Testing the Waters

A freshman survival guide to ease the transition to college life
ACTIVITIES NIGHT

This annual Notre Dame event will provide you the first opportunity to meet with representatives from...

* 200+ Student Clubs/Organizations
* 30+ Local Service Agencies
* RecSports
* Center for Social Concerns
* Student Union Board
* Student Government

* Academic Clubs
* Club Sports Teams
* Ethnic Clubs
* Service/Social Action Clubs
* Special Interest Clubs

Over 3,500 students attended last year! Don't be left out!

FOR MORE INFORMATION, CHECK OUT ACTIVITIES NIGHT ON-LINE AT:

www.nd.edu/~sao/An/

TUESDAY, AUGUST 29
7:00 PM - 9:00 PM
JOYCE CENTER
This annual Notre Dame event will provide you the first opportunity to meet with representatives from...

- 200+ Student Clubs/Organizations
- 30+ Local Service Agencies
- RecSports
- Center for Social Concerns
- Student Union Board
- Student Government
- Academic Clubs
- Club Sports Teams
- Ethnic Clubs
- Service/Social Action Clubs
- Special Interest Clubs

Over 3,500 students attended last year! Don't be left out!

For more information, check out Activities Night online at:

www.nd.edu/sam/activities

From the Editor
ND Notebook
Campus Watch

Scholastic reviews the top news stories of the 1999-2000 academic year to bring you up to date.

A world of opportunities — ranging from service to athletics — is available to ND students.

Start preparing for the move now! Some advice from veteran packers.

Something to Believe In
Names to Remember
Home Sweet Home
Long Live Sports
And Now For Something Fun
Act Now

Design by Mike Griffin
Photo by Kate Foster and Nolan Orfield
Welcome to the Family

from the editor

M y new roommate stared at me in disbelief. “Are you serious? You really don’t know?” he asked. I explained again that I really didn’t know who the quarterback of the football team was. In fact, as a new arrival on campus, I didn’t know very much about Notre Dame’s traditions. I had seen pictures of the Dome and the Basilica, and, while I had attended a Notre Dame-Army game, it was in Giants Stadium, not on the hallowed ground of Knute Rockne and legends past.

I had a lot to learn.

Over the next three years, I became intimately familiar with the traditions and legends that haunt this campus. The folklore and stories became a part of my life, not just obscure tales about faraway places. But for all the traditions at this university, the most important thing about it is not its legends, but its people. This fall, you will be joining a group of incredibly talented and incredibly good people. What you make of the experience will be entirely up to you. If you choose to spend your entire time here slaving away in an obscure corner of the library, you will have missed what Notre Dame is about. Notre Dame is certainly about academics, but it is also about going to Meijer at 3 a.m., it is about running through Stonehenge and it is about discussions that stretch into the wee hours of the morning. Don’t let the work and the stress make you lose sight of the opportunities you have. Because it’s very easy, watching the sun rise over South Bend from a computer lab, to forget that thousands of people would jump at the chance to be at the University of Notre Dame.

But I would also urge you never to let the gilding of the Dome blind you to the problems that exist on this campus. Real people with real difficulties go here. What sets Notre Dame students apart is the way that they respond to those difficulties. Notre Dame is not perfect, and it will only improve if the students continue to insist on a higher standard.

When I came to this campus, I did not know much about Notre Dame. In fact, I wasn’t even sure if I belonged here. Now, I can’t imagine my life without it.

A Notre Dame Tradition

Scholastic is a student-produced biweekly magazine. Founded in 1867, it is the nation’s oldest college publication and one of Notre Dame’s oldest traditions. Each year, Scholastic offers undergraduates the chance to get involved in all facets of magazine production, from writing and editing to photography and design. If you’re interested in any of the opportunities available at Scholastic, feel free to stop by our office in the basement of South Dining Hall, give us a call at 1-7569, or drop us an e-mail at scholast@nd.edu. We’re always looking for new staff members to continue the 133-year-old tradition.

Jim Pastore
Editor In Chief
When I came to this campus, I did not know much about Notre Dame. In fact, I wasn't even sure if I belonged here. Now, I can't imagine my life without it.

But I would also urge you never to let the gilding of the Dome blind you to those difficulties. Notre Dame is not perfect, and it will only improve if the students continue to insist on a higher standard.

Because it's very easy, watching the sun rise over South Bend from a tradition of Knute Rockne and legends past.

Over the next three years, I became intimately familiar with the traditions that haunt this campus. The folklore and stories became a part of the work and the stress make you lose sight of the opportunities you have. And legends, but its people. This fall, you will be joining a group of incredibly talented and incredibly good people.

What you make of the experience will be entirely up to you. If you choose to spend your entire time here slaving away in an obscure corner of the library, you will have missed what Notre Dame is really about. It's about discussions that stretch into the night, running through Stonehenge, attending a Notre Dame-Army game, it was in Giants Stadium, not on the hallowed ground of Knute Rockne and legends past.

You are an integral part of this university, and the most important thing about it is not its history, but its people. This fall, you will be joining a group of incredibly talented and incredibly good people. What you make of the experience will be entirely up to you. If you choose to spend your entire time here slaving away in an obscure corner of the library, you will have missed what Notre Dame is really about. It's about discussions that stretch into the night, running through Stonehenge, attending a Notre Dame-Army game, it was in Giants Stadium, not on the hallowed ground of Knute Rockne and legends past.
PrejudiceReduction Workshops

Dates and times will be announced

Students, staff, and professors will be offered the opportunity to participate in diversity sensitivity workshops.

These workshops are presented by the Notre Dame affiliate of the National Coalition Building Institute.

If you are interested in learning how to confront oppression...

I am interested in the Prejudice Reduction Workshops.

name

home address

home phone number

campus address

campus phone number

e-mail address

Sign up for more information.

Dates and times will be announced. Keep watching Scholastic for more information.

Please send to: Adele Lanan
Student Activities Office
315 LaFortune Student Center
Notre Dame, IN 46556
Learn Your Irish

A lexicon of key words you’ll need to know

AFS (space): University-provided personal storage space for computer files. Accessible campus-wide, from both Macs and PCs.

D6, D2: Student parking lots. Located west of South Quad and east of Mod Quad, respectively.

DART: Direct Access Registration by Telephone. The touch-tone class-registration system.

Detex: Trademark for electronic door keys used at Notre Dame, primarily in women’s dorms.

Dogbook: The annual photo directory of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s freshmen. Traditionally used as an aid for finding SYR dates.

Grab-N-Go: Take-out dining-hall meals in a brown paper sack. Just make sure you only take five items.

Fieldhouse Mall: Lushscaped area immediately surrounding Stonehenge used for outdoor festivities. From former location of the Fieldhouse, a long-demolished athletic facility.

Hookup: Random opposite-sex fun time.

HTH: Hometown honey. If you’ve got one of these, you can’t do the above.

Huddlemart: Convenience store in LaFun.

IrishLink: Online system for accessing personal academic information.

JACC (“Jack”): Edmund P. Joyce Athletic and Convocation Center. Location of the basketball and hockey arenas as well as all-purpose space.

LaFun: LaFortune Student Center.

Monk: Rev. Edward A. Malloy, university president.

Your Number: From a student, your phone number; from anyone else on campus, your Social Security number.

O’Shag: O’Shaughnessy Hall. The College of Arts and Letters building.

Quarter Dogs: Hot dogs that sell for a quarter apiece in the Huddlemart after midnight.

Parietals: Dorm visiting hours for opposite-sex guests.

Reckers: 24-hour restaurant. Located on the south side of South Dining Hall.

The Rock: Rockne Memorial. An exercise facility on South Quad.

Smick (Chicks): Saint Mary’s (students).

Stepan Center: An ugly building used for large functions located on the far north side of campus. Don’t confuse it with Stepan Chemistry Hall, which is attached to the Nieuwland Science Hall.

Stonehenge: War-memorial fountain at the south end of North Quad.

SUB: Student Union Board. Sponsors various campus activities.

SYR: Screw Your Roommate. The non-official term for what is now officially the “semi-formal dance.” From the legendary tradition of setting up one’s roommate for the event.

TCE: Teacher-Course Evaluation. Surveys given at the end of every course asking students their opinions.

Touchdown Jesus: Mosaic on the library that blesses the football team.

— compiled by Cristin Fenzel

Beth Wild

Beth Wild of Washington, Pa. is the Class of 2000’s valedictorian. A history and CAPP double major in the Honors program, she had a 3.975 GPA after seven semesters. She is the daughter of Thomas and the late Cathy Wild and the stepdaughter of Rebecca Wild. We managed to pry her away from the books to answer a few questions about the novel she’s writing and her time at Notre Dame.

Were you raised in blue and gold baby outfits?

I don’t know about the outfits, but we have drinking cups that are Notre Dame, blankets, sweatshirts, dog collars and leashes. My dad is a ’75 alum and my extended family just loves everything about Notre Dame. In fact, I’ll have 22 people here for graduation.

Twenty-two people?!

Yes, my little cousin is coming because she likes Reckers pizza, so she’s going to spend her time eating Reckers pizza. Actually, even more people wanted to come.

Did you always plan on becoming the valedictorian?

No. When I came in freshman year, I just thought I’d be good enough to graduate. I didn’t even realize I’d have a shot at it until back in December when I talked to a professor and he said I’d have a shot at it. After that semester, I couldn’t really do anything else, I couldn’t work any harder because they only take into account seven semesters.

Is it based strictly on GPA?

No, or else I would not be valedictorian. The initial cut is based on the GPA, and then after that they ask you to submit a five-minute address, then you’re interviewed by the dean of your college, and
Eat It

Where to go when you’re tired of the ol’ DH

E ating at North and South dining halls may be thrilling at first, but the novelty wears off after awhile. Luckily, there are other on-campus options — and they all accept Flex points.

Reckers: What ever did we do before Reckers was established? This 24-hour eatery is the sole salvation for students facing parietals and 3 a.m. munchies. Besides such food as burgers, pizzas, ice cream and shakes, Reckers has TVs, video games, CD-listening stations, computers with Internet access and board games. During the evening hours, Reckers features musical performances, lectures and even poetry readings; during later hours, long lines are a main attraction.

Greenfield’s: Located in the Peace Studies building, this out-of-the-way restaurant generally caters to professors and their wives rather than students. However, the service is friendly and the food is both inexpensive and excellent. It’s a great place to escape without ever leaving campus.

Waddicks: If your professor asks you to come to his office and you end up in a café, don’t panic. Many professors in the College of Arts and Letters hold their office hours in here, an eatery located in O’Shaughnessy Hall. Although the food is decent, most students patronize the café for its cozy atmosphere. With old wooden booths and tiny tables, Waddick’s is a great place to study — or eavesdrop on conversations.

