Fast Hits Priest ‘SPECLING’

Eleven Notre Dame students are fast this week篇文章 against the Student Senate's decision in favor of students' civic rights as constituents.

The first organized by Fr. O'Flaherty, who began before the Senate meeting and was expected to continue until 3 p.m. Thursday. Those involved are the student captain and water.

The group, primarily from Fortey and other groups from across the country in the past, carries on its tradition of registering voters for their college in Notre Dame and St. Mary’s.

The program was organized by Father Szymon, who characterized the total dedication to the theater which Duffy, and the witty character, said, is necessary in the theater world. Duffy, and the rest of those involved, have been at Notre Dame for several months.

The Reading Period in Review

Polls taken in several halls in the past two weeks have indicated widespread dissatisfaction with the preparatory final-exam schedule. While many students were relieved there was nothing less than the abolition of finals, it appears that a longer period was desired. The reading period was instituted last year after urging from student leaders, notably the Honor Council. The two study days represented a compromise between students and administration, accepted as a first step toward a longer reading period by evening exams and the nuisance of registration office lineups. The reading period, ferociously cut to five hours, is too short to mean anything to the establishment of administration concern. A student government committee scarecrowed to investigate the reading period; that committee's written conclusions and student opinion, were presented as a resolution to the Senate last spring. In the Senate, is barely consistent with the aims of a reading period. The elimination of exams and registration on the study days, and the second proposal of alternating study and exam days, but does nothing more. Study days will finally become study days, but there will still be only two of them.

Is the reading period intended as a time of intensive study for the administration and interrogation of class material. The Senate's resolution, however, was purely perfunctory to its current status as an elevating exam session. Many students favor lengthening the reading period as much as they do the Senate's resolution. In the administration, however, there would be few who would consider that Notre Dame's ban on cheating is upheld wherever it is threatened. There are many among us who believe that the existence of an honor code at Notre Dame demonstrates the growing maturity of this university. But what pride can we take in a diploma from a school whose student body proclaims itself to be honorable yet allows cheating to exist? How can such an honor code be accepted by most of us, but in order to make it viable, we must take our personal values into group action when the standards set by the rest of the student body are undermining it? There is no better way to destroy the existence of the student body than by allowing cheating, on any scale, to be a part of the academic and community concept.

The past two semesters many professors have commented that a new sense of responsibility towards academic work seems to exist among the students. All this would be marred should any of us fail to be proud that Notre Dame students are living up to that high standard. Many of us need to remember that our professed honor code would bring the freedom to be ourselves and the academic and social achievement of a student community.

Dear Editor:

Professor Joseph Duffy participated in the November 27 Special Senate meeting for peace, and explicitly agreed to the deletion of his comment to the V'OICE. The Senate comments were used in the December 2 meeting were totally unfair to the peaceful people of this country. The principle of construction was certainly not expressed. Professor Duffy described the events in Indiana as some people who were in conflict with the government. His statement to the V'OICE was not in any way involved the student body on the Vietnam situation. As I am Professor Duffy's Student, I would like to bring the point to your attention. I was an individual until I came to Saint Mary's.

Fifteen months ago we asked our student friends to stop proctoring. We addition we must have the right to maintain an academic and community concept.

I was an individual until I came to Saint Mary's. Somewhere during the drive to South Bend from home in September of freshman year, I was instructed, hallowed, and ashamed of the idea of individuality by the unknown and put in a place bound by seven thousand miles. Yet, the girl everyone at home knew suddenly became "one of them," typified at that. I always thought things when I heard the phrase "Saint Mary's girl" before I came. I thought she was an average college girl. Being so close to Notre Dame, there would be almost no code spirit between both schools. After all, they would be friends, Saint Mary's had so many good points, there was no need in my mind that a Saint Mary's student would not be at all.

I, then, opened, was engaged in a conversation with a Notre Dame man in the Huddle, I was asked where I went to school. When I proudly replied Saint Mary's, he promptly looked away, and I returned to school to hear that several others had met with similar times. I couldn't understand how we were all in the same category, knowing how different all of us were. I really began to respect the fact that Notre Dame had formed an opinion of me before they even got to know me. Also, that I belonged to the same image as that beatnik down the hall, my insane roommate, and the "overly-conscientious" type class.

The girls of Saint Mary's have to fight to maintain the last traces of individuality before the "Saint Mary's City" label is branded on them for life.

Despite all that has happened in trying to make me a typical "Saint Mary's Girl!" (Pardon me, called one since I started writing this column), I am basically no different than I was before I came to Notre Dame, Indiana. If all of us can say that we (long enough for Notre Dame's "Typical Saint Mary's Girl" theory blows insinuate, it will be a victory for theUnload of Saint Mary's!"

Across the Road

by Barbara Gibson

This is Jaguar for men. After-shave and cologne combined. Women like it. Because it doesn't smell like the stuff they wear. Men like it. Because it comes on stronger.

Stays on longer. Jaguar is lusty. Powerful. Potent. It's bottled in a stark, strong, smoky-glass cylinder. It's only for the man who gets a bang out of living, a charge out of leading—who plays to win, whatever the game.

After-shave/cologne, $3.50. Soap on a rope, $2.50. Gift soap, box of 3, $3.00.

Jaguar from Yardley.

Frosh Cage Tryouts Continue

by Jim Cavanaugh

The freshman Basketball Tryout sessions on campus are being conducted by the Basketball Coach Johnny Dee this year, in buffing and polishing right along according to Dee's expectations. Departing with the idea of giving eager freshmen a chance to prove themselves worthy of a spot on the varsity team, eight members from each of the freshman halls, the individual teams have the size or the experience of the scholarship team, this idea was abandoned, on place of these games, Dee scheduled a round-robin tournament in which each team plays every other team once.

Defense Key to MSU Cage Victory Over ND

Michigan State's basketball team, taking a page from Duffy Daugherty's book on defense, humbled Notre Dame, 35-29 Sun- day. The Spartans won their third straight game, after an opening loss to Western Michigan. MSU fumbled Notre Dame so well in the first half that the Irish were without a field goal. In the first seven minutes, the score exchanged hands four times, but a 20-point surge by the Spartans put the game out of reach.

Notre Dame, sparked by Tom Caldwell's 13-points, rallied in the early stages of the second half, cutting the score to 35-17 for MSU, but the Spartans gained command on Washington's two straight field goals, and a three-pointer by Cottis.

Jim Lynch

Also sharing honors at the ban- quet with Lynch were Nick Rassas and Dick Arrington who were awarded jointly the most valuable player award. Rassas also took top defensive back in the position award, where Arrington was named best offen- sive lineman. Voitl was the best offensive back, Lynch best back- on, and Durazo was named defensive lineman.

Accolades

Once again Ara is to be coaching the North squad of the North South Game of Miami Christmas Day. The North Squad will include six players from Notre Dame, the complete Irish secondary along with Arrington. McDermott and McIlven will make the journey.

Notre Dame players receiving recogni- tion through post-season games include Voitl, Sheridan and Iran, who will be playing for the East in the annual East-West Shrine classic in San Francisco December 31.

The Notre Dame fencing team began their 1965-1966 season in earnest with a 13-0 win over Illinois Institute of Technology this past weekend at Fort Wayne. Seniors John Blaho and Norm Lawrence paced five with two victorious aces. Similar results were posted by Jack Hayes and Bill Ott in epee and Joe Makine, John Diller, and Pat Johnson in sabre. The Irish will face the University of Illinois in Chicago and the University of Indiana in Chicago immediately after the Christmas break.
