The Monogram Club will receive Holy Communion in a body at 6:30 tomorrow in the church, at a Mass said by request. The Monogram Club has taken the initiative in the matter of corporate reception of Holy Communion this year, and it is hoped that its good example will not be without its effect on other campus organizations. The Engineering Club, be it said, is perfecting an organization to ensure a full attendance at a monthly Communion soon to be inaugurated.

Army Week.

1100 students laid down on the team yesterday. We can understand the case of those who intend to commit mortal sin; they can’t go to the Sacraments.

We can understand those who have no faith in prayer;

- They have warped minds, if they call themselves Catholics.

We can understand those who decry and belittle athletics;

(Usually they are jealous of the spot-light).

We can understand those who work by opposites;

(It takes years and years to train a mule).

But we don’t want to understand the lazy, low-down, good-for-nothing loafers who live from week to week for football, and expect the team to sacrifice everything from cookies to life itself for their amusement, while they are unwilling to pass up a drink of water after midnight or a few winks in the morning to answer the team’s appeal for spiritual help. The lake is too good for them, a respectable dog wouldn’t bite them, they are too flabby for punching bags, too light for balloon ballast, too fat for soup. Their folks don’t want them, so they dump them on us. And we suffer.

Attention, Blue Circle.

You boys seem all excited about something this week, and are running all over the campus trying to get people to pray. Now you know that there is an old saying that when God hears a strange voice He answers at once. There are 350 strange voices here that have been stilled so far this year. If you want the names you can have them.

Father Knows Best.

"Greencastle, Ind., Nov. 2. -- A dispute over evolution in a DePauw University class room resulted in an eighteen-year-old youth leaving school and enlisting in the U.S. army. A week ago, Paul Pollard, Owensville, argued with Prof. Eckardt of the philosophy department on the theory of evolution as to the origin of man. The professor disputed the theory as scientifically established and the student disagreed with him. Going to his rooming place he announced his intention of returning home. Nothing more was heard of Pollard until his father found him in Fort Monmouth, N.J., United States army post.

"The father said today that his son would remain in the army until his term of enlistment had expired."

Get A Picture For Your Room.

There are good reproductions of three excellent religious pictures waiting for you at the pamphlet rack. You will also find there a new booklet on the Mass that will help you to understand and appreciate this great Sacrifice.

Prayers.

John Scanlon, Leo Durlacher, and Duane and Mansel Miller ask prayers for their mothers who are very ill. A special intention and one deceased person.