Café Poche: It may not live up to its exotic name, but the food is tasty and served with a genuine smile. Tucked away in the basement of the Bond Hall of Architecture, this little café offers soup, sandwiches, pastries and espresso to ease the effects of an all-nighter.

Common Stock Sandwich Co.: Located in the basement of the Mendoza College of Business, the Common Stock Sandwich Co. supplies all the essentials for a quick meal, from baked potatoes to pocket-sized pizzas. This mini-mart also provides convenient items such as newspapers and bottled beverages.

Food on the Go: When you don’t have time to sit, swing by one of the fast-food restaurants located in LaFortune, such as Burger King or Allegro subs, which offers made-to-order sandwiches as well as cheesecake and espresso. Besides serving the obvious, Tomasso’s pizza also offers stuffed breadsticks and will deliver to your dorm.

— Kara Zuoaro and Sarah Childress

Coast to Coast

Here’s a look at the origins of the class of 2004.

1. Illinois, 201
2. Ohio, 173
3. Indiana, 169
4. Pennsylvania, 124
5. New York, 122
6. California, 101

Every state is represented at Notre Dame. From the Pacific to the Atlantic, high-school seniors make the decision to come to northern Indiana to enjoy all that ND has to offer. The states with the most confirmed freshmen are listed here. Don’t be surprised if your future roommate has a Chicago accent or actually folds his pizza.
Something to Believe In

Student Body President Brian O’Donoghue and Vice President Brooke Norton hope to support students and improve campus unity

AGGIE NOBLE

From the beginning of their campaign, senior Student Body President Brian O’Donoghue and junior Student Body Vice President Brooke Norton have been proud of the endless opportunities available to Notre Dame students. Their vision is based on a belief in students’ abilities to achieve and excel at any pursuit. O’Donoghue, who goes by Odie, remarks, “We believe in Notre Dame students. It’s our job to help them do great things.”

O’Donoghue and Norton have many new plans for the 2000-2001 school year. Some of their primary goals center around campus unity and togetherness. From bigger, better basketball and football pep rallies to events during the Christmas season, Student Government promises to keep in mind the spirit of unity on campus. At the beginning of the year, Student Government plans to hold an outdoor student event after the opening Mass. O’Donoghue says, “We want to build a true Notre Dame family. From events and other programs on campus, our emphasis will be: we are a family.” Both O’Donoghue and Norton have acquired extensive experience in student government during their years at Notre Dame. O’Donoghue served three years as a student senator, two years on the Campus Life Council, and worked on the Junior Class Council, dorm councils and other committees. Norton has served in a number of student government positions as well, including sophomore class president, freshman class secretary and freshman dorm representative. O’Donoghue believes Student Government is not just the responsibility of the president and vice president; he encourages all to participate in hall government, as well as the many other positions available in the Student Union. From concerts to pep rallies, students can help plan any event. Norton explains, “My advice to every incoming freshman is to recognize and appreciate the amazing, gifted people you’re surrounded by. Notre Dame has so much to offer, and you will make connections here with people that will last forever.”

Apart from their goal to continue bringing the campus closer together, O’Donoghue and Norton will provide new forms of academic and social possibilities for the Notre Dame community. Their first project is the Rector Endowment Fund. By funding dorms with extra money, Student Government hopes to allow all students to participate in hall activities, regardless of their financial situation. From section dinners to hall dances, O’Donoghue and Norton want to make every event possible for students.

Besides the Rector Endowment Fund, student government is also working on the Greatness Project. O’Donoghue says, “We want the student body to do extraordinary things.” The project will attempt to provide students with the funding to follow any dream, from attending a lecture in Washington, D.C. to helping Habitat for Humanity at home during the summer. O’Donoghue continues, “I would encourage any one to do great things or paint the future. This is the time.”

Finally, O’Donoghue and Norton hope to use the Internet to provide an array of services to the student body. One of their goals involves an online search engine for cheaper book buying. The site will search the Internet for inexpensive textbooks and school materials, giving students an alternative to the Hammes Notre Dame Bookstore. Another project aims to make the results from Teacher-Course Evaluations available on the Notre Dame website for students to use each semester. The evaluations will help students decide which classes and professors to select. Student Government also hopes to establish a webpage of useful information about South Bend, including a city map, movie times and fun things to do.

O’Donoghue and Norton want to fulfill the interests and hopes of every student at Notre Dame. They both feel that as breathtaking as the campus is, or as exciting as the first football game can be, it is the people at Notre Dame that make the experience so amazing. O’Donoghue emphasizes, “We are all here to help you. So, if you want to get involved in the Student Union or just want to talk, feel free to stop by the Student Government office on the second floor of LaFortune. It would be our honor to meet you.”

BRIAN O’DONOGHUE PRESIDENT

“The best part of my job is to serve students. Please come talk to us anytime.”

PILLARS OF THE COMMUNITY O’Donoghue and Norton have ambitious plans for their administration.
MONK MALLOY
Rev. Edward A. “Monk” Malloy, CSC is the 16th president of the university, a position he has held since 1986. He was recently elected to a new five-year term. Malloy is more accessible than most university presidents; he teaches a freshman seminar every year and lives in Sorin Hall, behind which he sometimes shoots hoops with guys from the dorm. He attended both Notre Dame and Vanderbilt before accepting a teaching post in the Notre Dame department of theology in 1974, a position he still holds. Malloy is active in public service, chairing the American Council on Education and Campus Contact, among other organizations. He has served as founding director of the Points of Light Foundation and as a member of the National Advisory Council on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism. Currently, Malloy acts as co-chair of the subcommittee on college drinking of the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, a component of the National Institutes of Health. Malloy has also written many articles and several books. His fourth book, on major issues in higher education today, was published in the fall of 1999.

TIM SCULLY
Recently elected to a five-year term as the university’s executive vice-president, Rev. Timothy Scully, CSC succeeded Rev. E. William Beauchamp on July 1. As the third-ranking administrator at the university, Scully is responsible for finance, business operations, human resources and campus construction. A member of the faculty since 1989 and an officer since 1994, Scully has wrought many changes at Notre Dame. Previously serving as a vice president and senior associate provost, his responsibilities included international programs and new initiatives in undergraduate education. Under his leadership, Notre Dame now has the highest percentage of students studying internationally of any American research institution. He also helped to establish the Institute for Latino Studies.

MARK POORMAN
Beginning his second year as vice president of student affairs, Rev. Mark Poorman, CSC is responsible for areas that include Campus Ministry, residence life, student activities, Notre Dame Security/Police and alcohol and drug education. Students caught breaking the rules will get to know him well. Previously, Poorman was an associate professor of theology and had directed the university’s Master of Divinity program. Other posts he held include associate director of Campus Ministry, rector of Dillon Hall and priest-in-residence in Grace Hall.

KEVIN WHITE
Replacing former Athletic Director Mike Wadsworth is Kevin White. White hails from Amityville, N.Y. He received the Alumni Achievement Award at Saint Joseph’s College in 1997, where he did his undergraduate work. He did his postdoctoral work at Harvard University’s Institute for Educational Management, received his doctorate from Southern Illinois University and his master’s from Central Michigan University. White has been the athletic director at Arizona State University for the past four years. While at ASU, White reorganized academic and student services for athletes, strengthened the athletic department staff, hired five head coaches and reformed the athletic budget. Before working at Arizona State, White was the athletic director at Tulane University, the University of Maine and Loras College. He has also served on several NCAA committees, on the executive committee of the Division I-A Athletic Director’s Association and as chairman for the Pacific-10 Conference’s television and bowl committees. Malloy identifies White as one of the elite members in his profession. One of his first jobs as athletic director will be the restoration of Notre Dame’s football program. White will be the first athletic director who reports directly to the university president.

BOB DAVIE
After finishing one of the worst football seasons in more than 20 years with a losing record of 5-7, Head Coach Bob Davie will be looking to rebuild his team for the 2000 season. Facing a tough schedule in the fall that opens with Texas A&M, Nebraska and Purdue — all of which saw post-season play in bowl games last year — Davie is under a lot of pressure to perform.

Much of the spring season was focused on improving the defense. In the 1999 season, the squad allowed an average of 27.6 points and 383.7 yards per game. “The potential for us to be an explosive offense is definitely there,” Davie says, “but defense is definitely our number-one priority as we enter the spring.”

While the Irish roster looks very strong with more depth than the past three years, it will be losing key players, including quarterback Jarious Jackson, who was the lone captain of the 1999 team. Junior Arnez Battle will replace the record-setting Jackson. The Irish will also lose top-receiver Bobby Brown and four of the team’s top six tacklers.

However, except for the loss of Jackson and Brown, the offensive unit is returning a solid core of experienced players. Seven starters will return for the offense while the defense can count on five players returning from last season’s starting lineup.

MATT DOHERTY
Heading into his second year as the men’s basketball head coach, Matt Doherty is already a household name for many Irish fans. He led the team to a 22-16 season, with post-season play in the NIT championship game. Taking on one of the toughest schedules in the country, the Irish beat ranked teams like the University of Connecticut, Rutgers, St. John’s and Seton Hall. Doherty is also responsible for increasing student support by giving out free MOB (Matt’s Outrageous Bunch) T-shirts to the first 250 students at some of the games, and going to all of the dorms to talk to the students.

Before coming to Notre Dame, Doherty worked as an assistant coach at Kansas for seven years, where he was responsible for recruiting some of its best players. Prior to coaching at Kansas, Doherty was an assistant coach at Davidson for three years. His college-basketball experience at the University of North Carolina includes starting as a sophomore on the Tar Heels’ national championship squad in 1982 and being part of the starting five in ’84 that included Michael Jordan.

Even in his first year at Notre Dame, Doherty quickly became involved in student activities, participating in the campus-wide Bookstore Basketball Tournament. He is also involved in several charities, including the National Kidney Association, Special Olympics and the Salvation Army.

THEODORE HESBURGH
Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, CSC preceded Malloy as president of the university. He served for 35 years, from 1952 to 1987 — a longer tenure than any active American university president. His name can be seen all over campus: the library, the Center for International Studies, and the Program for Peace Studies are all named after him.

Despite his commitments, Hesburgh can often be seen around campus. He sometimes makes guest appearances in classrooms and presides over dorm liturgies. He has an office on the 13th floor of the Hesburgh Library. Contrary to popular belief, he does not live there, but makes his home in Corby Hall.

His major retirement role includes developing several Notre Dame institutes and centers that he was instrumental in founding, principally the Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies, the Kellogg Institute for International Studies and the Hesburgh Center for International Studies. Hesburgh is also involved in the Center for Civil and Human Rights, Notre Dame’s Hank Environmental Research Center near Land O’Lakes, Wis. and the university’s Ecumenical Institute in Jerusalem. He spends much of his time giving talks and fulfilling his obligations as a member of numerous international organizations.

