The Question Of A Calendar

Administration States Reasons; Student Reaction Flares Up

Last week the proposed 1964-65 calendar was revealed. It caused widespread student reaction and confusion - a reaction that continued this week.

The administration felt that the calendar was needed for several reasons. They believed that the examination dates were too fast and close together during the school year. And, they believe that final exams are over-emphasized and perhaps are not as important as they should be.

The administration's plan is as follows:

• September 18 -Freshmen Orientation
• September 21 -Registration Begins
• September 22 -First day of classes
• November 25 -Thanksgiving vacation begins after class
• December 16 -Christmas vacation begins after last class
• January 4 -Classes resume
• February 21 -Classes begin for second semester
• March 20 -Midsemester vacation after last class
• April 18 -20 -21 classes for Good Fri- day and Holy Saturday
• June 2 -Last class day
• June 6 -Commencement

The plan will cut a two-week break and elongate the Easter vacation. It will also create a three-week break in mid-semester, instead of the present two-week break.

The 1964-65 calendar is the result of a year-long project. The bishops, professors, and students have all been involved in the planning process.

The new calendar will be in effect for the 1964-65 academic year.

Mock Convention Opens, Six Sessions Are Scheduled

2500 Take Part; 50 States Represented

The 1964 Republic Mock Convention will begin at Notre Dame this Monday, March 2, and end probably on Saturday, March 7. The program of Political Science, will be the culmination of the efforts of over 2,500 individuals on campus, those working on the convention committee as well as the Presidential aspirants and the state delegates and alternates from the 42 states and territories.

The convention has two main purposes: to stimulate widespread political interest in the nation; and to develop interest in politics among Notre Dame students. It is a chance to learn about the political process and to participate in a meaningful way.

On Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 the third session will convene. After the address of welcome by Rev. Edward John Cardinale, C.S.C., President, Permanent Chairman, the roll call of states will be read for nominations for the Presiding Officers of the United States. Nominating and election procedures will be followed on Monday.

Balloting

On Tuesday night, the fourth session, by ballot roll call will be concluded and a new chairman will be elected. The roll call of states will be read for the nomination of the President and Vice President. The final list of candidates will be the one that was chosen for the convention entertainment, starting one-half hour before each session will be provided gratis by the Notre Dame student organizations, with the supervision of Bernie Zahn.

German Ambassador To Visit Campus

K. Helfrich Knappstein, German ambassador to the United States, will visit the University of Notre Dame, Monday, March 17, on "Germany's Role in the Free World."

Prof. Stephen Kerz, head of the University's Committee on International Relations, said the ambassador will be honored by a dinner Monday evening at the Morris Inn at 6:30 p.m. His talk, which is open to the public, is scheduled for 7 p.m. at the Inn.

The German Ambassador, who is Germany's counselor general in Chicago from 1931 to 1936, is the first of a series of diplomats who will speak at Notre Dame this spring under the auspices of the University's Program in International Relations. The series is being sponsored by a grant from the Sperenberg and Hirschman Company.

Subsequent to his five-year-long-ago, the ambassador spent two years as German Ambas-
In a recent project, the NFCCS secretary compiled a report on how Honor Systems work in colleges throughout the country. The report was done, both for the schools which subscribe to NFCCS and for Notre Dame.

Although there are a great number of schools with honor systems, there are no papers discussing the twenty major schools including: Amherst, Princeton, Stanford, Notre Dame, Southwestern, Santa Clara (the only Catholic university known to have an operating system), Texas A&M, the Naval and Air Force academies, and Colorado College.

Common Element

The common element in each system is the responsibility for the enforcement of the system and the student integrity placed in the hands of the Honor Council. The concepts of honor and integrity are stressed as the bases for the systems which is both individual and collective.

Underlying philosophies and attitudes vary from school to school. At Virginia, Princeton, Johns Hopkins, and North Carolina the concepts revolve around the "code of the gentleman."

The military academies have their own distinct bases although there was much debate at the Air Force Academy before accepting the general concept of the system at West Point. Brigham Young with a deep foundation in Mormonism stresses the religious aspect of "individual integrity." Stanford incorporates its academic Honor System based primarily on the individual in a "sacramental standard" which is a loose moral guide to all student activity.

