The Belles earned a draw with the Bulldogs last season.

"They are usually quite physical so we need to be prepared to match or exceed that aspect of their play," Saint Mary's coach Caryl Mackenzie said of Adrian. "They have one forward, Lindsey Chitwood, who is quite skillful so defensively we will need to key on her."

Chitwood has scored 10 of Adrian's 15 goals this season, on only 21 shots on goal. As a team, the Belles have scored 13 goals this season.

Saint Mary's has had to overcome many challenges, with returning players suffering injuries and the incorporation of freshmen into an improving lineup.

"I have been very pleased with the strength of our core returners and what they bring to training as well as games," Mackenzie said. "But, my first-year players have really stepped it up and showed tremendous improvements due to all the playing time they have garnered because of injuries."

Sophomore forward Mikki Hedinger is out for the season because of a stress fracture in the hip area, and sophomore midfielder Colleen Ferguson will be back on the field soon after missing the last five weeks.

But the Belles have yet to let injuries define their season.

Pasquerilla East gave Howard all it could handle, but in the end, the Ducks were too much for the Pyros, pulling out an 8-6 victory Sunday.

In contrast, the less Pasquerilla East coach Brian Rycyna was impressed with his team's effort, particularly on the defensive side of the ball.

"The defense showed up today," Rycyna said. "We had a key interception in the first half and a couple of big plays to stop them in the end." Freshman defensive back Josh Leiferman made the interception with Howard in the red zone, setting up a go-ahead touchdown.