Hesburgh is best known for his public service. He has held 15 presidential appointments in areas such as civil rights, atomic energy, campus unrest and Third World development. His commitment to education is reflected in his 135 honorary degrees, more than any other American holds.
football ticket distribution

The fall 1999 semester marked the implementation of a new student football-ticket-distribution system. Ending a two-decade-long tradition of “camping out” for better tickets, the new system removed the incentive to wait in line by assigning students numbers and then randomly selecting a student to begin the ticket buying.

If it sounds complicated, you’re not the only one who thinks so. Many students, especially those living off-campus, complained that the system was never explained well and that it took away the fun of the traditional campout. The organizers, who included representatives from Student Government, the Student Union Board and administrators, pointed out that it was much safer, it didn’t involve drinking and that students were no longer forced to wait in line for hours.

Each class still purchased its tickets on successive nights, starting with the seniors. In addition, organizers attempted to keep the campout tradition alive by offering food and entertainment and allowing students to sleep in the football stadium on each night of distribution. But when only two seniors kept watch on the first evening, the precedent was set and the stadium remained unoccupied during the following nights.

Many concluded that the tickets were in fact distributed faster and safer than ever, but many students still disliked the confusion and missed the tradition. In response, the same group that reorganized the system for last year is again revamping the event, planning to move distribution for next year to Stepan Center.

sweatshop controversy

For the second year in a row, the specter of Notre Dame apparel being produced in sweatshops in both the United States and around the world has remained prominent in the news. As universities across the country address the problem as well, some on campus have been very vocal in their belief that Notre Dame is not sufficiently serious about making sure that all workers who produce official Notre Dame products are paid fairly and work in reasonable conditions.

This year, the university took significant steps toward achieving the goal of being certain that workers are treated fairly. It promised audits of all production facilities that produce Notre Dame paraphernalia and joined the Fair Labor Association, an organization that advocates fair labor practices. The university was also asked to join the Workers Rights Consortium, a fledgling organization of colleges and universities that will work to combat sweatshop labor. Administrators met severe criticism when they turned down the offer on the premise that there was insufficient information on the organization. The topic remains very sensitive on both sides, and more debate is sure to come.

ex corde ecclesiae

A Catholic university that requires all students to take two semesters of theology, Notre Dame is very concerned with the integrity of its theology department. Ex Corde Ecclesiae is a document produced and ultimately accepted by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops that requires all professors of theology at Catholic schools to be approved by local bishops. Many in the Notre Dame community felt that most local bishops are not sufficiently qualified to assess the academic merit of theology professors, and that the requirement threatened the theology department and its members.

University President Father Edward Malloy and local Bishop John D’Arcy have made an agreement that will allow Notre Dame to retain its prerogative for choosing its theology faculty. Nonetheless, the issue remains hotly debated, with some welcoming the document as a means to bring wayward Catholic institutions back into line, and others faulting it on principle. And although the first discussion of the document has largely blown over, the long-term ramifications of Ex Corde remain to be seen.
In mid-January, the NCAA sanctioned the university for the first time in its history. The sanctions were in response to what were deemed major violations of NCAA rules by the football program. As a result, the program has been placed on probation for two years and will lose one scholarship for each year of probation.

The infractions that led to the sanctions include a player who tried to sell complimentary tickets and a student tutor who was paid to write a paper for a player. However, the primary trouble was related to Kim Dunbar, an Irish football fan. Starting in 1993, Dunbar had offered players expensive gifts and trips, largely financed by money apparently embezzled from her employer. When she joined the now-defunct Quarterback Club for $25 in 1995, investigators say she became an official booster, and her gifts were violations of NCAA rules. Some of the coaching staff apparently had at least a limited knowledge of the expensive gifts and trips that she continued to provide through 1998.

When the sanctions came out, many complained that they were not harsh enough and that Notre Dame had received preferential treatment because of its reputation. Others argued the opposite, saying the sanctions were too harsh for an offense committed primarily by individuals outside the program. But when the infractions were compared to precedents, most — including Malloy — admitted that although the sanctions were nothing to be proud of, they were fair.

Last fall, the administration refused to allow an unrecognized group, the Gay and Lesbian Alumni of Notre Dame/Saint Mary's, to run an ad in the Observer, the daily student newspaper. This sparked a controversy that has yet to be resolved.

The administration banned GALA from advertising in response to allegations that the group had run ads in the Observer on behalf of the previously banned gay and lesbian student group, OUTreach ND. OUTreach ND had already been forbidden from advertising in campus publications. GALA denies these allegations and believes that it should be able to advertise regardless of the claims. When the administration refused to repeal the ad ban, many argued that dialogue about sexual orientation was being unfairly and unhealthily stifled.

The controversy also highlighted the apparent lack of editorial freedom at the Observer. While the paper claims independence from the university, the ad controversy showed that this independence is actually limited. And although several groups of both students and faculty lobbied for the Observer to be given true editorial independence, in the end, the ad ban remains in place.

After witnessing a 5-7 football season that included losses to rivals such as Purdue and Boston College, many Irish fans were ready to hang up their shamrocks. But when new Head Coach Matt Doherty led the men's basketball team to wins over several top-10 teams, including two wins against defending national champion UConn, at least some semblance of hope for Irish victory was restored. By the end of the season, the team, led by sophomore Troy Murphy, had posted a winning record and made a rare post-season appearance in the National Invitation Tournament.

Many fans, however, believed that the Irish deserved a place in the NCAA tournament — and perhaps would have gotten one if not for a controversial last-minute loss to powerhouse Syracuse. During the critical game, the crowd was rowdy at times and was warned repeatedly not to throw objects onto the court. In response to a foul call against Notre Dame in the final seconds of the game, a student — later dubbed "the water boy" — threw an empty water bottle onto the court in disgust. Syracuse was awarded two additional free throws on the resulting technical foul. Although Syracuse made only one of the two extra free throws, in the end, Notre
HANOVER’S DISQUALIFICATION MADE NO DIFFERENCE IN THE RACE

Dame lost by just two points. The outraged reaction was perhaps the bigger story, as furious letters poured into the Observer from campus and across the country, and heated discussions on the subject erupted in the dining halls and the classrooms. Despite the general sentiment, neither the team nor Coach Doherty blamed the student. The Irish went on to be very successful in the NIT, making an appearance in the final round.

The Belles’ student-body presidential election resulted in a tie. Crissie Renner won in the end, but the situation led to the reexamination of the rules followed in such cases. Notre Dame also endured a rocky election process. Early in the campaign, current Student Body President Brian “Odie” O’Donoghue and Vice President Brooke Norton were given a one-day campaign suspension after appearing on a campus radio station before campaigning officially began. The incident was apparently unintentional, as O’Donoghue and Norton turned themselves in after discovering they had broken an election bylaw, but it was only the beginning of campaign scandals.

The general election resulted in a run-off between the O’Donoghue-Norton ticket and juniors Hunt Hanover and John Micek. However, the results of the run-off were not revealed until weeks later. The Hanover ticket was disqualified from the race for using e-mail to solicit votes, a violation of the newly rewritten bylaws. As it turned out, the disqualification did not alter the results of the race as O’Donoghue and Norton won the run-off election. Still, some complained that the incident did little to increase students’ trust in their elected leaders.

---

It was a bizarre, controversial year for student elections, at both Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s. The Judo Club teaches students takedowns, ground-control techniques and defensive skills for those seeking self-defense skills, competitive experiences or just a good, hard workout.

The Ultimate Frisbee Club combines the skills of basketball with Frisbee tossing. Every year for student elections, at both Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s. The Belles’ student-body presidential election resulted in a tie. Crissie Renner won in the end, but the situation led to the reexamination of the rules followed in such cases. Notre Dame also endured a rocky election process. Early in the campaign, current Student Body President Brian “Odie” O’Donoghue and Vice President Brooke Norton were given a one-day campaign suspension after appearing on a campus radio station before campaigning officially began. The incident was apparently unintentional, as O’Donoghue and Norton turned themselves in after discovering they had broken an election bylaw, but it was only the beginning of campaign scandals. The general election resulted in a run-off between the O’Donoghue-Norton ticket and juniors Hunt Hanover and John Micek. However, the results of the run-off were not revealed until weeks later. The Hanover ticket was disqualified from the race for using e-mail to solicit votes, a violation of the newly rewritten bylaws. As it turned out, the disqualification did not alter the results of the race as O’Donoghue and Norton won the run-off election. Still, some complained that the incident did little to increase students’ trust in their elected leaders.

---

LaFortune Student Center
(219) 631-7080
www.anthonytravel.com

---

AnthonyTravel
The Official Travel Service of the University of Notre Dame

Passport Photos
United Limo Bus Tickets to Chicago Airports
Hotels for Special Events at Notre Dame
Car Rentals

Foreign Currency
Amtrak
European Rail Passes
Spring Break
Student Discounts
Wholesale International Fares
your guide to

Clubbing

at Notre Dame

Afraid you'll be bored in college? Never fear: ND has something for everyone! In high school you were captain of the basketball team, president of student council, a member of the Spanish Club, a volunteer at the local hospital, and a lifeguard at the pool. Well, maybe you didn't do all those things, but now you're here, and you begin to wonder what you are going to do with your time besides study. Scholastic enlisted the help of the Club Coordination Council to get a sampling of clubs on campus. Here's a look at the results.

Compiled By

JACKI KIEFER

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>CATEGORY</th>
<th>ATHLETIC</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>DESCRIPTION</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>You don't have to be a varsity athlete to participate in sports at Notre Dame. Dorms offer a wide variety of intramural sports each year, but Notre Dame's club sports might provide a better option for the more adventurous types. The Ultimate Frisbee Club combines the skills of soccer, football and basketball with Frisbee tossing. Every year, the team competes in tournaments across the country. Last year, the team finished second in the Great Lakes Open and went on to the national tournament. Another club, the Notre Dame Field Hockey Team, was started two years ago. It offers both men and women a chance to participate in this field sport. The team practices four days a week in the spring and fall and competes against other club teams in the area. If you are a horse-lover, Notre Dame has several equestrian clubs. The Equestrian Team takes weekly lessons at stables located about 15 minutes from campus. Riders of all levels — from first-timers to seasoned veterans — are welcome to join and do not need to own a horse. The team participates in competitions sponsored by the Intercollegiate Horse Show Association throughout the year. If steer wrestling, goat-tying, and bareback bronco- and bull-riding are more your style, you might want to check out the Rodeo Club. Students formed the club last year to educate others about rodeo, giving them the opportunity to work towards competing in a particular event. If animals aren't your thing, there are other options. The Judo Club teaches students takedowns, ground-control techniques and submission maneuvers for those seeking self-defense skills, competitive experiences or just a good, hard workout.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
ETHNIC

DESCRIPTION
While Notre Dame is sometimes criticized for its lack of diversity, many clubs are doing their best to expose the student body to cultures from all parts of the globe.