Not Real Tradition

Although many people emphasize the importance of a certain factor in schools with long tradition, it is the case with most Southern schools, that the honor systems of these schools have adopted Honor Systems because they feel they need them and not because they feel that Honor Councils should exist. The primary reason is that honor does not play a major role in the curriculum of any school.

Due to increasing interest in student integrity across the county, it appears that report pointed out, most schools have been receiving increased pressure to adopt systems similar to those in their neighboring schools. Stanford, Santa Clara, 1961; Knox College, 1963; Columbia, 1964 (for various reasons); and surprisingly the present Honor Council at Princeton was only adopted in 1960.

...Somewhere in between these schools and the more traditional and the older schools, such as Virginia, Harvard, and Johns Hopkins (1893), is Stanford, whose Fundamentals of Honor System was drafted by student petition in 1921.

Operation Variete

The names of the Honor Systems mean very little to the average student. There are various names for each school's system. Thus it is not difficult to become confused when talking about honor systems. Not only does the name confuse only when an accused student appeals his accusation. Otherwise, he is required to spend up to 12 hours to leave the campus after he is found guilty, either by a faculty vote or a faculty hearing. Such a practice operates in a long standing and serious way in which dishonesty is not tolerated.

Sanford and California at Davis have the same type of system and where a general concept of honor, professionalism, and the internalization of one's code are the basic factors. The System is applied only to academics. Ethos both students have strongly defined systems which reflect their individual beliefs and integrity.

The third type which includes most schools limits itself exclusively to the specific types of cases. These are somewhat situation specific; that is, they are based upon scope or (c.g. code of honors, plagiarism, test grades, exams). For example, reporting, selection and operational procedures differ from school to school. These are the trial procedures, and penalties imposed.

Students enter the class for a room, an exam, they are considered the best and brightest in the work. Many systems require tests in order to be taken. Furthermore, almost all authorities to be somehow involved in the system. This is done here at the Notre Dame System and St. John's which require a signed pledge on the test booklets to the effect that defendant "has not received nor given any aid out of any kind."

It is a universal rule that a professor is absent from the classroom. At John Hopkins, the professor is absent from the classroom in order for the academic community and can see that the professor is not asking the students on academic systems that ask that the professor must be located. Although there is no such thing as a perfect system but that the confidence and trust of a workable system for weighty purposes.

Library Dedication

Planned for May

The University of Notre Dame has set May 7 the dedication date for the thirteenth-Notre Dame Memorial Library, according to an announcement by Rev. Theon H. Heidbrink, C.S.C., university president.

Father Heidbrink said the dedication for the library will consist of several events in order to honor the library's presence and its contribution to the building, a dedication dinner, a symbolic conversation and a banquet.

The names of the dignitaries who will attend the event are not yet known, but the university president, Rev. Theon H. Heidbrink, C.S.C., Notre Dame's executive vice president, and the general chairman of the dedication committee are expected to attract several thousand guest.

The building's most arcing architectural feature, a monumental granite mosaic with Christ as the central figure, will be installed on the historic facade in March. It is the work of muralist Gilbert Sheets, Claremont, Calif.

146 Freshmen On Dean's List

The Freshman of Statoes office reports that 466 freshmen have made the dean's list for the first semester of this year. This figure is 12 more than last year's figure.

Although there are 36 more freshmen this year than last, the number of students on the dean's list for the second semester is 296, the same as last year. There are also two more in the "good" category.

In the near future there will be a meeting of those freshmen with an averages of B or better and an opportunity to learn about the opportunities for those who are on the list for the first time. They will be addressed in a seminar on campus who have won National Merit Scholars, Rhodes, Fulbright, and other national competitive fellowships. These men will describe what their fellowships are and what work, have meant to them.

Campaign Managers Arm For Battle

by JED REE

With the Mock Convention just a few days away, the various campaign managers have been busy seeking support for their candidates. Each campaign manager has been sending representatives to state caucuses throughout the week.

