Construction Boom Shakes ND Growth

By B刊登 MING
Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, C.S.C., executive vice-president of the University of Notre Dame, was interviewed last week concerning the building construction already begun and those projects proposed for the near future.

Father Joyce first discussed the ability of the university in the West German Federal Republic. He discussed the problem of freedom and authority in the modern state, stating that the main problem today is what relationship should exist between society and the state. He developed the theme that men can be free only in opposition. That is, the state must not be allowed to intrude upon the freedom of society except in areas in which it is constitutionally allowed to do so.

He also emphasized the need for executive leadership, stating that Germany is being handicapped by the lack of executive leadership. The main problem, as he sees it, is to find the proper balance between the rights of the individual and the good of the group. The power, he said, can only be used if it is used to benefit the group.

For to give authority, and the power, it is too late, one must be fairly certain that the power is used against those who give it.

He gave three means of solution to the conflict of freedom versus authority in the modern world. First, the citizen must be made aware of the critical situation in which he finds himself and the responsibility of citizenship must logically follow. Thus, the citizen must logically follow. Second, an attempt must be made to eliminate the right to vote on a moral or moral basis on which the judges are located. Third, an important point that Dr. Geech made, is that freedom is not always freedom from something. As, for example, in the case of the country, it is a freedom for something. In this case, the freedom that men have to make their own freedom in the political sphere, this requires an active conscience for politics.

Parliamentary elections, Ant-Conferences, A.P.S., and Hall Assembly were the major issues discussed last Sunday evening on "The Great Debate." The topic was "The Establishment of an International Hall Assembly and its Jurisdiction of the Individual Hall." The president of the recent controversy was brought about by a decision on the part of many that this subject should be considered in the light of a worldwide phenomenon and, hence, should not be connected with the center of "Hall Autonomy." The role of "reform" has been, according to Fish, from that of discipline to teacher and scholar. Under the concept of "reform," Fish said that it has been the responsibility of the student leader to take positive measures against student misbehavior.

Dunn then asked how it is possible to have a community of students. There were the Bruns Plains and the Stater Hall from the center, the student leaders with their high-rise norms for the students and the middle-class norms for the hall staff. Without all of the above, there would not be a community at all. Fish made it clear that Fish if Student Government was holding Stater Hall, Fish said that there was no agreement of the present time. However, Dunn reiterated that Fish should not be the right of citizenship must imply a Joe Fish, the writer, said, was definitely a matter under the student's control. It must imply that Fish was bringing about some controversy. From some controversy, the student's autonomy was definitely a matter under the student's control. From some controversy, the student's autonomy must imply that Fish was bringing.
At Notre Dame, as at most Universities, the happening known as "sophomore slump" seems to be inevitable. As freshmen we are ushered into the University and sheltered by the Freshman-First Year program and a manner rental agent of an All State insurance advertisement. After that, sophomore year is the norm. If, however, in this second year, and only the top is based on hearsay and a few meager bulletin-board comments.

This year there is a concerted effort being made by the College and its activities, to act as advisors and counsel to students. Dean Davin has already begun briefing sessions for sophomores on various aspects of the Sophomore year, including counseling. He has stated that his door is open at all times.

But it is obvious that our own efforts are not enough. Two additional programs are being planned. The first is a comprehensive advisor system. Members of the faculty are being asked to act as advisors for a small (8-10) group of students. As soon as the system is in operation, hopefully sometime in November, the advisor will invite those students assigned to him to a get-together of some sort. Thereafter, there will be group meetings and individual meetings. Through this structure the College hopes to provide the student with a closer contact with the College faculty, to challenge the student to evaluate himself and the meaning of his own education, to pinpoint your opportunities. This program is to be carried on "on the basis of an open line" and a more professional approach could be taken in the preparation and variety of meals.

We further place ourselves at your convenience if you should wish to discuss these suggestions with us. As the situation is clearly insecure and can no longer be ignored, we hope to provide an improvement in the preparation and variety of meals.