One of the largest ethnic clubs on campus is La Alianza, which was formed five years ago when several other groups merged. It educates students through programs that include the annual Hispanic Heritage Month Celebrations and the Latino Formal.

Other ethnic clubs include Filipino, Italian, Polish, Spanish, French, Australian and Indian clubs. While the particular programming for each group differs, they promote the languages and culture of the different countries and nationalities. Meetings sometimes feature ethnic cuisine prepared by members of the group.

Perhaps the most interesting ethnic club is the Texas Club, which boasts a membership of 500 Texan students. The club organizes dances, dinners, rides to and from the Lone Star State and an alumni network.

ACADEMICS

DESCRIPTION
Academic clubs offer a wide range of activities in fields ranging from anthropology to engineering.

The Joint Engineering Council represents College of Engineering students and organizes events like Industry Day. Em3, another engineering group, works with the National Society of Black Engineers, the Mexican-American Engineers and Scientists and the Society of Hispanic Professionals to provide learning and social opportunities for engineering and science majors of historically under-represented backgrounds.

At a more recreational level, the Notre Dame Society of Automotive Engineers designs and builds a single-seat, off-road vehicle from start to finish. At the end of the year, there is a competition that culminates in a four-hour endurance race.

Business students also have many opportunities to become involved in academic clubs. If you’re interested in traveling abroad, you might want to check out the Student International Business Council. The council has a vision of attaining peace through commerce and provides students the opportunity to work overseas during the summer in a professional or teaching internship in countries that include Ireland, France and Australia. For those interested in sharpening their job skills, the Hispanic Business Student Association is part of a larger national organization whose goal is to help students of all ethnicities build their people, marketing and other business skills. Like playing with money? The Investment Club provides a portfolio of $400,000 for members to manage. Students can share information about investing as they make trades to increase the portfolio’s value.

Many majors at the university have their own clubs. The Anthropology Club, for example, aims to establish connections between students and faculty within the department. These types of clubs are generally open to everyone, but students within the major are especially encouraged to join.

RELIGIOUS & SPECIAL INTEREST

DESCRIPTION
The Baptist Collegiate Ministry provides students from all denominations a chance to meet and interact with other students who have similar concerns and interests. The group holds weekly Bible-study meetings and arranges transportation to non-Catholic services in the South Bend community.

For those seeking to learn more about the Virgin Mary, the Knights of the Immaculata promote devotion to her in the spirit of St. Maximilian Kolbe. Through praying and reading the works of Saint Louis de Montfort, the club offers members a chance to show their devotion to the Blessed Mother.

One of the many musical groups at Notre Dame is the Women’s Liturgical Choir, a choir run through Campus Ministry. The group sings at the 5 p.m. Vigil Mass on Saturdays, at Vespers in the Basilica and in collaborative events such as Junior Parents Weekend and the opening Masses. The Notre Dame Chorale is the university’s premiere concert ensemble and performs both religious and secular music. The group tours the United States every year and Europe every three years.

Auditions are held in the fall through the music department.

Clubs that don’t fit well into any of the other categories are considered special-interest clubs.

Destination ImagiNation, formerly known as Odyssey of the Mind, is a problem-solving competition in which students work as a team and compete against other colleges in a tournament at the end of May.

Political groups like the College Democrats and the College Republicans, religious clubs and musical groups also fall under this catch-all category.
DESCRIPTION

Notre Dame students are an active bunch who are not afraid to get involved with social issues. Social action and service clubs form the largest of the five divisions and provide a forum for students to get involved, both globally and locally.

Taking a global perspective, the East Timor Action Network seeks to educate the students about the continuing human-rights abuses in East Timor. They hope awareness will compel action in the form of medical, food, educational and reconstruction assistance. Closer to home, the Women’s Resource Center, located in LaFortune Student Center, has an extensive library on women’s issues. The center organizes aid services to students, including rape-support groups and eating-disorder counseling. It hosts awareness activities featuring speakers and films. The Students for Environmental Action are dedicated to informing the Notre Dame community about environmental concerns and raising a call for action. It organizes an Earth Day celebration and a dorm energy-conservation competition.

For those who want to get involved in volunteer work, Circle K provides service opportunities in Greater South Bend. Each week, the club offers 20 projects covering a wide range of interests and needs, from playing with animals at the Humane Society to working at the Juvenile Justice Center. This is the club to join if you can’t decide what kind of service you want to do.

Other clubs offer more specific service opportunities. A campus chapter of the international Best Buddies organization pairs Notre Dame students with a developmentally disabled adult from the South Bend community in order to establish one-on-one friendships. Members of the Special Friends Club, a group similar to Best Buddies, spend time with autistic and developmentally disabled children.

Other organizations that reach out to the youth of South Bend include Lunch PACK, a group that serves several local elementary schools during both recess and after school. Members play games with children, listen to them and let them know that people care about them. In similar fashion, the Big Brother/Big Sister program pairs students with a little brother or sister, giving them a chance to act as a friend, role-model and mentor to the child. Children who participate in the program usually come from poorer areas and single-parent households where they are missing a respectable adult influence in their lives.

If you’re interested in teaching opportunities, the Special Tutorial and Education Program collaborates with the South Bend Juvenile Facility to provide tutoring and reading lessons to facility residents throughout the academic year. The Ms. Wizard Day program offers another chance to participate in children’s education. The group gives girls in the fourth through sixth grades the chance to visit science, business and math classes at Notre Dame.

If you are interested in volunteering at a hospital, HUGS — Helpful Undergraduate Students — serves the pediatric ward at Memorial Hospital. Members spend two hours each week visiting patients and helping the nurses. Another health-related organization is the First Aid Services Team. The team serves as the first level of the emergency medical system for events and athletics on campus. Team members hold Red Cross certifications in standard first aid and CPR for the professional rescuer. The team covers events including football games, fall and spring RecSports activities and other special events.

For men who want to put their Catholic faith into action, the Knights of Columbus is a religiously oriented service group. On campus, the group maintains its own building, operates football-game-day steak sales that generate over $45,000 for charity annually, holds council dinners, lectures and engages in service activities with the Boys and Girls Club.

There are also ethnic service opportunities available, especially serving South Bend’s Hispanic population. The Community Alliance to Serve Hispanics works with local community centers and offers a number of opportunities for students to serve as translators and English-language instructors.

Notre Dame features several organizations that are continuations of high school service programs, such as ND HOBY and University Young Life. ND HOBY provides a forum for HOBY alumni at Notre Dame to continue developing their leadership through social and service activities while University Young Life trains college students to be Young Life leaders in the local area.
Decisions: you've been plagued with them during the past months. The last thing you want to do is decide what to bring with you to Notre Dame. When I started to pack, I tried to avoid these decisions by bringing virtually everything. Unfortunately, when the time came to transport all of my belongings, I found that everything I wanted to take would fill two vans and about three dorm rooms. It is tempting to bring all of your earthly possessions to college, but dorm rooms are quite small, and you must realize that you will be sharing that room with at least one other person. Here are some packing tips and a little common sense as you prepare to make the great migration from home.

Furniture: Figuring out how to arrange furniture in a dorm room requires a magician. Students who do not live in the newer dorms — which have modular furniture — often make extra space in their rooms by constructing lofts, elevated beds that leave open space underneath. Lofts can be a pain to build, but the added space often makes the trouble worthwhile. Loft kits are available at hardware stores like Lowe’s. There are usually “loft-men” roaming the campus to help the not-so handy parent build it for a small fee. However, the university does regulate loft dimensions, so look into your dorm’s rules before constructing one. Also, if you live nearby, buying wood at home may be an advantage as there always seems to be a shortage of kits around campus.

All dorm rooms come with beds, desks and wardrobes or dressers, but most students bring extra furniture. Couches, inflatable chairs and futons are popular, since students bring extra furniture. Couches, inflatable chairs and futons are popular, since they are a lot more comfortable than sitting on the floor. Carpeting and padding will help you avoid hard, tiled floors. You should receive the dimensions of your room in a packet from your dorm, making carpets easier to price.

Gadgets & Gizmos: Electronics are an important source of entertainment — and procrastination — in dorm rooms. It is a good idea to bring a stereo because most students find South Bend radio lacking. A TV and VCR are nice additions to a dorm room, but because cable is not available, antennae or “rabbit ears,” would be a wise purchase. All dorms have TV lounges with cable, so you can catch your favorite cable programs without buying a TV.

There are numerous computer clusters on campus. They have both PCs and Macs, and some are open 24 hours. All cluster computers are equipped with Internet access and CD-ROM drives. However, during busy times of the year — such as midterms and finals — you might have to wait in line for a machine, so you may want to bring your own. Every dorm room is wired to the Internet via ResNet, the campus network. The Office of Information Technologies will send you a brochure describing the hardware you need to connect a PC or a Mac to the network.

Most students bring a refrigerator, which is useful for beverages and late-night snacks. A hot pot is also nice, since it can make everything from hot chocolate for cold winter days to the college student’s staple food: ramen noodles. Creative chefs can even make macaroni and cheese. If you plan on hot-potting very often, a bowl, mug and utensils are important. Finally, a fan is crucial during the first few weeks of school if you are living in an older dorm that lacks air conditioning.

Personal Touches: Decorating can personalize a dorm room and make it inviting. The flourescent overhead lights in most rooms are dim and will make the room look like a cellar, so pack some lamps. A desk lamp is a must, floor lamps brighten your room tremendously and Christmas lights provide fun mood lighting. You may also want to pick up a dry-erase board for outside your door so your new friends will have a place to leave messages. Posters and pictures, whether of a favorite music group or a Monet print, add character to a room. Picking out these finishing touches with your new roommate is a great way to get to know each other.

Odds and Ends: Apart from furnishings, there are many miscellaneous items that you will need for dorm living. Since you will have to trek down the hall to take a shower, a robe and a shower caddy are important. Shower shoes, or cheap flip-flops, are also wise, as the dorm showers aren’t always the cleanest places in the world.

You will need to bring bedding, as the university provides only a mattress. Some dorms have extra-long beds, so you might want to check with your rector before buying a new sheet set. A laundry bag or basket, a stain stick, laundry detergent and lots of... quar ters are essential if you plan on doing your own laundry. For the washing-machine-challenged, the on-campus St. Michael’s Laundry service will pick up laundry each week, wash it and deliver it if you opt for a semester-long contract. St. Michael’s also has dry cleaning and tailoring open to all.

The unpredictable weather in South Bend makes both winter and summer clothes essential. It will be hot and steamy when you first arrive, but it won’t be long before winter’s bitter cold sets in. Also, you will want to bring duds suitable for the semi-formal and formal dances dorms have during the semester. You will need to bring hangers. Crates and under-bed boxes are useful for increasing storage space in your room and can be a good place to stash heavy winter clothes during the very short off-season. An alarm clock — preferably a trusty, loud one — is necessary to wake you up for those dreaded 8 a.m. tests.