On Sunday, the basis of the early straw polls taken in the state of Iowa was a key moment for candidates. It was here that Hailstone and Goldwater emerged as the early leaders. Immediately, the state delegation chairman or his assistant sends a report of the platform waiting to give the nominating speech. The speech is delivered to any state chairman, if given, and is followed by a 10 minute demonstration for that candidate. Voting may take place in the demonstration. Following the demonstration, the roll call is resumed.

If a state chooses to "yield" to another state, it gives up its position in the roll call to that state. Then, the state "yielded" to may nominate a candidate in the procedure described above.

A state wishing to "pass" gives its two minutes to the state floor. No demonstration is allowed, and the roll call continues.

If a state wishes to "pass" it simply gives up its turn to the convention. Once the roll call for nominations is complete, ballet- ling for the presidential nominee begins. The procedure is quite simple and is called in turn and the state chairman relays the delegates' votes to the platform. As soon as this sounds, it will involve a good deal of cooperation between the platform and the state chairman, for these are the limitations of time and space at the convention, it will not be possible to keep the floor occupied during the session. Therefore, delegates must be organized so that voting changes can be processed quickly and accurately on the convention floor.

It should be kept in mind that there is no unit rule in the Republican Party, thus necessitating even more cooperation between the state and state chairman in order that caucus on the convention floor can be carried out smoothly and accurately. Changes can be processed quickly and accurately on the convention floor.

One can only deplore the changes the Administration is planning to make at Notre Dame next semester, changes which initially causes more concern than the actual substance of the changes themselves, for in most cases the changes by which the new proposals were presented.

The object of any student organization in initiating any project is twofold: to answer the question, test the opinion of the interested parties, and then, with sound rationale, present the best possible proposal for consideration. This is the philosophy of our Student Government, now. One only has to note the extensive investigation of innovations arising from the student body in recent years: Stay Hall Residence and the evolving Honor System, the new grading system, the student government apparatus for the past few years, and the isolated student quality in the scholastic endeavors of the University, and a new attempt to make education meaningful by relying on the students to use their time to best advantage.

The administration could shatter both the spirit and the letter of this trend. Not only are finals not being moved further away by a few days, they are not even going to right into the last class day. Not only does the student have to work a putting things in proper perspective, but he hasn't even got time to go over the work of the course. The student is put into the position of finals in a two day period at the end of the semester, and this is in addition to the pressure to make any kind of meaningful review; it will be a major feat to keep from getting writer's cramp.

The administration's answer to this is that finals will not count as much as formerly, and will not be as comprehensive; thus, teachers will be encouraged to give more exams, if they wish, and that it is a concession of a grade school principal, who remembers that if teachers can watch the student's progress as he learns, College is not meant to be a self-sufficient and independent study, with as little reference to anything possible.

It is thought by some that there is presently too much emphasis on grades at Notre Dame, and not enough on getting an education. Finals at least offer an opportunity to stop and look back on a semester's work, perhaps to get many more students clear and assimilate them into a coherent whole. The final properly done, could be a thought-provoking topic which required a basic unerstanding of the material of the entire semester. Now, it is lost. Apparently we will educate ourselves in the imperfect, and this we will do for a quit few weeks. Certainly no attempt will be made to put a course in any kind of perspective. As we have heard so often, "teach the business of the subject matter.

My suggestion would be to raise the question to individual teachers or departmentaler organization of a meaningful review period. This would also help solve a problem which might occur if students were not supposed to use a reading period wisely.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Sir,

Allow me to comment on the suggestion your publication made last semester that a "reading period" be established prior to semester examinations.

I experimented with this idea in one of my classes last semester and found it rather successful. I could, not, however, favor the universal imposition of a reading period of fixed duration. In some cases, it would be impossible for others to work, and in some cases, it would be a poor method. As other professors would not be able to accommodate it, we will, in the context of our courses, must work out the nature of the subject matter.

My suggestion would be to allow the courses of individual teachers or departments rather than to establish a universal wide reading period. This would also help solve a problem which might occur if students were not supposed to use a reading period wisely.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Sir,

Rubbish and disruption such as were exhibited Sunday night at the meeting of the new Convention Platform Committee—

Wouldn't any of the editors care to comment on the "mock" Convention which is in the making? I am told that the Convention is a "mock"! Truly it can be said that the only mock this far displayed is that which is in the making of six Senate meetings in the Student Center. Have ever been compared to the going-on.