South Bend has plenty of discount stores if you forget something. Meijer, for example, has absolutely everything you would ever need. The Student Union Board also sponsors a “Fall Mall” at Stepan Center, where they sell items like couches at reduced prices.

There is really no need to agonize about forgetting something as you pack for Notre Dame. Your friends will probably loan you that obscure tool or reference book on the one occasion you really need it. And, remember, your parents are only a phone call and a care package away.

The latest campus news and sports in-depth coverage of campus issues reviews of campus entertainment off-the-wall humor

Scholastic KEEP TRACK OF YOUR KIDS WITH A SUBSCRIPTION TODAY

14 ISSUES $35 DOLLARS

PLEASE PLACE ME ON YOUR SUBSCRIPTION LIST.
NAME: ________________________________
ADDRESS: ________________________________

PLEASE SEND THIS FORM AND $35.00 PAYMENT TO:
SCHOLASTIC MAGAZINE
303 LAFORTUNE STUDENT CENTER
NOTRE DAME, IN 46556
Everyone knows Notre Dame has a long history of tradition, but few people besides alumni and students are familiar with the traditions of its residence halls. From the charitable to the bizarre, read on for a brief introduction to some of the these time-honored events.

by Jacki Kiefer

MOD QUAD

Located next to the library on the east side of campus.

Throughout the night, couples can play golf while taking a break from the dance. This year, sales of Rambler Scrambler T-shirts raised $1,000 for the Conor Murphy Bone Marrow Drive. The drive entered students in a national marrow registry to benefit Murphy, a junior who was stricken with leukemia earlier this year.

Knott: The men of Knott, also known as the Juggernauts, are quite athletic: they were champions of both interhall football and soccer last year. Once residents of Flanner Hall, along with the Siegfried men, they were relocated to their current home in 1997. As a result, Knott and Siegfried participate in the annual Flanner Cup, a competition that showcases such manly events as car-pushing.

Knott was the undisputed victor of last year’s competition.

Pasquerilla West: This women’s dorm, home to the Purple Weasels, is most often referred to as PW. In 1991, the tradition of a Queen of PW was begun. Each section chooses a queen to defend the honor of her section in competitions against Queens from other sections. The victor is then crowned at the SYR at the end of Queen Week.

Pasquerilla East: Also a women’s dorm, PE is home to the Pyros. They are famous for their women’s football team, which has won the interhall championship two years in a row. They also host the annual Pyro Olympics, where the ladies of PE run around in costumes dressed according to their section’s theme.
Siegfried: In the brief history of Siegfried Hall, the Ramblers have established the tradition of the annual Rambler. They are famous for their women's football team, which has won the interhall championship two years in a row. They also host the Pasquerilla East: Also a women's dorm, entered students in a national marrow registry to benefit Murphy, a junior who was stricken with leukemia earlier this year.

Knott: Leslie Wood was the undisputed victor of last year's competition. In addition to being one of the first dorms built on campus, it was also one of the first dorms to house women after the university became coeducational. It is now home to the Wild Women, who host the Walsh Wild Weekend every fall. This weekend features many fun activities for the entire campus, such as a mascot contest.

St. Edward's: St. Ed's is located behind Zahm and near Lewis. If you live here, feel privileged: you have very high ceilings. St. Ed's also sponsors the St. Edward's Hall Players, who put on a play once a year.

Farley: Located between BP and North Dining Hall, Farley was converted to a women's dorm in 1972 and is now home to Farley's Finest. Perhaps its most well-known tradition is Pop Farley Week. Each January, the Finest celebrate their dorm's namesake, Father John Farley, in a week of festivities. A hall-decorating competition between the sections is followed by a dorm-wide dance.

Cavanaugh: Located next to LaFortune, Cavanaugh also possesses an excellent location. The Chaos are reputed to be the most spirited ladies on campus, and they can be seen at pep rallies and interhall football games wearing green from head to toe. They also host the annual SnowBall, their winter formal.

Zahm: Perhaps the dorm with the most infamous reputation, the men of Zahm, or Zahmbies, wish to keep their traditions shrouded in mystery. However, there was a petting zoo at their Winter Carnival with a llama...

Keenan: Keenan is located on the north side of the quad and shares a building with Stanford (see next tradition). The Keenan Knights host one of the university's best-known traditions, the Keenan Revue, a presentation of skits that make fun of anything and everything around campus. The Revue is prepared throughout the entire year and is then performed for three nights in January, with the final performance followed by a dance. This event is a must-see!

Stanford: The other half of the Keenan-Stanford building, whose residents were once known as the Studs, have taken the name of their former rector, Father Griffin, as their mascot. The Griffins host a Dance-a-Thon every fall.
WEST QUAD

Newest dorms, in close proximity to the bookstore

The 4 dorms of this quad host the West Quad Formal in the fall.
McGlinn: Every spring, the Shamrocks host Casino Night to raise money for charity. Every woman invites at least three people to gamble the night away with play money that can be redeemed for raffle tickets. Prizes from the raffle have included Notre Dame apparel and gift certificates donated by local restaurants.

O’Neill: This men’s dorm is located next to McGlinn and is the home of the Angry Mob. One of O’Neill’s biggest traditions in its short history is the Mardi Gras dance, where just about any style of dress goes. The men of O’Neill crown a Mardi Gras king during the week, who presides over the festivities.

Keough: Located next to O’Neill, this men’s dorm is home to the Kangaroos. In 1998, it began the tradition of the Keough Charriot Race, in which dorms build and race chariots. It also hosts the White Wedding, a traditional dance in the spring during which a selected couple is “married.”

Welsh Family: Home to the Whirlwinds and located next to the Morris Inn, Welsh hosts a “Family Feud” game show each year in which the dorm families can compete against each other. Welsh is also creating a tradition of service; last year it raised nearly $3,000 for the Juvenile Diabetes Walkathon in Chicago.

SOUTH QUAD

Struggles from the Rockne Memorial to O’Saughnessy Hall

Alumni: Built in the 1930s, the men of Alumni refer to their dorm as “The Center of the Universe.” It is located at the intersection of South Quad and God Quad. The mascot of Alumni is the Dawg, derived from the first official Irish mascot, the Irish Terrier. The most notable Alumni event is the Wake. Held during the dorm’s spirit week, the event involves the Dawgs running around campus in ties and boxers carrying a coffin. The men of Alumni can also be seen during finals doing “bun-runs” in the library.

Dillon: As this hall was also built in the 1930s, Alumni and Dillon have been rivals for quite some time. Dillon is known as the Big Red, primarily because it is the largest dorm on campus. Dillon hosts an annual pep rally on South Quad before the first football game of the season. Generally, the pep rally includes an elaborate and amusing skit based on a movie, such as The Dillon Kid and Back to the Future. The rally usually culminates with a visit from the head coach of the football team.

Fisher: Distinguished by the large green “F” on the front of the building, Fisher Hall is known as the Green Wave. It was home to Regis Philbin when he was a Notre Dame student and is host to the annual Fisher Regatta. A tradition since 1987, the Regatta features a race across St. Mary’s Lake in boats built by students, which are rowed across St. Mary’s Lake. May the most seaworthy win!

Pangborn: Pangborn is a relatively small women’s dorm located between the Rock and Fisher Hall. Although it is now home to the female Phoxes, Norm from “Cheers” resided here when it was still a men’s dorm. Every year Pangborn and Fisher host the Spring Fling dance, which is held in the courtyard between the two dorms. Pangborn also hosts a charity event modeled after “The Price is Right.”

Lyons: Built in 1927, this dorm possesses the arch made famous by the movie Rudy. It is located next to the Rock on South Quad and boasts a wonderful view of St. Mary’s Lake. Each fall, Lyons sponsors the Mara Fox Fun Run. This event raises funds for a scholarship founded in the memory of Mara Fox, a Lyons resident who was killed by a drunk driver in November 1993.

Morrissey: The Manor has a tradition of celebrating Christmas season with an SYR on the last Saturday before study days. Each section is responsible for decorating its hallways to correspond with a dorm-wide theme. After parietals, the men of Morrissey invite their dates to their lounge space and treat them to sub sandwiches and Rector Father Bill’s homemade chili. What better way to ensure the non-violation of parietals?

Howard: Howard became a women’s dorm in 1983, at which time it adopted the mascot of Howard the Duck. Howard is reputed to be one of the quietest dorms on campus. Because most of the rooms are singles, many women transfer in from other dorms.

Badin: One of the smallest dorms on campus, the home of the Bullfrogs officially became a women’s residence hall in 1972. It is one of the oldest dorms on campus and has a long history of tradition. Before the old bookstore was demolished last year, the Bullfrogs often hosted bands on their balcony to entertain shoppers. Part of the reason Badin women call themselves the Bullfrogs is because of the nickname given to their front yard: the “Badin Bog,” where hall events are often held.

ROW YOUR BOAT The Fisher Regatta features student-made boats — some are more seaworthy than others.
TIP THE GIPP. GIPPER.1@ND.EDU

Campus Watch by the Gipper

The beautiful lakes, the Golden Dome, the...debauchery. That's right, youngsters, the Gipp is here to tell you the real deal about the goings on at the University of Our Lady. While you choke down your dining-hall food on Thursday nights, make sure you grab a freshly printed Scholastic and keep an eye out for the Gipp's column, because the Gipp will certainly be keeping an eye on you.

What's My Name?
Say My Name!

Before we start the tour, the Gipp would like to introduce himself. You see, the Gipp is a lot like Bob Dole, because the Gipp refers to himself in the third person. And, just like the war hero, the Gipp needs a little something to help keep himself up on campus events. That's where you come in. Like an out-of-control Linda Tripp, the Gipp loves to record what other people say and do, and make it very public. It's not because he's a bad guy, but because he loves this campus and wants to keep it honest. Sometimes, students do funny things -- very funny things -- and he thinks the campus should know all about them. And sometimes, administrators do shady things -- very shady things -- and he knows the whole campus needs to hear about them.

You Know My Name ...
Now Gimme My Tips

Your mission is to keep the Gipp informed about campus goings-on. You see, the Gipp is only one person. With the long arm of the administration constantly reaching for the poor Gipp's shirt collar, he barely has enough time to sleep through his classes.

In the true Christian spirit, the Gipp wants you to share — share your thoughts, your memories, your dreams. But most of all, share your tips. You can call the Gipp at 1-7569, but don't expect to speak to him personally: the Gipp's got his reputation to protect. You can also e-mail him at gipper.1@nd.edu. The Gipp, like all college students, feels loved when he gets e-mails, especially e-mails with tips. Remember, the Gipp can say all those things you've always wanted to say.

"But Gipp," you cry, "how will I know a good tip when I've got one?"

There's no easy answer, young Gippling. If you think something's even remotely tip-worthy, the safest thing to do is tip the Gipp. But for those of you who still need more direction, the Gipp has put together a quick guide for the beginner tipper.

The Campus Tour (Unauthorized)
The Gipp promised to give you the lowdown on the university, and he never breaks a promise. You've already heard the radio-edit version about Father Sorin, our history of football and our beautiful lakes. Well, Father Sorin is dead, we went 5-7 last season and the lakes freeze solid during the winter. Don't get the Gipp wrong, he loves this place. There's just a lot they left out of the brochures.

For one thing, they don't tell you about the weather. When you get to campus, expect 90-degree weather. Most dorms, however, will hover around a comfortable 120. But don't worry, the sun won't stick around for long. Out of laziness — or just sheer spite — it takes an eight-month vacation during the school year. If Eiffel 65 lived here, we'd be listening to "Gray." Expect the sun to emerge sometime in the spring semester, usually right around finals. This makes cramming an entire semester of knowledge into your head in one week even easier.

Parietals are another Notre Dame tradition that they relegate to the fine print of the brochures. According to that great bible of undergraduate regulations known as du Lac, these rules exist "to foster the personal and social development of residence hall students." They foster this growth by kicking guys and girls out of each other's dorm rooms at midnight during the week and 2 a.m. on the weekends. Similar plans to foster intellectual growth by taking away your books were scrapped, because it's pretty easy to hide books in dorm rooms.

It Was Nice Meeting You

Well, the Gipp hopes you found his comments helpful — that's what he's here to do. So help him help you, and tip the Gipp. Remember: the journey of a thousand miles starts with one step. And if they're not all in a straight line, the officer probably isn't going to be too happy.

A GUIDE TO TIPPING THE GIPP

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Bad Tip</th>
<th>Good Tip</th>
<th>Bad News</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Your roommate undressed</td>
<td>in Reckers</td>
<td>before going to his 2 p.m. class</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Your underwear drilled to kick back</td>
<td>You saw a corrupt administrator taking kickbacks</td>
<td>The administrator saw you</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>You stalled while driving on Grape Road</td>
<td>in a university golf cart</td>
<td>while trying to outrun the cops</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

SCHOLASTIC/CAMPUS WATCH 21
After the dismal combination of a 1998-99 campaign, a 14-16 record and the resignation of Coach John MacLeod, the future of Irish basketball appeared grim. However, the 1999-2000 Irish basketball team, led by first-year Head Coach Matt Doherty, quickly filled the seats of the once-vacant Joyce Center. The Irish opened the season with a shocking win over fourth-ranked Ohio State in the preseason NIT tournament. Notre Dame then advanced to the preseason NIT finals before finally falling to Arizona. The Irish gained national recognition on December 5, when they dominated the defending national champion Connecticut Huskies at the Hartford Civic Center. Later in the year, Notre Dame defeated the Huskies once again, completing its first sweep of UConn. As March Madness arrived, the Irish remained watchful, hoping to receive an invitation to the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 1990. However, Notre Dame was denied a dance card, and instead found itself in the NIT tournament. Determined to make a statement, the Irish stormed through the 32-team competition, finally meeting Wake Forest in the tournament final. The season came to a disappointing conclusion as the Demon Deacons claimed the title with a 71-61 victory over the Irish. However, with the return of All-American junior Troy Murphy and the addition of transfer Ryan Humphrey, Notre Dame promises to again challenge for an NCAA bid.

Although NCAA violations and sanctions are nothing new to the world of college football, Notre Dame has always prided itself on its squeaky-clean image. However, for the first time in its history, the university received sanctions from the NCAA. The punishment was a reaction to a scandal surrounding Kimberly Dunbar, a member of the now-defunct Quarterback Club, whose money was readily accepted by several Irish football players. In addition, Dunbar purchased many extravagant gifts for the players, including two trips to Las Vegas. After an extensive inquiry and investigation, the NCAA committee concluded that Notre Dame was guilty of a low-degree major infraction. The accompanying penalty — the loss of one football scholarship for each of the next two academic years — was far less severe to the university than the humiliation of its first NCAA violation.
After the dismal combination of a 1998-99 campaign, an 14-16 record and the resignation of Coach John MacLeod, the future of Irish basketball appeared grim. However, the 1999-2000 Irish basketball team, led by first-year Head Coach Matt Doherty, quickly filled the seats of the once-vacant Joyce Center. The Irish opened the season with a shocking win over fourth-ranked Ohio State in the preseason NIT tournament. Notre Dame then advanced to the preseason NIT finals before finally falling to Arizona. The Irish gained national recognition on December 5, when they dominated the defending national champion Connecticut Huskies at the Hartford Civic Center. Later in the year, Notre Dame defeated the Huskies once again, completing its first sweep of UConn. As March Madness arrived, the Irish remained watchful, hoping to receive an invitation to the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 1990. However, Notre Dame was denied a dance card, and instead found itself in the NIT tournament. Determined to make a statement, the Irish stormed through the 32-team competition, finally meeting Wake Forest in the tournament final. Theseason came to a disappointing conclusion as the Demon Deacons claimed the title with a 71-61 victory over the Irish. However, with the return of All-American junior Troy Murphy and the addition of transfer Ryan Humphrey, Notre Dame promises to again challenge for an NCAA bid.

Although NCAA violations and sanctions are nothing new to the world of college football, Notre Dame has always prided itself on its squeaky-clean image. However, for the first time in its history, the university received sanctions from the NCAA. The punishment was a reaction to a scandal surrounding Kimberly Dunbar, a member of the now-defunct Quarterback Club, whose money was readily accepted by several Irish football players. In addition, Dunbar purchased many extravagant gifts for the players, including two trips to Las Vegas. After an extensive inquiry and investigation, the NCAA committee concluded that Notre Dame was guilty of a low-degree major infraction. The accompanying penalty — the loss of one football scholarship for each of the next two academic years — was far less severe to the university than the humiliation of its first NCAA violation.

Throughout the last football season, many references were made to the “century of greatness in Notre Dame football.” Despite the Irish’s successes in the past century, the campaign that bears the most resemblance to last year’s season was that of 1962 — the last time an Irish football team finished with a worse winning percentage than the 1999 squad. From poor calls at the one-yard line to inopportune timeouts and missed PATs, nothing went right for the Irish. Last year’s defense ranked among the worst in Notre Dame’s history, allowing 27.6 points per contest, while the offense averaged only 29 points per game. The Irish’s struggles were most evident on the road, as they posted a 0-5 record in away contests. Notre Dame will attempt to prove last year a fluke in its opening two games this year. The Irish face No. 23 Texas A&M and No. 3 Nebraska at Notre Dame Stadium to open the 2000 campaign.

With the conclusion of the NCAA investigation, University President Father Malloy allegorized the troubles of Notre Dame’s athletic department, saying, “This is Good Friday. Tomorrow is a brighter day. Easter is coming." With this idea in mind, Notre Dame welcomes recently appointed Athletic Director Kevin White with open arms, hoping that he will do his part to resurrect the struggling Irish football program. Prior to arriving at Notre Dame, White served as the athletic director at Arizona State University, accomplishing a wide variety of feats, ranging from raising ASU from No. 23 to No.12 in the Sears' Director's Cup to converting a $3 million budget deficit into a $1 million surplus. His extraordinary reputation as both an athletic director and a man of character is the reason behind Malloy's choice of White as the savior of Notre Dame's most popular sport program.

Notre Dame's women's soccer team entered the 1999 campaign determined to improve on last year's "disappointment," in which Portland denied the Irish their sixth consecutive trip to the Final Four with a 2-1 overtime victory. Despite losing the head coach that was responsible for building the successful Irish program, the 1999 squad came out ready to contend for the national title. After dropping the season opener in overtime to defending national champion North Carolina, the Irish steamrolled through the regular season and early playoff rounds. Notre Dame then advanced to its sixth Final Four in seven years with a shootout win over Nebraska. In the semifinals, the Irish again proved their mettle, upsetting first-ranked Santa Clara, 1-0. However, the Tar Heels proved to be too much for the Irish once again, winning their 15th title in 18 years, 2-0.

The women's basketball program at Notre Dame has always been dominant at home. The 1999-2000 squad was no exception, establishing the most dominant record at the JACC in the program's history. Notre Dame finished 13-0 at home, concluding the regular season as the No. 5 seed in the AP and ESPN/Coaches polls. Based on this stong regular-season performance, the Irish earned a No. 2 seed in the NCAA Tournament. Notre Dame's first two rounds were played at the JACC, where the Lady Irish continued to be invincible. With the two wins, the Irish found themselves in the Sweet 16 round, facing the No. 3 seed, Texas Tech. In a heart-wrenching battle, Texas Tech edged the Irish 69-65, putting an early end to an unbelievable season. Bright notes for the Irish this year are the return of Ruth Riley and Big East Rookie of the Year Alicia Ratay.

Mike Beticelli, head coach of the Irish men's soccer team from 1990-1999, passed away on January 25. After concluding practice that Tuesday, he returned home, where he suffered a fatal heart attack. During his 10-year tenure as head coach, Beticelli compiled a 104-80-19 record. The Irish advanced to the NCAA Tournament in three of those seasons (1993, 1994 and 1996). In 1996, the Irish advanced to the second round, securing the program's first victory in the NCAA Tournament. During his 24-year coaching career, Beticelli received Coach of the Year honors on 10 separate occasions. He is survived by his wife, Cinda, and his two sons, Nino and Anthony.

Junior All-American cross-country runner Ryan Shay placed fourth in the 10K at the Mt. SAC Relays. He ran a personal best and school-record-breaking time of 28:26.91. The time also best the Olympic Trials qualifying time by more than 23 seconds and the Olympic Games B qualifying time by a little more than one second.

For most teams, a 20-9 finish and an NCAA Tournament bid mark an incredibly successful season. For the Notre Dame women's volleyball team, it was the bitterest of disappointments. After completing a remarkable season, which included finishing the regular season with an 11-0 conference record and advancing to the Big East final against Georgetown, Notre Dame looked for success in the postseason. The four-game loss to Ohio State in the opening round of the NCAA Tournament marked the first time that the Irish did not advance to the second round since 1992.
WASHINGTON HALL--Donald Crafton, Chairman of Notre Dame Film, Television, and Theatre (FTT), has announced that the annual reception for students interested in film, television or theatre will be held Wednesday, August 23, at 6:00 P.M., in Washington Hall. Students interested in any aspect of acting, directing, scenery, costuming, lighting, management, or who are considering film, television and theatre as a major are encouraged to attend.

Notre Dame student films are shown each year at the popular annual film festival. Many FTT student films have won awards at national film festivals, and a collection of the best Notre Dame films is available.