I am writing, however, to set forth a criticism of the method of representation used. Thus far in pre-convention proceedings, Announcements from one state to serve in such vital positions as chairman, assistant chairmen and members of another state is contrary to property, and institutions are usually not at times this is necessary. But up to now the only results have been bitterness and variances among the state conventions. One example should suffice. Jeri Wrona was serving on the Platform Committee for the southern state, with the state of New York as a "crank" as Civil Rights under consideration, that northern state. Absence alone hurts the attempts of the opposition to swing a majority's civil rights plank.

I believe that conventions should serve with the state in which they reside.

(Democrat Hall)
President: John Gearen

If I am elected, the most important element of my program as Student Body President will be to lead the Senate toward making the following programs feasible: 1) making Student Government budgeted and underlined, and budgeted, and 2) developing programs to involve students. The Senate is the legislative arm of the student body, and it is my function to represent the student body. If I am elected, I shall work diligently to develop a program of activities for the Senate that will be beneficial to all students.

The Senate has always been a body that has been dominated by a few individuals. If I am elected, I shall work to make the Senate a body that is representative of the entire student body. I shall work to make the Senate a body that is representative of the entire student body. The Senate should be a body that is representative of the entire student body.

Treasurer: Alex Garlo

My name is Alex Garlo. I am a sophomore from the Office of Student Government with a 3.2 average. I am running for the position of Treasurer. One candidate for an election makes a meaningful difference — it becomes simply a political matter. We live in the age of the internet, and this election is no exception. The internet has made it easier than ever for candidates to run for office. The internet has made it easier than ever for candidates to run for office. I believe that the internet is a powerful tool that can be used to create a more democratic and transparent government. It is my hope that if I am elected, I will be able to use the internet to create a more transparent and democratic government.

Tom McMannon:

Tomorrow we go to the polls to elect the Student Body Treasurer. One of the key positions in the Senate is Treasurer. It is a position that requires careful financial planning and management. I have had experience in this field, and I am confident that I can handle the financial responsibilities of the position. I believe that the internet is a powerful tool that can be used to create a more democratic and transparent government. It is my hope that if I am elected, I will be able to use the internet to create a more transparent and democratic government.

Victor Vice-President: Paul Magher

For the closing statement of my campaign, I feel it most appropriate for me to address my fellow students. There is a Senate election this year, and it is my belief that every student should be interested in it. The Senate is the main representative of the student body. If I am elected, I shall work to make the Senate a body that is representative of the entire student body. The Senate should be a body that is representative of the entire student body.

Secretary: Bob Guenard

This year the position of Student Government Secretary with a 3.2 average, I have the opportunity to serve under the guidance of the current Secretary, who has done an excellent job. Over the course of the year, I have been able to learn more about the duties of the position and the importance of effective communication. I believe that the internet is a powerful tool that can be used to create a more democratic and transparent government. It is my hope that if I am elected, I will be able to use the internet to create a more transparent and democratic government.

Steve Walter:

The student body officer in general, and the office of Vice-President in particular, has been given considerable attention over the last few years. This attention has been due to the fact that the office is responsible for many important responsibilities, including the administration of the Senate and the Student Government. If I am elected, I shall work to make the Senate a body that is representative of the entire student body. The Senate should be a body that is representative of the entire student body.

S.G. Candidates Take Stands on Issues of Impending Election

President: John Gearen

If I am elected, I am committed to making the Senate a more representative body. One of the issues that I believe is crucial is the representation of students. The Senate has historically been dominated by a few individuals. If I am elected, I shall work to make the Senate a body that is representative of the entire student body. The Senate should be a body that is representative of the entire student body.

Notre Dame students do not know about the many different opportunities available to them while they are attending school. They can't all see the summer as a time to take a part-time or full-time job, or as a time to continue their education through a graduate assistantship in their field of study. Many do not even know if there are any such opportunities besides the ones held by some of the 779 student employees.