FTT has a terrific relationship with area television stations, and many students have earned internships in a variety of production areas. WNDU, the local NBC affiliate, is owned by Notre Dame and provides television professionals who teach some Notre Dame classes.

Theatre at Notre Dame is open to all students—majors and non-majors—who wish to participate. A wide variety of activities is available including: acting, scenic design and construction, costume design and construction, lighting design and execution, marketing, directing and stage management. There are theatre opportunities to fit every schedule and level of talent.

This season, FTT will present a mainstage season consisting of five plays and many other acting and directing projects. Mainstage productions will be:

- As You Like It, Goodnight Desdemona (Good Morning Juliet), Love's Fire, The Winter's Tale and Oedipus Rex.
- As You Like It and The Winter's Tale will be performed by Actors From the London Stage who will make Notre Dame their American home beginning July 1. All FTT projects will need student involvement. There are positions for all who wish to participate.

Auditions for first semester plays will be held Wed., August 23, and Thu., August 24, at 7:00 P.M.

FTT activities are an excellent way to meet new people, make new friends, and have a great time while involving yourself in the creation of something special on campus.

If you cannot attend the reception, but wish to be involved or have questions about film, please e-mail Ted Mandell at Mandell.1@nd.edu. If you are interested in opportunities in theatre please e-mail Richard E. Donnelly at Donnelly.4@nd.edu.

visit our web page at http://www.nd.edu:80/cothweb/wwwhomepage.html

---

THE DELICIOUS WHOPPER VALUE MEAL IS AT BURGER KING!

(WHY ON EARTH ARE YOU STILL STANDING THERE? GO!)

THE HOT AND DELICIOUS WHOPPER® VALUE MEAL:

Go get the flame-broiled WHOPPER® sandwich — AMERICA'S FAVORITE BURGER™ — with hot crispy fries and an ice-cold drink.

LOCATED IN LaFORTUNE STUDENT CENTER

Flex 14 meal plan points accepted
MOVIES
CINEMA@THE SNITE
For a mere two bucks, you can catch the cream of Hollywood, independent and international films right in the basement of the Snite Museum of Art, located on the northwest corner of the football stadium. Every Friday and Saturday night, Cinema @ the Snite features second-run films — the movies that have left regular theaters but have yet to hit the video store. Some favorites from last semester include Fight Club, Being John Malkovich, Run Lola Run and Boys Don’t Cry. On Monday nights, the Snite shows classics, ranging from Casablanca to Citizen Kane. Pick up a schedule at the Snite Museum or find one online this fall at www.nd.edu/~cothweb.

SUB MOVIES
The Student Union Board, better known as SUB, shows $2 movies every Thursday, Friday and Saturday night. It also shows second-run films, but it tends to focus on the big Hollywood hits, like American Beauty, American Pie and The Talented Mr. Ripley.

STUDENT FILM FESTIVAL
Every January, the films made by Notre Dame’s film-production students are showcased for three nights at the Snite. Consider this your chance to check out the films before they hit the indie film-festival circuit. This must-see event promises controversy, art and even a few laughs.

LIVE MUSIC
ACOUSTIC CAFÉ
Every Thursday night at LaFortune Student Center, SUB hosts an open-mic night for student solo musicians and campus bands. Whether you’ve got a hankering for some Dave Matthews Band and Jewel covers — or you just want to check out the original music produced by campus talent — this event is free for everyone. If you’re interested in being a performer yourself, SUB has open sign-ups each week.

SUB CONCERTS
Not a heck of a lot of bands pass through South Bend, but you can count on SUB to line up a show on campus every now and then. Recent performers have included Ben Folds Five, Ani DiFranco, Third Eye Blind and, just this past spring, a double bill of Vertical Horizon and Stroke 9.

COLLEGIATE JAZZ FESTIVAL
This competition between college jazz bands from all over the country draws a lot of attention from jazz enthusiasts nationwide, including Branford Marsalis, who made an

Nobody ever said it was going to be easy, moving to the drowsy town of South Bend from the city that never sleeps. However, once I came to appreciate the stars in place of skyscrapers and nights that inevitably end around 2 a.m., I realized that this place had some potential. Quality entertainment on campus is tricky to pinpoint, but this clip ’n’ save guide should make your journey toward fun a safe and easy one.

BY KARA ZUARO
appearance at the festival a few years back.

BLUEGRASS FESTIVAL
The second annual Bluegrass Festival took place this spring, featuring the Galoots, straight from Louisville, Ky. Co-sponsored by the dining halls, this free event offered chili and watermelon to all who attended. This year, even city folk like myself were caught square-dancing barefoot on the cool grass of North Quad.

RADIO

WVFI
The Voice of the Fighting Irish, or WVFI, can be accessed from the Internet on campus at wvfi.nd.edu. The station features a wide range of music, from indie to oldies to mainstream.

WSND
Coming to you straight from the radio tower in O'Shaughnessy Hall, WSND on 88.9 FM plays classical music by day and varied student programming by night.

LITERATURE & ART

SOPHOMORE LITERARY FESTIVAL
For one week each February, a committee of sophomores hosts nightly readings from notable writers, with one night set aside for student writers to read their own work. Going into its 33rd year, it has featured writers such as Kurt Vonnegut, Ralph Ellison, Arthur Miller, Joyce Carol Oates, Tennessee Williams, John Irving and Tom Clancy in its impressive history.

THE VISITING WRITERS SERIES
The Creative Writing Program, a graduate program at Notre Dame, also hosts a number of writers throughout the year. These readings don’t tend to get a great deal of press, so look around the hallways of O'Shaughnessy for posters, or check out the English department’s calendar of events at www.nd.edu/~english/calendar.html.

SNITE MUSEUM
The Snite is open Tuesday through Sunday, and admission is free. It tends to be one of Notre Dame’s less-traveled treasures, though many students and professors attend the opening of the spring exhibit where the MFA and BFA students showcase their work.

AND MORE...

AN TOSTAL
Yet another SUB-sponsored event, An Tostal is Gaelic for “The Festival.” In years past, this springtime celebration has involved all kinds of events to help blow off school stress before the onslaught of finals. Favorite aspects of An Tostal include blow-up Sumo-wrestling suits, velcro walls and those bouncy things that you used to jump on at carnivals as a kid.

D.I.Y.
If all entertainment options fail, you’re going to have to do it yourself. Though this list may seem extensive, nobody is trying to convince you that you aren’t going to hit a few gray and dismal Saturday evenings here in South Bend. But you’ll soon find out that Notre Dame isn’t so much about the things you do as it is about the people you meet. When your calendar is empty and the snow is piled up outside, there’s nothing like an impromptu dorm-room luau or something as simple as hot chocolate and videos among your new friends. Freshman year can be the best of times or the worst of times, but a little creativity always helps to make it as good as it can get. It can save a lot of money, too.

And of course, if you’re still not satisfied with any of these options, you can always apply for a job at Scholastic.
Act Now
Theater opportunities abound at Notre Dame

KATHLEENCORTE

Scene One: Freshman Orientation weekend. Student moves in, meets roommate, goes to tie exchanges and video dance parties. Anyone could get lost in the hustle and bustle of activities. “I was homesick until I went to the first meeting,” Siiri Scott remembers.

Act Now

The first meeting for a play, that is. For Scott, who attended Saint Mary’s and is now a visiting professor at Notre Dame, becoming involved in theater not only offered her a creative outlet, but also helped her meet new people. When I left [the meeting], I had friends,” Scott says, “many of whom are still my friends now.”

“We encourage freshmen to get involved,” says Tom Barkes, building manager of Washington Hall, where most performances are held. Barkes stresses that students can participate in any part of the process, from costumes to lighting. “In theater, you can do everything,” he states. “You can get involved as an actor. You can get involved building scenery. You can do stage management. You can plug in at any point that you want.”

Students can take part in the Mainstage Productions, the four main plays sponsored by the department of film, television and theater. One of these plays is normally performed by a visiting theater company. For the 2000-2001 season, however, the Mainstage listing has been stretched to include five plays, two of which will be performed by the visiting theatrical troupe Actors from the London Stage. This company will make Notre Dame its home while touring the United States and will perform two of Shakespeare’s plays during the upcoming season. While these two performances will involve professional actors, students are encouraged to take part in the other three Mainstage plays.

For students interested in musical theater, the Pasquerilla East Musical Company provides another option. Formed in 1997, this company performs a musical every spring semester and has scheduled Guys and Dolls for the spring of 2001. Since the group is student-run, it offers students a chance to do everything from direct and act to choreograph and play in the orchestra that accompanies the show. Other acting groups can also be found on campus, such as the St. Ed’s Players and the Not-So-Royal Shakespeare Company. These groups all hold performances throughout the year and offer opportunities for students to become involved.

For students who cannot imagine life without the stage as well as for those who would like to become involved in theater for the first time, an organizational meeting will be held in Washington Hall on Wednesday, August 23 at 6 p.m. “Any and all people are absolutely welcome,” Barkes states.

“I recommend trying to get involved as soon as possible,” says Michael Cochran, a junior who started participating in plays on campus his freshman year. “It’s fun, and it gives you the opportunity to meet a lot of people. You get to know people really well.”

Although aspiring actors and directors can anticipate plenty of theatrical opportunities at Notre Dame, those students who would rather watch the shows than be in the spotlight can still look forward to an exciting season of performances.
Act Now

Theater opportunities abound at Notre Dame.

KATHLEEN CORTE

TRAGIC Phiometne in last spring's Mainstage production of the ancient Greek myth of Alcestis.

Scene One: A new student moves into a dorm and meets roommate, goes to tie exchanges and video dance parties. Anyone could get lost in the hustle and bustle for those who would like to become involved in theater for the first time, an organizational meeting will be held in Washington Hall on Freshman Orientation weekend. Student moves to a dorm room, and act as Pereus and Tereus. Brad Charron and Tara Murphy act as Pereus and Tereus. Michael Cochran, a junior who started participating in plays on campus his freshman year.

Although aspiring actors and directors can anticipate plenty of opportunities at Notre Dame, those students who would like to become involved in theater for the first time, an organizational meeting will be held in Washington Hall on Freshman Orientation weekend. Student moves to a dorm room, and act as Pereus and Tereus. Brad Charron and Tara Murphy act as Pereus and Tereus. Michael Cochran, a junior who started participating in plays on campus his freshman year.

The first meeting for a play, that is. For Scott, who attended Saint Mary's high school in South Bend, the first meeting for a show. "Any of the department of film, television and theater."

"In that process, you can plug in at any point that you want."

The Hammes Bookstore offers a variety of products and services including: high speed copying, color copying/scanning/printing, binding, fax service, laminating, resumes, business cards, office supplies, desktop publishing services and much more.

Domer Dollars can be used at all Food Service locations accepting points. Do you have friends or family visiting? Why not treat them to a meal using your Domer Dollars?
Welcome incoming first year students from Notre Dame's Student Union Board

Look for these big events when you arrive:

Get a head start on moving in:
- Furniture
- Appliances
- Posters
- Wall hangings

Fall Mall
Move-in weekend
August 18, 19, & 20

@ Stepan Center
(the funny looking dome on North Campus)

Welcome Week
Thursday & Friday
Aug. 24 & 25

Thursday:
Tye-dying, D.J., and Giveaways
4-7pm at the Fieldhouse Mall

Friday:
Outdoor Movie and Giveaways
9 pm at Rolfs Athletic Center

All this and more, brought to you by:

www.nd.edu/~sub
Welcome incoming first year students from Notre Dame's Student Union Board

Look for these big events when you arrive:

- Get a head start on moving in:
  - Furniture Fall Mall
  - Appliances
  - Posters

- Move-in weekend: August 18, 19, & 20
  - Thursday: Tye-dying, D.J., and Giveaways
    4-7pm at the Fieldhouse Mall
  - Friday: Outdoor Movie and Giveaways
    9 pm at Rolfs Athletic Wall hangings @ Stepan Center (the funny looking dome on North Campus)

Welcome Week Thursday & Friday Aug. 24 & 25

All this and more, brought to you by:

www.nd.edu/-sub

.CRISTINFENZEL

You know Rod Roddy, the hyper-emphatic announcer on “The Price is Right” who owns, like, 500 sportcoats made entirely out of glitter? The following works better if you read it while doing your best impression of him. Aww, come on. No one’s looking.

You’ve sent in your acceptance letter. You’ve packed your bags. You’ve said goodbye to the dog. As you embark on your college journey, the only question you’ve got left is the same one plaguing the mind of every other incoming college freshman:

What in tarnation am I going to listen to on the way there?!

Search no further — the answer is available on two full-length CDs or audio cassettes! That’s right: COLLEGE...NOW! It’s a whirlwind tour of the freshman experience, set to the funkiest beat around! Worried about fitting in at the big, scary university that will soon be your home? Dance those insecurities away! We guarantee that all the cool kids will be bobbin’ their heads to COLLEGE...NOW! when you arrive.

Hear smash hits about typical freshman problems with domestic tasks, like:

I Want Your Socks
(Sing to the tune of I Want Your Sex by George Michael)

The way that you dress is important, you know ‘Cause style is a must, and you’re screwed if you don’t Know whites are washed in warm
And darks are washed in co-old
When mom did the wash I didn’t sweat it
But now I’m expected to iron and fold!

I said I won’t tease you, won’t tell you no lies
Just give me your shorts and your pants and your ties
I’m clumsy with Clorox, with Wisk I’m the worst
A man needs his wardrobe, so give me your shirts
I want your socks!
I want your ... socks.

Roommate anxiety? Don’t bug out, dude! Chill to the psychedelic strains of:

Room with a Stranger
(Sing to the tune of Beautiful Stranger by Madonna)

Well since I went to college (bah-dum!)
I found a new place to eat (bah-dum!)
It’s down at the place where dinner’s
Always nutritionally complete.
I get so hungry, baby, I get so hungry, etc.

So what on earth are you waiting for? Order today!

I Can’t Go Places
(Sing to the tune of Friends in Low Places by Garth Brooks)

On the day that I left, I was feelin’ bereft
Full of sadness I couldn’t ignore
I gave one last hug to my VW Bug
And I forced myself out the door.
I tried not to cry, but there were tears in my eyes
As I sank further into my seat:
I just couldn’t bear the thought of leavin’ it there
So cold and alone on the streeeeeet!

Well without a car, you can’t go places
You sit in your dorm while everyone else races
Away from school
But it’ll turn out cool
It’s a fact of life that every freshman faces
Still lots of folks got cars, and in mo-ost cases
You can catch a ride, and goo000 places.

Driving to school with the ‘rents and worried they won’t “dig” COLLEGE...NOW!’s kickin’ rhythms? Placate them with classics like:

Ode to South Dining Hall
(Sing to the tune of Heartbreak Hotel by Elvis Presley)

Well since I went to college (bah-dum!)
I found a new place to eat (bah-dum!)
It’s down at the place where dinner’s
Always nutritionally complete.
I get so hungry, baby, I get so hungry, etc.

So what on earth are you waiting for? Order today!
Coming Home

by Father Gary Chamberland, CSC

Today is the quietest day of the year. The last Suburban has pulled away, and paper is strewn about in empty corridors. My first year as rector is over. Just yesterday the vans arrived, disgorging pie-eyed freshmen. Heck. Just yesterday, I arrived as one of those freshmen.

On August 23, 1980, my adventure began. My parents and I drove up Notre Dame Avenue and saw the sun glinting off of the Golden Dome. We turned into the old Main Gate, and the air was filled with the Victory March as the Band of the Fighting Irish marched our way. It was here to greet me, confirmation that I was meant to be here. This was heaven's sign that all would be well.

I moved into Dillon Hall that Friday morning with no idea that my life would be changed forever. Changed by the people I would meet that very day. Changed by the questions asked in class and in late-night bull sessions. Changed by the words that comforted and challenged me at Masses over the next four years. I had no idea that this journey would lead me to places I never dreamed of and would lead me back to Notre Dame.

I remember meeting the other freshmen in my section that first morning and not liking them at all. I remember my first home football game when Harry Oliver kicked a 51-yard field goal into the wind to beat Michigan and envisioning four years of football bliss. I remember arriving at Advanced French, my very first college class ever, and having a crisis of confidence when everyone was conversing fluently. I knew that I didn't belong here and that I would soon flunk out and return home in shame.

Well, none of that happened. I passed Advanced French, Notre Dame football hit the skids and the guys in my section became my closest friends. Together, we shared the greatest moments in our lives — and the lowest. We pondered life's great questions, debated careers, and questioned the reality of God. We helped each other through calculus and Core, cheered on new relationships and tended each other's broken hearts. We grew up together.

At Notre Dame, I left boyhood behind and struggled to become a man. I faced new challenges and found a voice which would become authentically my own. I learned that my decisions had consequences. I fell in love with a beautiful woman and came to believe that I was lovable. At Notre Dame, I began to develop a mature faith and ask how I might serve God.

On May 21, 1984, my parents and I drove down Notre Dame Avenue with the Dome reflecting morning's light in the rearview mirror. I left a different person than the one who had arrived four years earlier — a better person, I hope. I left intent to make a difference in our world; I left more sure of who I was and what I believed. I left knowing that I had friends, men whom I had met the very day I arrived on campus, who would always be there for me.

Life has brought us to different places. Most have married, and two of us have been ordained. Swim practices and soccer leagues dominate our conversations now. One of us has been seriously ill for 10 years now, and another we laid to rest after the ravages of cancer. I don't call them often enough, but they are with me daily, in my random thoughts and my deliberate prayers, in who I am and who I still strive to be.

Thoughts of my friends fill me on this afternoon when the hall is still. I think of those freshmen (now sophomores) that have just left for the summer. Confident young men, they have begun to address life's questions and are, by and large, answering them well. I see the 300 men with whom I have lived this year and recall the good times we shared. I also remember the difficult times: the suffering, the doubt, the serious illness and the pain of life, the death of a parent, and the struggles with personal identity. I rejoice in the attempts of young men to be good friends in times of need. In their efforts, I see Christ.

I think of the seniors who are moving on to new arenas. They shall be missed, but I am not worried about the gap they leave behind. Their place will be taken by those juniors and sophomores whom they helped form. This year's freshmen will return to teach next year's freshmen the ways of this place and help them feel at home. They will become tomorrow's big brothers, mentors and friends.

The cars are gone and I will enjoy the quiet for a while. Yet I already miss them. I miss the hum of activity and the shouts in the halls. I look forward to August, when the next generation of Notre Dame arrives at our doorstep, a little pie-eyed, a little scared. I look forward to welcoming them into our community and growing together in faith and love.

Father Gary Chamberland, a member of the class of 1984, is the current rector of Keenan Hall.
Coming Home by Father Gary Chamberland, CSC

Today is the quietest day of the year. The last day of classes have ended. The cars are gone and I will enjoy the quiet for a while. Thoughts of my friends fill me on this afternoon when the last of them will have returned home. I will enjoy the quiet before the next generation of Notre Dame students arrives at our doorstep, a little pie-eyed, a little scared.

OLIVER (Student)

Four years ago today, I arrived as one of those freshmen. I learned that my decisions had consequences. I fell in love with a beautiful woman and came to believe that I was lovable. At Notre Dame, I began to develop a confident person than the one who had arrived four years ago. I was broken hearts. We grew up together. We helped each other through calculus and Core, and the lowest. We pondered life's great questions, and the struggles with personal identity. I rejoice in the activity and the shouts in August, when the next generation of Notre Dame arrives at our doorstep, a little pie-eyed, a little scared. The cars are gone and I will enjoy the quiet for a while.

At Notre Dame, I left boyhood behind and struggled with a decision that all would be well. This was heaven's morning's light in the rearview mirror. I left more sure of who I was the sun glinting off of the Golden Dome. We turned and the wind to beat Michigan and envisioning four years of doing the things I loved with the people I would meet that very day. Changed by the people I would meet that very day. Changed by the questions asked in class and in late-night discussions. Changed by the people I would meet that very day.

At Notre Dame, I found a community and growing together in faith and love. Life has brought us to different places. Most have married, and two of us have been ordained. Swim Brother, mentors and friends. I moved into Dillon Hall that Friday morning with no idea that my life would be changed forever. Changed by the people I would meet that very day.

Well, none of that happened. I passed Advanced French, my very first college class ever, and having no idea that my life would be changed forever. Father Gary Chamberland, a member of the class of 1968, a Brother at the University of Notre Dame since 1968, and a student of the questions, asked in class and in late-night discussions. Changed by the people I would meet that very day.

At Notre Dame, I was one of those freshmen. I arrived as one of those freshmen. I think of the seniors who are moving on to new activity and the shouts in August 23, 1980, my parents and I drove down Notre Dame Avenue and saw the Suburban has pulled away, and paper is the quality of the copy shop.

High Speed Copies  Color Copies/Printing Fax Service  Binding  Résumés Desktop Publishing  Course Packets Printing  Thesis & Dissertation Copying Overhead Transparencies  School Supplies Laminating  Carbonless Forms  Diskettes And a Whole Lot More!

WE'RE OPEN EARLY, LATE & WEEKENDS
wvfi.nd.edu

rock * hip-hop * techno * jazz * metal * punk * indie * folk * country

notre dame's only student-run radio wanna be a rockstar???

Join... and get on the air with

WVFI

the voice of the fighting irish