Beatie Mania Hits N.D., Wigs Sweep Campus

By DAN FABIAN

About two weeks ago my roommate wigged his way through the student center in a straight jacket. He appeared to be a dirty bird's nest and from his lips sprang a series of_connecting ballads. His voice, true to the air voicing of a cadet at the University of Mississippi, was a sharp contrast to the a cappella could be detected. He informed me that he had just bought a few of the Beatles. The wigs, as his nest proved to be, could be purchased at a reason- able price from one of the stores, and an album full of the aforementioned songs was available. Also, the quirk, squeal, or growl I might mention, I bet he actually became a Beatle fan, so I was told.

Since it was too early for April Fool's jokes, my first thought was to call a doctor. When I finally asked my roommate what he was talking about he looked at me automatically and said, "The Beatles, man, the Beatles." For those still uneducated, "The Beatles" was a very successful band that each member played an instrument, from the rhythm guitar to the vocal. Their rise to popularity is in the realm of the fantastic, but their success transcends the time. Indicative of the extent of their success is their album "Help!" which the group has earned since it became popular, and the fact that else the Beatles are contro- versial. Dated since we have a lot of Beatles customers.

Since Notre Dame has long been noted for its willingness to support the arts, there have been many instances when a group would jump on. I decided my ques- tion was a good one and began work on a survey aimed at finding out whether ND was for or against the Beatles. Many of the surveys were cast like a drop in the ocean.

A total of 314 students were asked their opinions of the Beatles. The results were divided between two sides of the argument exist here, as well as a fairly number who just don't care. The most ardently pro-Beatle type person to come forward was a Mr. Kristman who said, "The Beatles are the best band ever. Mr. George Harrison is a very good songwriter and bender." Matt Leclau also said that the Beatles were the best band ever. He also said that the music causes in me emotions which have never been reached their true potential for me. Though I am not a member of the Beatle club in North was somewhat excited, but to those on the Beatles club. I was another Beatle fan. I thought I would find the fact that Notre Dame has ac- cepted. They have been the talk of this place ever since they came to this campus. Their music has a good beat and I enjoy their style of presenting it.

The seeming universality of their reaction was born out to a certain degree by the workers in the campus Sodlack. According to the Indians, the idea "I Want To Hold Your Hand" currently num- ber one in the nation, is played at least 50 times a day. One esti- mate run, "Oh, anywhere up to 100 times a day when it first came out."

Fresmen Dan Detzner, on the other hand, found little with which to praise them. "Well, the Beatles are a group who sing and look like girls, and look like animals. If they do that type of thing, I guess they're alone. But then, no, the menses, quippen senior Tom Borgs.

Most of those who with whom I came in contact felt somewhat between these extremes. Obviously enough, 194 replied that they had little or no particular feelings re- garding the Beatles. Their general conclusion was that the Beatles afford a somewhat refreshing change from the outside groups of entertainers. They apparently are not to be condemned so on- ly for that, that is: they are slightly apart from the normal. Neither, however, does there appear to be too much hope for any long run growth.

Obviously my endeavor left me where I had started. The Beatles existed. They existed. I didn't like them. I didn't like them. I didn't know. One thing sure, I always try to not a winner. For the pres- ent the Beatles are winning hands down. So for the present, I am building the Beatles.

Senate Approves New Policies; Easter Vacation Unchanged

The Student Senate met Feb. 27 and agreed on a number of legisla- tive topics. Among the new policies was a plan to extend the summer vacation in order to avoid interference with the first week of classes. Another new policy was the approval of a railroad pass for members of the student body. The Senate also approved a resolution to create a new, student-appointed policy committee to work on campus policy and a current financial report.

In the report, Dave Ellis, Stud- ent Body President, said that the Senate will continue to work on having telephone service in every dormitory. He also mentioned that the Senate had approved a motion to increase the budget for the Student Government. Next year's summer storage will probably be handled by a Transportation Chairman.

In his treasurer's report, Larry Biehle submitted the statement of accounts for January. The net gain for the semester amounted to $2,045.11.

The Senate approved a new transportation policy which provides for transportation to and from meetings of the student body by a Transportation Chairman for all organized trips.
